MAESTRICHT (Dutch, Maestricht; German Maestricht; Latin Augustina or Moguntiacum) an important city formerly fortified to Holland cap. prov. Limburg 1 bank Meuse, here crossed by a stone bridge communicating with the suburb of Wyck so included within the walls of the fortress, which are about 3 m. in extent. It lies on the Belgian frontier 56 m. E. Brussels, and 12 p. W. by R. Cologne lat. 50° 51' N. lon. 5° 41' 9" E. It is esteemed one of the strongest fortresses in Europe and by opening sluices, can place the surrounding district all under water. With its suburb, Wyck, it has seven land-gates and three towards the river, but none of them remarkable. In general the city is chiefly built on its two open places, the 1. tyrhet a roomy quadrangle planned with trees in which stands the church of St. Servas, a fine Renaissance edifice with five towers and dating from the 16th century and where William de la Marck assumed his sanction (1602) of Ardenne, was located in 1445 and the tyrhet-market in which stands the townhall (1644) a large substantial square building with an elegant tower. See it is the tyrhet-house and watch-house. Other non-worthy buildings are the courts and general prison, the commandant's house, and the arsenal. Maestricht has several barracks, a military and several other hospitals for various purposes, four R. Catholic and two Protestant churches, and a tyrhet-house, in which Latin Greek, German, Dutch and other branches of education are taught, and formerly had numerous monasteries and nunneries. It carries on an active transit and seagoing trade with Belgium chiefly in salt wine and sugar and has likewise manufactures of glass and earthenware paper, earthenware, cloth, especially clothing for the garrison, was cloth, paper, sealing-wax 2 iron foundry, 3 manufactures of paper, gunpowder, paper-mills, paper-vent 3 beet root sugar-refineries, a number of tin pits, 21 distilleries and 32 breweries the latter producing very noted beer about 3 m. from the town is the Petersberg (Peter's Hill) on which stands the fort of St. Pierre and under which are extensive subterranean quarries covering a space of 12 m. by 6 m., with 16,000 passages, 30 to 50 ft. in height, and 12 ft. broad supposed to have been excavated by the Romans. The galleries run generally at right angles and are lined by many thousand massive pillars, 40 ft. square, left to support the roof. Maestricht was besieged and taken, and 5000 of its inhabitants were massacred, in 1579 by the Spaniards under the Duke of Parma in 1673 it was taken by Louis XIV. and again by the French in 1748 and 1794. William III. of England failed to take it, and in 1880 its garrison resisted successfully the attacks of insurgent Belgians. Pop. (1850) 25,241.—(Van der Aa Murray's Handbook.)

MAESTRICK a tn. Belgium prov. Limburg 1. bank Meuse, 17 m. N. E. Maestricht. It is tolerably well-built, has two churches three chapels, a commandant's house, an almshouse for the old, an orphan asylum, several schools, a benevolent and a musical society, several breweries, distilleries, print-fields, oil flour and paper mills and manufactures of tobacco, hats, and earthenware. Hubert van Eyck, a celebrated painter and his brother John Van Eyck also known as John of Bruges, the reputed inventor of oil-painting, were natives of Maestrick. Pop. 4145.

MAETER, a vil. and com. Belgium prov. F. Flanders, 15 m. S. Ghent; with a church three schools, two breweries, and some flour-mills. Pop. 3692.

MAFFERDORF, a vil. Bohemia, circle Bomas, on both sides of the Kase, 57 m. N. E. Prague with a church, a school, manufactures of linen and luxury and a warranted and flour mill. Pop. 2670.

MADRA a tn. and par Portugal, prov. Estremadura, com. Torres Vedras, in a bleak, solitary district, 690 ft. above sea-level 17 m. N. W. Lisbon and about 3 m. from the sea-coast. It is only deserving of notice for its vast and magnificent pile of buildings erected by John V. in 1717 in imitation of the Escorial of Spain. It is in the form of a quadrangle, measuring E. to W. 760 ft. and N. to S. 670 ft. and includes a magnificent church adorned with numerous fine marble carvings, a royal palace, a college, with a library of about 50,000 volumes, and a monastery with 300 cells. A small town has risen up around these buildings. P. 8250.

MAGAL a tn. a tn. Spain Estremadura, prov. and 65 m. N. E. Badajoz with steep, irregular streets a parish church, within the walls of an ancient castle a primary school manufactures of earthenware, and lime-kilns. Pop. 1114.

MAGALHANS a vil. Switzerland com. Tessen about 3 m. S. N. E. Locarno, N. E. shore of Lake Maggiore, where it has a small harbor which having become a station of the steamers plying on the lake, has recently acquired some importance. The extensive plain of the same name in its vicinity is almost uncultivated and owing to the stagnant water which remains upon it, is unhealthy.

MAGALHANS a tn. F. Africa. See MAKANDE.

MAGALHANS or MAGELLAN STRAIT of the channel which separates the continent of S. America from Tierra-del-Fuego and thus forms a communication between the S. Atlantic and S. Pacific Oceans. Its entrance from the former is in about lat. 52° 30' S. between Cape Virginia and Cape Esprito Santo, and from the latter in nearly the same parallel between Cape Victory and Cape Pillar. It is upwards of 300 m. long and is of difficult navigation. The entrance is about 15 m. wide, but shortly after expands to about 25 m.; again narrows to little more than 2 or 3 m. and then widens to about 20 m. From this point it presents, for about 60 m., a large expanse of water varying from 20 m. to upwards of 50 m. in width. The breadth of the remaining portion, being much obstructed by shoals cannot well be stated, sometimes not exceeding 200 fathoms but near its W. entrance, it widens to about 20 and 2 m. Near the centre of the strait, in the vicinity of Port Famine a vein of coal has been discovered in this locality the mountains rise precipitously to a height of 3000 and 4000 ft. above sea-level one summit, Mount Harmito, attains an elevation of 6000 ft. The tides in the Strait reach an elevation of about 50 ft., the highest point they attain on the Patagonian coast. The Strait was discovered, in 1520, by Ferdinand Magellan.

MAGALHANS a tn. Spain, Aragon, prov. and 35 m. W. N. W. Saragossa, 1. bank Huerva with two squares a church, two chapels, two schools, a townhouse, hospital and manufactures of linen earthenware, bricks, wine, and oil. Pop. 2644.

MAGAN, a vil. Spain, New Castle, prov. and about 8 m. from Toledo. It is poorly built, has a parish church, the ruins of a Moorish fort and of an ancient castle, a primary school, and a trade in hides, wool and cattle. Pop. 563.

MAGYARAD a vil. Hungary Tithers Thoms, so. and 19 m. from Arad, in a fruitful district with a Greek church. Pop. 1808.

MAGDALEN CHANNEL, Tierra-del-Fuego, a narrow strait between Clarence island and the S. part of Tierra-del-Fuego, and communicating with the Strait of Magellan, opposite Cape Froward, through Cockburn's Channel. It extends to a S. direction, for 20 m. In some parts of it, the lead runs abruptly to the height of 3000 or 4000 ft., and is covered with heath and winter bark, and near the water, is adorned with large groves of fuchsias and barbers.

MAGDALENE ISLANDS a group of 11 islands, British N. America, Gulf of St. Lawrence lat. 47° 30' to 47° 38' N, lon. 61° to 62° W. Coffin's island (which see) is the largest of the group, and is 25 m long, and, in some places 3 m wide. The other larger islands are Amherst, Wolfe, and Saunders. None of these contain minerals of any consequence although in some places plaster of Paris and coals of various colours are met with. Juniper-berries, strawberries, and raspberries are abundant as are, likewise, silver or grey-coloured foxes. The fishing chiefly for seal, bearing and cod, the last the most valuable and important, forms the sole means of subsistence. Pop. about 1000.

MAGDALENA.—1 A dep New Granada, comprehending the countries lying between the W boundaries of Venezuela and the Gulf of Darien, and between lat. 8° N and the Caribbean Sea, including the four provs. of Rio de la Hacha, Santa Marta, Cartagena, and Mompoz, area, 50 800 sq m. It is very thinly inhabited excepting along the coast and the banks of the Magdalena. Principal rivers the Magdalena, Cauca, Jorge, Nechi, and Fuma. There are also several lakes, mostly however, extensive of the rivers. The soil is singularly fertile, the climate extremely hot, during the day the sky is cloudy and rain frequent but the nights are beautifully clear and delightful. Some of the rivers contain gold dust, but is not collected. The principal products are cotton, cacao, tobacco, spicacumina, amelon, balsam and dye-woods. Principal towns—Cartagena, Barranca Nueva, Santa Marta, Mompoz, and Ocaña.—2 A large river New Granada. It rises in the central Cordillera of the Andes 35 m. S R E Payson lat. 1° 35' N, lon. 76° 25' W flows generally N and falls into the Caribbean Sea by several mouths, lat. 11° 8' N lon. 74° 50' W. Its basin comprises an area of 72 000 geo sq m and its whole length is 560 geo m direct distance, or 626 geo m including windings. Principal affluents, the Cauca and Galinazo the former is nearly as large as the Magdalena, has its source in nearly the same latitude and holds a parallel course till it joins it at lat. 8° 25' N, about 25 m N W Mompoz. The Magdalena is navigable as far as Honda, lat. 5° 14' N 435 m from its embouchure its banks are fringed by numerous mosquito-ore, and by vast numbers of caymans and crocodiles its waters are muddy and enter the sea with such impetus as to preserve their freshness for a considerable distance from its mouth.—3, A large river Bolivia, called also the Ubaity Branco, and San Miguel. In its earlier course it is called the Chiquitos it issues from Lake Ubaity lat. 18° 20' S, and flows N N W to about lat. 10° S, when it assumes one or other of the names above quoted, and ultimately falls into the Itenez or Guaporé, in lat. 12° 20' S, lon. 65° 5' W. Its course from the point at which it assumes the name of the Magdalena, till it joins the Guaporé, is 225 m. Its entire length, including the Chiquitos, is upwards of 460 m.—4, A small lake Bolivia, a few miles W from the Magdalena lat. 14° 5' S lon. 64° 25' W, about 12 m long and 5 m broad.—5, A small tin or vul Bolivia, 1 bank Magdalena lat. 13° 51' S, lon. 64° 31' W.—6 A river Texas, N America, falls into the Bay of Matagorda, about lat. 28° 50' N lon. 96° 23' W.—7, A bay, W coast, peninsula of Old California, formed by the island of Santa Margarita lat. 24° 32' S, lon. 112° 8' W sometimes called Madalena.—8, An isl. S Pacific Ocean, Marquesas group, about 33 m in circumference lat. 10° 31' S, lon. 155° 45' W. It is mountainous, the highest summit 3700 ft. high, and is densely peopled. The coast has a bold and picturesque appearance. It is known by the name, also, of Otahoeah.—9, A small isl. Mediterranean off N E coast Sicily, lat. 41° 18' 4' N, lon. 9° 24' E. (h.)

MAGDEBURG, a gov Prussia, prov Saxony, bounded N by Mecklenburg and Hanover W Hanover and Brunswick, R Anhalt and gov Meissenburg, and E. gov Potsdam, area, 2898 geo sq m. The surface consists generally of an extensive plain, only occasionally broken by low undulating hills. In the S and S W, however, the Harz mountains occupy a considerable area, and even attain their highest elevation in the Brocken. The principal river is the Elbe, which traverses the gov. curiously in a N N W direction, and receives within it its most important tributary, the Saale. A small portion of the W belongs to the basin of the Weser. The largest lake is the Arzensee, which has an area of 24 geo sq m. The minerals include iron, a little coal, considerable seams of lignite, copper, alum, schist, and gypsum. Sandstone, limestone and potter's clay are found in many quarters. In respect of soil the government is one of the most fertile in the kingdom. The principal crops, most of which leave a considerable surplus for export, are wheat, rye, barley, oats, buckwheat, rape-seed, flax, hops, tobacco, and clover. Manufactures have made considerable progress, and include, among numerous other articles of less importance, woolen, linen and silk goods, leather, gloves, iron, brandy, vinegar, porcelain and earthenware. There are also numerous worsted mills and beet-root sugar factories. Among the inhabitants, Prussians constitute an immense majority. Not one in fifty is R Catholic. The gov. is divided into 14 circles. Pop. (1849) 691 474.

MAGDEBURG a tin Prussia, cap prov Saxony, on the Elbe, 76 m W S W Berlin. It ranks as a fortress of the first class, and in consequence of the additions and improvements which its fortifications have received since the last great war, is regarded as one of the strongest places in Europe. So extensive are its works that an army of 100 000 men would be required to invest them completely. The Elbe here forms several branches, and divides the town into three parts—the town proper which, on the land side, is regularly fortified, and towards the river, defended by Forts Sternschloss and Schanzhorst the Warden with its citadel and Frederikstadt, like was strongly fortified. These different parts communicate with each other by several bridges. The houses are, for the most part, large and handsome—but in many places, particularly in the neighbourhood of the citadel, are very much crowded together and a great number of the streets are narrow. The principal squares are the New Market or Domplatz, and the

THE MARKET PLACE MAGDEBURG.—From Fortenle. Day Magazine Illustration.

Old Market, which is decorated with an equestrian statue of the Emperor Otto erected in 978, and is the site of some of the most important public edifices. A fine walk is furnished by the Fritzenwall a well-planted terrace or parade ground, along the margin of the Elbe. The buildings most deserving of notice are the Dom or cathedral, one of the noblest Gothic structures of Germany erected in the 13th and 14th centuries, and recently repaired at immense expense, flanked by two towers, and remarkable within for the height of its ceiling, the beauty of its chancel and baptistery and a number of curious monuments. St. Sebastian's church, in which is the grave of Otto Guericke, the inventor of the air-pump the Marien, or R Catholic church, older even than the cathedral, several other churches, townhouses, and theatre. As the capital of the province Magdeburg is the seat of a number of important courts and public offices. It also possesses numerous benevolent institutions and educational establishments. Among the former five hospitals, and three orphan asylums, among the latter a cathedral gymnasium, polytechnic, normal secondary medical, industrial, and several other schools, institution for the deaf and dumb, &c. The manufactures consist principally of woollen, linen, and cotton cloth, silk and cotton ribbons, leather gloves, soap, and candles. There are also, several important cotton and wheat mills, beet sugar, and slabs of soap, breweries, distilleries, oil, and vinegar works. The trade, which derives great facilities from the position of the town on the Elbe, the canal connecting this river with the Havel and the railroads communicating with Leipzig, Halle, Berlin, and Hamburg is of great importance. The principal articles are corn wool and other products of the soil, coal, wine, and colonial produce. The trade and manufactures there carried on are not confined to the town, properly so called but several of the most important establishments have their locality in two suburbs which are sometimes described as separate towns. Not far from immediately to the N and S of the town to the E. W. Magdeburg is a place of great antiquity and is mentioned in records in the eighth century. It early distinguished itself in the Reformation, and long exerted a powerful influence in its favour. The hostility thus excited was the cause of its greatest disaster. In 1631 after a siege, in which it valiantly defended itself it was taken by storm, and given up to indiscriminate massacre by the brutal Tilly. The most horrible atrocities were committed. A church in which the hundreds of women and children had taken refuge was nailed up, to prevent escape and then burned. Above 20,000 people were murdered and the greater part of the town was laid in ashes. Otto von Guericke, Lutheranism and Zeckow, were born here Pop. (1816) 24,804 (1848) 56,181

MAGDE, a town and par Switzerland, can Aargau 15 m. E. S. E. Basel with a church and paragon. An excellent red wine is produced in the district. Pop. 1038

MAGE, a town in Brazil, prov and 35 m. N. E. Rio de Janeiro on a river of same name. It has a neat church, a number of well-furnished shops and a considerable trade in manioc root of excellent quality coffee, millet, rice, legumes, and wood. Owing to extensive warfare in the neighbourhood intermittent fevers are very prevalent. The river rises in the Serra de Oropide prov Rio de Janeiro passes the town of its own name up which small boats can come with the tide and after a course of about 24 m. falls into the bay of Rio de Janeiro

MAGFIA, a vil Java, rep. prov Kadoe 40 m. S. W. Rembang 1777 ft above sea-level. It has several good stone buildings, including the governor's house, a native mosque, and a respectable-looking prison. The Chinese quarter is neat. Magfian is partially fortified

MAGILLAN (MAGILLAN) See MAGILLAN.

MAGENTA a town and town Italy Lombardy prov Livia, 16 m. W. Milan. It has a parish and three auxiliary churches, and manufactures of wax candles, soap and whetstones. The wine of the district, and also its salt provisions, bear a high name. Pop. 5170

MAGFROE, an island Norway off N. coast of Finmark containing the North Cape lat. 71° 10' N. lon. 30° 0' E. It is of irregular form and deeply indented all round with bays and inlets. Its greatest length is about 26 m., breadth 10 to 12 m. It is rocky and mountainous and destitute of trees but in the interior are some verdant spots on which cattle and sheep feed. There are some reindeer on the island, and a considerable number of inhabitants. See NORTH CAPE.

MAGGIORA a vil and town Italy Piedmont, div Novara, near Borgo Muro, r bank (contains with a number of well-built houses, two churches, an elementary school three charitable endowments, and manufactures of majolica, fuskins, and most of agricultural tools. Pop. 3074

MAGGIOR, a vil and town Italy Piedmont, and Lombardy and consisting of a long and comparatively narrow expanse, stretching irregularly N. E. to S. W., for 40 m., with a maximum breadth of 15 m. and a mean breadth of not more than 2 m., perimeter 91 m., area, 24 sq. m., mountain depth 3225 ft or nearly 438 fathoms; height above sea level, 688 ft. Its basin is of large extent, the lake receiving all the waters which descend from the lofty Alps, commencing near Mount Rosa, and thence circling round to a point between the Lakes of Como and Lugano. Its chief feeders are the latter lake, which discharges itself into it by the Fiume, on the E. the N. Ticino, which falls into it on the N. E., and the Tice on the W. A considerable traffic is carried on in timber cut on the mountain sides, and by sailing vessels and steamers the latter ply regularly upon it between Magdeburg and Porto Caledone. Numerous travellers avail themselves of this lake as means of conveyance, to view the splendid scenery for which the lake is celebrated. The lake has no islands of any importance, except the beautiful Borromean Isles, forming the entrance of the small gulf into which the Tice falls. It is well supplied with fish particularly trout, which some times weigh 50 lbs. On its shores are quarries of fine white marble

MAGHERA — J A market in and par Ireland co. and 28 m. S. E. Londonderry. The town contains the parish church and two Presbyterian meeting-houses, and has weekly markets well supplied with linen, and agricultural produce. Pop. 1163 Area of par 24 sq. m. 11 61' — 2, 4 par Ireland co. Down 8214 ac. 10 p 11 7

MAGHERAFERRIS, par Ireland Fermanagh and Tyrone, 9452 ac. Pop. 3867

MAGHERACULMONEY par Ireland Fermanagh, 14 758 ac. Pop. 5138

MAGHERADROO par Ireland, Down 12,562 ac. Pop. 6564

MAGHERAFERRIS a market in and par Ireland co. and 35 m. S. E. Londonderry. The town situated on the road to Coleraine has a church, a Presbyterian and a Methodist meeting house, R. Catholic chapel, market house, courthouses, bridge, well and workhouse and a trade in linen and agricultural produce. P. 1900 Area of par 8790 ac. P. 6592

MAGHERAGALL par Ireland Antrim 6556 ac. P. 2964

MAGHERALIN a par and town Armagh and Down 7294 ac. Pop. 5482

MAGHERALLY par Ireland Down 9444 ac. P. 2657

MAGHERAMISK par Ireland, Antrim 9150 ac. 10 p 178

MAGHERY, a vil and town Italy Lombardy prov Milan prov and 4 m. N. S. E. Livia, near the S. Lambro in a fertile district, with a parish church and an oratory. P. 1259

MAGHERY, a vil Ireland Monaghan 10,702 ac. Pop. 10 687

MAGHERY, a vil India, 80 m. S. Hyderabad 1 bank Pinara, a branch of the Indus, lat. 24° 11' N. lon. 69° 17' E. It carries on a considerable trade with Cash. Pop. 6000

MAGHERY, a vil Ireland Derry 19 134 ac. P. 2698

MAGHERY, a vil Philippines See MINDANAO

MAGHERY, a vil Italy, doing and 3 m. W. N. W. Perugia, on the summit of a commanding eminence, crowned by a lofty, isolated square tower of imposing aspect.

MAGHERY (Latin, Malancus Palmenensis), a vil and town France dep. Haute Savoie, prov Valais in a valley of same name, r bank Arve, 11 m. E. S. E. Bonneville. It has a modern church, a trade in corn cattle, butter wood and charcoal. Pop. 1926

MAGHERY, a vil Italy, Umbria, doing and 19 m. W. Rieti near 1 bank Tiber. It is the seat of a bishop, and has three churches and four convents. Pop. 1814

MAGHERY, two places, Italy Piedmont — 1 A vil and town div Cune, prov and 3 m. from Alba, on a height above r bank Tanaro. It has a modern church, several chapels, a handsome courthouses, monastery, and charitable endowment, a magnificent palace, an old feudal castle, and a trade in wine corn, and fruit. Pop. 1618 — 2, A vil and town div Cune prov and 3 m. S. Mondovì 1 bank Po river with an ancient church, a school, and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 2129

MAGHERY, two places, Naples — 1 Prov Abruzzo Ultra II dist and 6 m. N. W. Avellino — 2, (Grazzini), prov Principato-Città, dist and 7 m. N. II. Vallo.

MAGHERY, a vil Naples, prov Terra d'Otranto, dist. and 20 m. E. N. E. Gallipoli. Pop. 8000.

MAGHERY, a vil Hungary Hither Danube, co. and about 12 m. from Pesth, with a church and a synagogue. P. 1683.

MAGNA CAVALLLO a vil and com. Italy Venetia gov. Venice prov. and S E Mantua near bank Po, in a somewhat marshy but not unfertile district with a parish church 1 op 1294

MAGNAC-LAYAL, a tu France dep Haute Vienne bank Branne 27 m N 1 leagues with a communal college manufacture of leather and a trade in swine flour and iron Pop. 1108

MAGNAGO a vil and com Italy, Lombardy prov. and W Milan with two churches and some trade in the wine of the district which bears a high name 1 op 1080

MAGNANO a vil and com Italy Piedmont dpt Turin, prov. and about 9 m S Biella with a church the remains of an old castle manufacture of earthenware and a trade in corn, wine, fruit, and wood for fuel Pop. 1706

MAGNAXA, a vil and export, Italy Romagna, delug. and about 40 m S S F Ferrara at the mouth of the canal which gives a communication with the Adriatic. It is defended by a fort.

MAGNESA an anc. city Asiatic Turkey see M.

MAGNETICAL ISLAND—1 An isl off N E coast Australia lat. 19° S. lon. 148° 40' E. It is 8 to 10 m long and 4 to 6 m in breadth at the broadest part and on the N W side, has good anchorage.—2 An isl Guatemala, S. coast, off Port Luchio lat. 8° 4' N lon. 81° 47' W

MAGNIE a promontory E coast Sicily 6 m N Syracuse. It forms the S side of the harbour of Augusta and is often called an island, though a narrow isthmus unites it to the mainland. On its highest point is a strong masonry tower commanding the approach to it and the small bays on each side of it and near the extremity of the isthmus, are the large salt-works of Salina

MAGNU (M.) a beautiful and spacious bay Scotland W coast of the mainland of Shetland, containing several islands, behind which several minor bays branch off and penetrate into the interior affording anchorage where the largest vessels may ride safely in the most tempestuous weather

MAGOC a vil Hungary Thutur Denube, co. Berany in a fertile plain, about 1½ m from Ulffakroien with a Catholic church, normal school and synagogue P 2,448

MAGOR, par Eng Monmouth 10514 ac 1 op 699

MAGORRAH par Irel Tipperary 4140 ac 1 857

MAGOURNEY par Irel Cork 5869 ac 1 op 1800

MAGOWRY par Irel Tipperary, 1972 ac Pop 461

MAGNA a river Italy which descends from the Apennines in the Tuscan dist. of Lontrenal, flows S and after a course of about 35 m, falls into the Gulf of Genoa, 4 m. S W Sarzana. Its chief affluents are the Asila, on the left, and the Vara, on the right.

MAGSTAD a vil W Wittenberg, circle Necker 10 m. S W Stuttgart with a church Pop 1977

MAGLLOVNE (Latin, Apollon) an islet or rather a peninsula, France, dep. Harault, above 1 m long, in the Languedoc, near the Canal Des Etangs, and about 5 m from Montpellier. It once was the site of a town of some celebrity in the history of Languedoc, but its only remains are a few houses and a remarkable church dating from the seventh century

MAGUIREW BRIDGE, a market tn. Ireland co. Fermanagh 7½ m S E Enniskillen with a parish church, R. (catholic chapel) Methodist meeting house and two schools Pop. 773

MAGYAR (Magyar) or GROSS-MAGYAR a vil Hungary, Bihor Denube, co and 13 m from Presburg, in the island of Schütz with a church, and a ferry over the Ensek 1½ m are of the Danube. Pop 1801

MAGYAR-BARRA or BARRA a vil Austria, Transylvania, co and 98 m S E Koksburg with a Protestant and a Greek church. Pop. 1009

MAGYARO a vil Transylvania co Thorenburg, near Thorax with two Greek churches 1 op 1037

Vol. II

MAGYAROS, or MAHARACH a vil Transylvania, dist. and about 27 m from Kronstadt, on the Aisla with a Protestant and a Greek church Pop. 1488

MAHAHALIPOORAM, or MAHAVALIPOORAM an anc. city, S Hindoostan presid and 36 m S Madras; lat. 12° 10' N lon. 80° 18' E. now remarkable only for the extent, variety and singular character of its ruins of antiquity, the most remarkable of which are some old Hindoo temples, dedicated to Vishnu generally called the Seven Pagodas. There are besides, a number of curious and elaborate excavations in the living rock and a great variety of carved representations of animals and nondescript monsters. The town is said to have extended many miles to the E. on ground now covered by the sea.

PAGODAS AT MAHAHALIPOORAM

From Paganos, France. Illustration of the A. de la Architecture of India.

MAHAH PSHUR HILLS, a convoluted station Hindoostan in the Ghats of the Concan lat. 17° 05' N lon. 73° 30' W 4600 ft. above sea-level. The village, which is built mostly of stone, contains a sun-dial, a church, prison, and subscription library

MAHADEO a temple, Hindoostan presid Bengal S W district, in the Mahadeo hills. It is a famous object of Hindoo pilgrimages, and has 80 m S E Humsingabad, on the Ner ludda lat. 22° 22' N lon. 85° 15' E.

MAHANADA a river Hindoostan presid Bengal It is formed in prov Bengal 20 m E Purneah, by the junction of the Kania and another stream, both proceeding 4 m Sikkim. From the junction the Mahanada flows S E and, after uniting with some other streams joins the Ganga, 80 m N N Moonshahat. Total course from source of the Kosi 250 m and from the junction 100 m direct distance

MAHANUDDY PIVR a Hindoostan It rises in prov Gundwah near Kynagpur lat. 21° 20' N lon. 80° 50' E. flows S E and then E. through prov Orissa, past Bumbalpoor and Cuttack and falls into the Bay of Bengal by two mouths the most N in lat. 20° 18' N lon. 86° 40' E after a course of about 480 m. During the rains, it is navigable 300 m up from its estuary but a large portion of its channel is dry during five or six months of the year, when it is fordable even at Cuttack on the higher part of its course it is rendered difficult by rocks and rapids. Diamonds of the finest quality and of various sizes are found in the stream and in several of its tributaries more especially at the mouths of the Masud, Khelol and Hehe MAHARAJGUNCE, a tu Hindoostan presid Bengal near 1 bank Mahanada 250 m N W S Calcutta.

MAHAVILLY GUNGA a large river Ceylon, rises nearly in the centre of the S part of the island lat. 6° 47' N lon. 80° 54' P 14 m S Kandy. It has generally a N N E course, though with many and great deviations, nearly on circles Kandy and falls into the Bay of Bengal at Trincomalee whole length about 160 m. It has magnificent falls between Kandy and Burumy, near the latter of which towns it attains its greatest breadth, 540 ft. It is so obstructed by sand-banks as to be impracticable for boats.

MAHE.—1 An isl. S. of the Archipelago Indian Ocean lat. 43° 30' S., lon 50° 30' E. (n.) about 17 m. long and 4 m. broad. It sits on a elevation of about 2000 ft. above the level of the sea. From which it rises, in most places, nearly perpendicularly it abounds with wood and may be seen from a distance of 36 or 40 m. Its E. side is bordered by extensive reefs of coral, the openings of which opposite St. Anne Island form the port of Mahé which is capable of holding five or six large ships of war moored with sufficient room for small vessels. There is here a town or village formerly of the same name but now changed to Victoria, the only one in the island. The houses are said by Captain Holcher to be all falling fast to decay. During the N.E. monsoon there is good anchorage on the W. side of Mahé, but heavy gusts come over the high land when the winds are moderate and steady on the E. side. Wood and water may be obtained here and supplies of cattle and rice. — 2 A m. and fort St. Hindostan prov. Malabar 40 m. N.W. Calicut lat. 11° 42' N. lon 75° 36' E. at the mouth of a small river navigable for boats a considerable way inland. It is a neat town was formerly the chief French settlement on the S. side of India and is still in their possession. Pop. 1841 = 3341.

MAHAI (1) (R.) is in Mauritania, 92. coast somewhat situated on the S. side of a picturesque craggy range of wooded, basaltic mountains, on the margin of a deep bay into which two rivers discharge themselves. It consists of a walled house chiefly of one store and a large military barracks of stone. The bay called T. and T. is protected by a coral reef which keeps the water at all times perfectly tranquil within.

MAHIDIMAH is in Hindostan prov. Malabar bank 34 m. S. by W. Ouzha. It stands about 1800 ft. above sea-level. consists of about 300 houses and is defended by a fort situated on the high banks of the river. In 1817 the army of Holcar was after some severe fighting finally routed here by the British under Sir Thomas Munro.

MAHIL RACLOONK, par. Ind. Monaghan 14 m. S. as 1 up 111.

MAHIM—1 A m. in Hindostan prov. and in its town have near its extremity lat. 19° 2' N. lon 75° 54' E. There are here the tomb of a Mahometan saint with a mosque attached to it a Portuguese church and college of W. Mahil priests. Pop. in 1841 dependent villages 10116 — 2 A m. in present Bengal lat. 26° 10' N. lon 88° 10' E.

MAHIBERU is in Baden circle Upper Rhine 20 m. N.W. Freiburg with a Protestant and a Catholic church and a superior burgher school 1 op. 1849.

MAHIBA is in Hindostan present Bengal in Bundelkund 130 m. W. Allahabad lat. 25° 20' N. lon 79° 51' E. Around it are many temples, tombs, and other vestiges of former greatness and on a rocky height the remains of a fortress. It is said to have been a place of note as early as the 11th century. It is now nearly in ruins.

MAHOMED KHAN KA TARIKA is in Sindh 22 m. S.E. Hyderabad lat. 25° 5' N. lon 69° 40' E. on bank of the Futaleh branch of the Indus. It is one of the most thriving places in Sindh having extensive manufactures, and a large transit trade from Cutch. The country in the vicinity though near the border of the desert is fertile and well cultivated.

MAHON or Port Mahon (see Porto Mahon) a town and port, Spain, E. side of Isl. Minorca, of which it is the capital lat. (magnetic) 39° 38' 30" N. lon 4° 21' E. (n.) at the head of a capacious bay which forms one of the best harbours in Europe. It is generally well built, having wide thorough, in many instances, steep and badly-paved streets a large and handsome parish church with a richly decorated interior, several chapels, two convents a large town and court house, prison, barracks and civil hospital custom-house, arsenal, mace and several primary schools and at some distance S. of the city an elegant cemetery. Brandy soap, earthenware, hats, leather cordage, and sails are made, but fishing fish-curing agriculture, and cattle-raising employ the bulk of the inhabitants. In the bay are several rocky islets, on one of which stands an arsenal on a second a lazaretto, and on a third a naval hospital. The entrance is commanded by the castle of San Felipe. The mole is very extensive, and the depth of the water sufficient, none in for vessels to discharge and take in cargo. Though its trade has greatly fallen off it is still frequented by about 180 000 tons of shipping. It exports barley brandy, wine, wool wax cheese, capers honey was potatoes, beetroot, leeks, and dried fruits, chiefly to Spain Italy and France, and imports grain, wearing apparel tobacco sugar coffee, cacao, leather, hats and other manufactured goods. Pop. 13,880.— (Machon, Diccionario de España.)

MAHON MAHON, or MAHON is in Persia, prov. Azerbajan 1 bank of a river of the same name, an affluent of the Aras, 51 m. N. Khor, lat. 39° 15' N. lon 44° 45' E. It consists of about 400 houses and near it is a tavern 800 ft. high, 1200 ft. in span, and 800 ft. deep.

MAHONIAH par. Ind. Limerick 15 887 ac. P. 2504. MAHONIA is in Spain New Castle prov. and 19 m. N. Alcantara with a church courthouse, hospital primary school manufactures of soap and brandy and a trade in wheat iron and wine. Pop. 1445.

MAHORE or MAHORE is in Hindostan prov. Berar esp. dist. in a hilly country near a bank Purn. 175 m. N.W. N.W. Hyderabad.

MAHRAH a tract S. coast Arabia, between Hadramaut (on the narrower sense of the name) and Kuryan Marib (on the former sense of the name), or rather an extension of the latter and a part of the former, beginning about 40 m. W. of Cape Farak and 3 m. S. of about 250 m., to Ras or Cape Ras lat. 11° 12' N. lon 55° 24' E. Mahrah is the country of the Mahri tribe or nation but as this general name of the people has given way to such denominations, so the name Mahrah has been displaced by others of local origin; and the maritime portion of the country in question is now generally called Rieher, Shear or Shehr. The mountains already alluded to immediately behind this coast are in fact but the profiles of elevated table lands of 1 m. some from 3000 to 6000 ft. high, and these are the very table lands which were once famous as the Frankincense country. We possess but little recent information respecting the interior of Mahrah but we know that the chief valleys of Hadramaut open E. to the coast by the Wadi Maileh, so there is reason to believe that the Wadi Akaki, if traced up from Kuryan Marib Bay probably W. by N. would lead to a fertile well-watered country called Jendel seven days journey or 120 m. from the sea. The only place of importance on the coast of Mahrah, in Keshin (which see). A little to the W. of Ras or Cape Farak stands a group of villages containing altogether about 2000 souls. Ras Farak is a bold headland 2500 ft. high remarkable for a fine grove of trees on its W. side near which are said to be some ruins. About 80 m. S. of Ras Farak is another group of villages with groves of date-palms and the town of El Jendel about 7 m. from the coast, is reported to be large and to have cultivated fields around it. With these villages the plain terminates, and precipitous mountains approach the shore in the vicinity of Ras Shehr. This is a limestone promontory, 3000 ft. high, with a flat summit, and forms the boundary between the Mahri property so called and the Ghurrah tribe, but where the actual boundary of these tribes may be along the coast, we cannot doubt that the historical limit of Mahrah lay further E. Beyond Ras Shehr follows the district of Dhofer (which see) and Marbat beyond which again is Ras Naf, where the mountains here supposed to mark out the original extent of Mahrah, end at the coast. The Ghurrah tribe commences at Ras Shehr, yet it is evident that the people of Dhofer and Marbat speak the Mahri language which is not correct Arabic, as some have imagined, but derived from a different stock—the ancient Hamaritic. The Mahri are in general handsome of middle size, and very active. They are ready and at the same time daring. Their scanty clothing is of ill-dyed blue cotton which shows their skins and injures their appearance. Their drummers (Mahri, erroneously written Mahory) are the bravest known in the early part of the 17th century, the whole country from Dhofer to the W. limit of Hadramaut, was ruled by the king or sultan of Shehr that is, Shehr, and doubtless in the flourishing days of Arabian commerce the Frankincense country possessed superior resources even now Mahrah exports 100 tons of frankincense, with aloes, dragons-blood, and various gums, annually to India. It may perhaps be taken as a proof of the antiquity of commerce on this coast, that the population has exceeded its domestic means of subsistence and depends for food on foreign supplies. The date grown on the coast do not make a twentieth part of the quancity consumed and the annual supply imported chiefly from the Persian Gulf, has been estimated at 25 000 tons.—(Capt Haines Jour Roy Soc. vol. x. Wallsted's Travels.)

MAHARATTA or MAHARATTA STATES, an extensive territory Hindoostan, which originally included Candahar, Bagiana, and part of Berar extending N W as far as Ghorat and the Nerbuda, and W along the narrow mountainous tract which forms the E frontier of the Coconac and stretches N from Surat to Canara. The Maharatta language is still more widely diffused, and, though not the vernacular dialect, is spoken in provinces far beyond the original boundaries of the Maharatta country. All these states are now subject or tributary to the British.

MAHREN a prov Austria. See MORAVIA
MAHRISCH several places Austria Moravia.—1. Neustadt a tn 14 m. N W Olmitz, on the Oskawa, and the railway to Prague, with considerable woollen manufactures. Pop 3600.—2. (Ofenau) a tn, circle Pilsen consisting chiefly of wooden houses. 1 op 2000.—3. (Trubau) a tn, circle, and 28 m N W Olmitz, in a fertile district on the Trübauwasser with a castle, 1 inst college, gymnasium high school, and manufactures of woollens and linen. Pop 3600.

MAIA, a river Siberia which rises in the W slope of the mountains of Stanovoi, S W of the town of Okhotsk, flows first N W then N and, after a very sinuous course of nearly 600 m, joins r bank Altan gov Yakutsk, opposite to the town of Lt Maikana. Its principal affluent is the Judonia.

MAIDA a tn in Naples, prov Calabria Litt II, 12, 12, and 8 m. N. Nicastro on a height. It is well built, and has four churches. Near it there is a salt well spring. In July 1806 the British here defeated the French. Pop 2780.

MAIDEN, 2 pars England.—1. Bredling Somerset and Wilt 4540 ac. P 794.—2. (A. wton, 11 rect, 254¹/₂ ac. P 821.

MAIDENHEAD a municipal corp and market tn England, co. Berks, 12 m. E N Reading near r bank Thames, here crossed by a fine stone bridge and on the Great Western Railway. It consists principally of one long street lighted with gas, and paved, and in which the houses are tolerably well built and has a handsome and commodious chapel, and place of worship for Wesleyans, Independents, Catholics of the Augustinian Connection, and the Society of Friends a town hall and market house national school several endowed charities trade chiefly in malt corn meal and timber. Pop (1861) 3807.

MAIDENS, a cluster of rocks, in h bay off E coast, Ireland, co. Antrim, 6 m N by E Larne light-house. They are surrounded by dangerous reefs, and on each of the two highest rocks is a light-house, with fixed white light, at an elevation of 84 ft and 94 ft respectively lat (N light) 54° 56' 48" N long 6° 44' 15" W.

MAIDFORD par Eng Dorsetshire 1630 ac. 1 317

MAIDS—several par England, Bucks 1260 ac. 1 573

MAIDSTON par Kent a pearl br market tn and par England, co. Kent, in a pleasant and fertile valley 52 m. S. S. E. London 1 bank Medway here crossed by a bridge of five arches and on a branch of the S. E. railway. It consists chiefly of four principal streets which cross each other at the market place with smaller ones branching off at right angles, well paved, and lighted with gas. It has a neat town hall commercial room and theatre and an extensive county jail, occupying an area of 13 or 14 acres, a fine old church one of the largest parochial buildings in the kingdom supposed to be of the fourteenth century a new church places of worship for Wesleyans Baptists, Independents, Unitarians, and a Society of Friends meeting house a free grammar-school a proprietary and several charity schools, and an excellent infirmary dispensary and six almshouses. The only manuscript world mentioning is paper for which there are several large mills. An extensive trade is carried on in fruit and hops. The Medway is navigable for large boats up to the town. This boy sends two members to Parliament. Registered electors (1851) 1751. Pop bor (1851) 20 801.

MAIDWATER, a par Eng Northampton, 1650 ac. 1 280

MAILEDAN a tn Italy. See MILAN

MAILOOTTA a tn Hindoostan, prov Madras, in Mysore, 18 m N Seringapatam, lat 13° 59' N lon. 78° 42' E, on a rocky hill. It is open, well built, and paved, and is one of the most celebrated places of Hindoo worship in India. It contains several pagodas, a large temple, surrounded by a colonnade and a very large tank, on the banks of which are numerous buildings for the accommodation of pilgrims.

MAILI FRAYE (La) [Lathu Mopelense] a hamlet, France dep. Seine Inférieure r bank Seine, near the forest of Brotonne, and not far from Paris. It is chiefly deserving of notice for its plateau a vast expanse of irregular construction facing the river. The park has been laid-out at considerable expense, though not in very good taste and is a frequent summer resort. There is building-ward in the neighbourhood.

MAILMAITYN or MAILMAI (Cin) [Saying and selling mail] a tn China Mongolia, on the frontiers of Szechuan, forming, with Kichia an entrepot for trade between Russia and China. See KIACHTA.

MAIMUND a tn of W Afghanistan about 34 m W of Kandahar and near the route between it and Herat. It stands at the opening of a rich cultivated valley, enclosed by hills of moderate height.

MAIN, a river Asiatic Russia, which rises in a branch of the Stanovoi mountains, on the N frontiers of Kamtschatka, flows N W and joins r bank Anadir after a course of nearly 180 m.

MAIN or MAIN (see Mense) a river Germany which is formed in the N of Bavaria, by the junction of the White and the Red Main about 13 m N W Rurecht. It flows N W to the confines of Hesse, and then makes a succession of remarkable zigzags, generally E, and N and directly W till it reaches the confines of Hesse-Darmstadt, which it enters. It then flows circuitously W forming the boundary between Hesse-Darmstadt and Hesse-Cassel, crosses it a territory of Hesse-Kassel, turns S W, forming the boundary between Hesse-Darmstadt and Nassau, and joins r bank Klause, a little above the town of Mainz, after a course of 230 m. Its principal affluents are on the right the Rodolfs ste, Rannsch Franconian Saale Kinzig and Nidda, and on the left, the Regnitz Tauber and Gersprenz. The principal towns which it passes are Würzburg Aschaffenburg and Frankfurt. It is navigable for about 200 m, commencing at the confluence of the Regnitz and by means of King Ludwig's canal it affords through navigation to the Danube.

MAINA a mountainous district of Greece, in the S part of the Morea, comprising the narrow peninsula between the gulfs of Koron and Kalamata a portion of the ancient province of Laconia. It is the most fertile part of the peninsula consisting chiefly of the extensive ridge of mountains known by the name of Taygetos.—The town of Maina an insignificant place, is situated near the extremity of the peninsula on the Gulf of Kalamata.

MAINBERRILLIM a tn in Bavaria Lower Franconia with a church a normal school a posthouse a trade in corn and wine and four mills. Pop 1633.

MAINBURG a market tn Lower Bavaria 27 m S S W Ratibon with three churches two mills, and a trade in corn fruit, horses, and cattle. 1 op 1023.

MAINL, one of the E and maritime U States of N America, bounded E and N by New Brunswick, N and N W by Lower Canada, W by the State of New Hampshire, and S E by the Atlantic Ocean lat 43° 0' to 47° 20' N lon 66° 50' to 70° 55' W area, 52,928 sq m. It is an elevated country, but hilly rather than mountainous. From the W side of the state, E of the White Mountains in New Hampshire an irregular chain of highlands extends E. to the N of the sources of Kennebec and 1 eonoboc and passing E. of the sources of the Arnoctick terminates on the E boundary of the U. States. Katahdin mountain, about 70 m N of Bangor between the F and W branches of the Penobscot the most elevated summit of the chain, is 5385 ft high. Another chain of highlands extends in a N W direction from near the N W sources of the Connecticut dividing the waters which flow N into the St. Lawrence from those which flow S. into the Atlantic Ocean and the Bay of Fundy probably nowhere less than 1400 ft high. The state, however, is almost completely traversed by navigable rivers, the principal of which are the Penobscot and Kennebec and in the interior are numerous lakes of which Moosehead is 60 m long, by 10 to 10 m broad and Umbagog partly in New Hampshire, is 18 m long and 10 m broad. The number of the smaller lakes is so great that one-tenth of the surface of the state is computed to be covered with water. The coast abounds with islands, the largest of which is Mount Desert, 15 m long and 12 m broad, MAIXENT (Sr.) [Latin. Maixentopolis Patonensis] a tn. France, dep. Deux Sèvres, 18 m. E.N.E. Niort, on the slope of a gentle hill, at the foot of which flows the Sèvre Niortaise. It is an irregular, ill-built place, surrounded with old walls. It possesses a consulting chamber of commerce and a communal college has considerable manufactures of serge, woollen hosiery, and other common stuffs, also a renowned mill and a trade in mules, horses, corn, wool, &c. Pop. 4095.

MAJAMBO, a bay N.W. coast Madagascar, lat. (entrance) 16° 13' S. lon. 40° 59' E.; and is about 5 m. wide, narrowing gradually to 2 m. where, at the distance of 9 m. from the entrance, it opens into a capacious basin or inner harbour. The soundings vary from 4 to 68 fathoms. Several rivers fall into it. At the head of the bay is a small town of some name, which was formerly inhabited by Arabs.

MAJDAN vil Hungary Thüster Theus on Krasova, 4 m. from Oravica, with a Greek church, and a trade in damson plums. Pop. 1810.

MAJINDA, a tn. Scinde, r. bank Indus, 85 m. N.W. Hyderabad lat. 25° 51' N. lon. 68° 19' E., on an alluvial but indifferently cultivated plain. It has an extensive bazaar and has been frequently swept away by inundations of the Indus but, on these occasions, the inhabitants merely retire a few hundred yards and again erect their habitations. P. 2000.

MAJOLCA [Spanish Mayorca, French Majorque, Latin Maioresis], an isl. Mediterranean, belonging to Spain, and forming the largest of the Balearic group, about 115 m. S. Barcelona. lat. 39° 14' to 39° 27' N. lon. 1° 18' to 3° 27' E. (n.) greatest length W. to E. 68 m. greatest breadth 50 m. circuit, 144 m. and area, 1480 sq. m. It is very irregular in shape, and deeply indented, particularly in the N.E. by the bays of Alendia and Pollensa, and on the S.W. by that of Palma. The most prominent headlands are Cape Formentor in the N. Pinar and Fornis in the N.E., Pora in the E. Balanz in the S. Calaguera in the S.W. and Trancas in the W. close to the small island of Dragonera. The coast on the W. and N. facing Spain, are very lofty and steep, in other directions, and particularly on the E. they are low and shelving. A great number of good natural harbours are scattered over the coast, and more especially in the larger bays. The interior is finely diversified by mountains, hills, valleys, and plains. A mountain chain stretching N.E. to S.W., naturally divides it into two different parts—the one on the S. and S.W. generally level and the other on the N. and E. occurred for the most part with lofty heights. These heights form two distinct groups. One of them commences at Cape Calaguera, and extends to Cape Formentor and the other extends from Cape Formentor to Cape Roca or Burgo. The culminating point of the island, Pung de Toralla, belonging to the W. chain, has a height of about 4900 ft. Almost all the rocks consist of limestones, belonging to the upper part of the secondary formation, and overlaid by tertiary strata. The climate is temperate, the mountains in the N. affording protection against the winter cold, and refreshing breezes from the sea mitigating the summer heat. violent winds however are not unfrequent and the air is often overcharged with moisture, which hangs in clouds or descends in rains. Some of the plains are of a thin, hungry soil, where the want of irrigating streams makes cultivation almost impossible; but the island generally both in the hills and plains, is well watered and fertile, producing in considerable abundance, wheat, barley, oats, legumes, oil, and wine; maize, hemp, flax, silk and saffron are produced in less abundance. fruits abound everywhere, and include figs, oranges, lemons, citrons, dates, and pomegranates. The pastures feed large numbers of swine, sheep, goats, horned cattle and horses, the smaller kinds of game, and particularly birds, are everywhere seen, and the fisheries, on the coasts, are valuable. The manufactures, which are very insignificant, include a few linen, woollen, and silk goods, simple or carved hats and cabinet-work and the trade is chiefly in oil, wine, brandy and fruit, particularly figs and oranges. The inhabitants are brave, hardy and industrious, tolerably strict in their morals, religious, and submissive to the laws. They make good soldiers, and were anciently celebrated for their skill in the use of the sling. Pop. 179,763.

MAJORI a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Citra dist. and 6 m. W. S. Salerno, on the Gulf of Salerno. It contains seven churches. Pop. 2700.

MAJSE, or MAJSEK, a vil Hungary, Thüster Danube, co. Baranya, 6 m. from Mohacs with a R. Catholic and Greek non-united church. Pop. 1217.

MAJSA, a vil Hungary dist. little Keszmes, 18 m. from Tegyehaza. It has a R. Catholic church, and near it, are freestone and limestone quarries. Inhabitants chiefly employed in fishing, etc. Pop. 4398.

MAJTHNY [Nagari] a market tn. Hungary Thüster Theus, co. Szekes, 1 bank Keszmes, 50 m. E. by N. Debrecen with a R. Catholic church. Pop. 1931.

MAJUAGA or MARUJA a tn. in the N.W. of isl. Madagascar near the entrance to the Bay of Hamboatoka, lat. 15° 44' S. lon. 46° 13' E. It is large and straggling and nearly 1 m. in extent. The style of buildings in the town varies like the inhabitants one-half being Arab the other Madagasy. Numerous ancient tombs would indicate that the place had been more populous in former times than at present. An extensive traffic is carried on here, chiefly with the Americans in packed beef, horses, tallow and hides.

MAKAD a vil Hungary Thüster Danube co. and about 27 m. from Pesth on Backeev an island of the Danube with a Protestant church. Pop. 1088.

MAKADISHU [written by the Portuguese Magadoca and in maps frequently Magadoca] is an important town once considered as the capital of a kingdom on the coast of Africa lat. 2° 2' N. lon. 4° 20' E. This is the first town which occurs on the coast S. from Ras Hafin. In a distance of 700 m. the intervening shore being desert and hardly accessible, owing to the violent surf. From this S. the coast still retains its sterile aspect, though well peopled, and has been rarely visited, as the natives have, till recently always manifested a treacherous and inhospitable disposition. Since about 1836, however they have welcomed English visitors who have been enabled to clear up the mystery of a numerous population and great abundance of food and fuel on a bare strand backed by barren sand hills, and here revealed to our view that Nile of Makadishu so much celebrated by Arab writers. A reef of rocks here runs parallel to the shore for some distance, and shelters the inner channel which, with two fathoms water, forms an excellent best harbour. To this circumstance, doubtless, the town owes its origin. Makadishu has a fine appearance from the sea. Its stone houses, two or three stories high, with numerous towers or minarets rising above them, offer the outline of a well built city but a near approach, and close inspection of its narrow streets its dilapidated and squalid dwellings, remove this impression. With respect to the turreted or domed buildings we learn nothing from recent sources beyond a hint that they are of a royal char. character. It was stated by a man who lived 16 years a captive in Makadishu, having been thrown on shore from the wreck of the Alfonso East Indiaman in 1790 that the buildings in question are tombs and of coloured marble. The king's Mosque, for so he calls it, is 110 ft. sq. built of black and white marbles, with a green cupola. Lamps are kept burning in it night and day. Pots or vases, containing the ashes of the king's hearts, are ranged round the walls he reckoned 87 of them. Makadishu consists of two towns close together—Ilammarin to the S. and Shangden to the N. Former with a Somali or perhaps ancient Arabic name, is obviously the town of the superior and ruling caste, the latter with a Sawahili appellation contains the slaves and lower orders. Shangden is a collection of huts, built round the tombs or temples already mentioned. Ilammarin displays about 150 stone houses all in a stately decay, but well constructed and often handsome, and manifestly the work of a people much superior in arts to the present inhabitants of the place. The population of Makadishu is from 8000 to 4000 S. for 200 m. the coast is well lined with towns and villages, the chief of which are Marish and Berash. Marish lat. 1° 43' S. lon. 44° 58' E. is partly built of coral and contains about 3000 inhabitants. The adjacent strand and hills behind the town have the usual bare and arid aspect of this coast. This place has lost its importance, and chief source of gain, by the suppression of the slave-trade. The inhabitants of this village have been exaggerated, in some maps, into a great nation under the name of Marcotina. Berash or Berashin lat. 1° 5' N. lon. 44° 2' E. resembles the preceding towns in most respects, but is probably larger its population being estimated at 5000 or 6000. The people MAKOWIEC a town in Russian Poland, 88 m E E Wasaw. In a battle fought here in 1784 between the Poles and Russians Kosciuszko was wounded and taken prisoner.

MAKRI MAORI, or MAKRI a town, port and gulf or bay. Adjoining Turkey pass Anatolia, S.W. coast. The town, lat. 36° 37' N lon 28° 9' E (a.) consists of about fifty houses or huts, where much trade is carried on in various galls, nuts, and treewood. It occupies the site of the ancient Tilmassus, renowned in antiquity for the art of divination. The principal remains are a large theatre, of extremely plain archaic structure, in tolerable preservation, a number of caves partly built, and partly cut in the rock, extending along the coast, and an interesting series of tombs of several kinds and dates. The harbour is excellent, and the navigation of the gulf safe, with a sufficient depth of water.

MAKTAN a small island in the Indian Archipelago one of the Philippines, and lying to the E. of the island and S.E. of the town of Zebu from which it is separated by a channel about 3 m wide. This channel affords good anchorage and shelter but requires to be very cautiously navigated. The celebrated navigator, Magellan, was killed here in 1521.

MALA a decayed vil. Peru, dept. and 48 m S E Lima about 4 m. from the Pacific, in a valley of same name. Here Pizarro met Almagro to settle their differences. Pop. 800. — The valley produces a great quantity of grain and fruits extensively employed in the fattening of pigs, which form the staple of its trade. Pop. about 1 000 000.

MALABAR, maritime dist. British India, presid. Madras, on the W coast, between lat 10° 20' and 12° N, having N. Cochin, E. Mysore Coorg, and Combaratore, S. Cochin and W. the Indian Ocean. It is about 140 m long N to S and about 80 m in breadth from the Western Ghats to the coast. Area 6050 sq m. A great portion of this district is comparatively low but it is intersected by narrow ravines covered with forests and jungle and watered by innumerable streams but all of them having necessarily very short courses. It consists of small low hills, with steep sides formed into terraces for cultivation. The interjacent valleys are extremely fertile and support a numerous population. In some places a sandy plain 3 m wide runs along these rising into downs covered with coconut trees the cultivation of which is carefully pursued and yields good returns. The coast is indented with numerous bays, bays, and small coves, in some of the mountain streams but in comparatively small quantities. The climate is on the whole healthy. The hot season is from February to May the wet from May to October and the cool during the remaining months. The principal vegetable products are black and white pepper, coconuts, coconuts, oil, coar rope, betel-nuts, tank wood, sandal wood, cardamoms, ginger, turmeric, pepper, wood, arrow root, yams, lamp, and copra. The chief exports consist of the produce of the coconut tree to the value of £280 560, pepper from 5,000 000 to 7 500 000 lbs., betel nuts to the value of £25,000, and the produce of the E. district is exported annually to the value of £170 000 to £230 000. The total exports by sea amount to about £250 000 and the imports to £120 000. Coarse cloths are manufactured at a few places in the interior from the cotton the produce of Malabar coar rope, coconuts, oil and arrow, from the coconut tree, jaggery and coar rope, sugar.

Neither the soil nor the climate of Malabar are suited to the cultivation of cotton. What is grown is small in quantity and inferior in quality. The principal towns are Cannanore, Tellicherry, Malé, Ponnany, Calicut, and Palgatcherry. Pop. (1845), estimated at 1 300 000. In 1802 it was only 450 000. — The former provinces of Malabar extended from Cape Comorin to the river Chandragherry, lat. 12° 30' N but the name is often erroneously applied to the whole extent of coast country as far as Bombay.

MALACCA and MAJAPAHIT, a British colony, W coast Malay Peninsula, in the Strait of Malacca, intersected by the parallel of lat. 2° 30' N. It extends about 40 m. along the shore of the strait, and about 55 m. inland, including Nanning bounded, N by Selangor, S by Johore, at the river Moara. E. the Nanyang country and W the sea, area, about 1000 sq m. The sea-coast is rocky, and the interior in some parts mountainous, with picturesque valleys intervening. The principal rivers are the Lingga, the Malacca, the Cassing, the Bungie, and the Dayong, having their sources in the interior and falling into the Strait of Malacca. Their mouths are more or less obstructed by bars and sandbanks, and their margins generally low in many places swampy and covered with forest. The Lingga is navigable for small vessels 10 or 12 m from the mouth. The climate is said to be one of the best in India, the thermometer ranging from 72 to 85° throughout the year, seldom exceeding the latter, or falling much below the former. The soil is remarkably fertile, and, in several places, capable of producing excellent nutmegs and cloves.

Rice is grown in abundance. Agriculture is on the increase and the forests are being rapidly cleared away. Vegetation is remarkably luxuriant and nutmeg, sugar-cane, cotton, indigo, chocolate pepper and spices, have all been tried and found to thrive well. The spontaneous productions of the soil consist of a great variety of the fruits including the mangosteen which is said to attain a higher perfection here than probably anywhere else. There is no tank in the district, but abundance of fine durable lumber well adapted for ships and house building. It contains rich deposits of gold and tin, the latter chiefly in Nanning. This settlement is included in the presidency of Bengal and is governed by a resident, with an assistant resident at Malacca. Pop. estimated at 25 000 of whom about 8000 are Europeans.

MALACCA, a town Malay Peninsula, cap. of above dist. at the head of a small bay, on both sides, but mostly on the right of the Malacca river, near its mouth, lat. 2° 10' 30" N lon 102° 14' 16" E. (a.) The town which has a pretty appearance from the sea, is built in the old-fashioned Dutch style, each house, with its out offices, forming a square, with a yard in the centre. Many of the houses are of stone, and well built and several of the streets are spacious and hand some. But the place, according to Mr Davidson, is rapidly going to decay—poverty-stricken and with little or no trade being no longer the seat of the slightest importance either as a military post or a trading mart. The European population is composed almost entirely of the civil servants of the Government, and the military men who reside principally in the vicinity. The principal edifices are the town hall, jail, court-house barracks and civil and military hospitals. The literary institutions are an Anglo-Chinese college founded, in 1818, by Dr Morrison chiefly for the purpose of promoting the cultivation of Chinese literature by Europeans, and of European literature by the Chinese. Malay and surrounding nations several Chinese, Hindoo and Malay schools, the latter established by the Malays themselves, for their own instruction in English. Malacca has still some export trade in gold dust, tin, iron implements, fire-arms, wax, ebony, ivory, nutmeg, lard, oil, wood, hules, hops, fowls, jaggery, pepper &c. Principal imports—earthenware, rice, sugar, opium, British and Indian manufactured goods, woollens, paper, provisions, and liquors, for the European and Chinese inhabitants, salt, sugar, tea, tobacco &c. Malacca is convenient for ships requiring water and refreshments and fish, yams, sago, and a variety of excellent fruits, may be procured at moderate prices. Buffaloes, a few hogs, and some poultry may also be obtained and grain imported from Java, Borneo, or Bengal. Diameter for caulking is an article of trade here, and iron spars for masts brought over from the Siam river on the opposite coast of Sumatra. Malacca is said to have been founded in 1252 by a chief from Singapore. It subsequently fell into the possession of the Portuguese and Dutch alternately but was finally exchanged with us by the latter in 1826, for some settlements on the coast of Sumatra. The inhabitants are composed of Malays, Hindus, descendants of Dutch and Portuguese and Chinese. Almost all the artisans being of the last-named nation. Pop. 12,130.—(Hartshorn Scott's Oriental Interpreter, Davidson's Far East.)

THE TOWN HALL, MALACCA.—From Vallance's Illustrations of Malacca.

MALACCA (Strait of) the channel between the Malay peninsula and the Isl. of Sumatra, extending from lat. 1° N. to about 6° N. length, about 500 m. breadth varying from 25 m. to 200 m. the former at its S.E. extremity the latter at its N.W. The navigation of the strait appears intricate and dangerous but with ordinary prudence is not so in reality the channels being mostly spacious, and the anchorage good. The current where it leads not prevail sets often to the N.

MALACQUE I. of MALACQUE, a m. W. Africa, between 60 and 70 m. E. of Sierra Leone, on the route from Kambia to Faleba. lat. 9° 12' N. lon. 12° 45' W. L. bank Malagosa and strongly fortified.

MALACZKA of MALATYA a market in Hungary (previously Hither Danube co.) and 41 m. N. by W. Iressburg on the Malma. with five churches a castle and palace with numerous gardens tile works and several flour and saw mills. l. op. 2253.

MALAGA a maritime prov. Spain, Andalusian bounded N. by Cordova, E. Granada S. the Mediterranean and W. Cadiz and Seville. Area 4,92 sq. m. It is very rugged and mountainous being traversed in all directions, by objects of the Sierra Nevada mostly of limestone formation, and containing numerous remarkable caverns. Lead, iron graphite and copper are found to a greater or less extent and beautiful marble, Jasper and quartz abundant. The mountain sides are, for the most part, clothed with forests of pine, oak, holly, poplar, cork, and various other trees. Vineyards and olive plantations are numerous. The valleys, which, in general are carefully cultivated and well irrigated yield abundantly cereals, fruits sugar-cane, and vegetables. The luxuriant vegetation of the valleys and plains of Malaga is due, in a great measure, to the numerous streams that water the province the chief of these are the Guadalquivir, Gamil, Guadaro, Verde, and Icky most of them in the dry season unproductive, but, during the rains augmented to torrents frequently destructive to the crops on their banks. Lycium, woaden silken and esparto fabrics, sails, ropes hats, paper, soap, leather, earthenware, hardware, cigars, brandy wine, and oil, are manufactured and a considerable export trade, chiefly in wine, brandy, raisins, figs melons, lemons, and other fruits aniseed, sardines and other fish iron lead &c. is carried on. Education is still much neglected here, though great improvement has been made of late years. The state of morals is very loose smuggling, vagrancy and theft, prevail to a lamentable extent, and the cowardly use of the machete is even yet not unfrequent. l. op. 458,000.—(Madon, Dic. de l'Espagne.)

MALAGA (anc. Malaca) a seaport in Spain Andalusian, cap. above prov. advantageously situated on the N. shore of the Mediterranean, near the centre of a semicircular bay 96 m. S.E. Seville lat. (mole light) 36° 43' 30" N., lon. 4° 26' W. Its actual site is somewhat low but the ground rises finely behind, and on both sides of it, while the distance is terminated by lofty mountains. It is built chiefly along the shore, and is nearly of an oval form. In early times when occupying much less space than at present, it was surrounded by fortifications. Most of them have disappeared as the town extended, but considerable portions still remain, and though useless for defence, add greatly to the imposing appearance which the town presents when viewed from the sea. Taken as a whole, it is by no means well built. The streets are generally long narrow and winding and the houses, though usually of two, three, and even four stories, have an uninteresting and often even a disagreeable appearance. An exception, however, must be made of a number of modern houses, and also of those facing the public walks many of which are truly magnificent. The only squares at all deserving of notice are the Plaza Mayor or De la Constitucion, which is situated near the centre of the town, consists of a large quadrangle, lined by buildings of imposing magnitude, and, owing to its position forms the chief mart for business the Plaza de Riego, with a fountain in its centre and the Plaza de la Merced del Mar situated in a narrow place close to the sea and not more than two centuries ago actually covered by it. The public edifices are neither numerous nor splendid and usually suffer in appearance from the proximity of inferior buildings which have been allowed to crowd upon them. Among the most important are the cathedral a large structure, originally of great architectural merit but much discoloured

THE CATHEDRAL AND PORT OF MALAGA.
From Deane's Tourist in Spain

by incongruous modern alterations, with a principal front adorned by a fine marble colonnade, and flanked by two round towers and an interior composed of three large naves, and decorated with numerous sculptures and paintings nine parish churches, remarkable chiefly for the richness of their internal decorations the episcopal palace a well-proportioned building overlaid with marble sculptures, the municipal buildings and court houses, presenting a magnificent front along one side of the Plaza Mayor the new custom house, built in the Italian style of the last century, and so massive as to have the appearance of a prison or castle the Consejo de Motos a large pile with a handsome colonnade of black marble the old Moorish castle of Alcazar, the castle of Gibralfaro and the Alcazar both also Moorish the latter surmounted by numerous towers the diocesan seminary, college of San Telmo and normal school, the theatre, and building the founding, civil and military hospitals, and various charitable institutions. The manufactures consist chiefly of iron, the ore of which is obtained from rich mines in the vicinity, soap, and leather. The trade is of much more importance, and derives great facilities from the harbour, which is large, commodious, well sheltered easy of access, and has from 20 to 24 feet of water. The principal exports are wine fruit, particularly muscat, oranges and figs, oil, silk, and leather. The principal imports are shawls, steel, woollens, ironmongery, deals, copper sheet-iron, colonial produce, hides, and coal. The fisheries are productive and employ a great number of the inhabitants. Malaga is the see of a bishop, the residence of a civil and military governor and the seat of several important courts and public offices. Its foundation is attributed to the Carthaginians. From them it passed to the Romans, under whom it became a great and flourishing city. It afterwards fell into the hands of the Moors who possessed it so long, and built so much of it, that few cities in Spain pre-point, in their general form and structure, an appearance so decidedly Moorish as that of Malaga. Pop. 8,377.

MALAGON, a co. Spain, New Castle, prov. and 18 m. N. W. Ciudad-Real, on the Cambro. It consists chiefly of sarchon houses; has a parish church, townhouse, with prison, ancient castle two girls schools, and several oil and flour mills. Pop. 37,100.

MALAHIDE, a sea-bathing vii and par. Ireland, co. and 8½ m. N. E. Dublin. The village, on the Broadmeadow Water estuary, is well built, and contains the parish church, a R. Catholic chapel, and a small silk factory; the castle of Malahide is about ½ m. distant. Area of par., 1,128 ac. P. 1841.

MALAMOCLO [San Melchor], a in Italy Venetia gov. and 4 m. S. Venice, on an ial of same name, with a church. It forms part of the military cordon in the lagoons. Pop. 18,000.

MALANG a in Java, prov. Passerooran, 48 m. S. by W Boerabaya, cap. dist. in the vale of Malang, a rich upland territory, about 1000 ft. to 1400 ft. above sea-level, surrounded by a noble amphitheatre of mountains, among which are Kawi Tenger and the volcano of Semoro the last the loftiest mountain in Java 12,549 ft. high. The town is a considerable place, the residence of a deputy governor, near its centre is a spacious square surrounded by handsome houses with pleasure-grounds about them, and many of the inhabitants are Chinese. Coffee is cultivated in the vicinity.

MALANG, a in, and par. Switzerland, can. Grisons 5 m. S. E. Murghald, on the Landquart. Pop. 1020.

MALAPAR, a lake, Sweden, forming the boundary between the lla Westera, and of Upsala on the N. and Nykoping on the E. and extending considerably E. into the lla of Stock-holm intersected by lat 59° 50' N. and lon 17° E. It is very irregular in shape, and throws out arms which penetrate into the land in all directions, and gives its contour a very ragged appearance. Another remarkable feature is the vast number of islands which, in a manner, crowd its surface. About 1880 have been counted. Its greatest length, P. to W. is 75 m. and its breadth, which varies exceedingly may average about 12 m., area estimated at 884 sq. m. 50 sq. m. of which are occupied by islands. The direct distance between the opposite extremities of the lake gives no idea of the space which must be passed over in making an excursion in the steamers which now regularly ply upon it. Owing to the number of islands, the direct course is continually changing, and looks as if it were carried not across a lake, but along the windings of a beautiful river now narrowing so as to be almost enclosed by rocky precipices, now widening out and pursuing a majestic course between distant but fertile and richly-wooded shores. The lake, also, is of great commercial importance, giving to the populous towns which line its banks not only a free communication with the capital and each other, but also with the Baltic, more especially by the canal which has its mouth in the Bay of Söderballe.

MALASPINA one of the Columbrete lla. (which see)

MALATIVO a in. Ceylon See MELTIVON.

MALATYEH, or MALATA a in. Asiatic Turkey path and 105 m. N. E. Marash, near r bank Euphrates, on a plain. It is a small and desolate-looking place, streets overgrown with grass, ancient walls in ruins, and in many places fallen down because of a moss appearance, and the shops in the houses near and staid. There are, however, two well built mosques and two caravanserais, all in the Persian style of architecture. One of the gates also is a very handsome structure. Malatyeh is very unhealthy in autumn. It occupies the site of the ancient Melitene, once the capital of Armenia Minor but now in ruins.

MALACENE, a co. France, dep. Vendue, 23 m. N. E. Avignon. It has old, ruined rampiers, a handsome church, an ancient chapel, considerable manufactures of wool-lens, silk, linen, earthen pottery and various kinds of iron and copper ware, numerous paper mills, worsted and silk mills, oil-mills, dye-works, brick and tile works, potteries, and plaster-kilns and a trade in corn and wine wool, silk, and madder. Pop. 22,14.

MALAY ARCHIPELAGO See INDIAN ARCHIPELAGO.

MALAY PENINSULA, in its most extended sense, the vast peninsula which separates the Gulf of Siam and the China Sea, on the E. from the Bay of Bengal and the Strait of Malacca, on the W. and S. W., and forming the most

S. portion of continental Asia. It extends from lat. 7° 20' to about 18° N., lon. 98° to 104° E. The E. portion of this peninsula, as far S. as lat. 7° N., belongs chiefly to Siam, but has part of the British Tenasserim provinces on its N. W. shore. From lat. 7° N. to the Strait of Singapore, is Malacca proper, or the Malay Peninsula in the more restricted sense. It contains various native states more or less dependent on Siam, the chief of which are Kedah or Quedah, Perak, Selangor, Calantan, Brambo Tringene, Pahang, Johore, and also the British settlements of Province Wellesley and Malacca. Area, about 50,000 sq. m. A range of mountains traverses it N. W. to S. E., rising gradually towards the former to the height of about 6000 ft. It is well watered, numerous rivers descending from either side of the central range of mountains, and flowing towards the E. and W. coasts, they are necessarily small, their courses being but short. Amongst the most considerable are the Muda Cartan, Perak, Birna, Bappan, Moro, Seole and Johore, on the W. and S. coasts, and the Calantan, Tringene and numerous smaller streams on the E. In some parts it is highly mountainous, its top being especially rugged for excellence. A large portion of this region is still occupied by primeval forests. The principal vegetable productions are gambour, areca, sagu, catechu, and an abundance of valuable resins, gums, drugs, with nutmegs, cloves, cinnamon, tobacco coffee sugar cotton, and indigo. Rice and other grains are also raised, but not in sufficient quantities for the home demand, the difference being imported from Bengal and Siam. Among the wild animals are the elephant, rhinoceros, a variety of tigers, leopards, bears, monkeys, alligators, gnuas and sometimes the jaguar, there are one or two species of deer which are exceedingly small in size, and of delicate proportions. Of birds there are a vast variety including the argus-pheasant, horn-bill, peacock large vulture-bat, hummingbird and ampe. Snakes abound, many of which are venomous. The domestic animals are the same as those of India, with exception of sheep and horses, which are not natural to the country. The neighbouring seas afford a great variety of shells and corals. The inhabitants of this peninsula consist of two classes—the original natives and the Malays. The former are of the ethnically denominated Oriental negroes, and inhabit the mountainous of the interior. They are of a diminutive stature, but in other respects resemble the negroes of Africa. They are in a perfectly savage state. By the Malays they are called Bataang. As a people, the Malays are noted for their ferocity, cunning, and treachery, never forgiving an affront, but always taking a cruel revenge. They are addicted to gambling of all kinds and to the use of opium and are notorious thieves. Their religion is Mahomedanism of the Soomra sect. Their language, which is termed the Malay is a compend of various others including Sanskrit and Arabic, and is considered very soft and simple. It is written from right to left in the Arabic character, with a few slight alterations, and is general to all the adjacent islands. Pop. estimated at 275,000. (Oriental Interpreter Journal of the Indian Archipelago Wilkes U States Exploring Expedition.)

MALAYIA, an isl. S. Pacific Ocean, lat. (S point) 9° 45' S. lon. 161° 59' E. It is a small island, about 14 high, mountainous, clothed with wood, shores low and covered with mangroves, coasts seem to be nearly uninhabited.

MALBERG or MALBERG a market to Lower Austria, about 12 m. from Jekelndorf with a church a castle with gardens, and a trade in wine. Pop. 1101.

MALBOROUGH, par. Eng. Devon; 5310 m. P. 3854.

MALBURGETH or MALBORGETH a in Anvers, Italy, circle and 21 m. S. W. Villach, in a narrow pass, on the Fella. It was defended by a strong fort called Thalauer which, after a valiant defence, was captured and razed by the French in 1809. It has a church, and steel and iron works.

MALCHIN a in Germany Mecklenburg-Schwerin, 38 m. S. E. Rostock. It is walled has a Gothic church, manufactures of linen, copper-ware, and soap, several distilleries and some general trade. Pop. 8802.

MALCHOW, a in Germany, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, circle and 40 m. S. E. Mecklenburg-Schwerin, on an island close to the W. shore of Lake Malchow. It is a place of considerable antiquity was often the residence of the prince, and has an old monastery some linen manufactory, a considerable trade, and an active fishery in the lake. Pop. 2807.

MALDA or MALDIBA a tn Hindoostan, presid. and prov Bengal, 1 bank Mahanadi, 60 m. N. Moorshabadd, lat. 26° N lon 88° 10' E. It is a miserable place, and, during the rainy season, is nearly insulated. In the earlier part of the present century it consisted of 8000 houses, nearly all of which were built with stone and brick from the ruins of Gaur. There were here formerly extensive factories belonging to the Dutch and French established for the purchase of silk and cotton goods, for which the place was celebrated, but the improvements made in European manufactures of this kind, and in the art of dyeing, entirely ruined its trade. The only reputation now left it rests on its mangos, which grow on the opposite banks of the Mahanadi.

MALDEGEM a vil and com. Belgium, prov E. Flanders, 17 m. N. W. Ghent. Beer, weaving, dyeing, calico-printing and tanning are carried on. There are also vinegar-works, flour and oil mills, and a considerable trade in agricultural produce and timber. Pop. 6000.

MALDEN, a par Eng Surrey 1272 or Pop. 268
MALDEN a vil Holland, prov Gelderland 4 m. S. Nijmegen with a R. Catholic church and a brewery. Pop. (agricultural) 680.

MALDEN ISLAND an isl Pacific Ocean, lat (S. point) 8 56' 30" S; lon. 165° W of local coral formation about 13 or 14 m in extent discovered by Captain Lord George Byron of H. M. S. Bleeker, July 30, 1823. It is uninhabited, being entirely desolate, apparently of means of subsistence for human beings. It is also without fresh water, excepting what rain has deposited in the hollows and crevices of the rocks. Sea-fowl are numerous. Bats are the only land animals which have been met on the island. In the centre is a large lagoon, communicating with the sea on the N. side. On this side also occurs a very singular and interesting series of buildings, supported by blocks of wrought coral, and having in the centre what appear to be tombs or altars, extending the whole length of the island, about 8 or 10 m. When or by whom these structures were erected can scarcely be given conjecture.

MALDERIJN a vil and com. Belgium, prov Brabant, on the Steenhebbek-Beek, 16 m. N. N. W. Brussels. It has a brewery distillery several mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1560.

MALDIVA or ISI ANDI or MALSHIVA (Thousand Isles) a remarkable chain of isls. Indian Ocean, at the entrance to the Arabian Sea, extending from lat 0° 40' S. to 7° 6' N. nearly on the meridian of 73° 40' E. with a breadth of about 50 m. The chain is composed of 17 atolls, that is, circular or oval groups of islets, all formed of coral, and fringed with reefs sometimes extending to the distance of 2 or 3 m. beyond which there are no soundings at numerous depths but in the centre of each atoll there is a lagoon from 15 to 40 fathoms deep. All the Maldiva islands of any extent are richly clothed with wood chiefly palm and are fertile in fruit, and in various kinds of edible roots they also produce millet, and abound in coconuts, figs and all descriptions of fish. The inhabitants are a civilised race of people, and carry on a considerable trade with the British possessions in India; more particularly, Bengal, Ceylon, and the Malabar coast, as also to the Red Sea and to Sumatra exchanging coir, which are plentiful in the Maldiva coir mats, oil, fish tortoise-shell &c. for rice, sugar, tobacco, and manufactured goods. They are expert navigators and sailors, and have schools for teaching navigation on some of the islands, and they make and repair nautical instruments. They are a kindly, industrious people of a dark copper colour rather short in person. Neither murder nor theft is known among them, nor, being strict Mahomedans, is drunkenness. They are remarkable for their hospitality and kindness to shipwrecked mariners, for which they refuse all pecuniary compensation. They are governed by a sultan, whose title and rank are hereditary. He resides in the island of Male or Mehi, and pays annual tribute to the British government in Ceylon. Under the sultan are five vassals or ministers of state. Pop. 150,000 to 200,000.

MALDON, a par bor, port, and market in England, co. Essex, 30 m. N. E. London, on a branch of the Eastern Counties Railway and on the ridge of a hill, r. bank Black wall, near the confluence of the Chelmer. It consists chiefly of one spacious street upwards of 1 m in length E. to W., with many houses of an antiquated appearance, but also some new ranges of handsome modern buildings, is lighted with gas, partially paved, and amply supplied with water. It has a large old town-hall of the date of Henry VI., a spacious church, in the early Norman and early English styles, with a curious triangular tower of Norman architecture, surrounded by a hexagonal square place of worship for Independents, and Wesleyans. A Society of Friends meeting-house, a free grammar school with a library attached, and several minor charities. The harbour, formed by the bay of the Blackwater river affords safe anchorage to vessels not drawing more than 8 ft. water close to the wharves, and is the place of the office, and discharge their cargoes by means of lighters. The import trade consists of coal, iron, corn, &c. There is also a productive fishery, and oysters of superior quality are taken in abundance. The port is of considerable consequence to the Essex coast, and much of the adjoining country is supplied through it. The borough sends two members to Parliament. Registered electors (1851) 845. Pop. (1851) 6888.

MALDONADO a ls and harbour Uruguay N. E. coast of the estuary of the Rio de la Plata, 23 m. E. Monte Video; lat. 34° 58' 30" S lon. 54° 58' 45" W (a). The town, about 2 m. from the shore, is built on the brow of a hill gently descending 250 ft. above sea-level. The principal buildings form a quadrangle, including the new church. The common habitations are of brick, and covered with straw but the houses, in the streets issuing from the square, are low, and constructed of earth. Pop. about 1000.

MALÉ, Moulou, or Kint's Island one of the Maldiva group lat. 4° 10' N lon. 73° 34' E. It is the residence of the sultan, and the seat of his government, and was once completely fortified by a wall and bastions only the N. and W. sides of which are now in a state of repair. It exports coconuts, tortoise-shell, dried fish, coir, coir, coir, and mats. The native vessels are from 100 to 200 tons burthen. The climate is very unhealthy. Pop. 1500 to 2000.

MALÉ a market in Austria, Tyrol, circle and 50 m. from Trent, on the Roon. It has a church, a Capuchin monastery, and large cattle fairs. Pop. 1161.

MALÉ-MYR a tn. Burness, r. bank Irwell 76 m. N. Ayr. It has many handsome gilded temples, and contains about 800 houses. (—Howe and Soc Bengal April 1837.)

MALMOET, a vil France, dep. Bouches-du-Rhône, on a rock, near r. bank Duranoe, about 25 m. E. N. E. Arles. An old castle overlooking the town and surrounded with strong ramparts, is partly used as a prison. Pop. 1300.

MALMO a market in and com Italy Lombardy; gov Milan prov and 17 m. S. E. Lod 1 m. from the Adda with a church and chapel a flour and three oil mills. Pop. 4043.

MALMÖ par isl of Man. Pop. 5568.

MALFI, a vil Austria, Dalmatia, circle and 7 m. N. W. Ragusa, on a bay of the Adriatic with a church, and local court. It has long been famous for its olive-oil. Pop. 2984.

MALGABAH, or MIGALABA, a tn European Turkey, prov Bosphorus, near Gallipoli 62 m. E. Adrianople, with about 500 houses.

MALGHAT a tn. Spain, Catalonia, prov and 35 m. N. E. Barcelona, in an extensive plain near the Mediterranean with a church, an ancient tower, and manufactures of damask and blond lace. Pop. 2838.

MALIN a vil Ireland, co Donegal 10 m. N. by E. Londonderry with a neat church. Pop. 244.—MALIN HEAD has 4 m. N. by W. and rises 278 ft. above the sea.

MALINER, a tn Belgium. See MECHLEN.

MALINKA, a river which rises in the N. slope of the Caucasus, flows N. separating Circassia from Russia, then N. E., and joins the Terek, 16 m. W. S. W. Moudok, after a course of about 110 m. Its chief affluent is the Balkan.

MALLARDSTOWN, par Irel Kilkenny, 2526 aa. Pop. 439.

MALLARE or MALLARA, a vil and com Italy Piedmont, div Isonzo, prov Savona, 7 m. from Cavour with two parish churches, a public school, a charitable endowment, bookbinders, and a trade in chestnuts. Pop. 1597.

MALLÉN (anc. Mallor) a tn Spain, Aragon, prov and 89 m. N. W. Saragossa, r. bank Ebro, near its confluence with the Ebro. The streets are irregular but the houses well built. It has a church, modern courthouses, good prisons, two primary schools, a flour, and several oil mills, and a trade in corn, oil, and wine. Pop. 1923.

MALLENOWITZ, a market in Austria, Moravia, circle and 12 m. N N E. Hradisch, on the Drauzna, with a church, a castle, a chapel, and two annual fairs. Pop. 1387.

MALLEZA, a vil. and par. Spain Asturias, prov and about 25 m from Oviedo, with a parish church, a primary school, manufactures of linen, and numerous mills. P. 1876.

MALLICOLLO, one of the New Hebrides Is., S. Pacific Ocean, lat. 9° 54' N, 167° 26' E, lon. 167° 33' E, about 55 m long, and 15 to 17 m broad discovered by Quoy in 1800, and visited by Cook in 1774. It is moderately elevated, and contains some forests with large trees; it was supposed by Cook to be fertile, but the fruits inferior to those of the Society or Friendly Islands.

MALLING two par. Eng.—[East] Kent 2765 ac. Pop. 1741.—[West] Sussex, 2980 ac. Pop. 780.

MALLING (Went), a tn and par England co Kent 8 m S by W Rochester. The town, on a small rivulet that falls into the Medway, contains an ancient church with a fine Norman tower, and a Baptist chapel. Area of par 1366 ac. Pop. 2021.

MALLORCA, Isl. Mediterranean. See MAJONCA.

MALLOW, a par. par market tn, and par Ireland co. Cork. The town, 18 m. N by W Cork, 1 bank Blackwater, connected with the suburbs of Maljishan, on the E bank, by a bridge of 15 arches, is noted for its mineral waters and the scenery of its environs. It is lighted with gas, has a county infirmary, courthouse, bridewell, union workhouse, spa, and club-houses, and barracks, all commodious, and some of these neat buildings, a handsome parish church, in the later English style, a commodious R. Catholic chapel, and places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans four public schools, a loan fund, and a dispensary. Races take place annually in September on a course about 3 m. E from the town. There are several soap and candle manufactures, linen and silk works, tanneries, a brewery, and melting establishment. A considerable trade is carried on with the surrounding districts. The borough sends a member to Parliament. Registered electors (1851) 143. Pop. 6551. Area of par 8930 ac. Pop. 9273.

MALI WYD par Wales, Merioneth, 16,450 ac. P. 1201.

MALMEDEY a tn Prussia, gov and 21 m. S. S. W. Aix-la-Chapelle, on the left bank of the R. Rhine, in the district of the Werra. It has three churches, one of them a handsome edifice, formerly attached to a well-endowed abbey and a superior barge-house, a justice-of-peace court, important manufactures of sole leather, of which above 6000 pieces are annually prepared, woollen cloth, paper pressing cards, &c. glue, and dye-works, an excellent cotton factory; and mineral springs, which, in their properties are not inferior to those of Spa, but not much frequented. Pop. 4139.—The climate is too dry to be well adapted for agriculture but raises great numbers of cattle. Area, 287 sq. m. Pop. 29,567.

MALMESBURY a par. bor and market tn. England, co Wilt, 23 m. N E. Bristol on the side of a hill, and nearly surrounded by the two branches of the Lower Avon, over which there is a bridge of six arches. It consists of four principal wall paves, and lighted streets. Houses mostly of stone, and has near its centre an ancient octagonal market-cross. It likewise possesses a new townhall and market-houses, with two parish churches, one of them a magnificent Norman structure, which originally formed the nave of the church belonging to an ancient monastery; four Dissenting chapels, two public and several private schools, and societies for the relief of the poor. The manufacture of woollen cloth, formerly the chief branch, has given way to wool-stapling. Large quantities of malt are made here, and a great deal of butcher-meat is sent to London. The borough sends a member to Parliament. Registered electors (1851) 809. William of Malmesbury the historian, and Thomas Hobbes, the philosopher, were born here. Pop. par. bor., 6998.—(Local Correspondent.)

MALMESBURY (St. PAUL) par Eng. Wilt 5332 ac. Pop. 2448.

MALMÖ, a seaport in Sweden, cap. lzn, on the Sound, and in one of the most fertile districts of Sweden, 16 m. E S. E. Copenhagen, lat. 59° 28' 6" N, lon. 18° 2' E (n). It was formerly a place of strength, being enclosed by ditches, and walls flanked with bastions, and otherwise fortified. All the fortifications have disappeared, to the great improvement of the appearance of the town, which consists of houses that, though often old, are generally well built, of a large and regular square, surrounded by an avenue of lime, alder and chestnut trees, and a number of spacious streets. The principal buildings are two churches, one of them of ungaily exterior, but handsome within, and possessed of an uncommonly large organ, an elegant chapel, fine altar decorations, and costly ornaments, the old castle still surrounded by walls and ditches, and occupied partly as barracks, partly as a prison and house of correction; the governor's house, townhouse, hospital, and theatre. The manufactures consist of woollen and linen cloth, soap, vinegar, tobacco, oil, and particularly gloves, which may be considered as the staple trade, usually cramped by the want of a good harbour is chiefly in grain and brandy. A steamer plies regularly between Malmö, Copenhagen and Lübeck. Pop. 10,803.—The Lzn, bounded N and E by Christiansburg, S. by the Baltic, W by the Sound, and N W by the Östergötter, greatest length, S. E. to N W 80 m, breadth varying from 10 m. to 40 m. consists generally of an extensive plain, occasionally broken by hills, and forming one of the most fertile tracts in the kingdom. It has a moist and heavy, but not unhealthy climate. contains several lakes, of which that of Rönnebo is the largest, produces corn in such abundance as to leave a considerable surplus for export, makes excellent cheese, and rears the finest horses and cattle in Sweden. For administrative purposes, it is divided into 15 districts, of which Malmö is the capital. Pop. 194,190.

MALMYCH, or MALMINT, a tn. Russia, gov Viatka, on the Sozhma, near its confluence with the Viatka, 77 m. N. N. E. Kazan. It consists of about 600 houses, of wood and the inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, but have some manufactures and general trade. Near it are some gold-washings.

MALNATE a vil and com. Italy Lombardy gov Milan prov and 13 m. E. N. E. Como, on a gentle hill near the confluence of the Arza with the Olcio. It has a handsome church with three naves, supposed to have been built in the thirteenth century, some manufactures of linen and cotton, a bell foundry and three cotton mills. Pop. 2062.

MALO, a tn Italy gov Venetia prov and 11 m. N W Vicenza near the Buechiglione with two churches and a saltpetre factory. Pop. dist. 10,900.

MALO (St.) [Latin, Mediolanum] a tn. and seaport France, cap. Ille-et-Vilaine, on the rocky point of an island, communicating with the mainland by a long causeway called Le Sillon, 40 m. N N W Rennes, lat. 48° 39' N, lon. 2° 1' 30" W (n). It is strong by natural position, and well fortified. The whole area of the island is occupied by the houses, and the walls flanked with towers, rising up directly from the water's edge, are washed by the sea. The ramparts furnish a fine walk, which makes the whole circuit of the town but owing to defect of space, many of the streets are very narrow, and the houses closely crowded together, are so high as to exclude a free circulation of air. Among the public buildings may be mentioned the cathedral, a Gothic structure very capacious, and much modernized with some good marble statues, and the ancient castle, in the form of a square with a large tower at each angle. The harbour is formed by the mouth of the Rance, the island, and causeway. It is dry at ebb but the flood-tide rushes in with great impetuosity and rises to the extraordinary height of 45 ft. It is difficult of access, being encumbered at its entrance by shoals, but within is wide, large, and very commodious, with a broad quay, running close under the walls. It has excellent building docks, in which a considerable number of vessels are constructed. The roads are to the S. W. and are almost enclosed by a little archipelago of bare, angular, white rocks. On several of these, strong forts are erected, and on one of them is the tomb in which Othello's island, a native of the town, has buried by his own desire. It has manufactures of hosiery, fishing-nets, sail-cloth, cordage, soap, and fishing-boats, it trades in corn, fruit, wine, brandy, salt provisions, tobacco, alder, honey, flax, hair, and agricultural produce. St. Malo ranks as a fortress of the third class, and possesses courts of first resort and commerce, a custom-house, a consulting chamber of manufacturers and trade, a first-class school of hydrography and an agricultural society. The town of St. Servan is separated from St. Malo by a creek, across which a solid work of granite has been thrown, with flood-gates wide enough to admit steamers and frigates; thus forming a valuable floating-dock. Pop. 8462.

MALOI, two places, Russia.—1 (Archangel), A tn, gov and 43 m. S.E. Orel, on the Kolinskawka; with a church and some general trade. P (agrestural) 5703.—2, (Jaroslavl) A tn gov and 86 m. N Kaluga, r bank, Longa, with six churches, and some trade in milk and honey. Kutsow defeated the French here in 1812, when the town was partly burned down. Pop. 1860 5750.

MALONNE, a tn. and com. Belgium, prov and 8 m. N.W. Namur, on the Sambre, with a church, three chapels, and a communal house and herd by an old abbey founded in 665. Coal is worked in the commune, and there are several mills, two blancheries, and a brewery. Pop. 3183.

MALONNO, a vil and com. Italy, Lombardy prov and 42 m. N N.E. Bergamo, r bank Olzio with a large and handsome church. Lead and iron are wrought in the neighbourhood, particularly the latter which occupies several smelting furnaces, and employs the greater part of the inhabitants. There are also a saw and a walk mill. Pop. 1980.

MALOUINES, isla. S. Atlantico. See FALKLAND ISLANDS.

MALPARTIDA, several places, Spain, Extremadura. 1, (de Cáceres), A tn, prov and 6 m. W by E. Cáceres, tolerably well built, has a square, wide and paved streets, a church three chapels, a townhouse prison, two schools, a cemetery and some trade in grain and cattle. Pop. 3834.—2 (de Plasencia) A vil, prov and 51 m. N by E. Cáceres, with a spacious square, a church, two chapels townhouse, prison, and two schools. Good wine and oil are expressed here. Pop. 2191.—3 (de la Serena), A tn prov and 55 m. E.N.E. Badajoz, 8 m. N Zalamea with wide, well-paved streets, a church townhouse prison school and storehouse. Considerable numbers of pigs are reared here. Pop. 1546.

MALPAS—1 A market tn. and par. England co and 13 m. S.E.E. Chester. The town consists of four streets diverging at right angles from a common centre and has a church several meeting houses for Dissenters, an endowed grammar school and several charitable institutions. Matthew Henry, the commentator was a native of the parish and Dr Heber

Bishop of Calcutta was a native of the town. Area of par 27 094 ac. Pop. 6710.—2, A par. England Monmouth, 1968 ac. Pop. 337.

MALPLAQUET a vil. France, dep. Nord, 16 m. N.W. Avesnes. It is remarkable as the scene of a great battle fought in 1709 in which the Allies, under Marlborough and Prince Eugene, defeated the French under Villars.

MALS, a market tn. Austria, Tyrol circle Ober-Innthal in a mountainous and romantic district, S.E.W. Innsbruck. It was formerly defended by a strong castle; and has a parish church a Benedictine hospital, and an hospital. Pop. 1650.

MALS-ELF a river Norway which rises in lake Alnas, in a mountainous district on the N. frontier of Sweden, flows N.W. and falls into the Malmøyr Fjord opposite to the island of Qualøen after a course of above 80 m. Its chief affluent is the Berde, which it receives on the left.

MALSCH two places, Baden.—1, A vil circle Middle Rhine, ball Bittlingen 10 m. E.N.E. Rastatt. It has a church, a brewery, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 2868.—2 A vil circle Lower Rhine, ball Westloth, S.E.E. Mannheim with a church Hmeklin, and oil-mills. Pop. 1950.

MALSTRÖM, or Malmström (Danish, Malden a whirl pool) a whirlpool, Arctic Ocean, off N.W. coast Norway, immediately S.W. of Holmøen, the most S. of the Lofoden Isles, lat. 67° 49' N., and lon. 12° E. It prevents the appearance of a rapid current, which runs alternately 6 hours from N to S and 6 hours from S. to N, producing immense whirls. The depth of the water around supposed at one time to be too great to admit of soundings, has been ascertained not to exceed 20 fathoms with a bottom of rocks and white mud. The whirlpool is greatest at high or low water and when the wind is N.W., and opposed to the reflux of the waves, it attains its greatest fury and becomes extremely dangerous but in ordinary circumstances, it may be traversed without apprehension.

MALTA [anc. Melita, French Melé] an isl. Meditor ranean, forming part of the British Empire 62 m. S.W.

Sicily and 197 m. N. Africa, lat. (Valletta palace) 35° 58' 48" N., lon. 14° 51' 16" E. (n.) greatest length N.W. to S.E. 17 m. central breadth about 9 m., area, 86 sq. m. It is of an irregular oval shape, deeply indented on all sides, except the S. where the coast forms a continuous and almost unbroken line. The largest bays are those of Marsa and Għalib.

rocks on the S.W., and Malcheta and St. Paul's on the N.E., but the most important, in every respect, is the double bay formed by the opposite sides of the remarkable peninsulas on which the capital, Valletta, stands. The S.W. coast is remarkably bold, and having not a single opening in which a vessel can take refuge, is considered dangerous. The N. coast has a more level shore. The surface is very much broken by rocks, which places it in all directions, and are almost destitute of any covering of soil, leaving few intervening spaces which can be brought under regular culture. The elevation, however, is not great. The culminating point, which occurs near the S.W. coast, does not exceed 1200 ft. and from this point the surface presents the appearance of an inclined plane sloping, with more or less rapidity, towards the N.E. shore. The rocks are all stratified and arranged in nearly parallel layers, with a very gentle dip generally N.E. to E by N. They are disposed in 4 distinct groups, descending in the following order:—1. Coral limestones of a compact and almost flinty texture, and a reddish brown or whitish colour. 2. Yellow sandstone and blue clay the former above, in beds of about 20 ft. thick, and abounding in fossils, materially thinner than the latter from 100 to 130 ft. thick and containing only a few fossils generally enveloped in iron nodules. 3. Sand stone, arranged in five beds, which have a total thickness of about 100 ft. and are very calcareous. 4. A yellowish white semi-crystalline limestone, of great thickness and from its hardness and durability forming an excellent building stone, for which purpose it is extensively quarried. The climate, on the whole is good. The range of temperature seldom exceeds 6° in 24 hours the air is usually dry and clear and strong gales are not frequent, except in spring, when they are much felt, and often, accompanied by thunderstorms. The winter climate, from the middle of October till that of January cannot be surpassed but in summer the heat becomes extreme, and the bright light reflected from the bare white rocks and houses is very annoying and often injures the sight. There are no lakes or proper running streams in the island, but the springs are so numerous and copious, that no deficiency of water is felt. The soil is very thin, and lying on a calcareous rock which is continually sending itself above the surface, is unfit for general cultivation. The corn raised furnishes not more than three months supply. The staple product is cotton for which both soil and climate are well adapted. Both the vine and olive are cultivated, but the produce of both is inferior. Frank particularly figs and oranges, is very abundant and of excellent flavour. The manufactures consist chiefly of cotton goods, cabinet-work made for exportation chiefly to Greece and the Ionian islands and jewellery including neck chains and gold filigree-work, for which the Maltese have long been famous. Other minor articles of manufacture are soap, leather, macaroni &c. The central position of Malta in the Mediterranean, makes it particularly in war an important commercial depot, and at all times an invaluable naval station. It has, in consequence, received great attention from the British Government, and been both provided with excellent docks and very strong fortifications. The language commonly spoken is Italian, but the native Maltese have a peculiar dialect, closely resembling the Arabic, though with a considerable mixture of Persian words. Malta appears very early, and makes a considerable figure in history. According to Homer it was first peopled by the Phoenicians. It passed successively through the hands of the Phoenicians, Greeks, and Carthaginians, and was finally attached to Rome during the second Punic war. After the fall of the Roman empire, it was seized, at different times, by Vandals, Goths, and Saracens. From the last, it passed to Sicily and followed its fortunes till 1562, when Charles V. granted it to the Order of St. John of Jerusalem. In 1798, the Grand Master Hompesch surrendered it, without defence, to Napoleon. It was afterwards blockaded by Nelson, and taken after two years. It is now along with the islands of Comino and Gozo (which see) a formally recognized possession of Great Britain. Pop. about 100,000.—(Perr. Papers Martin's Colonies, Murray's Handbook for Travellers in the East.)

MALTBURY, 2, two parishes—1 York (W. Riding) 4517 ac. Pop. 684.—2, (de Mores) Lincoln, 1871 ac. Pop. 293.

MALTEBERG, a market in Baden circle Upper Rhine, 15 m. S.W. Freiburg, with a parish church, and two annual fairs. Pop. 1406.

MALTEBS, a to and par Switzerland, can. and 11 m. W. Luzern, on the Emmenthal. It has an important annual market, chiefly for cattle and young horses. Cattle is very prevalent, and hence the valley sometimes gets the name of Kröththal. Pop. 4455.

MALTON or NEW MALTON an anc. bor. and market in England, co. and 16 m. N.E. York, a burk Derwent, on the York and Scarborough railway. It consists of several streets, diverging from a central area or market-place and is altogether about $\frac{1}{2}$ m. long. The streets are lighted with gas, houses generally well built, many of them small. It has a neat town-hall, a mechanics institution and some suits of public rooms, to which a subscription library and news-room are attached two ancient churches one in the Norman and the other in the later English style, also places of worship for Baptists, Independents Primitive Methodists Wesleyans, and Unitarians and several schools. Considerable quantities of agricultural produce are conveyed hither, by the Derwent, to Hull, Leeds, Wakefield, and London. Malton returns two members to parliament. Registered electors (1861) 1580. Pop. 687.

MALTON (Otn) par Eng York (N. Riding), 8293 ac. Pop. 1605.

MALUENDIA, a vil and oom Spain, Aragon, prov. and 40 m. S.W. Saragossa, r. bank Jiloca. It has three churches a courthouse, primary school and manufacture of brown paper eye-works, felling, and flour mills. Pop. 1135.

MALVAGLIA, a tn. and par Switzerland, can. Tesano, 9 m. N. Bellinzona. The whole neighbourhood is very romantic, and one of the most important cattle-marts of the canton is held here. Pop. 1684.

MALVAGNA, a vil Sicily, prov. Catania, finely situated on the side of one of the hills of Mount Etna. Pop. 1000.

MALVERN (GREAT and LITTLE).—1 (Great), a tn. and par England, co. Worcester. The town, one of the most celebrated and fashionable watering places in the kingdom, 8 m. S.S.W. Worcester is finely situated on the E. side of the Malvern hills. It is irregularly built but is surrounded by beautiful villas and handsome mansions. The hotels, boarding and lodging houses, are all of an excellent description, and the accommodation for bathing and for drinking the waters good. The library is a handsome building, in the Italian style and is well supplied with books and newspapers a part is appropriated to a bazaar and adjoining are baths and billiard-rooms. There are several schools, a district visiting society a dispensary, and a clothing-club. The abbey church, formerly that of the Benedictine priory is a fine specimen of ecclesiastical architecture. It has a fine substituted tower with windows of richly stained glass. At one time there was a celebrated monastery here, founded in the time of Edward the Confessor. Area of par 6021 ac. Pop. 8311.—2 (Little), A small par and vil 4 m. S. Great Malvern with an ancient stone church in the Gothic style all nearly in ruins, excepting the chancel and tower, and a R. Catholic chapel. Area, 948 ac. Pop. 68.

MALVERN HILLS, a range, England, which stretches N. to S., between Herefordshire and Worcestershire, for about 10 m. and forms one of the finest boundaries of the vale of the Severn, on the E. Their greatest height does not exceed 1444 ft.

MALWAH (Benset), A mountainous country? an old Mahometan prov. Hindostan, presid. Bengal, mostly between lat. 22° and 25° N. and lon. 74° and 79° E. and now included in the states of Bhopal, Nagpur, Gwalior Indore &c. It is rather an elevated region, its centre consisting of a tableland or plateau, in general open, but diversified with cool table-crowned hills. Few of its elevations, however exceed 2000 ft. Numerous rivers have their sources in this province, and descend in every direction. The principal of these are the Nerbudda, Chumbul, Soyna, and Cans. The savage tribe called Bhels are numerous in this territory, chiefly occupying the mountains contiguous to the Nerbudda. In appearance, they are a diminutive wretched-looking race but active, and capable of undergoing great fatigue. Their chiefs exercise absolute power and are implicitly obeyed when commanding the perpetration of the most atrocious crimes.

MALWAN or BOCKWAN, a tn. and fortified in Hindostan, Cochin, presid. and 800 m. S. Bombay, lat. 16° 35' N.; lon. 73° 42' E.

MALTY or Malto, an isl. Siberia, Arctic Ocean, about 45 m. S.E. of isl. Kotelnoi. A great deal of seal ivory is found on it.

MAHA, two rivers, Andia Russia, in the N.E. of gov. Irkutsk. They are distinguished by the names of Verkhne-Mama and Nijne-Mama. The former, the larger of the two, has a course of about 100 m. They both join on l. bank Vistula.

MANADITCH, a r. Russia, gov. and 90 m. N.E. of Krasn. cap. circle, r. bank Vistula, not far above its junction with the Kama, with about 2000 inhabitants. The course, bounded on the S. by the Kama, and well watered by the Vistula and the Kama, is excessively covered with pine forests, but has also good arable and pasture land. P. 116,000.

MAMAGUAPÉ, or Mormon, a tn. Brazil, prov. and 40 m. N.W. Paraíba, l. bank river of same name. It has a townhouse church, and primary school its trade in cotton, formerly considerable, has been absorbed by Pernambuco. Pop. dist. 4000.

MAMBRE, a par Eng Worcester 2808 ac Pop. 381.

MAMBOCABA, a vil. and par Brazil prov. and 100 m. W. Rio de Janeiro near the coast, on a small river of same name. It consists of a number of houses clustering round the church as their centre, and presenting a striking and beautiful appearance when approached from the sea. It has many distilleries, and building-yards in which a great number of canoes are made. The woods of the district abound with the finest timber and the soil seems particularly adapted for the various species of palm. Coffee, manioc, millet, haricots, and, above all, rice, are extensively cultivated. Pop. 4000.

MAMLOE (Mao), a m. and par Portugal, prov. Trás-os-Montes, co. Vila-Rica, r. bank Douro, where it is joined by the Tua, 20 m. N. E. Lamego. It is famous both for its wines and oranges, particularly the latter which are among the best in Portugal. Pop. 1230.

MAMMERS (Latin Mammars) a tn. France dep. Sarthe near the source of the Dive, 25 m. N.E. Le Mans. It has two tolerably handsome squares, opened into by several well-built streets a court of first resort and commerce, and a commercial college a Gothic church surrounded by an elegant wooden park, remodelled in 1831, manufactures of hemp, cloth, calicoes, cotton stuffs, woollen hosiery, and another of pearl buttons and wax-refineries, tanneries, breweries, and several annual fairs. It is supposed to occupy the site of a temple of Mars which was destroyed in the 7th century. It was once strongly fortified, and was long in possession of the English, who demolished its fortifications in 1438. Pop. 5788.

MAMHEAD par Eng Devon 1165 ac Pop. 258.

MAMHILL par Eng. Monmouth 1987 ac. P. 287.

MAMHOLE, a hamlet, England, co. Monmouth, 7 m. W. Pontypool. The inhabitants are principally employed in the extensive coal and iron works carried on in the neighbourhood. Pop. 6789.

MAMINA, a large Indian tn. Peru, prov. Tarma, lat. 20° 4' 48" S. around which the potato is met with in great perfection. It is supplied with water from clear, boiling sulphur springs and none of gypsum, alum, and carbonate of soda abound. (Bullert, in Jour. Roy. Soc. Ed. 1851.)

MAMMOLEA, a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Ultra 1, dist. and 7 m. N. Gerace. Pop. 4800.

MAMMOO-KHALI, a fort, Afghanistan close to Gunde-muck, about 60 m. E. Kabul, on the road to Jelalabad, lat. 34° 17' N.; lon. 70° 4' E. Here the British, under General Pollock, in their advance on Kabul in 1842 defeated the Afghans.

MAMUJADA, a vil. in Sardina div Sassari, prov. and 185 E. Sassari. It has a principal and several minor churches, two manufactories, manufactures of articles in iron and wood, and a trade in corn, fruit, cheese, wool, and char coal. Pop. 1771.

MAMURE, a large river S. America, Bolivia, an upper branch of the Madeira, having its sources on the N. slopes of the lofty Andes of Cochabamba, lat. 17° 30' S. lon. 83° 10' W., whence it flows N. to about lat. 10° 30' when it is joined by the Beni, and is thereafter known as the Madeira. Previously to its being united to the latter river, it is joined by the Guaporé or Iténez, lat. 11° 37' S. lon. 62° W. Its whole course, from its source to its junction with the Beni, is about 500 m.

MAMPAVA, a maritima tn., Isl. Borneo, S.W. coast, lat. 0° 38' N. lon. 109° 10' E. and formerly one of the best markets among the S. islands for opium. It is situated near the mouth of a river of the same name, and is reached by a fort. The anchorage in Mampava road is in 5 to 8 fathoms, about 3 or 4 m. off shore. Here the tide runs about 2 m. per hour nearly E.S.E. and opposite.

MAN (Isle of) (Latin, Mona or Momona) an isl. Irish Sea, about 30 m. W. England, 33 m. E. Ireland, 15 m. S. Scotland, and 45 m. N. Wales. lat. (middle dept) 54° 24' N. lon. 4° 58' 50" W. [=] Extremes length, N. E. to S.W., about 80 m., with an irregular breadth varying from 8 to 13 or 15 m. Area, 179,300 ac. Viewed from a distance, the general aspect of the island, though in some respects beautiful, is rather tame, for the mountains, which extend nearly through its entire length, although of considerable altitude, neither tower up with sufficient abruptness, nor assume picturesque forms. The highest point of the range is Snowdon or Snow-fell about 2000 ft. above sea-level. This range of mountains and hills which occupies a considerable portion of the surface of the island is chiefly composed of clay-slate, containing some beds of roofing-slate. Low rocks of granite make their appearance in some parts of the slate district. On the S. end of the island, mountain limestone, extending from Porthcawl to Derby Haven a distance of about 5 m. rests upon the slate, separated from it by a bed of conglomerate. The E. end of the island is nearly flat, and is chiefly composed of alluvial soil.

Vegetation consists of grass, corn, clover, and, in some of the mountains in a N. and S. direction. Fine lead mines have been worked to advantage. The island is well watered, numerous springs and rivulets issuing from the sides and bases of the hills and mountains. Some of the larger streams are stocked with trout, and other species of fresh water fish. The names of the principal are the Neth at Porthcawl, the Colby near Ramsey, and the Black and Grey Waters near Douglas. The valleys are some of them tolerably fertile in grass and pasture, and where the land is somewhat level, grain is frequently cultivated. The N. district of the island is not so fertile as the S. but timber is more abundant to the N. The climate is upon the whole mild and temperate, with quantities of rain fall for seven or eight months of the year and occasionally the island is visited with a long continuance of cold E. winds. Agriculture is a good deal improved but is still very backward. Wheat, barley, oats and potatoes are the principal crops. Turnips also are raised, and flax for home use. The live stock of the present day is composed of an improved breed, the old, with exception of the native aborigines, which are still found on the hills, being nearly extinct, or at any rate wearing fast out. Small properties are less numerous than formerly, but by far the largest portion of the island is still in the possession of yeomen farming their own little estates, consisting of from 10 to 300 ac., and possessing mostly a portion of lowland with hill pasture.

Man used to be one of the principal seats of the herring fishery but latterly, being for several years comparatively deserted by the herring shoals, the fishery in consequence became quite inconsiderable. There are some bleaching-works in the island but few manufacturing establishments the women, however, were formerly weavers of cotton fabrics for home use. The principal exports are corn, potatoes, eggs, limestone, fish, linen, and salt-cloth imports, spirits, wine, colonial products, and manufactured goods.

This island was originally peopled by the Manx (Mannin), a tribe of the Celtic race. It was latterly held as a feudal sovereignty by the earls of Derby and more recently by the dukes of Atholl, from whom it was purchased for the British Crown in 1806 and finally in 1836, certain remaining privileges were ceded by the duke on receiving an award of £218,000. There is still, however, a considerable difference between the duties on commodities in the island and in Great Britain the duties on almost all foreign articles consumed in the former being decidedly lower than those on the same articles when entered for consumption in Britain. The government, political institutions, and laws of Man are in many respects peculiar. The legislative and judicial authority is principally vested in the House of Keys, formerly a deputation, but now a self-elected body of 24 individuals. Two decessors, officers of great antiquity, sit as judges in common and criminal cases. The governor is named by the Crown; and has a council, consisting of four or six individuals. The King, demostre governor, and council, constitute the parliament; or, as it is called, the Synodal Court, of the island. The established religion is that of the Church of England, under the bishop of Sodor and Man, who has a seat (without a vote) in the British House of Peers. The Manx language, derived from the ancient Celtic, is still in common use, although all the inhabitants speak English. Principal towns, Castletown (the capital), Peel, Douglas, and Ramsey. Pop. 58,587.

MANA.—1. A river, French Guiana. It rises in the centre of the country flows generally N. and, after a course of about 150 m. falls into the Atlantic 150 m. N. W. Cayenne. Its mouth is barred by sandbanks, and vessels, drawing more than 12 ft. water, cannot enter it except at high tides. On its banks is a French colony for free blacks—2. An isl. in Cook's Strait, New Zealand lat. 41° 7' S. lon. 174° 54' E. It is about 2½ m. long and 1 m. broad, depastures a few sheep and is a whaling station.

MANAAR (GULF ISLAND AND TOWN).—The entire is the tract of sea lying between the island of Ceylon and the E. coast of the S. extremity of the peninsula of Hindoostan, between the Falk's Strait by Adam's bed, &c. It is about 180 m. wide at the broadest part, but is so full of sandbanks and shoals as to render its navigation difficult, if not impossible by vessels of large burden. It possesses many extensive fisheries, and abounds in pearl banks and chank shells.—The island is off the N. W. coast of Ceylon, from which it is separated by a strait, 2 m. to 3 m. broad at high water is 18 m. long, and 2 m. to 3 m. broad, and forms a kind of continuation of Adam's bridge. It is low composed almost wholly of a mixture of shells and sand, nearly unrecognizable of any sort of culture, while the water is generally impregnated with salt. It is chiefly planted with coconuts and palm-tree trees, besides a small variety of shrubs and vegetables, among which cotton predominates. In the most wild and uncultivated part of the sandy tracts the best chaya-roots are produced the collection of which forms the exclusive occupation of a particular class of people called Adalgas. Great numbers of black cattle and goats are reared on the island from the milk of the latter the inhabitants make a coarse kind of cream-cheese, small and round. In early times, Manaar was the emporium of Malabar commerce, and its exports and imports extensive. At present, its exports are chiefly confined to the coast of Coromandel, and consist of chanks, chaya-roots, palm-tree rafters, areca-nuts, iron wood, and salted fish. Its imports are cloth, rice, spices, and drugs.—The town, at the S. extremity of the island is small but neat has one principal, and a number of smaller streets and contains many good houses, with several R. Catholic chapels, and a commodious bazaar, well supplied with merchandise. It has a small square fort which contains besides the officers quarters, magazines and barracks, a small Protestant church, and two reservoirs for water.—(Ceylon Gazetteer)

MANACON, par Eng Cornwall 1848 ac. Pop. 562.

MANACON, a tn Spain, isl. Majorca, 3 m. E Palma, on a gentle declivity. It is well built, has several spacious squares, and wide, well kept streets. Its buildings are substantially the most important are the palace of the sovereign kings of the country a large parish church a chapel of ease, townhouse, prison, two schools, and an hospital. It has also manufactures of linen, wool, oil, and vegetables, and some trade in grain, oil, cattle, and fruit. Pop. 10,815.—(Madox)

MANAGOV par Wales, Montgomery, 6638 ac. P 796

MANAGUA a tn. and lake, Central America, state of Nicaragua. The town situated near the S. W. shore of the lake, 32 m. S. S. W. Leon, consists of long rows of huts and low houses, and a large square, with houses of two stories lining the sides, and a large church in its centre. There is also another large church, conspicuous by a white archway in front. The inhabitants, chiefly Indians, are very industrious, and have among them many good workmen, remarkable for their dexterity in imitating articles of foreign manufacture. In order to avoid the jealousy and rivalry of Granada and Leon, Managua was recently selected for the meeting of the legislature. On some rocks, a few miles from the town, are a great number of figures, supposed to be ancient, and curiously painted in bright red. Pop. about 12,000. The region around is remarkable for beauty, salubrity, and fertility, and has many hill slopes, admirably adapted for coffee plantations.

—The LAKES, sometimes called LEON, from having that town at its N. W. extremity (about 58 m. long, and discharges itself into the Lake of Nicaragua by the Tipitapa or Panatoya. It is 155 ft. above the level of the Pacific, only 16 ft. above that of Nicaragua, and, though shallow near the shores, is understood to be very deep in its centre. These circumstances, and its distance of not more than 85 m. from the port of Realfo, have recently attracted considerable attention to this lake, in connection with the proposed navigable communication between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

MANALIPA or MANIRIPA, an isl. Sooloo Archipelago. See COCO (ISLANDS)

MANAMA a tn., Persian Gulf. See BAHREIN
MANAN, or MANAN (GREAT AND LITTLE), two isls. N. America, in the Atlantic.—1. New Brunswick, at the entrance of the Bay of Fundy, and opposite the S. extremity of Passamaquoddy Bay. It is 13 m. long and 6 m. at its greatest breadth.—2. U. States, Maine, off Stenben harbour. It has a lighthouse, with a tower 25 ft. high.

MANAOE, a tn. Brazil. See BARRA DO RIO-NIGRO

MANAOROWAR, or TWO-MANAN, a lake Tibet, noted in Hindu sacred legends. It lies 280 m. E. N. E. Delhi, lat. 30° 40' N. lon. 81° 38' E., at the foot of Mount Kailas, 15,200 ft. above sea-level. It forms nearly a circle about 15 m. in diameter, and is one of the head sources of the river Sindhu pouring its waters into Lake Rakas-Tal, or Tso Lanak, which throws off feeders to that river.

MANATON par Eng Devon 5399 ac. Pop. 442

MANAWAIU a river, New Zealand, N. isl. It rises on the W. slope of the highest mountain range to the isl., flows in a very tortuous course, S. by E. to lat. 40° 30' S. where it turns W. and N. and then W. S. W. to Cook's Bay, which it enters by a mouth about 800 yards wide at half-tide about 53 m. N. by E. Wellington, after receiving several affluents on either side. On a bar, at its mouth there are only 7 ft. of water at low tide but inside the bar there is depth enough for small vessels for about 50 m. The tide rises 8 ft.

MANBY, par Eng Lincoln 1480 ac. Pop. 240

MANCHESTER, par Eng Warwick 4190 ac. P 5346

MANCHA (La), an ancient territory, Spain, in the S. of New Castle now included in the four provs. Ciudad-Real, Toledo, Cuenca, and Albacete. It is covered in the N. by ramifications of the mountains of Toledo, and in the S. E. and S. by the sierras of Alcarria and Morona. Towards the centre, it is composed of an elevated and generally barren plateau. The name and scenery of La Mancha have been rendered familiar by the descriptions of Cervantes in Don Quixote.

MANCHA REAL, or MANCHELA DE JAEN a tn. to Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 8 m. E. Jaen. It is indifferently built, has a large and handsome square, a spacious church, with three naves, town-hall, prison, two schools, an hospital, several chapels, and manufactures of linen, coarse cloth, wine, oil, and earthen ware. Pop. 8966.

MANCHEL (La) a maritime dep. France, washed on the W. N. and N. E. by the English Channel, and bounded on the E. by dep. Calvados, S. E. Orne and G. dep. Mayenne, and Ile-et-Vilaine lat. 48° 27' to 49° 45' N. lon. 0° 44' to 1° 59' W. Its shape is irregular, but, with some allowance, may be regarded as a parallelogram, the longest side of which N. to S., is 30 m. and the shortest 30 m. area, 2245 sq. m. The coast about 155 m. in length furnishes, on the N. side the important harbour of Cherbourg. The surface of the department is on the whole flat and sandy but a considerable ridge traverses it N. to S., forming the water-shed between the E. and W. In the direction of this ridge, the country is undulating and in many places, though by no means mountainous, eminently elevated and abrupt to be very picturesque. The shores are generally flat, and lined with swamps, alternately covered by the tides, and left dry by the fall of the tide. The climate is mild but damp. Of the numerous but small rivers, the only ones deserving of notice are the Calonne, Sienne, Vire, and Douve. About 3/4 of the whole surface are arable, 1/4 meadow, and 1/4 waste. The cereals raised are more than adequate to the consumption, but the best land only is adapted for wheat. A prevailing crop is a species of black oats, which enters largely into the diet of the working-classes. The culture of the potato is general. Apple orchards, particularly in the interior are extensive, and produce great quantities of cider, which is the ordinary beverage. The most common forest trees are oak, beech and hurch. The cattle are large, and a tolerably good breed, the sheep are small, but yield good mutton. Considerable attention is paid to the dairy, and the butter called Isigny and made in several districts, has long been famous. The horses belong to the Norman breed, which at one time had a European reputation, but the great demand for them, for military purposes, has both thinned their numbers and somewhat deteriorated their quality. Both lead and iron are partially worked. Near Cherbourg five blocks of building granite are obtained, and in several other quarters, sandstone, limestone, marble, pavement, and potter's clay are found. A good deal of salt and soda are procured from the salt marshes. The inhabitants are industrious, and numerous manufactures are carried on none, however, to an extent deserving of a separate notice. The trade is almost confined to agricultural produce, and fish, fresh and salted.

Manche was originally inhabited by the Unelli and Ahrin cal. It was subsequently included in the territory which the Normans wrested from Charles the Simple in the tenth century. Along with the other dominions of William the Conqueror it became an appanage of England, but returned to the crown of France under Charles VII. For administrative purposes, this department is divided into six arrondissements—St. Ló, the capital. Avranches, Cherbourg, Coutances, Mortain & along—subdivided into 46 cantons, and 640 communes. Pop (1859) 600,882.

MANCHESTER, a U States, Virginia, r bank James river opposite Richmond. It has two churches an extensive cotton and eight tobacco factories, a cotton-seed, oil and a flour mill. Pop 1500.

MANCHESTER (anc. Mancovian) the most important manufacturing tn. of England occupying chiefly a low tract of ground on both sides of the Irwell, at the confluence of the

Medlock and the Irk, 183 m. N. N. W. London, 83 m. E. by N. Liverpool; lat. (St. Mary's) 53° 39' N., lon 2° 14' 30" W. (c.). It consists of Manchester proper, including the suburbs of the Hulme, Chorlton, Ardwick, Chesham, etc., situated on the E. or E. bank, and of the extensive borough of Balafron, situated on the W. bank of the Irwell, the communication across which is maintained by eight bridges, several of which are handsome structures. Among them may be specified Victoria Bridge, consisting of a single, elegant arch; Blackfriars' Bridge, of three arches, the iron bridge of Strangeways and Springfield Lane, and the suspension iron bridge of Broughton. The site, owing partly to its lowness, and the tenuous subsoil on which it rests, and partly to the tainting of the streams by the numerous public works established upon them, has been considered somewhat unhealthy though exaggerated ideas have been entertained on the subject, and many of the only real causes of disease have been either removed or greatly modified by improved drainage, and the introduction of an adequate supply of pure water. The almost unexampled rapidity with which Manchester has risen up has produced the apparently opposite but by no means contradictory results, of leaving it comparatively poor in architectural ornament, and yet superior to most manufacturing towns in general appearance. If it cannot boast of many venerable structures embodying the conceptions of master minds and rich in historical recollections, it has comparatively few of the narrow twisted and crowded lanes, by which all large towns of ancient date are more or less characterized, while it can point to spacious streets and squares, well paved and well lighted, and lined with houses, which not only when occupied as private mansions, but also when intended for business and manufactures, are generally of a most substantial and, not unfrequently, of a magnificent description. Market Street, continued in the line of the London road nearly across the centre of the town, towards the Irwell, is one of the finest streets out of the metropolis, and any town might well be proud of the splendid edifices lining such streets as Mosley Street, George Street, King Street, and Parker Street.

MANCHESTER.—TYPICALLY THE INFIRMARY, etc., from Mosley Street.—From a large Photograph by Harrison, Manchester

PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS.—1. Churches.—The places of public worship in Manchester and its neighbourhood, exceed 180. Of these the Establishment has 49 the Wesleyan Methodists 28 the Methodist Association 17 the Methodist New Connection 9 the Primitive Methodists 8, the Independents 22, the Baptists 10 the K. Catholics 10, the Scotch Presbyterians 5 the Unitarians 5 and several other denominations one or two each. Of the Established churches, the first place is due to the Collegiate Church, which since the erection of Manchester into a bishop's see, has become the Cathedral. It was built in 1429 and is considered a fine specimen of perpendicular Gothic, though the soft and mouldering stone of which it is built has rendered numerous repairs necessary, and somewhat altered its original appearance. It consists of a nave and aisles, and is rendered conspicuous by its lofty tower, which is 150 ft. in height, and in its upper part highly ornamented, though, unfortunately in such a rapid state of decay that it has been pronounced dangerous. A deeply recessed doorway in the W. side of the tower now closed, was formerly the principal entrance. The interior has a very striking appearance. The roof, nearly flat, is divided by moldings richly carved, and is finely painted, and gilded. The choir contains some very elaborate carved work, not surpassed by any cathedral in the island, though the subjects represented are little in accordance with the solemnity of the place. Behind the altar is a curious piece of old tapestry, representing the death of Ananias and Sapphira, and in some of the finely-proportioned clerestory windows, by which the nave is lighted, are remains of the original painted glass.

St. Ann's Church, near the centre of the town, is a Grecian structure, with a tower and a fine organ. St. Peter's, also Grecian, is remarkable for its fine bell and a picture of the Descent from the Cross, by Antonio Canova. St. Mary's, an irregular building, not easily reducible to any style of architecture, has an elegant spire, supported by a lantern composed of eight Ionic pillars, and a painted window representing our Saviour and Mary in the garden, and over the altar a copy of Raphael's Assumption by Williams. St. John's, in the later English Gothic, has a tower with a pair of bells, a neat and richly ornamented interior partly lighted by painted windows, and some beautiful monuments, among

1. Manchester.

1. Exchange.
2. Town Hall.
3. City Hall.
4. Royal Exchange.
5. Central Hall.
6. Free Trade Hall.
7. Victoria Station.
8. Grosvenor Institution.
9. St. Mary's Church.

11. St. Ann's Church.

12. St. Peter's Church.
13. St. James's Church.
14. St. Paul's Church.
15. St. George's Church.
16. St. Andrew's Church.
17. St. Martin's Church.
18. St. Michael's Church.
19. St. Nicholas's Church.

20. St. John's Church.

21. Trinity Church.
22. St. George's (Hill) Church.
23. St. George's (Hill) Church.
24. St. George's (Hill) Church.
25. St. George's (Hill) Church.
26. St. George's (Hill) Church.
27. St. George's (Hill) Church.
28. St. George's (Hill) Church.

29. St. Bartholomew's Church.

30. St. Bartholomew's Church.
31. St. Bartholomew's Church.
32. St. Bartholomew's Church.
33. St. Bartholomew's Church.
34. St. Bartholomew's Church.
35. St. Bartholomew's Church.
36. St. Bartholomew's Church.
37. St. Bartholomew's Church.

which one, in marble, by Flaxman, and another in Caen stone, from the designs of Messrs Travis and Mangnall are conspicuous. St. Matthew's, a large and handsome building of modern Gothic, after designs by Barry is well situated, and has a spire 132 ft in height, and a fine organ. Trinity Church, Salford, the oldest in the borough, is surmounted by a tower of perpendicular Gothic, and is interesting from the antiquity of its interior, which is filled up with dark oak pews. St. Philip's and St. Simon's, both in Salford, are handsome edifices. The former, of Grecian architecture, has a tower rising above a circular portion of the Ionic order; the latter, in the pointed or early English style, has a tower and spire 150 ft in height, a porch of curved oak, and three well-executed coloured windows. St. George's, in Hulme, one of the finest churches in Manchester, has a lofty pinnacled tower and a handsomely fitted up interior. Holy Trinity, also in Hulme, a splendid building in the early English style, built from the gift of £10 000 by Miss Atherton, has a very beautiful interior, a superbly painted and gilt chancel and some richly stained lancet windows. All Saints' Grosvenor Square, Manchester, has a tower surmounted by a dome, and a beautiful circular window of coloured glass. St. Luke's, of Cheetham Hill Road, of perpendicular Gothic, is a splendid building with a tower terminating in an elegant crocketed spire 170 ft. high and has some fine oak carving in the interior. Among the churches not established, the most deserving of notice are St. John's R. Catholic, in Salford, a cruciform structure, of decorated English, with a central tower, terminating in an elegant spire 200 ft high, said to be the loftiest in Lancashire; a splendidly decorated porch, an interior in which a good deal of taste has been displayed and three large pictures copied from those behind the high altar of Medinacithedral; Cavendish Street Independent Chapel, in the early English style, with a handsome interior, a fine window of stained glass and a tower terminating in an elegant spire 173 ft. high. The English Presbyterian Church in Salford, is in the perpendicular style, with a tower and lofty spire.

2. Municipal and Commercial Buildings and Institutions.—The Townhall situated in King Street, which, by the removal of old and unsightly buildings, has now become one of the most important streets in Manchester, is built in the Grecian style, borrowed partly from the temple of Erechthon, and partly from the Temple of the Winds at Athens, and has on each side of its portico which is approached by a flight of steps, figures of Solon and Alibiad, and, in the attic story above it, medallion portraits of Luke and others; and in its interior a splendid hall 130 ft. long by 38 ft. wide, having its walls, and the dome which forms the centre of its ceiling covered with allegorical frescoes. In these buildings are situated the offices of the Chamber of Commerce, an institution founded in Nov. 1830 for the promotion of measures calculated to benefit and protect the trading interests of the town and neighbourhood of Manchester. It is conducted by 24 Directors and has been, from its commencement, a constant opponent of the corn laws and of monopolies of every kind. It was the first public body to repudiate protection for manufactures and to call for the abolition of every species of differential duties, and for the repeal of the navigation laws. Questions of a purely political complexion are not entertained at any of its meetings. Its proceedings attract attention in every commercial community throughout the world. The Manchester Commercial Association is another institution, having similar objects in view. It holds regular meetings, and publishes an annual report of its proceedings. The Exchange, one of the finest structures of the kind in the kingdom, has a front consisting of a lofty Doric portico, with eight fluted columns, and, in the interior, a splendid commercial room, 185 ft. long by 92 ft. wide, partly divided by two rows of fluted Ionic columns and lighted from above by a lofty glazed centre dome and two light octagonal lights in the upper part is a large room containing a library of more than 30,000 vols. The Corn Exchange has a handsome front of six Ionic fluted columns, and is capable of holding 2400 persons. The Free Trade Hall, though only of brick deserves notice for its extraordinary dimensions, which enable it to contain, when crowded, upwards of 8000 persons; this structure, under whose roof so many important meetings, connected with the Free Trade movement, have taken place, and from whose platform proceeded those great principles of commercial freedom which have since been adopted by the Legislature is (1853) about to be pulled down, and replaced by a handsome building adapted for large meetings, concerts, lectures, &c. The Salford Townhall finely situated with a spacious area in front is a handsome and commodious structure. The Branch Bank of England, which has its principal facade nearly opposite to the Townhall Manchester is one of the handsomest buildings of which the town can boast. It is in the Grecian style with a Doric colonnade. The County Court Hall Nicholas Croft, a spacious and ornamented building recently erected has a handsome circular facade. The work houses of Manchester and Salford are large and conspicuous structures, admirably adapted for their purposes. The Borough Jail on the Hyde Road finely situated so as to form a conspicuous object from the surrounding country, is a large and in no far as the purpose for which it is intended would admit of it, a handsome building in which the classification of prisoners is carried out as strictly as possible in all its details, and all important modern improvements in the system of prison discipline are admirably carried out. The New Bailey Prison in Salford, though unfortunately situated in the midst of the town, is said to be remarkably healthy and has the reputation of being one of the best-regulated prisons in the country.

3. Educational and Literary Establishments.—At the head of these, at least for its antiquity, is Othman College or Hospital which immediately adjoins the Cathedral and is approached through a handsome gateway. It is a very old building, occupying the site of the residence of the Baron or Thane of Mancunium was originally used as a dwelling-house by the collegiate body, was converted into barracks by the army of the Parliament, and, having been purchased by the trustees of Othman's charity, was first occupied by the boys in 1656. The boys, whose dress is similar to that of Othman's Hospital in London, are eighty in number, and remain in the institution till the age of 14, when they are apprenticed with a small premium. Attached to the institution is a valuable library of above 12,000 vols., freely open to every person, resident or stranger. The Lanchester Independent College, occupying an airy situation, with a considerable space of open ground around it, is a noble building, in the English academic style, consisting of a body from the centre of which a lofty pinnacled tower rises, and of two wings, carried backwards at right angles. It was built by a bequest of a theological academy, and will accommodate about fifty students. Manchester New College, a theological institution established by the Unitarians is said to have a valuable, though not very extensive, library. Owen's College, founded by a bequest of upwards of £100,000 from the gentleman whose name it bears, is still in its infancy but gives instruction in all the branches usually taught in the English universities. Mr Owen's munificent bequest having been given to fund the college, and not to provide buildings for it, the institution has hitherto occupied a large house in which Mr Cobden formerly resided, but the task of furnishing adequate accommodation, has been entered upon with spirit and voluntary subscriptions, to a large amount, have been already (1853) obtained. The Free Grammar School founded by Hugh Oldham, Bishop of Exeter in 1520 has an income of above £4000 per annum, and a great number of exhibitions at Oxford or Cambridge. The education given includes the principal European languages, classics, mathematics, and various other branches. The Commercial Schools established by the Manchester Church Education Society occupy a handsome building erected in 1843, and furnish a complete course of education to the middle classes on very favourable terms. The Ladies' Jubilee School so called because the subscription for the building was commenced in commemoration of the jubilee of the reign of George III., was founded to promote the moral and religious education of poor female children, and having received a great addition to its resources by a munificent bequest by a lady of £1000 has increased the number of its pupils to forty and treats them so well for domestic service, that the demand for them for that purpose always exceeds the supply. The Royal School of Medicine and Surgery, founded in 1824, is on the same footing as similar schools in the metropolis, qualifying for examination at Surgeons' Hall &c. It has an average attendance of 80 to 100 students and has in connection with it museums of anatomy and materia medica a laboratory library and medical society. The Literary and Philosophical Society established in 1781 has numbered many distinguished individuals among its members, and published several volumes of valuable Transactions, in the council room are fine portraits of Sir Isaac Newton, Sir Humphry Davy Dr Dalton &c., and a noble marble bust of Dr W. Henry, by Chantrey. The Chetham Society established in 1843 for the publication of historical and literary remains, connected with Lancashire and Cheshire, has published 22 vols. generally of a very interesting description. One of the most valuable of the literary institutions of Manchester is the Free Library situate in Camp Field. It was established in 1851 by public subscription, extending to £19,742 and contains upwards of 16,000 vols. in the reference, and 5000 in the lending library. It is, as its name implies, perfectly free, and is supported by a local rate of one halfpenny in the pound upon the poor rate assessment. Its establishment was suggested by Dr J. Watts, but its completion was mainly owing to the great exertions of the mayor for the time being, Sir John Potter and Mr James A. Turner. Manchester has the credit of establishing the first free lending library in the Kingdom. Other societies deserving of mention are the Natural History Society which possesses a very valuable museum, the Geological Society with a museum and library, the Statistical Society the Law Association, the Medical Society, the Royal Institution, occupying buildings which cost £40,000 and are among the most ornamental in the town; the Athenæum, the School of Design, Anson's Lyceum, the three Mechanics Institutions, and several Musical Clubs. In addition to the libraries already mentioned, mention, notice is due to the Subscription New Education, the Farnley, the Newhall Buildings, the Farnley, the Law Librarian, and also to the Salford Museum and Library, which is open to the public.

Beneficent Institutions.—Some of these have been mentioned among the schools, but others more immediately referred to under this head are the Royal Infirmary which, in its architectural and general appearance, forms one of the greatest ornaments of the town, consisting of the three sides of a quadrangle, with a fine portico, supported by four fluted Ionic columns in the centre of each, and surrounded by a spacious area, tastefully laid out with green borders and walks, with a sheet of water in front. The Blind Asylum, supported partly by subscriptions, but chiefly by a munificent bequest of £20,000, left to it by Mr. Henshaw of Oldham; and the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, mixed together, so as to form one handsome building in the English collegiate style. Other benevolent institutions deserving of notice are the Lunatic Asylum, the Eye, Lock, Salford Royal, and Lying-in hospitals, the public Baths and Wash-houses, the Model Lodging-houses, the Juvenile Refuge Penitentiary, Strangers' Friend Hospital, &c.

Places of Amusement and Recreation.—Manchester possesses two theatres, a large and handsome Concert Hall, and a Museum of Natural History, already referred to occupying a handsome edifice of three stories with about 100 feet of front, and containing many valuable and interesting collections, well kept and well arranged. In the Free Trade Hall, a series of cheap concerts have been given for several years, to which thousands of the working-classes have been in the habit of resorting. The great boast of Manchester however is not its fine door amusements, but its fine parks and gardens, where not amusement merely, but health and instruction too, may be obtained by the easiest means and in the most agreeable manner. The most important of these are the Botanical and Horticultural Gardens, scarcely surpassed by any out of the metropolis, the Peel Park, situated 1 m. W. of the Exchange, bounded on its E. side by the Irwell and covering an area of 23 a., laid out with great taste and judgment, so as to afford ample space for recreation, or more active and boisterous sports, and containing among its other ornaments, a bronze statue of Sir Robert, 10 ft. in height, placed on a granite pedestal, the Queen's Park, about 2 m. N. E. from the Exchange, laid out in a style similar to that of the Peel Park with rustic seats and pleasant shady spots, and, in some respects superior to it, from possessing larger trees, a more diversified surface, and a fine sheet of water some six acres. Phillips's Park, situated about 2 m. S. from the Exchange, near localities almost entirely occupied by the working-classes, who gladly and beneficently avail themselves of its means of recreation and the Zoological and Pomona Gardens. The three parks were established by public subscription in 1845, and cost about £58,000 of which sum £20,000 was given by the Government.

Cemeteries.—Of these Manchester has not much to boast. That in Rusholme Road, though only opened in 1851 in which might then have been considered a rural district, is already so completely surrounded by streets, that it has now almost all the features, and lies open to the charge of being merely an extra-mural graveyard. That of Ardwick, covering about 12 a. though well laid out and carefully kept, is on similar grounds objectionable. The only true cemetery, in the modern sense of the term, is that of Harpurhey, situated about 2 m. out of town on the Rochdale Road, and consisting of nearly 11 a., laid out with some taste, but by no means having such features, as a cemetery worthy of Manchester ought to possess.

Manufactures and Trade.—To these Manchester owes its rapid rise, and almost all its present importance. Its rise in these respects has been admirably chosen. It stands close to one of the largest and most valuable coal fields of England, at such a convenient distance both from the W. and E. coasts, as to form a naturalemporium for the traffic of the Atlantic and the German Oceans, and on the Irwell with its two tributaries, the Mersey and the Tyne, which, though not possessed directly of much value for navigation, are easily capable of being made subservient to it, and are of great importance for many manufacturing purposes. To develop these natural advantages, a network of canals, in which the engineering genius of Bridley reined some of its greatest triumphs, furnishes easy communication to numerous important towns, of which Manchester may be regarded as the common centre and to these has now been added a system of railways, which almost leaves nothing further to be desired in regard to facility of transport, and to the benefit of which Manchester from the leading part which it took along with Liverpool, in proving the practicability and profitable working of such a mode of transit, may be said to have established a peculiar claim. The great staple article of manufacture and trade in Manchester is cotton, in the various stages of which it has taken so decided a lead not only in this country but throughout the civilized, and we might almost add the uncivilized world, that the name both of the town and its goods have become household words. In more immediate connection with the cotton manufacture are numerous bleach-works, dye-works, print-fields, chemical works, and engine factories. Probably next in importance to cotton in the spinning of silk and manufacture of silk goods, which, long depressed by a heavy import duty on raw silk, took a sudden spring when relief in this respect was obtained and has since advanced with such rapid strides, as enables it to be regarded as an important staple of the place. Besides articles of pure cotton and pure silk, mixed goods, in which silk and cotton silk and wool, cotton and wool are combined, are manufactured to a considerable extent. The following Table, furnished in February 1853, by the Inspector of Factories, gives the most recent and accurate information in regard to the important subjects in which it relates—

STATISTICAL TABLE OF THE FACTORIES AND PAINT-WORKS IN MANCHESTER AND SALFORD

| | Number of Wheels | Persons employed. | Short-wool. |
|---|---------------------|-------------------|-------------|
| Cotton-Spinning. | 30 | 1382 | 1640 |
| Cotton-Weaving | 60 | 7708 | 1031 |
| Cotton-Spinning and Weaving | 42 | 17558 | 4704 |
| Woolen and Worsted Spinning and Weaving | 142 | 30380 | 737 |
| Silk-Weaving, &c. and Small Ware. | 5 | 980 | 80 |
| Paint-Spinning | 60 | 7190 | 180 |
| Flax-Weaving | 5 | 95 | 195 |
| Total | 233 | 49,264 | 513 |

Forges and foundries, also, where steam-engines, large cast-iron, numerous large and valuable articles of iron, malleable and cast, are made, are numerous. The only other articles particularly deserving of notice are paper, chiefly made at extensive mills in the vicinity here, and engraving in connection with the printing of cotton goods. The trade embracing all the above manufactures is necessarily very extensive.

Means of Communication.—Here it is hardly necessary to notice the ample means of local transport furnished by the numerous omnibuses which continually ply in the streets, and afford a cheap and commodious mode of transport in all directions. The railways are the Liverpool and Manchester which has its terminus at Victoria Station, Hay's Bank, and will always hold a prominent place in the history of the railway system, from having been the first for which locomotives, that was opened in this country, the Lancashire and Yorkshire, occupying part of the same station communicating by a branch with Oldham, and leading N. past Rochdale, connecting Manchester with Halifax, Bradford, Huddersfield, Wakefield, Leeds, &c. the Manchester and Buryingham forming one of the principal branches of the London and North Western, and the great thoroughfare to the S. the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, leading E. and communicating with Sheffield Hall, Great Grimsby &c. stations at London Road, the E. Lancashire, which has its station in New Bailey Street, Salford, and communicates with Bury Blackburn &c., and the S. Junction and Altringham which has its station in Oxford Road, and is intended to connect Manchester with Chester, through Warrington. The canal system had, at the close of the last century, adopted Manchester its centre, and all its quarters are now intersected by canals. That of the Duke of Bridgewater communicates with the Mersey at Buncorn, those of Ashton-under-Lyne, Stockport, and Macclesfield all join each other and have a common basin at the back of Piccadilly, that of Rochdale and Halifax communicates with the Bridgewater, and that of Bolton and Bury has its terminus in Salford. If anything is still wanting to make the means of communication perfect, it is a navigable channel between the Mersey and Irwell of such depth as would enable vessels of large size to come direct from the ocean and discharge or receive their cargoes at shipping-wharfs in Manchester. Schemes apparently far more extravagant have been realized the most eminent engineers have pronounced it not impracticable, and to the Mersey and Irwell Navigation Company will probably belong at no distant period, the honour of having carried it into effect.

The Corporation.—The borough of Manchester comprises the several townships of Manchester, Chorlton upon Medlock, Hulme, Ardwick, and Cheetham, and also the small extra parochial district called Beswick, and was incorporated by royal charter granted in October 1838. The management of the local affairs is entrusted to the town council (44 in number elected under the provisions of the Municipal Corporation Acts) bearing the respective titles of mayor, aldermen, and councillors and who appoint from their body committees for the transaction of the various departments of the public business, such committees reporting their proceedings for approval at the general meetings of the council. Prior to the incorporation of the borough, the several townships named, with two exceptions (Cheetham and Beswick) had local acts, under which commissioners were appointed to manage the local affairs and consequently a separate establishment for purposes of government existed in each township. These arrangements very frequently gave rise to an considerable inconvenience and prevented the establishment of any system of police which would apply to the whole borough or any combined action for public objects. Since the incorporation of the borough a separate commission of the peace and court of quarter sessions, has been obtained by grant from the Crown and an efficient constabulary force established for the borough, under the control of the watch committee of the council and the divided system of police and watching previously existing in the several townships superseded. The authorities, in cases of necessity are able to bring the whole body of men into operation under one head, at any time and in any part of the borough and the services of this combined police force have been on several occasions most valuable, especially in the disturbed periods of 1839 1842 and 1847 when serious riots were suppressed without any services of the town council have obtained several Acts of Parliament for improving and enlarging the borough which have proved most beneficial in preventing nuisances, and securing paving sewerage cleansing and proper sanitary regulations. A jail capable of accommodating about 500 prisoners has been built at a cost of nearly £30,000 and the council are now (1853) constructing under powers obtained from the Legislature extensive water-works, calculated to afford a supply of about 30,000,000 gallons of water daily at an expenditure (including the purchase of the previous very inadequate water-works) of about £1,050,000. It is anticipated that when the whole of the new water-works are completed, and the large additional supply obtained, the sale of water for the purposes of trade will enable the council to relieve the inhabitants from the payment of rates for the supply of water to houses for domestic uses. The council have also under their management extensive gas-works, established prior to the incorporation of the borough within the township of Manchester but since that time, considerable extensions have been made, and notwithstanding frequent reductions in the price of gas to consumers, a profit of upwards of £25,000 a year is realized, and is expended in the improvement and widening of the streets and thoroughfares. Many years prior to the incorporation, the authorities of the township of Manchester had two opportunities afforded them of purchasing the manorial rights and properties held by the Mosley family on one occasion for about £20,000 and on the other for upwards of £90,000. The purchase was however overruled, after the negotiations had been completed by the representatives or commissioners. The town council in 1846, accomplished the purchase of the rights and properties from Sir Oswald Mosley Bart., for the sum of £200,000, £125,000 of which was left on mortgage, at 4½ per cent. interest, the income at that time being under £10,000 a year. Since 1846, under the management of the corporation, the income has increased yearly, and is now upwards of £16,000 per annum.

General Condition.—The commercial rise of Manchester has been so rapid, that, in the case of a town as of an individual, we must not be surprised to find some things of great value neglected. The demand for labour has been so great, that, prior to the passing of the Short Time Bill it was common for women and children to labour in the mills 18, 24, and occasionally 36 hours per day. A population so engaged could not pay much attention to mental cultivation and although, doubtless, the business of practical working has been much improved within the last 20 years, yet the day-school attendance of Manchester has fallen off considerably in proportion to the population. In order to remedy this defect, and to prevent any future recurrence, Manchester now demands a national system of education. The condition of the town is sensibly affected by the constant influx of poor Irish people who are, for the most part, hand-loom weavers, and wage an unequal contest for life with the most perfect of machinery. The children of these people obtain employment in the cotton and other mills, and their condition is thus much improved. Other agencies are also in active operation for the social improvement of Manchester. 79 town missionaries visit from house to house amongst the poor and 26 temperance meeting-rooms open their doors weekly.

History.—Manchester was known at a very early period as one of the chief stations of the Druids, who had here an altar called Moyus, which enjoyed the privileges of sanctuary. It subsequently became a place of some importance under the Brigantes, who built a castle called Mamucium, the site of which is still preserved by its present name of Castle Field. On the conquest of E. Britain by the Romans, about A.D. 79 the castle was converted by them into a station and received the name of Mamucium, obviously a corruption of the Brigantes Mamucio. Here a small part of the foundation of the wall is at present discernible, and some, twelve altars, coins, &c. have been discovered at various periods. After the Romans withdrew the Saxons, about 489, wrested Mamucium from the Britons but were again forced to restore it. In 680 it was taken by Edwin, king of Northumbria, and was shortly after occupied by a colony of Angles. About this time the old name of Mamucium seems to have been supplanted by its Saxon form. Manchester from which Manchester is easily derived. The conversion of the inhabitants to Christianity is said to have been effected about 927, by the preaching of Paulinus and a church dedicated to St. Michael. Manchester next passed to the Danes who about 920 were expelled by Edward king of Mercia. This prince not only repaired the castle, in which he placed a strong garrison, but raised the tower from the ruins into which it had fallen while half barbarous chiefs were contending for its possession. Its charter conferring the privileges of a borough was granted in 1301. We hear of Manchester cotton, for the first time in 1352 but the article so designated, notwithstanding its identity of name, had nothing in common with the modern fabric, being in fact a woollen cloth of coarse texture, woven from the unprepared fleece. At this time the manufacture of broad-cloth was introduced by the Flemings, and made considerable progress. In 1422 during the reign of Henry V. the collegiate church now the cathedral, was built, and a college endowed. This college was dissolved in the reign of Edward VI and after remaining for a short time with the Crown became the property of the Derby family. During a civil war the possession of Manchester was keenly disputed and suffered much at the hands of both parties. About this time, it is described as 'one mile in length, with good streets and buildings, and the inhabitants more industrious than in any other part of the north of England.' Its progress since has been rapid, almost beyond example, but the details connected with it can scarcely be regarded as historical events, and are, in fact, more a history of the cotton trade than of the town of Manchester. Manchester was honoured by a visit from Royalty on October 10, 1851. Its share in the representative system of Britain was first conferred by the Reform Bill, under which it enjoys the privilege of sending two members to Parliament. Registered electors (1851), 12,921. P. including Balford (1851) 401,821.—(Duffield's Stranger's Guide to Manchester Manchester as it is, Correspondence in Manchester—See curr

MANCHOORIA [Chinese Kung-King, French Mandchourie, German Mandschurei], an extensive but little known territory belonging to China, comprising all the most E. portion of the high table-land of Central Asia lat. 41° 30'

to 56° N. and lon. 118° 30' and 141° 15' E. bounded N by the Yaloung mountains, which separate it from the Russian gov. of Yakutsk E. by the Sea of Okhotsk, the Gulf of Tartary and Sea of Japan, S. by Corea, and the Gulf of Petchelia, and W. by Mongolia, and the Russian gov. Irkutsk; area, estimated at 700,000 sq. m. Its sea-coast is about 1200 m. in extent. Several mountain systems traverse it in various directions, mostly, however, from S. W. to N. E. Of these, the most marked is the Yaloung chain, already alluded to as forming the N. boundary of the territory. An extensive range also runs parallel to the coast, and in some places so near, that a strip only of arable land is left, inhabited by a peculiar race, holding little intercourse with the Manchou. Another considerable range, called the Khinghan mountains, crosses the W. part of Manchou, from S. to N. With exception of this S. portion sloping to the Yellow Sea, nearly the whole of this vast territory is drained by the Amoor or Sagalin, which pursues a winding but central course E. to W., through the entire region, entering it at lon. 130° 23' E. and falling into the Gulf of Sagalin at lon. 140° E. The other principal rivers are the Songari and Ououren, both flowing S. to N., and the Siliupai and Thilidai from N. to S. all tributaries of the Amoor or Sagalin. There are three considerable lakes in Manchou, the Hurun Fir and Kinka. The first is said to be 200 m. in extent, but nothing is known of it, nor of the Fir. The Kinka, about 40 m. long and 25 m. broad is the source of the Songharian one of the head streams of the Ououren. It is about 90 m. from the coast, lat. (S. end), 45° 7' N. lon. 138° E. In the S. parts Manchou is tolerably fertile, and well cultivated, resembling in this respect the richer countries of Asia, but in the N. the aspect is thoroughly Siberian, the winter is cold & excessive, and the summers are short. The mountains are covered with vast forests of fine timber chiefly pine, forming a retreat for numerous wild animals, the hunting of which, and trading in their skins, form the chief means of support to the hunting population of this inhospitable region. The flora is chiefly of European genera, but Asiatic species, backbones and honey sucklers are plentiful, as is to be seen in a peculiar character to the vegetation, roses and anemones abundant, as is one of the chief localities whence the Chinese obtain the wonder-working ginseng and rhubarb is extensively cultivated. The rivers and coasts abound in fish, among which carp, sturgeon, salmon, pike, and other species as well as shell fish, are plenty the pearl fishery is carried on by Government. Manchou is divided into the three provinces of Sheng King in the S., including what used to be named Leaoting, bordering on the Gulf of Petchelia and Corea. Kinkin comprising all the region E. of the river Songari, and in the N. a large area W. of it, and also the N. part of the island of Tarabai or Sagalin. The Tai har comprising the N. W. section of the country a large portion of which is included in the valley of the Nenai an affluent of the Songari. The capital of the whole country is Nounkian, lat. 41° 50' 30" N. lon. 123° 7' E. Manchou is under a strictly military government every male, above 18 years of age, being liable to be called on for military service. The Manchou are a Tungusian race. In the 17th century, they invaded China, and placed their leader's son upon the throne. Since that time, the Manchou dynasty has continued to reign in China, and the Manchou language has become the court and the official language. Pop. variously estimated, from 2,000,000 to 4,500,000.

MAND, a vil Hungary, Thidier Thies, on Eastman, on a well wooded tract, 16 m. from Eastman-Nemeth with a church. Pop. 1000

MANDAL, a seaport in Norway built of its own name, prov. and 22 m. S. W. Christiansand, on both sides of a river of the same name, at its mouth in the German Ocean. It is a small place, chiefly depending on its harbour which is good, and much used as a harbour of refuge. Trade and ship-building are the chief occupations, exports timber and fish. Pop. (1848), 2886.—The river rises in hill Nedene, in the Hak-Fjeld, enters Mandal, flows almost due S. and falls into a small bay at the town, after a course of about 55 m. It is well supplied with fish.

MANDAN, a dist. in the N. W. of the U. States, bounded E. by the British possessions, E. the Wisconsin territory, S. the Indian territories, and W. Oregon. Length, E. to W., 600 m., breadth, 220 m., area, supposed to be 500,000 sq. m.

It has been imperfectly explored, but it is understood to consist chiefly of an elevated plateau, covered with prairie, on which large herds of bison, elk, and deer pasture. The Missouri and Yellow Stone rivers run in this district.

MANDARA a state of Central Africa. S. of Bornou. It is mountainous, and has numerous forests and lakes, but is in many parts extremely fertile. Inhabitants, Malinse.

MANDAS, a vil. Sardina, N. Cagliari, in a level plain. It has tolerably regular and paved streets, a church, a convent, a primary school, manufactures of woollen cloth, and a trade in bread, wine, hides, and cheese. Pop. 1897

MANDAVEI, or MANDAVIA, a seaport in Hindoostan, Cutch, N. shore, Gulf of Cutch 87 m. S. S. W. Bluej lat. 22° 50' N., lon. 69° 18' 15" E. (u). Though its harbour is only an open roadstead with a creek, it is by far the most important port which Cutch possesses. No fewer than 250 vessels, varying from 2 to 200 tons, belong to it, and carry on an extensive trade with Zanzibar, and the whole E. coast of Africa, with the Red Sea, and Arabia, the Persian Gulf, Malabar, Somal, and India, as far as Ceylon. The town, situated within gunshot of the port, is surrounded with gardens and fortified in the Asiatic style. The inhabitants, composed principally of Bhattans, Banyans, and Brahmins, have been estimated at 50,000.

MANDE (St.) a town, France, dep. Seine, at an outlet of the forest of Vincennes, about 4 m. S. E. Paris. It is almost entirely occupied with villas, and places of amusement for the Parisians, who seek to it in great numbers on holidays. Its chief manufacture is glass, particularly the coloured kind known in commerce as Venise glass. There are also manufactures of pasteboard, stained paper and leather varnish. Pop. 2900.

MANDEO a river, Spain, Galicia. It rises near the village of Groyella, prov. Coruña, flows first N. and then W. N. W., passing Betanzos, and, after a course of about 35 m., during which it receives the Mendo on the left, falls by a wide mouth into the Atlantic at Coruña.

MANDETVIOZ, or LERON as in Hindoostan, Pakh Straits, off the N. W. coast of Ceylon. Lat. (S. end) 15° N. lon. 80° E. It produces partly coconuts and the palm-tree, and has a large breed of cattle and goats. Its principal vil. and seaport is Kayts (see note). Pop. 5000.

MANDINGA, a bay and group of islets Caribbean Sea, isthmus of Panama, N. E. coast lat. 9° 30' N., lon. 78° 58' W. (x). The anchorage is sheltered, and has depth for any class of vessels. The islets are situated at the entrance to the bay.

MANDINGO (Gour), Caribbean Sea. See PLAS (Bak). MANDINGOZ, a well known tribe of W. Africa remarkable for their intelligence, and generally for the advances they have made in civilization. The original country of this people, who are now spread over a great portion of W. Africa, was the N. slope of the high table-land of Senegambia, between the head water of the Niger and Senegal. Their language is more widely diffused, and more employed by translators than that of any of the other languages of W. Africa. The personal appearance of the Mandingos is prepossessing, their features are regular and open, their figures well formed and cleanly, averaging a height rather above the common. The costume of the Mandingos is extremely plain, simple, neat, and becoming consisting of a cap, shirt, trousers, and sandals. Their religion is Mohammedan, but they are not rigid in its observances.

MANDIVEK, a seaport, Hindoostan. See MANDAVES.

MANDOW a mixed city Hindoostan, prov. Malwah, 68 m. S. S. W. Oojain; lat. 22° 23' N. lon. 75° 20' E. 1944 ft. above sea-level, on the tabular summit of one of the Vindhyan hills. The walls of this once celebrated city are said to be 26 m. in circumference. The style of the architecture is principally Afghan. The most remarkable remains are the palace of Shah Bahadur, an emblem, the Jahan-Ka-Mahal the Jamma Masjid, the finest and largest specimen of the Afghan mosque to be seen in any part of India, and the mausoleum of Hussein Shah entirely of white marble. The prevailing material in the buildings is a calcareous fine red stone. The scenery in the vicinity of the town is magnificent, and the vegetation luxuriant.

MANDU, or MAND, a river, Brazil, which rises in a lake of same name, prov. Espirito-Santo; pursues a winding N. N. E. course through mountain valleys, and joins the bank Does, about 4 m. below the entrance of Escudousha, after a course of about 100 m.

MANDURIA a tn Naples, prov Terra d'Otranto, dist and 21 m. S.E. E. Taranto. It is on the whole a well-built town, though somewhat ragged and has several handsome churches, a large palace, six convents, and an orphan asylum. It suffered much from an earthquake in 1783. Considerable remains still exist of the old Manduria, destroyed by Fabius Maximus in the second Punic war. Pop. 4670.

MANERBIO, a tn and com. Italy Lombardy gov Milan, prov and 14 m. S.W. Brescia, near r bank Mella, here crossed by a handsome bridge. It has two churches, three chapels, and a weekly market. Pop. 3731.

MANEDIVU par Wales Pembroke 300600 P 066 MANEU a tn Spain prov Navarra in a valley of same name, near the Salado 10 m. S.W. Pamplona. It has a church, townhouse, two primary schools several distilleries and a trade in corn and maize. Pop. 1104.

MANETIN [anc. Manetina] a tn Bohemia circle and 18 m. N.W. Pilsen with a church a handsome palace, with extensive and well laid-out gardens manufactures of woollens, and six yearly markets. Pop. 1112.

MANEWDEN par Eng. Essex 9486 ac Pop. 752 MANHILL par Eng. York (N. Riding) 5456 ac. Pop. 455.

MANFRONDA a seaport to Naples, prov Capitanata dist. and 22 m. N.E. Foggia, at the foot of Mount Gargano, and on the gulf of its name. It is walled both on the land side and toward the sea, from which it is separated by a narrow ledge of rocks covered at high water. The walls are flanked with large round bastions, and the harbour which a small mole shelters from the S. wind is commanded by a strong castle. The water in it, however, is so shallow as only to admit small vessels. The town which has been built on a regular plan is remarkable for its symmetry though the unfinished state in which some of its edifices remain, give it rather a melancholy aspect. It has no manufactures, but a considerable export trade is carried on in fruit, particularly oranges corn, and salt the last obtained from extensive lagoons S. of the town. The supply of water is very deficient, but vegetables and fish are both well supplied. Manduria is the see of an archbishop. About a mile S.W. of it is the old town, originally a seaport, and to have been founded by a Greek colony under Dionysius. Here the cathedral belonging to the archiepiscopal see still stands. It is a Gothic edifice, of small dimensions, with a handsome portico, but without much internal ornament. The new town was founded in 1251 by King Manfred, natural son of the Emperor Frederick II. It enjoys many privileges, but, notwithstanding, continues stationary. Pop. 6000.

MANGA, a tn Brazil prov Maranhão near Itapicuru at the confluence of the Igara and Mém Mirim. It has a church, a primary school, townhouse, and prison. In 1838, Kaymandu Gomes, with his followers, broke open the prison here, let out the deserters and convicts, and, retiring to Vargem raised the standard of rebellion. Pop. diet. (agricultural) 3000.

MANGAIA or MANOERA, an isl. B. Pacific Ocean, lat. 21° 57' S. lon. 156° W. [s.] It is of volcanic origin, about 30 m. in circumference, and sufficiently high to be distinguished at 25 or 30 m. distance above every abrupt. It has neither good nor bad, but the sea is of great depth around it. The only communication with the land is by means of canoes, which alone are capable of clearing the narrow line of heavy surf separating the shore from the ocean. The productions of the island coconuts figs, turkeys, fowls, ducks, yams, sweet potatoes, and pine-apples the last, however are not raised without much trouble and care. Mangaua was discovered by Capt. Cook, who attempted without success, to find a landing-place for his boats. Pop. estimated at 9000.

MANGALORE, a seaport in and fortress, Hindoostan, Malabar coast, prov Canara lat. 12° 49' N. lon. 75° E. It is large, and well built, and stands on the edge of a fine salt-water lake which communicates with a river. The port will not admit of vessels drawing more than 10 ft. water except in spring-tides, but there is good anchorage off the mouth of the river, in 5 to 7 fathoms. The exports are principally rice, pepper, small wood, cashew, and turmeric, the Imports sugar, salt, and piece goods. The inhabitants are chiefly Malipins or Knapas said to be descended from a colony of Arabs. Pop. 30 000.

MANGARATIRA, a small tn. and seaport, Brazil prov Rio-de-Janeiro, W. side of a promontory which projects into the Bay of Angra-dos-Sales, and divides it into two. It has a handsome stone church and a considerable trade in the produce of the district, consisting chiefly in sugar, rum, coffee, tobacco, and rice.

MANGREA an isl. S. Pamfil. See MANGALA. MANGO, or MARGAO, a vii and com. Italy Piedmont div Coni prov and about 6 m. from Alba, on a lofty height. It has three churches, one of them attached to a monastery a palace and a charitable endowment two silk mills, and a trade in sweet wine. Pop. 1817.

MANGUALDE, or ANDARA DA BEIRA, a tn and par Portugal prov Beira-Alta, about 8 m. from Viseu. It has a large palace. Pop. 3184.

MANGOLA, or MANGOLA (KULIA) one of the Xulla isls. Indian Archipelago, between Celebes and Ceram, lat. (N. point) 1° 47' S. lon. 126° 3' E. (N.) about 60 m. long by 10 m. broad. It is separated at the W. end, from Sulu-Tilabato by a narrow strait, to which is a dangerous whirlpool. This island was depopulated by war and is now an uninhabited waste.

MANGORO or MANOROT a considerable river Ma dagascar E. coast, and near the centre of the island formed by several head streams which have their sources in the Ankarakra. Angava and other mountains in the interior. It falls into the sea at lat. 20° S. This river is nearly as broad as the Loire in France but not so rapid and is navigable a considerable distance into the interior. It swarms with alligators.

MANGOTSFIELD par Eng. Glouster 2551 ac. 1 3967 MANGUEIRA a lake, Brazil prov São-Pedro do-Rio Grande, between Lago Mirim and the ocean. It is of a long and narrow shape, 90 m. long and only 4 m. broad. It discharges itself into the sea, by a small stream called Talim.

MANGYPLLOH, a vii Austria, Slavonia, co. Syrmia about 4 m. from Crefna. It has a Greek church, and numerous mills. Pop. 1081.

MANGY, a tn Central Asia latitude 45° 50' N. W. N. W. Khiva. It stands tolerably high, and is surrounded by a dilapidated wall. It consists of about 150 houses, has nine mosques, 40 shops, and is inhabited chiefly by Uzbeks, who live chiefly by agriculture and fishing.

MANHU aqvi a river Brazil which, at various points separates provs. Minas-Geraes and Espirito Santo. It runs in the former prov at some distance S.E. from the town of Pomba, and pursuing a N.E. course for about 250 m. joins r. bank Doce. Its principal affluent, which it receives on the right, is the Pomba. Various tribes of Indians inhabit its banks, and gold-mines were worked near them.

MANI an Indian vii. Yucatan 37 m. N.E. Campechy at which are numerous ruins of a former considerable town the most important are those of a church and convent amongst the grandest of these early structures erected in Yucatan, and built upon the ruins of still earlier edifices.

MANJACO or MANJAO GRANDE, a tn. and com. kingd. of Italy gov Venice, prov Friuli and 25 m. N.W. Udine, in a plain near Mount Jof. It has two churches, and manufactures of various articles of hardware and cutlery particularly razors and surgical instruments. Pop. 8500.

MANICA a tn. and small state or district, S.E. Africa, territory Mosoutapa. The town is situated near the source of the Manicora, or Aranza lat. 18° 45' S. lon. 82° 50' E. The district is mountainous, but in many parts fertile. Gold, though now much more scarce than formerly is obtained here in considerable quantities, both by mining and washing. The gold is exchanged for Beate cloth, beads, silk, and iron.

MANICHE, a river, S.E. Africa, sometimes called King George's river falls into Delagoa Bay about lat. 26° S. Its sources are unknown, but it has been explored for about 60 m. from its embouchure S., and found to have a N. direction, running nearly parallel to the sea-shore, its water is fresh close to the mouth, and the current runs in many parts five and a half miles an hour. The river at its entrance, forms several islets, with narrow channels between, and an inconsiderable depth of water. The islands are swampy and covered with mangroves, as is also the S. bank, but the opposite is parched and sandy with scarcely a patch of vegetation. Further up, however, the appearance of the country improves, the soil becomes rich, and it is well cultivated, and the inhabitants, who are numerous, seem to be living in abundance and comfort. Rice is the principal production. Beyond the cultivated tract, the banks of the river become low, and their vicinity, in general, a stagnant and fated swamp.

MANICOUAGAN, a lake, river, and bay, Lower Canada. The river flows S. for about 150 m, from the lake to the bay of same name, in the St. Lawrence, in lat. 46° 12' N., lon 68° 5' W.

MANIGOU a vil. and cur. France dep Haute Savoie, prov Genevois in a valley between lofty mountains E. S. E. Annecy. It has a handsome church, an elementary school, a charitable endowment, and a trade in wood cattle, butter and cheese. Pop. 1091.

MANIKYALA a vil. Punjab lat. 33° 35' N. lon 73° 9' E. remarkable for an antique monument of great dimensions, supposed to have been a shrine of Buddha. Manikyala is supposed to occupy the site of the Taxila of the Greeks.

MANILA (Latin, Manilla; French, Manille; English, Manilla), the cap. city of Isl. Luzon and of all the Philippine islands, one of the R. Catholic primates, and one of the great emporiums of the P. has in lat. (celestial) 14° 35' N. lon. 121° E. (s.) on the bay of the same name, and at the mouth of the river Pasig, which is here crossed by a bridge. The river proper forms the segment of a circle between the river and the sea, and its suburbs extend over numerous islets the foreign merchants and the great centre of trade. The aspect of the whole is at once Spanish and Oriental. Long lines of heavily-moored battlements, square churches, and angular towers, and massive houses of solid masonry, mingle with airy cottages in groves of tropical trees, raised on posts to permit the free passage of the waters in the rainy season, and so constructed as, by their slenderness to stand the shock of an earthquake. The streets are straight, but, for the most part, unpaved, and, during the rains, almost impassable. In the city the houses are two stories high, and each has its central courtyard. Stables, storerooms, &c., occupy the ground floors above are the public and sleeping-rooms. In the windows opening on the balconies small squares of semi-transparent shell are substituted for glass, and temper the intense light of the sun. Here reside the heads of the state, church, and army and all who would be thought of the aristocracy. No foreigner may sleep within the walls. A bridge leads across the river into the Binondo suburb where a street, called the Escorial, runs to the right and the left, lined with innumerable shops and stalls and crowded with a strange and motley population of various races. By law the Chinese ought to be dispersed over the country to till the ground, yet here many of the merchants and shopkeepers, and all the artisans are of that nation. Infinitely exceeding the Tagalogs in activity and address, they are dinked, but are indispensable. Here too, each trade has its own locality. Beyond the Escorial, a swarm of Chinese Indians and Moles (half-castes) appear as goldsmiths and jewellers, painters and enamellers, oil and soap merchants, confectioners, and keepers of gambling-houses and cock-shops. Other suburbs have each its special character. San Fernando is the seat of one of the great sugar manufactories, and Santa Mesa of a steam-cargo manufactory at the Alcañal the Chinese shantung discharge their cargoes. Fishermen and weavers inhabit the division of Tondo, and its gardens supply the markets with fruit and vegetables. Malate is famous for its embroidery. Pasig is inhabited by artisans and artists, convalescents resort for health to Santa Ana and San Pedro Macati; the Chinese burying-ground attracts the curious to Binondo; and near it stands the Lepros house a frightful receptacle for sufferers from elephantiasis. St. Anthony's fire, and various other dire diseases.

THE MONUMENT OF RIZAL IN MANILA.—From Valdez, Voyage autour du Monde.

The principal public buildings are the cathedral, the palace of the governor and the archbishop, both extremely simple; a beautiful townhouse, ten churches, belonging to different religious orders, but open to the public several monasteries, convents and boarding institutions for families in which there are no vows; the armed forces colleges for young men and two for young women; the supreme court, prison, civil hospital, St. Thomas's university, a machine and a commercial school, a large theatre, built entirely of wood, and held togeformed by the river and its branches, and easily reached in all parts by boats. Behind lies an extensive plain, which wells into distant hills, and then again into mountains, some thousand feet high, and clothed with vegetation to their summits. The Pasig, the steps leading down to which are crowded every morning with bathers of both sexes, is prolonged into the bay by two piers, terminating the one in a small fort, the other in a light-house. Vessels of some hundred tons may come up as far as the bridge. On the S. side stands the city, having a dilapidated look, but strongly fortified with walls and ditches. On the N. stands the Binondo suburb, more populous than the city itself, the residence of these with tobacco pipes and native fastenings; the custom-house and barracks. The city has several squares, in the largest of which the Prado, there is a bronze statue of Charles IV. The cemetery is remarkable for its pretty garden and small beautiful church. The environs of Manila are beautiful and picturesque.

The royal and pontifical university of St. Thomas is in the hands of the Dominicans, and has an attendance of about 500. The college of St. Joseph belongs to the Jesuits, that of St. John Lateran gives a plain education to 240 Indians and Mexicans. The Escorial de Sta. Catalina belongs to the city and is for Spanish children alone. A royal marine school was established in 1870, and a commercial school in 1840. The colleges of St. Potenciana and St. Isabella are for girls; the latter for orphans. The monasteries have libraries attached to them, still sciences and learning are at a low ebb, and, though the clergy boast that the Indians are taught to read and write, they are low in point of intelligence and morals. When a foreigner lands at Manila, his baggage is searched for Bibles and pocket pistols, both being prohibited articles.

Manila is the seat of government, and of the supreme courts. The municipality dates from 1571. The city councillors are the constitutional advisers of the governor and captain-general. A tribunal of commerce was established in 1854 and a board of trade in 1835. The administration of justice is weak, and serious crimes frequent.

Admirably fitted by nature for trade Manila has been brought, by the political and legislative changes of the present century from a state of comparative obscurity to rank with Calcutta and Batavia. Its relations with Britain, the U. States, and Australia, are rapidly augmenting. Being the only port in the Philippines open to foreign vessels, it is the centre to which all their productions flow and the resort of fabrics; mats and cigar-cases. The Indig Indians are ingenious workers in metals and wood, notwithstanding the inferiority of their tools, they are excellent cabinet-makers and ship-builders.

Manila was founded by Legazpi in 1571. In 1645 it was nearly destroyed by an earthquake. In 1717, the seat of a governor in representing abuses, led to the murder of himself and his son in an insurrection. In 1763, it was taken by a British fleet, and held for 15 months. In 1809 an English house was permitted to establish itself there, a privilege extended in 1814, to all foreigners. The privileges of the Philippine company expired in 1834 and were not renewed. Manila has ever been a very loyal city and hence an almost total cessation of intercourse with the Spanish American republics. It has frequently been visited by severe and destructive earthquakes. The most recent of these visitations took place in the autumn of 1852. The first shock occurred on September 16th at 6½ p.m. and other four shocks were felt before midnight. They continued, at intervals, till the 30th of the same month and occurred again on the 10th, 11th, and 12th of October. Though, proportionally only three lives were lost during all these repeated convulsions, the loss of property was great, scarcely a building in Manila remaining uninjured, and many being completely destroyed. The effects of this earthquake were much more severely felt throughout the other parts of the island of Luzon than even in the capital. Pop. city 15,000, including suburbs, 140,000.

The bay is a land locked sea, having an entrance about 12 m. wide contracted into two principal channels—Boca Grande, 8 m. and Boca Chica, 2 m. wide—by the islands of Corregidor Cavallo, the Puerco or Hog islands and the Nam or Haycocks. It measures about 30 m. N. to S. and 25 m. E. to W., is surrounded by steep shores, and, besides the port of Manila, has on its shores those of Cavite and Mariveles both of which afford good anchorage. It receives numerous streams—(Malib, La Piedad, N. Kinkang's Locales, etc.) of Manila and the Philippines. Wilkes United States Expedition. Voyage of H. M. S. Samarang. Boletín oficial de Filipinas, Octubre 1852.

MANILA is a city of Spain Andalusian, prov. and 68 m. S.W. by W. Malaga, about 1 m. from the Mediterranean. It is poorly built, defended by a fort is composed of several irregular ill-paved narrow streets, and has a handsome church, chapel, two schools, and a cemetery. Agriculture and fishing making earthenware, bricks, and tiles, and trading in fish, brandy grapes, &c. are the chief occupations. Pop. 16,000.

MANILA is an old Indian Archipelago, between the islands Luzon and Iloilo lat 3 17 S. lon. 127° 28' E. It is high about 12 m. in length, and 6 m. in breadth, well cultivated and populous. The channel between it and Iloilo called the Strait of Iloilo or Manila Passage is about 17 m. wide, clear of danger and destitute of soundings. On the S. side of the island is a fort, off which, and within a small inlet, there is anchorage close to the shores.

MANILA, or MANAR, [anc. Magnesia], a city Asiatic Turkey path. Ammodia, near 1 bank Kodu or Herma. 30 m. N. E. Smyrna. It lies along the foot of a fine range of hills, backed by the almost perpendicular face of Mount Suplun. At apparently inaccessible places on this cliff are many entrances to artificial caves, cut in the shape of doors, evidently tombs of a very early date. The town which is in a thriving condition, is clean and neat, with tolerably wide streets, has a great many minarets, and numerous handsome public buildings, in this respect exceeding Smyrna, particularly the principal khan, which is a remarkable and magnificent structure, of a quadrangular form solidly built in white stone, round a square and regular area which contains in its centre a copious fountain of pure water. Of the 18 mosques the city contains, two are stately imperial ones. In the square before each of the latter is a beautiful marble fountain, composed of the materials of some ancient work of art.

THE HARBOUR MANILA.—From Valentin, Voyage autour du Monde.

an infinite number of colonial vessels of all sorts and sizes. It exports sugar tobacco, indigo, Manila hemp and cordage, gold-dust, birds'-nests, coffee, sugar wood, mats and hats, hides, trapping service-shell cotton, rice, and solent money, and it imports British and U. States cloths hardware, &c. French novelties and perfumery and a great variety of articles, tea, pottery, &c. from China. The value of British goods imported direct and through Singapore, China, and Australia, &c. amounted in 1846, to £261,184 being more than value of the total imports in 1840, from all countries.

The manufactures of Manila consist chiefly of cigars and cheroots, a government monopoly which gives employment to several thousands both of men and women, of cordage from the flannet of the abaca, and of which the best is made by steam machinery, the beautiful fabric called pique, woven from the fibres of the pine-apple leaf, and afterwards exquisitely embroidered with or damasked, and various other cloths made of the abaca flannet, pure or mixed cotton

Cotton and silk goods, and goat-hair shawls, are manufactured here to some extent. The mountains about Magnesia were anciently famous for the production of the loadstone, whence the name magnet is supposed to have been derived P 26,000.—(Follow a Joia Minor Chemsy's Exp. Siged.)

MANIBES, a tu Spah, prov and 4 m N W Valencia, r bank Turis, with a church, southwards, two primary schools, manufacture of stout cordium and stout ware, once important, but now declining, and several saw-mills. Pop. 1806.

MANITCH or MANIVOR, a river and lake, Russia. The river issues from the salt lakes of Ghaki in the E. of gov Astrakhan, flows W N W expanding into Lake Manitoh or limen, and, after a course of about 800 m Joia bank Don, a little above Old Toherkan. Its principal affluents are the Charsukul, on the right, and the Kalama and Egorlik on the left.—The lake is a long narrow expanse of brackish water of irregular shape, about 60 m. long, N W to S.E. and from 12 to 2 m. broad.

MANITOU LAKE British N America, intersected by the parallel of 51 N and the meridian of 96° W. It is about 110 m. long and 20 m at its greatest breadth. Its communications with Lake Winnipeg by the Dauphin.

MANITOU LIN a group of islands, British America, stretching E to W along the S shores of Lake Huron, and consisting chiefly of the Great Manitoulin or Beared Isle Little Manitoulin or Cockburn, and Drummond Great Manitoulin 30 m long by 30 m broad, and with an area of 1600 sq m. is deeply indented by numerous bays has an elevated and very rugged surface, and at its W end, presents more majestic features than any other part of the lake. It appears to be well watered, both by streams and lakes. One of the latter, about 10 m long, by 7 m wide at its ends, connects towards the centre so as to have the shape of an hour-glass. Many of the precipices are covered with clumps of beautiful trees; and behind, in the interior, are large and dense pine forests. The prevailing rock is limestone. Little Manitoulin has a diameter of about 7 m and, in its general features, resembles Great Manitoulin though its elevation is rather less. The channel between them is about 8 m. long, by 4 m wide. Drummond, 24 m long with a breadth varying from 2 to 12 m has an irregular surface, covered with large masses of rock. Towards the centre it attains the height of about 250 ft., and then slopes gradually to the shores, often presenting low white cliffs in broken lines. It is separated from the American shore, on the W by a strait, called the True Detour, which is scarcely 1 m wide, and forms the principal passage for vessels proceeding to Lake Superior.

MANJEE or MANJER, a tu Hindoostan prov. Bengal, prov Behar at the confluence of the Gogra with the Ganges 46 m. N N W Patna. At the custom house here, boats ascending or descending undergo an examination.

MANKAREE, a tu Celebes. See MACANAR.

MANKEIRA a tu Punjab, between the Jullum and the Indus, 50 m. from the former, and about 30 m. from the latter, lat. 31° 35' N lon. 71° 30' E. It is surrounded by a mud wall and has a castle, built of burned brick.

MANLLEH, a tu S. America, prov and 40 m N.E. Barcelona, 1 bank Ter, with a church, hospital, and sulphur springs, manufacture of cotton and worsted goods, and a trade in corn and fruit. Pop. 1991.

MANNEBODERF (Hiet and Low) a tu and par Switzerland, can. and 16 m S E Zürich, E shore of Lake Zürich. It is well built, and has several good houses, particularly the secondary school, also a porhouse and a cotton-mill, considerable attention is paid to the raising of fruit. Pop. 2868.

MANNEER, or MANSON, par Scot. Fife, 11 080 sq. Pop. 258.

MANNEBODERF a market in Lower Austria, 19 m. S.E. Vienna with a church, a castle, and manufacture of steel, wire, and lace, out of which various articles are made, and sold chiefly in Hungary and Turkey. Near it are excellent stone quarries. Pop. 1980.

MANNEBODERF a mountain-chain, Austria, which commencing on the frontiers of Moravia, stretches S.E., through Lower Austria, along the 1 bank of the Gross Kamp, and terminates on the 1 bank of the Danube. It forms a series of broad ridges, of moderate elevation generally well wooded, and has a length of nearly 60 m. It gives its name to two Austrian circles, which are situated on either side of it.

Vol. II

MANNHHEIM, a tu Baden, cap. circle Upper Rhine, r bank Rhine, between it and the Neckar, and in a situation so low that a high dike has been constructed to protect it from inundation, 66 m. S.S.W. Frankfurt. It is of an oval form is entered by three principal gates and is built with the greatest regularity—13 streets running parallel to each other from N to S, and 10 crossing them at right angles from E. to W. The whole town is thus divided into a great number of square sections, of a uniform and somewhat monotonous appearance, and, as these sections only are named, and no name is given to the streets, a stranger has considerable difficulty in finding his way. The number of public squares is 14, almost all of them adorned with fountains, which how ever, are not well supplied with water. Several of the squares are handsome but the most deserving of notice are the Parade and the Plankon. The principal buildings are the castle or palace, a huge quadrangular structure of red sandstone, not possessing much architectural merit, but with a tolerable museum in one of its wings, and good gardens behind it, terminating in a raised terrace, which overlooks the Rhine the church of the Jesuits, an imposing edifice, with a profusely decorated interior behind this church is the observatory a very complete structure of its kind in the form of a somewhat monotonous tower, 107 ft. high, the theatre, a large quadrangular building of three stories, in which Schiller's Robbers was first acted, the parish church, and the churches of Con cord and Trinity, the synagogue, the townhouse, old mint, arsenal, barracks, merchants hall and house of correction. The manufactures, consisting chiefly of carpets linen and silk goods, trinkets, lignum, starch glue, &c. are comparatively insignificant but the trade which had somewhat decayed, has recently been very much extended, and Mannheim is now the first commercial town in the grand duchy. Thus it owes to its admirable position on two important navigable rivers, and the additional facilities which it has acquired by the opening of the railway to Karlsruhe and Frankfurt. The principal articles of trade are tobacco, corn, wine, wood, hops, linen, millinery, brimstone, &c. The commerce and transit trade is particularly active. Mannheim was once strongly fortified, and lying not far from the French frontier and near the centre of military operations, was repeatedly the object of attack, and suffered dreadfully during the wars between France and Germany. In a siege by the Austrians, in 1793, only 14 houses remained unharmed. Hence, notwithstanding the antiquity of its foundation, it has become an entirely modern town. Pop. 35,245.

MANNICOLE, or PIRE'S ISLAND, See VANICOLE.

MANING RIVER, a river, New S. Wales, which rises about lon. 151° 50' E. flows E., along the N limits of co. Gloucester and falls into the sea, by several outlets, in lat. 32 S. The scenery on this river is beautiful, and the soil excellent.

MANINGFORD, two par Eng Wilts.—1 (Abbots' 919 sq. Pop. 119.—2 (Brow) 1088 sq. Pop. 376.

MANINGTON par Eng Norfolk, 646 sq. P. 12.

MANINTREE, a market and par Eng Kent, 4 Essex, 8 m N by E Colchester. The former on the S. bank of the Stour is paved and lighted, has a church Baptist, Independent and Wesleyan chapels, and a national school. The malt trade is carried on extensively. Area of par 115 sq. Pop. 1176.

MANNU, a river, in Sardinia, formed by the union of three small streams, 9 m. N. Lat. It flows S., receiving the Sentale on the right, and the Sixerza on the left, and, after a course of about 45 m. falls into the Gulf 6 m N W of the town of Cagliari.

MANOE, an isl. Denmark, off N W coast Schleswig, 10 m S W Ribe. It is the largest and only inhabited island of a small group, which altogether have only an area of about 4 sq. m., and form a single parish. They are supposed to have been originally a single island separated from the mainland by a narrow channel, and to have been broken up into their present form by the force of the waves. The idea is confirmed by the shallowness of the channel, which becomes so dry at low tide that the island is accessible on foot or horseback. Pop. 300.

MAVOEL ALVES, three rivers, Brazil, in the N of prov Goyas. They all join r bank Tocantins. The first is frequently called Manoel Alves-Macdonald, but more properly Lake-Alfred. The second is merely a small stream, which takes a N. course, and joins the Tocantins a little above the point where that river is joined by the Bombo. The third and largest of the whole, called the Manoel-Alves-Baptista river in the mountains between Pernambuco and Piauí, and proceeding W N W, becomes a majestic river by the augmentation of numerous small streams, and finally, after a course of nearly 400 m., joins the Tocantins, about 160 m. below the confluence of the Bombo, and above the town of São Paulo d'Almeida. Only the lower part of its course is properly known: it appears to form the natural boundary between provs. Goyas and Mato Grosso.

MANOEL-LIÃO, an isl. Brazil, on N. E. coast, prov. Rio Grande-do-Norte, near the mouth of the Açú or Appodí. The inhabitants carry on a considerable trade in salt, and in dried and salt fish.

MANOYO ISLAND, one of the Navigator Islands, S. Pacific Ocean, lat. 18° 50' S. lon. 173° 7' W (s). It is of volcanic origin, about 4 m. in circumference, and, at the highest part, 473 ft. above sea-level. It is covered with forests, as the station of an English missionary, and has about 1100 inhabitants.

MANOPELLO, or MANTEPELLO, a tn and com. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Citra, dist. and 12 m. S. W. Chieti P. 2708

MANOR-HAMLET, a market tn. Ireland, com. 22 m. N. Leitrim. It has a handsome market-house, considerable barracks, a dispensary, a music porch, and a bridge with cottages attached; a handsome church, a R. Catholic chapel, and two dissenting meeting-houses, and several schools. Near it, on a gentle eminence, stand the ruins of the castle once the largest and strongest fortress in the county P. 1778

MANORBIER or MANORBER, par. Wales, Pembroke 3493 ac. Pop. 504

MANORQUE, or MANORQUE, a tn and com. France, prov. Alpes, 214 m. W. Digne. It is a thriving, thriving little place, possesses a chamber of commerce, numerous oil and silk mills, tanneries, distilleries, manufactures of grape syrup, linen, serge, and gunnery yarn, and a considerable trade in wine, brandy, olive-oil, silk, wool, &c. Manorque owes its origin to the counts of Forcalquier, who built a palace and afterwards conveyed both it and the town to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. The body of Gerard Jung, the founder of this order, was long preserved here. Pop. 4214.

MANRISA [ana. Manresa], a city, Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 24 m. N. W. Barcelona 1 bank, Ordesa, on several hills. It is well built, surrounded by old walls, commanded by a fort, and has clean and well-paved, though, in many cases crooked and steep streets, numerous squares, a college and parish church, with a noble tower, several chapels, three convents, an hospital, orphan asylum, town and court houses, prisons, barracks, a college, and some primary schools, a theatre, and, in the environs, along the bank of the river, a pleasant promenade. It likewise possesses considerable manufactures of linen, woolen, cotton, and silk, fabrics of all kinds, also of cutlery hardware, earthenware, leather soap, cordage, paper, gunpowder, brandy wine, and oil, and a good trade. Pop. 18,350. (Males and Mollado.)

MANS (Lat) [Latin, Manus, Conventum], a tn. France, cap. dep. Sarthe, on the ridge and slope of a hill, washed by the Perthe, which is here crossed by three bridges, 112 m. S. W. Paris. The lower part of the town, near the banks of the river, is poorly built, and the streets are so narrow and winding as to be almost unfit for carriages. The upper part of the town has a much better appearance. It is not regular, but the houses are well built of terra cotta. The streets are spacious, and the market-places, into which most of them open, is both very large and handsome. There are two finely planted, and well-kept-out public walks. The principal building is the cathedral, a fine Gothic structure, with a very old choir supposed to be of the 10th century, a lofty, massive square tower, a finely-ornamented portal, a noble organ, and some painted glass, which, from its antiquity is of considerable interest in regard to the history of the art. The other buildings deserving of notice are the churches of Notre Dame and St. Antoine. The former is the site of a Latin cross, and very ancient, the latter comparatively modern, but very handsome. The Prefecture, library of 40,000 vols., and museum, including a picture-gallery, all occupying part of the buildings of an old monastery; the theatre, and cavalry barracks. The principal manufactures are linen, coarse wool, lace, and blankets, lace, hosiery, paper, leather, wax candles, and green soap. There are also bleachfields and worsted mills. The trade is clover and linen, and may be considered as the staple, and is very extensive, but there is also a considerable trade in linen thread, linen, silk, wine, brandy, chestnuts, walnuts, oil, wax, cattle, poultry, &c. La Mans is the see of a bishop, and possesses courts of first resort and commerce, a consulting chamber of manufactures, an agricultural and scientific society, a communal college, a diocesan seminary and a school of design. It is a place of great antiquity and is said to have been founded, in the second century, by the Romans, of whose buildings numerous vestiges still remain; among others, a considerable part of the walls with which they surrounded it, and of three subterranean aqueducts, by which water was conveyed from a distance. It was taken by William the Conqueror in the 11th century, and long continued, though with occasional interruptions, in the possession of the English, whose King Henry II., the first of the Plantagenets, was born in it. In the Revolutionary war the Vendéens sustained one of their worst defeats here, and were ultimately massacred, without distinction of age or sex to the number of 10,000. Pop. (1802) 23,779

MANSFIELD, two pars. Eng. Hereford-shire, 1, (Gosse) 1323 ac. Pop. 113 - 3 (Lang) 1547 ac. Pop. 807

MANSER, an Asiatic Turkey, see MANASSER.

MANSFIELD, a tn. Prussian Saxony, gov. and 80 m. N. W. Nuremberg, cap. circle, on the Thulnau, at the foot of the Schlossberg, which is crowned by a strong castle. It has a church, hospital, and school, and near it, are several smelting furnaces. It is the original family seat of the famous Count Mansfeld. Pop. 1439 — The circuit is mountainous, and rich in minerals. Area, 172 sq. m. Pop. 44,066

MANSFIELD — 1 a vil. U. States Ohio, 60 m. N. E. Columbus, situated on a high, rocky hill, market place, and two printing-offices. Pop. 1339 — 2 m. el. British N. America, Hudson's Bay, lat. (8 point) 61° 31' N., lon. 60° 25' W. about 75 m. long and 18 m. broad

MANSFIELD, a market in and par. England, co. and 13 m. N. by W. Nottingham. The town is a deep vale on a branch of the Midland railway, has narrow and irregular streets, lighted with gas; a church, with a tower and spire, places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyans, Independents, Quakers and Unitarians; a handsome Grecian townhall, situated in the market-place; two schools, manufactures of lace, stockings, silk and cotton gloves, mustard, chert, and tobacco, an extensive trade in malt, and in cutting and working architectural ornaments the stone for which is obtained in the adjacent quarries. Market day Thursday. Area of par. 9070 ac. Pop. 10,627

MANSFIELD WOODHOUSE, a vil. and par. England, co. Notts. The village is 2 m. N. Mansfield, is well built and contains several respectable houses, a church, Methodist chapel and two charity schools, and has considerable manure of cotton, looking. Area of par. 2860 ac. P. 1872

MANSFIELDSTOWN, par. Del. Lon. 2416 ac. P. 652

MANSI L.A. (De las Mulas), a tn. Spain, prov. and 35 m. S. E. Leon 1 bank, Esla, tolerably well built; with a church, townhouse, prison and two schools. Pop. 1921

MANSFORD, par. Eng. Dorset 1238 ac. Pop. 134

MANSOURAH, a tn. Lower Egypt, r. bank Delta branch of the Nile cap. prov. of same name 85 m. S. W. Ismaïlia, lat. 31° 2' N. lon. 31° 25' E., beautifully situated on an eminence, and adorned with numerous mosques. It has narrow streets, with houses built of brick, but the greater part of it is in ruins. Its trade is carried on chiefly by Syrian Christians, who export the fine rice growing round Lake Mansourah from which it is about 20 m. distant, and oil-mummo. The mode of hatching chickens, by means of ovens is carried on here to a great extent.

MANSOURI, a vil. Siberia, gov. and 110 m. N. E. Irkutsk, on the road from that town to the Lena, on a small stream of same name, is distant of the Lena. It consists of ancient-looking houses, and is surrounded by meadows.

MANSWORTH, a vil. Lower Austria, on the Kalmegang, at its confluence with the Drava, 6 m. S. E. Schwanau; it has a church, and a trade in field and garden produce. Pop. 1080

MANTA (La) a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, d. Coud. prov. and about 5 m S Saluzzo, at the foot of a hill of same name, covered with chestnut trees and vineyards. It has an ancient castle, two churches a communal school, several silk-mills, manufactures of kitchen utensils, and a trade in cattle, mules, and silk. Pop. 1387.

MANTIGARÁ, a vil. Portugal, prov. Beira-Baixa, com. and 18 m W S W Guarda, at the foot of the serra Estrella. It has two churches, an almshouse, manufactures of woollen cloth and lace, and a trade in excellent butter and cheese. Pop. 2073.

MANTERDORF a market to. Austria, dnoby, circle and 55 m S S E Salzburg with two churches, an old castle, finely seated on a height, and rendered still more conspicuous by a massive tower 140 ft. high. Pop. 1120.

MANTES [anc. Methusa] a to. France, dep. Seine-et-Oise, l. bank Seine, opposite to Limay, with which it communicates by two handsome bridges connecting the banks with an island in the river 29 m W N W Paris and a station on the railway from Paris to Rouen. It contains a fine Gothic church, with two lofty towers, which make a conspicuous appearance at a great distance; a beautiful Gothic tower, the only remnant of the ancient church of St. Maclor; a public library, and a secondary ecclesiastical school and has many features of leather and saltpetre, famous breweries, numerous mills, and a trade in leather, corn, and wine. Pop. 4400.

MANTINEA, an anc. to. Greece, Morea, in a plain about 8 m N Tropolita, and famous for the victory which the Thebans, though with the loss of their celebrated leader Epaminondas, gained over the Spartans. The crest of the walls, with exception of a few towers, is still entire, but the city itself has long ceased to exist. Its site is partly occupied by the modern village of Paleopol.

MANTIQUEIRA a Serra or mountain range, Brazil, containing the highest summits in the interior of that empire. It stretches E to S W, in the S part of prov. Minas-Geraes, and appears to be the centre of various ramifications, extending into provs. Bahia, São Paulo, Goias, and others. Its E slopes are separated from the Serra dos Orgãos by the river Paraíba and Paraíbaes and the former as well as the Paraíba Doce, and São Francisco, are tributary to it. It contains numerous summits. None of the summits exceed 9600 ft. It is crossed by several roads leading from Minas-Geraes into the more E provinces.

MANTOV, two pars Eng. —1 Lincoln 4650 ac. P 198 —2 Rutland 1290 ac. P 275.

MANTUA (Italian Mantova French Mantoue) a to. Italy, Lombardy gov. and 80 m E S E Milan cap. prov. same name on two islands formed by the Mincio which here divides into several arms and afterwards spreads out into a marshy lake or swamp, partly natural and partly formed by art. The stagnant water and marshes surrounding the town make its site very insalubrious, but constitute one of its most important defences, and in connection with the formidable works which enclose it on every side and guard all its approaches have made it so strong that it not only ranks as the first fortress in Italy but is deemed impregnable by any means but cannon. The communication between the islands and with the mainland is maintained by means of several bridges—the longest of which, Ponte di San Giorgio, is regarded as a masterpiece; it crosses the entire lake for a length of more than 800 yards, and forms the principal approach to the town, which, when viewed from it, presents, in its huge piles of building, its castle, towers, and cupolas, a very peculiar and striking appearance. Mantua is entered by five gates—one of which, leading to a bridge or dam, called the Porta Nuova, and denoting of course as a curious specimen of ancient engineering, is an imposing Doric structure. The streets are regular and wide but in many places very indifferently paved the houses which line them are almost substantial, often rising in huge masses, with rows of long and lofty arcades, fortified battlements, and feudal towers. There are few large squares the best are the Piazza di Virgilio formerly an insalubrious swamp, but now drained, and converted into a fine park, laid out in finely-planted alleys, and enclosed by elegant mansions; the Piazza delle Erbe, where the daily market is held; the Esplanade or Piazza di San Pietro, the Piazza del Argine, with a marble vase crowned by a bronze bust of Virgil; and the Piazza in which the Tyrolean palace, Andrew Hoffer was infamously shot. The signs of departed greatness and continuing decay are very visible in Mantua. Near its centre, the population seems dense, and there is much appearance of activity, but in many other parts numbers of houses are uninhabited, or in ruins and in the outskirts, grass grows freely on the streets. The most remarkable edifice is the cathedral, not very spacious, but after an elegant design by Giulio Romano, with a richly ornamented facade a fine Lombard campanile, rows of beautiful Corinthian pillars, supporting a highly-decorated roof, and a great number of frescoes particularly one by Andrea Mantegna the church of Santa Andrea, conspicuous from a distance by its majestic cupola and Gothic tower, enriched with numerous paintings, and presenting in its interior one of the finest specimens of the revived Roman or Italian style the church of Santa Barbara, containing the mausoleum of Carlo Gonzaga the church of San Sebastiano, a beautiful Italian structure, with some good frescoes in a dilapidated state 15 other churches several of them possessed of good paintings, but not otherwise remarkable two synagogues, one of which, called the Scuola Grande, is a handsome structure, recently completed the Castello di Corta, an ancient ducal palace of the Gonzagas, a huge, irregular pile, flanked by machicolated towers, the whole in a half ruinous state, partly used as a prison, and partly as public offices the Palazzo Imperiale (Imperial palace), an antique castellated structure, supported by lofty pointed arches, lighted by tall Gothic windows and terminated by forked battlements; the Torre della Gabbia, so called from an iron cage hanging from its centre in which criminals were wont to be exposed; the Torre del Orologio, and the Torre delle Zuccheri, the Beccaria and Peschiera, or shambles and fish market, both built by Giulio Romano and admirable in their kind, the house of Giulio Romano the Palazzo Colloredo with enormous caryatides supporting its facade the museum military arsenal, theatre, and elegant amphitheatre, the lyceum, gymnasium, diocesan seminary and other public schools occupying the buildings of the old Jesuit college the infant and ragged schools the library of 30 000 volumes the extra, and two founding hospitals the Monasterio di Porta, the principal house of correction for the whole of Lombardy the penitentiary and several charitable endowments. The manufactures, of very limited extent, consist chiefly of leather, linen, silk, woollens, sail-cloth, carriages, barges, parchment, paper, cards, and soap. The trade is chiefly in the hands of the Jews, who live in a separate quarter called Il Ghetto, and form about one-twelfth of the whole population. The principal article of trade is silk. Mantua is the see of a bishop, the seat of a civil tribunal, and mercantile court, and the residence both of a military governor and of a provisional delegate.

It is said to have been founded by the Etruscans 400 years before the building of Rome. On the decline of the Roman empire it was pillaged by the Huns, afterwards taken by the Longobards and still later annexed to the exarchate of Ravenna. Charlemagne gave it its first fortifications. In the 11th century it was held in common with Ferrara, Modena, and Reggio, under the sway of the family of Canossa. In the beginning of the 13th century, because independent, and continued so till 1276, when it fell under the iron rule of Buonaccolini. In 1328 it found better masters in the Gonzagas, who first as capitans then as marquises, and finally as dukes of Mantua governed it with great ability and distinguished themselves by the splendour of their court, and their patronage of literature and art. After it had been thus possessed for several centuries, the last duke, by taking part with the French in the war of succession, was declared to have incurred a forfeiture, by withdrawing his allegiance from his huge lord, the Emperor of Germany, and accordingly on his death in 1708, the Emperor Joseph took possession of the dukedom and annexed it to his other dominions. The fortifications of the town, previously formidable were completed, and put into their present form by the Austrians. Their strength was put to the test in 1796, by Napoleon, who, apparently hopeless of reducing it by any other means, contented himself with keeping it under strict blockade, till famine compelled the garrison to capitulate. Among the distinguished natives of Mantua its neighbourhood, by far the most illustrious name is that of the Roman poet Virgil. Pop. 17460. P. 874.

The province of Mantua is bounded N and E by that of Brescia, W. Cremona, S. the Duchy of Modena, and the district of Guastalla, belonging to the Duchy of Parma; R.E. Ravenna, and E. Verona. It consists of an extensive plain, mostly low, and in part damp and marshy, but generally of great fertility. It is divided into 17 districts. Area, 982 sq. m. Pop. (1848) 270,100.

MANUA or CHAKOAN one of the Navigator isls., S. Pacific Ocean, lat. 14° 5' S. lon. 160° 26' W. (n.) It has the form of a regular dome, rising, in most places, precipitously from the water to the height of 800 or 400 ft., after which its ascent appears more gentle and even. It is 16 m. in circumference, well watered, and covered with luxuriant vegetation, and has many coconut groves on its N.W. side. The inhabitants are a lively-formed race. Lively and well disposed, and nearly all profess Christianity. Their canoes are well made, 30 or 40 ft. long, very swift, and capable of containing from 20 to 25 persons. The island furnishes pigs, fowls, sweet potatoes, fruit, and some taro. The principal settlement is on the N.W. side, where there is anchorage for a small vessel. — (Wilkes U. States Exploring Expedition.)

MANULA, a vil. and com. Spain, prov. and about 28 m. from Valencia, on a hill above the bank of the Júcar. It has a church, townhouse, prison, and two primary schools, flour-mills, and a trade in rice, which is largely cultivated in the district, and makes it unhealthy. Pop. 1028.

MANUKAU MANAKAO, or STONED'S HARBOR, a bay N.W. coast of the N. I. of New Zealand lat. (Beacon Bluff) 37° 6' S. lon. 174° 55' E. It has a comparatively narrow entrance between two headlands, and then spreads out into a wide expanse called Manukau water bounded, on the N., by the district of Auckland. Towards the shore it shallows much and is encumbered by sandbanks.

MANULLA, par. Irel. Mayo 5464 ac. 1 op. 1387. MANY JAS and WAGT two vils. Hungary, circle Thaur, Danube, co. and about 33 m. N.E. of Innsbruck. The former contains a church, and has a pop. of 2087 the latter is merely a hamlet.

MAVIONA (Nagy) a vil. Hungary Thaur Danube, co. and 18 m. from Tolos. It has a K. Catholic church and a trade in corn, wine, cattle, and tobacco. Pop. 1090.

MAYTOWN a river and lake, Russia. See MAYTICH.

MANZANARES, a river, Spain prov. Madrid. It rises in the sierra Guadarrama, near the confines of prov. Segovia, flows S.E. and E. past Colmenar and Madrid, and falls into the Jarama, near Vau-Madrid. Its bed is of sand, through which the water filters in summer leaving it almost dry, but sometimes the rain torrents descend in such a body from the Guadarrama Mountains, that, from a rivulet, the Manzanares becomes a mighty stream. Its course does not exceed 40 m. in length.

MANZANARES a tn. Spain, New Castle, prov. and 25 m. E. by N. Ciudad-Real. It bank Asner commanded by an ancient castle. It is well built, has a handsome Gothic church, several chapels, town and ecclesiastical houses, a prison, hospital, convent, a Latin and some primary schools, and a cemetery manufactures of linen cloth, serge, hats, soap, bridle line tiles, bricks, wine, and oil and some trade in grape wine, oil and oranges, with Andalusia, Madrid, and Valencia. Pop. 5060.

MANZANERA a tn. Spain, Aragón, prov. and 24 m. S.E. Teruel. It bank Alfranca with a church, episcopal monastery and old castle, which belonged to the knights of St. John and a trade in corn and cattle. It was fortified by the Carlists in 1839, but shortly after obliged to capitulate. Pop. 1997.

MANZANILLA, a tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov. Huelva, on a height between the streams Carralón and Puerlón. It consists generally of well built houses and spacious streets, contains a parish church, townhouse, prison and two primary schools and has manufactures of cork, a distillery, several oil-mills, and extensive cultivation for the wine produced in the district. Pop. 1721.

MANZANILLA — 1 A bay, Mexico, W. coast, dep. Guadalupe, dist. Colima, 180 m. S.E. Cape Corrientes, lat. 19° 3' S. lon. 104° 16' W. (n.) It has good anchorage, and communicates with the city of Colima, but it has not a single house, and is making no progress as a port, partly, probably on account of its unhealthiness, and the ravages of mosquitoes and sea-fogs with which it is in-festred. — 2 A point, Isthmus of Panama, N. coast, Caribbean Sea, high, steep, and projecting with two hummocks on it, lat. 8° 25' N. lon. 79° 32' W. (n.) — 3, (Limon or New Bay), New Granada, Isthmus of Panama, on the Caribbean Sea, a little to the E. of the mouth of the river Chagres. It forms a large, beautiful and secure roadstead, about 5 m. in width, with many coves and harbours within it, and a depth of water decreasing from 6 to 4 and 2 fathoms. It has neither stunk rocks nor reefs, may be safely entered day and night, and has, consequently become a favourite resort of ships of war, and steamers visiting that part of the coast. The shores are lined with luxuriant coco-nut trees. — 4, A point Venezuela, on the Caribbean Sea, 30 m. N.E. Coro lat. 11° 31' N. lon. 69° 27' W. (n.) — 5, A point, Isl. Trinidad, E. coast, lat. 10° 21' N. lon. 61° 4' W. — 6, A bay and point, Isl. Hayti, N.W. coast. The bay which is a little to the S.E. of the point, has excellent anchorage lat. 19° 45' N. lon. 73° W.

MANZANILLO a tn. and seaport, Isl. Cuba, S.E. coast, 48 m. N.E. Cape de Cruz lat. 20° 22' N. lon. 77° 15' W. It has a good harbor, and a considerable trade. Nearly opposite are some keys of sand, called Las Manzanillas. — MANZANO a vil. and par. Italy Venezia, prov. Friuli, on the Natouco about 8 m. from Palma with a parish and an auxiliary church, and several mills.

MAON an isl. Adriatic, off the coast of Dalmatia, about 24 m. N.W. Zara, about 5 m. long by 2 m. broad. It affords good pasture.

MAOUNA, or TUTULA one of the Navigator isls. S. Pacific lat. (N.E. point) 14° 19' S. lon. 170° 57' W. (n.) It is high broken, and of volcanic appearance 17 m. long and about 5 m. broad, highest peak 2337 ft. above sea-level. The spurs and ridges that form the high land are precipitous, steep-edged and frequently rise in mural walls from the water to a height of 300 to 400 ft. Above this height, the surface is covered with a luxuriant vegetation to the very top of the mountain the coco-nut tree, and tree-fern, give the principal character to this beautiful scenery but bananas, guavas, and orange trees are also numerous. La Perouse's expedition was attacked by the natives of this island and 11 persons slain; hence it is sometimes called Manoua Island. Manoua is under several chiefs, each of whom rules over a town, district, or bay. — (Wilkes U. States Exploring Expedition.)

MAFARTOWN par. Irel. Louth 1446 ac. Pop. 263.

MAFFILO a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy gov. Milan, prov. and W. Bergamo. It contains a parish church which stands on an eminence above the village, and is well decorated and in the vicinity on the side of the mountain is a kind of calcareo-quartzite scapellato, resembling the Roman papyrus and much used for fine purposes. Pop. 1715.

MAFFETON par. Eng. Somerset 1534 ac. P. 210.

MAFIMI a tn. Mexico dep. and 115 m. N.E. Durango, in a sterile uninhabited district, abounding with the precious metals, which have not hitherto been turned to much account. Pop. 3000.

MAPLE-DUNHAM par. Eng. Oxford 2878 ac. P. 609.

MAPIEHCHE par. Eng. Dorset 1186 ac. Pop. 162.

MAPLEFIRHILL par. Eng. Hunts 816 ac. P. 206.

MAPLESTAD, two par. Eng. Essex — 1 (Great) 1929 ac. Pop. 494 — 2 (Little) 1069 ac. Pop. 367.

MAPOCHA a river Chili an affluent of the Mapo which it joins about 36 m. S.W. Santiago after a course, generally S.W. of above 80 m.

MAFOOTA a considerable river of S.E. Africa. Its sources are unknown though conjectured to be in the country of the Makotse, somewhere about lat. 26° S. It flows in a general N.E. direction and falls into Delagoa Bay S. side, about lat. 26° S. It is intricate at its entrance, but a vessel drawing 10 ft. water may with care, ascend it for 80 m. It swarms with hippopotami and alligators.

MAPPERTON par. Eng. Dorset, 804 ac. Pop. 85.

MAPPLETON, two par. Eng. — 1 Derby 778 ac. Pop. 200 — 2 York (E. Riding) 4971 ac. Pop. 449.

MAPPOWDER par. Eng. Dorset 1187 ac. Pop. 280.

MAR-MEXCO a lagoon, Spain, prov. Mexico extending N. from Cape Palos about 14 m.; greatest breadth about 5 m. separated from the Mediterranean by a sandbank about 500 yds. broad. Fine mullet are caught in the lagoon, chiefly at the narrow opening by which it communicates with the sea.

MARÁ ARABAREI, or VILLAGAMA, a vil. isl. Serdinha, div. and prov. Cagliari, s. bank Caralis, with several churches, a primary school, and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 1981.

MARÁ GALANOWA, a vil. isl. Serdinha, div. Cagliari, not far from Sinal; with an ancient church of three naves, and three minor churches, but the inhabitants, nevertheless, sunk in ignorance and barbarism. Pop. 1976.

MARACAYBO or MARANAO, a fortified city and seaport, Venezuela, cap. prov. of same name. W side of the entrance to the Lake of Maracaybo, from the gulf of the same name, lat. 10° 40' N. lon. 71° 45' W. A number of the houses are built with chalk and sand, and thatched with a kind of reed which grows on the banks of the lake, and which is preferred to tile, on account of its coolness though it renders the danger of fire very great besides giving the town a very mean appearance. It contains a parish church, a large and very handsome structure, several convents and monasteries, and an hospital. The harbour of Maracaybo is deep, but is obstructed by a bar on which there are only 10 ft. water at high tide, and but 7½ ft. at ebb. The number of vessels that entered the port in 1847 was 55. Value of cargoes, $268,777. Cleared in the same year, 90 value of cargoes, $17,977. Of the foreigners that entered 18 were Americans, and four only British. The total amount of imports, for the same year, was $289,998 and of exports, $104,584. Pop. 14,000.

—The province extends around the shores of the lake or lagoon of the same name. It is generally low and unhealthy and left almost entirely to the native tribes. The climate is excessively hot. —The lake is of an oval form, about 98 m. in length, 80 m. wide at the broadest part, and about 350 m. in circumference. It communicates with the Gulf of Maracaybo, in the Caribbean Sea, by a channel about 18 m. long, and 3 m. broad at the narrowest part, which is opposite the town of Maracaybo. It has a considerable depth of water, except towards the shores, but the bar which obstructs the access to the port of Maracaybo, before spoken of, almost always accretes at such a rate that it unites with the sea. The waters of the lake are fresh and sweet, from the number and magnitude of the rivers that fall into it, but when strong N. breezes prevail it becomes brackish towards the N. end. The number of rivers that fall into it, on all sides, is very great, and some of them are of considerable size. Amongst the latter are the Zulua, Chama, Motatan and Paria. —The celery in the Caribbean Sea entrance between Cape San Roman and Point Espada the former in lat. 13° 11' N. lon. 70° 7' W. (s.), and the latter in lat. 13° 4' N. lon. 71° 10' W. (s.). It is about 80 m. wide at the entrance and about 90 m. in length southward to the channel which communicates with the lake of the same name.

MARAGHA, or MARAGA, a tn. Ierba, prov. Azebyjan on an affluent of Lake Urmiah 50 m. S. by W. Tabreez. It covers a very large area, partly covered with houses, and partly occupied by extensive gardens is surrounded by walls flanked alternately with square and round towers, is well built and has a splendid bazaar and bath. Its principal trade is in a white marble, not so thin as to become transparent, and he occasionally used for windows. There are fine extensions in the walls. Pop. about 15,000.

MARAGOGIPE, a tn. Brazil, prov. Bahia, l. bank Guanabara near its junction with the Paraguaçu, 60 m. E. W. Cachoeira. It is finely situated and the houses, though of earth wall built, and of shabby appearance. It has five churches, a courthouse, a Latin and two primary schools and a trade in manioc, sugar, and tobacco transmitted by small streams into the Paraguaçu, and thence to Bahia. Pop. 8000.

MARAIÓ, an isl. Brazil, prov. Para, in the mouth of the Amazon, between the towns of Moxope and Pont. Tjilone greatest length, E. to W. 170 m.; greatest breadth, 150 m. The surface is flat, and is watered by the Mondin and Araxá, both of which are tidal streams, and navigable. The soil though somewhat swampy is fertile, and well adapted for raising all the products of the torrid zone. The inhabitants, who are all of Indian extraction, raise large quantities of rice, but their chief wealth is in cattle. Pop. 30,000.

MARAKAH, a tn. Egypt. See DOWSONA (NEW).

MARAMBOLA, or MARABAU, an isl. coast of Brazil, prov. Rio-de-Janeiro, forming a long and narrow belt of sandy ground, stretching about 30 m. W. to E., between the Atlantic and the Bay of Santa Cruz, and having a breadth which nowhere exceeds 8 m. In E. extremity is separated from the mainland by a narrow channel, abounding with shells called Barra do Guaratiba. Its W. extremity terminates in a sandy tract, called Morro da Marambola, and is separated from Ilha Grande by a channel about 6 m. wide, forming the entrance into the Bay of Santa Cruz, and possessing depth sufficient for vessels of 250 tons. It is inhabited by 1630 Tupia Indians, who live solely on fish, manioc, flour, and salted. Some sugar-cane is grown, and bread is distilled; and there is a church on the island, substantially built, in 1760, of stone and lime.

MARANGANE a vil. B. E. coast, Africa, 8 m. from Quillmans, on a slightly elevated piece of ground. It is stragglingly built, inhabited solely by slaves who cultivate a tract of land in the vicinity for their masters. Extensive groves of orange and acacia-trees surround it.

MARANHAO a river, Brazil which has its source in Lake Formosa, in the serra Itaquara, and in the serra Fels da Costa at the foot of the serra das Furnas in province Goyas, and flowing first N. W. and then N. E., unites with the Tocantins-Paquana in forming the greater river of the Tocantins, usually known by the name of the Tocantins-Grande. Some geographers make the course of the Maranhão much longer, giving its name to the united stream as far as the junction of the Paranaíba, in lat. 13° E. The Amazon originally had the name of Maranhão. The present river must not be confounded with it.

MARANHEIRO or MARANHAU a maritime prov. in the N. of Brazil, so called from the name originally given to the river Amazon bounded N. by the Atlantic, E. and N. E. Piauí 8 W. Goyas, and N. W. Para lat. 1° 23' to 10° 30' S. lon. 41° 20' to 48° W. Area, 94,900 sq. m. The E. half of the coastline forms almost a continuous straight line, unbroken by a single indentation of any magnitude, the W. half, on the contrary, consists of several bays, particularly those of St. Marcos and St. Jose, forming the respective embouchures of the Itapicuru and the Meirim, and situated on the opposite sides of the lake of Maranhão. The surface has its highest elevations towards the S. and S. W., and slopes more or less gradually N. E., till it terminates in extensive plains. The principal rivers are the Paranaíba, which bound the province on the E., but does not receive any important affluent within it; and the Itapicuru and Meirim which traverse it centrally S. to N. and directly or by their numerous affluents, carry off the greater part of its drainage. There are several lakes, but the only one of any consequence is Mata. As the province lies almost under the equator day and night, throughout the year, differ little in length, and the climate is extremely hot. Thunderstorms, also, are of frequent occurrence in November and December and continue occasionally to occur till March. A considerable part of the surface is occupied by forests, which yield excellent timber, and ornamental and dye woods, that, by means of numerous small streams, are floated into the larger rivers, and thence conveyed to the coast, forming important articles of trade. But the chief source of wealth to the inhabitants are their cultivated crops, of which the most important are rice, cotton, and the sugar-cane. Much of the produce of the last is converted into spirits. The principal fruits are various species of palm, bananas, pine-apples, and mangoes. Ginger, yalap, ipacoumba and other medicinal plants, grow spontaneously. The parts of the province lying between province Piauí and the river Meirim, are tolerably well peopled by Brazilians or Indians, amongst whom civilization has made considerable progress. But from this river W. to the frontiers of Para, a great part of the country is in possession of Indians, who are still in a state of nature. For administrative purposes the province is divided into nine comarcas—Almeida, Brejo, Caxias, Chapéa, Guimarães, Ilha do Maranhão, Itapicuru, Ponto-Bom, and Ymama, sub-divided into districts, which take their names from the principal towns in them. It appoints four deputies to the general legislative assembly and two senators. The provincial assembly composed of 38 members, holds its sittings in São Luis or Maranhão. Pop. 390,000.

MARANHÃO MARANHAU, or São Luis, a tn. Brazil, cap. above prov. W. side island of same name, 390 m. E. Belém or Para, and 280 m. W. Coara or Fortaleza, lat. (cathedral) 3° 41' 42" S., lon. 44° 18' 42" W. On the E. side it is surrounded by mountains, which form a kind of natural fortress the town, in that direction being accessible only by narrow passes, which a few troops could easily defend against any number of assailants. On the N and S, it is encircled by the small streams Rio Penedico and Marandito, which rise and fall with the tide. At the mouths of these two rivers is a basin, according to high water, to vessels drawing 20 ft., affording fine shelter, and defended, at its entrance, by a series of forts. The town itself is built on unequal ground, but with considerable regularity and as almost all the houses have gardens attached occupies a much larger space than its actual population might seem to require. The streets cross each other at right angles, and are paved, and the houses, at least in the principal thoroughfares are of two stories generally provided with balconies, and have a handsome appearance. The principal edifices are the cathedral and episcopal palace, magnificent structures, both built by the Jesuits, the one as their titular church, and the other as their college the governor's palace, the townhouse and prison the custom house, treasury, college, the richly-endowed hospital de Misericordia, and two other hospitals, and various churches, monjas houses, and nurseries. The trade is of great importance, the provinces of Para, Piauí, Ceará, Rio-Grande-do-Norte, and Goias, having for their produce. The principal exports are rice, cotton, rum, medicines, and manteigas or butiranga, a kind of butter made of tortoise eggs. The imports consist of various articles of European manufacture. Maranhão is the seat of the provincial legislative assembly the residence of the provincial governor the see of a bishop, and possesses a lyceum or college in which the ancient and modern languages, rhetoric, geography, grammar, philosophy, mathematics, design, navigation and astronomy are taught a commercial school and a botanical garden principally designed to promote agriculture by furnishing cultivators gratuitously with new seeds and plants. Owing to the title around the town the air is somewhat confined and the heat extreme. Endemic diseases are not prevalent, but the purity of the air is much affected by the nuisance arising from stagnant pools which are chiefly left by the retreating tide. Pop. 30,000 —

THE ISLAND lies between the bays of São-José on the E. and São-Marcos on the W. On the E. it is separated from the mainland by a channel called the Rio do Mosquito on the N. It is washed by the Atlantic, extends length N. E. to S. W. 23 m. greatest breadth, 20 m. its surface is more elevated than that of the mainland and in the E. side is lined by reefs, which make access to it difficult. It is well watered, and the soil is generally fertile, and produces, in abundance, rice, tobacco, manioc, millet, and pumpkins. Pop. 40,000

MARANO — 1 A maritime in Italy Venetia, gov. Venice prov. Friuli 21 m. S. N. E. Udine on a tongue of land, once fortified among the lagoons of the Adriatic. It contains a parish and two auxiliary churches. Pop. 1000 — 2 A vil. Italy The Marone dale and 11 m. S. E. Verona on the Adige with wine, olives, and silk culture. P. 1600 — 3 A tn. Naples, prov. and about 4 m. N. W. Naples. Pop. 6800 — 4 A tn. Naples prov. Calabria-Citra, dist. and 6 m. W. Cassano. Pop. 4000

MARANON a river S. America. See AMARON

MARANON (Latin, Marimón) s. n. France, dep. Charente-Inférieure, at the confluence of the Sèvre-Niortaise and the Vendée, 13 m. N. W. E. La Rochelle. It is surrounded by marshes, which notwithstanding the efforts that have been made for the purpose, are very imperfectly drained. It is, however, regularly built and well situated for trade. The tide ascends about 2 m. above the town but the water at the quay does not admit vessels of above 100 tons. Those of larger burden are obliged to discharge below. A maritime canal has been commenced, which will open the navigation to vessels of 300 tons. The principal trade is in grain, other articles are oleaginous, lucerne and clover seeds, wine, brandy, hemp, flax, cotton, wool, fish, ship timbers, and particularly, a kind of flour called mitou. A good deal of salt is obtained from the salt marshes in the neighbourhood. Pop. 5890

MARASH a pass Asiatic Turkey, bounded N. by that of Rivas, W. Karamania, S. Aleppo, and E. Diarbekir, greatest length, N. E. to S. W. 150 m., greatest breadth, 105 m. The surface, with the exception of a belt in the E. along the banks of the Euphrates, consists almost entirely of lofty wooded mountains, being traversed centrally by Taurus proper in the S. by part of the Durdan Tagh, and in the N.

by part of the Anti Taurus. It belongs wholly to the basins of the Euphrates, and the Jychoon. The former waters the whole of its E. frontier and receives from within it the Kermas or Kars, and several minor streams, the latter rises in the centre, and drains it S. W. Owing to the elevation of the surface, the climate is mild the snows on the mountains serving to moderate the excessive heats of summer. Many of the valleys are fertile, and excellent fruit is abundant, but the pastoral is much better adapted for pasture than agriculture. A large proportion of the inhabitants are Turks.

MARASH, or KERMASH (anc. Germene) a tn. cap. above said, picturesquely situated on a slope of the lofty Agir Tagh above r. bank Jychoon, 30 m. N. W. Aleppo. It occupies the sides and intervening valleys of three remarkable shoulders that in the centre being crowned by the castle, and overlooks an extensive and fertile plain but is poorly built, consisting of about 3500 houses of wood and clay. The mosques, about 25 in number are of an inferior description. In the vicinity tobacco, rice, and other grains, are largely cultivated. On the slopes of the Taurus there is very fine timber and besides a mine excellent iron which is worked there is also a mine of native steel. The town probably owes its existence to the pass of the Taurus situated to the N. along the slopes of the Anti-Shehr

MARATIA, s. n. Naples prov. Basilicata, dist. and 10 m. S. Lagonegro near the Gulf of Policastro. Pop. 4380

MARATHON a vil. N. Greece 20 m. N. E. Athens, and within a few miles of the Channel of Egripo or Negropont, famous for the victory of Miltiades over the Persians, and remarkable for the fine mountain scenery in its vicinity

MARATHONISI a small sea, airport in Greece, in the Morca, dist. of Malva. W. shore and near the head of the Gulf of Kolokythia, lat. 38° 44' N., lon. 22° 30' E. It is built on a huge rock which overhangs the sea, and consists of about 100 wretched houses of mud brick, in the midst of which stands a large church with a spire. Opposite the town, is an island of the same name (anc. Cresus) which forms a kind of roadstead, sheltered from W. and W. winds. A considerable quantity of valonia is shipped at the port of Marathon. The town stands on the site of the ancient Miletus, and near it are the remains of a Gymnasium called Paleopolis, and numerous other relics of antiquity

MARATUA or St. JOHN'S ISLAND Indian Archipelago, Calabes Sea, off the N. E. coast Borneo N. point lat. 3° 15' N. lon. 118° 55' E. (s) It is about 24 m. in length N. to S. and 4 to 12 m. in breadth. Trepan is collected here. This island is the largest of a group of six islands, called the Maratua or Maratuba islands

MARAVACA a mountain, Yucatan, in Yucatan, about lat. 9° 40' N. and lon. 9° 50' W. 23 m. N. N. E. of the vil. of Emmeralia. Sur R. H. Schomburgk estimates its height at 10,000 to 11,000 ft. but was not able to form a base-line for its accurate measurement, in consequence of the dense woods at its base. He there found a species of Arundinaria, growing in clusters like the bamboo and though not more than half an inch in diameter rising, first without a knot, for 15 or 16 ft., then becoming branched, and attaining an additional height of from 50 to 40 ft.

MARAVI or MARAVIA a lake S. Africa, about lat. 18° S., and lon. 35° E. It is very imperfectly known, and owing to the deep bogs which surround it, is approached with difficulty even by the natives. It is said to have fresh water, and to be fed chiefly by the Tabahe, of which the Mogenatse or Mofumatse, is one of the principal branches. Both the river and the lake abound with crocodiles. At the S. W. extremity of the lake, is the village or town of Maravi.

MARAZION MARAZZANO or MARAZZANO, a market in England, co. Cornwall, 18 m. S. W. Falmouth, pleasantly situated at the N. extremity of Mount Bay, on the slope of a hill, and detached from the E. and N. W. winds. It has one principal street, rather curved, and generally not well kept, and contains an Established church a Wesleyan, and a Baptist chapel, and a Friendly meeting-house. It has two charity schools, and a Friendly society. The inhabitants are generally employed in the tin and copper mines in the vicinity. St. Michael's Mount lies about 2 m. to the S., and is connected with the mainland by an isthmus, 40 yds. broad. Pop. 1879 (Local Correspondent)

MARAZZI a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Genoa, 1 m. from San Martino, on the Borge. It has two parish churches, a small fort, three palaces, and a trade in corn, wine, oil, and fruit. Pop. 2890

MARBACH, a tn. Württemberg, circle Neckar, esp. hail, r. bank Neckar, 15 m. S. Heilbronn. It is walled, has two gates, two churches, a chapel, Latin school, old castle, various manufactures, and several mills. Schiller was born here. Pop. 2840 Area of hail, 58 sq. m. Pop. 39 750

MARBACH, two places, Switzerland.—1. or Mosbach, A. tn. and par. com. and 22 m. S.W. Luzern 2°00' ft. above sea-level with a church, and a considerable trade in horses. Excellent flax is extensively grown. Pop. 2004.—2. A vil. and par., com. and 15 m. E. S. E. St. Gall, in the valley of the Rhone, with a church, used both by Protestants and E. Catholics. Inhabitants chiefly employed in hunting and spinning wools. Pop. 1118

MARBAIX, a vil. and com. Belgium prov. Brabant, 22 m. S. E. Brussels. The chief employments are agriculture and the rearing of cattle. Pop. 1782

MARBELLA a city and port, Spain, Andalusia prov. and 28 m. S.W. Malaga, on the Mediterranean. It is well built, and has clean, wide, and paved streets a handsome square, an elegant church, with a lofty tower several chapels, two hospitals, some schools, a townhouse, prison, small theatre, and ancient fortress, now converted into a cemetery. Manufactures of esparto fabrics, leather, refined sugar, and oil, several iron-smelting furnaces, and an important trade in grain, fruit and wine. Many of the inhabitants are fishermen. Pop. 2860

MARBLEHEAD a seaport and township, U. States Massachusetts, 18 m. N. E. Boston on a rocky point projecting 2 or 4 m. into Massachusetts Bay. It has five churches, two banks, and a safe harbour easy of access. Inhabitants chiefly fishermen. Pop. 565

MARBURG a tn. Hesse-Cassel, esp. prov. Upper Hesse, expressly situated on the slopes of an acclivity above the Lahn, and on the West Prussian railway 46 m. N. Frankfurt. The houses are in general, poorly and irregularly built, and the streets are both narrow and dirty. The principal buildings are the castle of the landgraves of Hesse, an ancient edifice, remarkable both for site and architecture, and now partly used as a prison, the university the first founded in Germany after the Reformation, and attended by about 200 students the church of St. Elizabeth, built in the 13th century and affording a pure specimen of the pointed Gothic the observatory, library and townhouse. The manufactures are of little importance, consisting chiefly of linen, leather and earthenware. Marburg is the seat of several courts and public offices, and possesses—besides the university already mentioned, to which an observatory chemical laboratory, mineralogical cabinet, anatomical theatre, and botanical garden, are attached—a gymnasium an industrial and a riding school. Marburg early embraced, and makes a considerable figure in the early history of the Reformation. Here Luther and Zwingli held a conference in presence of the landgrave, with a view to terminate their unhappy differences on the subject of the Lord's supper. Pop. 7864 Area of dist. 160 sq. m. Pop. 28 917

MARBURG, or MARBURGH a tn. Austria, Styria, cap. circle, L. bank Drava, 26 m. S. by E. Grätz, on the Vienna and Trieste railway. It is walled, has four suburbs, a ducal chateau, with good paintings, an old castle, a theatre, a gymnasium, several schools, an infirmary and military hospital several well-frequented fairs and some trade in corn and wine. In the neighbourhood, N. of the town, on a conical hill are the remains of the old castle of Ober Marburg. Pop. 4500.—The climate is watered chiefly by the Drava, which traverses it longitudinally has excellent pastures, on which great numbers of cattle are reared produce of fruit and wine considerable. Area, 1052 sq. m. Pop. 208 800

MARBURY par. Eng. Essex 8636 ac. Pop. 758

MARCARIA, a tn. and com. Italy Lombardy gov. Milan, prov. and 14 m. S. W. Mantua, esp. dist., near L. bank Olho, here crossed by a handsome wooden bridge. It contains a parish church, two chapels, and a handsome chateau of the Marchioness Castiglione, with fine gardens, and has several mills. Close to the village are the remains of an old feudal castle. Pop. 6622

MARCEL (St.), [anc. Agrippinensis]—1. A tn. France, dep. Indre, on the Creuse, 16 m. S. W. Chateauroux. It appears to have anciently been a place of some importance and among other ancient Roman remains are vestiges of a theatre. The only trade is in wine. Pop. 1043.—2. A vil. France, dep. Saône-et-Loire, about 2 m. from Chalon-sur-Saône, which contained the Benedictine abbey in which Abelard died.

MARCELLAS a vil. and com. France, dep. Haute Savoie, prov. Geneva, W. Annecy, on a lofty hill. It contains a small secluded parish church and has some trade in corn, wine, and fruit. Pop. 1103

MARCELLIN (St. [Latin, Macoris]) a tn. France, dep. Indre, near L. bank Loire, 20 m. W. S. W. Grez-sur-Loire. It is walled, has four gates and is, in general, well built streets straight, and adorned with fine sparkling fountains. The public square is handsome, and there is a well built market. Its chief manufacture is earthenware, and it has also cotton mills, and a trade in excellent wine, raw silk, thread, linen, walnut, oil, cattle, and game-hill cheese. Pop. 2754

MARCELLO (San), a vil. and com. Tuscany, in the Val di Lama, about 18 m. from Pistoia. It has a handsome church, with a tower and spire a convent two schools, manufactures of woollen, several paper-mills, and a trade in chestnuts and wood. Pop. 4663

MARCH, or MORAWA a river Austria, which rises on the N. frontiers of Moravia, on the S. W. side of the Spiglitzer Seebensee near Altschitz, and proceeds S. E. F. passing Olmütz, Kremsier and Hradisch. On reaching the last town, it turns S. S. W. forming the boundary first between Moravia and Hungary and then between the archduchy of Austria and Hungary and ultimately joining L. bank Danube about 7 m. above Pressburg. Its principal affluents are on the right, the Hanna, Taya, Zaya, and Rast, and on the left, the Booswa, Miava, and Budawa. Total course, including windings, about 160 m. It is navigable from Gding, near the point where it begins to form the boundary between Moravia and Hungary, at its mouth it is about 400 yards wide.

MARCH a market tn. and chapelry England, co. and 2 m. N. W. Cambridge on both sides of the Old Kenn, and on the Eastern Counties railway. Its two principal streets cross each other at right angles and are each nearly 2 m. long, not very straight, but well kept. The town, generally, is irregularly laid-out houses mostly of brick, and some well built a good square market-place in the centre. The places of worship are a handsome established church, and several dissenting chapels. There are a national grammar and infant schools, and a mechanics institute. Pop. 6241

MARCHAM par. Eng. Berks 4940 ac. Pop. 1197

MARCHAMALO a tn. Spain New Castile prov. and 2 m. N. Guadalajara, in a plain L. bank Henares. It has a church, courthouse with prison and primary school an oil mill and a trade in agricultural produce and bread which is taken esteem for its superior quality. Pop. 10381

MARCHE or MARCHE EN FEMME a tn. Belgium, prov. Luxembourg near Shakenberg a Forest of Arden, about 35 m. S. E. Dinant. It is a pretty comfortable looking town and has two churches, three chapels, a communal house, a court of first resort, a prison, some benevolent institutions iron-works, numerous flour, bark and saw mills. About 200 persons are employed in making lace. It has a trade in iron wood and cattle. It is named Marche-en-Femme, from having been the capital of the old district of Famenne. A treaty between Austria and the States of Holland, which was concluded here in 1077, bears the name of the Perpetual Edict. Pop. 1804

MARCHE (La) an and prov. France, which was divided into High Marche, esp. Gueret, and Low Marche, esp. Hellas. It was bounded N. by prov. Berry E. Bourbonnais and A. vernois, S. Limousin and W. Poitou. It now forms dep. Creuse, and part of dep. Haute Vienne.

MARCHE LES BAINS, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 15 m. N. E. Mons, with a brewery and several chateaux and four mills. Pop. (agricultural), 1778

MARCHEGGI a tn. Lower Austria, circle Lower Mautern, near L. bank March, 77 m. E. Vienna. It is surrounded by old walls, and has a Gothic church, and an ancient castle, with a theatre, library and park. It is famous for the victory which Ottokar gained here, in 1260, over Bela. Pop. 1190

MARCHEMMA, a tu. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 30 m. S. by S. Seville, in a sandy valley, and upon two hills. The walls built; remains some vestiges of its ancient tower-fortified walls, and has some fine squares, old clove and pines, though for the most part, arched and steep streets. Its public buildings are, three parish churches, several chapels, towers and convents, houses, prisons, two hospitals, an orphan asylum, college, storehouse, three convents, and a palace of the Duke of Arcos. It has manufactures of linen, serge, and cloth, earthenware, soap, wine and oil, and carries on some trade with Seville. Pop. 11,890.

MARCHES (Land), a vill and com. France, dep. Sarthe, 1/2 bank Loire, 6 m. S.E. E. Chambray; with two churches, and some trade in wine, of very indifferent quality. Pop. 1087.

MARCHIENNES, or MARCHIENNES-VILL (Latin, Marchiennes) a tu. France, dep. Nord, in a marshy district, on the Scarpe and canal of Douai, 19 m. S.E. Lille. It is poorly and irregularly built, has some manufactures of tulle and leather, dress-making, and a considerable trade in fish, fruit-trees, and asparagus. Pop. 3217.

MARCHEIN, a tu. and com. Belgium, prov. and about 71 m. S.W. Liège, on the Hoyers. It has four forges, four rolling mills, one flour, and four paper mills, fine quarries of building and paving stone, and two breweries. Pop. 2248.

MARCHWIEL par Wals, Dunbligh, 3316 m. P. 685.

MARCHIANA, a tu. Tuscany dist. and 9 m. S.E. E. Porto Ferraio. It consists chiefly of a long street stretching along the beach, is the seat of a court of justice, has two churches, and a trade in wine, wood, and iron. Near it are granite quarries, which were worked by the Romans. Pop. 2177.

MARCHIANO, a vill and com. Tuscany on an elevated plain, near 1 bank canal of Chiasso, 35 m. E. Rome, with a church and an old castle. Here, in 1555, the Tuscan defeated the French. Pop. 2514.

MARCHIONAGO, or MARCHIAGO, a vill and com. Italy Lombardy prov. Verona, dist. and E. Bergamasco; with a church. It is famous for the device which the Ghibellines of Verona here sustained, in 1152, from the Guelphs of Milan. P. 1296.

MARCHIGNY, a tu. France, dep. Saône-et-Loire, near 1 bank Loire, 68 m. S.W. Chalon. It has manufactures of table-linen and earthenware builds a good many barges, and has a trade in corn. Pop. 2547.

MARCHINELLE, a vill and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, near the Sambre, on the road from Charleroi to Philippeville, 34 m. E. Mons. It has manufactures of iron, a brewery and a distillery. Coal is worked in the vicinity. Pop. 1590.

MARCKE, a vill and com. Belgium, prov. W. Flanders, on the Lys, 34 m. S. Bruges. It has manufactures of linen, a tannery, an oil, and two flour mills, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1544.

MARCKOLSHHEIM, MARCKOLSH, or MARCKOLSH, a tu. France, dep. Bas-Rhin, on the Isère, and the Rhine and Moselle Canal, 28 m. S.E. W. Strasbourg. It has manufactures of linen and earthenware, breweries, brick and tile works, and a trade in tobacco and hemp. Across the Rhine, on the side of the Kaiserstuhl, stands the old castle of Lenzburg. P. 2290.

MARCLE, two parts. Eng. Harford.—1. (Lancs.), 1219 m. Pop. 152.—2. (Merch) 6248 m. Pop. 1126.

MARCO (Mar), several towns, Naples, particularly:—1. Prov. Calabria-Citra, dist. and 17 m. N.W. Cosenza, the see of a bishop, and containing a cathedral and two other churches. Pop. 1200.—2. Sicily, prov. Messina, dist. and 16 m. W.S.W. Patti, on a height, near the sea-coast. Near it, to the S.W., are the ruins of a Roman bridge. Pop. 3000.—3. (Sic. Genua) Prov. Trapani, dist. and 16 m. N.W. Agrigento, with a fair, which lasts three days. Pop. 9900.—4. (Sic. Zama) Prov. Capriano, dist. and 12 m. E.N.E. San Severo. Pop. 9000.—5. (Sic. Catania) Prov. Catania, dist. and 22 m. S.W. San Severo; with an annual fair. Pop. 5160.

MARCO (Mar), a tu. Sicily, prov. and 46 m. W.S.W. Messina, near the N. coast, on a hill, with a difficult road up to it. It contains a number of well-built houses, partly occupied by nobility, several churches, with some good churches, and carries on a trade in honey, wax, wine, oil, and silk. The numerous are laid out in regular squares and avenues; just in the vicinity, on the N.E., are the remains of a Roman city. Pop. including that of three dependent vills, 4290.

MARCOUF (Mar), two small tu. France, in the English Channel, off the coast, in the route of St. Helier, about 4 m. from the mainland, and 12 m. N.E. Cherbourg. They consist chiefly of barren rocks, but are of some military importance, and, in time of war, have repeatedly been taken possession of by the British.

MARCOUBERT, a tu. and com. Belgium, prov. Luxembourg, 1 bank Ourthe, 43 m. N.W. Arlon, at the foot of a hill called Munzigen (Monte Amato), which gave its name to a county, of which Marcoubert was the capital. It has a church, two chapels, and several commercial houses, inhabitants employed in agriculture. Pop. 1064.

MARCOUVEAU, a vill Hungary, Thibier, Thelma, co. Temevar, in a fertile district, 3 m. from Knin. It has a church, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1477.

MARCO, a tu. and com. Belgium, on a small river of the same name, about 30 m. N. Mous. It has a bank and six flour mills, some linen-weaving and a trade in agricultural and dairy produce. Pop. 3465.

MARCOUSS, par. W. Glamorgan, 1041 m. Pop. 22. MARCE, or MARNA, a vill Hungary Thibier, Thelma, co. and about 7 m. from Odenburg. It has a church, and a trade with Varna in wine, wood, and fruit, especially cherries. Pop. 1126.

MARCEALY, a market in Hungary, Thibier, Thelma, co. Szeged, 8 m. E. of Lake Balaton, and 77 m. S. Raab. It has a Catholic church, a castle and a trade in wine. P. 1400.

MARDEN, six parts. England:—1. Hereford, 4048 m. P. 941.—2. Kent 7007 m. P. 1660.—3. Wilt, 1378 m. P. 907.—4. (Leam) Sussex 968 m. P. 69.—5. (North) Sussex 682 m. P. 19.—6. (W.) Sussex 2228 m. P. 360.

MARDIN, a tu. Asiatic Turkey, path, and 335 m. N.W. Bagdad, on a lofty mass of limestone, overlooking a large and fertile plain. It is distinguished by the salubrity of its climate, is substantially built of stone, and has a prosperous appearance. Among the public edifices are Chakmak, Syria, Catholic, Armenian, and Jewish churches, and a large and handsome harem. At a short distance, there is a Jacobite monastery said to contain the largest library among the Syrians, and to have works in 13 different languages. Pop. about 15,000.

MARE, an isl. Brazil, off E. shore Bay of All Saints, or Bahia, opposite to the mouth of the Pimenta, prov. and 14 m. N. by Bahia. It has a circuit of nearly 13 m., of great fertility, producing, in particular great quantities of bananas, which constitute the principal wealth of the inhabitants; and contains a parish church and a primary school. Pop. 700.

MAREB.—1. A considerable river Abyssinia, an affluent of the Atbara or Tazama. It is formed by the junction of several head streams, all having their sources in the kingdom or state of Tigre. The principal of these, called the Mansal, rises on the W. slopes of the mountain-cliffs which separate Dakal from Tigre about lat. 14° 42' N. lon. 39° 43' E. The junction of these streams occurs at lat. 14° 30' N., from which the river flows in a N.W. direction, till it joins the Atbara, at lat. 16° 10' N. At a short distance below lat. 14° 00' N.—2. A tu. Arabia (see Saba), 60 m. N.E. Sana, lat. 15° 40' N. lon. 45° 30' E. Numerous ruins would indicate that this had been formerly a place of great importance. These consist of finely-cut stones, great numbers of which have been carried all the way to Sana, two days' journey, where they are used in the buildings of that town, such of white marble, with long inscriptions in the ancient Hamyratic character; square gold coins, and jewels and pearls, found usually in the water-courses after heavy rains.

MARCOCHIA, a river, Italy, which rises in the E. slope of the Central Apennines, on the frontiers of Tuscany, flows N.E. and, after a course of about 85 m., falls into the Adriatic, a little below Rimini. It is navigated by barges.

MAREE LOCH, a Scottish lake, in the W. of Bone-shire, forming a long and comparatively narrow expanse, stretching S.E. to N.W. for 16 m., with an average breadth not exceeding 1/2 m. Owing to its depth, while, in most places, it is 60 fathoms, it has never been known to freeze. The country about it is of the highest description, and its shores fringed with 36 wooded islands. The loch discharges itself into Loch Ewe by a small river of same name.

MAREHAM, two parishes, England, Lincoln—1 (44-Par), 1866 m. Pop. 555; 2 (44-Par), 1866 m. Pop. 217.

MAREMMA, a low, swampy tract, Tuscany, which stretches along the shores of the Mediterranean, from Oristella to Florence, and, notwithstanding repeated attempts to drain it, continues so unhealthily, that it is cultivated only by shepherds during a part of the year. It contains alum and sulphur, and there are also said to be seams of coal.

MARENÉ, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont div. Com. govt. Saluzzo, N. E. Savignone. It has several handsome houses, a large and richly-decorated parish church, a public school, and a charitable endowment; a distillery, and a trade in corn, wine, fruit, and silk. The painter Carlo Dolci was born here. Pop. 1877.

MARENGO, or MASSAROFETTA, a vil. Italy, Piedmont, r. bank Bernina, and so near Alessandria as to be considered one of its suburbs. It is memorable as the scene of the victory which the French, under Bonaparte, gained, in 1800, over the Austrians, under Melas, and in which General Desaix was killed.

MARENNE [Latin, Moriana] a tn. France, dep. Charente-Inférieure, 23 m. S. La Rochelle, about 1 m. from the Bay of Bayonne. It is surrounded by salt marshes, which yield a good deal of salt; it is well built, but its climate is so unhealthy as to be a serious obstacle to its prosperity. Its trade is in salt, barley, and white wine, corn, masts, garden beans, lentils, mustard, green cress, in great request, and fine mair, used by soap-makers. Pop. 1864.

MAREOTIS, or MAROT, a lake, in the N. W. part of Lower Egypt, separated from the Mediterranean on the W. by the long and narrow belt of land on which Alexandria is situated, and communicating on the N. with Lake Madih. It is irregular in shape, and, in the S. W., has a long, narrow creek, but the great body of water is about 28 m. long, N. W. to S. E., and 20 m. broad. It was at one time of sufficient depth to answer all the purposes of inland navigation, and was kept constantly full by the waters of the Nile, while its shores were surrounded by beautiful gardens and vineyards. Towards the close of the last century, it was nearly dry and had become noxious for the pestilential atmosphere formed by its miasmata. The English, while besieging the French in Alexandria, let the sea into it, in order to deprive the besieged of fresh water, and out off their communication with Cairo, and it has, in consequence, again become a lake.

MARESFIELD, par. Eng. Sussex; 7750 a. P. 1863.

MARETTE, a tn. France, dep. Nord, 11 m. S. E. Cambesy.

MAREUIL, several places, France, particularly—1 A tn. and com., dep. Puy-de-Dôme, 12 m. S. W. Moulon; with manufacture of hosiery and hats, a cotton-mill, and six annual fairs. Pop. 1765.—2 A vil. and com. dep. Vendée 15 m. S. E. Bourdeaux-Vendée, r. bank Lay, which is here navigable. It ships goods from Nantes and Rochelle; and has six annual fairs, each of two days. Pop. 1866.—3 (Mareuil-sur-Ay), A vil. and com. dep. Marne, 16 m. S. Rheims; near r. bank Marne, here crossed by a handsome bridge. It consists chiefly of a large Boudin this place is a wicker town, and about 18 ft. wide. The old church of Margate, on a hill, has a square tower at the N. W. angle. The church of the Holy Trinity, a modern structure, is built of Bath stone, in the early English style. There are places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyans, Lady Huntingdon's Connection, Presbyterians, R. Catholics, Society of Friends, and a woman's chapel. The charitable committee Draper's hospital and a free school which provides education for 450 children. There are several bathing establishments in the town, libraries, billiard and reading rooms, and other places of recreation and amusement. Adjoining the town, also, are the Tirol gardens, for concerts, tea-dances, &c. As many as 100,000 visitors, it is said, sometimes arrive during the season. A considerable fishery for skels, haddock, sole, and flat-fish, is carried on here, and some little trade with the Netherlands, for the immediate wants of the district. Pop. m. 3107. Area of par. 4693 a. Pop. 10,005.

MAREUIL, par. Eng. York (R. Riding), 2138 a. Pop. 193.

MARGA, a vil. Hungary, head of Tamasvár, near the borders of Transylvania, and about 50 m. from Karamansee. It has a new and a flour-mill, and is established chiefly by the soldiers of a Wallachian-Ilyrian frontier regiment. P. 904.

MARGAM, par. Wales, Glamorgan, 18735 a. P. 4747.

MARGARET (St.), three par. Eng.—1, Middlesex, 687 a. Pop. 21,514.—2 Norfolk, 2675 a. Pop. 14,563.

—3, (St. Chrys.), Kent; 1924 a. Pop. 783.

MARGARET MANN, par. Eng. Dorset; 525 a. P. 77.

MARGARET'S CHURCH, par. Eng. Hereford, 5685 a. P. 2,316.

MARGARET'S (St.), three par. Ire.—1, Dublin, 2401 a. Pop. 411.—2, Wexford; 2434 a. Pop. 944.—3, Wexford; 488 a. Pop. 28.

MARGARETHA (Gunnar), a market, Hungary, Thibet, Damp, m. and N. Oudenburg, about 8 m. from Gashien, with a church. Pop. 1866.

MARGARETTING, par. Eng. Essex; 2260 a. P. 517.

Pop. 11.

MARGARITA, an Isl. Yucatan, dep. Cambray, in the Caribbean Sea; lat. (W) and 19° 55' N. lon. 88° 50' W. (N). It is about 80 m. from the mainland, of very irregular form, being rounded, near the centre, to a narrow isthmus, with a broad expansion on the E., and a smaller on the W. Its greatest length, E. to W., is 87 m. breadth at the E. end, about 30 m., at the W., about 10 m. The connecting neck of land which unites the two extremities of the island, is of low, swampy tract. Both portions of the island are rocky and rise to a considerable elevation, in some parts as high as 2000 ft. above the sea. The coasts are rocky and very steep, but contain several harbours—the principal of which, Tampabay, lies on the S. E. coast, it is a spacious basin, and secure from all winds. Indian corn, bananas, and ground provisions are raised, as are also small quantities of sugar, coffee, and cacao. An extensive fishery is carried on upon the banks between Margarita and the mainland, where great quantities of fish are taken, and sent to the neighboring countries. Fowls and other curious birds are extremely numerous on the island. It has several small towns or villages—the most considerable of which, Amundin, is situated on the E. side of the island. Margarita was discovered by Columbus, in 1498. Pop. estimated at 15,000.—2, An Isl. N. Pacific Ocean, on the coast of Old California, lat. 24° 18' N. lon. 111° 49' W. (N). Length, N. W. to S. E., 80 m.; breadth, 10 m.

MARGARITA, a tn., Isl. Mayores, 22 m. S. Alondra, tolerably well built with several squares, a parish church, two schools, a warehouse, a beauty distillery, and some trade in cattle, grain, and fruit. Pop. 2568.

MARGARITA or SANTA KANARITA, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Com. prov. and W. Mondovì, on the Biobio. It has a handsome modern church, a fine palace with a large and beautiful garden, a monastery, communal school, charitable endowment, and a paper, an iron, and several silk mills. Pop. 1519.

MARGARITA SAWA, a tn. Sicily prov. and 41 m. N. W. Girgenti. Pop. 1275.

MARGAKIRTI [anc. Gyphene] a tn. Turkey in Europe, Albania, sandjak and 40 m. S. E. Delvine, cap. dist. of same name, m. a fertile plain. Pop. 4000.

MARGATE, a seaport, market tn., watering-place, and par. England, co. Kent. The town, 64 m. E. by N. London, on a branch of the South-Eastern Railway, is about 3 m. N. W. the N. Foreland, lat. 51° 28' 24" N. lon. 1° 28' 15" E. (N), pleasantly situated at the N. extremity of the Isle of Thanet, partly on the acclivity of two hills, and partly in the intervening valley. The older part of the town, occupying the latter, and stretching along the shore consists of a number of narrow, irregular streets, but the new part is well laid-out, and contains some good streets and squares, paved and lighted. The principal buildings are the market, towall, theatre, public subscription library, sea-bathing infirmary and several barracks. The stone pier is also a fine structure, upwards of 900 ft. long, 60 ft. wide at the broadest part, and 28 ft. high, with a parapet of 44 ft. A portion of this pier is partitioned off as an esplanade, elevated 7 or 8 ft. above the general level. Besides this pier there is a wooden pier, 1000 ft. long, and about 18 ft. wide. The old church of Margate, on a hill, has a square tower at the N. W. angle. The church of the Holy Trinity, a modern structure, is built of Bath stone, in the early English style. There are places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyans, Lady Huntingdon's Connection, Presbyterians, R. Catholics, Society of Friends, and a woman's chapel. The charitable committee Draper's hospital and a free school which provides education for 450 children. There are several bathing establishments in the town, libraries, billiard and reading rooms, and other places of recreation and amusement. Adjoining the town, also, are the Tirol gardens, for concerts, tea-dances, &c. As many as 100,000 visitors, it is said, sometimes arrive during the season. A considerable fishery for skels, haddock, sole, and flat-fish, is carried on here, and some little trade with the Netherlands, for the immediate wants of the district. Pop. m. 3107. Area of par. 4693 a. Pop. 10,005.

MARGAUX, a vil. France, dep. Gironde, 16 m. S. Bordeaux, in a rich wine district, near r. bank Garonne. It has numerous castles, white-washed villas, situated in gardens, enclosed with acacia hedges and well-trimmed vines. About 2 m. distant is Château Margaux, the celebrated second wine of the does the famous cloth of its name, so much in request in England, to which almost the whole produce, about 100 pigs, is exported. The grapes which produce it is small, and poor to the taste, with a flavour resembling that of black currants. Pop. 1084.

MARGHILAN or MARSHILAN, a town, khansate and 84 sq. W. W. Kaban is a verdant and well-watered plain. Though not surrounded by walls, it is a large and well-built place, with a considerable, a lofty watch-tower apparently of ancient date, and several mosques. The inhabitants, partly Tatars, but chiefly Uzbeks, manufacture silk goods, and carry on a considerable trade.

MARGITZA, or Ko-MARGITZA, a vil Hungary, banat of Temeswar, on the Bega Canal, between Dobrinia and Jarcovan. It has a Greek church and a trade in cattle. P. 1054.

MARGITTA, two places, Hungary.—1, (Nagy-Margitta) circle Thutur Thoma, co. Torontal, W. Temeswar with two churches. Pop. (agronautical) 1723.—2, A market in co. Bihar 35 m. E.S.E. Debracina with a four-mill. Much wine is produced in the neighbourhood. Pop. 2947.

MARGONIN, a village, prov. W. Prussia, gov. Bromberg, on a lake, 40 m. W.S.W. Bromberg. It has two churches and a synagogue and manufactures of linen and hairs. Pop. 1669.

MARGUERITE (Str.)—1, A river Lower Canada. It rises about lat. 48° 50' N. and, after a S.E. course of 86 m. joins the Saguenay, 19 m. above its outfall in the estuary of the St. Lawrence.—2, The largest of the Lerins, a group of isls. off the coast of France, dep. Var.

MARHAM two years. England.—1, (Cherry), Norfolk. 3966 sq. P. 905.—2, (Church) Cornwall 2780 sq. P. 554.

MARHIA par. Ind. Ker. 3794 ac. Pop. 650.

MARHOLM par. Eng. Northampton, 1790 ac. P. 172.

MARIA several places, Spain, particularly.—1, A m. in Andalusia, prov. and 57 m. N. by E. Almeria with a square, a church two chapels, and manufactures of glass, carpets, quilts, drugs, and chemical essences. Pop. 3500.—2, (Santa Maria de Noya) a m. in Old Castile prov. and 18 m. W. N. W. Segovia with four churches, a church, two chapels, a town-house, primary and two schools, and manufactures of linen and woollen fabrics, and wine. Pop. 1584.

—3, (Santa Maria del Puro) a vil., prov. and 90 m. S. Leon, in a plain. It has a parish church, a primary school, and a trade in linseed-oil. Pop. 1404.—4, A m., at Majorca, prov. and about 25 m. from Palma, on a tower height separated by a valley. It has a parish church, a primary school, and a trade in soap, figs, and wine. Pop. 1085.—5, (Santa) a m., lat. Majorca, 9 m. W. E. Palma, in a fertile district. It has a trade in oil, wine, tarts, and cattle. Pop. 1918.

MARIA or MOWE, or MARIA DE MOWE (SANTA) a m. and com. Tenancy near Florence, on a height above r. bank Arno. It is walled has a church, a castle in ruins, and a trade in corn, maize, wine, oil and silk. Pop. 8652.

MARIA ISLAND—1, Van Diemen's Land E. coast Richmond dist. nearest point, about 2½ m. from the mainland summit, at the N end, 8500 ft. high, lat. 42° 55' S. lon. 145° 5' E. (N.) It is about 12 m. long, with an extreme width of 7 m. A low sandy isthmus, nearly overlooked at low water, connects the mountain masses which form its extremities. The scenery of the island is romantic, the soil generally good, and of great depth in the valleys. Part of the E. coast presents lofty granite walls, rising 800 or 400 ft. perpendicularly above the sea. These are penetrated by deep caverns, into which the sea rolls with a noise resembling distant thunder. On the opposite side, the island declines gradually to the shore. On either side of the isthmus, or narrow neck of land to which the island is reduced in the middle, are two spacious bays, called, respectively, Cypher Bay and Boldie Bay. On this island, at a place called Cypher Cove the last remnant of the Tasmanian race is quartered and maintained by the colonial government. In 1848, their numbers amounted to 26; namely, 12 men, 23 women, and one male child, of pure aboriginal blood.—2, An isl. in Australia, Gulf of Carpentaria, on the W. coast has (N. pole) 14 50' S., lon. 128° 54' E. (a) about 7 m. long, and 1 m. to 4 m. broad.—3, An isl. S. Pacific Ocean, in the Low Archipelago, lat. 23° 0' S.; lon. 136° 0' W.

MARIA (Kio) a vil. Hungary co. Bihar, about 2 m. from Feteu, with a Protestant church, the ruins of an old castle, a trade in wine and cattle, a weekly market, and several small mills. Pop. 1861.

MARIA (SANTA).—1, An isl. Portugal, in the Atlantic, the west S. of the Azores, lat. 37° 8' N., and lon. 29° W.; greatest length, about 13 m.; breadth, 9 m. It has a lofty and rugged surface, composed of stony rocks, which, towards the sea, form bold precipitous cliffs. Like the other islands of the group, it has evidently been heaved up by volcanic agency, but, unlike them, it has no volcanic rocks, and nowhere exhibits the action of heat, or marks of eruption, subsequently to its formation. Beside the schists, of which the island is chiefly composed, there are every kind of limestone, which is burned into lime, and exported to the other islands, and large beds of clay which is extensively manufactured into coarse pottery, and, in like manner exported. The soil forms only a thin covering on the surface, but is rendered very fertile by irrigation, and produces much maize, wheat, and wine, though its natural resources are very imperfectly developed. Brushwood is abundant, but there are not many large trees. The pastures are stony, and feed large numbers of cattle and sheep, particularly the latter which thrive amazingly. Game and poultry are to be had everywhere at so low a price as to make living very cheap. The climate is the best in the Azores. The chief place is Porto on the S.W. side of the island near the sea. Pop. 5500.—2, An isl. S. Pacific Ocean east of Chili, prov. Conception opposite the entrance of Arcebo Bay lat. 37° 8' S. lon. 73° 54' 15' W. (N.) It is about 2 m. or 3 m. N. from Point Laysan on the mainland. It is comparatively low and dangerous, on account of numerous outlying rocks.

MARIA (SANTA) numerous places, Naples, particularly.—1, (de Capua) a m., prov. Lavoro, dist. and 5 m. W. N. W. Capua. It has a criminal and a civil court several Roman antiquities, including the remains of a large amphitheatre, a subterranean gallery and a triumphal arch across the road to Capua. Pop. 8800.—2, (de-Lavoro) prov. Otranto, dist. and 26 m. S.E. Gallipoli, near Cape Lora. It is the seat of a bishop. Pop. 8000.

MARIA-TRIN, a vil. Switzerland can. and 20 m. N. N. W. Solothurn, in a piece of ground enclosed between the Danube and the French dep. Haut-Rhin. It contains a Benedictine abbey finely seated on a height among romantic scenery and, immediately beneath it, a natural cavern that has been converted into a chapel, with an image of the Virgin, which annually attracts more pilgrims than any place in Switzerland except Einsiedeln. The church of the monastery is spacious and handsome.

MARIA (SANTA), a vil. Hungary Thutur Dentse, on Szabolc, on the high road from Csakbanya to Abad Vidovacs. It has a parish church, and some trivial trade. Pop. 1618.

MARIA-TRIKHINIMART a royal town in Hungary, co. Bacs, 25 m. S.W. Segedin. It is, properly, rather a district than a town, as it has an area of 80 sq. sq. m. It has three handsome churches and several convents manufactures of linen, woollen cloth, dye-works, and a considerable trade, particularly in horses, cattle, sheep, and wool. Pop. 40,000.

MARIA-TRIX, a market in Austria, Styria, circle and 26 m. N. Wruck, in the midst of mountains near the Balne. It is a small and unimpressive place, but has acquired great celebrity from its possession of a handsome church, with a shrine to which 80 pilgrimage processions proceed annually from different parts of the Austrian dominions. The number of pilgrims yearly has been estimated at 100,000 and the object which attracts them is a rudely-carved piece of limestone wood, painted black, and about 16 inches high, intended to represent the Virgin and Child, who are clothed in the costliest stuffs, and shrouded buried under gems and ornaments of precious value. The inhabitants have a lucrative trade in relics, rosaries, and smaller relics, supposed to have derived virtue from having been in contact with the image. P. 900.

MARIAGEE, a small is. Denmark, Jutland, ball, and 14 m. N. by W. Randers, on the S. shore of the long and narrow fiord of same name. It owed its existence to a large monastery and manory in the vicinity and, on its suppression at the Reformation, lost all its former importance. It has dwindled into insignificance, and, though possessed of a primer haven with 1½ ft. water, has scarcely any trade. Its inhabitants live chiefly by agriculture and handicraft employments. Pop. 500.

MARIAKERKE, a vil and com Belgium prov E. Flanders, on the canal of Begue, 5 m. N W Ghent. It has manufactures of linen, starch, and vinegar, a bleachfield, dye-works, distilleries, and breweries. Pop. 1095.

MARIALVA, a tn. Portugal, prov Beira-Alta, 80 m. S.E. Lamego. It is defended by a strong castle, and contains two churches, a convent, and hospital. Near it are several remarkable antiquities. Pop. 400.

MARIANNA, a tn. Brazil prov Minas-Geraes, pleasantly situated between two small streams, the Cervo and S. Antonio, 15 m. E Ouro-Freixo. It is the seat of a bishop, and is upon the whole well built; has spacious and paved principal streets, and two extensive squares, adorned with several fountains, a cathedral and seven other churches, episcopal palace, townhouse, seminary for ecclesiastics, a superior school, in which Latin, Portuguese, French, mathematics, drawing, and philosophy are taught, two primary schools, and an hospital of twenty. The trade is of very limited extent. Pop. 5500.

MARIANE ISLANDS, N Pacific. See LADRONEN.

MARIANO [anc. Marietum] a tn. and com Italy Lombardy gov Milan prov and 8 m. S.E. Como, between the Sesve and Lambro. It has a parish church, townhouse, a school, and several silk mills. Pop. 3565.

MARIANPOL, a tn. in Russian Poland volvod Augustow, 127 m. N.E. Warsaw, on bank Bzupup. It is mostly built of stone, and contains two churches and an ancient monastery. Pop. 1841, 3692.

MARIANSLEIGH, par Eng Devon 1963 see P 894.

MARIAS (Las Trazes) three isls, N Pacific Ocean, off the coast of Mexico, dep. Guadalupe, 240 m. E.S.E. Cape Lazo, and about 70 m. N N W Cape Corrientes lat (S. cape of the central or largest island) 21° 10' N, lon 108° 10' W. They abound with wood, water, salt-petre, and game, and were formerly much frequented by English and American whalers. They were called the Islands de la Magdalena by Diego de Mendana, in 1595.

MARIASCHETZ a vil Bohemia, circle and 16 m. N N W Leitmeritz remarkable for its church built by the Jesuits in 1708 and containing an image which annually attracts thousands of pilgrims.

MARIBO, a tn. Denmark, near the centre of lal Lolland between two lakes, one of which is called the Maribo-See, and once had a strong castle on one of the numerous wooded islets. Maribo owes its existence to a monastery erected, in 1417, by Erik of Pommern. His castle here serves as a landing place for Bagholm, which is about 4 m. distant, and communicates with the port by a good road. Pop. 1400.

MARICA, a tn. Brazil prov and 30 m. E. Rio-de-Janeiro, on a lake of same name, about 8 m. from the sea. It is the headquarters of a body of national guards, and seat of an electoral college; has a townhouse, with prison, a parish church, and a considerable trade in madder, flour, rice, and millet, almost all conveyed on mules to Rio-de-Janeiro. Some sugar and rum, also, are exported, at a small harbour in a chain of lakes communicating with the sea, and accessible to sloops. Pop. of dist., 6000.

MARIE-AUX-MINES (Str.) a tn. France dep. Haut-Rhin, 20 m. N W Colmar on the Lapprette, at the foot of a mountain of its name, across which is one of the highest passes of the Vosges. It extends above 1 m. in length, between two mountains, on both sides of the river is tolerably well built, and possesses a Calvinistic consistorial church, a consulting chamber of commerce, and several dep. houses. It is the chief seat of the manufacture of coloured tannins including, among other articles, cotton hosiery, cotton and woollen cloth, carpets of all sorts, ginghams, &c. It has also worked, cotton, felling, and paper mills; tanneries, and dye-works. Its trade is in cherry hued, paper coloured cottons, cotton-twist, and the numerous articles of its manufacture. In its neighbourhood, argilliferous lead was long worked to a great extent. Only a single mine is now in operation. Pop. 7724.

MARIE-GALLIERE a French W India isl, 14 m. S.E. Grandterre, lat (E. point) 15° 53' N, lon. 61° 24' W (w. point) 13 m. long, and 8 m. broad, area, 60 sq. m. returned N. to by a range of hills, parallel to the E. coast, where it presents a tract of high and precipitous rocks. The W and N. sides of the island are level, and parallel with the former is a narrow bay, 7 or 8 m. in length, separated from the sea by a low, narrow tract of sand. Its produce consists of coffee, cotton, a little sugar, rum, and starch; it abounds in wood, particularly the wild cinnamon-tree. Its principal town, Grand Bourg or Banquette, stands near the S.W. point, where a fortress is built. Pop. (1849) 12,740.

MARIE (Str.)—1. A tn. and par N.E. coast lat Martinique about 18 m. N Fort-Royal. It has an unhealthy site, but a fertile and well-cultivated district, in which a good deal of sugar is produced, and shipped at a landing-place with good anchorage. Pop. about 4500.—2. An isl. E. coast Madagascar called by the natives Nosy-Francoise lat. 10° 48' S, and lon 50° E. It is separated from Madagascar by a channel about 9 m. wide. The French have an establishment upon it.

MARIEFRED a tn. Sweden, lin Nykoping, on a bay, S. side of Lake Mälar, 30 m. W S.W. Stockholm. It is built almost entirely of wood but with great regularity and has a church and a townhouse. In the vicinity on a tongue of land formed by the junction of two islands of the lake, is the beautiful and interesting castle of Gripsholm. Pop. 560.

MARIENBAD, a watering place, Bohemia, circle Pilsen in a kind of triangular basin formed by several mountain-ranges, about 24 m. from Carlsbad. It is of comparatively recent origin, and has been cut out of the great Bohemian forest since 1810. The village consists of about 50 or 60 buildings, chiefly lodging-houses, built like a crescent, on a slope in the middle of the wood. The Kneissl (Well house) is a magnificent establishment, and is one of all the usual appliances of assembly-room, theatre, &c. The springs are of two kinds—the Kneisslbrunn, which contains sulphate and soda, and the Ferdinand's-brunn, which contains less salt, but much more carbonic acid. They are used in the form both of mod vapour, and gas baths the latter derived from a past-bag which emits enormous quantities of carbonic acid gas. A peculiar apparatus the whole person of the patient, or only the peculiar part affected, can be exposed to the gas, and it is said, with very beneficial effect. Great quantities of the water from both kinds of springs are exported.

MARIENBERG a tn. Saxony circle Zwicken, 88 m. S.W. Dresden. It contains a church, an orphan, and a women's hospital and has a manufactory of steam-engines, and several saw mills, and flour mills. Most of the inhabitants find employment connected with the important mining operations which are carried on in the neighbourhood. Pop. 4447.

MARIENBOURG, or MARIENBURG, a tn. Belgium, prov and 80 m. S.W. Namur connected by railway with Charleroi. It is regularly fortified, being surrounded by a wide fosse and walls, with only one gate and containing seven streets, which radiate regularly from the Place d'Armes. It was built, in 1542 by Mary Queen of Hungary and sister of Charles V. Its fortifications were demolished by Louis XIV. but restored in 1818. It has a church and, a short distance beyond the walls, a very ancient chapel of Notre Dame, which annually attracts great numbers of pilgrims. Pop. 662.

MARIENBURG—1. A tn. Prussia, gov and 27 m. S.E. Danzig, on the Nogat, over which there is here a bridge of boats, about 580 ft. long. It was one of the seats of the knights of the Teutonic order from whence the Prussian monarchy may be said to have sprung, and contains the castle or palace of the grand masters, an imposing edifice in a peculiar style of Gothic, with a splendid apartment called the chapter-house, and a remarkably chaste church. Besides it, there are three other churches, one Protestant and two R. Catholic, a deaf and dumb institution, a superior town-school, a normal school, and porcheuse. The manufactures consist of woollen, linen, and cotton cloth, hosiery, hats, &c. The trade is in corn and wood. Pop. (1846) 6961.—The castle consists, for the most part, of a low flat, not remarkable for its facility. Area, 243 geo. sq. m. Pop. 63,657.—2. A vil. Brazil, gov Livonia. W above lake of same name, 60 m. S.W. Pskov. It has a church, and fine manor-house, and produces in its vicinity the best flax of the government.—The lake is about 8 m. long, by 5 m. broad, and has very picturesque scenery.—3. A market tn. Transylvania, dist. and 12 m. N Krasnod, on a mountainous ridge, above the Adria. It has one spacious municipal street, a large townhouse, and a dilapidated castle. Pop. about 3500.

MARIENWERDER, a gov W Prussia, bounded N. by Pomerania and gov Danzig W Pomerania and Brandenburg, S. Poland and gov Bremen, and E. East Prussia.

area, 5110 sq. m. The surface is continually broken by low hills, but except for the coast part, of an extensive flat, traversed N to S, by the Vistula, and drained either by it or its affluents. It contains a great number of lakes, several of which, as the Kulmsa, Kowalew or Schloßsee, Scharzhause, and Great Böttensee, cover a large area. A considerable part of the surface is also occupied by forests. Much of the arable land is only of indifferent fertility, and is not very carefully cultivated, but several rich alluvial tracts occur, chiefly along the banks of the streams, and also all kinds of grain, beyond the wants of the inhabitants. The meadows and pastures, also, are excellent, and rear vast numbers of horses, horned cattle, sheep, and swine. The minerals are of no consequence, and neither trade nor manufactures have made much progress. The government is divided into 13 circles—Kalis, Flatau, Grandden, Konitz, Löbau, Marienwerder, Rosenberg, Seheleschen, Schwetitz, Strassburg, Stahm, and Thorn. Pop. (1849) 631,046.

MARIENWEEDER, a town, Prussia, cap above gov. on a gentle eminence on the Moritz, about 2 m. E. of the Vistula, 43 m. S.E. Danzig. It is well built, has four suburbs, and contains an old castle, partly used as a prison, and partly occupied by the courts of justice and other local courts, a handsome cathedral or town church of early date, with a tower 170 ft. high, some finely-painted glass, and several ancient tombs, particularly of the Teutonic knights, a gymnasium, two asylums, one for soldiers who have lost their sight, and another for their widows and children, a house of refuge for destitute children, and an hospital. The manufactures consist of woollen and linen cloth, leather hats, beer, bradley and liquors. There are also several mills, and four yearly markets. Marienwerder is the seat of several courts, particularly one whose jurisdiction extends over the whole of W. Prussia. Pop. (1846) 6222.

MARIESTAD a town, Sweden, cap. Lin, at the mouth of the Tide, in a small bay in the S.E. shore of Lake Weser 157 m. W.S.W. Stockholm. It is the residence of a governor and seat of several public offices. It is built chiefly of wood arranged in spacious and regular streets, contains a beautiful and finely situated church, court-house, and other public buildings on an island formed by the mouth of the Tide, and connected with the town by a bridge; a prison and post-house and has a trade in corn. Mariestad was once the see of a bishop, and in the vicinity forming a conspicuous object from the lake, are the extensive and picturesque ruins of the bishop's castle. Pop. 2500.

MARIESTAD, a town, also called SKARABORG, lies chiefly between lakes Western and Western, and forms part of W. Gothland. It is well watered, and drained chiefly by Lake Western, is generally flat, though possessing some elevations, chiefly on the banks of the lakes, and rising, in some cases, 2000 ft. above them. There are some marshes. Wood is abundant. The soil is partly sandy, and partly argillaceous-calcareous, and generally fertile. Lin is the chief crop. There are rich iron and alum mines, quarries of building-stone, and beds of potter's clay, and it contains the two most important glass-works in Sweden, Bohus, and Arvika. It is divided into 14 districts. Pop. (1849), 178,897.

MARIETTA, a town, U. States, Ohio, on both sides of the Muskingum, at its junction with the Ohio, 90 m. E.S.E. Columbus. It is regularly laid out in wide streets, and compactly and neatly built. It has a courthouse, jail, four churches, a bank, market-house, literary female academy, lyceum, and a college, founded in 1833. It is the oldest town in the state, having been founded in 1788. Pop. 1800.

MARIGLIANO a town, and com. Naples, prov. Salerno, 17 m. E.N.E. Naples. It is regularly built, has three handsome churches, and an annual fair. Pop. 7214.

MARIGNANE (Latin, Martine Colonia Anthonensis), a town, France, dep. Bouches-du-Rhône, 16 m. S.S.W. Aix, on a lagoon of its name. It is tolerably well built, has straight but narrow streets, an old castle, which is disappearing process, and some trade in wine. Pop. 1809.

MARIGNANO see MARIGNANO.

MARIGNIER, a village, and com. France, dep. Haut Savoie, prov. Faucigny, E. Besançon, on bank Arve, with a modern church and a trade in corn, fruit, and excellent wine, the produce of the district. Pop. 1800.

MARIGOT—1 A bay and town, French W. Indies, on coast of Martinique. There is good anchorage in the bay in 4 to 7 fathoms sandy ground. The town is protected by a fort, which stands on the E. side of it.—2 A bay, W. India, Isl. St. Lucia, W. coast.—3 A town, Guadeloupe, and another, Martin-Gallante. See CAPITANES.

MARIGUANA, one of the most of the Bahama lake, having Cayce Passage on the S.E., and Mariguana Passage on the N.W. It is about 26 m. in length and 3 m. to 5 m. in breadth. Lat. 23° 23' N.; lon. 72° 55' W. (a).

MARIN—1, A town, French W. Indies, on Martinique, S.W. coast, with a good harbor. Pop. 2907.—2, A small town, and port, Spain, Galicia, prov. and 4 m. S.W. Pontevedra; with a church, townhouse, prison two schools, and several large storehouses for curing sardines, and salting other fish. Pop. 1899.

MARINDUQUE one of the Philippine islands, between the S. portion of Luzon and the island of Mindoro, lat. (S point) 13° 7' N. lon. 122° 7' E. (a.) about 60 m. in circumference. It is fertile and is cultivated.

MARINELLA a small seaport, Sicily, prov. Girgenti, near the mouth of the Belled 14 m. E.S.E. Mazzara. A colony of anchorages and sardines is carried on at it, but its chief claim to notice is its site near that of the ancient Selinuntum, and its ruins, consisting of the stupendous remains of three Doric temples, the largest of which covered an area of 884 ft. long, by 54 ft. broad, and has still some columns standing, the lower diameter of which is 104 ft.

MARINER, a town, Sicily, prov. and 13 m. S.E. Palermo. Pop. 6500.

MARINQUE (Latin, Moneynque), a town, France, dep. Puy-de-Dôme, at the confluence of the Morge with the Allier 15 m. N.E. Clermont. It is a small but well built handsome town, and contains numerous churches, and manufactures of champagne leather. Pop. 3269.

MARINHA (GARDIA) a vil. and par. Portugal, prov. Estremadura, com. and 8 m. from Leiria, in a sandy and also marshy district. It has very extensive glass-works. P. 1850.

MARINELLI, a town, New Granada, prov. and 50 m. S.E. Antioquia, lat. 5° 41' N. or a plateau 5705 ft. above the sea-level. Pop. 4915.

MARINO (anc. Novellus) a town, Papal States, com. and 18 m. S.E. Rome, a little N. of Lake Albano. It is a large place, with a castle. Pop. about 5000.

MARINO (San) a town, and small republic, Italy. The republic consists of a rugged tract; area about 17 sq. m., of a nearly circular form, and enclosed on all sides by the Papal States, 17 m. N.W. Urbino. It is the last surviving representative of the Italian republics, and, not so much by following as by lagging behind the improvements of the times, has preserved its independence for 14 centuries. It has no printing press, money is common, and still lately, the gambling-table furnished part of its revenue. By its constitution, which is unwritten, the legislative consists of a general council of 60 elected by the people, and the executive of two consuls elected every six months, and superintended by 12 members of the general council, of which members two-thirds are changed every year. The judicial office is confined only to a stranger who must be a doctor of laws, and holds office for not longer than three years. The army numbers about 40 men. The republic possesses, in the three castles, four convents, and five churches.—The town, San Marino, occupies the crest of a rocky mountain, but the principal inhabitants reside in the hamlet of Borgo, at its foot, where shelter is obtained from the cold winds which blow over San Marino, and often keep it covered with snow when the low grounds are enjoying a comparatively summate temperature. The principal object of interest in San Marino is a superb cabinet of medals amounting to upwards of 40,000. The independence of the republic has been repeatedly threatened, at one time by the dangerous vicinity of the Malatesta of Rimini, at another by the intrigues of churchmen, and at another by Napoleon, who had issued a decree for its suppression, but was induced to rescind it, mainly by the magnanimous efforts of Antonio Onofri. The same patriot afterwards nobly pleaded his cause, and obtained its formal recognition by the Congress of Vienna. A marble bust in the council chamber, and an inscription on its tomb gratefully record his services, and justly award him the title of "Father of his country." Pop. in, including Borgo, 1800; of republic, about 7000.

MARIPOCA a vil and par Brazil, prov and 35 m W N W Rio-de-Janeiro, on a small river of same name. It has a parish church and some trade in sugar, rum, millet, rice, coffee, and cotton. Pop 1800

MARIPÉ, a small tn, Brazilian Guiana, bank Hanyara, about 40 m. from the Amazon. It has a parish church, and is inhabited chiefly by Indians, who subsist chiefly by hunting and fishing. Europeans who take up their residence here are very subject to intermittent fevers.

MARIQUITA, a tn. New Granada, dep. Cundinamarca, cap. prov same name, on the Magdalena, 10 m W Honda, lat. 5° 16' N lon 76° W Formerly celebrated for its gold and silver mines now long abandoned

MARITIMO [see Hera or Maritima], an iso off N W coast Sicily forming the most W. of the Etna, lat. 38° N lon. 12° 5' E. Its length is about 4 m., breadth about 3 m. It is mountainous and barren. At its N E extremity is a castle, seated on a steep rock.

MARITZA a considerable river, Turkey in Europe, prov Rumelia, formed by the junction of two principal head streams which flow from the S slopes of the Balkan mountains, from sources about 40 m. apart. The junction of the streams takes place near Euphrat, about lat. 42° 10' N, from which point the river flows S. E. to Adrianople, where it bends to the S. W. and following this course, with pretty numerous windings, falls into the Ægean Sea, about lat 40° 50' N. Its whole course, from the junction of the head streams to its mouth, is about 160 m. Its principal tributaries are the Tondja, which joins it a little below Adrianople the Ertzene Kizil, and Ipsala, all flowing from the N E. and the Tundja Arda, and Tchernia from the S W, besides numerous smaller streams. The Maritza thus forms the great central channel by which the central provinces are drained.

MARJULF, a tn and seaport, Russia, gov and 150 m. S. E. Kizarskopol, on N W shore of the Sea of Azof at the mouth of the Kalymus. It contains two stone churches and has a good market. The inhabitants, almost all Greeks, whom the Empress Catherine II transported, very much against their will, from the Crimea, carry on a considerable trade, for which their position gives them great facilities. Pop (1851) 4698

MARLE, par Eng Somerset, 4804 sq. m. Pop. 1245
MARLE (Dn) a river, Holland, rises in Belgium prov Antwerp, flows N into N Brabant, past Brda, turns W assumes the name of Dintel, and enters the Velle Rik after a course of about 40 m. in which it receives several affluents. It is navigated and navigable to a considerable extent.

MARKEH, a tn., E. Africa. See MARAKHET

MARKEY par Eng. Lincoln 692 sq. m. Pop. 115

MARKEIDORF a tn. Baden, Lake circle, 6 m E N E. Comstance. It is walled, has three gates two suburbs, three churches, a castle, a schoolhouse, and an hospital. P 1476

MARKELO, a vil. Holland, prov Overijssel 15 m E. Deventer, with a church and school. Pop (agricultural) 798

MARKET BOSWORTH See BOSWORTH MARKET

MARKET DRATTON See DRATTON (MARKET)

MARKET HARBOROUGH See HARBOROUGH

MARKET OVERTON See OVERTON (MARKET)

MARKET RABEN See RABEN (MARKET)

MARKETHILL, a market tn. Ireland, co. and 6 m S. E. Armagh with a prison, Presbyterian and Wesleyan meeting-house, and 2nd ed. Pop 1899

MARKFIELD par Eng. Leicester 2534 sq. m. P 1261

MARCKGRÜNDEN a tn. Württemberg circle Neckar on the Glens, about 5 m W N W Ludwigsburg, with a Gothic church, grammar-school, hospital, workhouse and several paper-mills. Pop 2759

MARKEH two parns England Notis —, (East), 2820 sq. m. Pop. 266—3 (West) 940 sq. m. Pop 186.

MARKEING a vil and par Scotland, co. Fife. The VIKAR, 7 m N Kirkcaldy a station on the Edinburgh and Northern railway, contains the parish church an ancient edifice, with a lofty tower and spire, a Free and U. Presbyterian church, and two schools. Linn weaving is the principal occupation. Near it are mills for paper, corn, and fax, a woollen manufactory and bleachfield, and coal is abundant. Area of par., 20 800 sq. m. Pop 3848

MARKEISIA a tn. Prussia, prov Silesia, gov and 51 m W S W Liegnitz, on the Quist; with a church, townhouse, hospital, two cotton factories, a pottery, and several mills. Pop 1731

MARKEURICHEN a tn. Saxony, circle and 28 to S S W Zwickau, with an hospital, manufactory of cotton and linen cloth, violins, and wind instruments, and numerous mills. Pop 1849 5094.

MARKEUR, a vil. Hesse-Cassel, prov and near Hassen, on the Korbelsbach; with a parish church, and three mills. Pop 1280.

MAROLDENDORF, a vil. Hanover diet. Hildesheim, on the Ilm, which separates it from the village of Oldendorf, 21 m. N N W Göttingen. It has several bleachfields, and carries on a considerable trade in linen and yarn. Pop 1124.

MAROVCEZ, a vil. Hungary, Thibster Thebes, co. Tamasar, in a fertile district 3 m. from Kudzies; with a church, and a trade in corn. Pop 1477

MARKESTADT a vil. Saxony circle and 6 m W S W Leipzig. It has an hospital, manufactory of hats, and several mills. Pop 1150

MARKE (Sr) par Irsl Dublin 300 sq. m. Pop 21 149

MARKE (Sr) a tn. U. States, Florida, on a river of same name, 20 m S. Tallahassee, of which it is the port, and with which it is connected by a railroad. It promises to be a place of importance, but the navigation to it is very crooked, and encumbered by bars. The depth of water to the town is 6 ft.

MARKEBURG par Eng Somerset 1277 sq. m. P 810.

MARKEHALL, two parns. England —, Essex; 804 sq. m.

Pop 40 — 2 Northk 2280 sq. m. Pop 18.

MARKESTET a tn. Bavaria circle Upper Franconia, cap. dist., on the Main, 66 m W N W Nürnberg, with a Protestant church, synagogue and poorhouse, manufactory of potash and tobacco, a bleachfield, and a considerable trade in corn and wine. Pop 1310 — The district has an area of 40 sq. m. m. Pop 7148

MARKEHALL, a tn. Saxony-Wesmar circle and 8 m W S W Eusebach on the Suhl with a castle, a parish church and two flour-mills. Pop 1073

MARKEHREIT a tn. Bavaria, circle Lower Franconia, at the junction of the Brunnbach with the Main 45 m. W N W Nürnberg. It has a Protestant and E. Catholic church a castle, and educational establishment, a bleachfield several galleries, comb-haireries, and mills, and a considerable general and retail trade. Pop 1990

MARLAND PETERS par Eng Devon 3937 sq. m. P 492

MARLBOROUGH, a parl. and mun bor. England, co. Wilts, 71 m W by R. London, 1 bank Kennet. It consists principally of one fine wide street, paved and lighted with gas, and having a piazza running along its N side. The houses are irregular, but, for the most part large and well built. The more modern are of brick or stone, but the older are constructed of wood with curiously ornamented fronts. The market-house is an ancient building, over which is the town hall. There are two parish churches, chapels for Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, a free grammar-school, national school and a college for the education of the sons of the clergy and others, opened in 1848, with exceedingly handsome buildings. A considerable trade is carried on in brewing, malting, rope and seeking manufacturing, and woolstapling. A good business is likewise done in corn, coal, and bacon, and large quantities of butter and cheese are sent every week to London. It sends two members to Parliament. Registered electors (1853) 271. Pop 5185

MARLETON par Eng Devon 3277 sq. m. Pop 614

MARLE (Lain Marne) a tn. France, dep. Aisne, 15 m N N E. Leon with some trade in woollen hosiery, and linen cloth. Pop 1884.

MARLESFORD par Eng Suffolk 1277 sq. m. P 428.

MARLESTOWN par Irsl Louth, 759 sq. m. Pop 142

MARFIELD or AMER a vil. Ireland, co. Tipperary,

2 m W S W Glennel having an extensive distillery. P 268.

MARLINGSFORD par Eng Norfolk 874 sq. m. P 325.

MARLOD S. par Wales, Pembrok. 5478 sq. m. P 508.

MARLOW a tn. Marklenburg-Schwerin, circle Wustow, on the side of a hill, above the Recknitz, 15 m. E N E. Rostock with a church, a distillery, and two mills. P 1891

MARLOW (GREAT AND LITTLE) — 1, (Great), a parl. bor. and par. England, co. Buckingham. The town is beautifully situated on 1. bank Thames, here crossed by a handsome suspension-bridge, 50 m. W by N. London. It contains of two principal and three smaller streams. The market-house is a spacious building. The church is also a fine stone structure, with a lofty and elegant spire. There are four chapels—one each for Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and R. Catholics, the latter a very handsome edifice. A free grammar-school, and a number of charities, including a set of almshouses, two large paper-mills, and two breweries; and rope-making and the manufacture of haly-linen, caps, lace, and covered wire, are pretty extensively carried on. There is also a considerable trade in corn, malt, coal and timber. It sends two members to Parliament. Registered electors (1881) 864. Area of par., 6162 sq. Pop. of bor. 4495.—2 (Lanc.) A par., about 18 m N.E. Great Marlow Area, 1846 ac Pop. 694.

MARMANDE (Latin, Marmanda), a dt. France, dep. Lot-et-Garonne, 31 m. N.W. Agen. It crowns a plateau, which rises rapidly from the banks of the Garonne, here crossed by a handsome bridge of a single arch, and as a pleasing, well-kept town, with somewhat of a venerable aspect, many of its houses being timber-framed. It has several tolerable squares, a townhouse, numerous colleges, and hospital. Several handsome fountains. Manufacture of hats, woolen stuffs, hosiery, leather, and cordage; a commodious and much-frequented harbour and a trade in grain, flour, wine, brandy, dried prunes, tobacco, hemp, &c. Pop. 6199.

MARMARA (Sea of) Turkey. See MARMORA. MARMARON, a co. Hungary, circle Tathier. Thence bounded, N.E. and E. by Galizia and Bakowina, S. Transylvania, W. by Szekess and W. by Ugoce and Berogh. greatest length, S.E. to N.W. 90 m. greatest breadth, 45 m. area, 2984 sq. m. It is very mountainous, being traversed in all directions by branches of the Carpathians. The principal river is the Theiss which takes its rise in this co. in two streams, called the Black and White Theiss, flows through it, and receives numerous affluents within it. There is very little arable land and the corn raised falls far short of the consumption. The hills are, in general, well wooded. Among the minerals are silver iron, and precious stones, particularly those called Hungarian diamonds but the most valuable mineral product is rock-salt, which is found in extensive beds in several districts and is annually worked to the extent of more than 25,000 tons. The great majority of the inhabitants are Rumanians, and next in number are Wallachians. Hungarians live in five localities, and Germans only in one. The county is divided into five districts, of which Szeged is the capital. Pop. 170,000.

MARMING () a vil and com. Italy Lombardy gov. Milan prov and 5 m. N.W. Mantua, on the high road between Mantua and Brescia, near the Mincio. It has a church, a copper mill and the ruins of a magnificent palace erected here, in 1480 by Frederick Gonzaga. Pop. 3310.

MARMOLÉJO a to Spain Andalusia prov and 22 m. N.W. Jaen. It is well paved, has two squares, a parish church, two chapels, a townhouse, prison hospital, orphan asylum, two schools, and the remains of an ancient castle. Near it are much esteemed mineral waters. Pop. 2020.

MARMORA (LA) a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, div. and about 22 m. from Coni with a church some manufactures of coarse woollens and a trade in cattle and dairy produce. Pop. 1187.

MARMORA, or MARMARA, (SEA OF) (anc. Propontis), an inland sea, lying between European and Asiatic Turkey or between A.E. Europe and the most W. part of Asia, communicating with the Mediterranean by the narrow Strait called the Dardanelles, and with the Black Sea by the Bosphorus. Length from Gallipoli to the head of the Gulf of Ismid, 177 m.; greatest breadth, which is near the centre, or about 10 m. 38° 10' E. rather more than 50 m. With exception of the Gulfs of Ismid and Moudania, both on the Asiatic side, it has no very marked indentations. It has several islands, of which the largest is Marmora, situated towards its W. end, whence the sea derives its name, three or four other islands lie in its vicinity, and at the E. end on the Asiatic coast, and not far from Constantinople, is a group called the Princes Islands.—The Island of Marmora is 11 m. in length, and 5½ m. in breadth, and called by the Turks

Marmar Adası; it is moderately high, with a range of mountains running along it, which, when coming from the W., has the appearance of two high hills. The S.W. extremity of the island is in lat. 40° 30' N.; lon. 27° 30' E. (s.)

MARMORICE, or MARASANA, a to, and bay, Asiatic Turkey, near Andalus. S.W. coast, N. of the island of Rhodes; lat. (middle) 38° 51' 5" N.; lon. 28° 19' E. (s.) The town is very picturesquely situated at the head of the vast bay near the site of the ancient Phrygia, vestiges of whose port still exist. It is irregularly built. Its houses mass and separated by narrow streets. In the highest part are the ruins of a modern castle, and behind it is a mosque. It has some export trade in timber, honey, turpentine, wax, isobars, &c. The harbour or bay is extensive and magnificent, though the entrance is remarkably narrow. It was used as a place of refreshment by the British fleet in conveying the expedition to Egypt.—CAPE MARMORICE, at the mouth of the bay is in lat. 36° 43' 54" N. lon. 28° 20' 45" E. (s.)

MARMORICE.—From a sketch by Louis, Anon. R.S.

MARMOUTIER, or MAURMONTIER, (Latin Mauri Monasterium) a to, France, dep. Bas-Rhin, 17 m. W.N.W. Strasbourg. It owes its name to an abbey founded in the sixth century and richly endowed by Chlodwig II. The church, whose facade is said to be of the ninth century, is a handsome and curious structure, finely proportioned and adorned in the interior with grotesque figures. Marmoutier has breweries, bleachfields, tile-works, and potteries, and some trade in cattle. Pop. 2480.

MARMULLANE par. Ireland, Cork; 529 m. P. 2218. MARNE, a vil Denmark, duchy Holsten, 8 Dittmarsh, near R. bank Elbe. It has a small harbour with 6 ft. water, a considerable trade, important general and cattle markets, and a bathing establishment. Pop. 1300.

MARNE, an island dep. France, bounded N. by dep. Ardennes N.W. Alsace, S.W. Seine-et-Marne, S. Aube, S.E. Haute-Marne, and E. Meuse. lat. 48° 50' to 49° 24' N. lon. 3° 30' to 5° E.; greatest length, 67 m. greatest breadth, 60 m. area, 3116 sq. m. It forms a kind of plateau, in some parts attaining a height of nearly 1200 ft., but only by a long and gradual ascent, and is composed almost throughout of a subsoil of chalk, with a thin covering of earth, which is by no means fertile. The whole department belongs to the basin of the Seine, the greater part of the surface being drained by the Marne, which traverses it obliquely but almost centrally S.E. to N.W. In the S.W. it is traversed, for a short distance, by the Aube, and, after its confluence, by the Seine. The Aube entering it from dep. Meuse, flows N. near its E. frontier; and the Seine and Vela, which have their sources within it, traverse it towards the N.W. It contains a considerable number of small lakes, which are well supplied with fish. The only district which can be considered unhealthy is in the W., where stagnant pools and marshes still prevail, notwithstanding many efforts which have been made to drain them. Though the soil as has been said is by no means fertile, about three-fourths of the whole area admits of some kind of culture by the plough, and only one-fifth is wholly waste. Nearly one-fourth is wood. The principal crops are wheat, maiz, barley, rye, and oats, particularly the last two, which more than supply the consumption. Potatoes, coleworts, and onions, are on the W coast, is at Cape Agadir, or rather Agid, lat. 30° 37' 30" N. Adjoining the central chain are several tablelands of great extent, consisting of irregular plains and, at a little distance from it, M., extends the maritime chain now called El-Rif, and formerly the Atlas Minor, its general height is from 2500 ft. to 3500 ft. Of the interior chains which run parallel with the Atlas in the desert, in the E.E., there is little known, but there is no ground for supposing that they stand on a common base.

Rivers.—The height of these mountains, and the general uniformity of their slope on both sides, procure for Morocco the distinction of having the largest rivers of all N. Africa. Of these, the rivers flowing from the N side of the Atlas have the shorter course, but are well supplied with water; those running S. whether directly into the sea, or into the sands of the desert, extend much farther but are dry in summer. The Mulaisa or Mulola, rising in a principal knot of the Atlas, nearly in lat. 32° 30' N., flows N.E. to the Mediterranean, with a course of 550 m. This river in the lower part of its course, formed anciently (when it was called Mulaisa or Mulucha) the E. boundary of Mauritania Tingitana. In all the revolutions which the political divisions of the country have since undergone it has been constantly selected as a boundary (owing, doubtless, to its vicinity to the desert of Agades) and now its valley forms, in the maritime district, the boundary between Morocco and Algeria, as settled by treaty in 1845. The boundary-line leaves the coast at lat. 31° 17' W., 8 m. E. of the mouth of the river. The Sebou descends from Mount Sidiou W. to the Atlantic in a course of 500 m. The rapidity of its course, and the sandbanks at its mouth, seem to indicate that it can never be rendered navigable. The Oum-el-Retch (mother of verdure), which enters the sea at Azamor lat. 33° 17' N., has a course of about 190 m. During spring, and early in summer it cannot, in general, be forded with safety. The Tensift, which passes near the city of Morocco has a length of about 180 m. It is a large and full river yet forlorn in many places. Near its capital, it is crossed by a bridge of 37 arches, which may be reckoned among the handsomest structures in Africa.

Of the rivers which run into the desert, the most E. the Guirassa to have a course S.E. E. occasionally traversable for 300 or 400 m. The Ziz, which, with its numerous affluents, waters a very fertile and populous country is wholly spent before it attains half that length. The Daras, which rises in the central and most elevated portion of the range of Atlas (lat. 31° to 32° N., first runs S. for nearly 200 m., forms a lake, and then, turning W., enters the ocean in lat. 29° 18' N., after a course of 700 m. the lower portion of its bed, however, is peculiarly quite dry.

The lake Ed-Dahla, formed by the floods of the Daras, is reported to be very large, having perhaps three times the surface of Lake Geneva, but it disappears annually, and gives way to richly cultivated fields. Shallow or shallow pools, which the hot season converts into salt-pans, are numerous along the coast. The fresh-water lake of Jebel el Akhdar (green mount) which lies about 80 m. N. of Morocco, is compared, by Leo Africanus, to Lake Bolsena in Tuscany.

The coast, here generally low and little broken, offers few good harbours of those, Tangier and Mogador or Swira, are the best, the rest, as El-Arzieh, Sio or Salao, and Rabat, Melchella, Azamor &c., are but open roadsteads at the mouths of rivers.

Geology.—Embracing the geology of this remarkable region, there is scarcely anything known. Though the summits of Atlas often rise into peaks, they never exhibit needles or jagged outlines, with acute angles, their conical is characterized rather by rounded heights clothed with luxuriant forests than by rugged and precipitous forms. It is vaguely stated that granite is the prevalent rock in the main chain of Atlas, and that on its west transition limestone and sandstone. The soil, washed down in abundance from the hills, bears no trace of volcanic substance. A broad tract of lowland, along the shores of the Atlantic, consists wholly of sand and gravel, and appears to have been formed by the sea.

Mines.—Of the mineral treasures said to be contained in Atlas, the richest and best known are the copper ones, which are found chiefly in the S. continuation of Atlas, between the rivers Sebou and Tensift. The mines are wrought most safely near Tola and Giza, and the produce is brought for sale to the market of Toudant. There are reports, also, of iron mines in the interior and of lead found in the vicinity of Timana. The khel or ore of antimony, used by Moorish talismans for darkening the eyebrows, is obtained from Toulia. Amethysts of great size and beauty have been found in the recesses of Atlas.

Climate.—The climate, W. of Atlas, is in general much more temperate than might be expected from such low latitudes. This is due to the circumstance that a lofty chain of mountains, covered in some parts with perpetual snow, intercepts the hot winds from the deserts of the interior so that the equable and refreshing sea-breezes prevail throughout the year. Hence the extremes of temperature lie within moderate limits: the thermometer in the plains, rarely falling below 40° Fah. in the winter; while, even in Toudant, the chief town of Sda, it does not rise above 95 in summer. The mean annual temperature of the city of Morocco, at an absolute elevation of 1554 ft. is about 65°, which may be assumed, with probability as the mean of the whole country W. of Atlas. In the region E. of the mountains, the difference between the extreme temperatures increases rapidly with the distance from the sea, and intense cold, often assumed erroneously as a proof of great elevation is felt in winter, while, in summer, the heat of the plains is insupportable. In respect of salubrity, Morocco is highly favoured, being quite free from endemic diseases, notwithstanding the filth of the towns, and the general neglect of sanitary precautions.

Fertile Productions.—With a genial climate and generally fertile soil, Morocco might easily become, under an enlightened government, one of the most productive countries in the world. Of its Flora there is as yet but little known. The forests of El-Rif contain, among other species of oak, that which bears edible acorns, and also that which yields cork. In the higher regions of Atlas are found the Aleppo pine, the cedar of Lebanon, many varieties of cypresses and of Juniper yielding fragrant gums. The Phœnix dactylifera or date-palm, and the Chamaerops humilis or dwarf-palm, form extensive woods E. and S. of Atlas. In the maritime region grows the Elaeagnus argentea, from the olive-like fruit of which is extracted an excellent oil called arpis, consumed in large quantities in the country though little known in Europe. It is said that the sugar-cane was formerly cultivated with success throughout the W. part of Morocco. Among the wild plants of the S. provinces, may be mentioned the caper and avel, the latter of which, in particular, supplies an important article of commerce.

Cultivation.—Notwithstanding these favourable circumstances, the agriculture of Morocco is in the lowest possible condition. The soil is but rarely scratched with a wooden plough, neither summer nor capital and the labours of the husbandman, and the annual production is calculated barely to supply the wants of the country. Hence, when any failure of the harvest takes place, the most dreadful famines afflict a land naturally capable of marvellous abundance. Yet, in Morocco, the cultivator of the soil is also its proprietor, and the taxes in which he is legally assessed do not exceed a fortieth part of the produce. But, on the other hand, right of property and law are of no avail until a barbarous despotism, and a system of administration which is no better than organized pillage and oppression, besides, a blighted and short-sighted policy discourages a free trade with, and exportation of articles of food to, the Christian states of Europe. The cultivator therefore, never thinks of great gains nor of distant markets sure of being despoiled by those above him, he takes no pains to improve his condition, and labours only to supply the indispensable wants of one doomed to poverty. The cereal crops are wheat, which is excellent; barley, of inferior quality, and chiefly given to the cattle, and vetches, which is said to be extraordinary in quality on the S. side of Atlas. But durrah or millet (Sorghum vulgare) constitutes the chief support of the population, though beans, the excellent arum, and even barley-seed, are consumed in large quantities by the poorer classes. The vine is cultivated only near the towns, not, however for the making of wine, but merely for the sake of the fresh grapes and raisins. All the fruits of S. Europe, and the Canary Islands, are to be found here, rarely exquisite, but in sufficient abundance. Among the medicinal and medicinal productions must be mentioned saffron, carthamus, pimento, arisa-seed, camomil, coriander, and calceolary.

Liquorice and menna, too, are brought from Sés. This list of industries might be easily increased, but its length and variety would indicate only the capabilities of the country, and not the extent of its cultivation. It must be borne in mind, that in Morocco the rude wooden plough is often held by a woman, and drawn by an ass, or an ass and heifer yoked together; and that a large portion of the population leads a pastoral life, subsisting wholly on the produce of their herds and flocks, or else on game and the wild fruits of the forest, particularly on the Bidr or Lotus of the ancients (Sisymbrium Iota).

Animals.—The lion still haunts the plains on the edges of Atlas, particularly near the springs, followed by panthers and omnes. The wild boar inhabits the woods, and is seldom chased. Gazelles, and several species of large antelope, especially the bubalus, enter the country from the desert. Of Pachydermata—elephants, rhinoceroses, &c., which, according to ancient writers, at one time tenanted these W. forests, there is now no trace. More formidable by far, however than beasts of prey is the locust, which, coming from the desert, makes its appearance in Morocco in May, when it lays its eggs. The young locusts come forth a month later in countless multitudes, and in another month they take wing, consuming all vegetation in their progress, spreading desolation over the fields, and terrifying the people with the threat of pestilence and famine. They are gathered and eaten in large quantities, dressed in a variety of ways. The ostrich is chased on the S. frontiers of Morocco, and the ostrich feathers brought from that quarter are the best known in commerce.

Stock.—The wealth of the Arab tribes who are scattered over Morocco, consists chiefly in their droves of herds, and flocks. In the interior and S. districts, the flocks of the camel is generally seen. The spotted small horses, for which this country was famous in ancient times, are still numerous, particularly in the S. provinces, but the prohibition to export horses, and the usurping exercise of the Sultan's prerogative of taking the best horses wherever he can find them, effectually hinder the development of this branch of industry. Horned cattle are numerous, particularly in the N. districts, so that their number may be estimated at 5,000,000 or 6,000,000, but owing to defective breeding or treatment, the cow's milk in Morocco is much less nutritive and abundant than in Europe. The huns are generally much better than are employed by the Arabs in the labours of the field—bullocks being little known in this country. Still more important are the sheep, supposed to number at least 45,000,000. The native variety is much larger than the European sheep, and has a broad tail loaded with fat, and often weighing, in a well-conditioned animal, 50 lbs. The wool is frequently of the finest possible description, and is said, moreover to increase in weight after being kept some time in store. With a little care and management, the fleeces of Morocco might be rendered a source of great wealth. It is remarkable that while tawny or even black fleeces are common in Spain, the wool of Morocco is almost invariably white. The goats are estimated at 10,000,000 or 15,000,000, and furnish a principal article of export—the well known Taffelt, Bafan, or Morocco leather.

Manufactures.—In general, among the rural population, each family supplies all its own wants. Every woman spins, and every man knows how to weave the coarse cloth which forms his bark or mantle. In the towns, however, some manufactures have sprung up. Fez makes and exports great quantities of the cloth eye which bears the name of that city, and which are much admired for their fine scarlet dye, obtained from a berry found in its vicinity. The tanners of Magueas have a great reputation, though surpassed in some respects by those of Morocco, who can render the lion's or panther's skin as white as snow and as soft as silk. This is done by means of two plants, the Tiera and Tesaya, natives of Atlas, and unknown to Europeans. Of the fine Morocco leather Fez furnishes the red, Taffelt the green, and the city of Morocco the yellow. The Morocco carpets, called by the Moors Sherblat and Kalfah, and much esteemed in Europe, under the name of Turkey carpets, are made chiefly in the provinces of Decalle. The Jews alone do business as goldsmiths and jewellers.

Commerce.—The commerce of Morocco may be conveniently considered under three heads:—1. Commerce with the West, carried on by means of the caravans to Mecca, which have Vol. II.

at once a mercantile and a religious character. 2. With Sicilian and Tripoli, across the Great Desert; 3. The maritime trade with European States. The pilgrims and merchants who mean to join the Hâj caravan, assemble in Fez seven months before the time of the festival in Mecca. The caravans proceed first to Tena, and thence holding an inland course to Kairwa; its mercantile followers, however, contrive to visit Algiers, Tunis, and the other chief towns near its route, and, being constantly engaged in petty dealing with the tribes through whose country they pass, they are not wearied with the slowness of their march. Halting for some time at Tripoli and Alexandria, they at length reach Mecca, where, at the time of the Hâj, there is a fair lasting five months, and perhaps, in some respects, the greatest in the world as it sometimes brings together 200,000 men and above 100,000 camels, from all parts of the Mahometan world. Here they buy Persian silks, perfumes, spices, and some Indian goods; to which are afterwards added cotton and raw silk in Calce. The capital thus expended is supposed to amount to 2,000,000 of dollars (2450 000). The goods exported by the S. channel are colonials, indigo, skins, fine leather, woollen cloths, and ostrich feathers. There is also much business in buying and selling done at the towns passed through on the march. The caravans, or, to use the language of the country, Kalfahs for the interior assemble at Taffelt, whence they proceed, in the first instance, to Akka or Tatis, on the borders of the desert S. of Atlas. Though the Kalfahs going S. are much less numerous than those destined for Egypt or Mecca, yet they often reckon from 16,000 to 20,000 camels, and 500 or 600 men. They halt in the desert at Taudel or at Arwâta to procure salt, and then advance to Timbuctoo, where they meet the merchants from the S. and dispose of their goods, chiefly salt, woollen-cloths, musks, Turkey daggers, tobacco and looking-glasses, for ivory, rhinoceros-horn, incense, gold-dust, ostrich feathers, gums, malagathia or Gambia pepper, cardamum, saffron, oil of cloves and alvax. This traffic yields them a great profit. Of 4000 black slaves annually brought into Morocco by the Kalfahs from the S., not more than half remain in the country: the rest are profitably disposed of in Algiers and Tunis. The capital advanced on each expedition to Timbuctoo is estimated at 1,000,000 dollars (2525,000) and the returns are said to exceed in value ten times that sum. The trade by sea with European states is said to have been opened, in 1551, by Thomas Wadham, an Englishman, who then obtained, at Agadir, a cargo of sugar dates, and almonds. The first of these articles is now no longer exported but to the others are added wax, oil skins, and leather, wool, copper and the various produce of Mograbid, brought by Kalfah, and exported from Mogador. Of the whole of this commerce with Christian states, two-thirds in amount are carried on with Great Britain: the imports from which may be valued, in round numbers, at 2500,000, carried in 16,000 tons of shipping. Five others, namely, Fez, Morocco, Magueas, Bahat, and Tetuan or Tatan have salts, and coin gold, silver and copper. Formerly the Jews, who managed the mints, debased the coin, but, of late years, this evil has been corrected. The exportation of the national coin is strictly prohibited but, as foreign money is admitted, the Spanish dollar forms the chief ingredient of the circulating medium. In order to obviate the inconveniences which might arise to commerce from sudden alarms of plague or other epidemics, in a country so ill organized, the foreign coin is retained at Tangier are constituted, by the emperor or sultan, a council of health, empowered to make such quarantine regulations as circumstances may render necessary.

The Mohabites.—Race.—An important element of weakness in the social and political constitution of Morocco is to be found in the division of its population into several distinct races, which, so far from uniting repel one another. The Berbers may be regarded as the oldest inhabitants of the country, they are divided into Amazigh and Shalsh, of whom the latter, inhabiting the recesses and high plains of Atlas, S. of the capital, seem to retain traces of a comparatively advanced civilisation. They devote themselves to agriculture rather than to pastoral pursuits, and, though habitually peaceful, are distinguished also for their courage and valour, in consequence of which use is taken by the Government not to trust nor provide them to the use of arms. The Amazigh inhabit the mountains of El-Rif, and parts of Atlas. The Arabs from the bulk of the rural population in the plains. Some of these are misnomers, the proper and most approved portion of the population, some are Berbers, most of them entered the country with the victorious successors of Mahomet; while others claim Hamyaritic descent, and a much more ancient settlement. In the towns along the coast we find the Moors, a people now physically distinct, but whose origin, as a distinct race, could not be satisfactorily explained. The belief that their name was derived from a Greek word which signifies black is evidently without foundation; for the inhabitants of the N. W. angle of Africa are not and never were black, and, besides, the Romans, though they used the name Mauri, preferred calling the people Mauruli, a variation which evidently discomfited the proposed Greek etymology. It is more likely that the name Moor was derived from a Semitic word (Hebrew, Maur) signifying the West, so that it was in fact equivalent to the Maghrib of the present day. At all events, the inhabitants of the Iberian peninsula knew the occupants of the opposite African coasts under no other name than that of Mauruli, Mauri, or Moors, and consequently when, at the commencement of the 8th century the Arabs carried their victorious arms from W. Barbary into Spain, they were generally called by Spanish writers the Moor; this name comprises the Berbers as well as the pure Arab tribes and dynasties which for some centuries ruled the S. of Spain. The Mahometans expelled from Spain in the 15th century were, therefore, all called Moors or Moriscos (Maurani). They were inhumanly recovered by their Arab and Berber brethren in Africa, who seem to have viewed them only as strangers and intruders. A remnant of the refugees, however, gradually found shelter in the seaport towns, and from them are unquestionably descended that portion of the population of Morocco who are at this day distinctly styled Moor. The chief point that characterizes this people in their complexion, and it is said that, in the harem, extreme corpulence is considered by the ladies as the first of personal attractions. Their manners and customs differ little from those of Egypt, but the Moors are more indolent and much less social than the Arabs. A considerable number of Jews is to be found in all the commercial towns of Morocco; where, in spite of the oppression to which they are subjected, they often accumulate wealth, being the sole dealers in bullion and holders of capital. But, in the interior also, among the Berbers in the valleys of Atlas, there are many villages and communities of Jews. Jews in faith at least, if not by descent—which lay claim to high antiquity. To these various ingredients of a checkered population, must be added the negroes and their posterity of every shade, who are particularly numerous in the S. provinces. The children of black mothers are despised, but, though inferior in rank, they are superior in energy, and in civil wars and revolutions have always played a principal part.

Education.—The civilization of Morocco is in a low and fallen condition. The education given at the schools in the chief towns, and completed at the university of Fez, entitled Uar al-His (the school of knowledge), does not go beyond the theology of the Koran. The public libraries, once famous, are now dispersed true waste; and whatever monuments of art are to be found in the kingdom, point to past ages, particularly to those when literature and art flourished under the Arabian dynasties in Spain. In the interior of the country, at present, there are extensive tracts without schools or even mosques, and the obstructions in the way of any intercourse, arising from the jealousies and local feuds of different tribes, towns or secluded communities, prevent the natural development of civilization. Much is to be said for what the Moors are said to manifest a decided taste, but they have not as yet moved at any proficiency in it.

Government.—The sovereign or Sultan of Morocco, styled, by Europeans, emperor, bears the title of Emir el-Mansouri, or Lord of the true believers. He is ordinarily called, by his subjects, simply Said—our Lord. He is absolute in the strictest sense, the lives and properties of his subjects are at his disposal, from him alone proceed the laws, which he makes and annuls at his pleasure. It is the Sultan's custom to give, in whatever part of the kingdom he may be, public audiences or darwazas four times a week. On these occasions he is surrounded by his officers of state and his guards, and is distinguished from them only by an umbrella held over his head. But after all, none to the Sultan is attainable only by those who can afford to fee a corps of officials. The imperial revenues are derived from arbitrary exactions on property from duties on imports and exports, from monopolies, and from fines or confiscations. The Sultan's treasury, called the Zai-el-mali (House of the funds), is in Miquenne, a mysterious and impenetrable structure, guarded by 8000 blacks. It is supposed to contain money, jewels, and bullion, to the value of 50,000,000 of dollars ($11,350,000). It was formerly customary to put to death immediately the persons employed to deposit treasures within its walls. The military force, maintained by the Sultan, does not ordinarily exceed 16,000, of whom half are blacks, and of the remainder a large portion are Berbers from the S. desert. The marine force of Morocco is at present insignificant.

History.—In the Maurit or Mauruli, Mayyll, Madones, and Gentili of ancient writers, it is easy to recognize the Moors or Moriscos, the Shellish, Amang and Gemilah or Beni Gualah of modern times. These people were imposed, by Roman writers, to have come from Asia and particularly from Persia, but it seems now certain that the Berber belongs to what is called the Semitic family of languages. It is not likely that the Romans, occupying chiefly the sea-coast of Mauritania (the N. portion of Morocco), imported materially with the native population. The Vandals, who held the country for some years, at the end of the 5th and beginning of the 6th century are supposed to have introduced into it the practical habits which afterwards became so characteristic of the coasts of Barbary and Morocco. The Vandals being expelled, Mauritania appears to have enjoyed tranquillity till the latter part of the 7th century when the Arabs, fired with enthusiasm spread over N. Africa, and having taken possession of Mauritania, penetrated S., even to Sids and the borders of the desert. It was about this time that the Jews were expelled from Spain by orders of the Council of Toledo (A.D. 694), and sought refuge in great numbers on the shores of Africa.

The victorious Arabs in Mauritania remained for a long time in a state of turbulent division, without any attempt at consolidating an empire. But near the close of the 8th century, a Sherif or descendant of Mahomet, named Ebn, contrived to obtain such an ascendancy over the Berber tribes as to about Atlas, that they made him their sovereign with the title of Imam. His son and successor, of the same name, founded in 807, the city of Fez, and in 807, the dynasty of the Ebnidris. The S. part of the country was, at this time, in the hands of independent chieftains. It was in 1066 that the warlike sect of the Morabbits (El Morabitin, or strictly bound by religion) first rose into existence among the Gemilah, and on the borders of the desert. In 1055, their chief, Abu Bekr ben Omar el-Lamuni, was proclaimed, under the title of Emir el-Mansouri, sovereign of Maghreb-el-aksa. His residence was in Segelmess or Taffelt; but his grandson and successor crossed the mountains, and in 1073 laid the foundations of the city of Morocco, which thus arose with the remarkable dynasty of the Morabbits or Almoravids. These were succeeded by the Almohids, the Beni Merin, and the El-Wattids, who ruled, however, only a portion of the country.

—Fez, Morocco, Sids, and Taffelt or Segelmess, forming, in general, so many independent states. In the time of El-Wattid, the founder of the last-named dynasty (A.D. 1480-1501) the expulsion of the Moors and Jews from Spain added 800,000 souls, it is said, to the population of Maghreb-el-aksa. In the middle of the 18th century, a new dynasty commenced with the descendants of the Sherif Hassan. The fifth of this family, commonly called Hamed Sherif el-Mansuri (1073-1680), made himself master of the entire of Maghreb-el-aksa, and pushed his conquests through the desert as far as Timbuctoo and Kaga. His reign is regarded as the golden age in the history of Morocco, but dividing his empire on his death-bed between his five sons, he prepared its speedy ruin. The ninth and last Moroccan dynasty is that founded in 1648, by Mohd Sherif el-Fihl, or King of Taffelt, who was remarkable, among other things, for his numerous posterity, having 84 sons and 134 daughters. From him the present (1856) Sultan of Morocco, Mohd Abd-ur-rhaman, whose reign commenced in 1857, is the tenth in succession. His predecessor abdicated, in 1814, the sovereignty of Christian throughout his dominions; and, in 1817, he dissolved his marine, and strictly prohibited piracy.

For an estimate of the population of Morocco, there are no certain data whatever. Jackson assumes it to be 15,000,000, Grilberg de Hamel, 8,500,000, but in every particular instance where the estimates of these writers can be subjected to scrutiny, they are found to be far in excess. There is reason to believe that the population of Morocco is about double that of Algeria, whence we may conclude that it is not much exceed 6,000,000. The Berbers appear to be much more numerous, and the black population much less so than has hitherto been supposed. (Account of Morocco, by James Gray Jackson, 4to, London, 1811. Streets of AH Bey el Agha, in Africa, &c., 1814; Geographical Notes of the Emperors of Morocco, by Lieut. Washington, in the Four Voyages, 8vo, 1881; Specimens of Morocco, by Grilberg de Hamel, Genoa, 1884; Wester Zeevart, by J. E. Deumant May, 1844; Description Geographique de l'Empire de Maroc, par M. Besson, &c. 1846.)

MAROCCH (Arabic, Marrakush), the cap. city of above empire, on the N side of an extensive and fertile plain, 1500 ft. above sea-level, lat 31° 57' 31" N; lon 7° 25' 30" W. It is nearly 6 m. in circuit, and is surrounded by a strongly built masonry wall of taspie work (lime beaten in a case or frame with earth), 80 ft. high, with foundations of masonry and square towers every 50 paces. In the walls there are 11 gates. The entire space within however, is not generally covered with the same, but comprises large gardens and open areas of from 20 to 30 m. in extent. The streets are narrow and irregular, and in many cases connected across by arches and gates, which are unpaved, and are in consequence exceedingly dirty when it rains. The houses are mostly constructed of taspie or taspie, but several also are built of stone; they are generally of one story flat roofed, the side towards the street plain and white-washed, here and there a narrow unplastered opening for a window and the apartments fronting into a court. There are several open areas through out the city used as market-places. Besides which, there is a covered bazaar, where a great variety of articles are always on sale, including milk, sugar, shawls and handkerchiefs, cloth, linen, hardware, tea and sugar, fruits of various kinds, boots, shippers, saddles, coarse pottery, and embroidery in gold and silver in which the people excel. There are altogether 19 mosques in the city of which six are remarkable for their size and architectural elegance. On the S. of the city stands the palace, comprising a space of about 1600 yards long by 600 yards wide, and near it is the Jews quarter (El Mellah) a walled enclosure of about 1½ m. in circuit, one-half of it nearly in ruins, thronged to suffocation, and miserably filthy. The Jews are the only goldsmiths, tanners, and tailors in Morocco, mostly rich, though with an outward appearance of poverty. The Moors are the shoemakers, carpenters, masons, smiths, and weavers. There are several tanning and leather-dyeing establishments, one of which is said to employ 1500 persons. The colour dyed here is confined to yellow. There are the ruins of extensive aqueducts in the vicinity of the town some of them 20 m. in length. There are also several large castles outside the walls, one of which is upwards of 100 years in extent. Morocco has long been hastening to decay, and is now nearly half in ruins, the result of war, plague, and wretched government. Pop (1844), estimated at 100,000.

MAROMME, a town, France, dep. Seine-Inférieure, 4 m. N E Rouen, 7 bank Cally. It has manufactures of cotton paper and powder mills, tanneries, dye-works, and bleach-works. Pop. 2939.

MARONNE (La), a river, France, an affluent of the Dordogne, which it joins on the E bank, near Argenteuil, dep. Corrèze, after a W course of about 44 m.; navigable.

MARONY, or MARONTRA, a large river, S. America, forming the boundary line between Dutch and French Guiana. It rises in a lake of its name in the Tumucumaque Mountains flows with numerous windings, generally N., and falls into the Atlantic, lat. 5° 23' N., lon 58° 50' W. total course, about 300 m. At its mouth it is above 2 m. wide, but much encumbered with sand-banks; still it is navigable for small vessels for about 15 m.; but further up it is filled with rapids.

MAROOT, a town, Hindostan, principally, and 48 m. S.E. Bahawalpore; lat. 25° 15' N., lon. 75° 48' E.; surrounded with a mud wall, having numerous bastions. It is a considerable meet for grain, brought from the fertile parts of Bahawalpore, to meet the demands of the dealers, who purchase and convey it to the desert tracts seaward.

MARORE, a vil. and comm., duchy and 2 m. S.E. Parma; with a church, and a trade in cattle and swine. Pop. 1206.

MAROS, several places, Austria—1 (Bozud), A. vil. Transylvania, co. Thorenburg, about 9 m. from Kates with three churches. Pop. 1389.—2 (Bozud), A. vil. Transylvania, co. Hunyad, with a church. Pop. 808.—3 (Kapit or Gross-Marosch) a market in Hungary circle Hilber Danube, co. Honth, 7 bank Danube, 23 m. N.W. Pesth, with two churches, and, on the opposite side of the river the castle of Vasgrad. Pop. 2587.—4 (Vasgrad), (anc. Agropolis), a town Transylvania, cap. of the Marosch Circle on the Maros, in a beautiful and fertile dist. 54 m. N.N. E Hermannstadt. It occupies several hills, is fortified and generally well built; contains five churches, a gymnasium, seminary, college, a library of 60,000 volumes and a good cabinet of minerals. Not far from the town is a strong castle, in which a garrison is stationed. The district around is fertile, and produces much wine and fruit, but more especially tobacco, which is in request to all the markets of Hungary. Pop. 10,000.

MAROS (Latin, Marosus), a river Austria, which rises in Mount Maros, belonging to a branch of the Carpathians in the E. of Transylvania, which it traverses N. E. to S.W. passing Szasz, Reges, and Karlsburg, enters Hungary and proceeds almost due W. forming the boundary between Hungary proper and the Banat, passing Arad and Jons bank Theiss, nearly opposite to Ragedin after a course of above 400 m. Its principal affluents are, on the right, the Aranyos, and, on the left, the Nyarad, Kokol, Bebes, and Strahl. In the upper part of its course, at Lupa, it is enclosed between lofty rocks; in the lower part, it flows through an extensive plain, and becomes navigable at Karlsburg.

MAROS, a seaport in Spain, prov. Coruña and 80 m. W Santiago, lat. 42° 48' N. lon. 6° 49' W.; N. by 6 m. of its name. Including several hamlets, it contains about 1000 houses, and has three small squares, the principal of which is used as a market for fruit and provisions; a constant house, a primary school, a tolerable townhouse, and a church. Fishing and fish-curing are carried on there are also handlooms, and flour-mills, as well as numerous betting stores. Imports—sails, copper, iron, wine, brandy oil, flour, tar, pine-bark, and canvas. Exports—salt fish, staves, deals, paper preserved sealines, kidney beans, rye, maize, and lemons. Pop. 4762.

MAROSICA a town, kingd. of Italy, gov. Venetia, prov. and 10 m. N.E. Vicenza, at the foot of Mount Rovero which is crowned by the ruins of an old castle. It is walled, flanked with towers, has five gates, a court of justice, and several public offices, three churches, an hospital, manufactures of straw and straw hats, and important cow-markets. Pop. 2800.

MAROSUJAR, two places, Austria, Transylvania—1 (Alot), a market tm, co. Unter-Waldenburg, on the Maros, 26 m. S.N.E. Karlsburg. It has two churches, and, near it, valuable salt-mine. Pop. 1900.—2 (Alot), A. vil. co. Nieder-Waldenburg, with a castle, a chapel, and two extensive flour-mills. Pop. 573.

MAROTI ARATON, a town Hungary circle Danube, co. and 10 m. N.W. Bars, with a courteous handsome church, manufactures of woollen and linen, and flour and saw mills. Pop. 1900.

MAROTI, prov. lile of Man. Pop. 1884.

MARPOD, or MALPOD, a vil. Austria, Transylvania, about 4 m. from Leschkerb, in a mountainous district. It has a Protestant church, and is inhabited partly by Saxons, and partly by Walachians. Pop. 1098.

MARQUAIN, a vil. and comm. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 39 m. N.W. Mons; with two tile-works, a tannery, and a flour-mill. Pop. (agricultural), 1180.

MARQUESAS, or MARSHALL ISLANDS (French, Marqueses), an isl. group, S. Pacific Ocean; lat. 8° to 11° S., lon. 158° 30' to 145° W. composed of 12 islands and islets, divided into two groups the more S. comprising Fatohi, or Magdalen, Motone or San Pedro, Thouate or St. Christ, Hirao or Dombon, which is the largest of this group, 25 m. long E. to W., by 5 m. to 1 m. broad, and the islet of Fatohi, or Dombon, called Hood's Island by the Engl. The more N. group comprises Hoonapoo or Adam's Island, Hoon-Hoon as Washington Island, Nukuhiva, the largest of all the Marquesas, 18 m long E. to W., by 10 m broad; Motouiti or Franklin Island, and Hison and Faton-ouho, Kato and Rakea Islands. Their coasts are generally inaccessible, rising from the water like walls. Not in Nukuhiva are some excellent natural harbours. The islands are generally high, some of their mountain peaks an elevation of about 5000 ft.; they are extremely broken and craggy, with a steady belt of land between them and the sea, but the intervening valleys are singularly fertile and productive, being copiously watered by streams, which form numerous cascades. Their principal food productions are pine, yams, coconuts, sugar cane, cotton, and bamboo hogs also are numerous. The men are well-formed, active, and powerful, all tattooed, but not with much taste. The women have regular features, good complexion, fine teeth, and neat hands, but Captain Belcher doubts them the extreme beauty ascribed to them by former voyagers, although he admits that they are altogether the finest of the sex he had met with in Polynesia. The people of these islands were esteemed cannibals, but Captain Belcher was disposed to qualify the charges brought against them of cruelty and ferocity. The Marquesas were discovered, in 1595 by Alonso Mendana de Neira. They were saluted, recently visited and described by Cook and the Forsters, in 1774, when Hood's Island was added to the group. In 1793 three more were discovered by an American captain called Ingraham and were named Washington Islands. In 1843, they acknowledged the sovereignty of France. The population of the whole group is estimated at 20 000.

MARQUINA a in Spain, prov. Biscay, 26 m E. Bilbao, at the confluence of two small rivers. It has a church, several chapels, townhouse, hospital, some schools, a convent, and manufactures of iron vessels and earthenware. Pop. 1186.

MARQUISE, Mago, or Mawu a in France, dep. P. de Calais, 7 m. N. N. E. Boulogne, on the coast, with salt-ponds, breweries, and tanneries. Pop. 1052.

MARR, or Marr York (W. Riding) on the Slack. P. 226.

MARRATXI a in Spain, Isl. Majorca, dist. and 5 m. N. E. Palma, with a church, manufactures of earthenware, several mills, and a trade in corn wine, and oil. Pop. 1636.

MARRIATUBA, an isl. Brazil. See Brazil.

MARRICK, par. Lond. York (N. Riding), 5560 ac. Pop. 555.

MARBOS, a par. Wales, Carmarthen, 2574 ac. Pop. 155.

MARRIBIO a vil. Isl. Sardinia, near the shores of the large lagoon of Sams. It has a church, a primary school, and a trade in corn, wine, and dairy produce. Pop. 1015.

MARRUM, or Mervat, a vil. Holland, prov. Friesland, 9 m. N. Leeuwarden. It is a large, good-looking place with a church and school and 19 brewery-factories. Pop. 935.

MARSAGLIA a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, 4 m. S. E. Cune, and E. N. E. Mondovì with a palace, a church and a trade in corn, potatoes, wine, chestnuts, and silk. The French, in 1693, here defeated the Savoyards, and took their Duke, Vittorio Amadeo II. prisoner. Pop. 932.

MARNALA (see Lipponi) a seaport in Italy, prov. and 18 m. S. S. W. Trapani on the low promontory of Capo Boeo, near the mouth of the Marnala. It is built in the form of a square, and surrounded by massive walls, flanked with bastions. The houses are substantial, and the principal street, called Casero, is regular, and traverses the town through its whole length, dividing it into two nearly equal parts. It has a cathedral, a large edifice, ornamented with massive Corinthian columns, which are said to have been originally intended for the church of St. Thomas of Canterbury, in England; a church, with a sculptured canopy over the altar; a hall in which a council was held; a hospital, and a mont-de-piété. The harbour, which the Savoine estimated so highly as to give to it and the town the name of Marna Alla, or port of God, has been filled up, and now there is only a mole for small vessels, while those of large size must lie to the S. W., nearly 2 m. off shore. The trade is chiefly in corn, oil, wine, fruit, and cattle. Marnala, under the name of Lilyburn, was the chief fortress of the Garibaldians in Sicily and figures much in the wars between them and the Romans. Pop. 31,000.

MARSA (La) a dist. France, which formed the E. part of La Ciotat, and belonged to the former prov. of Gascony. It now forms part of dep. Landes.

MARBERG (Upper and Under), two contiguous tns. Prussia, Westphalia, gov. and 85 m. E. N. E. Arnberg, on the Rhine. Upper Marberg has a church and chapel, Unter Marberg three churches, and a lunatic asylum for the whole of Westphalia. In the neighbourhood is the fortress of Ermsberg. Pop. 8448.

MARSCHELDORF (Bohemian, Moravia), a vil. Bohemia, circle and 33 m. N. E. Brünn, in a valley. It has a church, a school, a castle, manufactures of linen, a brewery distillery saw and other mills, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1248.

MARSIANO a tn. Italy Umbria, deleg. and 14 m. S. by W. Perugia, on the Nestore, an affluent of the Tiber. Pop. about 2500.

MARSDEN, a vil. and chapelry England, co. York (W. Riding) 7 m. S. W. Huddersfield at the confluence of the Colne and Wharfedale. It has three chapels, several schools, manufactures of woollen cloth, a silk spinning mill, an iron-foundry and a steam-engine factory. Pop. 2685.

MARSEIL LAN a seaport in France, dep. Herault, on the lagoon of Iles, 24 m. S. W. Montpellier. It has a small port, and a brandy distillery. Pop. 5034.

MARSEILLES (Latin, Marsellus Italian, Marsaglia, Spanish, Marsella, French, Marseille) a city and the principal commercial seaport of France, on the Mediterranean, cap. dep. Bouches-du-Rhône, on the N. E. shore of the Gulf

- | | | |
|----------------------------------|---------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| 1. Chapelle de la Vierge | 2. Musee de la Marine | 13. Port de Commerce |
| 4. Chapelle de la Vierge | 3. Chapelle de la Vierge | 14. Port de Commerce |
| 5. Chapelle de la Vierge | 4. Chapelle de la Vierge | 15. Port de Commerce |
| 6. Chapelle de la Vierge | 5. Chapelle de la Vierge | 16. Port de Commerce |
| 7. Chapelle de la Vierge | 6. Chapelle de la Vierge | 17. Port de Commerce |
| 8. Chapelle de la Vierge | 7. Chapelle de la Vierge | 18. Port de Commerce |
| 9. Chapelle de la Vierge | 8. Chapelle de la Vierge | 19. Port de Commerce |
| 10. Chapelle de la Vierge | 9. Chapelle de la Vierge | 20. Port de Commerce |

of Iles, at the head of a bay, the entrance to which is sheltered and defended by a group of isles, 400 m. S. S. E. Paris; lat. (observatory) 43° 17' 45" N.; lon. 5° 22' 15" E. (a)

It stands on the declivity and at the foot of a hill, around which a semicircular chain of loftier hills rises at a short distance, but leaves the view open to the sea. It naturally divides itself into the old town on the W. and the new town on the E. The surface covered by the former is very uneven, the streets are narrow and irregular, and the houses within this limit of great height. The new town, on the opposite side, is traversed N to S. by a long and splendid street, commencing at the Aix gate, and terminating at the Place Carabiane. Almost all the other streets are spacious and regular, lined with handsome houses, duly proportioned in height to the positions they occupy. Between the old and new towns is a street or promenade, called the Grand Cours, planted with a double row of trees, adorned with fine fountains, and bordered with many elegant mansions. It forms the great place of resort. Marseilles is not rich in public edifices. The most deserving of notice are the church of La Major, regarded as the oldest in the town, and supposed to occupy the site of a temple of Diana; the church of St. Victor, also of great antiquity, and originally consisting of a grotto, or cavern, in which the first Christians of the town were accustomed to meet; a sect for women used to bury the bodies of their martyrs the lofty belfry, all that the revolution of 1793 has allowed to remain of the once beautiful Gothic church of the Anacoles, the church of Charitons, situated without the town, but unquestionably the finest of which it can boast, the Hotel de Ville, a heavy building, overloaded with tasteless ornaments, the Prefecture, a huge edifice, supposed by some to be the handiwork of Marseilles, and surrounded by a well-laid-out garden, the museum, observatory library, and two theatres. Not unworthy of notice, also, are the public fountain, the triumphal arc through which the town is entered on the side of Aix, and the spacious and well constructed quays, with their numerous warehouses. These quays would naturally form one of the best promenades but to them, as a common centre, all the impurities of the town descend, and make every place in their neighbourhood absolutely loathsome and pestilential. Marseilles is the see of a bishop, and possesses a court of first jurisdiction, a court and chamber of commerce, an exchange, a royal naval observatory, a maritime syndicate, a mint, an academy of sciences, belles-lettres and arts an astronomical, a royal medical society an agricultural society, first-class school of hydrography, a royal college a secondary school of medicine, a special school of design, a diocesan seminary a deaf and dumb institute, &c. The harbour is one of the finest in France. It is in the form of a parallelogram, the longer side of which is about 550 yds., and the shorter rather more than 500 yds. It has from 18 to 24 ft. of water, and is capable of holding 1000 or 1200 merchant vessels. Its entrance is narrow, and somewhat curved, so that vessels coming from the E have some difficulty in making it, but once entered, it is perfectly secure in all weathers. It is strongly defended by two forts, one called the Tower of St. John, on the N. and the Fort of St. Nicolas, on the E. Close to this fort a new wet-dock, called Fort de Juliette, measuring 500 yds. by 400, has recently been formed.

The most important manufactures are soap soda, and other chemical products, also woollen hosiery bonnets and hats, olive-oil glass, starch, vermilion, sheet lead, glass, earthenware, &c. In the building-docks, a great number of frigates and other vessels are built. The trade, which was previously great, has been nearly doubled by the acquisition of Algeria. It consists chiefly of soap, olive-oil, wine, brandy, corn, flour, dried fruits, oranges, and other products of the southern department; salt provisions, tobacco, wool, skins, iron, cotton wool, cotton twist, dyewoods, and other articles of colonial produce. A great part of this trade is merely transit between Germany, Savoy, Switzerland, and Italy, Spain, and the Levant.

Marseilles is supposed to have been founded by a colony of Phoenicians, about 600 years before Christ. Its progress for centuries was rapid and almost without interruption, till, having taken the part of Pompey in the great contest for supremacy between him and Caesar, it was besieged by the latter, and, being taken, was deprived of all its peculiar privileges. On the decline of the Roman empire, it became a prey to the Goths, Burgundians, and Franks. In 785 it fell into the hands of the Saracens, who completely destroyed all the ancient monuments which previous barbarians had spared

In the 10th century it fell under the dominion of the Counts of Provence, and continued for some centuries after to follow the fortunes of that house.

MARSH, two pars. Eng. —1, (Glasgow), Lincoln 4291 ac. Pop. 658.—2, (Glasgow), Perth 2752 ac. Pop. 944.

MARSHALSTOWN, par. Irish Cork, 7391 ac. Pop. 3079.

MARSHAM par. Eng. Norfolk, 1819 ac. Pop. 693.

MARSHFIELD.—1 A market tn. and par. Eng. co. Gloucester 11½ m. E. Bristol with a trade in malt, chiefly the produce of the vicinity. Area of par. 5845 ac. Pop. 1646.—2 A par. Eng. Monmouth 1270 ac. Pop. 536.

MARSHWOOD par. Eng. Dorset 5398 ac. Pop. 120.

MARSHWOOD par. in Naples prov. Principato-Città, 56 m. S.E. Salerno. It is the see of a bishop and has two annual fairs. Pop. 5600.

MARSHWOOD (Frascati) [ana. Adellonum Marcomum], a tn. Naples, prov. Basilicata, dist. and 18 m. S. Potenza P. 8100.

MARSILLARGUES, a tn. France, dep. Harault, 16 m. E.N.E. Montpellier on the Vidourle. It has a handsome chateau, with a richly-ornamented facade. Pop. 3428.

MARSHMAN, a tn. in Anatolia Turkey, prov. Bazar, 28 m. N.W. Amdoun, lat. 40° 45' N., lon. 35° 45' E. It contains about 5000 houses, including several mosques, and has some manufactures of cotton fabrics.

MARSHMAN two pars. Eng. York —1 Rufford;—1 4223 ac. Pop. 1450.—2, 6557 ac. Pop. 244.

MARSHMAN, a vil. Denmark, E. coast isl. Agou. It stands high, is irregularly built, has a harbour with 9 ft. water an unimportant trade and a ferry to Langeland. Pop. 2800.

MARSTON sixteen pars. Eng.—1 Lincoln. 2450 ac. Pop. 488.—2 Oxford, 1213 ac. Pop. 471.—3 Hereford, 1459 ac. Pop. 283.—4 (Rugby) Somerset. 3235 ac. Pop. 449.—5 (Wotton-Bassett) Derby 4775 ac. Pop. 1191.—6 (Rugby) Bucks 929 ac. Pop. 80.—7 (St. Albans) Northampton 1230 ac. Pop. 541.—8 (Long or Saxon) Gloucester 1680 ac. Pop. 832.—9 (Lang) York city 4321 ac. Pop. 608.—10 (Magna) Somerset 1063 ac. Pop. 387.—11, (Magna), Wilt. 1276 ac. Pop. 237.—12 (Montgomery) Derby, 2471 ac. Pop. 473.—13 (Moreton) Bedford 4171 ac. Pop. 2188.—14 (North) Bucks 1910 ac. Pop. 623.—15 (More) Warwick 8630 ac. Pop. 789.—16, (Trussell) Northampton 1640 ac. Pop. 275.

MARSHMAN, a resort tn. Sweden, on a steep rocky isl. about 4 m. from the mainland, and 30 m. N.W. Gotenburgh. It was once a thriving, stirring place, but has greatly decayed, and though it has a good harbour with great depth of water commands only an insignificant trade. Its chief importance at present is as a bathing-place, to which the Swedes resort in great numbers in July and August. Pop. 1273.

MARSWORTH a par. Eng. Bucks 860 ac. P. 484.

MARTA a small river Papal States by which Lake Bolsena sends its surplus waters into the Mediterranean, total course, about 30 m.

MAJ TA (SANTA) or MARTA, a seaport in New Granada, N. coast on the Caribbean Sea, 105 m. N.E. Cartagena; lat. 11° 15' N. lon. 74° 10' W. (n.). It has some good houses, a cathedral and a good harbour with safe anchorage, defended by a castle and batteries. A considerable trade is carried on here with the neighbouring Indians, who bring earthenware and cotton stuffs. It has also some foreign trade, chiefly in dyewoods. In the vicinity is the Nevada de Santa Maria, an isolated range of mountains, extending S.S.W. to N.N.E. over a space of nearly 80 m. Its highest summit, El Picacho, is above 18 000 ft. high. Between the town and these mountains the land is level and produces oranges, lemons, pine-apples, and grapes in abundance. Earthquakes are frequent. Pop. 8000.

MARTA (SANTA), a tn. Spain. Extremadura, prov. and 24 m. S.S.E. Badajoz in a valley overlooked by three hills. It has level and straight, but ill-paved or unpaved streets, a church, townhouse, prison, and two primary schools, a flour-mill, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1800.

MARTABAN, a tn. Borneo, cap. prov. of same name, r. bank and near the mouth of the Salween river, lat. 16° 30' N. lon. 97° 30' E. It stands at the foot of the Elephant or Martaban Hills, here washed by an extensive sheet of water is about 1 m. in length, and is surrounded by a decaying stockade of timber. It consists chiefly of two long streets, and has some conspicuous temples. On its right is a rocky anemol surrounded by a two-gun battery, with a deep moat or water-course beneath. Mahab was captured by the British in 1824, and again in 1829. The island has been long since transferred to Malacca, from which it is only about 10 m. distant. — The province lies between lat. 15° and 17° N., and lon. 97° and 99° E. It produces pepper, cardamom, rice, salt, and fish.

MARTABAN (Juar or), a sea arm, E. side, Bay of Bengal, between the Burmese dominions on the W., and the British Tenasserim provinces on the E. On the parallel of 16° N., it has a width of about 130 m. It receives a number of large rivers, including most of the mouths of the Irawadi on the W., the Sittoung or Sittoung on the N., and the Saloun on the E.

MARTANA, a small isl., in the N.W. of Lake Bolsena, Papal States, memorable as the scene of the imprisonment and murder of Amalasia, Queen of the Goths, only daughter of Theodoric, and niece of Odoacer. She was strangled in 535 by the order or connivance of her cousin Theodatus, with whom she had shared her kingdom.

MARTANO, a tn. Naples, prov. Terra d'Otranto, dist. and 19 m. S.E.E. Locos with an hospital. Pop. 2590.

MARTEE KAHAR KA-TANDA, a tn. Sumatra, 10 m. S.W. Kluang. It has an extensive trade with Marwar in Siam, &c.

MARTEL (Latin, Martellum), a tn. France, dep. Lot, 54 m. N.N.E. Cahors. Its parish church surrounded by a helthy in the form of a square tower is very ancient, very capacious, and possesses some finely-painted glass. P. 1776.

MARTELD, a vil. Hannover, Unterhoya, ball Hoya with a church. Pop. 1186.

MARTH (Vukob), a vil. Hungary on Danubius, 4 m. from Buda, with a trade in corn, cattle, and wine. P. 1597.

MARTHA (Savina), see MARTA.

MARTHA (Rio), two places, Portugal—1 (de Bouro) A. tn. and par., prov. Minho, 13 m. from Braga. It contains a Bernardine convent, with an image of the Virgin, to which numerous pilgrimages are made. Pop. 1011.—2, (de Pousa-guado) A. tn., prov. Trás-os-Montes, near the Douro, 9 m. W.N.W. Lamego. It contains two richly-endowed abbeys. Pop. 8000.

MARTH 4-ON-THE-HILL (St.), par. Lag. Surrey 1070 m. Pop. 142.

MARTHAM par. Fing. Norfolk 2644 ac. Pop. 112.

MARTHAS VINEYARD an isl., U. States, off the S. coast of Massachusetts, 35 m. S. Plymouth. 21 m. long, 3 to 5 m. broad, and poor inhabitants chiefly fishermen.

MARTHOD a vil. and com. France, dep. Savoie, prov. and 3 m. from Albert-Ville, r. bank Arly with a church, communal house, primary school, and a trade in corn, fruit, wool and dairy produce. Pop. 1807.

MARTONIANA, a vil. Austrian Italy, gov. Milan, prov. and 50 m. S.E.E. Cremona, 1 bank Po with a church, and two curacies. Pop. about 1450.

MARTIGNÉ-BELAND, a vil. and com. France, dep. Maine-et-Lore, 18 m. W. Saumur, near r. bank Layon. It has five annual fairs. In the vicinity are the mineral springs of Jonzeville, with a bathing establishment. Pop. 2124.

MARTIGNY (German, Martenach), two places, Switzerland, cas. Valais, 17 m. W.W. Sion—1 (Le-Ville) r. bank Drance, near its confluence with the Rhone, 1480 ft. above the sea. It has a handsome church, on the walls of which are several old Roman inscriptions, the site being understood to be the same as that of Octodurus. P. 908.—2, (Le-Bourg), lies on the Simplon road, about 1 m. higher up the valley of the Drance, at the termination of the car-road from St. Bernard, and the route path from Chamouni and is thus a place of great resort. Near it are the ruins of a fine old castle. The monks of St. Bernard, who have served on the mountains for a time, return to a convent here, while their place is supplied by others. Pop. 2487.

MARTIGUES (Luz), (Latin, Martius Colonia Anacit-erum) a seaport, in France, dep. Bas-Rhône, at the entrance of the lagoon of Berre, 16 m. W.W. Marseilles. Its situation has procured it the name of the Little Venice of Provence, being built partly upon an island, and composed of three little towns, which seem to float upon the bosom of the water, and communicate with each other by bridges. The houses are well built, and the streets are, in general, regularly laid-out. It has a church, with a fine facade, a townhall, and an hospital, a good harbour, much frequented by small coasting vessels; and excellent building docks, in which a considerable number of merchantmen are built. Many of the inhabitants live by fishing. Pop. 5412.

MARTIN DE-JES (St.), a tn. France, dep. Charente-Inférieure, 11 m. W.W. La Rochelle, on the Isle of Ré. It has a good harbour, with a safe roadstead; is defended by a citadel possesses a court of commerce, an exchange, a fine arsenal, hospital, prison, and a considerable trade in red and white wine, brandy, vinegar, salt, fish, hemp, wood, pitch, iron, &c. Pop. 3107.

MARTIN DE-YUNUS (St.), a vil. France, dep. Aube, a suburb of Troyes. It has a handsome church, with fine painted glass and a beautiful portico, a small seminary, manufactures of hosiery and a cotton-mill. Pop. 8071.

MARTIN (Bar), a river, Spain, prov. Teruel. It rises in the district of Sagura, flows N.E., and joins r. bank Ebro, 9 m. E. by N. Hija. Total course, about 80 m.

MARTIN (St.), eleven parcs. England—1, Cornwall, 2003 ac. Pop. 348.—2, Gwent, par. 1968.—3, Hereford 3810 ac. Pop. 1487.—4, Jamaica 5711 ac. Jamaica 1855 ac. Pop. 3087.—5, Baloo 5314 ac. Pop. 2182.—7, Wilt 1386 ac. Pop. 3771.—8, Worcester, 1809 ac. Pop. 4718.—9, York (E. Riding) 760 ac. Pop. 8917.—10 (Hussingtree) Worcester 1998 ac. Pop. 5050.—11 (Messing), Cornwall 2369 ac. Pop. 522.

MARTIN (St.) par. Irel. Kilkenny; 783 ac. P. 224.

MARTIN (St.), one of the Leeward isls., W. Indies, between the islands of Anguilla and St. Bartholomew, lat. (Fort Marigot) 18° 4' N.; lon. 65° 5' W. (N.), belonging partly to the French and partly to the Dutch. Its form is nearly that of an equilateral triangle, its sides, facing to the E. N.W. and S.E. each 7½ m. in length Area, 30 sq. m. It is deeply indented with bays and lagoons, some of which afford good anchorage; and is, upon the whole, hilly the highest part is the table-land in the centre, 1861 ft. above sea-level. It is watered by several rivulets in the S. part are salt-water lagoons, from which great quantities of salt are obtained by the Dutch. The climate is considered healthy soil light, stony, but fertile, especially in the N. district principal produce, salt, sugar, rum, and tobacco, the last of excellent quality. The French and Dutch made a settlement on this island in 1682; they were expelled by the Spaniards, who themselves abandoned it in 1859. The French and Dutch subsequently resumed possession and divided it between them. Pop. N. or French division (1849), 3778, of the Dutch or S. division, 2861.

MARTIN (St.) an isl. England, in the N.E. of the Solly group, about 2 m. long E.S.E. to W.N.W. and 5 m. in general area, about 750 ac. It is surrounded by sandbanks, which become nearly dry at low water. The most of the surface is waste, but, when cultivated, yields good corn, potatoes, and grass. Its houses consisting of three groups, are chiefly inhabited by pilots and fishermen. Pop. about 280.

MARTIN (St.), several places, Austria, particularly—1 A market tn. Upper Austria, circle Inn, 8 m. from Ried, with a church, a school, a castle, and three mills. P. 780.—2, A vil. Tyrol, circle Bressan, with a church. P. 1911.—3, A vil. Styria, circle S.E. Marburg, 1 bank Drave, with a church. P. 1211.

MARTINA, a tn. Naples, prov. Terra d'Otranto, 18 m. N.N.E. Taranto; with seven curacies. Pop. 4000.

MARTINIQUE, a vil. Austria, Solvay, about 22 m. E. Peterwardein with three churches. Pop. 5106.

MARTINENGO, a tn. and com. Italy Lombardy gov. Milan, prov. and 10 m. S.S.E. Bergamo. It is walled, has several courts, a great number of handsome houses, and a spacious square, a church, two suppressed monasteries, and a gymnasium, several endowed elementary schools, and a house of industry manufactures of silk goods, and several silk-mills. Pop. 4598.

MARTINHO (Rio), two places, Portugal—1 (de Mourão), A. tn. and par., prov. Beira-Alta, 6 m. N.W. Lamego, near r. bank Douro. P. 1800.—2, (de Porto) A. tn. and par. Estramadura, 22 m. S.W. Leiria, on the Atlantic. The harbour, which at one time admitted large ships, has been very much silted up; but some vessels are still built here. Pop. 1600.

MARTINHOE par Eng Devon, 2549 ac Pop. 210.
MARTINHOVA, a vil. and com. Kingd. of Italy Pied mont, div Com, prov and 6 m. W. Salorno, r bank Po; with four churches, a communal school, a silk-mill, and some trade in corn and wine. Pop. 1899

MARTINIQUE, one of the French W India isls., windward group its loftiest summit, Mount Pelée, 4450 ft. high, in lat 16° 48' N (lon 61° 10' W [a]); 80 m. E. by W Dominica, and 80 m. N. St. Lucia. It is of irregular form, high and rocky, about 46 m. long, and 10 m. to 16 m. broad, area, 890 sq. m. There are six extinct volcanoes on the island, and one of the craters is of large dimensions. Extensive masses of volcanic rocks cover the interior rise to a great elevation, and extend from the mountains to the shores of the sea, where they form numerous deep indentations along the coast. Between the volcanic rocks, broad irregular valleys of great fertility occur. Those on the W side, called Desbasseterre, are more extensive, fertile, and level, than those on the E side, called Cabesterre. The climate is hot but not unhealthy, being tempered by regular breezes. Hurricanes and earthquakes are not unfrequent. About two-fifths of the island are under cultivation, the remainder being covered with trees, or occupied by naked rock or disintegrated pumice-stone. The mountain slopes are in most parts covered with primeval forests. In other parts, the slopes are cultivated to the height of about 1400 ft. Numerous streams flow down from the heights, most of them mere rivulets, but a few are navigable for boats for a short distance from their mouths, and used for the conveyance of produce to the shipping. The principal productions are sugar, coffee, cocoa, and cotton.

The total value of the imports and exports for the three years 1850-51 is thus shown —

| | Imports. | Exports. |
|-------|------------|------------|
| 1850. | 41,154,983 | 45,523,237 |
| 1851. | 1,181,991 | 959,009 |
| 1852. | 799,009 | 874,009 |

It has several good harbours, the best of which is Port Royal on the S.W. side of the island; although, however, amongst the best in the Caribbean, it is much impeded by shoals. The principal town is St. Pierre, on the N.W. side of the island (which see). The administration of Martinique, is under a governor and a privy council of seven members, aided by a colonial council, composed of 80 members. The island was discovered by the Spaniards in 1493, when it was peopled by Caribs. In 1625 it was settled by the French, who eventually extinguished the aboriginal race. It was subsequently taken by the British, in 1794, and restored in 1802; it was again taken by the British, in 1809, and restored a second time to France, at the close of the war in 1814. Pop. (1846), 121,478

MARTINO (San) — 1. A. m. Naples, prov. Salerno, dist. and 6 m. S.N.E. Lariano. Pop. 3388. — 2. A. to Santeramo, States, div. and E. Genoa in the valley of Bisagno. It has a court of justice, a church, a townhouse, monastery, university, and the remains of a magnificent palace. Pop. 8006.

MARTINO, a vil. Brazil, prov. Rio-Grande-do-Norte, 170 m. W. Natal. It has a church built of stone, and a considerable trade in slaves to Pernambuco, &c. Pop. 8000.

MARTINS (St.), and CAMARACANT, par. Stock. Parish, 7000 ac. Pop. 983.

MARTINSBERG, a market tn. Hungary, co. and 19 m. S.S.E. Raab with a rich abbey and a church. Pop. 1672.

MARTINSBURG, a vil., U. States, Virginia, 78 m. W. Baltimore. It has a courthouse, jail, county offices, an almshouse, two academies, and four churches, several tanneries and mills, and a printing-office. Pop. 1700.

MARTINSTHORPE, par. Eng. Rutland, 588 ac. P. 7. MARTIRANO, a tn. and com. Naples, prov. Calabria Ultra. II. dist. and 6 m. N. Minuscolo. Pop. 1060.

MARTIRES (Loe), three small low isles, N. Pacific; about lat 7° 34' N lon 149° 29' E. Dangerous reefs jut out from them in all directions. They are thinly peopled, and appear to be very lightly wooded.

MARTIROS, a vil. and par. Brazil, prov. Minas-Gerães, between the Velhas and the Paranaíba. The inhabitants cultivate millet, barleys, rice, and sugar-cane, and make brandy. Pop. 7000.

MARTIS, a vil., val. Bardina, div. Sassari, on a gentle height above the Gungoe. It has six churches, two monasteries, and a trade in wine, fruit, butter, and cheese. P. 1310.

MARTLESHAM par. Eng. Suffolk 3709 ac. P. 477.

MARTLETFWY, par. Wales. Pembrokeshire. Pop. 639.

MARTLEY par. Eng. Worcester, 5124 ac. P. 1809.

MARTOCK, a market tn. and par. England co. Somerset. The town 15 m. S.E. E. Taunton, has an elegant church with a lofty square embattled tower, two places of worship for Independents, several schools, and a market-house; manufactures of fine gloves and saddlebags. Area of par. 7308 ac. Pop. 8154.

MARTON, par. Eng. York (N. Riding), 6 m. S.E. E. Stockton-on-Tees 3875 ac. It is the birthplace of the circumnavigator Cook. Pop. 426.

MARTON four pars. Eng. — 1. Lincoln, 1210 ac. Pop. 844. — 2. Warwick, 910 ac. Pop. 378. — 3. (as-the-Forced) York (N. Riding) 2370 ac. Pop. 162. — 4. (Long), West. moreland 5906 ac. Pop. 732.

MARTON, several places, Hungary, particularly — 1. (Sofia-Szent) A market tn. circle Hither Danube, co. and 36 m. S. Pesth. 1 op. (agricultural), 9304. — 2. (Tepes-Szent), A vil. co. and 85 m. S.E. E. Pesth. Pop. 3118.

MARTON (Szent), several places, Hungary. — 1. A vil. Hither Thesus, co. Arad, 5 m. from Simead, with a R. C. Catholic church, and a trade in corn, cattle, and silk. P. 1807. — 2. A vil. Hither Danube, co. Thurco, about 4 m. from Zsembolcrot with a handsome country house, two churches, a synagogue, several schools, and two mills.

MARTONHEGY, or MARTONHEGY, a vil. Austria. Transylvania, about 19 m. from Szekesfehervar, with two churches. Pop. 1117.

MARTONVASAR, a market in Hungary circle Hither Danube, Szekesfehervar, 17 m. S.W. Buda, with a church, and a castle belonging to the Duke of Brannewick. Pop. 1584.

MARTONY (Szent-Szent), a vil. Hungary co. Tornaal, 35 m. S.W. Temesvar, near the Bega Canal. Pop. 2006.

MARTONYÓCA, a vil. Hungary, circle Hither Danube, co. Bacs, 16 m. S.W. Szeged, r. bank Tisza with two churches. Inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture, rearing cattle, and fishing. Pop. 4155.

MARTORELL, a tn. Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 15 m. N.W. Barcelona, 1 bank Llobregat, has narrow streets, a church, townhouse, prison, some schools, cavalry barracks, and an hospital, manufactures of linen, cotton, and woollen fabrics, soap, paper, wine, and oil. Pop. 8106.

MARTOS, a tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 8 m. S.W. Jaen. It is indifferently built, has two squares, crooked, steep, and rugged streets; three fine churches, some chapels, two convents, a handsome townhouse, prison, hospital, several schools, an orphan asylum, small theatre, and, at some distance S. of the town, two bathing establishments, the waters of which include sulphur, manganese, silica, &c. Limon, pottery ware, hats, and oil, are made. Pop. 11,022.

MARTRES-DE-VEYRE, a commune, dept. Puy-de-Dôme, on the Veyre, about 8 m. S.E. Clermont. It carries on a considerable trade in wine, and has, in its vicinity, three acclimated springs. Pop. 1923.

MARTRY, par. Irel. Meath; 8891 ac. P. 608.
MARUA, or Materu, one of the Society Is., S. Pacific lat. 16° 25' S.; lon. 155° 12' W. (n.) It is small, and comparatively elevated, about 5 m. in circumference, surrounded by a barrier reef of coral at the distance of about 3 m., which encloses numerous small islets covered with coconut trees; but the lagoon is too shallow to admit vessels exceeding 150 tons burden. Volcanic rocks, scorria, and slag abound.

MARUÛ, a vil. Holland, prov. and 12 m. W.S.W. Groningen, irregularly built and walled with a church and school. Pop. (agricultural) 794.

MARUTRA, or LORD HOOB'S ISLANDS, an Isl. S. Florida, Low Archipelago, lat. 31° 30' 45' S.; lon. 185° 28' 16' W. 11 m. long, and nearly 5 m. broad. It consists of a number of small islets rising from a chain of coral, a little above the water's edge, and has a mixture of moss and grass, but is temperate with clumps of evergreen trees thickly interwoven. It contains a lagoon, and is steep on all sides.

MARVÃO or RANÇO DO PRATO, a tn. Brazil prov. Paraíba in a plain watered by a river of same name about 20 m. above its junction with the Poti and 100 m. N.E. Oeiras. It has a church, mines of silver, alum and copper. Pop. det. 3000.

MARYAON a tn. Portugal prov. Beira-Baixa, 84 m. S.E.E. Castello-Branco on a steep mountain of the same name, the ancient Hamulim Mago. It is walled, defended by a strong castle, and has two churches, a convent, hospital, and almshouse. Pop. 1220.

MARVEJOLS [Latin, Martigues] a tn. France, dept. Lodre, 10 m. W. Mende, 1 bank Colagne. It is well built, well walled, and adorned with several fountains has a court of first resort, and several public offices, a communal college, a secondary ecclesiastical school, a chamber of manufactures an agricultural society manufactures of serge and other woollen stuffs, tapestries, dyework, brick works, a corned mill, and a station in the railway of manufactures. Pop. 3875.

MARWOOD par. Eng. Devon 5396 ac. P. 1054.

MARY (St.)—1. An Isl. N.E. coast Madagascar lat. (N point) 16° 40' 30' S.; lon. 50° 4' 45' E. (n.) 31 m. long N.E. to S.W., and 2 m. to S. broad. Its surface presents a succession of hills 200 to 400 ft. high, separated by deep and generally narrow valleys, so thickly covered with trees and underwood as to be in some places impenetrable. On the W. side, about 7 m. from the S. point, there is a bay with an island at the entrance, where small vessels may find shelter. The climate is hot and unhealthy. The soil is extremely fertile. Buffaloes are numerous, goats scarce, and sheep still more so. Geese and ducks abound, but sell high. Fish are plentiful on a reef which surrounds the island. The natives manufacture a kind of cloth from the fibres of the raffia or mogo, the coarsest sort of which they send to the Mauritius and Bourbon, where it is used for boat sails, peckings, &c. The finer and parti-colored kinds, some of which are very beautiful, they mostly use themselves. They also work in iron, and carry on a considerable trade in shells, wax, and turpentine. The French have a settlement here. Pop. (1849), 5709.—2. A small island, also off Madagascar at the head of Antongil Bay, N.E. coast; lat. 15° 50' S.; lon. 49° 45' E.—3. A small Isl., sometimes called Island, E. coast Africa, Delagoa Bay; lat. 25° 55' S.; lon. 35° 3' 5' E. (n.) It is about 7 m. long, and 3½ m. broad; of sandy formation, and moderate height.—4. The most S. of the Azores, lat. 36° 58' 20' N.; lon. 25° 6' 12' W. (n.) about 7 m. long, and 5 m. broad; area, 36 sq. m., of trap formation. Nearly in the centre is a deep bay, about 1800 ft. deep, which fills on the E. and W. sides a shoal bank of about 1 m. in breadth. To the N. it throws out a range of undulating heights, which terminate at the sea in lofty steep cliffs of more than 300 ft. elevation. On the W. side of the island, vegetation is scanty, while the central parts are covered with the common heath, myrtle, and arbutus of the Azores. The E. side is occupied by the agricultural produce of the island, consisting chiefly of wheat, Indian corn, oranges, a small quantity of wine, potatoes, and house. Part of the wheat, and all the oranges, are exported. The inhabitants are, in general, extremely poor, but keep their persons and their houses clean and tidy. The island contains the small town of Villa do Porto, and several hamlets P. (1840), 4686.—5. An Isl., England, the largest of the Solly Isles; lat. 49° 50' N.; lon. 6° 19' W. (n.) It contains several villages, the principal of which is called Hugh or Hough Town. On the W. side of the island there is a Garrison with barracks and batteries. Area, 1640 ac. Pop. 1645.—6. A group of long flat isles Hindostan, great, Madras, coast of Cassia, between lat. 13° 38' to 15° 17' N., the easternmost of the range being 5 m. from the shore, having a channel with 8, 4, and 5 fathoms irregular soundings between them and the main but safe for boats only.—7. A cluster of small isles in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, on the S. coast of Labrador, lat. 50° 30' N.; lon. 60° W.

MARY (St.), a river, N. America, by which Lake Superior discharges itself into Lake Huron. It is about 60 m. long, and varies in breadth from 2 m. to 1½ m. After issuing from Lake Superior it flows slowly, through a low and well-wooded country, for 15 m., and then begins to have a strong current, caused by a series of rapids about 2 m. below. These rapids, in a course of 900 yards, have a fall of 23 ft. 10 inches. On each side of the rapids are a number of alluvial islets, varying in height from 10 ft. to 50 ft.

MARY (St.) 14 pars. Eng.—1. Barks 1846 ac. P. 9148.—2. Cumberland 6983 ac. P. 16 437.—3. Emex 1827 ac. P. 1246.—4. Jersey P. 1088.—5. Leicester P. 10 942.—6. Nalop 4303 ac. P. 7181.—7. (Malop Hill Junior) Yorkshire 3200 ac. P. 1868.—8. (Malop Hill Senior) York city 1858 ac. P. 1856.—9. (Swale Coast) Gloucester 28 ac. P. 4434.—10. (Chard) Devon, 2569 ac. P. 2928.—11. (Chard) Hants; 2980 ac. P. 1444.—12. (Chard) Cheshire 4643 ac. P. 4157.—13. (Chard) Gloucester; 2510 ac. P. 6556.—14. (Chard) Middlesex 22 ac. P. 80.—Four in Wales—1. Cardigan 2517 ac. P. 3981.—2. Glanogwen; 2321 ac. P. 18 351.—3. (Chard) Glanogwen, 737 ac. P. 104.—4. (WY) Glanogwen 1404 ac. P. 247.

MARY, or MARIA CAPE (St.) 1, Newfoundland, S. coast, between Pleasant Bay and St. Mary's Bay, lat. 46° 50' N.; lon. 54° 15' W. (n.)—2, New Scotland, S.W. coast, forming the S. entrance to the bay of the same name; lat. 44° 7' N., lon. 60° 11' W. (n.)—3, St. America, E. coast, Uruguay lat. 34° 59' S.; lon. 54° 9' W. (n.)—4, S. extremity of Madagascar, lat. 25° 36' 54' S.; lon. 45° 43' E. (n.)—5, Africa, W. coast, Benagambia, forming the S.W. entrance to the estuary of the Gambia lat. 13° 30' N.; lon. 16° 41' W. (n.)—6, Africa, S.W. coast, Benguela lat. 13° 25' S.; lon. 17° 35' E. (n.)—7, S. E. coast, lat. New Ireland; lat. 4° 2' S., lon. 155° 18' E. (n.)

MARYBOROUGH, a market town and par. Ireland. The town esp. of Queen's co. is 47 m. S.W. Dublin, a station on the railway thence to Cork, and on an affluent of the Barrow, has a spacious market-square a handsome jail, an elegant district lunatic asylum, county infirmary, with dispensary attached; the courthouses, barracks, and public schools; a parish church, R. Catholic chapel, and meeting-houses for Wesleyans and Calvinists a convent of the Protestant, in which 200 children receive gratuitous instruction; and a national school. It has three extensive flour-mills, and a good general trade. P. 2079. Area of par. 7049 ac. P. 4484.

MARYBURGH a vil. Scotland, co. Inverness, 2 m. S.W. Portwilliam, on Loch Ull, with a Free church missionary chapel-of-ease an Episcopal, and a R. Catholic chapel school; and some herring-fishing. Pop. 403.

MARYCULTER, par. Scott. Kincardine; 9000 ac. P. 1055.

MARYHILL, a vil. and par. Scotland, co. Leamark, 3 m. N.W. Glasgow, on the banks of the Helven, here crossed by the Forth and Clyde Canal. It contains an Established and a Free church a R. Catholic chapel, two print-works, bleach and glass works, an iron-foundry, spinning-mill, boat-building yard, library and school. Pop. 6700.

MARYKIRK, par. Scott. Kincardine; 3386 ac. P. 2222.

MARYLAND one of the maritime U. States, America, lat. 36° to 39° 44' N.; lon. 75° 10' to 79° 30' W.; bounded N. by Pennsylvania, S. by Delaware, S.E. the Atlantic, S. Virginia and Chesapeake Bay, and E. Virginia. It is of very irregular shape, rendering it difficult to give a proper idea of its length and breadth; but the usual estimate makes the former 196 m., and the latter 120 m.; area, 13,899 sq. m., of which 4899 sq. m. are covered by the waters of the Chesapeake, which, penetrating the state through its whole breadth from S. to N., and indenting it by numerous estuaries, forms its most characteristic feature, and naturally divides it into two portions—the much smaller of the two, on the E. called the Eastern shore; and the other, on the W., called the Western shore. The E. shore, comprising the larger part of the peninsula formed by the Bays of Delaware and Chesapeake, has a low flat, and somewhat sandy surface, covered, in many places, with stagnant water which makes ague and intermittent fever prevalent. The W. shore, below the falls of the river, has much the same appearance as the E., but gradually rises towards the N. W., where it is traversed by a lower branch of the Appalachian chain, and attains the height of 2000 ft. above sea-level. By far the most important river is the Potomac, which separates Maryland from Virginia, nearly throughout the whole length of 550 m., and is navigable to Washington, a distance of 900 m. The Susquehanna is also a large river, but only a small portion of its lower course, before it falls into the N. extremity of Chesapeake Bay belongs to Maryland. The only other rivers deserving of notice are the Patuxent, which, though its course is short, has a broad estuary that makes it navigable by large ships to Baltimore, and the Patuxent, navigable for 50 m. by vessels of 250 tons. But all these means of internal communication are outwiped by Chesapeake Bay which has a length of 370 m. with a width varying from 7 m. to 20 m. Almost all the lower part of Maryland is covered with alluvial deposits. The strata beneath belongs generally to earlier series of the tertiary formation, the oceans and the melocene. The piscoene, the most recent of all, is found only in limited patches. Where the surface begins to become elevated the tertiary formation terminates, and is succeeded by a belt of metamorphic rocks, composed chiefly of gneiss, mica-schist and chlorite slate, occasionally intermixed with granite, serpentine and limestone. This belt, which lies nearly parallel to the Atlantic coast, has, in Maryland, a width of from 30 to 80 m., and is overlain unconformably by strata of red sandstone, dipping gently towards the N. W. This sandstone occupies only a narrow trough among the metamorphic rocks and beyond it, to the W., rises the first ridge of the Appalachians. This part of the chain, in Maryland, consists of metamorphic rocks similar to those already referred to, but immediately N. W. of it, we enter the great Appalachian valley, occupying an enormous area and extending, under different names, in a S. W. direction, from Vermont to Alabama. The portion of it in Maryland is called the Hagerstown valley, and is principally based on the Trenton limestone, so remarkable for its occurrence. Here rocks of the Silurian and Devonian systems are succeeded by a full development of the carboniferous with its valuable seams of coal and ores of iron. Within the state are three important coal-fields. Two of them, with an estimated aggregate area of 370 sq. m., being situated in a densely-wooded country, have not been opened up, but the third, called the Frostburg or Cumberland basin, occupying an area of 20 m. long by more than 4 m. wide, has been examined with care, ascertained to be of excellent quality and worked to some extent, chiefly for the supply of ocean steamers. Much of the low land of Maryland contains a considerable mixture of sand, but is well adapted for agriculture, and generally under good cultivation. The most important crops are Indian corn, wheat, and oats. Next to these, but in much smaller quantities, are potatoes, ordinary and sweet, rye and buckwheat. Tobacco is grown to the extent of about 21,000,000 lbs. annually, the meadows yield heavy crops of hay, and great numbers of live stock are reared particularly cows for the dairy—sheep and swine the most numerous of all. The principal manufactures are cotton goods, stockings, bricks, and articles in iron, the trade, chiefly foreign, is extensive.

TOTAL VALUE OF THE EXPORTS AND IMPORTS OF MARYLAND FOR each of the following years:—

| Years. | Value of Exports. | Value of Imports. |
|--------|-------------------|-------------------|
| 1860 | $ 1,453,262 | 2,275,979 |
| 1861 | 1,774,128 | 1,885,571 |
| 1862 | 2,728,405 | 1,905,550 |
| 1863 | 1,765,371 | 795,448 |

The state is divided into three districts—E., S., and N. W.; and, by the constitution, the people of each district have the privilege, alternately, of electing the governor, who is chosen for three years. The Senate consists of 21 members, elected for six years—one-third retiring every two years, and the house of delegates of 27 members. Annapolis is the seat of government. Other principal towns are Baltimore, Frederick, and Hagerstown. The suffrage is possessed by every white male citizen resident one year preceding an election within the state, and six months within the city or county where he votes. The prevailing forms of religion are the Protestant Episcopalians, E. Catholics, Methodists, Presbyterians, and Baptists. Pop. (1860), 688,885; of whom 74,077 were free-colored, and 90,866 slaves (1860) 867,049 of whom 87,189 were slaves.—(Kennedy's Hist. and Statistics of Maryland.)

MARYLEBONE, a pari borough, forming the N. W. portion of London and comprehending the parishes of Marylebone St. Pancras, and Paddington and bounded by Oxford Street on the S., and by the borough of Fenchurch on the E. As no remote portion is contained only of a few solitary houses, situated in open fields, which were long notorious as the lurking-places of robbers, and an extensive enclosure within it was a well-stocked deer park, in which Queen Elizabeth entertained the Russian ambassador with a hunting party. It is now covered with spacious streets and squares, lined with elegant mansions. Among the more remarkable localities within it are the Regent's Park, beautifully laid out in pleasured walks, lawns, and pleasure-grounds, and containing, among other interesting places of resort the Zoological Gardens and the Colosseum, the magnificent ranges of buildings in Westbourne Terrace, Lavender, Manchester, Portman and Eaton Squares, the terminal of the London and North Western and of the Great Western railways the churches of St. Marylebone, St. Pancras and Holy Trinity church in Ruislip's Road Paddington, and St. Catherine's and the Mid Essex hospitals. Area of the bor., 5810 ac. Pop. (1851) 270,567 of which 128,164 are in par. Marylebone 128,479 in St. Pancras and 25,178 in Paddington.

MARYPORT, a market in and a seaport England, co. Cumberland, 25 m. S. W. Carlisle, at the mouth of the Eilen, and at the W. terminus of the Maryport and Carlisle railway. It is irregularly built has a chapel, and places of worship for Baptists, Burghers, Presbyterians, Wesleyans, a Friends meeting-house three ship-building yards, and manufactures of cotton linen checks, sail-cloth, cabinet coarse earthenware, leather, nails and anchors. The herring-fishery is productive, and considerable quantities of trout are taken in the river Pop. 3718.

MARYSTOWN par Eng. Devon, 2895 ac. Pop. 670. MARYSVILLE a considerable mining town, U. States, California, in the valley of the Sacramento, 110 m. N. E. San Francisco, 1 bank Feather River near the confluence of the Yuba.

MARYTOWN par Scot. Forth 2180 ac. Pop. 366. MARZAMENI a small isl., off S. E. coast Sicily, about 7 m. N. N. W. Cape Passaro, and 21 m. S. S. W. Syracuse. The tinny fishing is extensively carried on here.

MARZANO, a tn. Naples, prov. Livorno, dist. and 24 m. N. E. Livorno. It contains four churches. Pop. 6300.

MAS d'ANZURON (Lat., Apennine Massana) a tn. France, dep. Lot-et-Garonne, 25 m. N. W. Agen, with a curious Romanaque church. Pop. 1416.

MAS d'ANZURON (Lat., Apennine Massana) a tn. France dep. Ardege, 15 m. N. W. For. It has a church, manufactures of alum, copperas, and wooden combs, and a worsted-mill Pop. 1590.

MAS d'ANZURON, a tn. S. Pacific Ocean, off Chili. W. from all Juan Fernandez or Mas-aterra, lat. 28° 49' N., lon. 89° 54' W. It is high and mountainous, of a triangular form about 12 m. in circumference, and difficult of access. Wood and water are abundant, and fish plentiful on every side of the island.

MASANARA a vil. and com. Spain, prov. and about 4 m. W. S. W. Valencia, with a church, chapter-house, two primary schools manufactures of cloth, and a rice, a foter, and three oil mills. Pop. 1515.

MABATE, an isl. Italian Archipelago, one of the Philippines, S. of the S. E. extremity of Luzon, lat. 13° 13' N.; lon. 128° 17' E. (N.) It is about 80 m. long by 40 chick peas. Pop. 1000.—A. to. Matamoros, prov. and 27 m. N W. Coahuila, with an ancient church, a townhouse, primary school, an oil mill and several flour mills, and a trade in oil and wine. Pop. 1005.

MATAGORDA, a small settlement in U. States, Texas, at the mouth of the Colorado, on a bay of same name. It has a considerable foreign trade.—The bay is 55 m. long, with an average breadth of about 7 m., and is enclosed from the Gulf of Mexico by a peninsula 45 m. long, by 7 to 8 m. broad (lat. 28° 24' N. lon. 96° 30' W.) A little to the S.W. of the port is an island of same name.

MATALA (Cape) lat. Candia, S. coast, the most southerly point of Europe, lat. 34° 55' 6" N., lon. 24° 45' 15" E. (a.) MATALA, a vil. Boulogne, Foch-Dange, 1. bank Senegal, lat. 15° 44' N., lon. 13° 5' W. It is a market for millet, hides, and butter.

MATAMORAS, a tn. and river port Mexico, dep. Tamaulipas, r. bank Rio-Bravo-del Norte, 50 m. above its outlet in the Gulf of Mexico, at Refugio. The town is well built, has numerous churches, convents, and schools, and a considerable trade, the exports consisting chiefly of specie, horses, wool, and hides, and the imports of manufactured goods, principally from Great Britain and the U. States. 1 20 000

MATANA, a native state, lat. Borneo S.W. coast, on the Calantian Strait. It yields the best diamonds in Borneo also birds' nests, iron tin, and sapp.

MATAN ISLAND, a small Isl. Indian Archipelago, one of the Philippines, on the E. coast of the island of Zebu lat. 10° 20' N. lon. 123° 40' E. It is about 10 m. in circumference. It was on this island Magellan was killed in 1521 when returning from America.

MATANZA (La) a tn. Canaries, on N. part of id. Tenerife. It is built in a straggling manner and has a parish church and three primary schools. Pop. 1374.

MATANZA, a fortified port in N. and by id. Cuba, N.W. coast. The town is lat. 23° 3' N. lon. 81° 40' W. (a.) 53 m. E. Havana, to which it ranks next in commercial importance. It stands on a flat on both banks of the San Juan, which brings down so much mud that the harbour is materially injured by it. The houses, mostly of stone, are built in a very durable manner though with a total absence of architectural beauty. It has two churches, an excellent hospital, extensive barracks, a theatre, and a cock-pit. The state of education is exceedingly low. The importations are chiefly articles of food, and materials and machinery for sugar and coffee estates, most of the latter and other goods are brought from Havana. The principal exports are sugar, molasses, and coffee, amounting, in 1847, to 397 171 boxes sugar, 3,405,777 the coffee, and 54,841 hds. molasses.—The bay is spacious, easy of access, and completely sheltered from all winds, except those from the S.E. which send in a heavy sea. A railroad connects Matanzas with the interior Pop. (1845) estimated at 45 705

MATAPAN (Cape), [anc. Thurmon Pronononion] the most S. point of the Morea, Greece, and of the continent of Europe, lat. 36° 31' 50" N. lon. 23° 29' E. It terminates in a high steep, pyramidal point, at the base of which is a cavern, apparently blackened by the fire of former volcanoes. Upon its summit are the ruins of an ancient temple, supposed to have been dedicated to Neptune.

MATAPOZUELO, a tn. Spain, Leon, prov. and 17 m. N.W. Valladolid, with a handsome church, a courthouse, hospital, two primary schools, and manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, brick and tile works, a distillery, and a trade in corn, wool, and cattle. Pop. 1120.

MATARA, or MATARAS, a tn. Java, prov. and S.W. Djochjara, formerly the residence of the Ruler of Java. It lies among hills, was formerly partly walled and had an extent of 2 m. each way, but is now much fallen off in appearance and population.

MATARELO, a vil. Austria, Tyrol, circle and about 6 m. from Tyrol with a church, and a castle. Pop. 1260

MATARIKH (anc. Jobabopol or On), a vil., Lower Egypt, in a beautiful and well-planted district, 6 m. N.N.E. Cairo. It is now a very insignificant place, but, though never of great extent, it was very ancient, and long continued to possess great celebrity, from its temple of Isis, which was a very magnificent structure, and was, for ages, the chief seat of Egyptian learning. According to Strabo, the city stood on a large mound, and had lakes in front filled with water from the neighbouring canals. Since the time the level of the land must have risen considerably, as the foundations are sunk beneath the ground, and the obelisk, which now forms the most conspicuous object among the ruins, is buried to the depth of 5 ft. 10 inches. The whole height of this obelisk, measured from its first pedestal, is 68 ft. 2 inches; and the shape of its apex seems to indicate that this height was originally increased by the addition of some covering probably of metal. The gardens of Matarihi were renowned for a balsam, produced from plants first brought from Judaea by Cleopatra, and believed to be the same as the balsam of Gilead, mentioned in the Bible. They also deserve notice as the locality where, about 80 years ago, the introduction of Indian cotton was first tried in Egypt. In the plain in the vicinity, Soliman Belan usurped in 1517, previous to his defeat of Ismail Bey, which transferred the Mameluke empire to the Ottomans, and, in the same locality, in 1800, the Turks were finally defeated by the French under Kleber.

MATARIKH, a vil. Lower Egypt, on a point of land projecting into Lake Meuseh 21 m. S.E. Damietta; inhabitants chiefly employed in fishing in the lake. The produce, which is very great, is dried and salted on the spot and sent on camels or asses to Meuseh, whence it is carried by canal to different parts of the country.

MATARO, a city, Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 19 m. N.E. Barcelona, on the Mediterranean. The older part of the town is built on a declivity and the streets are narrow and inconvenient; the more modern portion, which extends to the sea-side, consists of spacious and well-arranged streets, composed, for the most part, of handsome houses. It has eight squares, a fine church several chapels, two convents, town and courthouse, prisons, barracks, a custom-house, hospital, theatre, college, numerous primary schools, and a large confectionery manufactures of linen, woollen, cotton, hampers, and silk fabrics, separate ropes, mills, glass, pottery, hardware, bricks, tiles, soap, leather small shot, brandy and wine, and a spacious dock for building and repairing merchant vessels. The commerce of Mataro is active, especially in the fishing department. Its exports are wine, brandy, manufactured goods, timber, fruits, &c. Imports, grain, sugar, cacao, coal, barilla, and sparite. Pop. 13,010.—(Madox and Mellado.)

MATARUNA, a vil. and par. Brazil, prov. and 70 m. N.E. Rio-de-Janeiro, N. shore of Lago Araruama, on a river of the same name, here crossed by a bridge. It has a church, and a small harbor, from which small vessels get down into the sea with the shilling tide, carrying with them the produce of the district. Pop. 2200

MATAVIANA, a river, Spain, prov. Tarragona. It rises near Pefaraya, on the confines of Valencia, flows N. and N.E. receives the Algas at Noya, forms part of the boundary between Aragon and Catalonia, and falls into the Ebro, near Fayon, total course, about 60 m.

MATVING, par. Eng. Essex 2294 ac. Pop. 653 MATHE-BAZZA market in Hungary, Thaler Theles, co. Sathmar about 9 m. from Nester-Bach, with a Protestant church, a Jewish school, and a trade in corn. P. 2560.

MATHEY par. Frei Cork 7077 ac. Pop. 2137

MATELICA, a tn. Italy The Marches, dioc. and 22 m. W.S.W. Macerata. It is walled, has seven convents and manufactures of coarse woollen stuffs. Pop. 3068.

MATEO (San) a tn. Spain, Valencia, prov. and 40 m. N.N.E. Castellon-de-la-Plana. It is walled, has two squares, a church, several chapels, a townhouse, prison, hospital, two well-attended schools, a convent, having a fine church, with two towers; and manufactures of cloth, linen and hampers fabrics, leather and oil, in which latter article considerable traffic is carried on. Pop. 2548.

MATEO (San), or YEGUA-DE-SAN-MATEO, a tn. Canaries, Isl. Gran Canaria with a church. It rises around it some wheat, rye, potatoes, and vegetables. Pop. 2721

MATERA, a tn. Naples, prov. Basilicata, cap. dist. r. bank Gravina, 55 m. W.W. Taranto. It is a place of great antiquity, the residence of an archbishop, seat of a civil court; and has a cathedral, three convents, and a royal school of belles-lettres, medicine, law, and agriculture. P. 11,590.

MATHEOS (Silo), two places, Brazil—1. A tn. prov. Espirito-Santo, on a height near river of same name, about 16 m. from the Atlantic. It is surrounded by swamps and stagnant pools, which spread pestilence around, and make agues and endemic diseases very prevalent. It is built without any regularity, has a church, a Latin, and two primary schools, and a considerable export trade in the produce of its own district, which is very fertile. The principal articles are manioc, sugar, and millet — 2, A. L. prov. and 190 m. S. S. W. Ocean. I bank Jaguapiré, originally a hamlet of Carib Indians. It has a church, a primary school, townhouse, and prison. Inhabitants chiefly engaged in agriculture and the rearing of cattle. The Indians, who are numerous, confine their culture to the raising of cotton, and subsist by the chase. Pop. par. 2000, dist. 18,000.

MATHERNE, par. Eng. Monmouth 2381 a. P. 451

MATHON, par. Eng. Worcester 3862 a. P. 234

MATHUR, par. Wilkes Pembroke 6962 a. P. 1032

MATUBA, a m. Hindoo town, prov. and 80 m. N. W. Agre, lat. 37° 31' N, lon. 77° 32' E, a bank of the Juma, a popular resort of Hindoo votaries, who come from far and near to bathe in this spot, which is sacred to Krishna, and for whose convenience numerous flights of steps (shanties) descending to the river have been turned. It was formerly surrounded by a lofty wall, of which some fragments and three gates only now remain. The fort, which is situated on a high hill close by, is also in ruins. The interior of the town is extremely dirty, the streets narrow and irregular. The greater portion of the houses are built of brick, with a flat roof, and are from two to three stories in height. The remainder are mere huts, built of clay, and thatched with grass or reeds. There are numerous bazars, 190 Hindoo mandirs or places of prayer, and 19 mosques. Among the latter is the famous mosque, built by the Emperor Aurangzeb, which is called by his name. There is little trade here, although the Juma is navigable at all seasons of the year, even for large boats. Pop. estimated at 60,000 of which 6000 are Mussulmans, and 54,000 Hindoos, among the latter there are 16,000 Brahmans and Fakirs, who subsist on the alms of the devotees.

MATINA, a river Central America, Costa Rica, formed by the junction of the Chirripo and Bayalita, and, after an E. course, entering the Caribbean Sea, near lat. 10° N lon. 82° 25' W. At its mouth is a village of same name.

MATTANA, a div. Madagascar (which see)

MATLASK, par. Eng. Norfolk, 473 a. P. 164.

MATLOCK (Bridges and Batts) two vils. England, co. and 16 m. N. by W. Derby, about 14 m. distant from each other in the parish of same name, on the Ambegate and Howley branches, N. Midland railway. — MATLOCK BRIDGE, romantically situated on the Derwent, and crossed by a handsome stone bridge across it, is built in tiers of houses, rising in succession from the base nearly to the summit of a steep acclivity, and has a small church perched on a rock, and surmounted by a pure place of worship for the Independents and Wesleyans, a free school, a weekly market, and four annual fairs, chiefly for cattle. — MATLOCK BATTI is situated in the beautiful vale of the Derwent, and scenery equally distinguished by grandeur and beauty, and has long been much frequented for its mineral springs, which have a temperature of 89°, and contain much carbonic acid gas. Over each of the springs, three in number, a handsome hotel has been erected and there are lodging-houses, affording accommodation for 400 or 500 visitors. The only manufactures are vases, and similar articles, made of the stone-put and marbles of the county, and exhibited in workshops, which are called museums, and from the number of natural as well as manufactured curiosities which they display, well deserve the name. — The parish was formerly famous for its lead-mines, which are still worked to a limited extent, and the cotton manufacture was established in it by a factory built by Sir Richard Arkwright Area, 1960 a. Pop. of par., 4010.

MATO, or MATO-GROSSO (Great forest), the most W. prov. of Brazil, lat. 7° to 24° N, lon. 51 to 65° W. bounded N. by a range of mountains nearly in lat. 7°, which separates it from Para; E. the Araguaia, which separates it from Goyas; S. E. the Paraná, separating it from São Paulo, A. Paraguary and W. Bolivia, area, 850,800 sq. m. It is traversed, N. W. to S. E., by a mountain chain, forming the principal watershed between the basins of the Amazon and the Rio-de-la-Plata. The principal branches of this chain are the Cordillera Geral, in the N. W., and the Serra Parana, which linking with the other, stretch across a considerable portion of the central part of the province. From the mountains innumerable streams descend, and proceed through lofty rocky valleys, which gradually spread out into immense plains. The principal rivers are, in the W., the Guapore, N. the Juruena, N. E. the Xingá, E. the Araguaia, S. E. the Paraná, with its tributary, Paraguary, and N. W. the Paraguary, with its tributaries São Lourenço and Taquary. There are also numerous lakes, some of them of considerable extent. The dense forests, which cover a great part of the surface have given the province its name. They abound with inexhaustible supplies of the finest timber, both for common and ornamental purposes, but, from the deficiency of the means of transport, cannot at present be turned to much account. They also yield many rare and valuable gums, balsams, and medicinal plants. Cacao, jalep, and annil, and annil (the Paraguary) are of spontaneous growth. The wild animals which haunt the woods are extremely numerous. Among others are antelopes, various species of wolf, varieties of deer, hares, &c. Land-birds and water-fowl also abound. The province is particularly rich in minerals. There is scarcely a district in which gold is not found though the working of the mines has almost ceased to be profitable. Iron is everywhere abundant, but less regarded. Rock-salt and saltpetre are both worked to a limited extent. Over an extensive region near the centre, diamond mines have been wrought from a very remote period, and still continue to yield large revenues to Government. In other quarters, various other gems and crystals are obtained. In many of the valleys and plains, the soil is of remarkable fertility producing rich crops of rice, millet, cassia, clove, cotton, sugar, and tobacco, but as the number of inhabitants bears no proportion to the extent of the surface, the greater part of it necessarily remains in a state of nature. For administrative purposes, Mato-Grosso is divided into two comarcas, Cuiabá and Mato-Grosso, subdivided into numerous districts. It sends only one deputy to the general legislative assembly, and appoints only one senator. The provincial assembly, consisting of 23 members, holds its sittings in Cuiabá. Pop. 180,000.

MATO-GROSSO, or VILA BELLA a city Brazil, prov. and cap. comarca of same name, on a height above a bank Guapore, below the confluence of the Alegre, 800 m. N. Cuiabá. It is surrounded by plains, which are annually inundated, and is built with considerable regularity. The houses are low, constructed of earth and wood, and covered with tiles and, being white-washed both within and without, have a cheerful and comfortable appearance. It has three churches a townhouse, smiling-house, hospital, barracks, and arsenal; a Latin, and two primary schools. Its climate is very unhealthy. The comarca is of vast extent, stretching E. W. between the Araguaia and Maturo, about 700 m. and N. to S. 500 m. Its only trade is in horses and cattle. Pop. comarca, including only those civilized, 15,000.

MATOSCH VOI or MATOSCHNIK STRAIT, a strait, Russia, which connects the Arctic Ocean with the Sea of Kara, and, stretching W. to E. across Nova Zembla, divides it into two distinct islands, length, about 150 m. breadth, hardly not more than 3 m. The shores are generally steep, and frequented by immense flocks of water-fowl. The rivers which fall into the strait, teem with fish, and in the strait itself seals are very numerous.

MAFRA a mountain-range Hungary, forming a ramification of the Carpathians, between the Theiss and the Danube, and extending partly through coo. Neograd, Hoves and Gericke for about 24 m.; culminating point, near Gyöngyös, about 5500 ft. high. Owing to its central position, and the wide plains which stretch from its base, it commands one of the most extensive views in Hungary. The range is well wooded, abounds with game, has valuable pastures, and rich mines of iron.

MATSA, a vil. Hungary, Thikser Theiss, co. and 12 m. from Arad; with a handsome non-united church. Pop. 1346.

MATSEAI, an isl. and to Japan. See Yamo.

MATSON par. Eng. Gloucester, 450 a. P. 53.

MATTERBOREN, a mountain, Switzerland. See Camen.

MATTERBOREN, or MATS MATSON, a market in Hungary, co. and 10 m. N. W. Oedenburg, with a trade in wine. Pop. 1022.

MATTERSEY, par. Eng. Kots; 2310 a. P. Pop. 452.

MATTHEW (Str)—1, An Isl. Sam. 18 m off W coast in the Margal Archipelago; lat. (N point) 10° 15' N lon 95° E, about 16 m long, to S. and 10 m broad. It rises in the centre to a height of 5000 ft. Above level with rocks. At the N end is Harbour or Great Harbour, a spacious bay, capable of containing the largest navy in the world with from 5 to 11 battleships, and sheltered from all winds. The island extends towards the N end, with wild plantains and yams, and with ground rattans of large size.—2, (or Gore Island), Russian America, in Bolring's Sea, S.E. point, or Cape Upright, lat. 60° 18' N, lon. 172° 4' W (N), about 26 m. long, N.W. to S.E. It is composed of hills of moderate height, separated by deep valleys, which, at a distance, give it the appearance of several islands.

MATTIE, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div Turin, prov Susa, with a church, the remains of an old castle, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 2239.

MATTISSEALL, two pars Eng. Norfolk.—1 2280 ac Pop. 1045.—2 (Burgh) 604 ac. Pop. 225

MATTO-GROSSO, a prov Brazil See MATO-GROSSO.

MATTOI, a river R.E. Africa, rising in a salt-water marsh on the interior behind Delagoa Bay, into which it falls, lat. 30° S. breadth at the mouth 500 ft., and depth, 16 ft.

MATTAH, a tn. and bay Arabia. See MATAR.

MATUKU, one of the Pelele isls. S. Pacific lat. 19° 14' S. lon. 179° 44' W (N). The face of this island is broken into volcanic peaks but has many fertile valleys. On the W side is a good harbour, where wood and water are to be had.

MATURA a tn Isl Ceylon, Donrah Head, the extreme S point of the island. It bank Neel Ganga river here crossed by a wooden bridge. It contains many handsome houses, chiefly belonging to Dutch families, and a Protestant church.

MATURIN, a dep. and river port, Venezuela. The former occupies the N.E. portion of that republic, extending from the Gulf of Paria, W. to the Unare, lon. 65° 20' W., and from the Caribbean Sea to the Orinoco. It comprises the provinces of Cumana, Barcelona, and Margarita the latter comprehending only the island of that name, and the smaller ones around it. The navigable rivers, besides the Orinoco, are the Guarapiche, Neven, and Unare. Smaller streams numerous, the greater portion of which empty themselves into the Gulf of Paria. The climate is warm and humid. The greater part of the soil is very fertile, and has, save plains, which are covered with vast herds of cattle. The cultivated districts produce great quantities of cacao and tobacco, and also some coffee. On the peninsula of Araya N of Cumana, salt is manufactured. The capital of the department is Cumana.—The towns. 1 bank of a river which falls into the Gulf of Paria lat. 9° 30' N lon. 65° 50' W, has some shipping business. In 1847, the imports amounted to £12,265 the exports, £29,703

MATZDORF or MATZDORF, a tn. Hungary, co. Zips, 1 bank Popper 6 m. S.W. Kismark, with two churches, a school, distillery, a brewery a trade in flax, vinegar, horses, and swine Pop. 1060.

MAUBAN, a tn. Philippines, nl Luzon, on the coast, 60 m. S.E. Manila, lat. 14° 12' N lon. 121° 50' E.

MAUBERGE (Latin, Mellioribus) a tn. France, dep. Nord, on the Sambre, 47 m. S.E. Lille. It is walled and defended by several forts is clean, well and regularly built, and has two churches, a communal college, and two hospitals, manufactures of fireworks, and other articles in iron, beaten and rolled, nails, sugar, and sugar a salt-refinery, tanneries, and marble saw-works. It exports, by the Sambre, coal, marble and slate, which form the principal articles of trade. In 1759 it was regularly fortified by Vauban, and in 1815, after the battle of Waterloo, it was besieged and taken by the Prussians. Pop. 3314.

MAUBOURGUES (Latin, Mellioribus), a tn. France, dep. Nantes-Pyrenees, 16 m. N.W. Nantes, on the Adour. It consists mostly of a good square, traversed by one long street and has a parish church, in a mixed Gothic and Oriental style. Pop. 2310.

MAUBRAY, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov Hainaut, 24 m. W. Mons, lat. 50° 52' N lon. 4° 25' E, has a mill, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1860.

MAUGELINE (Ostie, Mugel, a meadow, and Mau, a lake), a manufacturing tn. and par., Scotland, co. Ayr. The former, 7 m. S.E. Kilmarlock, a station on the Glasgow and Dumfries Railway, is mostly built, and contains an Established and a Free church, a small prison, two branch banks, a public library, and four schools. The weaving of cotton goods, and the manufacture of wooden snuff-boxes, cigar-cases, and other fancy articles in polished wood, gives employment to the inhabitants. About 1 m. N.W. is the farmhouse of Mungall, for about nine years the residence of Burns, and in the vicinity likewise, are Ballowherry, Barmingham Lager water, and other scenes celebrated in his poems. Area of par., 7206 ac. Pop. 2470.

MAUDLINTOWN, par Irel Wexford 841 ac. P 756 MAURE, or Mowra, a vil. Lower Austria, in a deep valley 6 m S.W. Vienna, with a church, a castle, communal springs, and a bathing establishment, and a trade in corn, fruit, wine, and dairy produce. Pop. 1066.

MAUERKIRCHEN, or MAUERKIRCHEN a market in Lower Austria, circle Inn, 8 m. from Brunnau, with an ancient church Pop. 1000

MAUGHAN'S (Str), par Eng Monmouth, 1804 ac Pop. 193.

MAI GHOU D par Isle of Man Pop. 4463.

MAUGUIGU (Latin, Mellioribus), a tn. France, dep. Ha. rent, on a lagoon of its name, 7 m. S.N.E. Montpellier. It existed in 500, had a strong castle, a port, and a mill, and makes some figure in the history of the period. Pop. 1852.

MAUI, or Mowea, one of the Sandwich Isls. N Pacific Ocean, N.W. from Hawaii; lat. (S.E. point) 20° 44' N lon. 155° 58' W (N). It is divided into two oval shaped peninsulas, connected by a low isthmus, only a few feet higher than the beach. The two peninsulas, called, respectively, East Maui, and West Maui, rise, the former to a height of 10,000 ft., terminating in a crater 2700 ft. deep, and falling almost perpendicularly towards the sea; the latter to an elevation of 5100 ft. and having many sharp peaks and ridges, divided by deep valleys, which, in descending towards the sea, open out, and form sloping plains on the N and S sides, of considerable extent. Numerous beautiful cascades pour over the rocks, from heights of several hundred feet. On some fertile tracts, particularly on the E. division, wheat, potatoes, turneps, corn, melons, and some fruits, including grapes are produced, but these are not raised in large quantities. The sugar-cane thrives well, but no systematic efforts, to any great extent, have yet been made for its cultivation. The amount of arable land has been variously estimated at one-fourth and one-eighth; but not more than one-tenth is cultivated. On the N side of W. Maui, is the bay and town of Lahaina. The latter is built along the beach for a distance of three-quarters of a mile, and is principally composed of grass-houses, situated as near the beach as possible. It contains the king's palace, built of coral rock, a fort, and some storehouses, belonging to the king. Lahaina is much resorted to by whalers, who have obtain abundance of provisions particularly potatoes. The population is estimated at 2600 Maui has been occupied as a missionary station since 1829, and the church contains about 300 members. The schools, attended by about 1000 children, are very inefficient, there being neither regular teachers nor school-books. Pop. island (1840), 5000.—(Wilkes' U States Expl. Exped.)

MAULDE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov Hainaut, 21 m. W.N.W. Mons, with two breweries and a mill Pop (agr. cultural) 1577

MAULDEN, par Eng Bedford 2574 ac. Pop. 1457 MAULE, a prov. Chili, extending from the river of the same name to the Tiaue, a distance of about 48 m. to 60 m. The surface is undulating, and in many parts hilly. It produces various kinds of grain, but raising cattle is the principal object of the agriculturist. Wine and tobacco are exported to the other provinces.—The urban, like all those of Chili, rest on the W. slopes of the Andes. Its sources are near the peak of Desambado, lat. 35° 23' S. It falls into the sea at lat. 35° 20' S., after a course of about 130 m. At high tides vessels, not drawing more than 6 ft. water, may enter the mouth and proceed some distance upwards, flat river barges may ascend it at any season for 50 m.

MAULMAIN, a tn. Tennessee, prov. See MONMOUTH.

MAUMEE, a vil., U States, Ohio, 124 ac. N.W. Columbus; 1 bank river of same name, at the foot of the rapids. It has a courthouse, five churches, and several water-propelled mills and sawmills. Pop. 1500.—The urban rises in the N. E. part of Indiana, and, after a N. E. course of about 100 m., falls into Lake Erie. It is navigable for small craft 16 m. to Perryburg.

MAUNDVEE, a maritime tn. Hindocoteo, presid. and 10 m. S. Bombay. Lat. 18° 47' N. lon. 78° 1' E.

MAUNDVEE, a tn. Hindocoteo, prov. Gujarat, r. bank Nerbudda. It has a trade in timber which is floated down the river to the sea-coast. Pop. 4000 to 5000.

MAUPITI, an isl., E. Pacific. See MANUA.

MAUR, a vil. and par. Switzerland, can. and 7 m. S. E. Zürich, E. W. side Lake Greifen, with a small castle. P. 2188.

MAURA (Sanzu), (anc. Leucadia and Nerthus), one of the Ionian isls., the fourth in size, about 10 m. N. from Cephalonia and Ithaca, separated from the mainland of Greece by the shallow channel of Santa Maura, through which boats only can pass. S. extremity, Cape Duxto, in lat. 38° 29' 30" N. lon. 20° 59' 45" E. (a), about 18 m. to 20 m. long and 7½ m. to 10 m. wide. Its surface is extremely mountainous and rugged, particularly towards the centre. The E. side is waste and barren, but the W. and N. parts are very productive, yielding vines, olives, citrons, pomgranates, almonds, and some corn. Money and wax are also produced, and considerable numbers of sheep and goats are reared. But the staple commodity of the island is bay salt, of which about 8000 tons are annually exported. Besides agriculture, a large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in navigation and the fisheries. Under the jurisdiction of this island are included the islands of Meganisi, Chitro, and the uninhabited ones in the channel of Santa Maura. Pop. estimated at 18,000. — MAURA, the capital, is situated on the N. E. part of the island, on a narrow strip of land, almost surrounded by the sea, and is extremely unhealthy. It is enclosed by walls and towers, and defended by a castle generally occupied by British troops. It has built and dirty, houses mostly of wood, and has several Greek churches.

MAURITIA (Latin, Mauritium), a tn. France dep. Cantal. 21 m. W. N. W. Aurillac. Many of its houses are well built, and it has two handsome ancient churches: a Hôtel de Ville, prefecture, court of justice, prison, and an hospital; a good trade in corn, wine, fruit, silk, horses, mules, horned cattle, sheep, swine, wax, citrons, leather, and timber. Pop. 2118.

MAURICE (Str.), a tn. and par. Switzerland, can. Valais, 1 bank Rhone, 18 m. W. Sioc. A bridge of one arch romantically placed, but not older than the 15th century, though sometimes attributed to the Romans, spans the river, and forms the boundary between cantons Vaud and Valais. The town stands squeezed in between the mountains and the river, and contains an abbey, a church, with a lofty tower and several Roman inscriptions built into its walls; a townhouse, now converted into a bakery, an old castle, and a considerable transit trade. Pop. 1196.

MAURICE (Str.), a tn. in France. See CHAMBERTON.

MAURICE (Str.), or THREE RIVERS, a river, British N. America, which issues from Lake Chikabik, near the skirts of a mountain ridge; lat. 48° 40' N. lon. 78° W. flows S. E. into Lower Canada, and, after a course of nearly 300 m., joins St. Lawrence, at the town of Three Rivers. It is computed to drain an area of 8400 sq. m. Its navigation is practicable for 100 m., but is much interrupted by cascades, when portage becomes necessary. Its principal affluents are the Kaskas, Pinnay, Hibbon, Windigo, Versillion, Eastmain, Rat, Maskin, and Shaveragan. It also expands into numerous lakes, and forms about 14 small islands.

MAURIK, a vil. Holland, prov. Gelderland, 30 m. W. Arnhem, 1 bank Rhine with two churches, and an elegant school. Inhabitants chiefly engaged in agriculture and pig-breeding. Pop. 1370.

MAURITIUS, or ISLE OF FRANCE, an isl., Indian Ocean, a colony of Great Britain E. from the islands of Madagascar and Bourbon lat. (Port Louis, the capital) 20° 5' 42" S., lon. 57° 51' 45" E. (a). It is of an oval form, about 40 m. N. E. to S. W., and 25 m. in breadth, and is surrounded by coral reefs. It is composed chiefly of rugged and irregular mountains, rising mostly into points or pinnacles of considerable height; the highest are the Braant mountain, 5000 ft. and the singular insulated rock, Peter Rote, 2600 ft. Between the mountains, however, and along the coast, there are several large and fertile plains and valleys, well watered by numerous streams, many of which become periodically dry, and having an exceedingly rich soil of black vegetable mould or stiff clay. Iron exists, but is of an inferior quality. The climate is salubrious, but violent and destructive hurricanes are frequent, more especially in March or April. When first discovered, the island was almost entirely covered with wood, a considerable part of which has now been cut down, although some extensive forests still remain. Some of the trees are very valuable, particularly the black cherry, extended the most wild, close, and shining of any in the world. In the general character of its vegetation, Mauritius is somewhat similar to that of the Cape in the number of succulent plants, cactuses, spurge, aloes, house-leeks, fig-marigolds, &c. Many plants from Europe, Africa, Madagascar and India are acclimated and thrive well. Shady groves of mango, dense masses of mimosa, and nearly every beautiful tree of the tropics are to be met with here. The principal objects of cultivation are sugar cane, maize, manioc, and vegetables; and, to a limited extent coffee, pepper, and the umbellifer for the production of alkali. The exports of sugar, which is the staple of the island, increased from 64,880 184 lbs. in 1859, to 121,978,140 lbs. in 1862 nearly one half sent to Great Britain. Value of imports and exports:—

| | Imports | Exports |
|------|-----------|-----------|
| 1860 | 2,178,270 | 2,569,440 |
| 1861 | 2,967,293 | 1,932,781 |
| 1862 | 2,426,412 | 2,217,289 |

The imports consist of provisions of all kinds, live stock, copper cordage glass, cotton manufactures, &c. The government of the island is vested in a governor, a colonial legislative council subordinated to the orders of the sovereign in council. The Mauritius was discovered in 1605, by the Portuguese. The Dutch took possession of it in 1698, and named it Mauritius, in honour of Prince Maurice. It eventually fell into the hands of the French from whom it was captured by the British in 1810 and definitively ceded to us in 1815. It is well known as the scene of St. Pierre's tale of Paul and Virginia. Principal towns are Port Louis and Mamelouche. French is the language chiefly spoken. Pop (1846) 161,990 (1861) 322,517

MAURO (RAN), several places, Naples, particularly — A tn. prov. Basilicata, dist. and 24 m. S.W. Matera. P 2900 MAURES (Latin, Mauris), a tn. France, dep. Cantal, 20 m. S.W. Aurillac with a public square, adorned with a fine fountain. It has a trade in linen, wax, chestnuts, and several important fairs. Pop. 1758.

MAUTRY prov. Eng. Norfolk 1660 ac. Pop. 65.
MAUTERDORF, a market in Upper Austria, circle and 57 m. S.E. Salzburg with a church, a townhouse, an old castle, and manufactures of wire and stoves. Pop. 1120
MAUTH, or MATRO, a market in Bohemia, circle and 31 m. S.W. Beraun with a church, glass-houses, and manuf. of linen. Pop. 1200

MAUTHAUSEN, or MAUTHAUSEN, a market in Upper Austria, circle Mittel, 1 bank Danube, here crossed by a flying bridge, 12 m. S.E.E. Linz. It is well built, has a church, a picturesque old castle, manufactures of leather, dye-works, extensive granite quarries, and the most important horse-market of Upper Austria. Pop. 1200

MAUVESIN (Latin, Mohesmann) a tn. France, dep. Gers, on the Arrats, 16 m. E.N.E. Auch, with the remains of a strong castle. Pop. 1871

MAYIS-ENNEZ prov. Eng. Lincoln 1510 ac. P 207

MAYBO or MARBO PORTANCO — 1, or Guarico (anc. Cephallenia), a river Greece, Livadia, which rises near Manassia, in the N. slope of Mount Vardilio flows E.S.E. and, after a course of nearly 60 m. falls into Lake Pontus. — 2, (anc. Acheron), a river Turkey in Europe, prov. Albania, it rises S.W. of Janina, and flows in a winding S.W. course of about 40 m. to the Ionian Sea.

MAYBOMATI (anc. Megara) a vil. Greece, Moraa, at the foot of the steep hill of Ithaca, and nearly in the centre of the enclosure of the ancient city. It is a wretched village, consisting of about 20 huts. The ruins, however, are extensive, and furnish magnificent specimens of the military architecture of the ancient Greeks.

MAYES (R), a small seaport and market in England, on Cornwall, opposite Falmouth, irregularly built, inhabited chiefly by fishermen and pilots. The Wesleyans and Independents have places of worship here. Pop. 641

MAYGAN two par. Eng. Cornwall — 1, (de Managol), 3575 ac. P 1010. — 2, (de Mayde), 5528 ac. P 782

MAYNAN, prov. Eng. Cornwall; 2558 ac. Pop. 580

MAXDORF, a vil. Bavaria, circle Bamberg, 9 m. from Reichenberg with a school, and numerous glass polishing-mills. Pop. 1168.

MAXEN a vil. Saxony, circle and 9 m. S.E.E. Dresden, where, in 1753, the Austrians defeated the Prussians. P 685.

MAYEY, prov. Eng. Northampton; 2580 ac. Pop. 649
MAXIMIN (R), (Latin, Forum Augusti Maximi), a tn. France, dep. Var, 22 m. N.W. Toulon. It is surrounded with ancient walls, has a church of the 18th century, one of the finest specimens of the Gothic architecture of the period. woollen manufactures, cotton-mills, and distilleries; and some trade in saffron, and six annual fairs. Pop. 3557

MAXSTOCKE, par. Eng. Warwick 5701 ac. Pop. 280
MAXTOWN par. Scot. Nairn 4014 ac. Pop. 650
MAXWELLTOWN, a burgh of barony, Scotland, on Kirkcaldie, forming a suburb of Dumfries, with which it is connected by two bridges. It contains a handsome church several schools, courthouses, two iron-foundries, two ropeworks, two mills, a brewery, and a damask manufactory. Pop. 6330.

MAY, a small isl. Scotland, Frith of Forth, 5 m. S. Orkney, in Fife, 1 m. long, by $\frac{1}{2}$ m. broad. It has the ruins of a priory and a chapel, dedicated to St. Adrian, who is buried here; and a fixed light. It is frequented by immense numbers of sea-fowl. Pop. 22

MAY (L), a tn. France, dep. Maine-et-Loire, about 7 m. S.E. Beaupre. Pop. 1063.

MAYAGUER, a seaport, W. India, W. side isl. Porto Rico, at the mouth of a small river, in a stream of the same name. It is one of the most important places on the island. An adventurer, named Descartes, took it in 1622, and attempted to establish a republic.

MAYAR, a nation of American Indians, who, before the Spanish conquest, occupied the whole peninsula of Yucatan, including the districts of Peten, Bruch Honduras, and Tabasco. The only pure remnant of them are some scattered tribes, chiefly along the banks of the Usumacinta, San Pedro, and Panama, and politically merged in Peten, but their language is still spoken by the Indians of all the countries originally in their possession. They are comparatively harmless, and besides hunting and fishing, their principal occupation is to cultivate maize, cacao, and tobacco, the best of superior quality.

MAYBOLE, a burgh of barony, market in, and par. Scotland, co. and 5 m. S. Ayre. The town, paved and lighted, contains Established, Free, and U. Presbyterian churches, a Wesleyan chapel, two schools, a townhouse, savings bank, and two libraries. Weaving is the general occupation of the inhabitants. Pop. burgh, (1851), 3562 Area of par., 30,981 ac. Pop. 7615

MAYLEV, a tn. Rhénish Prussia, gov. and 15 m. W. Coblenz. It is walled, has a church, two chapels, a grammar-school, and manufactures of woollen cloth, red leather, and cardboards. Pop. 4908

MAYENCE, a tn. Hesse-Darmstadt. See MERTZ.

MAYENFELD or METENFELD a tn. Switzerland, cant. Grisons, near R. bank Rhine, 11 m. N. Coire. It is walled, and has a handsome church, townhouse an old castle, and an important transit trade. Pop. 1221

MAYENNE, a W. dep. France, bounded N. by dep. Manche and Orne, E. Serthe, S. Maine-et-Loire, and W. Ille-et-Vilaine lat. 47° 45' to 48° 34' N. lon. 0° 5' to 1° 20' W. It is a compact and nearly rectangular shape, greatest length, N. to S. 56 m. greatest breadth, 42 m. area, 1966 sq. m. Its surface is much broken by acclivities, and intersected by valleys and ravines. It is nowhere properly mountainous, but a range of hills of considerable elevation stretches along both its W. and N. frontiers. Its strata belong chiefly to the secondary formation, and there is a small outcrop partially worked in the neighbourhood of Laval, near its centre. Marble, limestone, slate, and granite, also occur, and a good deal of iron-ore is raised, though the iron which it yields is of very indifferent quality. The only river of the dep. is the Mayenne, which traverses it N. to S. and a few small tributaries. The soil, except in particular spots, is not very fertile; but the larger part of it, nearly two-thirds, is under cultivation, while not one-twentieth is waste. About one-seventh is in meadow, and one-twentieth in wood. The grain raised leaves a surplus after meeting the home consumption. Not much wheat is grown, the principal crops being rye, barley, buckwheat, oats, hemp and flax. From the cereals, which are numerous and extensive, a good deal of cider is made. Many cattle are reared, and considerable attention is paid to the dairy. The rearing of bees and poultry are important branches of rural sootiness. Game abounds, and the Mayenne is famous for its fish—carp, trout, pike, eels, and eels. The chief occupations are linen, particularly sailcloth and table linen. There are also cotton and paper mills, extensive blackfields, eight blast, and ten rolling furnaces. The trade is chiefly in corn, wheat, oilseed, honey, wax, cattle, poultry, wool, marble, building-stone, slate, iron wood, linen cloth, linen thread, &c. Mayenne, in the middle ages, was the theatre of numerous contests between the English and French, and was not definitely assigned to the latter till 1534. For administrative purposes, the department is divided into three arrondissements—Laval, the capital, Châteauneuf-sur-Mayenne, and Mayenne—divided into 37 cantons, and 374 communes. Pop. (1882) 374,566.

MAYENNE (Latin, Medunna), a town, France, dep. Mayenne, 17 m. N.N.E. Laval, chiefly on the bank Mayenne, but connected by a bridge with an extensive suburb on the S. bank. The whole town is irregularly and very indifferently built streets narrow and steep, and houses huddled together without any order. It has a large public square, adorned with a fountain, and a Moulin de Ville tower church, in the suburb and an old castle of the lords of Mayenne on the S. bank, and pretentiously overlooking the bridge. This castle was taken by the English, under the Earl of Salisbury in 1424, after a three months siege. The manufactures of linen, calico, and ticks, are important, and employ about 8000 persons in and around the town. There are also cotton-mills, blackfields and dye-works. Pop. 7970.

MAYENNE (La), (Latin Medunna) a river, France, which rises in deux Ornes, flows S. across dep. Mayenne, passing Laval, enters dep. Maine-et-Loire, and, a little above Angers, joins with the Loire and Saône in forming the Maine total course, about 135 m. of which about 55 m. commencing at Laval, are navigable, though much obstructed. Its chief affluents are on the right, the Varenne, Orléans, Ernée and Oudon; and on the left, the Jonenne and Oudon.

MAYEL (Latin, Medunna), a town, France, dep. Sarthe, 19 m. E.N.E. Le Mans. It has an old castle, flanked at the N. side by a large tower, and manufactures of sailcloth, serge, druggery, and blankets. Pop. 1848.

MAYFIELD, a town and par. England, co. Sussex, 31 m. N.E. Brighton, with handsome church, chapel for Jews, residents and Wesleyans, and an endowed school. Area of par. 18,904 ac. Pop. 8065.

MAYFIELD par. Eng. Bedford 3780 ac. Pop. 1318

MAYGLASS par. Irel. Westford 8328 ac. P. 1095

MAYLAND par. Eng. Essex 2080 ac. Pop. 208

MAYNE, three pars. Irel.—1 Kilkenny 1941 ac.

Pop. 425 —2 Louth 1061 ac. Pop. 262 —3 Westmeath

5604 ac. Pop. 1864

MAYNOOTH a market to Ireland, co. Kildare, and 18 m. W.N.W. Dublin, with which it is connected by railway. It has an Episcopal church & R. Catholic chapel, a school, and a R. Catholic college, founded, in 1795, by an Act of the Irish Parliament, and endowed for the education and maintenance of 600 students intended for the priesthood. Part of its revenue consists of a grant from the Imperial Parliament of £20,000 a year. Near it are the ruins of the castle of Maynooth, built in 1436. Pop. 1610.

MAYO, a maritime co. Ireland, W. coast, prov. Connaught; bounded, S. and E. by Galway, Roscommon, and Sligo; and on the N. and W. by the coast, greatest length, N. to S., 58 m. greatest breadth, E. to W., 72 m. containing an area of 8131 sq. m. or 1,321,381 ac., of which 497,587 ac. are arable, and 800,111 ac. uncultivated, the remainder occupied by plantations, towns, and water. Its coasts are deeply indented by numerous spacious bays and harbours—the principal of which are Killybeg Bay on the N. coast, and Broadhaven, Blackdog, Tulloghan, and Olow Bay, on the W. It comprises also numerous islands, which lie close on its shores—the largest of which are Achill, Glenties, and Inishboffin. The country is, in many parts, extremely mountainous, its highest summits varying from 3370 ft. to 2680 ft. above the level of the sea. There is, however, also much level and fertile land. Its only river of any size is the Moy, which falls into Killybeg Bay. There are numerous fresh-water lakes dispersed over the country; but they are all small, with exception of Lough Gown, Oulla, and Carravore, the first of which is about 9 m. long, and 3 m. to 3½ m. broad. The subject in the level parts is limestone; in the other parts, red Vol. II.

sandstone, mica-slate, granite, and quartz. Iron-ore abounds, but remains unwrought for want of fuel; there are several valuable slate-works. Cattle form the chief crop, but considerable quantities also of barley, bere, rye, potatoes, and turneps are grown, but pasturage is more attended to than tillage. The principal occupations are agriculture and fishing. The fishery districts are Westport, Balmullet, and Killybeg, together comprising 236 m. of maritime boundaries, which had, in 1843, 1046 registered fishing vessels, employing 4548 men and boys. In September 1846, there were 189 national schools in operation, attended by 30,099 children. The country is divided into nine baronies, and returns two members to Parliament. Constabulary (1863) 1014. Prison officials—Castlebar Bailiffs, and Westport. Pop. (1841), 388,687 (1851) 274,880.

MAYO, a vill and par. Irel. co. Mayo, 20 m. S.E. Westport, with the ruins of a monastery and of an old round tower. Area of par. 11,848 ac. Pop. 2379.

MAYO, one of the Cape Verde isles. lat. (N. point), 15° 15' N., lon. 23° 15' W. (x), 15 m. E.N.E. Santiago. It is about 21 m. in circumference, with a rocky coast, which, on the N. and N.E. ends, is also full of shoals, rendering navigation dangerous. There are two hills of some magnitude on the island, which may be seen from a distance of from 80 m. to 85 m. but the rest is flat and barren, and nearly destitute of water and altogether so of wood, yet the cattle here are considered better than those of any other of the Cape Verde islands. The only other valuable commodity it produces is salt, of which great quantities, formed by natural evaporation, are obtained in a large sandy bay, about 3 m. in length, and 1 m. in breadth, communicating with the sea by a narrow channel, through which the water enters only at high tides. The trade in salt, formerly in the hands of the British, is now in those of the Americans, who carry off many ship-loads annually. There is a small miserable town of the same name on the island. The natives are negroes, but have adopted the Portuguese language and manners.

MAYO, a river Mexico, which rises in a mountainous district in the S.W. of prov. Chihuahua, flows W.S.W. across prov. Sonora, and, after a course of about 180 m., falls into the Gulf of California.

MAYOMBA, or MAYOMBA a seaport and bay W. coast, Africa, S. Guinea, territory of Loango lat. 3° 23' 43" S., lon. 10° 28' E. (x). The river is at the head of a bay, which is extremely commodious for anchoring, being quite clear, with a fine sandy bottom all round, m. from 4 to 7 fathoms. The inhabitants work in copper and collect ivory and gum.

MAYOREA is a Spain. See CUNARAS (ALZAS).

MAYORGA DE CAMPOS, a town, Spain, Leon, prov. and 42 m. N.W. Valladolid, 1 bank Cas. It has six churches, two chapels, a convent, townhouse, hospital, two schools, and manufactures of coarse cloth, serge, and wine. Pop. 2002.

MAYOTTA an Isl. Indian Ocean, one of the Comores, at the N.E. entrance of the Mozambique channel Valentine Peak, S. and lat. 12° 54' S. lon. 45° 15' E. (x). It is less frequented than the other islands of the group to which it belongs, and is surrounded with reefs, within which are several small islands, and a number of bays, suitable for a anchorage. It is about 80 m. long, by 20 m. broad, volcanic, mostly composed of lava, mountainous, its highest summits nearly 2000 ft. high intersected by deep valleys or ravines, and well wooded. In the more level parts, the soil is a deep vegetable mould of great fertility. There are two vil- lages—that of Choa or Mayotte, and that of Zaoudi on an Isl. of same name one of those included within the enclosing reef. It has suffered severely from the Madagascar pirates, being only about 160 m. from the N.W. coast of that island. Pop. (1849) 6265.—(Descentes Geographie de Madagascar.)

MAYPOCHA, a small river, Chile, which rises on the W. slopes of the Andes, flows W. and S.W., past Santiago, and at lat. 33° 40', joins the Mapu entire length, about 60 m.

MAYPU, a river Chile, prov. Santiago, has its sources in the Andes, near the volcano of the same name; lat. 33° 40' S. It is joined by the Mapocha, and by several other considerable tributaries, and falls into the sea, nearly on the same parallel as that in which it has its rise, total course, about 100 m. It is not navigable, but its waters are much used to irrigate the contiguous country.

MAYRHOFEN, a vil. Austria, Tyrol, circle Schwaz, dist. and near Zell; with a church. Pop. 1346.

MAYSVILLE, a to. U. States, Kentucky, 1 bank Ohio, 60 m. N. Lexington, with which it is connected by railroad; has three churches, an academy, three schools, a harbor for boats, lumber-yard, a cotton-factory, sawery, brewery, a store and a saw mill. See. Pop. 3741.

MATWALDAD, a vil. France, prov. Rhodan, dep. Languedoc, circle Rhodan, with two churches, a castle, and two mills. Pop. 1626.

MAZAGAN, a report, Morocco, N.W. coast, lat. 33° 15' N., lon. 8° 29' W. (s.) 185 m. N.N.E. Mogador and 250 m. W. by S. Sea, near the extremity of a low rocky point projecting into the sea, and forming the W. limit of a sandy bay affording a good anchorage for small vessels. The ruins in the form of a square, the sides of which are about 800 yds. in length, encompassed by walls 80 ft. thick, and 35 ft. in height. The town is in a most salubrious site, and of the buildings still standing, a large proportion are used as storehouses for wool, great quantities of which are shipped here. The principal magazines and soldiers' quarters, bomb-proof, are in tolerable repair. It is well supplied with water. Pop. 2000.

MAZAGLO, a to. in Brazilian Guiana, prov. and about 150 m. W. N. Para, near 1 bank scenery of the Amazon. Much rice and cotton are raised in the district, but the population, instead of increasing, continues to diminish, chiefly in consequence of the prevalence of ague and the ravages of small-pox.

MAZAGONG a to. in Hindostan, Isl. Bombay principally inhabited by descendants of Portuguese. It has two Roman Catholic churches, and a good dock for small vessels.

MAZAMET, a to. in France, dep. Tarn, 1 bank Arnette, 32 m. S.E. Alby. It has a consistorial Calvinistic church; important manufactures of coarse woollens, flannels, and woolenish worsted, paper, and tanning and dye-works, and a trade in corn and excellent chestnuts. Pop. 4696.

MAZAN a to. in France, dep. Vaucluse, about 5 m. E. Carpentras famous for its sweet wines called Grenache. It has some trade in olives, saffron, and cherries. P. 2572.

MAZANDERAN or MAKENDJAN a prov. Persia, bounded N. by the Caspian, E. Khorezm, S. Irak Ajem, and W. Gilian, greatest length E. to W., about 200 m. breadth varying from 50 to 70 m. It forms the greater part of the low plain which lies along the S. shores of the Caspian, but rises rapidly towards the S. as it ascends the chain of the Elburz. It has no rivers of any consequence, but is watered by numerous streams, which, belonging to the basin of the Caspian, have all a N. direction. The high grounds are finely wooded, and the low plains extremely fertile. Even the sugar-cane thrives, and heavy crops of rice are everywhere grown. Cotton grows luxuriantly and the mulberry is employed in rearing vast numbers of silk-worms. Fruit also is very abundant, and the promiscuous farms whole forests. The worst evil by which the province suffers is the extensive nature of its climate, which causes superabundance of frogs and snakes, the latter not venomous and makes fever, ague, droum, &c., very prevalent. Pop. 150,000.

MAZAMONDOX, a to. Spain, New Castile, prov. and about 11 m. from Toledo. It has a church, townhouse, primary school and a trade in charcoal. Pop. 1566.

MAZATLAN, a to. and report, Mexico, dep. and 153 m. S.E. Oaxaca or Salina, at the entrance into the Gulf of California, lat. (mean-time) 23° 15' 48" N.; lon. 106° 25' 45" W. (s.) It is built on the coast of some heights, and has a clean and healthy appearance. The water is bad, but a very inferior and vegetables are scarce; but the supply of fish, pork, and oysters is abundant, and turtle of excellent quality are found on the river. The port is sheltered to some extent from the W. winds, but exposed to the W. and S. It forms the outlet for the products of the mining district of St. Sebastian, and imports considerable quantities of English goods. In 1846 its exports amounted to 2642,510, and its imports to 2320,200.

MAZIRA in Isl. Arabia. See MOSHARAF.

MAZIERES (Lain. Motziers), a to. in France, dep. Ardennes, 1 bank Lure, 25 m. N.E. Yvois, with tanneries and some trade in wool. Pop. 2438.

MAZO, or MATO, a to. in Chacabuco, S. side of Patagonia, consisting of wooden houses, most of them in a ruinous state. It has a courthouse and prison; and, near it, wheat, rye, millet, potatoes, wine, honey wax, and silk, are raised. Pop. 4181.

MAZUFURABAD, a small to. Punjab, 1 bank Khemganga, 60 m. N. by W. Attock. Lat. 34° 15' N.; lon. 73° 24' E., commanding the entrance of the Rarasta Pass into Cashmere.

MAZARA (anc. Megara), a to. Sicily, prov. and 30 m. S. Trapani, 1 bank Salini, near its mouth. It is surrounded by an old Sicanian wall, flanked by small square towers and has also an old alcaide at its S.W. angle. It is poorly built has narrow, ill-paved, and filthy streets; a cathedral, surmounted by a fine spire, several other churches, a bishop's palace, senate-house, several convents, an hospital and a college. Its harbour is capacious, but so shallow as only to admit small vessels, and the roads in which larger vessels must anchor want shelter. The trade, however is important, and there is a considerable export of corn, wine, brandy, soda, oil, and cotton. The Saracens landed here when they invaded and conquered Sicily. Pop. 6840.

MAZARA, (VAL no), an ancient division, which com. comprehended the W. part of Sicily, and now forms prov. Trapani and Girgenti, great part of prov. Palermo, and part of that of Caltanissetta. Palermo was its capital.

MAZZARINO, a to. Sicily, prov. and 15 m. S.E. Caltanissetta with a college, and sulphurous springs. The family to which the celebrated Cardinal Mazzarin belonged, took its name from this town. Pop. 3000.

MAZZARON, a to. and port, Spain. See ALMAZARON.

MAZZA, a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy, prov. Sondrio near 1 bank Adde, S. Berninco; with a handsome church, of which Giannangelo Medici, afterwards Pope Pius IV., was minister. Pop. 1129.

MDOUKAL, a vil. Algeria, in the Sahara, at the S.E. extremity of the lake Hadra, 97 m. N.W. Constantine. P. 700.

MEAGS, the cap. city of Japan. See MIYAKO.

MEADVILLE, a to. U. States, Pennsylvania, E. side of Friesburg Creek, lat. 41° 21' N.; lon. 80° 10' W. It has an elegant courthouse, seven churches, an academy, a state arsenal in the west of Allegheny college, and has also three tanneries, three mills and two printing-offices. Pop. 1819.

MEAHGUNGEE, a to. in Hindostan, kingdom of Oude; lat. 28° 45' N.; lon. 80° 22' E. on a flat, with a small lake on either side of it. It has wide streets, and is one of the handsomest little towns in the territory, though said to be now falling into decay. It is walled, defended by towers, and has strong garrisons.

MEALY MOUNTAINS, a mountain range, British America, E. coast Labrador between Cape Charles and Sand Bay, composed of mus-sels, the highest land on the coast, estimated about 1484 ft. above sea-level, and covered nearly to the top with timber.

MEANA,—1 A vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. and W.N.W. Turin with a church and a trade in corn, cattle, and chestnuts. Pop. 1550.—2, A vil., Isl. Savina, div. Cagliari, S. Oristano with five churches, a grammar school, manufactures of coarse woollens which employ about 250 looms, and a trade in wine, oil, fruit, cattle, and dairy produce. Pop. 1507.

MEANEE (Indian fishing station),—1, A to. Bolinda, on the Fathala branch of the Indus, 5 m. N. Hyderabad, lat. 25° 35' N.; lon. 68° 24' E.; famous as the scene of a great victory obtained by the Anglo-Indian army under Sir Charles Napier over the Baluchas, headed by the Amers of Bolinda, on February 17, 1843. The British force consisted, on this occasion, of only 3500 men and 12 pieces of artillery, the Baluchas army of 23,000 men, with 15 pieces of artillery. The former lost 256 men, killed and wounded; the latter about 5000.—2, A vil. Bolinda, 5 m. N. Bolinda, chiefly inhabited by Baluchas, lat. 25° 34' N.; lon. 67° 54' E.—3, A vil. Bolinda, 6 m. S. Hyderabad, 1 bank Indus lat. 25° 20' N.; lon. 68° 30' E.—4, A to. Bolinda, r. bank Indus, 45 m. S.W. Hyderabad.—5 A to. Punjab, r. bank Ravee, over which is a much-frequented ferry, 31 m. N.W. Lahore.—6, A vil. Afghanistan, 1 bank Damanj; lat. 29° 21' N.; lon. 70° 40' E.

MEARS, per Eng. Steamboat 2260 m. by S. m. Pop. 1665.

MEARN, per Scot. Steamboat, 7 m. by S. m. Pop. 8704.

MEASHAM, per Eng. Derby; 1490 m. Pop. 1668.

MEATH, a maritime co. Ireland, E. coast prov. Leinster bounded N. by Caron, Wick, and Louth, E. by the Irish

Sea and Dublin, W by Westmeath, and S. by Dublin, Kildare, and King's county. Greatest length, N. to W., 47 m., greatest breadth, E. to W., 40 m. Area, 508 sq. m., or 578,245 ac. of which 547,891 are arable. The country forms the E. part of the great limestone plain that extends over all the central portion of Ireland. It has only about 10 m. of coast, and no harbour of importance. The rivers are the Boyne and Blackwater. The surface is level or undulating, rising towards the W and N W the soil, a rich loam, and, in some places, of extraordinary fertility. Oats are the principal crop, after which follow wheat, potatoes, turneps, barley &c., and a considerable breadth is under mangel-wurzel, flax, meadow and down. Both the state of agriculture and the condition of the occupiers of land in this county are, speaking generally, alike bad. The occupations of the inhabitants are almost exclusively agricultural, chiefly grazing. Some coarse flens are manufactured. In September 1845, there were 181 national schools in operation, attended by 15,538 children. The county is divided into 16 baronies, and returns two members to Parliament. Constitution (1851), 1178. Principal towns Navan and Kells. Pop. (1841) 168,898 (1851) 140,750.

MEBAUX (Latic, Mele), a fr. France, cap. dep. Seine-et-Marne, on the Marne, which divides it into two unequal parts, near the canal of Ourcq 24 m. N.E. Paris. It is tolerably well built, contains a large though irregular square, a noble Gothic cathedral, begun in the 14th, and continued in the 16th centuries, but still unfinished, an Episcopal palace library of 14,000 volumes, college, townhouse, hospital, theatre, and cavalry barracks, manufactures of calicoes and cotton goods, leather, earthenware, agricultural implements, and numerous flour-mills, and a considerable trade in corn, cattle, wool, poultry, and cream cheese, known as fromage de Brie. Meaux is the see of a bishop, has courts of first resort and commerce, a communal college, diocesan seminary and secondary ecclesiastical school, an agricultural and scientific society. It was taken by the Normans in 892, and after a regular siege, by the English, in 1491. It may be regarded as the cradle of the Reformation in France; its bishop, Brissonnet, who had early embraced the reformed doctrine, though he afterwards altered them, having gathered around him a number of able men, some of whom, as Jacques Laffrey of Etampes and William Farel afterwards distinguished themselves as reformers. Pop. 7782.

MEBAVY per Reg. Devon 3289 ac. Pop. 294.

MEBARREZ, or MEBARREZ, a fr. Arabia, dist. east about 33 m. S. El Ahsa. It consists of the town proper surrounded by a deep ditch, defended by lofty towers and of an extensive suburb, with which it communicates by a single gate. To the E. of the town are date groves, interspersed with many large villages and hamlets. Pop. about 10,000.

MECCA, or MEKKA, the most celebrated city of Arabia, and long the capital of an independent state in the Hedjaz, five days journey E. Mecca, lat. 21° 58' N. lon. 40° 5' E. the birthplace of Mahomet, the founder of the superstition that bears his name, who was born here, A.D. 571. It is styled by Mahometans El Mekarrah (the noble). Om-el Kora (the mother of towns), Belad el-Amin (the land of the true believers) &c. Mecca stands in a narrow sandy valley 100 to 700 paces broad, extending, in a general direction N. to S., enclosed by steep hills, from 200 to 500 ft. high, without trees or verdure, and is ill supplied with water. In its centre is the Belad-Ilah (house of God) or El-Haram (the inviolable)—the great mosque, enclosing the Kahe, dividing the whole into the upper (northern) and lower (southern) towns these again being subdivided into 35 quarters, extensive of the suburbs, which stretch in single lines of houses along the narrow parts of the valley. The length of the city, properly so called, is 1600 paces, but 2000 paces more must be added for the suburbs. Mecca is reported to be in itself a good-looking city, the streets being wider than is usual in Eastern towns, the houses of stone, often three stories high, and well-lighted with windows looking towards the street, which gives them a gay and European appearance. It contains, however, but one great public square, and that is occupied, to a great extent, by the Belad-Ilah. It has not a second handsome mosque; there is no bazaar, no Khan or Inn, and, with exception of the Sherif's house, and two houses erected as madrasas or colleges, has converted into corn-stores, it contains no large buildings. The streets, unpaved, are, in dry weather, dark and with clouds of dust and, in rain, rendered impassable by deep mire. It is an open, unprotected town. The castle, built on its S.E. side, near the Sherif's house, is large enough for a garrison of 1000 men and is thought by the Arabs to be impregnable but while it commands the city, it is far from itself commanded by the surrounding heights. The old walls, which closed up the valley towards the N., S., and S.W., have long disappeared. The stationary population of Mecca was estimated by Burckhardt, in 1814, at between 25,000 and 30,000, including 8000 or 4000 Abyssinians and negro slaves. But the city is large enough for three times that number; and is annually filled at the time of the Haj or pilgrimage to the Kahe, when apartments in almost every house are hired to strangers, and thousands besides encamp outside the town. This pilgrimage, customary among the Arabs in early and idolatrous ages, and subsequently enjoined by Mahomet on all his followers, is the sole foundation of Mecca's fame, and the only source of her wealth and opulence.

The great temple of the Kahe, the Belad-Ilah, or El-Haram, is an unmeaning, modern-looking patchwork of ancient fragments, without any pretension to unity or style. It may be entered by 18 doors, and is adorned with many carved minarets, such as ordinarily decorate the larger mosques in the East, and not remarkable either for magnitude or beauty. Within, the great four-sided court of the temple, surrounded by colonnades of irregular pillars, is about 250 paces long and 200 wide and, nearly in the middle of it in a hollow stands the Kahe (cube) or sacred house, measuring, in length, about 18 paces, in width 14 paces and in height not exceeding 40 ft. The present edifice was erected in 1597 the previous one having been destroyed by a building terror, after heavy rain, and it is probable, from its situation, that the Kahe has often suffered from a like casualty. The sides of the Kahe are completely covered by the Kamea, that is, the veil or curtain of rich black silk, which is renewed every year, at the expense of the Ottoman Porte. This silken curtain, waving and fluttering with every breath of wind, is thought, by the simple devotees around, to be fluted by the wings of guardian angels. The pilgrims, most of them ignorant and half-savage, come here disposed to look with reverence on the Kahe, but their reverence does not embolden them to touch it, they get the better of their awe, as they gaze on the life-like movements and solemn undulations of the rich silk curtain. At two spots only is this covering removed, for the curtain is set on so as to expose a gray stone at the S.E. angle of the building, which it is thought meritorious to touch, and in like manner at the N.E. angle, is exposed the celebrated black stone, the kissing of which is a chief object of the pilgrimage. This stone is believed to be the angel whose office it will be, at the last day, to identify those who have duly performed the Haj. This belief however has not always availed to save it from rude treatment. It was carried off by the followers of Karmath, in A.D. 960, but was soon after recovered and replaced, bound in silver. Again in 1022 it was broken to pieces with a hammer, by the emultery of a heretical sulan. On this occasion some fragments were cemented together; and at present, the exposed surface of this stone, worn smooth by the lips of its worshippers, does not exceed 7 inches in diameter. Towards the close of the Haj, the old curtains of the Kahe are removed, to make way for the new ones; they are immediately divided into thousands of pieces by the officers of the mosque, who realize a good sum by the sale of these shreds of silk. Besides the member or pulpit of the Imam, and the desks assigned to the doctors of the different sects, there are several irregular and, in some measure, ugly buildings, round the Kahe. In one of these is the famous wall of Zeinunn, alleged to be the one whence Hagar obtained water for Ishmael, and which is surrounded with a clematis wall 5 ft. high and 10 ft. in diameter. The water of Zeinunn is perfectly fresh, though every other spring in the neighbourhood is brackish, at the same time it is a whitish lubricum, and difficult of digestion. A great deal of disease and mortality among the pilgrims is caused by drinking it immoderately. They devoutly believe it to be a sure remedy for all bodily ailments, and even salutary for the soul; for sick pilgrims, expiating death, often get themselves laid in the neighbourhood of the wall, trusting that, when they shall have expired, the hand of charity will sprinkle their bodies with the water of Zeinunn. Windings shoes, duly dipped in this water may be reckoned among the most profitable and most characteristic specimens of the industry of Mecca. Few pilgrims leave the holy city without taking with them some shawl filled from the sacred well, the sacred waters of which, if laid out upon the ash, instead of being wasted on evaporation would suffice to produce a real, not an imaginary paradise.

The Meccawi, or inhabitants of Mecca, are, with exception of a few Hejaz Bedouins, all strangers by birth or parentage that is to say they are either not natives of the place, or not descendants of the indigenous tribes. They are, in fact, settlers or children of settlers attracted hither by gain. They are extremely proud of their city, fond of fine clothes and parade, devoted to the pleasures of the table, and cold spectators of the humors which they periodically witness, and of which they make their money. Intent on gain they care not for learning; the colleges of Mecca have fallen to decay and the libraries, once rich, have totally disappeared. As Mecca, during the pilgrimage, is visited by 100,000 strangers on an average it becomes, for three or four months in the year, the greatest market in the East. Its merchants occasionally accumulate large fortunes, and, under the protection of the Turin, they are not afraid to show their riches, and live like princes. On the other hand, it is proverbial that Mecca is the beggar's paradise; the beggars of the holy city are innumerable, as well as numerous. The Sherifs, or direct descendants of Mahomet are now a numerous and widely-spread body. They all wear the same costume, priding themselves on the green robe which marks their descent and thence uniformly send their sons in infancy to be reared by the Bedouins. These nobles as they may be called, elect the Sherif of Mecca, and their choice is invariably confirmed by the Ottoman Sultan. — (Nicholson Descent of Pilgrims Travels of Ali Bey Burckhardt's Travels in Arabia.)

MEXEJANA a vil. Brazil prov and 12 m. E. Ceara, with a townships and church. Cotton-growing and cattle-raising are carried on. Pop. 2000.

MICHELLEN a vil. and com. Belgium prov. Limburg, 1 hour Meuse, 14 m. N. E. Hasselt with manufactures of earthenware and two flour-mills. Pop. (agricultural) 1187.

MICHELIN (French Molens Flemish Mickelen) a tu. Belgium, prov. and 14 m. S. S. E. Antwerp, with which and Brussels, Ostende, Liège, &c. It is connected by railway. It lies in a fertile plain on both sides of the Dyke, in of a circular form, and entered by eight gates. Though presenting somewhat of a decayed and deserted look, it is remarkable for the quaint architecture of its houses, and the extreme clean-

ness of its streets. Its principal edifices are its cathedral, an ancient Gothic structure, with a massive square tower 246 ft. high, and originally intended to have terminated in a spire, which would have made the whole height 640 ft.; the church of Notre Dame, built on the model of the cathedral; the church of St. Peter and St. Paul, with a communion-table regarded as a master-piece of wood-carving; the church of St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist; the church of Notre Dame d'Assomption, crowned by a dome; the church of the Angels, with a very remarkable facade, and the archbishop's palace, a plain, but handsome modern edifice. The manufactures consist chiefly of fine lace, for which the town has long been famous - felt and straw hats, woollen stuffs and woollen corsets, linen, cabinet-work, oil, leather, wax and tallow candles, paper, wax-cloth, copper-ware, jewelry, cordage, glass, starch, glass, vinegar &c. The trade, in addition to the above articles of manufacture, includes some hemp, flax, and hops, facilitated greatly by Michelin being the central station from which all the Belgian railways diverge. The three weekly markets are well attended, and there are two important annual fairs, each of which lasts 15 days. Michelin is the see of an archbishop, and possesses a court of first resort, a communal college, a great and a little seminary an academy of design a botanical garden a society for the encouragement of the fine arts, two barracks, two prisons, a mont-de-piété, several hospitals, almshouse and other benevolent institutions. It appears to have been founded in the fifth century. For some time it was the capital of a lordship, and was governed by its own counts. About 883 it was burnt down by the Normans but was rebuilt in 897, and soon after rose into importance. Its greatest prosperity was in the 14th century when it had important manufactures of broad-cloth, which employed above 8000 looms. Its most distinguished natives are Jean Rol, an excellent miniature, and Michel Corde, a good historical painter. Dubouca, a celebrated botanist, and physician to Charles V. Ernest of Mansfeld, a famous general, and Eype or Eypena, a distinguished jurist. Pop. 24,384.

MICHOACAN MICHOACAN, or VALLADOLID a state or dep. Mexican confederation, bounded, S. W. by the Pacific and surrounded on other sides by Colima, Jalisco Guanajuato, and Queretaro, and Mexico; lat. 17° 55' to 20° 37' N. lon 100° to 104° W. area, 22,598 sq. m. 168 N. and E. part consists of a table-land 8000 ft. to 8000 ft. above sea-level from which rise the noted Jorullo, and numerous snowy peaks. Sulphureous springs are abundant. Towards the W. the country descends by terraces to the Pacific, along which stretches, for 120 m. a tract of low land extending several miles inland. The basin, which forms the boundary towards Mexico on the S. E. and the Lerma, with their respective tributaries, are the most considerable streams, but smaller ones, as well as lakes, are numerous. A considerable portion of the soil is remarkably fertile, and capable of producing in abundance all the ordinary European and tropical fruits. The sides of the mountains are covered with forests of valuable woods, and there are gold, silver and lead mines, which were at one time wrought extensively. Producing no exports the products of the state are carried inland to Mexico and other places. The climate is remarkably healthy. Besides Morelia or Valladolid, the capital, the principal towns are Patzcuaro and Zimacoro. Along with Jalisco and Colima, this state formed the ancient kingdom of Michoacan. It is divided into four departments, and 63 municipalities. Pop. 491,679.

MICINA-BORRAN a tu. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 50 m. S. E. by S. Granada. It is indifferently built, has two squares, a church, three chapels, three schools, a town-house, small prison, stonehouse manufactures of linen and brandy and some trade in wine, oil, and silk. Pop. 2630.

MICKENHIM a tu. 1, A tu. Bavaria, Prussia, on the Rhine; with a church. Pop. 1794. — 2 A tu. in Rhineland Prussia, gov. and 31 m. S. Cologne. It is walled, and has a church, a chapel, several mills, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1800.

MICKLEBURGH a tu. Spain, New Castle, prov. and 31 m. from Madrid with poor, earthen houses, tolerably well-paved and spacious streets, a large and magnificent church, good townhouse, prison, two primary schools, and a considerable trade in flour, sent to Madrid. Pop. 1418.

MEDAK, a vil. Austria, Croatia, at the confluence of the Glamochna with the Lupa, 12 m. from Gospić; with a church and a dilapidated castle. Pop. 1377.

MEDMURNE, a tu. England, Leicestershire 2530 ac. P. 567.

MEDSE, a tu. Bavaria, Prussia, 25 m. S. N. Bavaria. It is well built, has three churches, a small theatre, a con-

NOTRE DAME CATHEDRAL AND MARKET PLACE, MICHELIN. — From Pons's Sketches.

ness of its streets. Its principal edifices are its cathedral, an ancient Gothic structure, with a massive square tower 246 ft. high, and originally intended to have terminated in a spire, which would have made the whole height 640 ft.; the church of Notre Dame, built on the model of the cathedral; the church of St. Peter and St. Paul, with a communion-table regarded as a master-piece of wood-carving; the church of St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist; the church of Notre Dame d'Assomption, crowned by a dome; the church of the Angels, with a very remarkable facade, and the archbishop's palace, a plain, but handsome modern edifice. The manufactures consist chiefly of fine lace, for which the town has long been famous - felt and straw hats, woollen stuffs and woollen corsets, linen, cabinet-work, oil, leather, wax and tallow candles, paper, wax-cloth, copper-ware, jewelry, cordage, glass, starch, glass, vinegar &c. The trade, in addition to the above articles of manufacture, includes some hemp, flax, and hops, facilitated greatly by Michelin being the central station from which all the Belgian railways diverge. The three weekly markets are well attended, and there are two important annual fairs, each of which lasts 15 days. Michelin is the see of an archbishop, and possesses a court of first resort, a communal college, a great and a little seminary an academy of design a botanical garden a society for the encouragement of the fine arts, two barracks, two prisons, a mont-de-piété, several hospitals, almshouse and other benevolent institutions. It appears to have been founded in the fifth century. For some time it was the capital of a lordship, and was governed by its own counts. About 883 it was burnt down by the Normans but was rebuilt in 897, and soon after rose into importance. Its greatest prosperity was in the 14th century when it had important manufactures of broad-cloth, which employed above 8000 looms. Its most distinguished natives are Jean Rol, an excellent miniature, and Michel Corde, a good historical painter. Dubouca, a celebrated botanist, and physician to Charles V. Ernest of Mansfeld, a famous general, and Eype or Eypena, a distinguished jurist. Pop. 24,384.

MICHOACAN MICHOACAN, or VALLADOLID a state or dep. Mexican confederation, bounded, S. W. by the Pacific and surrounded on other sides by Colima, Jalisco Guanajuato, and Queretaro, and Mexico; lat. 17° 55' to 20° 37' N. lon 100° to 104° W. area, 22,598 sq. m. 168 N. and E. part consists of a table-land 8000 ft. to 8000 ft. above sea-level from which rise the noted Jorullo, and numerous snowy peaks. Sulphureous springs are abundant. Towards the W. the country descends by terraces to the Pacific, along which stretches, for 120 m. a tract of low land extending several miles inland. The basin, which forms the boundary towards Mexico on the S. E. and the Lerma, with their respective tributaries, are the most considerable streams, but smaller ones, as well as lakes, are numerous. A considerable portion of the soil is remarkably fertile, and capable of producing in abundance all the ordinary European and tropical fruits. The sides of the mountains are covered with forests of valuable woods, and there are gold, silver and lead mines, which were at one time wrought extensively. Producing no exports the products of the state are carried inland to Mexico and other places. The climate is remarkably healthy. Besides Morelia or Valladolid, the capital, the principal towns are Patzcuaro and Zimacoro. Along with Jalisco and Colima, this state formed the ancient kingdom of Michoacan. It is divided into four departments, and 63 municipalities. Pop. 491,679.

MICINA-BORRAN a tu. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 50 m. S. E. by S. Granada. It is indifferently built, has two squares, a church, three chapels, three schools, a town-house, small prison, stonehouse manufactures of linen and brandy and some trade in wine, oil, and silk. Pop. 2630.

MICKENHIM a tu. 1, A tu. Bavaria, Prussia, on the Rhine; with a church. Pop. 1794. — 2 A tu. in Rhineland Prussia, gov. and 31 m. S. Cologne. It is walled, and has a church, a chapel, several mills, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1800.

MICKLEBURGH a tu. Spain, New Castle, prov. and 31 m. from Madrid with poor, earthen houses, tolerably well-paved and spacious streets, a large and magnificent church, good townhouse, prison, two primary schools, and a considerable trade in flour, sent to Madrid. Pop. 1418.

MEDAK, a vil. Austria, Croatia, at the confluence of the Glamochna with the Lupa, 12 m. from Gospić; with a church and a dilapidated castle. Pop. 1377.

MEDMURNE, a tu. England, Leicestershire 2530 ac. P. 567.

MEDSE, a tu. Bavaria, Prussia, 25 m. S. N. Bavaria. It is well built, has three churches, a small theatre, a con-usual school, manufacture of hats, a tannery, several stills, and a trade in rice, corn, fruit, wine, and silk. P. 4415.

MEDEAH, or MEDWRA, a tn. Algeria, 46 m. S.W. Algiers, 1 bank one of the head-streams of the Woujir. It is walled, has two gates, a few mosques, a building formerly used as a barracks for janissaries, a large square structure containing the magazine, and a palace. The latter has nothing particularly attractive in its external appearance, but within is a large square court, paved with white marble, and surrounded by a gallery with arcades of Moorish architecture, into which the doors and windows of the apartments open. The town is supplied with water from a neighbouring mountain, by means of a lofty aqueduct. Pop. (1849), 5590, of whom 2156 were Europeans.

MEDERACH, a tn. Prussia, Westphalia, gov. and 48 m. S.E. Arnsberg, on the Ocker with four churches, and manufactures of woollens and potash. Pop. 2514.

MEDELLIN, a city, New Granada, dep. Condellmunez, gov. and 80 m. S.E. Antioquia. Pop. estimated at 14,000.

MEDEMBLIK, a seaport, and once fortified in Holland, prov. N. Holland, 29 m. N.E. Amsterdam, near the entrance to the Zuider Zee. Its harbor once important, is now partly silted up, and its commerce is insignificant. It has four gates, five churches, and a synagogue; a townhouse, several schools, and is the seat of the royal marine institute, for education and training young men intending to be naval officers. Inhabitants occupied in seafaring, and in trading in cheese, butter, rock-salt, &c. &c. Pop. 2507.

MEDENICE, a vil. Austria, Galicia, circle and about 96 m. from Sandomir on the Leticzka. It has two churches, a synagogue, and a mill. Pop. about 1820.

MEDESANO, a vil. and com. Italy, dnity of and 10 m. S.W. Parma, 1 bank Taro with a primary school, limekilns, and a trade in cattle, sheep, and swine. Pop. 3824.

MEDGYER, MEDJACET, or MEDWACH (anc. Macha), a free town, Austria, Transylvania, ep. dist. or stuhl, 1 bank Great Kokai 25 m. N.N.E. Hermannstadt. It is walled has six gates a very large market place, four churches, a gymnasium with a small library, and a Franciscan monastery. Though there are four annual fairs, the external trade is not important but a good deal of wine is sent into the interior. Pop. 5900.—The parvoir or traveller belongs wholly to the basin of the Maros. It is sandy and not well adapted for wheat, but has good pastures, and produces the best wine in Transylvania. Area, 184 sq. m. Pop. 32 000.

MEDIA, a country of ancient Asia, the boundaries of which, from having varied at different times, are not easily determined. Strabo divides it into Great Media and Little Media. The former consisting of an elevated plateau with a good climate and a fertile soil, separated from the low country of the Tigris and Euphrates, on the W and S. E. by a mountain range, and extending E. to the Caspian mountains (the modern Elburz), and a desert, apparently corresponding with the Persian province of Irak Ajem; the latter which extended as far N. as the Arax, corresponds with Azerbaijan, and may also have included Mamedon and Gilan. The capital of Great Media was Ecbatana, now Hamadan, that of Little Media was Gasa, which appears to have had its site not far from the modern Tabriz. Media originally formed part of the Assyrian empire, rose afterwards to be an independent monarchy, and, having been subjugated by Cyrus, was incorporated with Persia. On the downfall of the Persian empire it passed, first to the Seleucids, and then to the Parthians.

MEDIANA, a tn. Spain, Aragon, prov. and 21 m. S.E.E. Saragossa, 1 bank Gbel; with a church, townhouse, prison, a superior and a primary school, several mills, and some wool combed. Pop. 1811.

MEDICINA, or MEDUNIA, a tn. Italy, legion and 15 m. E. Bologna. Pop. about 5190.

MEDINA [Arabic, Madinah or Makkah], the prophet's city, msa. Yathrib, the Jathribah of Ptolemy, a city, Arabia, celebrated for containing the tomb of Mahomet, and chief place in N. Hejaz, about 240 m. N. by W. Mecca, lat. 24° 57' N., lon. 39° 38' E. It stands at the E. side of the mountains running parallel to the Red Sea, about 5000 ft. above sea-level; an Arabian plain extends E. from it; in every other direction the view is bounded by hills or mountains, which, towards the S.W., have a bold and rugged appearance. The summit of the maritime chain are in winter often covered with snow and Medina, on the table-land at the foot of these mountains, experiences severe cold and frost. As it comprises, however, a depression in the table-land, and all the streams from the country around flow towards it, it is the most fertile spot in all Hejaz, though, from the same cause, extremely unhealthy. The town forms an oval about 2800 paces in circumference, and is surrounded by a strong stone wall about 40 ft. high, flanked with towers, while on a rock, at its N.W. side, stands the castle. Of its three gates, that facing the S., and called the Bab-al-Mina or Egyptian gate, is remarkable for its beauty. Though Medina has no large buildings besides the great mosque, two smaller ones, a college, and public baths it yet seemed to Burckhardt the handsomest city in the E. after Aleppo. The houses are of stone, two stories high, and many of them bespeak opulence and comfort. Beyond the walls of the city, W and E, are suburbs consisting of low houses, yards, gardens, and plantations, in which the Bedouin encamp. These suburbs have also their walls and gates. The canal, which supplies Medina with water from a valley, a few miles to the S., is a noble work, and undoubtedly the greatest of its kind in Arabia. It is generally about 55 ft. underground, and terminates in a basin from which all may draw without restraint. The water, like that of Mecca, is lukewarm and indigestible.

The mosque of the prophet stands at the E. side of the city and resembles that at Mecca in its plan, though on a smaller scale and its colonnades are likewise remarkable only for their extreme irregularity. The tomb of the prophet is enclosed with a screen of iron filigree, painted green, and of excellent workmanship, at the S. side of which the pilgrims go through his devotions for all of which he pays, but is consoling with the assurance that one prayer here is as good as a thousand elsewhere. There are four doors into the interior, but one of these only is open and kept by a cunch. Admission into the enclosed area, or El Hajarah, is allowed only to Pashas, leaders of the Haj, and such like, on payment of a large fee. There is little to be seen inside, however, but the embroidered silk curtains which are sent every five or six years from Constantinople, whether the old curtains are sent back that they may cover the tombstones of the Sultan and his family. The curtains are said to conceal a quadrangular black stone, supported by two pillars, between which are the graves of Mahomet, and his friends and successors, Abu Bakr and Omar. The Arabs in Medina know nothing of the great magnet which, according to some Europeans, supports the coffin of Mahomet. Though the pilgrimages to the prophet's tomb is not considered by Mahometans as an unproductive duty like that to the Kahe, yet great numbers flock to the former and the more ignorant classes of pilgrims, from Africa particularly, seem to prefer decidedly the mosque of the prophet to the house of God. It is estimated that one-third of the Meccan pilgrims go on to Medina, the pilgrimage to which may be performed at any time of the year. The inhabitants of Medina are, like those of Mecca, strangers in the land of the Bedouin, who are all poor, and incapable of changing their habits. The sedentary attraction to the holy city becomes in a short time numerous in feelings, manners, and language. The people of Medina are less gay and vicious than those of Mecca, and at the same time more studious as to appearances, not are they inattentive to learning, and some of them are said to possess fine libraries. The Shaykh in Medina are Ulama or doctors of the Koran and not men of the sword, as in Mecca. It is remarkable, that the two holy cities of the orthodox Mahometan world are in the midst of sectaries, for as Mecca is surrounded by the followers of Zaid, so the Bedouin tribes, and many of the Shaykh at Medina, are adherents of Ali. But the chief distinction between the two cities is, that in Mecca the better class of people live altogether by trade, founded on the great concourse of strangers who visit the Kahe in Medina, on the other hand, commerce is held in contempt and the settlements of the Bedouin, in this respect, have retained their unaltered form. The business of the places is all done by the merchants of Yambu or Yambu, a port on the Red Sea, about 100 m. S.W. The population of Medina is supposed to be from 16,000 to 20,000, of whom 15 000 are within the walls. Medina appears to have been originally quite independent of Mecca, and to have been ruled by a governor appointed by the Caliph. In the course of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, however, the latter city obtained a decided ascendancy, and the Sheriff of Mecca ruled all Hejaz. This continued until the Turks, pursuing their Medina was, from the N., the key of this country, contrived to obtain a footing in it, appointing the Ghazal of Mecca, as governor of the city with a small garrison. This state of things continued till the beginning of the present century, when the place fell into the hands of the Wahabî. They were in turn expelled by the Turco-Egyptian army in 1814, whose operations against Deraïch were directed from this point, which ended in the subjugation of those fierce and turbulent reformers. From that time it has remained undisturbed as the capital of the N. pashalik of Arabia. (Nisibeh Duerga, de l'Arabie, Travels of Ali Bey, Burckhardt's Travels in Arabia.)

MEDINA—1. A vil. Soussunbia. Jaffa country on a small hill lat. 15° 18' N. lon. 15° 18' W., where dyeing, chiefly in blue and green colours, is carried on to a considerable extent.—2 (anc. Meda) A river England, Isle of Wight. It rises on the E.W. coast of the island, flows N. and enters the Solent at Cowes harbour. It is navigable for vessels of 80 tons to Newport.

MEDINA, several places, Spain.—1 (de las Torres) A ta, Extremadura, prov. and 38 m. S.E. Badajoz. It has low small houses, built without any approach to uniformity; a townhouse, several primary schools, a house of refuge, a parish church, and, on an isolated eminence, the remains of an ancient castle. It flourishes by numerous flour and three oil mills, manufactures of blankets, and friezes, and extensive horticulture. Pop. 22601.—2 (de Pinar) A vil. Old Castle, prov. and 29 m. N. by E. Burgos. It has a fine bridge of seven arches over the Trucha, a townhouse, two churches, three nurseries, a Latin and three primary schools, several benevolent institutions—an hospital for the sick, an asylum for bachelors and widowers above 50, and another for 12 poor persons of both sexes; also nurseries, 11 flour-mills, one for linseed-oil, and some linen-weaving. Pop. 11390.—3 (de Biscaya) A ta, Leon, prov. and 25 m. S.W. Valladolid, on the Segura. It has 11 squares, large and small, some of them, as well as of the streets, provided with arcades; a substantial well-built townhouse, the ruins of a palace, several handsome arcades which give entrance to the city, two Latin and several other schools, a foundling hospital and an infirmary, a granary, three hand some churches, two nurseries, and various barnyards in and around the town. Of its walls only three bastions and six gates remain, to testify to the solidity and beauty of the ancient fortifications. Agriculture is the chief occupation, but there are also manufactures of serge and other woollen stuffs, coloured leather, pottery, tiles, hair, chocolate, brandy &c., and a considerable traffic is carried on with Galicia, the Asturias, and other parts. Still Medina has greatly declined from its former commercial importance. Pop. 4500.—4 (del Campo) (anc. Methana Campestris), A ta, Leon, prov. and 36 m. S.W. Valladolid. It has a townhouse, a primary school for each sex, two hospitals, a colligate, and six parish churches and a railway old-tower. The great square is surrounded with houses, and has a fountain in the centre. There are likewise ruins of convents, barracks, and other edifices, which denote the ancient importance of this place, which is said to have once contained 50 000 inhabitants. It was a royal court, and much-frequented important. In the castle the infamous Count Borja was confined for two years, until he escaped by the aid of the Count of Benavente, and Queen Isabella died in it, November 26, 1504. Medina was the capital of the Campo, or level district, which is one of the finest wheat countries in the world. Besides grain, some wine is exported; and there are two chocolate-mills, tanneries, and hat manufactory. Pop. 2746.—5 (delosantos), A vil. Andalusia, prov. and 33 m. S.E.E. Cadix, in the form of an amphitheatre, on a broad eminence, in the middle of an extensive plain. In general the houses are but one story high, but there are some of three stories, with painted doorways and windows; and the streets are clean and well paved. The principal square in which stand the Tucson and Doric townhouse and the granary has a planted promenade, and is provided with lamps. There are also ten schools, two of them gratuitous; a foundling hospital, an orphan asylum, and two other benevolent institutions, two churches, two nurseries, five approved manufactory, and five barnyards agriculture, wool-rearing, manufactures of earthenware, triels, skins, mill-stones, carpets, cordage, &c.; flour and oil mills. Carrying grain and other produce to Cadix, and other places, are the chief occupations. The principal articles imported are soap, wine, woolens and cottons, oil, fish, and other necessaries. Pop. 10 654 (Metha).

MEDINACELI, a ta. Spain, Old Castle, prov. and 45 m. S. Boria with a townhouse, granary, primary school for both sexes, a one-story high palace of the Duke of Medinelli, an hospital for the sick poor, two nurseries, a parish church, and some manufactures of hempen and linen fabrics, balise, and ordinary cloths. Pop. 1600.

MEDINET ABU OR MURRAY-HANCO. See TANZAN.
MEDINET-EL-FAYOUM a ta, central Egypt, cap. prov. Fayoum, 56 m. S.W. Cairo. It stands near the mounds marking the site of the ancient Arsinoe or Crocoditopolis, and is a place of some importance, being the residence of the governor, and containing a number of barracks, an arsenal, and a jail. It has manufactures of woollen linen and cotton goods, shawls, carpets, &c. is the entrepot of a considerable trade, and is famous for its rose-water produced from fields of roses in the vicinity. Pop. about 5000.

MEDITERRANEAN SEA [Latin, Mare Internum, French, Mer Méditerranée, Spanish and Italian, Mar or Mar Mediterraneo, German, Mittelmeer or Mitteländisches Meer] a great inland sea, between lat. 30° 30' and 45° 50' N., and lon. 15° W. and 35° E. about 2500 m. long, breadth, from Venice to the Bay of Sidra, 1200 m. It washes the shores of Europe on the N. and N.W., those of Africa on the S., and those of Asia on the E., and communicates on the W. with the Atlantic Ocean by the Strait of Gibraltar and on the N.E. with the Black Sea, through the Sea of Marmara and the Straits of the Dardanelles, and Constantinople. It is very irregular in shape, and by the projection of the S. part of Italy, and of Cape Bon in Africa, and the interposition of the island of Sicily, is divided, near its centre, into two distinct, and not very unequal portions, an E. and a W. In addition to these, the other important subdivisions are the Tyrrhenian or Tuscan Sea, between the W. coast of Italy and the islands of Sardinia and Corsica, the Adriatic Sea or Gulf of Venice, between the E. coast of Italy and the W. coast of Turkey in Europe and Dalmatia, the Ionian Sea, between the W. coasts of Turkey in Europe and Greece, and the E. part of Italy and the island of Sicily, the Aegean Sea or Archipelago, between Turkey in Europe and Greece, on the W. and Turkey in Asia on the E. and the Levant, which is usually understood to include the whole sea E. of the island of Crete. The largest gulls are, on the shores of Europe, those of Lion, Genoa, Tarento, Lepanto, Koron, Kolokythia, Agion and Salencia, on the shores of Asia, Adrymatti, Smyrna, Adalia, and Skanderon and on the shores of Africa, Sidra, and Cabes. The most remarkable capes, commencing in the W., and making the circuit of the coast, are those of Gibraltar Gate, Palos, Mar Spartivento, Lanes, Matapan, Colonna, Achos, Bala, Othello, Anaxos, Bon, and Ceuta. The largest and most important islands are Sicily, interposed, as already mentioned, between the two great portions of the sea, Sardinia, Corsica, and the Balearic Isles, in the W. division, and Cyprus, Rhodes, Crete, the Ionian Isles, and Malta, in the E. division. The principal rivers which discharge themselves into the Mediterranean are the Rhod, Rhone, Po, and Nile, but its communication with the Black Sea enables it to claim it as part of its basin, and consequently also the great rivers, Dan, Dnieper, Dniester and Dumbra. Between Cape Bon and the Sicilian coast, where the water is shallowest, the depth barely exceeds 50 fathoms; but in almost all other places, particularly at a distance from the shores and islands, is so much increased, that it often gives no soundings. Owing to the very narrow channel which connects the Mediterranean with the main ocean, there is very little tide, though, in some places, as in the Ionian Sea, the Adriatic, on parts of the African coast, &c. a rise of more than 6 ft. sometimes occurs. The general current, entering from the ocean, proceeds E. along Africa, then N. along Syria, and begins to return by proceeding W. along Anaxilla. The prevailing winds are the S.E. and S.W. in spring, and the N.E. and N.W. during the rest of the year. They often blow suddenly, and with great violence. The most remarkable are the Bura in the Adriatic, the Etesiae and Tyrrhenian in the Aegean; and the burning Sirocco, from the African desert. Water-spouts are common on the coast of Asia Minor. Active volcanoes exist on the coast of Naples, in the Lipari islands, Sicily and the Grecian archipelago; and, in July, 1881, the remarkable active volcano named Graham's Island was shut up from the sea, between Sicily and the African coast, lat. 37° 5' 30" N., lon. 13° 43' 15" E., and again disappeared (see GRAHAM'S ISLAND). The Mediterranean abounds with fish, and also furnishes the finest coral, sponges, and ambergris.

MEDJIBOU, a tn. Basile, gov. Fodohk, 70 m. N.E. Kassarisi, r. bank Bag. It is surrounded by extensive marshes, and accessible only by a bridge. Pop. 4386.

MEDLA, or MENZO, a vil. Austria, Moravia, circle Olmutz, 4 m. from Lititz, with a church. Pop. 1236.

MEDLING or MODLING, a market tn., Lower Austria, 9 m. S.W. Vienna. It has a church of the 13th century on ancient townships, barracks, and a bathing establishment created over a chalybeate sulphurous spring, which is much resorted to by visitors from Vienna, a theatre, and some print-works. Pop. 3500.

MEDMENHAM, par Eng. Hants 3420 ac. P. 491.

MEDNOI, or COFFEE ISLAND, Arabia Emerica, Behring's Sea, 180 m. E. Kamtschatka, and 35 m. E. Behring's Isle, lat. 55° 7' N. lon. 165° E.; length, N.W. to S.E. 35 m., breadth, about 13 m. The coast is rocky precipitous but with two good harbours, into which two small streams fall; much frequented by seals and sea-eagles. Few inhabitants.

MEDO, a small isl. Brazil, bay of São Marcos, prov. and 4 m. W. Maranhão, covered with verdure but fringed by shoals, on which many vessels have been wrecked.

MEDOC, a dist. France, which belonged to the former prov. of Gascony, and is now included in dep. Gironde; Lescar is its capital. It gives its name to one of the best of the French clarets.

MEDOMBLEY, a vil. and chapelry England, co. and 12 m. N.W. Durham with a chapel and places of worship for Baptists, Methodists, Quakers, and Wesleyans, and several schools. Pop. 756.

MEDSTED, par Eng. Hants 3611 ac. Pop. 482.

MEDVEJIJ-OSTROVA, see DEAD ISLANDS.

MEDVES, a vil. Hungary Thither Thelen, co. and 5 m. from Temesvár, on the Theiss with a church. Pop. 1602.

MEDVEDITZA, a river, Basile, which rises in the N. of gov. Basile, and flows S.W. through Don Cossacks, and, after a course of about 300 m., joins a bank Don, at the town of Ostrovsk.

MEDWAY (see Vaga, a winding course) a river, England, which rises in co. Sussex, flows N.E. in a wind-swept course across co. Kent, past Tunbridge and Maidstone, to Rochester and Chatham where it becomes a tidal stream of great depth, its reaches forming a safe and commodious harbour for the royal navy. Below Chatham it spreads out into a broad estuary in which are several islands, and joins the Thames at Sheerness. The Eden, the Teise, and the Bunt, are its chief affluents. It is navigable to Faversham, 20 m. above Chatham, distant diestocks.

MEDYN, or MEDYNA, a tn. Basile, gov. and 37 m. N.W. Kaluga, cap. circle, on the Medynka, with two churches, and some general trade. The French were here defeated by the Russians in 1812. Pop. (1860) 2744.

The circle, well wooded and fertile, depastures cattle of a superior description. Area, 978 sq. m. Pop. 73,671.

MEDYUN, a tn. France, gov. Basile, gov. Basile, dist. Wartemburg, with a church, and a trade in cattle, corn, wine and tobacco. Pop. 1843.

MEDDEN, a vil. Holland, prov. and 16 m. S.E. Groningen; with a church, a school, a corn and a falling mill. Pop. (agricultural) 1231.

MEDLICK, two par. Ireland—1, (Galweg), 4115 ac.

Pop. 1003.—2, (Mag), 3063 ac. Pop. 3699.

MEDLENAGH, par Trin. Washed, 4189 ac. P. 1843.

MEREN (see), a tn. France, dep. Ille-et-Vilaine, 24 m. W. N. W. Rennes, with a church, and a trade in cattle, corn, wine and tobacco.

MEERAN, MEERAN, or MEERAN, a maritime in Persia, prov. Korosan, on the Persian Gulf, at the mouth of the river of same name, lat. 27° 7' 45" N. lon. 56° 40' E.; in the better parts the houses are built of rough stone, connected with wood with tile in the whitewash in place of glass. Near it is the fort of Meeran, on elevated ground, on the S. bank of the river.

It is of a quadrangular form, flanked by round towers at the corners; has strong walls, and is generally in good condition, and garrisoned by about 100 men.—The river rises in a mountain called Jebel Ghani, distant about 80 m. from the town. When the snow melts on the hills, or heavy rain falls, it flows into a large and rapid stream, but, at other times, it is insignificant. It is a source of great fertility to that portion of the district adjoining the sea through which it passes, rendering it so beautiful and so productive as to have obtained for it the name of the Paradise of Persia.

MEERAN or MIRAN, a vil. Persia, prov. and 90 m. W. Korosan, in a mountainous district, lat. 29° 45' N., lon. 54° 55' E., remarkable for the number of its grooves.

MEERANGA, or MOORANGA, a tn. Punjab, 105 m. S.W. Lahore lat. 31° 17' N. lon. 72° 25' E. where white cotton cloth is manufactured to the extent of 1,800,000 yards annually for the Afghan market.

MEERANA, a tn. Saxony, circle and 12 m. N.N.E. Zwicken, with the ruins of an old castle, manufacture of woollen and cambrics, several dye-works a silk-works, two mills, and three lincolns. Pop. (1849) 7840.

MEERAT a tn. Hindostan, prov. and 36 m. W. by N. Ajmer, lat. 26° 38' N. lon. 73° 45' E.

MEERBEKE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, 21 m. S.S.E. Ghent with several distilleries, breweries, three factories four flour and two oil mills. Pop. 3441.

MEERENDRE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, 6 m. N.W. Ghent; with some weaving of linen and cotton fabrics. Pop. 2545.

MEERGHUR, a tn. W. Hindostan, princip. and 80 m. E. Bahawalpur lat. 29° 10' N. lon. 72° 22' E. protected by a small brick built fort.

MEERHOUT, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 30 m. E. by N. Antwerp, on the Grand Noche. It has two breweries, two distilleries, some oil and corn mills, and manufacture of woollen stuffs, tobacco, vinegar, cordage, &c. Pop. 3406.

MEERLE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 23 m. N.E. Antwerp, on the Mark with three breweries and several mills. Pop. 1288.

MEERPOOR—1, A thriving tn. Solnde, near a bank Phygara, a great branch of the Indus, and on the route from Cutch to Hyderabad, lat. 24° 45' N. lon. 68° 20' E. Pop. 10,000.—2, A vil. Solnde, 10 m. E. Garra. Close to it is Mondkuria, a ruined city exhibiting many evidences of former population and wealth, lat. 24° 40' N. lon. 67° 45' E.—3, A vil. Solnde near bank of the channel of the Buggar, formerly the great W. outlet of the Indus lat. 24° 30' N. lon. 67° 45' E.—4, A vil. Solnde, 22 m. W. Chanderpur, lat. 24° 34' N. lon. 67° E.—5, A vil. Baluchistan prov. Cutch Guadara, on the great route from Solnde to Ghazee and Kandahar, on the Nari lat. 26° 28' N. lon. 67° 55' E.

MEERSEN a vil. Holland, prov. Limburg 4 m. N.E. Maestricht, r. bank Geule with two churches, a synagogue two schools, and two castles. Pop. (agricultural) 1000.

MEERUT, a tn. dist. and division, Hindostan prov. Delhi. The town, 35 m. N.N.E. Delhi lat. 28° 55' N. lon. 77° 35' E., on a wide and dry plain, is of considerable extent, and surrounded by a bank wall the streets are narrow and the houses mean. A small nullah or water-course, with a handsome bridge over it, runs through it. The principal buildings are the Mahometan tomb, without the walls, built of red stone and the church, the largest in British India, being capable of containing 3000 persons. At a little distance from the town is a handsome and spacious barracks.—The district is inhabited by those of Mowadab Saharapur Roohmudshakar, and Delhi. Area, 2323 sq. m. P. 560,786.

—The division comprises the districts of Saharapur Mowadshakar, Mowad, Roohmudshakar and Alhyghni or Alhyghni. Area, 10,115 sq. m. Pop. 3,384,432.

MEERDEN, par Eng. Hants 1008 ac. Pop. 383.

MEETH par Eng. Devon 2479 ac. Pop. 383.

MEGALO-KASTRO, a name given to Candia (which see).

MEGALOPOLIS, an anc. city of Greece, Morea, near the sources of the Rouda, 12 m. S.E.E. Tripolitza. It was 6 m. in circumference, but little of it now remains except its vast theatre, which is very perfect.

MEGANISH (Jaco. Thelodion), one of the smaller Ionian isles, between St. Maurice and the mainland separated from the former by a narrow channel, and distant from the latter about 6 m. S. and in lat. 38° 30' N. lon. 20° 45' E.

MEGARA, a vil. Greece, 20 m. W by N Athens, on the isthmus of Corinth, formerly of considerable extent, but now an insignificant place, in a ruinous state, with about 1000 inhabitants.

MEGASPRILION a convent, Greece, Morca, near the Kalavrita, 25 m. S.E. Patras. It is said to be one of the earliest monastic foundations in Greece, and occupies a vast cavern in a steep and almost inaccessible rock, above 800 ft. in height. In front of the cavern is a vast wall, 12 ft. thick, and, on an average, 65 ft. high and within it is a church, with a mosaic pavement, and a fine painting, numerous cells for monks and servants, storerooms, kitchen, &c. The wall is surmounted by five struts, stank, like Swiss cottages upon the cliffs, and presenting a somewhat odd but picturesque appearance. The slope in front of the convent, down to the river is laid out in terraced gardens, while the bare precipices at the bank are crowned with forests. The Turks, under Ibrahim Pasha, besieged the convent, but were repulsed with a loss of several thousand men, while the besieged had only one man killed and two wounded. The number of monks is from 250 to 300.

MEGEN a tn. Holland, prov. N. Brabant, 14 m. N.E. Hertogenbosch near bank Maas with a church, townhall, Latin gymnasium, two schools, and two convents. Pop. (agricultural) 1040.

MEGIVE a vil. and com. France, dep. Haute Savoie, prov. Faucigny 6 m. S. Salanches, with a church a convent, and hemp manufactures of woollens and cottons, and a trade in goat, better shams, and honey. Pop. 8000.

MEGNA the name given to the river Brahmapootra throughout the latter part of its course, and by which it is known at its embouchure in the Bay of Bengal.

MEGYER, several places, Hungary particularly.—1 A vil. Hither Danube, co. Neograd with a church. Pop. 1362.—2, (Bela) A vil. Hither Danube, co. Pesth, near the Danube, with a church inhabited chiefly by Germans. Pop. 814.—3, (Nagy), A market to. Thither Danube, co. and 19 m. N.W. Kacsau, in a fertile district with two churches. Pop. 1723.—4, (Föld), A vil. Hither Danube, co. Pesth, on an island of the Danube, about 200000 belong to the family of Batarsky. Pop. 1092.—5 (Tó), A vil. Hither Danube, co. Neutra, with a church, a castle, and a distillery. P. 1992.

MEGYES, two places, Hungary.—1 (Aranyos), A market to. Thither Thron co. Sathmar, Sla. and near Nagy Banya, with a Protestant and a Greek church. Pop. 1393.—2, (Nyir) A vil. Thither Thron, co. and 11 m. E. Sathmar, with a church. Pop. 3022.

MEHEDIA, or MINDAL, a market to. Hungary Bansk. 78 m. S.E. Timarova, 1 bank. Bofia-Baka, romantically situated at the bottom of a deep and narrow dell. It has an ancient castle, a normal school and thermal baths, which were well known to the Romans under the name of 'Therma Horevella,' and are still the best frequented in Hungary. The waters are sulphureous, and have sine or ten sources. The temperature of the hottest is 131°. A great number of Roman antiquities and inscriptions have been found here. P. 1684.

MEHEDIA—A tn. Tunis. See ALKAMADIA.—2, A small tn. Morocco, N.W. coast, 1 bank, and near the mouth of the Wal Sobou, about a mile from the sea, and 30 m. W by S. P. lat. 34° 15' N. lon. 6° 24' W. (a). It is walled, has a fort at the angle of the town which faces the entrance of the river; was formerly in the possession of the Portuguese, and a place of some consequence, but has now no trade, subsists, chiefly fishermen, subsisting by the sale of shabell, a fish much resembling salmon, which is caught here in great abundance. Pop. said to be now under 400.

MEHLER, or MEXA, a vil. Sax-Coburg, princip., and 30 m. E. Gotha, near the Gemasbach, with a church, manufactures of leather on iron and eight other mills. P. 3706.

MEHLBACH, a tn. Prussia, prov. and 29 m. S.W. Königsberg, on the W. bank, with a court of justice, a castle, four churches, manufactures of linen, a trade in linen, yarn, wool, cattle, and raw bark, and other mills. Pop. 3369.

MEHLING or MUGGEN, a market tn. Upper Bavaria, on the railway from Augsburg to Munich, 6 m. E. Jügelstätt, near 1. bank Danube, here crossed by a bridge. It has a castle, a paper and several other mills, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1169.

MEHUN—Gua-Yavos (Laito Mehaduan de Avaria), a tn. France, dep. Cher, on the Yèvre, 10 m. N.W. Bourges. It has a Romanesque church a red ruinol castle, in which Charles VII. starved himself to death, and manufactures of druggs and peck-shedding. Pop. 3374.

MEI-OMIA, a tn. Persia. See MEYOMKIM.
MEIA-CO-SHIMAH, a tn. See MEYOMKIM.
MEIA-POUR, a tn. Brazil, prov. and 80 m. E. Goyas, on the Altas. It has five churches, an hospital, a Latin and a primary school, many distilleries and potteries, and is well situated for trade, lying in the tract along which numerous herds of cattle are driven for São-Paulo, and province Minas-Geraes. Near it, millet, mandio, cotton, tobacco, sugar, and barley are grown and some gold mines are worked. Pop. of district, 8000.

MEIDLING (Oetz and Urtax) a vil. Lower Austria 3 m. S.W. Vienna with a church, several handsome villas, a theatre, barracks, a cotton printfield, and some manufactures of cotton, linen, and leather, but its chief attraction is its sulphureous baths, which are much frequented. Pop. 8500.

MEIROD or MIRRO near Wales, Montgomery P. 1763.

MEIGLE, a vil. and par. Scotland, co. and 19 m. N.E. Perth, with a weekly cattle-market and two annual fairs. Area of par., 8000 ac. Pop. 728.

MEILEN a tn. and par. Switzerland, cant. and 8 m. S.E. Zürich, E. shore of Lake Zürich; with a fine old Gothic church, and several manufacturing establishments, particularly for silk. Pop. 2934.

MEINBERG a vil. Germany, Lippe Detmold, half Horn with a church and well frequented distilleries and sulphureous springs. Pop. 1044.

MEINERZBACHEN, a tn. Prussia, Westphalia, gov. and 27 m. S.W. Arnsberg on the Volme with a church, a paper mill and a blast-furnace. Pop. 2250.

MEININGEN a tn. Germany cap. of Hesse-Meiningen, in a narrow valley surrounded by wooded hills, r. bank Werra 40 m. S.E. Erfurt. The older part of the town is very indifferently built, but the modern part is both regular and handsome. It has a palace, in which the Duke resides, containing valuable collections of art and natural history, a church, one of them containing curious monuments of knights a gymnasium, ordinary, theatre, barracks, several schools, and benevolent establishments. Neither the trade nor manufactures are of importance though there are 10 annual fairs. Pop. 6305.

MEININGEN (Sachsen) See SAXE-MEININGEN.

MEIR, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 21 m. N.E. Antwerp, on the Mark. It has manufactures of woollen cloth, three breweries, two mills, and a trade in wood and bark. Pop. 1563.

MEIRE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Flanders, 13 m. E.R. Ghent. Linen fabrics, thread, and bricks, are manufactured, and some trade is carried on in fax. P. 3483.

MEIRLEBEEK, or MERLEBEEK, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Flanders, 3 m. S. Ghent, r. bank Scheldt, with three distilleries, several brick-kilns, a flour, an oil, and two malt mills. Pop. 5298.

MEIRINGEN, or MEIRINGEN a tn. and par. Switzerland cant. and 29 m. S.E. Bern, r. bank Aar, romantically situated in the valley of the same name. In 1703, the Alps, a mountain torrent which issues from a narrow gorge immediately behind, covered a large part of the village with rubbish 30 ft. deep, in the course of an hour. Partial protection has been obtained by the erection of a stone dam, 1000 ft. long by 8 ft. thick. A good many of the inhabitants are weavers. Pop. 4135.

MEISENHEIM, a tn. Germany Hesse-Homburg, on the Glan, 30 m. S.W. Mainz. It is walled, has a castle, three churches, a courthouse, grammar-school and two mills. Pop. 2678.

MEISEN, a tn. Saxony, circle and 14 m. N.W. Dresden, 1 bank Elbe, here crossed by a fine bridge. The position of the town, the richness of its houses, and the conspicuous objects presented by several of the public edifices, give it a very striking appearance as a distance, but it is in general very indifferently built, and its streets are narrow and gloomy. It has a noble Gothic cathedral, of the 16th century, with a lofty spire of open work, and some beautifully-painted glass; the old castle of the Margraves, erected in the 15th century at vast expense, on a precipitous rock above the town, but now degraded into a porcelain factory, at which the finest Dresden china first was, and still continues to be made; the Franzosen church, a large and magnificent edifice, used as the custom-house; the town or Magnatkirche, and several other churches; the townhouse, cloth-hall and the Afrarium, a large and richly-endowed school or college, with several valuable collections. One of the most interesting sights in the town is the porcelain factory, already mentioned, and first established by one Böttcher, an alchemist, who, after wasting the gold of his patron Augustus I, king of Poland and elector of Saxony, in a vain search of the philosopher's stone, at last more than compensated him by an accidental discovery of the art of making china. This is now the great staple of the place, employing about 550 persons, but there are also manufactures of worsted, tobacco, leather, playing-cards, penicils &c. There are also several sugar-refineries, dye-works, and printing-establishments, at which the art of illuminating and embellishing books is carried to high perfection. The trade, particularly in wine and porcelain, is considerable. Mausson is the see of an archbishop, the seat of several courts and public offices, and possesses, in addition to the Afrarium mentioned above, a school of design and some other educational establishments. The two elder Schlegels, and Malsbenden are celebrated homesteads, where born here. Pop. (1849) 8214.

MEKLENBURG, (or Meklenburg, no) Mecklenburg a grand duchy, Europe. 13th state German Confederation. Bounded N by the Baltic Sea, W. by the principality of Rostock, belonging to Mecklenburg-Strelitz. S.W. by Hanover. S. Prussia, and E. Prussia and Mecklenburg-Strelitz. Lat. 53° 7' to 54° 15' N. lon. 10° 40' to 18° 10' E. area, 9648 sq. mi. capital Schwerin. The surface is generally flat, the only exception being a ridge of low hills, which forms the watershed between the basins of the Elbe and the Baltic; the former receiving the drainage of the S. and W. slightly by the Elbe and its tributaries, and the latter that of the N. by the Trave, Stoppnitz, Warnow, Recknitz, and Penne. The sea-coast is low but much indented by several bays, of which the largest is that of Wismar. The most extensive lakes are those of Muritz, area, 31 sq. mi. and Schwerin, which lies in a hollow, surrounded by a chain of gentle heights. Smaller lakes are very numerous, and, indeed, form one of the characteristic features of the country. The climate is mild, and the soil is generally fertile, and produces corn in such abundance as to leave a large surplus for export. After corn the principal crops are peas, beans, potatoes, and turnips. The rearing of stock attracts considerable attention and the breeds have, in recent times, been much improved. Both horses and cattle are largely exported and wool has become one of the most important sources of revenue. Woods, once extensive, have been very much mismanaged, and a serious want of timber begins to be felt. Minerals are of no consequence, and manufactures have not made much progress. The trade, confined almost entirely to agricultural produce and greatly facilitated by the proximity both of the Elbe and the Baltic, is extensive. Every one may carry on the business of distiller free from tax in any kind, and the consequence is that the distillation of spirits from grain is carried on to an extent seldom equalled even in Germany and the taste for ardent spirits, particularly among the peasantry, is far too prevalent. The Government, which is a limited monarchy, is intimately connected with that of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. Each duchy has its separate states, but both bodies annually meet together and have power to make common laws, and impose common taxes, for the whole of Mecklenburg. Mecklenburg-Schwerin is divided into six districts—circle of Mecklenburg or duchy of Schwerin, town and district of Rostock, domain of southern counties, principality of Schwerin, and lordship of Wismar. Pop. (1852) 543,768.

MEKLENBURG, (or Meklenburg;) Strelitz a grand duchy Europe, intimately connected with the above 90th state, German Confederation; capital, Neu-Strelitz. It consists of two larger and several smaller districts the former separated by the interposition of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, and the latter existing in separate patches. The two larger districts are the circle or lordship of Stargard, on the E. of Mek lenburg-Schwerin, and enclosed on every other side by Prussia; and the principality of Rostock, at the opposite extremity of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, and bounded on the N. by the Baltic, and on the W. by the territory of Lithuania, and duchy of Lauenburg. The whole area is estimated at 753 sq. mi. The physical features of this duchy are the very same as those of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, above described, to which accordingly reference is made. In union with this duchy, it has a fourteenth vote in the plenum of the Confederation. Pop. (1851) 99,623.

MEKON, Mekong Kong, or Cambodia river, a large river of S.E. Asia. It is supposed to rise in Tibet, about lat. 28° 30' N., lon. 95° 30' E. whence, under the name of Len-tsen king, it flows S.E. across the Chinese prov. of Szechuan takes the name of Kion long traverses, still in a S.E. direction, the territory of Laos, in its whole extent, assuming now the name of Mekon, leaving Laos, it still holds on in a S.E. course, interspersed Cambodia, regarding the portion belonging to Anam from that conquered by Siam, and falls into the China Sea by two main streams called Japanese and Onbague rivers, and numerous small tributaries, the most S. of which is in about lat. 9° 30' N. lon. 106° 30' E.

MEKRAK, or Mekrak a large maritime prov. Balochistan, comprising upwards of three-fourths of the entire coast line of that territory, having Afghanistan and prov. Kakhran and Sarawan N., Bukharan W., Jalalabad and Iran E., and the Indian Ocean S., about 600 mi. E. and 300 mi. N. in breadth, N. to S. but almost entirely unknown. The whole coast is one vast arid and sterile waste, with high mountains rising at the back, wholly destitute of both trees and vegetation. The N.W. portion of the province is traversed by considerable mountain ranges, which rise to the N. into the elevated tract known by the name of Kohistan. The two more remarkable ranges of N. Mekran extend E. and W. and in some degree parallel to each other. During rainy weather numerous torrents flowing N. to S., discharge themselves into the sea. Their channels are broad and deep on the coast, but narrow and intricate in the mountains, in the wet season they swell into terrific torrents when the rain ceases, however a few hours are sufficient to run off their waters. In the hot season the heat is extreme, and, in August, the hot winds destroy all vegetation. A little grain is cultivated here and there, and the date-palm thrives well but the chief dependence of the inhabitants is on their sheep, goats and camels. Fish abound on the coast. The exports, small in quantity, consist of wool, fat, hides, butter, dates, the imports of raw cotton, coarse cotton cloths, iron, and sugar. The inhabitants, with exception of those on the coast, are a weakly race of men, addicted to intemperance and all sorts of excesses. The women are represented as extremely ugly and of dissolute habits. Pop. estimated at 200,000.

MELI, a vil. and par. Austrian Italy gov. and 44 mi. N.W. Venice, near the confluence of the Adige and Piave; with a court of justice several public offices, a parish church, and two oratories. Pop. 9300.

MELALIA an isl. Austria, in the Adriatic, off the coast of Dalmatia 16 mi. W. N. W. Zara. Marble and fine petrifactions are found on it and it has a few inhabitants, who live by fishing.

MELAKURI, or MALACORIO a town, W. Africa, cap. of an independent territory on a river of same name, about 69 mi. N. N. W. Free Town Sierra Leone. It stands at the highest point to which the Melakuri is navigable, occupying a picturesque site on the sloping banks of a large basin formed by the confluence of the Melakuri and Mawetta, and the obstruction of their channel by several rocky islands. It consists of four distinct portions, two on the b. and two on the N. side of the basin, but so connected as to appear at a distance one continued town. The houses consisting generally of one circular room, with two or three small sleeping chambers under the projecting roof, are built in alternate courses of sun baked bricks and well-tempered clay. Others of an inferior description, are made of wattle-work, coated with clay, and plastered with mud. The only public buildings are four very rudely constructed mosques, and throughout the town marks of decay are visible, deserted houses and ruined gateways meeting the eye at every step. The prosperity once enjoyed was owing to the trade in slaves and in timber. The latter branch has suffered much from the improvidence of the negroes; who, having felled all the timber near the town, now chiefly derive their subsistence from the export of rice to Sierra Leone. There is also some trade in cattle, hides, wax, gum, and groundnuts and kola nuts. Pop. in about 1800: territory about 60,000.

MELASSO (anc. Mylassa) a to Aesla Turkey in S W of past Anadolja. 30 m N.E Beodroom It is of consider able are, but the houses are generally mean. It contained at one time, a great number of temples, and still exhibits numerous remains of antiquity MELAZZO a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, div Alessandria, prov and about 8 m S. Acqui, with a church, an old castle, on an isolated height; a public school and quarries of building stone. Pop. 1568.

MELAZZO or MILAZZO (anc. Mylos) a seaport in Sicily, prov. and 24 m. W Messina, on an elevated promontory which projects into a bay of same name. It is surrounded by strong fortifications, has some handsome houses, several churches and convents, barracks, an hospital, a harbour with ample depth of water; a valuable tunny fishery and a trade chiefly in wine, oil, and silk. In the Bay of Melazzo the ancient Quadrupes found. Several naval battles have been fought. Pop. 9910.

MLLROUVE, E. — A market to and par England co. and 8 m. S. S. L. Dorby with a church a fine building in the Anglo-Norman style Baptist Welekan Independent and Swedenborgian chapel two schols and a mechanics institution. Area of par 3700 ac Pop 3080 — 2, A par
Eng Cambridge 4189 ac Pop 1083

MELBOURNE is in Australia, cap. Victoria, on the Yarra Yarra here crossed by a handsome bridge near its mouth, in loc. Phillip, 415 m. S W Sydney. Lat. 3: 48' 36" S., lon 144° 57' 43 E. (g.). It extends for 8 m along half of the houses are built of slabs and brick, and some have now allowed to be constructed of wood. Many of the houses have fine gardens attached. Several of both the public and private estates are very handsome. Amongst the former are the Union Bank of Australia, the merchants' institution, the R. Catholic chapel, the new government offices, and the courthouses. This jail is a large but gloomy structure, built of dark ferruginous sandstone. Inns and houses of some moderation and well-stocked shops are numerous. The stationers' shop is a fine building, and the largest of the town. In the year of 1850, with a prospective annual allowance of about half that sum. The garden is prettily situated on the bank of the Yarra, about 1 m. E. from the town, but, as yet, has comparatively few plants. Besides the R. Catholic chapel above spoken of, there are places of worship belonging to the 1 Protestant Episcopals, Presbyterians, Wesleyans, Independents, and Baptists & Quakers meeting-house, and Jews synagogues. Sunday and day schools are attached to the English S. Othello, and R. Catholic churches. The English S. Othello, and R. Catholic churches, are for the education of youth and a number of religious and benevolent societies. Four newspapers are published here. The town is amply supplied with water from the Yarra, which above the falls flows close to the town, is not reached by the tide, and the markets are abundantly furnished. In consequence, however, of the immense influx of emigrants attracted by the recently discovered gold-fields, prices have become very exorbitant and neither the most ordinary services, nor the most common necessaries of life, can be procured at moderate rates. For those possessed of fixed and moderate incomes it almost amounts to a banishment. Hence in June, 1852, meagre and doleful caravans

Port Philip, which forms a basin of from 60 m. to 70 m. in circuit. In many central places, the depth varies from 12 to 15 fathoms, and, even near the shore, is generally from 5 to 7 fathoms. At Williamstown, where vessels for Melbourne generally anchor, it is 5 fathoms, and in Geelong Bay the other most frequented anchorage, the depth varies from 2 to 7 fathoms. Melbourne is incorporated and has a mayor, aldermen, and council. The assessed annual value of the town is about £27,000. Melbourne was founded by Sir Richard Bourke May 19 1837. Pop. (February 1862), 45,000, but now (1865), estimated at not less than 50,000.—(Wells) Australian Gazetteer, Melbourne Argus January 1863, &c.) See SUPPLEMENT.

MELBOURKE, a maritime co., W. Australia, about 50 m. in length from E. to W., its breadth not yet defined. In its N.E. parts is a range of high mountainous lands the N.E. is intersected by the river Moore.

MELBURY, four pars. England, Dorset.—1 (Abbot), 2176 ac. P. 434.—2 (Dish), 1237 ac. P. 157.—3 (Dorset), 1195 ac. P. 284.—4 (Bosworth), 1094 ac. P. 55.

MELCHBOURN, par. Eng. Bedford, 2574 ac. P. 290.

MELCH PHAL, a valley, Switzerland, in the S. of cant. Unterwalden, about 6 m. long, N. to S., and little more than 2 m. wide. It is enclosed by lofty mountains, 6000 to 8000 ft. above the sea. It is watered by the Melch, which discharges the waters of the lake of that name into the A.A. Iron was once worked and smelted here, and there is still a marble quarry. The disease made it of excellent quality. Among the natives of the valley was Arnold an der Halden, one of the four heroic mountaineers who met at Grütli, in 1307, and swore to liberate their country from Austrian oppression.

MELCOMB, two pars. Eng. Dorset.—1 (Horse), 2151 ac. Pop. 191.—2 (Baptist), 1549 ac. Pop. 5273.

MELCOMBE REGIS, a vil. of the Wymondley.

MELDAL, a vil. and par. Norway 85 m. S.W. Trondhjem, r. bank Orkla. It has copper works. Pop. 4280.

MELDEN, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, r. bank Scheldt 18 m. S.W. Ghent. It has a trade in linen, cattle, and agricultural produce. Pop. 1573.

MELDRETH a vil. and town, Belgium prov. F. Flanders, on the Meuse 18 m. E. Ghent. It has manufactures of linen, several breweries, an oil and three flour mills, and a trade in flax. Pop. 1904.

MELDOL, a, in Italy, Belg. and 7 m. S. Pavia r. bank Eno. It has an important annual fair which lasts from 1st to 25th August. Pop. 2480.

MELDON par. Eng. Northumberland 995 ac. P. 144. MELDRUP, a vil. Denmark, Holstein 54 m. N.W. Hamburg, cap. of the S. Dänemark, in a barren sandy tract. It has several public offices, a grammar-school, several benevolent institutions, and some trade in corn, for which there is a weekly market. The chief employments are weaving and agriculture. Pop. 3100.

MELDRETH, par. Eng. Cambridge 2060 ac. P. 778.

MELDRUM (Old), a market tn. and par. Scotland, co. and 16 m. N.W. Aberdeen on the road to Banff with a handsome townhall surrounded by a square, a brewery and handlooms several corn-mills, and a considerable manufacture of cotton goods. Pop. tn., 1102. Area of par., 7474 ac. Pop. 3022.

MELLA, a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Genoa 2 m. from Voltri, among lofty rocks. It has a church and a palace, several paper-mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 2495.

MELEDA, or MELPRA, an isl. Austria, Dalmatia, circle and 19 m. W.N.W. Ragusa, opposite to the peninsula of Radoconello, from which it is separated by a channel about 5 m. wide; greatest length, N.N.W. to S.E. E., 23 m.; mean breadth, not more than 2 m. Its coast-line is considerably indented, and furnishes several commodious harbours, but is partly lined by cliffs and shoals, particularly towards the W. extremity. The island is traversed by lofty hills, generally of a rugged and arid appearance, and intersected by numerous valleys, which, though not carefully cultivated, are fertile, and produce corn and maize vegetables, wine, oil, and fruit; and the pastures feed great numbers of sheep and goats. Considerable attention is paid to the rearing of silk worms and bees. There are several remarkable geological grottoes, chiefly in the neighbourhood of Radoconello, the largest vil. lage of the island. The harbour of Palama, on the N. side, is considered the best on the Dalmatian coast. Some persons, misled by similarity of name, and the mention of Adria in Paul's voyage, have erroneously supposed this to be the island on which he was shipwrecked. Pop. 900.

MELEGNANO, a bn. Italy, Lombardy, prov. and 10 m. S.E. Milan, near 1 bank Lambro, here crossed by a bridge. It is a large and handsome place; has a court of justice, several public offices, three churches, and a trade in corn, rice, wax, and dairy produce. In 1279 a peace was concluded here between the Gualdi and the Gibellini, and in 1515 Francis I. here defeated the Imperialists. Pop. in and com., 7000.

MELEVOZE, a vil. Hungary Thlher Thais, co. Torontal, 29 m. N.E. Peterwardein. It has a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 4515.

MELFI (anc. Asipha), a tn. Naples prov. Basilicata, cap. dist., on a lofty volcano height, 75 m. S.E. E. Naples. It is surrounded by walls in a very dilapidated state, and defended by an old castle, is the site of a bishop, and has a beautiful cathedral, several convents, and some trade in excellent wine. In August, 1851 an earthquake destroyed 183 edifices and damaged other 278. Among those destroyed were five monasteries, and seven churches, including the cathedral. Many hundreds of the inhabitants were entombed in the ruins. Pop. about 8000.

MELFORD (Lowe), a vil. and par., England, co. Suffolk, 18 m. W. by N. Ipswich, on a branch of the Stour with a large annual cattle fair. Area of par. 5185 ac. Pop. 2387.

MELGALCO, a tn. Portugal prov. Beja, 1 m. N.W. Minho, 40 m. S.E. Viana. It is the most northerly town in the kingdom, and a place of some strength, being both walled and defended by a castle. It has an hospital, an alms house, and a trade in mutton and hams. Pop. 650.—2 A tn. Brazil prov. and 180 m. S.W. Para, W. shore of Lake Amapa and on the river of this name which, passing the town, falls into the Taparyrou 10 m. below. It has a church, and a considerable trade in timber. Pop. 4000.

MELGAR in PUNABORATA, a vil. Spain, prov. and 24 m. W. Burgos 1. bank Pisuerga. It is a regularly built house of one story situated in general broad and straight and all paved and clean. It has a courthouse, a prison, a granary two primary schools, a Latin grammar-school, and a spacious and handsome church. manufactures of implements of husbandry, hats and shoes, five tanneries, a dye-works, a fulling and three flour mills. Pop. 2115.

MELGIG, a salt lake or marsh, Algeria, lat. 33° 56' N., lon. 7° 5' E. about 30 m. long by 20 m. broad. It receives the Adjidi from the N.W. and a small stream from the S.W.

MELIANA, a vil. Spain, prov. and about 8 m. from Valencia, at a short distance from the sea. It has a parish church, primary school, courthouse, prison, and a trade in fruit and agricultural produce. Pop. 1058.

MELDEN par. Wales, Flint, 4779 ac. Pop. 1200.

MELIKUT, a vil. Hungary circle Hither Danube, co. Bacs, 110 m. S. by E. Puth, in a fertile wheat district, with a church. Pop. 4533.

MILILLA, a fortified place belonging to Spain, empire of Morocco on the Mediterranean, 185 m. E. by S. Conza; lat. 35° 15' 18" N., lon. 2° 58' W. (N.) It occupies a peninsula, united to the continent by a rocky isthmus, 121 yards long, 95 yards broad, and 35 yards in height, above the sea-level and covers a space of 800 yards in diameter. It is defended by about 150 cannon, and has three lines of fortification. The magazines are large and bomb-proof and capable of containing munitions and provisions for 10,000 men for a year and the place is well supplied with water. The streets are irregular but clean, and the houses are in rather a dilapidated condition the town having been seriously damaged in 1848 by a dreadful earthquake, accompanied by a hurricane, which overthrew part of the walls and many edifices. Among the buildings which escaped, or were slightly injured, are the parish church, the school of engineers, one of the barracks, the watch-tower, the house of the commandant of engineers, and the royal hospital. There are two landing-places, protected by batteries.

MELIN, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant 31 m. S.E.E. Brussels. It has quarries of white stone, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1658.

MELINDA, a resort in S. Africa, coast of Swaziland lat. 27° 04' N. lon. 41° 3' E. It is large and handsome, the houses built of stone; has numerous mosques, but its churches and other buildings, erected by the Portuguese, who possessed it for some time, are now in ruins. The anchorage is at a considerable distance, and the coast shallow and beset with rocks and shelves. A very considerable trade is carried on by caravans with the interior and by sea with the Red Sea, Zanzibar and the N parts of India. The exports consist of ivory, gold copper, wax, and drugs, in exchange for silk, cottons, linen cloths, and European commodities. Vasco da Gama visited Melinda in April 13, 1498, where he was kindly received, and furnished with pilots to proceed to India.

MELINÉ, par Walles Pembrokeshire 4223 ac Pop 473
MELITA an Isola Dalmata. See MASTUA
MELIK a vil Austria. See MOZK.

MELKSHAM, a market tn and par England, co. Wilts on the Avon and the Great Western Railway 26 m N W Salisbury. It consists of the town proper and of a suburb, communicating with it by a handsome bridge of four arches, and has one principal street, nearly 1 m in length, well built, lighted, and paved a spacious cruciform church with a tower place of worship for the Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and Quakers national and British schools, a townhouse, in the Grecian style manufactures of broad-cloth and kersey mere, extensive corn-mills, and some trade in leather and milk. In the vicinity are mineral springs, over which commodious baths have been erected. Pop 1067 Area of par 15,572 ac. Pop 6073

MELIA a river, Italy Lombardy which rises about 6 m N P Bovegno prov. Brescia flows circuitously E passing near Brescia, and joins I bank Oglio, 13 m N E Cremona total course, about 50 m.

MELIARA a market in Italy Tuscany, prov. Pistoia. I bank Po, about 30 m from Livorno with a church, a courthouse, and two churches. Pop 2333

MELLE—1 (Latin Melidri) a tn. France, dep. Deux Sevres, 10 m S E. Mort. It is poorly built has manufactures of serge and coarse woollen-stuffs, tanneries, and a paper mill, and carries on a considerable trade in corn, clover-seed wool, cattle and mules the last considered the finest animals of their kind in Europe. Pop 2472.—2 A vil. and com. Belgium prov. E Flanders 4 m S E. Ghent, I bank Scheldt Agriculture, weaving and trading in tiles, bricks, iron, &c., form the chief occupations. I op. 2095.—3 A vil Hanover circle and 15 m E S. Osnabrück on the Elbe with a church, a posthouse, a bleachfield, and a brewery. It was fortified in 1443, and burnt down in 1720. Pop. 1487.—4 A vil and com. Hannover, Silesia, dep. Con. prov. and 12 m S S W Salzwitz with two churches, an elementary school, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 2049

MELLETT a vil and com. Belgium prov. Hainaut, 27 m. E. Mons with manufactures of chertsey tile-works, hucklines, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1159

MELLIHA a tn. in the Algerian Sahara dist. and I bank Wady Mzab, 3 m S Ghardaia. It is walled defended by two towers, and entered by three gates is the holy town of the children of Mzab and last three mosques. Pop. about 1300

MELLING a vil Austria, Styria, circle and I m. from Marburg, with a church and a mill. Pop. 1100

MELLING par Eng. Lancashire 28,474 ac Pop 2204
MELLING N, a vil and par Switzerland can Aargau, 11 m E N E. Aarau I bank Reuss, here crossed by a hand some covered bridge. It has some transit trade but the inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, including that of the vine. Pop 685 MELLION (Str. par Eng. Cornwall 1865 ac. P 324.

MELLIS par Eng. Suffolk 1844 ac Pop 610

MELLING (Str. par Eng. Monmouth 1674 ac P 637
MELLOR, a vil and chapelry, England co. Derby, 22 m W Sheffield with a chapel place of worship for Independents and Wesleyans, a school, and extensive cotton-works affording employment to most of the inhabitants. Pop 1777

MELLORCHTADT a tn. Bavaria circle Upper Franconia, 46 m N W Bamberg, with two churches, an hospital and posthouse manufactures of hosiery a bell-foundry, tile-works hucklines a worsted and several other mills. P 1810
MELLOS par Eng. Somerset 8611 ac Pop 1180
MELMORBY par Eng. Cumberland 4496 ac P 323.

MELNIE, a tn. Bohemia, circle Brunn, 16 m N by E. Prag, a bank Elbe, with a deanery church of the 12th century an old castle, and a townhouse. An excellent wine is made in the neighbourhood. Pop. (agricultural), 1878.

MELORIA (anc. Moson) an extensive shoal and small id. in front of the roads, and about 8 m W Leghorn 6 m long N to S and rather more than 1 m broad. In 1284, the Genoese here defeated the Florentines in a naval engagement.
MELRES, a tn. and par Portugal prov. Douro, 12 m E. Oporto, I bank Douro. Pop. 1376.

MELROSE, a tn. and par Scotland co. Roxburgh pleasantly situated on the r bank Tweed at the foot of the Eldon Hills, 30 m S. by E. Edinburgh, on the Hawick railway. It is upon the whole well built, lighted with gas, and amply supplied with water. It has an Established and a Free church, a Congregational and a neat Episcopal chapel and several schools. But the great object of interest at Melrose is its celebrated abbey the finest specimen of Gothic architecture and Gothic sculpture in Scotland. It was founded, in 1226, by King Robert Bruce and finished, in the perpendicular Gothic or decorated English style, in the reign of James IV. Abbeisford the residence, and Dryburgh abbey, the burial place of Sir Walter Scott, are within a few miles of Melrose the former W, the latter S E. Pop 966 Area of par 40 sq m Pop (1851), 7865—(Local Correspondent).

MELS, a tn. and par Switzerland, can. and 27 m S. St. Gall r bank See. It was almost destroyed by fire in 1707. It is well built of stone, has a handsome church, an important manufacture of fire-arms, and a glass-house. Iron is both mined and smelted in the neighbourhood, and the millstones and oven-stones of the district have long been famous. On a neighbouring hill stands the old castle of Nulberg. P 8339

MELSELE a vil and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, 27 m N E. by E. Ghent with two breweries, a dye-works, and several flour-mills. Pop. 2147

MELSONBY, par Eng York (N Riding) 2869 ac. Pop. 659

MELSLING a tn. France-Cassel prov. Nieder Hassen on the Felds, 13 m S E. Cassel. It is walled has four gates a castle, church, and hospital manufactures of cloth, numerous tanneries, a worsted and other mills, a tile-works and some trade in wood and linen. Pop. 4020

MELTHAM a vil England co. York (W Riding), 6 m S W by S Huddersfield with a church, school, and extensive cotton and silk mills employing nearly 3750 persons.

MELTON six pars Eng.—1 Suffolk 1420 ac. Pop 1089.—2, (Wesminster) Norfolk, 2710 ac. Pop 106.—3 (Holk) 1464 ac. Pop 105.—4 (Ampth) Norfolk, 2483 ac. Pop. 923.—5 (Faversham) Norfolk 671 ac. Pop 379.—6 (Eves) Lincoln 1756 ac. Pop. 159

MELTON MOWBRAY a market tn. and par England en. and 14 m N E. Leicester on the Syston and Peterborough branch of the Midland Counties railway, I bank Eye or Wreak here navigable, and crossed by two bridges. It consists of two principal streets; the houses of which are almost all of brick, and for the most part, substantially built, and has a lofty and spacious cruciform parish church, with a beautiful porch and tower place of worship for the Independents, Wesleyans, and H. Catholics, several schools and almshouses, a considerable trade in pork pie and more especially in Stilton cheese, which has here its central locality a weekly market, and six annual fairs. The only manufacture, of any consequence, are bobbin lace and worsted hosiery. The prosperity of Melton-Mowbray is greatly owing to its being the seat of the Melton Hunt, which has its meeting here for the five months commencing with November, and attracts the sporting world in such numbers, that stabling for about 900 horses has been provided and the surrounding country is stocked with hunting stags. In 1644, during the civil war the royalists, after a severe action here, defeated a body of parliamentary troops of about 2000 men. William de Melton, archbishop and chancellor of England under Edward III., was a native of Melton-Mowbray. Area, 10 266 ac. P 406

MELUN (Latin, Melodunum), a tn. France, sup. dep. Seine-et-Marne, 27 m S. E. Paris, on both banks of the Seine, and partly on an island in it, communicating with the opposite banks by two bridges. It is regularly and tolerably well built, and gains much in appearance by six handsome quays and six promenades. It contains a large and regular square, an old collegiate church of mixed architecture partly in the ogival style, built on the island, a palace, a prison, theatre, and prison; the convent of St. Angela, and a central house of Antonian for five departments. On the W part of the island are the ruins of the old castle of Melun, and an old tower which tradition attributes to Julius Cæsar. The manufactures consist of woollen cloths and other woollen stuffs, printed cottons, and calicoes. There are also tanneries and cotton-mills. The trade is in corn, flour, cheese, wool, and cattle. Melun possesses a court of first resort and a communal college. The French king, Philip Augustus, was born in its castle. Pop. 1852, 7437.

MELVILLE, per Eng. Salop 1418 ac. Pop. 942. MELVILLE ISLAND—A large isl. Australia, N coast, lat. 11 to 13 S, and lon 130° 30' and 131° 34' E, separated from Bathurst Island by Apsey Strait, and distant from the mainland about 15 m. Area, about 1800 sq m. The N and W coasts are low covered by dense woods of mangroves, and intersected by swamps. In the centre it rises from 130 to 200 ft. Streams of water are scarce. The upper soil is of inferior quality, but the subsoil, at the depth of 2½ ft., is a brown mould of a spongy, elastic character. The surface of the elevated ground covered with small shining masses of ironstones, having a metallic lustre. Vegetation is luxuriant. Among the forest-trees, several species of eucalyptus are most abundant. The cabbage-tree is common and ginger grows wild. The fauna is identical with that of Australia. Alligators abound in Apsey Strait, and turtles are found in some places on the coast. The natives though resembling those of Australia, are more athletic, active and enterprising, but extremely shy and cannot be prevailed upon to hold intercourse with Europeans. An uninhabited isl. S Pacific Low Archipelago lat. 17° 35' S, lon. 143° 41' W (a). It is very low and encloses a lagoon communicating with the sea by a very small boat passage. Some mother-of-pearl is obtained here.—S. A large uninhabited isl. Arctic Ocean, lat. (Winter Harbour) 74° 47' 12 N lon 110° 48' 15 W (a). The shores consist of steep rocks, while the interior is occupied by mountains, always covered with snow. Captain Parry wintered here in 1819-20, and, in 1851, its S. and S.W. shores were explored by Lieut. M. Clibb and its S.E. by Mr. Bradford, in search of Sir J. Franklin.

MELZO, a town in central Italy, prov. and 10 m. E Milan, in a fertile plain. It is well built, and has an hospital, and manufactures of linen and fustian. Pop. 2028.

MELMHO, a vill Spain, Extremadura, prov. and 37 m. W N.W. Cáceres. Its houses are almost all of one story, and it has two squares, a townhouse, prison, primary school, and church. Pop. (chiefly agricultural), 2803.

MELMURY, per Eng. Devon 4089 ac. Pop. 763. MELMEL, a town and seaport Prussia, gov. Königsberg, cap. circle, at the N end of the Kurische-Nehr, where the Drüge falls into the Baltic, 72 m. N.E. Königsberg; lat. 55° 43' 32" N, lon. 21° 8' 12" E (a). It is defended by a Citadel, consisting of four bastions, with ravelins and half moons, and is divided into three quarters—the old, the new, and Frederick's town, with three suburbs. It is the seat of an admiralty and several provincial courts, and contains three Lutheran churches, a R. Catholic chapel, a synagogue, exchange, theatre, hospital, infirmary, a superior town school, a school for navigation, an industrial school and house of refuge for neglected children. Its manufactures consist of woollen and silk cloth, cottons, soap, &c. but the great source of its prosperity is its timber, which is very extensive, and consists chiefly of timber, corn, flax, hemp, potash, lard, and colonial products. The exports and imports were, in value, as follows—

| Years | Exports | Imports |
|-------|-----------|---------|
| 1843 | 416,441 | 175,471 |
| 1846 | 869,028 | 600,618 |
| 1849 | 280,900 | 481,082 |
| 1856 | 1,040,302 | 444,013 |

The harbour is large and safe, and has a depth of water from 14 to 17 fathoms. It is provided with a light-house, and a good light-house, which stands on the N.E. side, 33 ft. above the sea, and may be seen 20 m. off. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent. Pop. (1846), 9906.—The castle, the most N. of Prussia, consists of a long, narrow fort, bounded N. and E. by Russia, S. gov. Gumbinnen, and W.

the Baltic sea, 186 sq. m., exclusive of water. Adding the Kurische-Nehr, the whole area is 512 sq. m. A great part of it is covered by heath and forest. Only a small portion is fitted for the plough. Almost all the inhabitants are engaged in commercial employments or in fishing, including in the latter amber fishing. Pop. 46,078.

MEMNIGEN, a town Bavaria, circle Swabia, on the Aach, 41 m. S.W. Augsburg. It is walled has six churches and chapels, a handsome townhouse, grammar and industrial schools, an ordinary and an orphan hospital and an infirmary; manufactures of cloths, cottons, wax-cloth, taffety ribbons, and tobacco, and a copper two iron, and numerous other mills; a foundry partly for casting bells a blacksmith and gun-work and a good trade in the above articles, and in corn and hops. Pop. 6876.

MEMPHIS, a vill., U States, Tennessee, on a high bluff 1 bank Mississippi, immediately below the mouth of the Wolf or Locust-river, 205 m. W by S. Nashville. It is regularly laid-out, has four churches, an academy, and a considerable trade. Pop. 8300.

MEMPHIS (Capricorn, Memf, and Memf), an ancient city, Lower Egypt, on the bank of the Nile, about 10 m. S. Cairo. It is said to have been built by Menes, the first king of Egypt, and in the time of Abulbela, about 1842 it remains very extensive, but little deserving of notice now except, except a large colonnade of Rameses, which is remarkable for the beautiful expression of the face, and, though now prostrate, must, when erect, have measured 43 ft. 8 inches in height of pedestal.

MEMPHREMACOG, a lake, N. America, partly in Vermont, U States, but chiefly in Lower Canada. It is 30 to 40 m. long and 2 to 3 m. broad, contains an island, with a valuable quarry of porphyry or granite.

MEVA, a town Russia, gov. and 42 m. E. Orenburg with a church, and a trade in provisions and salt. Pop. 2000.

MENABE, a div. Madagascar (which see).

MENADO, a Dutch prov. or gov. and its cap., isl. Celebes, comprising all the N. portion of the island, including both sides of the Gulf of Tomini or Gorontalo. It is mountainous, of volcanic formation, and has several active volcanoes. The low grounds are fertile, producing all manner of tropical vegetation, including rice, wheat, coconuts, sugar-cane, and the mountain-slopes yield iron-wood, ebony, iron copper and gold are found. The streams are numerous, but un navigable.—The town, N. coast of the N. peninsula, lat. 1° 28' N lon. 124° 50' E, on a large fine bay, with a fort and Dutch garrison is inhabited by Christians Mahomedans, and Pagans and outside is a Chin. sea suburb. It has some trade in tortoise-shell, trepang, birds-nests, coffee, cacao and gold dust. Pop. (1843), 6000.

MENAI STRAIT, a channel N. Wales, separating the island of Anglesea from Caernarvon, it runs nearly S.W. and N.E. and is about 11 m. long from its S.W. entrance to Bangor Ferry where it expands to a breadth of 1 to 4 m. The navigation of this strait is, in some places, difficult and hazardous, but, as the passage saves time and distance, it is much used by vessels under 100 tons burden and occasionally by vessels of a larger description. The first and last portions of each ebb and flow run in contrary directions in this strait. At the entrance, the neap-tides rise 10 to 12 ft., ordinary spring-tides 20 to 21 ft., and extreme equinoctial tides to nearly 30 ft. This strait is crossed by two stupendous stone towers, the Menai Bridge and the Britannia Bridge, about a mile apart from each other. The former which is a suspension-bridge, was planned and executed by Telford the distance between the supporting pyramids or points of suspension is 580 ft., and the height of the carriage-way above high water is 100 ft. The Britannia Bridge is an iron tubular bridge, for carrying the Chester and Holyhead railway over the strait. It consists of two lines of tubes, each 151 ft. long supported on three towers, besides the shore abutments, 100 ft. above the sea, formed of narrow wrought-iron plates, 3 to 4 in. thick, weighing including the permanent way of the railway 10,640 tons. The clear internal height of the tubes is 28 ft. at the centre, and 18 ft. at the extremities, and the width 14 ft. The first train passed through the tube on March 6, 1850. The whole cost of this extraordinary structure, which occupied about four years in construction and erection, was £201,365.

MENAM, a large river of S.E. Asia. It has its sources in the Chinese province of Yunnan, about lat. 23° 45' N. lon. 100° 15' E. It flows generally S.E.E. across the country of Laos and the kingdom of Siam, passing Yuthia and Benkot, and finally falls into the extreme head of the Gulf of Siam about lat. 13° 50' W. by three principal arms, the most E. of which forms the harbour of Benkot. This joined in its course by several large tributaries, the principal of which are the Anan and the Kwepasak, but is comparatively little known.

MENAN, two islands, Bay of Fandy. See MANAN.

MENANGKABU, a native state, lat. Sumatra E side of the Padang hills, and, on the equator, embraced one of the most beautiful and most fertile tracts of the island. It is well cultivated, thickly peopled, and yields rice, pepper, sugar, and other vegetable products, and has iron and gold mines. The inhabitants fabricate their own iron weapons, cutlery, guns, cottons, and silk. Menangkabu was at one time the most powerful state in the island and, though Jambi, Indragiri, Batak, and Pampontoman, are now separated from it, still its Sultan is esteemed the chief of all the Malays, and the protector of the Mahomedans. — (Van der Aa.)

MENAR-LE-VILLE, a town in France. See MEN.

MENASALBAS, a town in Spain, New Castile, prov. and 26 m. S.W. Toledo. It has a townhouse, prison, public granaries, two primary schools, an hospital, two granaries, and a church. Cattle rearing tillage seven flour-mills, a considerable number of handlooms for serge and charcoal burning furnish employment. Pop. 9600.

MENBELLIA, a town in Spain, New Castile prov. and 29 m. E. Ciudad Real, r. bank Azud. It has seven principal streets, generally lined by houses of only one story many of them ruinous, and contains a handsome church, a courthouse, prison, nursery and three schools and has manufactures of serge, cardinals and corals, an oil and several flour mills, and a trade in bread with which it supplies the surrounding districts. Pop. about 5000.

MENCHIA (Ka) or MENCHEN, a large town, regency and at a short distance S.E. the town of Tripoli. It is a wide spread place, the houses, which are built in the Egyptian manner having each a large piece of ground attached, inhabitants chiefly Bedouins. Each Tuesday a market is held, which is attended by a great many merchants from Tripoli.

MEFACONICO, a village and com. Italy 116 m. from Genoa, prov. and about 5 m. from Bobbio with an ancient church, surrounded by a dome and a trade in corn and excellent cheese. Pop. 1132.

MENDANA ISLANDS Pacific. See MARQUESAS.

MENDAVIA, a town in Spain, prov. Navarra, r. bank Ebro 86 m. S.W. Pamplona, with a church, townhouse, hospital, primary school, a trade in corn, muzz and fruit, and in active fishery in the Ebro. Pop. 1091.

MENDE (Latin, Mennetia) a town in France, dep. Lozère, on the Lot, 66 m. N.W. Nismes. It has a finely planted boulevard, and a great number of public fountains, its hill built and has narrow, irregular, winding streets, a cathedral, with two bell-towers, one of which is particularly admired for the delicacy of its workmanship, an old episcopal palace, now converted into the prefecture and a public library, manufactures of paper and particularly a common kind of stuff known by the name of Mende serge, and largely exported. Mende is the see of a bishop, and possesses a court of first resort, a chamber of manufactures, a diocesan seminary, a communal college, and an agricultural and scientific society. Pop. 1839 souls.

MENDEFEY, a mountain range, Af. r. in the S. of Nigeria, near lat. 6° 50' N. lon. 15° E. It is apparently a ramification of the Gabal el Kneri (or Mountains of the moon), and has one conspicuous, lofty peak, believed to be volcanic.

MENDELN, a town in France, Westphalia, prov. and 11 m. N.W. Arnsberg, r. bank Rhine. It has a court of justice, four churches, a posthouse, manufactures of silk, velvet, needles, and leather, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1896.

MENDER (Larva), river, Asiatic Turkey. See CAETERA.

MENDER — 1 (anc. Sinope), a river, Asiatic Turkey, rises on the W. side of Mount Ida, flows N. W., and falls into the Hellespont, at its S.W. entrance it is a small stream course, about 55 m. — 2 The little Mender. See CAETERA.

MENDHAM par. Eng. Suffolk, 1144 ac. Pop. 877.

MENDIG (Kinross and Oms), two nearly contiguous vills, Prussia, gov. and 15 m. W. Cologne. The latter has a church and mineral springs. Pop. 1150. The former has also a church, but is chiefly noted for the remarkable mill stones quarries which have been wrought near it for about 800 years. The material quarried is a hard, porous lava, probably from a neighbouring volcano, extending nearly 5 m. in length and 8 m. in breadth. In this bed, funnel-shaped pits have been sunk, and, from their bottom, the quarries branch off in all directions, forming subterranean caverns, supported by pillars which have been left in the workings. The lava is separated by natural seams or fissures into gigantic columns from 15 to 40 ft. high. The millstones are of the best quality and are largely exported to all quarters of the world. Pop. 1229.

MEVDIGORRIA, a vill Spain prov. Navarra, 17 m. S.W. Pamplona. It has a townhouse, prison, an hospital, two endowed schools, a church, and a pretty promenade some brandy and linen are made. Pop. (agricultural), 1514.

MENDIP HILLS, a lofty ridge, England which stretches for about 25 m. in a W.N.W. direction, across the N. of Somersetshire, with a mean breadth of 4 m. to 5 m., and a height of about 1000 ft. It is partly uncultivated and cultivated but the far greater part forms a healthy sheep-walk. Mines of lead and calamine were once wrought in it to some extent, but have been almost abandoned.

MENDI ESHAM, a town and par. England, co. Suffolk, 144 m. N.W. Ipswich. It has a handsome church, with a lofty tower, places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans, and a free school. Area of par., 2044 ac. Pop. 1444.

MENDOCINO, a lofty cape N. Pacific, the most W. point of Upper California, lat. 40° 40' N. lon. 124° 33' W. (n).

MENDOZA, a city prov. and river, confederation of La Plata, S. America. The city is pleasantly situated on a level plain E. of the foot of the Parícuti range, 3891 ft. above sea-level lat. 23° 53' S. lon. 69° 56' W. about 55 m. E.S.E. from the volcano of Aconcagua. It is compact, well built, for the most part of sun-burnt bricks, plastered and white-washed and contains some fine buildings, all the houses have gardens or orchards attached to them. It has a good parish church, some convents and a fine alameda nearly 1 m. long.

THE PUBLIC SQUARE, MENDOZA — From Argentinean, Voy. de la Tríplice Unión sobre el Orbe.

shaded by rows of magnificent poplars. From this city two well-frequented roads lead to Chili, over the Andes, by the mountain passes of Uspallata and of Portillo. Pop. 12,000.

THE PROVINCE, of which Mendoza is the capital, comprehends the country W. of the river Desaguadero as far as the Andes, including the Yala of Uspallata, in all about 150 m.

EL TO W on the N, an imaginary line about 18 m from the apical separates it from the prov of San Juan, while the S. boundary is formed by the Diamante, in all about 180 m N to S. With exception of the Paramillo range, or E. chain of the Andes, and some offsets, the country is level. The soil is sandy, and naturally barren, but, when irrigated, as large tracts are, by waters drawn from the Desaguadero, Mandos, and Tontoyu, its principal streams, it produces abundant crops of wheat, barley, Indian corn and lucuma. Rals and dew are rare, except in the S districts in some parts of which they are so abundant that corn may be raised without irrigation. The climate is dry and healthy, but hot in summer. It is favorable to the growth of fruit trees, the produce of which, figs, peaches, apples, nuts, olives, and wine, constitutes important articles of export. Brandy, wine, corn and flour hides, soap, and tallow are likewise sent in considerable quantities to the provinces of Cordova, San Luis, and Buenos Ayres. Besides these products, the mines of Capillata once yielded much silver and veins both of silver and copper are known to exist, and limestone, gypsum, alum, mineral pitch bitumen, slates and a variety of saline deposits, including common and Glauber salts, are abundant. 1 sp. about 40 000.—(Sir W Parish, Buenos Ayres, &c., 1862).—The Mendoza river rises on the E side of the Andes, about lat. 32° 45' S near the volcano of Aconcagua, and flows S E to lat. 32° 10' passing the city of Mendoza at a distance of about 10 m, where it begins round and pursues a N course till it falls into the Lake de Guanacache, lat. 32° S its whole length being about 200 m.

MENDRISIO a tn. and par. Switzerland, can Tessen, cap. dist. 9 m S.S.E. Lugano. It consists only of one long, well-paved and tolerably well built street, and college of Servites, to which a handsome church is attached, a Capuchin monastery and Ursuline nunnery and has manufactures of silk, and some silk mills and a limited trade. Pop. 1716.

—The district is the prettiest and most fertile in the whole canton, producing in abundance wheat, rye, silk, wine, and tobacco. Area, 48 sq. m. Pop. 17 700.

MEVEHOU (St. L.), (Latin, Auvergne) a tn. France, dep. Maine, on the Aune, at the junction of the Aune 25 m. N.E. Chalons-sur-Marne. It is built with considerable regularity has two handsome squares a townhall with a grand facade a court of first resort, a communal college a well endowed hospital an infirmary manufactures of earthenware, hosiery, leather bobbins, and other articles of tuncery and a considerable trade in wood and ship-timber, corn, garden vegetables, particularly melons and asparagus. Near it are numerous forges, glass-works, and potteries. Pop. 8068.

MENES a vil. Hungary co and 19 m. L. N. L. Arad with a fine castle. It is famous for its wine, which is said to rank next to that of Tokay. Pop. 1577.

MENGE a tn. Württemberg, circle of the Danube, 37 m S.W. Ulm. It is walled has three gates, two churches, a grammar-school, an hospital two mills, and a biscuit-mill. Many of the inhabitants are employed in embroidery. Pop. 3044.

MENGERINGHAUSEN a tn. Germany princely Waldeck, dist. Twiste, 12 m. N. Waldeck. It has a church, a manor-house, and two mills. Pop. 1748.

MENHERIOT par. Eng. Cornwall, 6087 ac. Pop. 1944.

MENIN, a tn. Belgium prov. W. Flanders, 1 bank Lys, near the French frontier, 7 m W.S.W. Courtray. It is a place of considerable strength, but, though in general well and regularly built, has a dull lifeless appearance. The only buildings deserving of notice are the church and the belfry. It possesses a college, several primary schools and benevolent institutions, has breweries, famous for their beer; tanneries, salt-refineries, bleachfields, a dye-works, manufactures of common and table linen, lace, stockings, oil, soap, tobacco, chocolate, and candles, and an important trade in corn, horses, horned cattle, and wool. Menin was first fortified in 1850, and has stood numerous sieges. Pop. 7638.

MENJILE or Mucur, a small tn. Parana, prov. Ghilan, 7 bank Shabrood, 41 m. S. Heald, lat. 34° 42' N, lon. 49° 30' E. It exports oil and soap.

MENMUIR, par. Scot. Forfar, 5 m. by 2 m. P. 693.

MENNEVEERT a vil. France, dep. Aisne, 36 m. from Veruun. Pop. 2148.

MENNINGHUFEN a vil. Rhineland Prussia, gov. and 10 m. W.S.W. Minden. It has a church, and spurs a large quantity of yarn. Pop. 1083.

MENOUF, a tn. Lower Egypt, in the Delta, 1 bank canal of same name, 34 m. W. Cairo with narrow and crooked streets, and houses in general ill built. Pop. 4000.

MENE, a tn. France, dep. Isere 25 m. S. Grenoble, with manufactures of glass and linen, and a considerable trade in the latter. Near it is a ferruginous acidulated spring. P. 1788.

MENBELEDEN, a vil., Dutch and 10 m. E.N.E. Nassau, with a parish church. Pop. 1014.

MENSHIEH (Rt.), (anc. Poleman) a tn. Upper Egypt, prov. and 10 m. N. Girgeh, 1 bank Nile, lat. 26° 27' N; lon. 31° 50' E. It enjoys a considerable trade, as the boats between Cairo and the outcarts usually stop here for provisions. There are here mtr-works, and an extensive Government cotton factory.

MENTIE, a vil. Scotland co and 6 m. N.E. Girling, near the foot of the Ochil. Woollen weaving is actively carried on. Pop. 518.

MENTOVI E. par. Eng. Bexley 1940 ac. P. 870.

MENTOVE, a tn. Italy princely Monaco on the Mada terrace, 18 m. E.V.E. Nice. It is well built, and though not provided with any proper harbour, has a considerable trade in oil and fruit. Pop. 8800.

MENTRIDA, a vil. Spain New Castle prov. and 24 m. N.W. Toledo. It has a townhouse and prison, a palace belonging to the Duke del Infantado, two elementary endowed schools, a church of substantial architecture, and a lofty clock tower, an almshouse, various chocolate, flour, and oil mills, and a trade in oil and fruit. Pop. 2620.

MENTZ, (anc. Mogontiacum German Mos, French, Mayence) a tn. Hesse-Darmstadt, cap. prov. Rheinhessen, 1 bank Rhine opposite to the mouth of the Main, and 20 m. W.S.W. Frankfurt, with which it is connected by railway. It is one of the fortresses of the German confederation, and has a garrison, partly Austrian partly Prussian of 8000 men, commanded alternately for five years, by an Austrian and a Prussian governor. The town, situated partly on a flat, and partly on an acclivity rises up gradually from the Rhine, in the form of an amphitheatre. It is walled flanked with bastions and defended besides by a Citadel and several forts and outworks. A bridge of boats, above 1600 ft. long, connects it with its suburb of Cusel, near which the river forms an island, on which some fortifications have been erected. The houses are generally lofty, and, when situated in open squares and spacious streets, have often a venerable and noble appearance; but, as many of the streets are narrow, they exclude both air and light, and give several quarters of the town a dark, confined, unwholesome look. The processions, which form the great resort of the inhabitants, at the Neue Anlage outside the gates, forming extensive public gardens, well laid-out, and commanding fine views of the town and surrounding district. The principal edifices are the cathedral, a vast building of red sandstone, finished in the 11th century of little architectural merit, and with the disadvantage of a very bad locality, being almost concealed from view and blocked up by mean houses, but terminated at its east end by an octagonal tower surmounted by a cupola, 70 ft. in height, and adorned with several finely-painted windows, a beautiful pulpit, and a great number of ancient and curious monuments of the Bishop Electors of Mainz; the merchants' hall formerly the electoral palace [Kurfürstliche Schloss]; the old collegiate church of St. Stephen, occupying the highest site in the town, surmounted by a lofty tower, decorated within by a fine altar screen and presenting throughout one of the finest specimens of early Gothic architecture; the church of St. J. star the Deutsche Haus [German, house] or Grossherzogliches Schloss [grand ducal castle], now the governor's palace, containing a splendid hall decorated with statues and several portraits of electors and Teutonic grand masters; the former, Daßburgische Palais, now used by the courts of justice; the library buildings, containing in addition to the library a museum, with several good collections, antiquities, philosophical and chemical apparatus, pictures, &c. One of the most interesting objects in the town is the house, or rather the site of the house of John Gansfleisch, better known by the name of Gutenberg and deserving of perpetual remembrance as the inventor of movable type. The site is now occupied by the Leazar, or reformatory and the rooms of a literary association; but the house in which he was born exists, and, more interesting still, the houses which contained his first printing office. An admirable bronze statue of Gutenberg, by Thorwaldsen, erected by subscription, obtained from all parts of Europe, stands in an open space near the theatre. The manufactures, not of much importance, consist chiefly of leather soap, hats, glue, vinegar, tobacco, and mineral instruments. The trade, particularly transit, is extensive, being greatly facilitated both by water communication and railway, and has in recent times greatly increased. The principal articles are wine, corn, and wood. Mainz owes its foundation to a Roman camp, which Drusus pitched here. It was, shortly after, converted into a permanent bulwark, and became the most important of a line of forts built along the Rhine, as a barrier against the incursions of the Germans. On the decline of the power of Rome it was almost entirely destroyed, but was afterwards restored chiefly by Charlemagne, and became the first ecclesiastical city of the German empire, of which its archbishop-elect ranked as the premier prince; he possessed domains which had an extent of 1200 sq. m., and a population of 400,000. Its history, during the 16th century is of considerable interest, in connection with the progress of the Reformation which early brought Luther into collision with its ecclesiastical authorities. Pop. 31,345.

MENTZ, THE CATHEDRAL, from the West-end. Photo. from Altmann, Monographien of St. Martin, 1850.

MENZALEI an extensive salt water lake, Lower Egypt, 5 E. Damietta, stretching along the coast for about 38 m from that town, with a breadth of about 20 m. It is divided by the projecting peninsula, on which the town of Menzaleh is built, into two large gulfs, and the whole is separated from the sea by a long and narrow neck of land. The general depth of water is about five fathoms, but in some parts it is double, and even much greater. It is too salt to use the sea, with which it communicates by two practicable mouths, those of Dylich and Omm Farage, supposed to be the ancient Mendean and Tanitic openings. It contains a number of islands, but none of these are inhabited, except those of Matariush occupied by fishermen, at the extremity of the peninsula on which the town of Menzaleh stands. Some of them, however, are covered with ruins. It abounds in fish the taking of which gives employment and subsistence to a numerous class of sailors. The most extensive fishery is in the sea. The rove, 10 m. S. by E. Damietta, S. W. side of the lake, on a canal of some name, 12 m. from its entrance into the lake, is supposed to occupy the site of the ancient Ptolemais. It has several minarets, some respectable houses, and a trade in rice and fish.

MENZINGEN, a tn. and par. Switzerland, can. and 4 m. N. N. E. Zug. It is a cheerful, well built place, and contains a townhouse, built in 1611. Pop. 2649.

MENZINGEN, a market tn. Baden circle Middle Rhine, 16 m. N. E. Carlsruhe; with a church, two castles, and two mills. Pop. 1870.

MEOLA (Verni) par. Eng. Lancastr. 34 541 ac. P. 8819
MEON two pars. Eng. Hanthwaite (Stoke), 250 ac. 10 p.
481.—2 (West) 3728 ac. Pop. 901

MEOPHAM, par. Eng. Kent 4699 ac. Pop. 1045
METALL, par. Eng. Cambridgeshire 1469 ac. Pop. 108
METZEL, a tn. Holland, prov. Drenthe, 25 m. S. W. Assen, at the junction of the river Echtinger Beest, and Haveler, continued by the Beest, navigable hence 6 m. S. W. to the Zuider Zee. It has two churches, a synagogue, a poorhouse, and several schools, walk, oil, saw, and corn mills, three breweries, a vinegar-work; manufactures of various kinds of linen and cotton fabrics, including esteemed sailcloth, blancheries, hat-factories, roperies, tin-works, bomb-making yards, and tobacco-works. It carries on a considerable trade and transit traffic, being the chief port and outlet for the products of the province. Pop. 4376.

MEPPEN a tn. in Hanover, prov. Osnabrück, sep. industrial dachy of Arzberg-Meppen, at the confluence of the Hase with the Ems, here crossed by a wooden bridge, 42 m. W. N. W. Osnabrück. It is of a rectangular shape and is walled. It has two gates, narrow crooked streets, two churches, two hospitals, and a R. Catholic gymnasium, manufactures of soap, leather, linen and tobacco, several dye-works, a bleachfield and linens, and a considerable general trade, greatly facilitated by the Ems and the Ems canal. Pop. 1561
METZ, a tn. France, dep. Moselle, 184 ac. 12 503
ME QUINENZA, a tn. Spain, prov. Saragossa and 92 m. W. N. W. Saragossa, at the foot of a mountain crowned by a castle, almost the only remains of its fortifications, 1 bank Elbro, at the confluence of the Ebro. It has a mean appearance, steep and crooked streets, a townhouse, two barracks, a granary three primary schools, and a church, two flour and two oil mills, and some charcoal-burning. Mequenza is supposed to be the Gogolopolis mentioned by Caesar, and was a place of considerable importance in early Spanish history. Pop. 1370.

MERINEZ a city, Morocco near 1 bank Sebou, and 30 m. W. Fez, in a beautiful and well watered plain. It occupies a great extent of space, the houses consisting of a ground floor only. The city is surrounded by a wall 6 ft. high, which serves as a defence against the Berbers, who often make incursions even to its gates and contains a handsome palace, built by Muley Ismael, who had resolved to make it the capital of his northern dominions. The emperors of Morocco still reside occasionally at Mequinez. Pop. 60,000.

MERU and SER, two lofty summits of the Himalayas, in the N. E. part of the Punjab, about lat. 33° 35' N. lon. 76° 25' E. They are typically within a few miles of each other, and seem to be of about equal height. It is remarkable that while one of their peaks is white with perpetual snow, the other continues bare and black.

MELI, or MEXARZLA-YILIK, a tn. France, dep. Lot-et-Garonne 12 m. N. E. Bels. It has numerous tanneries and currying-works, and a trade in wine, brandy, and vinegar. Pop. 2058.

MELN-GLAC [Sea of ice] the Alps.
MERLA, a tn. France, dep. Oise, 15 m. S. Beauvais. It employs a considerable number of tinning-glaziers, and has an extensive trade in articles of ivory, bone, and fine foreign wood works for agricultural implements, tanneries, manufactures of lace, and some trade in corn, barrow, milk cows, cattle, and wool. Pop. 2478.

MERA (also MEKED) two nearly contiguous vils. Hungary co. Abauyvar on the Baronyos, 4 m. from Ferö. They have a handsome manor-house, a mill, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1565.

MERABING, a tn. S. Africa, cap. of the territory of the Matabele, situated within the interior S. W. of Delagoa Bay. It occupies the summit of a long, but narrow ridge, and forms an important stronghold, being accessible only on the W. by two openings called Litorochettes [for the horn gates]. These are narrow passages, defended on both sides by strong stone walls, and so effectually guarding the approach, that the in-jubilees have been able to sustain many protracted sieges. The houses, with, are not built close to each other but scattered in groups of 30, 50, or 40 lots. In peace, the pop. is about 1400, but in war is greatly increased, by numbers resorting to it, for protection, from the neighbouring kraals.

MERAN, a tn. Austria, Tyrol, circle and 14 m. N W Bozen, at the junction of three valleys at the confluence of the Passer with the Adige. The houses are mostly built upon scree. It has two churches, Capuchin and Benedictine monasteries, English female institute, and a gymnasium. Much excellent fruit and wine are produced here. From the bridge over the Passer nearly 20 castles may be counted among which stands the old castle of Tyrol, partly in ruins which gives its name to the country and was the first residence of its princes. Pop. 2300.

MERAPI.—1 Three volcanoes, in Java; one in prov. Besoeki, belonging to the Ildung group, and the most difficult to climb in the island, a destructive eruption of which took place on January 23 and 24 1817 the second is a silent volcano, in prov. Djokjodjart, rich in sulphur the third is in prov. Kaido, 9850 ft. high, one of the most important in the island, and continually sending forth dense black smoke severe eruptions took place, December, 1832, December, 1832, and August 1837.—2, An active volcano in Sumatra, near W coast, 45 m. N.E. Padang, about lat. 0° 20' N, lon. 100° 30' E. and about 2330 ft. high.

MERATE a tn and com. Italy Lombardy, and 30 m. N.E. Milan, with the palace occupied, in 1786 by the king of Sardinia, and now the property of the Belgiojoso family. Pop. 2918.

MERAVIGLIE a chain of nine small lakes, France, in the N of dep. Alpes Maritimes, and a little W of Tenda near the Col de Tenda, a pass in the Maritime Alps.

MERBES—2a-CHATEAU, vil and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 18 m. S.E. Mons, l. bank Sambre with a brewery, two tanneries, six bark-mills, a marble sawing-work, two poteries, a brick and two tile works. Pop. (agricultural) 1657.

MERBET, a tn, Hindustan, prov. Madras, near Canara, 17 m. N.E. Mangalore, lat. 15° 6' N lon. 75° 9' E. From the architectural remains of antiquity found here it would appear to have been a place of great extent and importance in remote times. The pagodas are all built of brown stone and the largest is a stately edifice the pillars and roof being sculptured and carved in a very elaborate manner. The inhabitants are principally of the Jan religion.

MERLADAL a tn. Spain, lat. Minorca 12 m. N W Port Mahon. It has a large and handsome church and a trade in corn, cattle, fax, and fruit. Pop. 3690.

MERLATELLIO, a tn Italy, along Urbino-4 Pesaro and about 15 m. W W Urbino, r. bank Metauro. It is a petty dirty place without an inn. Pop. 1200.

MERLATO-SANMARCO, a tn Italy, along and 20 m. S.S.E. Forlì l. bank Metauro. Pop. about 4000.

MERCENASCO or MARCONASCO, a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Turin, prov. and about 6 m. from Ivrea with an old but elegant church, ancient castle in ruins and some trout trade. Pop. (agricultural) 2208.

MERCHINGEN, a vil Baden, circle Lower Rhine, on the Kessach. It has a church and a castle. Pop. 1194.

MERCHTEM, a tn and com. Belgium, prov. S. Brabant, 10 m. N W Brussels with a paper and three other mills. Pop. (agricultural), 4948.

MERIDA one of the kingdoms of the Saxon Heptarchy. It is said to have been founded by Angles, under a leader of the name of Odo, in 885, and included co. Chester Derby Nottingham, Lincoln, Salop, Bedford, Leicestershire, Rutland, Northampton, Huntingdon, Hereford, Worcester, Warwick, Gloucester, Oxford, Bucks, and parts of Hertford and Bedford. It was subdued about 825, by Egbert of Wessex, and afterwards formed a dependency of that kingdom.

MERCKEM, a tn and com. Belgium, prov. W Flanders, on the Yperle, about 18 m. S.S.W. Bruges, with several breweries, oil-works, and a ropery. Pop. (agricultural) 8660.

MERCOGLIANO, a tn and com. Naples, prov. Principato Ultra, dist. and 2 m. W Avellino. Pop. 4186.

MERCURAG (Latin, Mercurialis) a vil. and com. kingd. of Italy, Piedmont, on Lake Maggiore, 1 m. from Arona, with a church, near it some Roman antiquities have been found. Pop. 1050.

Vol. II

MERCURY generally a vil and com. France dep. Savoy, 2 m. W Albert-Ville, with a church, an old feudal castle, and communal school, several mills, and a trade in wool, corn and fruit. Pop. 1920.

MERDIN a tn. Asiatic Turkey. See MARDIN. MERE, a market tn. and par. England, co. Wilts. The town, 31 m. W by N Salisbury, has a market-house, a silk throwing-mill, and manufactures of English down and bedding. Pop. 1166 Area of par. 7400 ac. Pop. 2591.

MEREGYE or MERZUR a vil Austria, Transylvania, co. Klausenburg 24 m. from K's Feist with a church. Pop. 1500.

MEREND MEREND or MERENDAN, a tn. Persia, prov. Azerbajan 40 m. N.E. Tabreez, formed of four villages, whose houses are separated from each other by large gardens, which yield cochineal, excellent opium and famous apricots and peaches. Pop. about 10,000.

MERETSCH, a tn. Russia, gov. and 55 m. S.W. Wilna, at the confluence of a small river of same name with the Niemien. It contains a church, several churches a Dominican convent, and a school, and some general trade. P. 8500.

MREVALE par. Eng. Warwick 2150 ac. P. 212.

MEREWALE or MAREWALE, a river, S. America, Guiana, which rises about 4 N and lon. 65° W, and unites with the Essequibo to form the Caure, an important affluent of the Orinoco. It winds much through a mountainous country, and, being much broken by rapids, becomes impassable, even by Indian canoes, above the point where it is joined by the Arakuri.

MEREWORTH par. Eng. Kent, 2375 ac. P. 912.

MERGENTHAL (Gauze) a vil. Bavaria, circle Bunsau, about 5 m. from Gabel with a church, and three mills. Pop. 1147.

MERGENTHEIM, a tn. Württemberg, circle Jaxt, l. bank Tauber, 56 m. N.N.E. Stuttgart. It has well built houses, and spacious, well-cleaned streets an old castle, occupied by a prince of Württemberg a high church, townhouse, gymnasium, a library and bathing establishment. P. 2381.

MERGOZZO a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Novara, prov. and about 5 m. from Pallanza, on a height above the Toce. It has a church, marble quarries and a trade in corn, wine, fruit, dairy produce and fish obtained from Lake Mergozzo, in the vicinity. Pop. 3078.—The lake lies W of Lake Maggiore is about 2 m. long by 1 m. broad and remarkable for its limpid and pure water.

MERGUI ARCHIPILAGO a chain of islands, Indian Ocean, off the coast of Tenasserim and Lower Siam, the more N ones forming a part of the British prov. Mergui lat. 9° to 15° N, lon. 97° to 98° 30' E. The principal islands are Dume's, King's, and St. Matthew's. They are generally covered with trees and have, most of them, small thriving rills of pure water. A few cultivated patches are here and there to be met with. The adjoining sea abound in fish and excellent oysters, pearls also, of good quality and lustre, are found along the coasts of nearly all the islands. The inhabitants are harmless and industrious, but few in number.

MERGUI, a seaport in India, E. of the Ganges cap. of the Tenasserim provinces, and on one of the mouths of the river Tenasserim lat. (large pagoda) 13° 36' 43" N lon. 96° 35' E. (a.) It is enclosed by a stockade of entire trees, forming a kind of wooden wall, pierced with brick gateways, and consists of wide streets, and houses built on piles. The religious edifices which are numerous, but, with the exception of the large pagoda, paltry suffered much when the town was stormed by the British in 1824. The harbour is safe, and has 2 fathoms water over the bar at low tide, with an additional rise of 5 fathoms at spring-tides. A good many vessels are built at it. The trade mostly with China, includes exports of teak wood, tortoise-shell, shark fin &c. Pop. about 8000.

MERHEMET ASAD (formerly, Shahr-i-Mogand) a tn. Persia, prov. Azerbajan, 80 m. S.W. Tabreez. It was formerly a very considerable town. It contains a fort and palace, and 1000 houses but is now half in ruins.

MERIDA (Latin, Emerita Augusta), a city, Spain, Estramadura, prov. and 30 m. E. Badajoz, l. bank Guadiana, here spanned by a Roman bridge of 31 arches, 3575 ft. long, 35 ft. broad, and 33 ft. above the river. The houses are, many of them, two stories, and the streets paved and clean. It has a townhouse, an hospital for the poor, a lunatic asylum, four primary endowed schools, a theatre in the annex of Santa Clara, two nurseries, three suppressed convents, two parish churches, of substantial construction, and a chapel of ease. In the neighbourhood are several hermitages and two cemeteries and the statue of St. Olaf, the patroness of the city stands in the suburb. In respect of steepness and well-preserved monuments of antiquity Merida is the Rome of Spain. According to the chronicle of King Roberto, the walls were 34 m. in circuit, 15 fathoms high, and 10 fathoms broad, with 1700 towers, 84 gates, and five castles and, in time of peace, the garrison consisted of 80,000 infantry, and 10,000 horse. Besides the bridge above mentioned, which was built by Trajan, the principal Roman remains are a triumphal arch 44 ft. high, in honour of that emperor and called the arch of Santiago, the castle, now called the Conventual, which was added to it by the Moors, and afterwards became the episcopal palace, and then that of the Templars, the temple of Diana, now built into the house of the Count of Caraca, and in which are 19 fluted granite columns, 40 ft. high, with Corinthian capitals, the theatre, which is almost perfect, nothing being wanting but the proscenium, the amphitheatre or Numanchea, the circus 1556 ft. by 885 ft. and in good preservation, the great aqueduct, arched in three tiers, one of the grandest remains of antiquity, &c. Merida perhaps existed before the Roman conquest, but it was at least rebuilt by the legatus Publius Orosius, in the year 23 A.C. Augustus here settled the veteran cohorts, of the fifth and tenth legions, who had served in Cantabria. The city became the capital of Lusitania, and continued in great splendour for several centuries. It capitulated, in 715 to the Moors, from whom it was taken again by Alonso el Bueno in 1229, and from that day the province and city date their decline, and now are poor and almost depopulated. Some of the arches of the bridge were destroyed, in 1812 during the siege of Badajoz, in order to impede Marmont's advance to the relief of Exeter, in 1808 8000 French kept at bay the whole army of Castile for a month, although the river was fordable. P. 5780

MERIDA, a city, Yucatan, 30 m. S.W. Tuxtla, lat. 6° 18' N. lon. 71° 30' W. on an elevated, fertile plain, surrounded by three rivers—E. the Minaya, S.W. the Ati, and S. the Chama, some of which are navigable. It was formerly the second city of Yucatan, but was almost wholly destroyed by the great earthquake which overtook the city of Caraca, 350 m. distant, on March 26, 1812. It is regularly laid-out, the streets intersecting each other at right angles, each having in the centre a clear stream of running water. Previously to the calamity above alluded to, Merida contained five convents, and three parish churches; at present, one only of the former remains, now converted into the cathedral. A convent of nuns still exists there are also an hospital and a public college. It was founded in 1569 under the name of Santiago de los Caballeros. P. about 4000

MERIDA the cap. city of Yucatan, Central America lat. 20° 58' N. lon. 89° 35' W. about 25 m. from the sea, 90 m. N.E. Campeche. It has a Moorish aspect generally, having been built at a time when that style prevailed in Spanish architecture. The streets are of good width, and laid-out at right angles, but slope towards the centre, so as to form channels for carrying off the water. In rainy weather, they are flooded to the edges of the side walks, which are 4 ft. wide, and rendered impassable for hours. The streets are named after a painted wooden figure of some animal or other object, placed in a conspicuous situation at one of the corners, as the Street of the Elephant, the Bull, the Lion, &c. The city contains a number of fine squares, the principal of which, the Plaza Mayor, 600 ft. square, stands in the centre. From this point eight streets diverge, two in the direction of each cardinal point, so each there is a dissipated gate, and beyond are the barriers or suburbs. The square is bounded by the cathedral, Bishop's palace, government-house and dwellings occupied by the citizens. There are, altogether 14 churches in the city and suburbs some of them in a good style of architecture, and richly ornamented particularly the cathedral, which has a most imposing appearance, being surrounded by well-proportioned domes, parades, and towers, and having a series of lofty windows. In the E. part of the city, on an eminence, stand the remains of an old Franciscan convent, a remarkable and interesting edifice, enclosed by a high wall with towers, and now called the Castle. The market occupies a large square in a central position. Fertility is abundant and cheap, as are also the other necessities of life. The climate of Merida, though very dry, and not subject to great changes, is productive of febrile diseases at all seasons of the year from which even the natives are not exempted. Agues and pulmonary complaints are also prevalent. Merida was founded in 1542, and stands on the site of an ancient Indian town. Pop. estimated at 28,000

MERIDON, see Rag Warwar, 3010 ac. Pop. 986.
MERIONETH or MERCYREATH, a maritime co. N. Wales, bounded, N. by Carnarvonshire and Denbighshire, N.E. Denbighshire, E. and S. Montgomeryshire, S. Cardiganshire, and S.W. and W. Cardigan Bay an inlet of the Irish Sea; area, 48,000 ac. Nearly the whole surface is covered with wild and barren rocks and mountains, some of them of considerable height, rugged and picturesque. The highest summits attain an elevation of 2500 ft. to 2900 ft. One of the most remarkable of these peaks, though not the loftiest, is Cadair Idris, the summit of which consists chiefly of numerous columns of highly crystalline gneiss, similar to those forming the Giant's Causeway in Ireland. Slate-rocks almost entirely occupy the county. The principal minerals are lead and copper ore, and slates. The copper-ore have been worked to a great extent. Limestone is also quarried in great quantities, particularly the white limestone. There are numerous rivers and lakes, but, with one exception, they are mostly small. The largest lake, Treglough or Bala Mer, is nearly 12 m. in circumference. Numerous marshes occur along the sea-coast. In the larger valleys, and near the coast, the climate is mild, but on the mountains it is cold and tempestuous. The soils are various, those of the low lands are very fertile. Oats form the chief grain crop, but barley is also extensively grown. Wheat is raised on the best soils and rye on temporary enclosures of small pieces of prepared waste land. Potatoes are grown very generally and fruit trees are profitably cultivated throughout the whole of the county. Considerable quantities of cheese and butter are made, but the former is extremely poor. The cattle and sheep here are small and hardy, but the wool of the sheep is very bad, being mixed with coarse, long hairs. Great numbers of the diminutive race of ponies, called merioneth are reared. The chief manufactures are a peculiar kind of cotton cloth called 'Welsh plains' and knitted woollen stockings and socks. Principal town, Dolgelly. Pop. (1851), 88,843.

MERISCHWANDEN a town and par. Switzerland, cant. Aargau, near Lake Reuss, 10 m. S.W. Zürich. It is an old place, and several Roman antiquities have been found in the neighbourhood. Pop. 1292

MERK, a vil. Hungary. Thutur Thelen, or Sathmar about 1 m. from Velled with two churches. Pop. 1005
MERKAH, a small seaport in E. Africa, Meriduesha territory lat. 1 44 1 N. lon. 44° 51' E. (a.), 45 m. S.W. Makdichah. Pop. about 8000

MERKELSDORF, or MERKLINERDORF a vil. Bohemia circle Kollggrätz, near Lower Adersbach, 16 m. from Trautau with a church, a school, and a chapel to which numerous pilgrimages are made. Pop. 1085

MERKELANDEN a vil. Württemberg, circle Neuch, on the Wurm 13 m. S.W. Ulm with a church, manufactures of linen, and a mill. Pop. 1297

MERLERA the most N. of the Ionian Isles, 7 m. N.W. Corfu lat. 39° 58' N. lon. 19° 53' E. (a.) It is small but fertile, greatest length, 8 W. to N.E., about 2½ m.

MERMENTAU, a river, U. States, Louisiana, which, after a S. course of 300 m. falls into the Gulf of Mexico, 220 m. W. the Mississippi. It forms a lake of same name, and has only 8 ft. water in the bar at its mouth.

MERMERIKO, a vil. Senegambia, 1 bank Falden, nearly opposite Senegal-Yaya, lat. 15 51 N. lon. 19° 30' W. inhabited by Foulahs and Serenoleles. The houses are remarkably plain and several of them handsome.

MEROE (also Mer), a tract of country in Nubia, lying between the Bahr-el-azek, the Nile, and the Atbara. In the N. part, and on the E. bank of the Nile, 30 m. N.E. Khartoum, are the ruins of the city of Meroe, the ancient cap. of Ethiopia, celebrated for its monuments, its commerce, its oracle of Ammon, and its peaceful king.

MEROO a river, New S. Wales, co. Wellington, about 120 m. N.W. Sydney. It flows W. N.W. to the Odongang, an affluent of the Macapuri. Rich gold-diggings have been established on it.

MERRIMACK, a river U States, which rises in New Hampshire, flows E. by N. into Massachusetts, then winds N.E. and E. and falls into the Atlantic, a little below Newburyport. It is navigable for vessels of considerable burthen to Haverhill, about 50 m. up. canals afford a means of navigation past the falls and rapids. Total course, about 150 m.

MERRINGTON, par Eng. Durham 1884 ac. P 504.

MERRIOTT par Eng. Somerset, 1698 ac. P 1489.

MERRITT a to Hindoostan presid Bombay, prov. Baysapor, 125 m. S.S.E. Poona, lat 16° 51' N. lon. 74° 47' E., of considerable extent, and walled, but the houses, constructed of stone and wood mixed, are low and mean-looking. There are a number of rudely built little mosques in the town. The fort, in which the rajah resides, is a work of some strength.

MERROW par Eng. Surrey, 1608 ac. Pop. 378.

MERYN (67) par Eng. Cornwall; 3928 ac. P 591.

MERSA DARAB Arabia. See DARAB.

MERSE, a district, Scotland, co. Berwick (noted see).

MERSE, two pars. Eng. Essex.—1 (East) 3857 ac. Pop. 281.—2 (West) 4415 ac. Pop. 870.

MERSEBURG a par Prussia Saxony bounded N by Hannover, Anhalt, and gova. Magdeburg and Potsdam. E. gova. Frankfurt and Lingen, S. kingdom of Saxony, Saxony-Anhalt, and gov. Erfurt and W. gov. Erfurt, and Schwarzenburg, Hannover and Brunswick, area, 8020 geo. sq. m. The W. part of this gov. has a finely undulating surface and the soil is uniformly fertile, towards the N.W., where it borders on the Harz, it is more hilly, and both the soil and climate are of a more unequal nature; E. towards the Elbe, its fertility still further degenerates, and extensive tracts become covered with sand and heath. None of the hills attain a height exceeding 1800 ft. The whole gov. belongs to the basin of the Elbe, which receives part of its drainage directly, and the remainder chiefly by its important tributaries—the Unstrut, Saale, Mulde, and the two Elsters. The minerals are of great value, and include silver, lead, copper, iron, coal and lignite. Manufactures have made considerable progress, and the inhabitants are in general, both industrious and enterprising. The gov. of Merseburg is subdivided into 17 circles. P. (1848) 742,044.

MERSEBURG a to Prussia Saxony, cap. above gov. 1 bank Saale, 14 m. W. Leipzig, on the railway thence to Esmach here crossed by a bridge connecting with suburbs on the opposite side. It is walled, has an old castle, originally an episcopal palace, afterwards the residence of the duke of Saxe-Merseburg and now used for public offices, a fine Gothic cathedral, on a rock overhanging the river with a richly-decorated portal, the church of St. Thomas, and three other Lutheran churches old and new townhouses, old monastery of St. Peter, several schools, an orphan hospital &c. manufactures of linen, leather, stained paper, pasteboard, tobacco, and vinegar and extensive breweries and distilleries. The general assembly of the States of the province is held here every second year. Pop. (1848) 11,349.

MERSEY an important river England, has its rise in the range of hills on the S.W. confines of Yorkshire, at the point where Cheshire and Derbyshire join the former. It flows in a general S.W. direction to Runcorn where it expands into an estuary 2 m. to 3 m. broad, on the N. side of which is the great commercial port of Liverpool, and below which it joins the Irish Sea. The entire length of the river included by the estuary is from 55 m. to 60 m. Principal affluent, the Irwell to which it is navigable.

MERSEHAM, par Eng. Kent, 2675 ac. Pop. 778.

MERSEHAM, par Eng. Surrey; 2535 ac. Pop. 648.

MERSTON, par Eng. Sussex, 710 ac. Pop. 76.

MERTENDORF a vil Bohemia, circle Leitmeritz about 13 m. from Astebe, with a church. Pop. 1019.

MERTHER, par Eng. Cornwall; 1738 ac. Pop. 873.

MERTHYR, four pars Wales.—1 Carmarthen 2219 ac. P 218.—2 (Cyngw) Brecon, 21 378 ac. P 835.—3 (Dowry) Glamorgan P 159.—4 (Merth) Glamorgan P 154.

MERTHYR-TYDIL, a market to part, bar, and par Wales, in S.W. of Glamorgan 21 m. N.W. Cardiff, on the Taf at the N. extremity of Taf Vale, and a station on the Taf Vale and Aberdare Railway. It has risen up within a century, from a mere village to a place of great extent and importance, and, though consisting generally of irregular assemblages of workmen's houses, situated on both sides of the river and communicating by two bridges, has recently undergone important changes, which have greatly improved its sanitary condition and general appearance. A street, recently formed and now become the principal thoroughfare, contains good shops and dwellings, and near its centre is one of the finest spasms and splendid market-places in Wales. The public buildings and institutions include two Established churches and a chapel of ease and about 80 places of worship, belonging chiefly to the Wesleyan and other Methodists, Independents, Baptists, &c. national and other schools, a mechanics institute, a theatre, and in the vicinity Gyvathia castle, with its park and Pen-y-Darren House, with its gardens, form conspicuous and pleasing objects. The town owes its prosperity to its situation near the centre of the valuable coal and mineral field of S. Wales. The mines are extensively worked, and among the important iron-works which have been established, those of Dowlais alone, when in full work, employ about 8000 persons. The shipping ports are Swansea and Cardiff, particularly the latter, to which, in addition to the railway already mentioned there is access by the Glamorgan and canal. The weekly market is well attended, and there are three annual fairs. The bor. sends a member to Parliament registered electors (1851) 988. Area of par 17,744 ac. Pop. 46 878.

MERTOLA (anc. Julia Myrtilis) a tn and par Portugal prov. Alentejo 70 m. S.S.E. Evora, on the crest of a hill r bank Guadiana, here navigable. It is an ancient place, walled, and has a convent almshouse and hospital. P. 2409.

MERTON three pars Eng.—1 Devon 8738 ac. P 790.—2 Norfolk 1932 ac. P 188.—3 Oxford 1090 ac. P 200.

MERTON, par Scot. Berwick 7000 ac. Pop. 693.

MERTON a vil and par England no Surrey 5 m. S.W. London on the Wandie here crossed by a bridge. It is a church erected in the 13th century, and an Independent chapel. Area of par 1780 ac. Pop. 1870.

MERTSENA, or MERTSENA, a vil Hungary, co. Krasowa, 6 m. from Kakaova, in a fertile district, which produces much wheat and maize, and rears great numbers of cattle. P. 1568.

MERUL, or MERUL, a vil Hungary banat of Temeswar on the Bistritz, about 30 m. from Karaneseb, with a church. Pop. 1372.

MERVE (anc. Antiochia Margiana) a tn. Turkestan khansate and 245 m. S.E. Khiva, on the caravan-road from Mashed to Khiva and Bokhara, about 12 m. E. from the Moorgiah and about 40 m. S.E. from where that river disappears in the sand. It was formerly one of the four imperial cities of Khoreasan, and the capital of many of the Persian sultans, particularly of the Seljukian dynasty. It was then surrounded by beautiful gardens, the fruits of which were much esteemed. About the beginning of the present century it was taken and pillaged by the Usbecks, since which time it has gradually declined. The country around is called Merochak, and is very unhealthy. The population uncertain about 3000.

MERVILLE (Latin, Mercatoribus), a to France dep. Nord, 1 bank Lys, 19 m. W. Lille. It has manufactures of linen, particularly damask and table linen which has long been famous, and still forms its great staple. It has also manufactures of cotton velvet, self-refineries, brick and glass works, blacksmiths, tanneries, and building yards for barges.

Its trade is in corn, cattle, wool, and charcoal. Pop. 8021.

MERWEDE (Dut.) a river Holland, formed by the junction of the Maas and the Waal; it flows W., past Gorinchem and Dordrecht and below the latter, at the Dordrecht lock it receives the name of the Oude Maas (Old Maas).

MERXEM a vil and com. Belgium, prov. and 2 m. N.E. Antwerp, on the Little Scheldt; with a brewery, distillery, salt-refinery brick works, an oil and three flour mills. P. 1649.

MERXHEIM, a vil Germany, Hesse-Hanau, bail Meisenheim with two churches and four mills. Pop. 1585.

MERXPLAS a vil and com. Belgium, prov. and 27 m. N.E. Antwerp, in the Campine, on the Marck or Merck. It has a brick works, two breweries, an oil and two flour mills. There is here an agricultural colony established for the suppression of mendicancy. Pop. 1881.

MERZ-EL-KEBIR, a seaport to Algeria, prov. and 2 m. N.W. Oran. It is a place of great strength, and possesses a considerable trade; the imports, in 1948, amounting to £181,978. It was once the capital of the Spahis, who called it Mesaliquet. The French took it in 1890.

MERZDORF—1 a vil. Transil., prov. Sibiu, gov. Leleu, circ. Lăneș, with a church and a mill. P. 1905.—2 a vil. Bohemia, circ. Kollégáts, 4 m. from Bezanau with a church, a school, a walk and three other mills. Pop. 1419.

MESZECZ, a vil. Bohemia, circ. Kollégáts, 6 m. from Opotshana with a church. Pop. 1145.

MERZIG, a tn. Prussia, gov. and 82 m. S.E. of Trer, cap. circ. r. bank Saar with a church, two chapels, a synagogue, building-docks, and some general trade. Pop. 3471. Area of circ. 123 geo. sq. m. Pop. 31,709.

MESAGNA a tn. Naples prov. Terra d'Otranto, dist. and 11 m. W.S.W. Bitondia with a castle serves convents hospital, and some manufactures of kitchen utensils. P. 5000.

MESCHÉDE, a tn. Rhénish Prussia, gov. and 10 m. E.S.E. Aachen, cap. circ. on the Rur; with five churches and chapels. Pop. 3056. Area of circ. 228 geo. sq. m. Pop. 28,310.

MESÉN, or MESKIN, a tn. Russia, gov. and 150 m. N.E. Archangel, cap. dist. on a river of same name, about 18 m. above its mouth in the White Sea. It has two churches, and a small haven, at which it carries on a good trade chiefly in furs, tallow, whale and seal oil, and fish. Pop. (1849) 1455.

—The narrow straiting the E. part of the gov. is about 600 m. long, E. to W., and about 300 m. broad. The climate is too severe to admit of much cultivation. Great part of the surface is occupied by swamps and lakes. The inhabitants of the interior chiefly Samoyeds, have a few stunted cattle, and considerable herds of reindeer. Those on the coast live by fishing, or engaging as sailors in Archangel vessels. —The river rises in the S. of the gov., on the frontiers of Vologda, proceeds into the latter gov., first S. and then N. re-enters gov. Archangel, flows easterly to N.W., and a little below the town, falls into the bay of same name, in the White Sea, after a course of about 450 m. Its principal affluents are, on the left, the Iena, Yashka, and Sebelsa; and on the right the Plesna and Pona.

MESERITZCH two places, Austria, Moravia —1, (Gross), a tn. circ. Igla, 58 m. W.S.W. Olmütz with an old castle, two churches, and an hospital considerable manufactures of linen, and an important corn-market. Pop. 3900. —2, (Weissenhof), a tn., circ. Pless, 35 m. E.S.E. Olmütz, on the Betschva with a handsome chateau, a church manufactures of linen, several mills, and some trade in cheese. Pop. 1690.

MESERITZ (Polish Mieszyca) a tn. Prussia, gov. and 56 m. W.N.W. Posen, cap. circ. at the junction of the Pabitz with the Odra. It is walled, defended by a castle, has two churches, a synagogue, and hospital, several provincial courts, and manufactures of linen, leather and hosiery. Pop. 4668. Area of circ. 368 geo. sq. m. Pop. 38,011.

MENHAW par. Eng. Devon 1761 ac. Pop. 237.

MESHID, or MUSKHO a tn. Persia, cap. prov. Khuzestan, in an extensive valley of same name, 500 m. N.E. Isfahan, lat. 32° 20' N. lon 59° 35' E. It is surrounded by walls, enclosing a much larger space than its population requires, and everywhere has a very desolate appearance. Near the centre of the town, there is a sunn degree of bustle but elsewhere, little is seen except extensive burying-grounds and endless tracts of ruins. Its principal street, however, is spacious and handsome. An aqueduct, the banks of which are shaded by trees, passes through it, while at its extremity are seen the splendid spires and gilded minarets of the shrine of Imam Reza. This edifice, the only one particularly deserving notice, is situated in an oblong, about 150 yards long, by 75 yards broad, excavated with massive rock of painted and gilded tiles, arranged in sherry and elegant patterns, and entered by four lofty and magnificent gateways. The shrine itself at the S.W. part of the oblong is composed of a mass of buildings, the proportions of which are partly hid by the wretched hovels around it, but is entered by a silver gate, the gift of Nadir Shah, and has a very gorgeous interior a vast hall like the central nave of a cathedral, rising loftily into a central dome, ornamented with the richest colours, and a profusion of gold and pearls. Within the same enclosure, and connected with the shrine by a broad passage, is the mosque of Gohar Shah, considered one of the most beautiful and splendid in Persia. The only other edifices deserving notice are several colleges, an extensive bazaar a spacious but unfinished caravansary and a palace, of little architectural merit, so constructed as to form a kind of citadel. The manufactures consist of silks, cottons, the best in Persia; sword-blades, celebrated for their temper, some other species of armour and some silk and cotton goods. A considerable number of the inhabitants are employed in cutting gems, obtained from the turquoise mines in the vicinity. The situation of Meshid on the great caravan routes of Persia, make it an important entrepot for the produce of surrounding countries, and rich caravans are daily arriving from Bokhara, Khiva, Herat, Kerman, Yazd, and other quarters. Pop. estimated at about 40,000.

MESLIN L. Evreux, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, on the Sille 18 m. N. Mons. It has manufactures of linen yarn and calico, and two mills. The castle of Mesnage is in the vicinity. Pop. 1679.

MESLO, a river, Asiatic Russia, which rises in the N. of gov. Yekaterinok flows W.N.W. and falls into the Gulf of Tazovsk, after a course of about 140 m.

MILMOI A tn. Italy Romagna, deleg. and 61 m. E.N.E. Ferrara r. bank Po di Goro twice purchased by the Papal Government from the house of Austria first by Pius VI., for about £210,000 and afterwards in 1822 by Leo XII., for £100,000. Pop. 4000.

MESOLONGHI a tn. Greece. See MESOLONGHI.

MESOPOTAMIA (between the rivers) the ancient name of the country in Asiatic Turkey, lying between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates, now comprised in the pachalik Diarbekir and Bagdad. The name did not come into use till after the time of the Macedonian conquest of Asia.

MESORACA, a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Ultra II, dist. and 28 m. W. Otranto. Pop. 2074.

MESQUITELELLA, a tn. and par. Portugal prov. Beira Alta, 16 m. W.S.W. Guarda in a valley. Pop. 1083.

MESSE a walled tn. Morocco, W. coast, at the mouth of a river of same name, 110 S.W. Toudout; lat. 30° 4' N., lon 9° 28' W. (u). Pop. 8000.

MESSEANCY (German, Metsen) a vil. and com. Belgium prov. Luxembourg 4 m. N.E.E. Longwy with oil and flour mills, and mines of iron. Pop. 2070.

MESSE, or MESCHENMOOS, a vil. Austria, Transylvania, stadt Hermannstadt, about 27 m. from Sibiu with a church. Inhabitants, Saxons. Pop. 1208.

MESSEJANA a tn. and par. Portugal, prov. Algarve com. and 28 m. S.W. Beja. It is walled and has a convent. Pop. 1500.

MESSENE, a vil. Greece. See MAVROMATI.

MESSEIN a dist. France, which belonged to the former prov. Lorraine, and had Metz for its capital. It now forms the greater part of dep. Moselle, and part of depa. Meuse and Meurthe.

MESSINA, a prov. Sicily bounded N. by the Tyrrhenian Sea, E. the Strait of Messina and the Ionian Sea, S. prov. Catania, and W. prov. Palermo; length, E. to W. about 100 m. mean breadth, 25 m. The Neptunian chain of mountains crosses it, E. to W. throughout its length, and forms a watershed of which the N. slope belongs to the basin of the Tyrrhenian Sea, and the S. to that of the Ionian Sea. The streams of the former are the Montone, San Antonio, Fitalia, Inganno, and Carona. Those of the latter, the Savone, Mongiù, and Cantara. In summer several of these streams are dry. The mountains are covered with wood, but the soil in the valleys, and on the banks of the rivers, is both fertile and well cultivated. The vegetable productions include silk, hemp, flax and fruits, as citrons, oranges, pistachio-nuts, grapes, and olives the great mineral product is sulphur. The province is divided into four districts.—Messina, the capital, Castrolibate, Mistretta, and Patti subdivided into 27 circondarios and 94 communes. Pop. (1883), 238,302.

MESSINA (anc. Zancle, French, Messone), a tn. and seaport, Sicily, cap. prov. and on the strait of same name, lat. (right) 38° 11' N.; lon 15° 34' 45' E. (L.). It rises from the shore in the form of an amphitheatre, with the Neptunian mountains for a background. The whitewash of the houses contrasts finely with the dark woods of the mountains, and nothing else is to be seen than the scene which meets the eye of the spectator as he approaches it from the sea. Messina ranks as a fortress of the first class, it is walled, flanked by bastions, and defended by a citadel on the E., and several forts, both on the E. and W. The harbour is one of the best in the Mediterranean. It is formed by a deep bend in the shore which curves from W to N.E., and so much resembles a sickle that the town took its original name from that implement, and was called Zancle (Zancle). The N.E. side is a projecting tongue of land, and has much more the appearance of an artificial mole than of a work of nature. The opposite extremities draw so near each other as to narrow the passage, and render it difficult for vessels to certain winds to make it, but, once within there is ample space, great depth, and perfect shelter. The circuit of this splendid basin is about 4 m. Fronting the harbour is a broad quay called the Marina, adorned with statues and fountains, and forming the favourite promenade and, immediately beyond it is a magnificent terrace called Palastrata, once lined with noble edifices, most of which were damaged or thrown down by the fearful earthquake of 1783. The interior of the city has gained considerably in appearance by that catastrophe. It was formerly ill drained, the streets were narrow and the houses so high as to exclude both light and air, and gave the whole town a lifeless, gloomy look. The modern town is generally composed of well-built houses of two stories, and spacious streets well paved with blocks of lava. Among the public edifices are included nearly 60 churches, many of them of great beauty, and adorned with fine sculptures and paintings; but it may be sufficient here to notice the cathedral, a Gothic structure with a somewhat heavy exterior, but supported within by vast pillars of granite, supposed to have belonged to a temple of Neptune, and adorned by fine mosaics and an exquisitely carved pulpit; the viceregal palace, with a large open space finely planned, and laid-out in walks; the archiepiscopal palace, the seminary, grand seminary college, large and well endowed hospital, numerous convents, two theatres, law-rooms, and arsenals. The manufactures consist chiefly of silk goods. The trade, both transit and general, is extensive. The principal exports are silk, olive-oil, linseed and other seeds, oranges, lemons, and other fruits, corn, wine, and spirits called liquore, lemons-juice, skimmage, muscades, rags, betelnuts, &c. The tunny and other fisheries are carried on to a considerable extent. In 1847, the value of the exports amounted to £248,100; of the imports, £280,860.

Messina is the see of a R. Catholic archbishop and archbishop, and a Greek preceptor, the seat of a high appeal court, a high criminal court, an ordinary civil court and a court of commerce. It also possesses a royal college or Real Accademia Carolina, with a full complement of professors in belles-lettres, philosophy law and medicine and a naval academy. Messina, under the name of Zancle, is said to have been founded 1004 years B.C. The Messinians having afterwards obtained possession of it, called it Messana. Charles of Anjou to avenge the massacre of the French in the Sicilian Vespers, besieged it without success, and lost great part of his fleet. In 1674 on the revolt of Messina from Spain a Spanish fleet blockaded the port, but a French fleet arriving a great naval battle was fought, in which the former was defeated. In 1743, the plague carried off the greater part of the inhabitants and the ruin which earthquakes had repeatedly threatened was finally consummated by that of 1783, which shook down its most solid edifices, and made it for a time a city of the dead. During the revolt in Sicily, in 1848, Messina, after being several times ineffectually bombarded was attacked by the Neapolitan fleet and a large body of land troops, on September 2 and fired upon for four successive days and a large portion of the city rendered to arms, before it surrendered. Pop. (1850) 37,074.

MESSINA (STRAIT OF) [Italian, Faro di Messina Latin, Fretum Siculorum], a strait, which separates Sicily from Italy and communicates between the Tyrrhenian and the Ionian Sea. It has a length of about 20 m. and gradually widens towards the S. attains, on the parallel of 38° a width of 11 m., but, in the N. where it is narrowest, does not exceed 3 m. From the Faro tower on the N.E. extremity of Sicily to the rock of Scylla, on the opposite coast of Italy the exact distance, as ascertained by Capt. Smyth is 6047 yards. The depth is so great, that, in the centre, po bottom has been found with a line of 100 fathoms, and a strong current continually running with the tide more especially when the direction is from N to S. makes the navigation somewhat difficult but by no means so formidable as was fabled by the ancients, to whom the rock of Scylla, already mentioned and that of Charybdis, on the opposite side of the strait, but at some distance to the S. seemed so dangerous, that it was generally believed to be almost impossible to avoid the one without being dashed upon the other.

MESSINES (Flemish, Messenen) a tn and com Belgium, prov W Flanders, 5 m. S. Ypres. It has a church and an establishment called Hospice Royal in which the daughters of soldiers who have fallen, or been wounded or maimed, in the service of their country are educated and maintained till 18 years of age. Messina has manufactures of common and table linen, brewsters, tanneries, a dye-work and a trade in corn and butter. Pop. 1485.

MESSINGHAM, par Eng Essex 2549 ac. Pop 791

MISSINGHAM par Eng Lancs 6180 ac. P 1876

MISSIS [anc. Mopossetia] a large vil. Asiatic Turkey pash. and 21 m. S.E. Adana, r. bank Rhyoon, lat. 36° 58' N, lon. 35° 38' E., composed of mud huts, erected on hillocks of sand and rubbish, inhabited by a gang of Turcoman freebooters, who are tributary to the pasha of Adana.

MESTANZA, a vil. Spain, New Castile, prov and 22 m. S.W. Ciudad-Real. It has a townhouse and prison, two primary schools, a parish church, and, in the vicinity the cemetery and the remains of a castle; and manufactures of lace. Pop. (agricultural), 2160

MESTCHOWSK, a tn Russia, gov and 41 m. W.S.W. Kaluga, cap. dist. on the Turgai. It has four churches, an important yearly market, which lasts a week, and a trade in hemp, hemp-oil, tallow, corn, and cattle. Pop. (1850) 4611

MESTRE, a tn and par. kind of Italy, gov and 5 m. N.W. Venice cap. dist., near the Murano. It is surrounded by fine villas which are continued, without interruption, along the road to Padua, and almost connect Mantua with that city to which there is a railway. It has a court of justice, several public offices, four churches, an hospital, an old castle, and an active transit and general trade. Pop. 5900 dist. 17 900

MESURADO, a cape, W coast Africa, Liberia at the mouth of a small river of same name. lat. 6° 19' N. lon. 10° 40' W. (s.) on which is situated the town of Monrovia.

MESURATA, or MESURATA, a tn., N Africa, state and 123 m. E.S.E. Tripoli, near the Mediterranean noted for its manufacture of carpets. Cape Mesurata, hard by the town, is at lat. 23° 25' N. lon. 12° 10' E. (s.)

META a large river, New Granada, which has its sources in the E. Andes, about lat. 4° N., 88 m. S. Santa Fé de Bogotá. It flows N.E. to lat. 6° N., where it turns nearly due E. forming, for about 156 m., the boundary line between New Granada and Venezuela, and ultimately falls into the Orinoco, at lat. 6° 12' N. total course, about 500 m. Its banks are chiefly inhabited by Indians. The Meta, and its numerous branches, are navigable for the greatest part of their course nearly to the base of the Andes. Almost all its tributaries flow from the same range of mountains in which its own sources lie: the principal are the Casanare, Araporé, Crato, Casanare, and Upiá. The affluents from the E. and S.E. are insignificant.

METAPA, or METAPUA a tn., Central America, state and 65 m. S.E.E. Guatemala, near the lake of same name with iron-mines in its vicinity. Pop. about 8000

METAURO (anc. Metaurus), a river Italy The Marches, which flows E.N.E. past St. Angelo in Vado, and falls into the Adriatic S.E.E. Fano; total course, about 60 m. The Romans gained, near its banks, a victory over the Carthaginians, under Hasdrubal

METAVOICH, a tn., Herzegovina, on a steep hill overlooking a fertile but superficially-enriched plain, near l. bank Neretva, 24 m. S.W. Mostar. It is poorly built and the streets, from their steepness, are in several places cut into stairs. It is well situated for trade which, however is almost confined to salt, sold to the Turks. Pop. about 500

METELA, a tn., Prussia, prov. Westphalia, gov. and 24 m. N.W. Münster on the Yvette with a church, manufactures of woolen and linen cloth, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1480

METELLER, par. Eng. Suffolk, 2181 ac. Pop. 351

METTERINGHAM, par. Eng. Lancashire 4590 ac. Pop. 1222

METHILL, a small seaport in Scotland on Fife, 10 m. S. Cupar on the Firth of Forth with a good harbour having 16 ft. water at spring-tides. Weaving and flax-dressing are the chief sources of employment. Pop. 1613.

METHLEY par. Eng. York (W. Riding) 3240 ac. Pop. 1926

METHLICK par. Scot. Aberdeen 14,400 ac. P. 1907

METHVEN a vil. and par. Scotland co. and 6 m. W.K.W. Perth with a parish, a Free, and a U. Presbyterian church, a school, savings-bank, friendly society and an agricultural association. Inhabitants chiefly engaged in hand-loom weaving. Area of par. 10 700 ac. Pop. 2454

METHWOLD par. Eng. Norfolk 15 199 ac. P. 1859.

METHYE, two lakes, British N. America—1 A little E. the Rocky Mountains in the country of the Cree Indians; lat. 51° 45' N., lon. 118° 40' W.—2 A smaller 800 m. to the N.E. of the former, has a portage at its N. side, and a fort of same name at its S. extremity.

METILAWITZ, a vil. Austria, Moravia, cercle Furstz It has a church. Pop. 1156.

METILLI, a tn. Algerian Sahara, Wady Makh, 38 m. S.W. Ghardaia. It is situated on a hill, and surrounded by a battlemented wall, entered by three gates, and nearly covered by extensive gardens. It has a mosque, and a market, and is a place of considerable commerce.

METROUCL, a tn. European Turkey, lat. Crete, 22 m. S. Candia, on the site of the ancient Gortyna, of which many vestiges remain.

METSKA (Ratt), a vil. Hungary, co. Borsany with a trade in corn, cattle, wine, and timber. Pop. 1281

METSET a tn. and com. Belgium, prov. and 12 m. S.W. Namur, with a primary school, and, near it, three chemists' establishments chiefly employed in agriculture and iron-casting. Pop. 2216.

METTINGEN a vil. Prussia, prov. Westphalia, gov. Münster cercle Tecklenburg with a church, and four annual fairs. Pop. 1680

METTINGHAM, par. Eng. Suffolk 1366 ac. P. 882

METTMANN, a tn. Prussia, gov. and 8 m. E. Düsseldorf on the Rhine with three churches, and manufactures of iron and steel, linen cotton, and silk. Pop. 2585

METTOR, par. Eng. Norfolk, 680 ac. Pop. 77

METZ (pronounced Metz Latin, Divodurum Mediomatricum) a tn. France, cap. dep. Moselle, on both sides of the river Moselle, near the junction of the Sûre, 75 m. N.W. Strasbourg. It is regarded as the strongest fortress in France, that of Strasbourg, perhaps, excepted and forms the centre of defence on the German frontier between the Meuse and the Rhine. The works are of great extent, and were constructed after the plans of Vauban and Bédouin. It is walled has six gates, and all the resources of engineering skill have been expended on its fortifications. The principal of these are the forts of Belle Croix, and the Double Couronne, the former covering the whole E. and the latter defending the N. side of the town. In addition to these, there is a redoubt called Petit, which, by opening the sluices on the Sûre, can be converted into an island, and surrounded by a lake about 3 m. in extent. The part of the town on l. bank Moselle is flat, that on the r. bank rises up from the river in the form of an amphitheatre. Most of the streets are narrow and winding, and several of those on the r. bank so steep as to be inaccessible by carriages. The houses are generally built of brown stone, and of three or four stories but many of them stand in damp, narrow lanes, so choked up that the air cannot circulate. The finest parts of the town are along the quays, the opposite sides of which communicate by numerous handsome bridges, and in the neighbourhood of the Reynauds, which is finely placed, commands a view of great extent and beauty and is said to be one of the finest promenades of the kind in Europe. The buildings most deserving of notice are the cathedral, a Gothic structure, in the form of a magnificent Latin cross, surmounted by a spire of open work 597 ft. high, and with a vaulted roof which rises 109 ft. above the pavement the church of Mère Dame de la Ronde with a church built in 1130 the arsenal, one of the largest in France, with a cannon-foundry, and an armoury containing about 80 000 pieces of arms a military hospital, capable of receiving 1500 patients a royal college, occupying the buildings of the old abbey of St. Vincent, the palais-de-justice, containing in addition to the courts, a public library of 30 000 volumes; the prefecture, townhouse, mint, &c. The manufactures consist of coarse woollen cloths, flannels, and other woollen stuffs; honary hats parchment, unbleached muslin stained paper, glue, leather &c. There are also numerous cotton-mills, breweries, malteries, and tile-works. The trade is in wine, brandy, beer, confectory, drugs, furniture, leather iron, &c. Metz is the see of a bishop the seat of a court for departments Moselle and Ardennes, and of courts of first resort and commerce, and possesses a commercial chamber and exchange a university, academy, a royal school of artillery and engineering a royal college, a diocesan seminary, and secondary ecclesiastical school; an agricultural and industrial school, a society of literature, science, and art; free schools of design, painting, and music; lectures on midwifery, botany, &c.

Metz, under the Romans, rose to considerable importance, being traversed by an grand military road. Under the descendants of Clovis, it became the capital of the kingdom of Austrasia, and on the decline of the house of Charlemagne, passed to the Emperor of Germany who, in order to make it a barrier against France, strongly fortified it, and allowed it to possess an almost republican freedom. In 1692, it claimed the protectorate of France, and ceased to be free. The Emperor Charles V. made a great effort to recover it the same year but was ultimately obliged to abandon the siege. The revocation of the Edict of Nantes, by depriving it of many of its best and most industrious citizens, inflicted a blow from the effects of which it has never recovered. Pop. (1689), 43,484.

METZENSHIFEN (OBER AND UNTER) two contiguous parishes in Hungary co. Abaujvar, 15 m. W. Kaschau. They contain each a church, and a normal school, and are inhabited by Germans, who are very industrious, and chiefly employed in working in iron. Pop. (Ober), 1263, (Unter), 2431

METZINGEN or Metzenen, a tn. Württemberg on the Rhine, 17 m. S.S.E. Stuttgart with a church, a school of arts manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, tanneries, dye-works, and mills, and some general trade. Pop. 4387.

METZVOY, a tn. European Turkey. See Mesurovo.
MEU a river, France, which rises on the S. slope of Mount Meuse, about 112 m. E.N.E. of Loudun, dep. Côte-d'Or, on the left bank of the Yonne, flows E.S.E. past Montfort, and joins the bank of the Yonne about 5 m. above Fontenay, after a course of about 50 m., of which 8 m. are navigable.

MEUDON (Latin, Meudo) a tn. to France, dep. Seine-et-Oise, 6 m. E.N.E. Versailles on the railway to Paris. It has an extensive chateau, surrounded by an extensive park, called the Forest de Meudon, a favourite holiday resort of the President. It has a considerable manufacture of white-wine, several glass-works and bookbinds, and numerous bookbinds. In 1842 a fearful railway accident took place here as a Bin day return train to Paris. Owing to the breaking of the axle of a locomotive the carriages were driven forward on the engine, where they were almost immediately enveloped in flames and more than 100 persons burnt alive. Pop. 1705.

MEULBEKE, a tn. and com. Belgium, prov. W. Flanders, 10 m. N. Courtray, with several breweries, a vineyard, and a good deal of weaving. Pop. 3856.

MEUDON-LOIRE (Latin, Meudon) a tn. to France, dep. Loiret, r. bank Loire, 11 m. S.W. Orleans. It is well built, has a fine chateau, manufactures of felt hats, numerous tanneries paper and extensive flour mills, and a considerable trade in flour and leather. Pop. 8648.

MEURIM a tn. Brazil, prov. and 75 m. S. Maranhão, 1. bank river of its name with a church. Inhabitants employed in raising sugar-cane and cotton, and in rearing cattle.

MEURIM, a river Brazil which rises in the S. of prov. Maranhão, flows E.N.E. then N.W., between the rivers do Negro and do Alagoas, receives numerous affluents, of which the principal are the Graxatã and Pindaré, and falls into the Bay of São Marcos, on the W. side of the island of Maranhão with so strong a current that its mouth is very difficult of access. total course, about 350 m.

MEURS, or Mörs, a tn. Rhineland, prov. and 18 m. N.W. Düsseldorf, on the Kesselbach, with two churches, a gymnasium, normal school, and deaf and dumb institution, silk, cotton, and woollen manufactures, a cotton-mill, bookbinds and several breweries. Pop. 3399.

MEURSAULT (Latin, Meusa Salina) a tn. France, dep. Côte-d'Or, 37 m. S.S.W. Dijon, in a district famous for both wine and wax, in which it has some trade. Pop. 3301.

MEURTRE, an E. dep. France bounded N. by dep. Moselle, W. Meuse, S. Vosges, and E. Bas-Rhin lat. 48° 25' to 49° N., lon. 6° 44' to 7° 24' E. length, E. to W. 75 m. breadth, N. to S. 45 m., area, 2323 sq. m. The surface is finely diversified by hill and dale, and on the E. frontier, the W. slopes of the Vosges rise to about 1800 ft. above the lower grounds. There are extensive plains, but numerous valleys intersect it in all directions, and form the basins of considerable streams. These basins are principally four—those of the Meurthe, Moselle, Saône, and Sarre, there are also several lakes, climate variable. Nearly a half of the whole surface is arable, and less than 1/10 waste. Wood occupies nearly one-fifth, vineyards rather more than one-fortieth, and meadows not quite one-eighth. The soil varies much in quality. The most fertile is in the valley of the Moselle, the least fertile is that of the Sarre. The principal cereals are wheat, oats, and barley. The culture of the potato is general and that of rape, though of comparatively recent introduction, has proved very successful. A great quantity of the best land is devoted to the vine, and, in favourable years, yields large returns, but none of the vines bear a high name. Fruits of various kinds, and of good quality, are extensively grown. The domestic animals are of very inferior breeds. The most important, as a principal article both of food and export, is swine. In several of the extensive forests, both deer and wild boars abound. Other game, particularly hares, is becoming scarce. A little iron is worked and there is a single mine of rock-salt. The strata belong to the upper series of the secondary formation, and exhibit a large development of the Jura limestone, which is extensively worked, and yields, in particular localities, good marble. From stratum walls, copious supplies of brims are obtained.

and, on the most important of these, the salt-works of Digne have been established. Manufacturing industry, long in a very depressed state, has, in recent years, made considerable progress. Among other manufactures, may be mentioned common woollens, cottons, and hemp goods unbleached, glass, paper, plain and stained earthenware, basket-work, &c. The trade consists, in addition to the above articles of manufacture of corn, wine, and rape-seed oil. The department, in respect of its inhabitants, consists of two great divisions—the German race and German language prevailing in the one, and the French race and language in the other. For administrative purposes, Meurthe is divided into five arrondissements—Nancy the capital Châtenay-Salins, Lunéville, Barrebourg, and Toul subdivided into 29 cantons, and 714 communes. Pop. (1856) 450,423.

MEURTRE (La) (Latin, Meurthe) a river, France, which rises on the W. side of the Vosges, in Mount Ban Homs, dep. Vosges, and, proceeding N.W. past St. Die, enters dep. Meurthe, to which it gives its name. passes Nancy, where it becomes navigable, and joins r. bank Moselle, about 7 m. below total course, about 100 m. Its principal affluents are the Vologne, Mortagne, and Sarre.

MEUSE, an E. dep. France bounded N. by dep. Ardennes, and a small corner of Belgium Luxembourg, W. dep. Ardennes and Meuse, S. dep. Haute-Marne and Vosges, and E. dep. Meurthe and Moselle lat. 48° 35' to 49° 58' N. lon. 4° 54' to 5° 50' E. length, N. to S. 68 m., breadth E. to W. 40 m. area, 2368 sq. m. The surface is very much diversified and broken, being intersected by numerous ramifications of the Vosges and Flandries culminating points, about 1800 ft. high. They consist of two principal chains, which form the watershed between the basins of the Meuse and the Moselle. The far greater part of the department belongs to the basin of the Meuse, which enters it at its S.E. corner and traverses it diagonally N.W. A considerable portion of the W. and S.W. belongs to the basin of the Seine, being drained partly by the Orne and Sarre, tributaries of the Marne and partly by the Aisne directly which has its source within the department, and its tributary the Aisne. The strata belong chiefly to the upper part of the secondary formation. The only mineral of importance is iron, which is extensively worked and maintains a number of blast-furnaces and other iron-works. Rather more than one-half of the whole surface is arable, considerably more than one-fifth wood, and not one-fifth waste. meadows occupy nearly one-twelfth. The soil of the plains is, in general, thin and far from fertile that of the valleys, particularly those of the Meuse and Orne, deep and rich. Much of it, in these valleys, is occupied by verdant meadows. The corn produced leaves a surplus after meeting home consumption, but the modes of culture are very imperfect. The principal crops, besides corn, are hemp, flax, and cleishous seeds. In some districts, the gooseberry is carefully and extensively cultivated, and considerable tracts are covered with vines, which yield wine of good name. The domestic animals are of inferior breeds, but the rich meadows fatten a great number of oxen, of which there is a considerable export. The dairy produce, also, is large, and much cream-cheese, resembling Gruyère, is made. Swine and goats are extensively reared. This department contains numerous manufactures of cotton goods cotton twist, and hosiery iron-works, dye-works, glass-works, oil and paper mills, tanneries breweries, distilleries. The trade in addition to the articles thus produced, is in corn, clover and lucerne-seed cheese butter, pork, cattle, and lumber both for export and ship-building. A considerable number of the inhabitants emigrate annually for employment, many of them carrying with them various articles in wood and wicker work. The number of gipsies is very considerable. For administrative purposes Meuse is divided into four arrondissements—Bar-le-Duc, the capital Commercy Montmédy, and Verdun subdivided into 28 cantons, and 588 communes. Pop. (1856) 328,667.

MEUSE (Latin, Meos, Flemish Meos, Dutch Meas, Walloon, Meuse), a river Europe, which rises in France, in S. of dep. Haute-Marne and, proceeding N., crosses the N.W. corner of dep. Vosges, and traverses dep. Meuse and Ardennes on reaching Sedan, it enters Belgium, and at Namur where it receives, on the left, its largest tributary, the Sambre, almost doubling its volume, changes its course to N.E., and passes

Lidge, where it is augmented by the Ourthe, separates Lüttich from Belgium. Lüttich, passing Maestricht and Mookerand, at the latter of which it receives the Roer. In the N part of Dutch Limburg, its course is changed to N.W., and, subsequently, it becomes W. The whole of its after course is through the Dutch territory. Passing Mookerand, it proceeds N through Lüttich, where it partly separates Lüttich from Dutch Brabant, forming the boundary between Brabant and Gelderland, and, at Bommel, draws so close to the Rhine as to be brought into communication with it, but, by a sudden bend S.E., again resumes its W course, receives the Ley on its L bank near Fort Crevecoeur, and finally turning N.W. joins the bank West, one of the arms of the Rhine, and gives its name to the mighty accumulated flood of those streams, which, proceeding W through Holland Proper, is divided, near Dordrecht, into two great rivers, the one of which bends round to the N., and reaches Rotterdam, the other branch continues W., and shortly after the two branches again unite, and discharge themselves, amid shoals and quicksands, into the North Sea. The direct length of the Meuse is 230 m. and its length including windings, 580 m. It is navigable for about 450 m. Of these about 150 m. are in France, 150 m. in Belgium, and 150 m. in Holland. In the upper part of its course, its valley is wild and romantic, and, because, at times, almost narrowed to a point, while the stream pours along through a deep and precipitous gorge. In the lower part of its course, it waters vast alluvial plains, which, in a great measure, gained from it by Dutch industry and perseverance. It is ever threatening to inundate and ruin as its own domain. The delta of the Meuse exceeds that of any other European river.

MEUSELBACH, a tn. Schwarzburg Rudolstadt, bail and 6 m. S. Kitzingen, no a stream of same name; with a church and two paper-mills. Pop. 1506.

MEUSELWITZ, a vil. Saxo-Altenburg, 6 m. N. Altenburg. It has a castle, with a library, a church, and a mill. Pop. 1527.

MEUX, a vil. and cons. Belgium prov. and 6 m. N.W. Namur on the Meuse; with manufactures of linen and hempen goods and a trade in agricultural produce. P. 1338.

MEVAGH per Irel. Donagel 21 021 ac. Pop. 4961.

MEVAGISSEY par Eng. Cornwall, 1844 ac. P. 2029.

MEW ISLAND one of the Copeland islands (about ac).

MEWAN (Sr.) par Eng. Cornwall, 2632 ac. Pop. 1289.

MEWEL, or GAWW a tn. W. Prussia, gov. and 9 m. N.W. Marienwerder, at the junction of the Persse with the Vistula; with two churches, and barracks. Pop. 2107.

MEXBOROUGH par Eng. York (W. Riding) 2398 ac. Pop. 1652.

MEXICO (THE REPUBLIC OR CONFEDERATION OF) [French, Mexique; Italian, Mexico; formerly New Spain] a state of great extent, founded by Spain, on the N. side of the isthmus joining N. and S. America. It formerly extended through 26° of lat. (18° 58' to 42° N.) and through 87° of lon. (from Cape Cod, to Texas) has 60° 45' W. to Cape Mendocino, in Upper California, long. 124° 27' W.; but recent events have reduced its length by 33° its N. limit being now in the parallel of 54° N. Thus curtailed at least half of its original dimensions it still has an area of about 824,140 sq. m. Where not confined by the sea, its borders in the S. on Guatemala, on the N.E. and N. it is separated from the U. States by the Rio Grande del Norte and the 34th parallel. The name Mexico or rather Mejico derived from Mexitli, the Aztec god of war was given originally to the capital city, now commonly named Tenochtitlan. As at present (1855) constituted, Mexico consists of the following states or departments and territories:—

THE STATES OR DEPARTMENTS AND TERRITORIES OF MEXICO their AREA, POPULATION and CAPITALS, &c.
(From Lerdo de Tejada's Guerra Sincrona de la Republica Mexicana, en 1850. Mexico, 1850.)

| States or Departments, and Territories, as | Area in Spanish sq. leagues. | Area in English sq. m. | Population. | Capital. | Population. |
|--|------------------------------|------------------------|-------------|-------------------|-------------|
| Chihuahua | 13,495 | 100,350 | 147,600 | Chihuahua | 14,000 |
| Chilepa | 3,648 | 28,478 | 144,070 | San Cristobal | 5,640 |
| Colima | 7,985 | 62,270 | 75,340 | Saltillo | 19,750 |
| Durango | 6,744 | 49,468 | 142,510 | Durango | 21,000 |
| Guanajuato | 1,745 | 12,616 | 118,303 | Guanajuato | 48,840 |
| Guerrero | 4,453 | 35,008 | 97,000 | Taxco | 6,550 |
| Hidalgo | 6,746 | 49,468 | 74,461 | Guadalupe | 40,000 |
| Mexico | 2,717 | 21,228 | 675,697 | Mexico | 12,000 |
| Micahocua | 3,180 | 25,385 | 49,679 | Micahocua | 25,000 |
| Nuevo Leon | 1,831 | 14,644 | 101,340 | Monterrey | 15,810 |
| Oaxaca | 4,498 | 35,823 | 538,101 | Oaxaca | 24,000 |
| Puebla | 1,614 | 12,600 | 980,000 | Puebla | 71,681 |
| Queretaro | 1,614 | 12,600 | 980,000 | Queretaro | 25,700 |
| San Luis Potosi | 4,101 | 32,400 | 268,170 | San Luis | 40,000 |
| Sonora | 17,173 | 135,448 | 128,344 | Uruapan | 7,000 |
| Tamaulipas | 4,498 | 35,823 | 180,000 | Colima | 10,000 |
| Tehuacan | 2,717 | 21,228 | 67,500 | San Juan Bautista | 4,000 |
| Tlaxcala | 6,819 | 53,356 | 100,000 | Chalchicomula | 5,000 |
| Veracruz | 5,556 | 43,648 | 266,756 | Veracruz | 32,500 |
| Yucatan | 1,831 | 14,644 | 62,967 | Merida | 40,000 |
| Zacatecas | 4,453 | 35,008 | 266,000 | Zacatecas | 25,000 |
| General District (Mexico) | 124 | 99 | 300,000 | Mexico | 170,000 |
| Texas (Territory of) | 579 | 4,556 | 60,171 | Texas | 5,400 |
| Calaca (Territory of) | 430 | 3,419 | 61,843 | Calaca | 31,774 |
| Lower California (Territory of) | 8,497 | 66,388 | 18,000 | La Paz | 400 |
| | 118,476 | 944,140 | 7,061,630 | | 200,000 |

The Spanish square judicial league is equal to 7.19 English sq. m.

Texas declared herself independent, for the second time, in 1846, but has again joined the Mexican Confederation.

Mexico.—Mexico is a very remarkable region. It is an enormous ridge, raised by volcanic force, between two oceans, and ramifying into several chains as the land grows wider. This ridge, which forms a continuation of the Andes of S. America, is, in the isthmus of Panama, where its dimensions are least a mass of granite, varying from 150 to 900 ft. in absolute elevation. It leans W. to the shores of the Pacific Ocean, sending off, in Guatemala, a branch N.E. through the peninsula of Yucatan. On entering Mexico, the ridge strikes N.W. and acquires a greater breadth, so that the State of Oaxaca may be said to occupy the summit of a single ridge, 150 m. wide, falling rapidly on one side to the shores of the Pacific Ocean and descending, by a succession of terraces on the other side, to Tehuacan and Vera Cruz, to thus succeed the great Mexican table-land, beginning with the elevated plains of Puebla, Mexico, Queretaro, and Michoacan, which have an absolute height of 6000 to 8000 ft., a chain of volcanic cones and snowy peaks rising, at wide intervals, far above them. Between the 18th and 21st parallels, the Mexican chain runs N. and S. Beyond the latter limit it turns N.W. and, under the name of Sierra Madre or Tape-Suama, runs through the States of Queretaro and Guanajuato, where unusually rich silver-mines are contained in its bosom. N. of Guanajuato, it divides into three branches, of which the middle one or central chain continues running to the N.W. as far as the 30th parallel, beyond which it bends N. till, under the name of Sierra Verde, it joins the Rocky Mountains, in lat. 40° N. The E. branch runs through the State of San Luis Potosi, gradually sinking till, in lat. 26° it disappears on the border of the plain watered by the Rio Grande del Norte. The W. branch spreads over Guadalupe, declines N. of the mouth of Bolson, and, rising again in the States of Sonora and Sonora, forms, in the latter the mountains of Platero Alta, which are celebrated for their gold-mines. The Mexican chain of mountains may be justly considered as a continuation of the Andes, yet they differ widely from the latter in their general structure. The Cordilleras of S. America are frequently intersected by immense lacustrine or prelacustrine valleys, called quebradas, in some cases nearly a mile deep. The elevated table-lands enclosed by them, such as the plains of Santa Fé de Bogotá, those of Cuzamarca and Quito, in Peru, and that round the lake of Titicaca, are all of comparatively small extent, and generally accessible only on foot, with mules, or on the backs of Indians. In Mexico, on the other hand, if we start from Tehuantepec, on the shore of the Pacific Ocean, lat. 16° 30' N., we soon reach the plain of Oajaca, at a height of 5600 ft., and thence a wheel-trail can roll without difficulty to Santa Fé, lat. 16° 12' N., a distance of 1400 m. Though some parts of this route might fall below the level of 2000 ft. and others nearly reach an elevation of 6000 ft., yet the slopes are so gradual as to offer no serious impediment to the construction of an easy road, but that facility pertains wholly to the internal communications, the descent from the Mexican table-lands to the sea on both sides, is everywhere rugged and abrupt, and presents such difficulties in the way of carrying goods, as will probably always cut off the internal and most productive provinces of Mexico from a fair participation in the commerce of the globe. In going from the city of Mexico (7400 ft.) to Asapulco, on the S. sea, the road attains a height of 8600 ft. before the rapid descent commences, the great roads between the capital and Vera Cruz cross the mountains at a height of 10,500 ft.

Summits.—The loftiest of the snowy summits and volcanic cones, scattered along the Mexican highland lie all within the narrow zone compressed between lat. 18° 29' and 19° 12' N. They are all of volcanic origin, and in several of them the subterranean fires still continue raging. Ascending W. from the shore of the Mexican Gulf, a little S. of Vera Cruz, we first meet, 13 m. from the sea, in lat. 18° 24' N., the still active volcano of Tuxtla (5118 ft.), the highest point of the Sierra de San Martín. Further N. (lat. 19° 37'), the peak of Orizaba or Citlatépetl [Star-mountain] 17,372 ft. Its flanks covered with rich woods anterior to the close of the 16th century it became extinct. A few miles further N. (lat. 18° 28') is the Cofre de Perote or Nancampatepetl [rectangular or cube mountain] (13,416 ft.) S.W. of these on the confines of Puebla, lat. 18° 50' N., is the still active volcano of Popocatepetl [Smoking mountain] 17,084 ft., while 35 m. further N., summit Iztaccihuatl [The white lady] 15,703 ft. high. The latter appears to have been extinguished at an early period, and, since the 17th century, Popocatepetl has had no violent eruption, though clouds of smoke and ashes are occasionally thrown out from its enormous crater. About 50 m. W. of the White Lady the I. del Fraile, the highest point of the Nevado de Toluca—another extinct volcano—attains the height of 15,260 ft. About 120 m. W. of this mountain, summit Jorullo (black sea), which rose, on the night of September 28, 1759, from the level plain to the height of 4148 ft. Of the summits here named, only three usually Popocatepetl, Citlatépetl and the Iztaccihuatl rise above the limit of perpetual snow which may be assumed to run between lat. 19° and 30° N., at an elevation of 15,000 ft., though varying much with local circumstances. The Nevado de Toluca reaches that limit, but can hardly be said to rise above it.

Geology and Mines.—In Oajaca, granite everywhere breaks through the superincumbent rocks, and forms the highest summits of the mountains. Granite, also, slate, and syenite extend down from the central ridges to the sea on both sides. In all these rocks are found sacrilegious veins. On the borders of Guatemala, the prevalent rocks are porphyry, of many varieties, clay-slate, and limestone, all unbroken by granite. The first of these contains veins of silver, lead, and copper. In Puebla, all the primitive rocks are covered by enormous masses of calcareous tuff. Further N. granite seems to form every-where the foundation of the rocky system, while the table-land is a superincumbent of porphyries, which contain (when they do not incline to trachyte) these rich deposits of the precious metals for which Mexico has long been so famous. Old sand, stone, Kiamasine, clay slate, syenite, serpentine, amygdaloid, dolerite, and basaltic lavas accompany these predominating rocks. The coal formations are wanting, but deposits of rock salt may possibly be found in Oajaca, where salt-works issue from gypsiferous strata, near San Juan de los Rios. Some of the Mexican mines, once celebrated, as those of La Puebla, are now quite exhausted; others, as Bolson, hardly repay the cost of working them. The chief mining districts of the present day are, in the order of their productiveness, as follows.—Guanajuato, San Luis Potosí, Zacatecas (the vea grande), Durango, Chihuahua, Sonora (the vea grande), Tasco (Mexico), Oajaca, Real del Monte (Mexico), and Huasteca (Jalisco). According to authentic records, the produce of the Mexican mines (gold and silver) collected from 1890 to 1893 exceeded $270,000,000. In 1804 and 1805, the annual produce of the mines exceeded 25,000,000, but the distress of the mother country began, at this period, to press on the colony and the activity of the mines abated. Then came the civil wars of the revolution, the proprietors of the mines, mostly old Spaniards, were obliged to quit the country, the mines, abandoned soon went to ruin—some falling in others filling with water; while the capital which might have restored them was spent in civil war. On the restoration of order, in 1826, the Mexican government held out inducements to foreign capitalists to re-open the mines, and several English companies were accordingly formed for that purpose. Though some of these soon relinquished their undertakings, the produce of the mines is now considerable, as will be seen in the following Table—

ANALYSIS OF GOLD AND SILVER MINES IN MEXICO, 1893-1894.

| Year. | Gold. | Silver. |
|--------|---------|-----------|
| 1893 - | $ | $ |
| 1894 | 300,000 | 3,708,501 |
| 1895 | 189,977 | 5,481,141 |
| 1896 | 111,408 | 7,716,141 |
| 1897 | 163,314 | 5,991,825 |
| 1898 | 100,761 | 5,001,689 |

For the eighteen months ending June, 1849 the total produce of the gold and silver mines was estimated at $2,560,000. About the year 1850, a new impetus was given to mining operations, by the discovery, in the state of Sonora, near Pima, of quicksilver mines so rich as to be named New Almaden, after the famous quicksilver mines of Almaden in Spain. But since the period referred to, the emigration of miners to California has seriously interfered with mining industry.

Coast and Harbours.—The opposite shores of Mexico differ widely in physical conformation. On the W. the great current of the Atlantic Ocean sweeps round the peninsula of Yucatan and through the Gulf of Mexico, causing a continual increase of sandbanks, extension of the beach, and barring of river mouths. On the whole Mexican coast of the Gulf of Mexico, from Cape Catoche in Yucatan to Texas, there is no bay of any importance, no good harbour, any of access, nor any sheltered anchorage. This want might, perhaps, in a few cases, be supplied by art. Between Yucatan and Tabasco lies the Laguna de Terminos 45 m. long and 30 m. wide, and connected with the sea by two channels, the deepest of which has but 2 fathoms. Could this channel be deepened, the lagoon might become a very important harbour. Further W., on the coast of Tabasco, the Laguna de Santa Ana, though deep within, is quite inaccessible by shipping, owing to the shoal and narrow passage leading to it. Similar remarks apply to the lagoons of Madro, Tamulana and Tampico, beyond the last-named place N. extends a long succession of sandbanks, fringing the shore, and exhibiting, in its earlier stages, the process of forming lagoons. Here, on the coast of Tamaulipas, we find the Laguna de Marales, de Madre, de Sanandrea and a few more, all difficult of approach, and rapidly filling up with sand. When we turn from the Gulf of Mexico to the S. Sea, the scene changes completely. On the W. coasts of Mexico, the highlands approach the sea-shore, the plains between them are narrow, and rarely very low, and from Ampulco to Guaymas extends a series of fine harbours capable of sheltering the largest vessels. Many of these have never perhaps, been entered by a foreign ship, and even the harbour of Acapulco, in lat. 15° 30' N., the most commodious and capacious probably of all known, is now but little frequented. N. of this, the small ports of Jiquilpan, Poxtlan, San Telmo, Mazamitla, and some others, follow in succession, until, in lat. 21° 33' N., we arrive at the harbour of San Blas, at the mouth of the Rio Grande de Santiago. This noble harbour, resembling that of Acapulco in its natural advantages, is, like the latter, almost quite deserted. More important than these, at present, is the harbour of Mazatlan, lat. 23° 15' N., in which now centres the trade with China and the E. Indies. This port is difficult of access, and inferior in most respects to the harbour of Guaymas, lat. 27° 40' N. The E. shore of the Californian peninsula offers many bays and small havens. Its W. side, towards the ocean, is less indented, yet it does not want for good harbours; the bay of San Cristóbal lies in lat. 27° 53' N., then follow the bays of San Francisco, Las Virgenes, and Todos Santos.

Rivers and Lakes.—Mexico is, in general, but sparingly watered, and labour under the almost total want of navigable rivers reaching the interior. Within the tropic, the land is narrow, and the streams, descending from the elevated interior to the sea on both sides, assume the character of rapid torrents, dry at one season, and overwhelming at another. Further N. where the breadth of the continent admits of the formation of great rivers, the dryness of the climate forbids it. The longest, and probably the greatest, in all respects, of the Mexican rivers, is the Rio-Grande-del-Norte, called also Rio-Bravo-del-Norte (see CANADA), which now marks the E. boundary of Mexico, towards Texas and the U. States formerly. It was the ancient river from the E. limit of the Mexican territories.

The Rio de Tampoco is formed by the junction of the Panuco, which rises near San Luis Potosí with the Tula or Moctezuma, the sources of which are in the State of Mexico. The united stream, flowing N. E. to the gulf, close by Tampoco de Tamsilpoco, takes the name of this city. Its total course, about 200 m. On the bar at the mouth of the Tampoco, there are but 18 ft. of water, but within, good anchorage may be found with from 5 to 10 fathoms, and simple vessels may ascend the Panuco 40 m. The San Juan rises on the mountainous mountains of Oaxaca, flows S. and E., forms the great lagoons of Toluquía and Embucadero, and at length reaches the sea through the Laguna del Madero. It is navigable, for ships of moderate burden, 24 m. above its mouth. The Rio de Guasacualco issues from the mountains of Turrís, lat. 17° N. flows W. between the States of Oaxaca, Tabasco, and Vera Cruz, then winding round to the N. and E., falls into the gulf, in lat. 18° 5' 37" N. This river has attracted much attention, because it has been supposed that the communication between the two seas (the Mexican Gulf and the Pacific Ocean), might be conveniently effected by joining the Guasacualco and the Chiriquí or Chimalapa, which latter rises about 14 m. from the sources of the former, and falls into the Bay of Tehuantepec. The Rio de Tabasco, and the Usumacinta, are both considerable rivers, rising in Guatemala the former enters the gulf at the Port of Tabasco, the latter falls into the Laguna de Terminos. The rivers running into the Pacific Ocean are towards the S. all rapid, and important only as they water considerable more or less populous. The latter only are Guasacualco, already mentioned, the Tehuantepec, Rio Verde, and Rio de Tlascala or Papagallo, are considerable streams, which have, at present, no commercial value. The Rio Balsas or Zacatala descends from the State of Mexico and, after collecting several large streams, reaches the ocean with a broad and deep channel, navigable for boats a good way up, and forms at its mouth the little harbour of Zacatala.

The first great river which we meet with, going N., on this side, is the Rio Toluquía or Rio Grande de Santiago, the second in magnitude of the Mexican rivers, which is formed by the junction of the Lerma, near Salamanca, in Guanajuato. The sources of the Lerma, in San Luis Potosí, are at least 8000 ft. above the sea. After a very winding course of 600 or 700 m. the Toluquía enters the ocean near San Blas (lat. 21° 32') by several mouths. This great river has many rapids, and is, in the rainy season, an impetuous torrent. In the dry season, on the other hand, it is fordable 24 m. from the sea. The briefest mention will suffice for the rivers Old Balsas, Maya, Yagui, and Guaymas, the last two of which (in lat. 27° 37' and 25° 26' respectively) form good harbours at their mouths. The river Chila (which) forms part of the N. boundary of Mexico towards the U. States. At its junction with the Colorado, it is 3 m. wide, and navigable for large vessels.

The lakes and lagoons of Mexico are very numerous, but comparatively unimportant. The largest of them is Lake Chapala, in Jalisco, which covers an area of 1500 sq. m. The states in which they chiefly occur are Chihuahua, San Luis Potosí, Mexico, and Michoacán.

Climate.—A country which extends through 17° of N. latitude, must necessarily embrace a great diversity of climate, but Mexico has not only a great extension in latitude, but a configuration of surface, also which is calculated to exhibit great diversities of climate within a narrow compass. It is known that an absolute elevation of 8000 ft. produces on the climate an effect equal to that resulting from an increase of 10° of latitude. How various, therefore, must be the climate of a country, the extensive and cultivated plains of which are frequently 3000 ft. above that elevation. The principal high plains, in the vicinity of the city of Mexico, are the valleys of Toluca, 8000 ft., of Tehuacán, 7400 ft. Azcapotzalco, 6450 ft., and the valley of Tula, 3900 ft. above sea-level. Thus we find at once, close by the capital, differences of climate arising from elevation, which, at a common level, could have been produced only by an intervening meridional distance of 1200 m. The valley of Toluca produces the sugar-cane, Azcapotzalco yields cotton, Tehuacán is rich in wheat and other European grains. Toluca in the agave, from which is made the popular beverage of the country, the four different climates being thus distinctly and conspicuously marked. Hence it is, that Mexico, being, to a great extent, a table land, three-fifths of its area lying within the tropic, has not a tropical, but a temperate climate. The mean temperature of the Mexican coasts, between the 15th and 20th parallels, is 76° Fahr., while the elevated plains, within the same limits, have 64°.

But general rules are here continually modified by local circumstances, and in a manner not easily explained, palm-trees, gigantic firs, and birds of rich plumage, ascend at once, points, to an unusual height, and the culture of the sugar-cane is successful, in certain situations, at an elevation of 4000 ft. The Mexicans divide their country, in respect of climate, into Tierras Calientes (hot lands), which rarely exceed 900 ft. in elevation. Tierras Templadas (temperate), ranging between 4000 and 5000 ft. and Tierras Frías (cold), above 7000 ft. The coasts of Mexico, particularly those of the gulf, are insufferably hot, humid, and dreadfully unhealthy. On the Pacific coast the climate is hardly less so. Here the rank vegetation reaches down to the sea-side, and, in the water, mangroves and molluscs decompose and spread pestilence. The most dangerous parts of the W. coast, to strangers, and to natives from the interior, are Acapulco, San Blas, and the valleys of Papagallo and Furguero. The plains of the interior, from 3500 to 4500 ft. high, where the evergreen oak predominates in the woods, enjoys a delicious climate, perfectly healthy, and, at the same time, favorable to luxuriant vegetation. Higher up, the air, more rarefied, is also drier, and trees of vigorous growth disappear with unexpected rapidity. Hence a large proportion of the elevated plains of Mexico present a most dreary and unwholesome aspect—dry, barren and desolate. The falling of the woods, and the drainage of lakes, has, in some measure, augmented this evil. North of the tropic, though the land generally sinks, the aridity increases, and, with it, the violent changes of temperature. The rains begin, on the E. coast, about the first week in May, and, advancing with the trade-wind, reach the capital about three weeks later, they cease in October when the dry season begins. The quantity of rain that falls annually in Vera Cruz, is, on an average of nine years (1822–1830) 185 inches, but it is extremely irregular and was, in 1836, only 64 inches. Earthquakes are frequent on the coast of Mexico, particularly in Oaxaca, along the E. coast, and near the capital, but they are generally slight, and do little damage. They are what the natives called Tremores or vibrations, rather than terramotos or earthquakes, properly so called. The most remarkable volcanic phenomena recorded in Mexico in modern times, are the rise of Jorullo, in 1769, and the eruptions of Tuxtla (the highest point of the mountains of San Martín, S. of Vera Cruz), which commenced in March, 1793, and continued for three years. The S.W. shores of Mexico are visited at times by hurricanes of intolerable fury.

Vegetation.—Mexico possesses a variety and abundance of vegetable productions known to hardly any other portion of the earth. The forests near the coasts display the grandest forms of tropical vegetation. There may be seen the gigantic mahogany, the Brazil wood, the Campeche wood, American ebony, yellow and iron wood, intermingled with the elegant giant-ferns and palms without number. Then, as we ascend, we meet with magnificent magnolias, cactuses, plumbagos, and oleanders. Varieties of hyacinths, begonias, hibiscus, horkias, &c. cover wide tracts. At the same height of 8000 ft., the Mexican oaks begin to predominate in the woods, associated with euphorbias and acacias. The oak disappears generally at the height of 10,000 ft., while the pine groves extend between the elevations of 8,000 ft. and 14,500 ft. Within these limits, also, grow the various species of agave, the arbutus, dahlia, and geranium. The cactus kind are widely diffused, groups of them occurring on sandy tracts near the sea-side, while they frequently reach an elevation of 10,000 ft., but their favorite region lies between the limits of 8,000 ft. and 9,500 ft. above the sea. The best cultivated districts of Mexico are those which lie near some of the richest mines in the plains, extending from Zedilla and Salinasco to Bida, Guadalupe, and Villa de Leon. In the wildest and driest spots of the Cordilleras, the opening of mines has never failed to call villages into existence. To this early bias and the influence of the mines, it may be ascribed that there is at present a very considerable population scattered over the mountains of Mexico, with an agriculture varying widely according to height and other circumstances, but always sufficient for their wants. On many parts of the table-land tillage is much checked by scarcity of water, to remedy which, reservoirs and canals of irrigation have been constructed, at great expense. Of the articles of food cultivated by the Mexicans, the most important is maize, the culture of which varies from 130 to 50 fold. To Mexicans of all classes it is the staple article of subsistence and it is also the chief food of the cattle and horses. The districts most distinguished by the culture of this grain, are the S. and E. parts of the state of Mexico, the states of Puebla, Queretaro, and Oaxaca, and the neighbourhood of Aguas Calientes, in Zacatecas. There appears to be but little ground for supposing that the cereal grains were known to the Americans previous to the 16th century. At the present day, wheat and barley alone are cultivated in Mexico and most successfully at an elevation of 7,000 ft. The former yields from 30 to 60 fold or more, whereas 12 fold is thought a good return in England. It is said that the Bajío or that portion of the great table-land which is watered by the Foliola or Rio Grande de Santiago, with some other high plains of Mexico, is capable of supplying wheat enough for the support of five times the present population of the republic. The productions above mentioned belong to the table-land of Mexico, the inhabitants of the Tierras de Caliente, and the sea-coast, look for their chief and ordinary food to the banana or yuca (Musa Persea), called by the Spaniards Plátano, and which is to them what the maize is to the people of the highland. To the same region of Mexico belongs the manioc called also yuca, producing cassava or manioc flour, and tapioca. Another important object of cultivation, which occupies extensive tracts on the table-land of Mexico, is Spanish pepper (capsicum in Aztec Chilli), which is consumed by the inhabitants in enormous quantities. Among the cultivated plants of Mexico, there is none more important or characteristic than the maguey (Agave Americana) from the sap of which is prepared the favourite drink of all classes the pulque of the Spaniards, the ocell of the Aztecs. The filaments of the thick fleshy leaves, serve for the same purposes as hemp, while their outer cuticle is the material formerly used as paper by the Aztecs. The agave gives little trouble, and is easily propagated, it thrives on the poorest soil, so that, near a town or populous district, a plantation of it is always a valuable estate. It seems doubtful whether the vine is to be considered as a native Mexican plant, but at all events, it is now found wild in all the woods. "Wines little inferior to those of Jura (cherry), and Val de Poitou, are now made at Farnas and Tehuacan," but this branch of culture and industry is still only in its infancy. The Spanish Government always protected the monopoly of wine-growers, by prohibiting the culture of the vine in its American possessions an order to extirpate the vineyards in Mexico was issued in 1802. The olive, too, was another useful plant, the culture of which was forbidden by the tyrannical monopoly of Spain, since the revolution, it has received attention. The oil now made in Mexico is equal to the best imported from France and Italy, and already nearly sufficient for the home consumption.

Colored Produce.—Sugar was exported from Mexico in large quantities under the Spanish government; at the present day, the amount of it produced hardly suffices for home consumption. Still a very great extent of Mexican territory is adapted to the growth of the sugar-cane and, from the genial character of the soil, a plantation in Vera Cruz yields twice as much nearly as one in Cuba. The consumption of coffee by the Mexicans themselves is still but small, and the exportation not yet great, but it is rapidly growing. Though it was from Mexico that Europe first learned the use of chocolate (chocolatl, the Aztec name of the cacao-fruit), yet the culture of the cacao-tree has there declined to such a degree, that an importation from Caracas and Guatemala is required at present to satisfy the internal demand. Vanilla (properly Yopavilla, a small pod or husk), which also enters into the composition of chocolate, is another Mexican product. Tobacco, the consumption of which in a country where every one, male and female, smokes, is enormous, from being the object of a Government monopoly since 1838, is high in price and inferior in quality. Cotton was cultivated extensively in Mexico, before the arrival of the Spaniards, and may again be expected to become an important article of culture in a country where the cotton plant is not so annual as in the U. States, but continues productive for several years. The cochinal insect, so valuable for its dye, seems to be peculiar to Mexico. In ancient times this branch of industry was prosecuted with much more zeal than at the present day the heavy imposts laid on it by the Spaniards having disgusted the Indians by whom alone it is constant but easy labour are carried on. Mexico has several worms which produce a kind of silk but soon after the conquest, the true silkworm was introduced by the Spaniards, and large plantations were made of the white or Chinese mulberry. The silk trade had grown to considerable importance in the 18th century, when the Indians, irritated by the exactions to which it exposed them, conspired to extirpate it, and destroyed at once, in a great extent, the mulberry-trees. Since the revolution, pains have been taken, particularly at Oaxaca, to restore this branch of industry but with no conspicuous results as yet.

Zoology.—The wild animals of Mexico are extremely numerous. The bison, or American buffalo (Bos Dromedarius) in Mexico called also Cibolo, comes to midwinter, in immense herds, from the forests of the N. W. It does not appear that any attempt has yet been made to tame or domesticate it. The grizzly bear, the most formidable of his kind, inhabits the mountains in the N. provinces. In solitary districts, near lakes and rivers, live the tapir (called also by the Spaniards Asa or Denda), which is the largest indigenous quadruped after the bison. Among the feline animals are the jaguar the cougar or puma, the ocelot, jaguarundi and tiger-cat. The tagicat and javali are singular species of wild swine, the latter a deadly enemy of the jaguar. The Mexican forests swarm with porcupines, anteaters, gluttons, sloths, weasels, and polecats, in great variety, armadillos, ovises, and monkeys. Among the swimmers we find the manatí or sea-cow (found in the lagoons of the R. coast), the fish of which is thought a delicacy. The W. coast is frequented by whales and seals of the most valuable kinds. The feathered tribes of Mexico are countless one the osander, is said to have the song of the nightingale. In the rivers we find the Mexican crocodile (C. Echinifer) besides some alligators, as the cayman (C. pauperus). We must hasten by the lizards and reptiles also, specially mentioning the rattlesnake and two species of boe. A species of murex, yielding a fine purple dye, is found on both coasts, but chiefly on the W. The pearl fishery, once so profitable on the coast of Old California, seems now inexhaustible of revival.

Domesticated Animals.—The ancient Mexicans never attempted to subject to economical purposes the wild animals around them. They knew nothing of the llama; and from the bison, the wild sheep and goat, they derived little or no advantage. The savage Comanches have always employed large dogs to carry their tents and draw their baggage, while the Mexicans kept only the small dumb dog (Tehuacan), which they fastened for the table. But at the present day, Mexico is abundantly stocked with domesticated animals, introduced by the Spaniards. Horned cattle and horses have indeed grown wild in many parts, and now occupy, in immense herds and droves, the great plains of the interior. The chief cattle farms are in the muer states—Jalisco, Durango, Chihuahua, &c., where herds of 30,000 or 40,000 are not uncommon. The grazer derives all his gains from the flesh, fat, and hides of his cattle. The milk and butter the latter rarely made, and of inferior quality) are here of little value. A great slaughter of cattle (Matamor) takes place on each farm every year, and is followed by a fast. The sheep farms are mostly in the N. parts of Mexico, and though often on a great scale, are in their husbandry very primitive and rude: the wool is coarse, and little care is bestowed on the sheep. The concheros give much less attention, it would seem, to their sheep and cattle, than to their breed of horses; which last, it is well-known, conducted not a little to the conquest of Mexico. Horses are now very numerous in Mexico, and the N. frontiers of that country, as well as the grassy plains of Texas, are frequented by immense droves of them, in a perfectly wild state. The Mexican horse is usually small but well made and hardy, sure-footed and extremely docile. Oxen and mules are the ordinary beasts of burden, while the horse is reserved for the saddle. Mules are also numerous, and are, perhaps, faster than horses: four or even six pairs are sometimes harnessed together in handsome equipages, 100,000 of them are said to be constantly employed by carriers and in the mines.

Manufactures and Foreign Trade.—The chief manufactures are sugar and rum, alcohol, wine, and brandy: earthen and stone ware, glass, paper, and the thread and tissues of cotton wool, and silk. Sugar and rum are made in numerous districts, but more especially in the states of Vera Cruz, Tabasco, Yucatan, Mexico, Queretaro, Michoacan, and Guadalajara: the population of olive-oil employs 49 mills in the capital, in addition to those in Tezcuay, Toluca, Guanajuato, and Puebla, wine and brandy are produced in considerable quantity only in Guanajuato, Coahuila, Lower California, Sonora, and Chihuahua, more especially the last the largest and best port wines are in Mexico, Guanajuato and Guadalajara, four glass works exist in the city, and others in the state of Mexico, and in that of Puebla paper both of coarser quality and also not inferior to the writing paper of other countries, employs a number of mills in the states of Mexico, Puebla, and Jalisco: but owing to the scarcity of linen rags is usually made of cotton or the fibrous part of the alce: the spinning and weaving of cotton, in addition to numerous handlooms throughout the country, employ 62 factories, driven by machinery in the federal district, and the states of Coahuila, Durango, Jalisco, Mexico, Puebla, Queretaro and Vera Cruz the principal seats of the woollen manufacture are in the federal district, the states of Mexico, Queretaro, Zacatecas, and the territory of Tlaxcala, in all of which broad-cloth, muscovee, coarse, linen, &c. are made of a price and quality enabling them to compete with similar articles imported. Silk, spun chiefly by the hand, but partly also by a machine driven by horses employs numerous persons in the states of Puebla and Guadalajara, but more especially in the capital where the quantity annually spun exceeds 40,000 lbs. the only silk goods woven within the Confederation are ribbons, and mantles called volanes, which, in Mexico, are considered an essential part of female dress. The only other manufactures deserving of notice, are gold and silver lace, oil-cloth, and decorative candles, for the making of which, a company with exclusive privileges, has recently been established. In 1817 the whole annual value of manufactured goods was estimated at £15,727,650 the progress since made is so great, that the value is (1850) believed to be not less than £18,000,000 to £20,000,000 sterling. The foreign trade, as yet, is limited to the importation of manufactured goods and articles of first necessity, from Europe, Asia, and the American states, in return for gold and silver and a few natural products.

The following Table exhibits the extent of the chief imports from Great Britain—

QUANTITY OF SPINNING COTTON, SILK, LINEN, AND WOOLLEN MANUFACTURES IMPORTED INTO MEXICO, 1840-1 and 1843-4

| Years. | Cotton Manufactures. | | | SILK, and SILK-MIXED MANUFACTURES. | Linen, exclusive of Yarn. | Woollen and Woollen-Mixtures, exclusive of Yarn. |
|--------|----------------------|---------------------------------|---------|--|---------------------------------|---|
| | Cotton, Wool. | Cotton, Printed and Dyed. | Twist. | | | |
| | Yds. | Yds. | Lbs. | £ | £ | £ |
| 1840 | 5,043,075 | 8,164,000 | 87,800 | 9,800 | 87,770 | 82,104 |
| 1841 | 5,108,170 | 12,796,812 | 310,254 | 9,900 | 107,823 | 63,850 |
| 1842 | 50,945,801 | 86,548,001 | 57,117 | 149,485 | 199,685 | 846,387 |
| 1843 | 55,727,071 | 512,130 | 54,185 | 220,799 | 220,799 | 304,701 |

Schollens, Rovers, Castles, &c.—The population of Mexico is supposed, as in the other Spanish-American states, of three distinct races—the aboriginal Indians or red men, as they are called, the Europeans or white men, and the Africans or Negro race, introduced as slaves by the Europeans. These, by intermixture, give rise to other denominations; that all may be classed, with reference to caste and colour, as follows:—1. White men, who, if born in Spain were called Chapatones, or rather Chacupines (Chacupin means, in Aztec, a man on horseback, or rather a centaur—half-man, half horse) and, if natives of America, of unmixed European blood, are styled Creoles (criollos). 2. Mestizos, the progeny of a white father and a red or Indian mother. 3. Mulattoes, from the union of the white and Negro races. 4. The Indians or red race, of various distinct tribes. 5. Zambos, resulting from the mixture of the Indian and Negro races; and, 6. The African Negro, the unmixed offspring of this race, born in America, are called Chinos. The distinctions of breed and colour were formerly estimated with much anxiety, but they have now lost their importance, the privilege of caste being altogether abolished. It is difficult, at the present day, to define the exact limits of either the white or the red race, as, according to purity of blood, but it is quite certain that the latter constitutes the great majority of the Mexican population. It is probable that four-sevenths of the nation are Indians, and two-sevenths of mixed origin, the remaining one-seventh being Creoles and Negroes or Chinos, who are, together, but a handful.

It has been said that five-and-thirty distinct languages are spoken, by the Indian tribes, within the limits of Mexico. But distinct as these tribes may be in language, manners, and even in physical characters, they still have certain points of general resemblance which seem to prove that, at some remote period, they all issued from one common stock. The most widely-spread Indian language, Mexico, as might be expected, that of the most civilized nation the Aztecs, which, including the dialects spoken by the Toluca, Chichimeca, &c. extends through several degrees of latitude. The Mexican Indian has the general physical characteristics of the indigenous American. He is well made and muscular, capable of supporting great fatigue, and attains a great age, unbroken by infirmities. In ordinary habit, he is temperate and simple. His variety tastes animal food, maize, or in the low regions, banana, and bean, with the favour rich pulse, constitute his subsistence. The dwellings of the Indians vary with the climate. In the temperate zone, on the coast, the Indian hut made of cane and palm-leaves, resembles a great bird cage. Higher up, where timber is abundant and shelter acceptable, it takes the form rather of a Swiss or Swedish loghouse: but in the cold region, on the table-land it is built of sun-dried bricks, with a well-closed timber roof. In all cases the plan is the simplest possible—a single room, sometimes divided into two by a vast partition. The Mexican Indian is habitually grave and taciturn. He can labour, but not with large views, or for a distant object; he can improve but slowly for reason weighs lightly with him against habit. His way of life seems like a narrow path in the dark woods: his imagination never opens to him a brighter scene, and his only escape from the oppressive shade is by intoxication. Many Indian families in Oajaca, Michoacan, and Puebla, have risen to opulence by the cultivation of the agave for pulque, or by rearing the cochineal.

The Mestizos constitute the majority of the coloured population, they have a pleasing appearance, and are inclined, the women particularly to corpulence. In character they are much more gentle than the Mulattoes, whose passions are sometimes dangerously violent. The Spaniards occupy chiefly the sea-coast and low regions, the climate of which they alone can support. The soil trade and hazard of their position, the very slight moral influences and restraints under which they grow up, may perhaps help to explain the bad reputation of the Spaniards, who are said to be generally vicious, treacherous, and malignant. The Mexican Creole is distinguishable externally from the true Spaniard by his general meanness and hard features, in character and dispositions he varies little from the primitive mould, and still exhibits all the pride, frugality, courtesy, and hospitality of his forefathers. The fashions and dress of the country, as well as its political constitution, have undergone a total revolution within the last quarter of a century. Formerly the men wore small jackets, loose trousers, lace-boots, and low-crowned, broad-brimmed hats, with the caps or ample dark-coloured cloak. At the present day, the better classes adopt the fashions of Paris and London, retaining of their primitive costume nothing but the cape. The ladies still go to church in the old attire—black silk gowns and the mantilla or shawl veil, which covers the head, and hangs down over the back and shoulders elsewhere, they yield to the unobtrusive influences of French millinery, and the only European articles of female dress as yet obstinately rejected by them, are hats and bonnets. The middle, lower, and coloured classes [Poblanas] of the population adhere much more steadfastly to the showy ancient costume; fine dress indeed, seems to be their ruling passion, and their only ambition is to shine in bright silks and lace veils, covered with gold and silver fringes, and roses of precious stones. The Ranchero, or small farmer owns or hires a few acres on which he cultivates his corn and grows his cattle. He is a person of lofty thoughts and aspirations—a devoted patriot, a staunch fighter in all the revolutions wherever guerrillas are required, a hard rider, and a capital boom-companion. He is an Arab in his habits, and especially in his love and management of the horse. Dressed in his leather trousers and jerkin with his serape over his shoulders, his broad-brimmed and silver-corded sombrero on his head his heels armed with spurs, having three inch rowels and, provided with his sword and gun, the Ranchero is ready to traverse the republic for months. The dwellings of the upper orders are generally well built of stone not handsome but on a good scale and well adapted to the climate. At table also, they are simple and temperate. Besides their love of pompous display the passion which most sways them is that of gaming in which all classes indulge. Monte is the universal game but many devote their whole souls to cock fighting, like his household furniture, much of the fashion of the 16th century.

Disputes.—We may briefly state that it is perfectly ascertained that powerful, and, for the most part, kindred tribes,

MEXICAN RANCHERO.—From Rebel

descended on Mexico, from the N. from the seventh to the twelfth centuries the Toltecs arriving at the former and the Aztecs at the latter period. It is certain that these nations had attained to a high degree of civilization, they were good smiths, good masons, had made some advances in the arts of design, they raised great edifices, constructed vast works, palaces, pyramids, roads, aqueducts, bridges, &c. they had a more accurate calendar, and one better adjusted by calculation, than the Egyptians, Greeks, and Romans, and finally, they had a system of picture-writing by means of which they recorded many facts, and which, if it had not been rudely and utterly demolished, would have probably led them on rapidly in the career of improvement. Attempts have been made to trace the origin of these arts to Siberia, China, Japan, or Egypt. But from whatever quarter the people may have originally come, there seems little doubt that their civilization was developed in the New World. In comparing their habits and acquisitions with those of the inhabitants of the Old World, the difference are far more strongly marked than the affinities. Their ignorance of the cereal grains, of milk, and of pastoral pursuits, draws a broad line between the civilization of Mexico and that of Asia. The monuments which remain to attest their boldness of design and progress in the arts of construction are widely scattered and there is reason to suspect that they are as yet but imperfectly brought to light. It will be sufficient here to mention the extensive remains of the city of Tezcuhtlan, near the modern Mexico, with its docks, aqueducts, and fragments of a bridge. Oaxaca is rich in ancient remains, among which the chief are the palace and pyramid of the Zapotecas at Mitla. Another great pyramid or teocalli is to be seen near Cholula, in Puebla. Near Villanueva, in Zacatecas, are the extensive and remarkable ruins known as Los Edificios. In Vera Cruz are the pyramids of Papantla, built of colossal masses of porphyry. The extensive ruins of Palenque, in Chiapas, are well known, but they have been eclipsed by those of Itzamal, in Yucatan, more recently discovered, and which seem to indicate a style of art distinct in some respects from the ordinary Mexican.

Government and History.—The government of Mexico being still in a state of transition, may be sufficiently described in one aspect of the events connected with the revolution. When Napoleon overthrew the Spanish throne, Mexico remained firm in her allegiance but when he was defeated, and the restored Spanish monarch provided his people a constitution, then discontent arose in the colonies. Used to obey

MEXICAN PORDUANAS
From Rebel, Types of Mexico at Anthropological Survey in Mexico.

ing, to which the English have lately added, near the capital, horse-racing also. It is to gaming that we must ascribe the great number of violent deaths or murders, as they might be called, which take place in the Mexican cities: 150 is said to be the annual number in Mexico, 250 in Oaxaca. It needs hardly to be stated, that education is in a very low condition in Mexico, and that the science and learning of the Mexican the king, they could not submit to be ruled by a Spanish Cortes. They were willing to have a Bourbon as king of Mexico, but all parties were adverse to the union with Spain. The first anti-constitutional effort, in 1810, was chiefly fomented by the clergy. In 1820, the viceroy, Apodaca, received orders to proclaim the constitution of 1812 himself aware to the measure, he sent Colonel Iturbide, apparently on an expedition against the rebel Guerrero, but really to sound the wishes of the people. Iturbide, however, joined Guerrero, and raised the standard of revolt. Apodaca was deposed, and the views of the insurgents were proclaimed, namely that Mexico should form a constitutional monarchy, independent of Spain. The crown was offered to a Spanish prince, but the proposal being at once rejected by the Spanish Cortes, the Mexican Cortes proceeded to carry out their scheme of national independence and in May 1823, elected their general and president, Don Augustin Iturbide, Emperor of Mexico, by the title of Augustin I. The new monarch, however, soon showed his distaste for constitutional government, and consequently, before the year was out, the country bristled with arms, the chief officers, Santa Anna among the number, revolting, and demanding the re-opening of the Cortes. Iturbide yielded, abdicated and left the country in April 1823. The experiment of a monarchy having failed, the plan was now tried of a federal republic, copied in many particulars, from that of the U. States the main principles of its constitution being—the independence of Mexico, the maintenance of the R. Catholic religion, the abolition of all distinctions of caste, and the division of the powers of government into three branches—the legislative, executive, and judicial. This scheme, though it encountered much opposition, was ultimately adopted in February, 1824. The first president was General Guadalupe Victoria. The federal states were 19 with five territories. The distinction between a state and territory consisting in the former having, the latter wanting, the amount of population entitled to be represented in Congress. This constitution, though copied, as said above, in many particulars from that of the U. States, deviated from that model in one or two important points. It established an exclusive religion, resulting from the severe share which the clergy had all along taken in the revolution and it limited to monks judicial proceedings public, and to use the intervention of a jury. It abolished slavery however and, being followed up by measures calculated to facilitate the naturalization of strangers, and to promote education it effected at once a prodigious improvement to the condition of the community. For the next ten years Mexico was the sport of the solitary and intriguing general, until, in 1835 Santa Anna, who had distinguished himself, in 1829 by defeating, at Vera Cruz, an invading body of Spaniards, changed the federal into a central republic. Hard pressed by his rival, Bustamante, he seems to have felt little scruple as to the means by which he conducted parties. In the meantime, the distant provinces showed an inclination to push too far the principle of independence. Yucatan was disaffected, Texas, filled with adventurers from the U. States, revolted, and established its independence by a victory, in which the Mexican general, Santa Anna, was taken prisoner. This successful revolt of Texas was an event pregnant with important consequences in ten years more this new state was annexed to the Union of the U. States then came the long wished for and protracted war of the latter with Mexico, which was concluded in February 1848, by Mexico yielding to the U. States above 130,000 sq. m. of territory, namely, New Mexico, Upper California and those parts of Texas, Chihuahua, and Coahuila which lie E. of the Rio Grande del Norte. The country was under a dictator from 1841 till 1844, and in the latter year, the government reverted again to that of a central republic, which it continued to be till 1846, when it became a second time a federal republic. Though the country be still (1858) as it has long been, in an unsettled state, this form of government is still maintained. The army consists of 8909 men, and the navy of a single vessel, lying at Vera Cruz.—[Alex. von Humboldt, Political Essay on New Spain, 1811; H. G. Ward Mexico in 1837; do. Capt. Lyon, Journal of a Residence in Mexico, 1838; Lieut. R. W. Hardy, Travels in the Interior of Mexico, 1839; Lord Kingsborough, Antiquities of Mexico, 1831 &c. Capt. Dupuis, Antiquités Mémoires, Relations des trois Expéditions de 1824-26; Nebel Voyage Pittoresque et Archéologique dans le Mexique, 1836; J. L. Stephens Incidents of Travel in Central America, do. 1841; Branta Mayer Mexico as it was and as it is, 1844; Catherwood, Views of Ancient Monuments in Central America, do. 1844; Quinto Solares de la República Mexicana en 1850; Formado en vista de los últimos datos oficiales y otros señalamientos—Por Miguel M. León de Tejada. Mexico, 1850.]

MEXICO, or MEXICO (from Tezcuhtlan) a city, N. America, cap. above confederation and state of same name, beautifully situated in a vast plain, 7400 ft. above the sea, enclosed by lofty mountains and covered with broad meadows and lakes lat. 19° 25' 45" N., lon 99° 5' 7" W. (c). When taken by Cortes, in 1519 Mexico stood on several islands in Lake Texcoco and was approached by four great causeways, which stretched through the lake, and met in the centre of the city. Owing to the drainage and more rapid evaporation produced by the removal of the forests and other causes, the lake has receded and the present city, though occupying the same site, is now about 2½ m. from its shores. The district was therefore very different from that which Cortes has rapturously described, but still not unkind to strike all travellers with admiration. This admiration is not diminished, but rather increased, by a nearer approach. The city is built, with the utmost regularity in the form of a square, is enclosed by lofty walls, and consists of a great number of spacious streets, either parallel or at right angles to each other, forming a series of square blocks of measure and uniform structure, and leading to a central square, which covers an area of from 12 to 15 acres, and is lined with public edifices of the most imposing description. The houses are almost all built of hewn stone, in a very pure style of architecture are three or four stories in height, have flat terraced roofs, and are often not only provided with iron balustrades and gates ornamented with bronze, but covered with porcelain mosaic, of elegant patterns. The streets are well paved but often badly cleaned and being neither lighted nor watched, become unsafe for night passengers. The most remarkable edifice is the cathedral, built on the site of the great temple of the Aztecs and occupying one entire side of the central square. It is 600 ft. long, by 180 ft. wide, and, though not in strict conformity with any order of architecture, is remarkably imposing. The walls are bulls of unknown breed, but the front is covered over with the most laborious carving. Two lofty pillars rise up against the wall for the support of its two lofty towers. The interior is gorgeous, almost beyond description, though the decorations are more remarkable for costliness than for taste. The choir is formed of rare carved woods, and elaborately covered with gilded images of the high altar, raised from the floor, on an elevated platform, exhibits a profusion of candlesticks, crosses, and other ornaments of solid gold or silver, and is crowned by an image of the Virgin, decked in jewels, estimated at the value of more than half a million sterling; and all the other parts of the church are a perfect wilderness of columns, statues, shrines, fonts, &c. Another side of the great square is occupied by the national palace, the residence formerly of the viceroy, and now of the president. It stands on the site of the palace of Axtayacatl in which Cortes was lodged by Moctezuma, and is a quadrangular pile, of such enormous dimensions, that, besides accommodating the president and his family, it contains the principal government offices, the supreme court, the chamber of deputies, and that of the senate.

THE GREAT SQUARE AND CATHEDRAL, MEXICO.—FROM HALL.

Both these chambers the only parts of the interior particularly deserving notice, are very elegant. In the S.E. corner of the square, opposite the principal front of the cathedral, is the Casa Municipal or townhouse, partly occupied as an exchange. Immediately E. of the national palace, but without the square, is the university, which contains the national museum, and has in its front, a magnificent modern market. At some distance W. of the square is the Mineria, or school of mines, which occupies one of the most elegant edifices of the city, and in which lectures on the sciences connected with mining are occasionally given. Attached to it is a tolerably good mineral museum. In addition to the cathedral Mexico contains from 20 to 30 churches and convents, few of them remarkable for architectural merit, but most of them possessed of considerable riches and ostentatiously set off by gaudy decorations. One of the most elegant of the churches, is that of San Domingo, a light and airy structure, surmounted by a spire and dome, but somewhat injured in its effect by the proximity of the Inquisition. The antiquities of Mexico might naturally be expected to present objects of the greatest interest, but almost all of these have either perished or been removed from their original sites, and can now only be seen in the fragments collected within the national museum. The other edifices and objects particularly deserving of notice are the convents of St. Francisco, St. Augustine, and La Merced, all of them large and imposing structures, with numerous apses and cupolas, and the last particularly admired for the elegance of its interior; the magnificent aqueducts by which the city is supplied with water; the public fountains, the colossal equestrian statue of Charles IV. in the courtyard of the university, the acordeo or public prison a large and substantial structure, the theatre, of considerable dimensions but devoid of architectural merit; the Plaza de Toros, a large circular enclosure for bull fights, with accommodation for about 8000 spectators; two magnificent pasajes, or promenades—the one Paseo Nuevo, to the W. of the city, consisting of a broad avenue, shaded by rows of stately trees, and broken at intervals by fountains—the other the Paseo de la Viga, on the opposite side of the city, skirting one of the canals leading to the Lake of Chalco and very tastefully laid out, and the Alameda, a park of 10 or 12 as, formed into labyrinth by magnificent forest-trees, and the great place of public resort, particularly on festivals, when its carriage-ways become thronged by gay equipages, and from 8000 to 10 000 persons of all classes often crowd its walks. The manufactures, of comparatively limited extent, include gold and silver lace, jewellery and silversmith's work, woollen cloths, blankets, baizes, cotton goods, hats, soap, liquors, carriages, and tobacco, the trade is also very limited, the exports being confined almost entirely to the produce of the mines, while the imports are chiefly manufactured goods from Europe, and silver, especially from China. Mexico, originally Tenochtitlan, is said to have been founded in 1325, and occupied as already stated several islands of Lake Texcoco, to which access was given by broad causeways. When first visited by the Spaniards, they were so struck with its magnificence, that their powers of description appear to have been baffled, and their language naturally assumes the form of hyperbole. But they had not long become masters, before their tyranny, and the opposition which it aroused, brought all the splendour of war upon the city, and almost all its ancient splendour disappeared. A new city, however, soon arose, under the genius and indomitable perseverance of Cortes, and numerous edifices, varying in magnificence with the most celebrated structures of the old world, rose up as if by magic in every quarter. The lowness of the site, compared with the level of the surrounding lake, was a serious obstacle to its prosperity, exposing it not only to pestilential vapours, but to inundations, which caused fearful ravages. The additional evaporation, caused by the removal of the forests so far resembled the evil, by curtailing the dimensions of the lake, but it was found necessary to adopt a more artificial process, and, by means of an immense cut through the solid rock, 12 m. in length 150 ft. deep, and 800 ft. wide, commenced in 1603, and completed in 1789, the waters of several lakes adjoining, which, from occupying a higher level than Texcoco discharged themselves into it, and often raised its level so as to threaten a complete submergence of the city were diverted into the Panuco which carries them directly to the Gulf of Mexico. The important events which have since taken place, having not alluded to the history of the city, as it stands at the Confederation. Pop. 170,000.

—The State of Mexico, situated between lat. 18° 24' and 21° 7' N. lon 102° 37' and 109° 27' W. is bounded N. by Queretaro, E. Vera Cruz, E. Puebla S. and S.W. the Pacific, and W. Michoacan. greatest length, N. to S. 320 m. greatest breadth, 280 m. area, 18,535 sq m. More than two-thirds of the surface are covered by mountains, resting on a plateau which has a height of 6500 to 7500 ft. above sea-level. The culminating point, Nevado de Toluca, has an absolute height of 14,566 ft. Pop. 578,687. —The FEDERAL district of Mexico comprehends the N. part of the state and the immediate environs of the city. Area, 89 sq m. Pop. 200,000.

MEXICO (GULF OF) a large indentation E. coast, N. America, washing the shores of Mexico and the U. States, measuring about 1000 m. E to W and 800 m. N to S. estimated area 800 000 sq m. It is partly formed by the projection towards each other of the peninsulas of Florida and Yucatan nearly in a line between which lies the island of Cuba, leaving a communication on its N. with the Atlantic through the Florida Channel, and on its S. with the Caribbean Sea, through the Channel of Yucatan. The gulf is free from banks, and contains only a few small rocky islands on the coasts of Yucatan with the Florida reef near its E. extremity. The shores are low and generally lined with flat sandy islands, not far from the land and numerous lagoons. There are few harbours, and the rivers which fall into it are obstructed by bars at their mouth, which render them all except the Mississippi nearly inaccessible for vessels of large draught. A current of water entering the gulf from the Caribbean Sea, is soon divided into two portions, the one running E. along the coast of Cuba, the other W. in a curved line through the middle of the gulf, round towards the Florida Channel, where it meets the other current, and the two united form the Gulf Stream (see ATLANTIC). The temperature of the Gulf of Mexico is 86 in summer or 6 higher than that of the ocean in the same parallel. At high tide the Pacific raises several feet above the level of the gulf, and at low water it falls as far below it.

MEXICO (New), a territory of the U. States of America; lat. 33 to 38° N. lon 108° to 115° W. bounded N. by the territory of Utah, N.E. unsettled territories, E. and S.E. Texas, S. the Mexican states Chihuahua and Sonora, and W. Upper California. greatest length, E. to W. 720 m., greatest breadth, 417 m. area, 310 744 sq m. The surface is generally mountainous being traversed from N. to S. by the Rocky Mountains, which form its principal watershed and divide it into two great basins—one on the E. drained chiefly by the Rio-Grande del Norte and its affluents, and the other on the W. drained in like manner directly and indirectly by the Colorado. A small portion of the N.E. belongs to the basin of the Mississippi. The W. portion is very imperfectly known, but is understood to be, for the most part, sandy and sterile, and destitute, not only of trees, but almost of vegetation, except along the banks of the streams. The most important of these, next to the Colorado, is the affluent the Gila, forming the S. frontier, but along its whole line, few spots are seen susceptible of agricultural improvement.

The E. portion, forming what was long exclusively known by the name of Nor-Meximie, is better known, and has a much more attractive appearance. It consists chiefly of a central valley extending across the whole territory, from N to S, with an average breadth of 50 m., traversed by the Rio-Grande, and bounded in either by the main chain, or by ramifications of the Rocky Mountains, among which are the Sierra de los Mimbres on the W and the Sierra Blanca on the E. To the S. of the town of Santa Fé they average from 9000 to 8000 ft. high, but in the vicinity of the town, and N of it, some snowy peaks are seen, rising to the height of 10,000 or 12,000 ft. They are composed chiefly of granite, sienite, basalt, &c., and are said to be highly metalliferous. The higher ranges are covered, in many places, with pine forests; and the lower with cedars and occasional oaks. The climate, though differing widely in the mountainous districts and in the low valleys, is generally temperate, equable, and salubrious. In some of the more confined valleys, however, the summer heat often rises to 100°, and in the mountains, the winter is both long and severe. The sky is almost always clear. The soil is generally sandy, and looks poor, but when irrigated by the Rio-Grande produces abundant crops of Indian corn, wheat, and rye. Fruits, also, are abundant, and the vine is largely and successfully cultivated. Considerable attention is paid to the rearing of cattle, and many of the inhabitants possess large flocks and herds. For administrative purposes, the territory is divided into seven counties, of which that of Santa Fé is the capital. It first became known to the Spaniards in 1581, and was formally taken possession of in 1598. It remained with them till 1848 when the U. States obtained the cession of it as one of the results of the Mexican war. In 1850, it was erected into a territory with its present limits. Pop. (1850) 61,505, exclusive of independent Indian tribes, roughly estimated to amount to an additional 36,900.

MEXIMIEUX, a tn. France, dep. Aisne, agreeably situated on an escarpment, near r. bank Aisne, 23 m. S. Bourges. It contains a secondary ecclesiastical school. Pop. 1876.

MELNBURG, a tn. France, prov. Brandenburg, gov. and 75 m. N.W. Potsdam. It is walled, and has a church, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1007.

MELNBERG, a tn. Switzerland. See MALBERG.

MEYBELM, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, 9 m. W. Ghent with two distilleries, and an oil and a flour mill. Pop. 1314.

MELMAL, a tn. France, dep. Corrèze, 26 m. N.N.E. Tulle with an ancient church, a well-managed hospital, manufactures of muskets, and some trade in horses, mules, and cattle. Pop. 1846.

MEYOMEDD, or MIR OMED, a tn. Persia, prov. Khuzestan 45 m. N.W. Abadan, lat. 30° 55' N., on the high road between Teheran and Muschel.

MEYON, or MERO, an unhabited isl. Indian Archipelago Malacca Passage, between Gilolo and Celebes; lat. 1° 12' N., lon. 126° 39' E. It is high but of even appearance.

MEYRINGBEN, Switzerland. See MERINGBEN.

MEYRLEIS, a tn. France, dep. Loire, r. bank Yonne 24 m. S.W. Mende with manufactures of common hats, Irs lace, thread, scales, wool, corn, cheese, &c. Pop. 1878.

MEYSEL, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, 6 m. N.W. Brussels with a distillery, a brewery, two mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 2374.

MEZOFRIO, a tn. and par. Portugal, prov. Trás-os-Montes 12 m. S.S.W. Vila Real, near the Douro. P. 1170.

MEZE (Latin, Messae), a tn. France, dep. Hérault, on the lagoons of Thau, 18 m. S.E. Montpellier. It has an old abbey with its church still in good preservation, a small harbour for vessels from 40 to 60 tons, well sheltered, and defended from the sands by moles in the form of a half moon, manufactures of salt, obtained from the salt marshes, liquors, and distilleries and a trade in corn, wine, honey, salt, &c. The situation is extremely healthy. Pop. 4384.

MEZENAC (Moriz), France. See COVENAC.

MEZERIE, a tn. and river, Russia. See MESERIE.

MEZIERES (Latin, Mosieria), a tn. France, dep. Ardennes, r. bank Meuse, opposite to Charleville, with which it communicates by a suspension-bridge, 126 m. N.E. Paris. It stands on a tongue of land formed by the river, which washes it on two sides, and ranks as a fortress of the second class, being walled, defended by a citadel, and otherwise strongly fortified by Vauban. It has a tower, a prison, an infirmary and church, manufactures of iron, gunpowder, cutlery and leather, and a trade in leather, serge, hosiery linen &c. Metziers, under Chevalier Bayard with a handful of men, resisted Charles V. when in 1551 he attacked it with an army of 40,000. The Allies besieged and took it, in 1815 after Waterloo. Pop. (1855) 8936.

MEZIN (Latin, Messum), a tn. France, dep. Lot-et-Garonne, r. bank Garonne, 20 m. S.W. Agen. It is, on the whole, not well built: has an ancient church, manufactures of corals and earthenware, tanneries, a paper and numerous flour mills. Pop. 2051.

MEZINGEV, a tn. Württemberg. See MERZINGEN.

MEZO, numerous places, Hungary, particularly — 1. (Barany), a vil. co. Bakes, 57 m. N.E. Segedin, with a Protestant gymnasium. Inhabitants chiefly employed in vine and olive culture and rearing cattle. Pop. 7900.—2. (Oden), a vil. Transylvania co. Thorenburg with a church. P. 1645.—3. (Zigyes), a vil. Thier-Thames co. Lendak 59 m. E. by N. Segedin. It has one of the most important military stores in Hungary, and in the first four years of the war which broke out on the first French revolution, furnished 30,000 horses to the army.—4. (Kocsa), See KOVACS (MEZO)—5. (Treny), a vil. Thier-Thames co. Szathmar, with a church, and baths. Pop. 1230.—6. (Tuz), See TUN (MEZO).

MEZQUITA (San Marcos), a tn. and com. Spain, Galicia prov. and about 50 m. from Orense with a church, townhouse, ancient palace, primary school, custom house, manufactures of linen, and a trade in cattle and agricultural produce. Pop. 3980.

MEZURICH, a vil. Bohemia, circle and 16 m. from Kungráz, with a church and a mill. Pop. 1035.

MEZANA-BIALI, a vil. and com. kingd. of Italy, Piedmont div. Novara, prov. Lomellina, l. bank Po, with a church, a public school and a trade in corn, rice, and timber. P. 2547.

MEZANA MURMANSKO, a vil. and com. kingd. of Italy, Piedmont div. Turin prov. and about 10 m. from Biella with a very ancient church, and a trade in wine and chestnuts. Pop. 3007.

MEZANFOGO, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Genova, prov. Chiavari, 3 m. from Dorsanuco, near the Stura with four churches and a trade in dairy produce and oak timber. Pop. 2340.

MEZGANI (1), a vil. and com. district and 14 m. N.N.E. Paris in a fertile corn and wine district with a school. Pop. 3970.

MEZGANINO, a vil. and com. kingd. of Italy, Piedmont, div. Alessandria prov. and near Voghera r. bank Po. It has a handsome church, and a trade in corn and fruit. Pop. 1740.

MEZUNILF, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. N.W. Turin in the valley of Lanzo, near the Stura, here crossed by two wooden bridges. It has two churches and manufactures of articles in iron, iron-mines, and limestone quarries. Pop. 2502.

MEZO or LOREN, an isl. Austria, coast of Dalmatia, about 7 m. N.W. Ragusa, 8 m. long by 2 m. broad, tolerably fertile, producing wine and oil. It has a church and two monasteries. It was taken by the British in 1815, and continued in their possession till 1816.

MEZOTURJO, a tn. Italy, prov. and about 21 m. S. Palermo, inhabited by Arancs. Near it both Jasper and plaster are found.

MEZOLOMBAI DO a market in Austria, Tyrol circle and 16 m. from Trent, cap. dist. with a church and a castle, a Franciscan monastery, and a trade in fruit. Pop. 2218 dist. 18,159.

MEZOVTO, or MERVOVO.—1. A tn. European Turkey, prov. Albania, majke, and 28 m. N.E. Janina, l. bank Arta, in a chain of the Grammos Mountains, which forms one of the most important passes between Macedonia and Albania. It stands nearly 5000 ft. above sea-level, and consists of about 1000 houses; has some woollen manufactures, and a trade in wine.—2. The culminating point of Pinus (which see).

MGLIN, a tn. Russia, gov. and 180 m. N.E. Orel, cap. dist. It is one of the best towns in the government for four churches, and a considerable trade in agricultural produce, particularly hemp. Pop. (1849), 6327. — The industry is low and unimpressive, and well covered with wood.

MAHAR, a t. Hindoostan, presid. Bombay, in the Concan, 1 bank Mahar or Kantoona, here navigable, 25 m. S. by W Bombay, lat. 18° N. lon. 73° 30' E., at the foot of a principal pass in the Ghats.

MHEYSEUR, a t. Hindoostan, presid. Bengal, prov. Malwa, 1 bank Nerbuda, here about 1600 ft wide lat. 23° 8' N. lon. 75° 32' E., 76 m. S. by W Ojaua. It consists of two wide streets, intersecting each other at right angles, paved with stone. At the W end is a fort, 80 ft. to 100 ft. above the surface of the river with the margin of which it communicates by one of the finest ranges of Ghats in Hindoostan. Within the fort are several Hindoo temples, and a palace.

MHOW, or Mow, several tns. Hindoostan, presid. Bengal — 1, Prov. Malwa, 10 m. S. of Indore, 2019 ft. above sea-level lat. 22° 55' N. lon. 75° 50' E. It is an important military cantonment, and contains a barracks and fort — 2, Prov. Alla-habad, 68 m. N.E. Benares lat. 25° 01' N. lon. 83° 37' E. formerly a place of considerable importance. — 3, Prov. Allahabad, near Luck. Belund, 76 m. S.W. Benares lat. 24° 37' N. lon. 81° 56' E. — 4, Bundelcand 178 m. W by S. Allahabad lat. 25° 20' N. lon. 79° 7' E.

MHYE a large river Hindoostan. It rises in the Vindhya Mountains, prov. Malwa, about 60 m. W by S. Indore lat. 22° 30' N. lon. 75° E., flows N.W. for about 100 m., to lat. 28° 50', where it bends round to S.W. and falls into the Arabian Sea near the head of the Gulf of Cambay 21 m. W Baroda, lat. 23° 20' N. total course, about 260 m.

MIAO, or MIAGO, a large city Japan, in Niphon in an extensive plain, on the Yedo-gawa, lat. 35° N. lon. 135° 40' E., the residence of the Mikado or spiritual emperor the seat of his diet or court, and hence the constitutional capital of the empire. It does not, however, equal Yedo in size, where the Shogun or military emperor holds his court. It is about 4 m. long, and 3 m. broad, and is esteemed the paradise of the empire not merely for its delightful situation and construction for it abounds in exquisitely laid-out gardens, palaces, and temples, but for the surpassing beauty of its houses. The houses, which are, for the most part, built of wood plastered with lime and clay, do not exceed two stories in height, and are formed into long and narrow but regular lines of street. Miao is the centre of the learning and science of Japan by far the greater portion of all the works published in the empire emanating from the daim, which is regarded as the principal college, not simply for the study of theology, but for all the various branches of literature, and in many features, no place in Japan can rival Miao carved ornaments Japanese vases, and other articles, being made here of a kind and quality far superior to anything that is allowed to be exported to Europe. Every house in the city has a storehouse attached to it, well provided with these objects of manufacture. Pop. estimated about 600,000.

MIAJADAR, a vil. Spain, Extremadura, prov. and 32 m. S.E. Cáceres with narrow streets, a townhouse, prison, five schools, a church, of noble architecture, but in part ruinous and several hermitages, four tanneries, an oil and various flour mills, and agriculture and cattle-rearing. Pop. 2465.

MIANA a t. Persia, prov. Azerbajan 1 bank Karagoo or Kison, 80 m. S.E. Tabreez lat. 37° 30' N. lon. 49° 40' E. It is a miserable place, of 650 or 700 houses infested by a poisonous bug respecting the deadly effect of whose bite many exaggerated statements have been made.

MIARINO or MIARNO, a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont div. Novara, S. shore Lake, and a little E. the town of Orta, with a church, and a small college or seminary. Pop. 1025.

MIAVA, a t. Hungary Hither Danube, co. Veszprém, on a river of the same name, 48 m. N.W. K. Pressburg. It has a church, chapel, and synagogue, manufactures of linen, and oil, corn, and saw mills. A little coal is worked in the neighbourhood. Pop. 8000.

MICHAEL, or MICHOE, (Sar) an isl. Portugal, in the Atlantic, the largest of the Azores lat. (E. point) 37° 45' 18" N. lon. 23° 5' 15" W. (a.); greatest length, E.N.E. to W.S.W., about 45 m. greatest breadth, about 13 m. At a distance, it presents an elevated, rugged, and barren appearance but, when nearly approached, is seen to contain numerous valleys, covered with rich vegetation. Like almost all the other islands of the group, it is evidently of volcanic formation, and has frequently, both in early and more recent times, proved the tremendous activity of its volcanic agency. None of the rocks are primitive, but conglomerates prevail to a considerable extent. The far greater part of the island is composed of volcanic matters, basalt, tuff, pumice, and cinders and thermal springs are numerous. Most of the loftier summits are evidently craters. The culminating point, said to be Mafre, is estimated by Boyd at not more than 4000 ft., though others make it much higher. The other most conspicuous heights are Pico do Fogo, and Pico do Varra. The soil on the higher slopes is thin, and suffers so much from drought as often to have a very parched and barren appearance, but, in the lower valleys, where, to the natural fertility of decomposed lava the benefits of irrigation are added, vegetation becomes most luxuriant, and almost tropical. The culture is unskilful and careless in the extreme, two abundant crops, chiefly of wheat, maize, and pulses, are annually raised, and a surplus of grain, to the amount of about 40 000 quarters, remains for export. But the products for which St. Michael is most famed, and from which it derives its largest source of revenue, are oranges and lemons, of which 130 000 boxes are annually exported. At the shipping season it is not uncommon to see from 70 to 80 vessels lying in the roads to be laden with them. The vine also is extensively cultivated but the produce though said to be excellent is all consumed on the island. The sugar-cane thrives well and yielded excellent returns, till its growth was discouraged as interfering with the produce of Brazil. Melons and bananas, of excellent quality are very abundant the latter, however only in low, sheltered spots, particularly in the S. Among domestic animals, sheep and goats are very numerous the sea is almost the only source of burden. Fish abound along the coast, but the fisheries, which might be very productive are neglected. The inhabitants are humane and hospitable, but extremely indolent and voluptuous. For administrative purposes, St. Michael is divided into three districts—Ponte Delgado, the capital Ribeira Grande, and Villa Franca. Pop. 80 000. — (Boyd's Azores &c.)

MICHAEL par. Isl. of Man. Pop. 1410.
MICHAEL (Sr.) several par. England — 1 Derby 1 1040 — 2 Gloucester 500 ac. P. 245. — 3 Hereford 1 ac. P. 2248. — 4 (Lancashire), Cornwall, 870 ac. P. 191. — 5 Church, St., Somerset 43 ac. P. 80. — 6 (Church) Herford 4567 ac. P. 412. — 7 (Loughfield), Bedford, 11 906 ac. P. 645. — 8, (Penkridge) Cornwall 1189 ac. P. 201. — 9, (on Wyre) Lancaster 18 184 ac. P. 4680. — 10 Wales, Pembrokeshire 1817 ac. P. 1258.

MICHAEL (Sr.) a lofty and rocky promontory, British America, on the S.E. coast of Labrador, lat. 52° 47' N. lon. 55° 47' W. (a.)

MICHAEL'S MOUNT (Sr.), a remarkable conical rock England, co. Cornwall on the N.W. side of Mounts Bay, opposite to the town of Marazion lat. 50° 7' N. lon. 5° 28' 30" W. (a.) It is the ancient Cornish of Ptolemy and consists of a vast mass of granite protruding through sedulous rocks, and rising gradually from a base nearly 1 m. in circuit, till it attains a height of 350 ft. It is connected with the mainland by an isthmus, which is dry at low but covered at high water. Its surface is extremely rugged and large overhanging masses are seen as if threatening to precipitate themselves into the sea. The summit is crowned by a male or fortified monastery which has been repaired and fitted up for residence, and at its base is a village, with a lighthouse, at which copper-ore, china clay, and pilschards, are exported. The mount is defended by three batteries, mounting 18 guns.

MICHAEL CHURCH on Axon, prov. Wales, Radnor, 1895 ac. Pop. 155.

MICHAELIS (Sr.), a vil. Saxony circle Dresden hall and near Freiberg inhabited chiefly by miners in its neighbourhood. Pop. 1886.

MICHAELSTONE, three par. Wales, Glamorgan — 1, Le-Paf 790 ac. Pop. 87. — 2, (Super-Avon), 8038 ac. Pop. 6074. — 3, (Super-Eg), 398 ac. Pop. 48. — 4, (Le-Paf), Eng. Monmouth 5488 ac. Pop. 544.

MICHAELSTOWN par. Eng. Cornwall 1617 ac. P. 218.

MICHEL (Sr.), numerous places, France, particularly — 1 (de Forme), A. t. dep Vendée, on the canal of Fontenelle 24 m. S.E. Bourbon Vendée. It has a small harbour for vessels of 30 to 40 tons, and some trade in corn and beans. P 1741 -2 (see Thiérache or Beckfort), A. in. and com., dep. Alsas, 7 m W Vervins with manufactures of embroidered tulle and near it a malleable iron-works. Pop. 2301.-3, (Mont-Maclos or Mont-Moreau), A. in. and com., dep. Vendée, 25 m from Fontenay-le-Comte, with the majestic ruins of the Abbey du Grandmont. Pop. 1217

MICHEL (SAINT) a vil. and com. Belgium, W Flanders, 2 m S. Bruges, with manufactures of linen, flour-mills, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1118

MICHEL MORT (St. France. See MORT St. MICHEL. MICHEL-SILBERG, a mining in Bohemia, circle and 29 m W N Pilsen. L. bank Wunnschbach; with a church and a school and a smelting furnace, a paper and several other mills. It was once the centre of very important mining operations. At present the province is very limited, and is confined to a little silver, cobalt, lead, and antimony. Pop. 308

MICHELSDORF or MICHELSBERG.-1 A vil Upper Austria, circle Traun 8 E Steier with a church, a powder mill, and manufactures of scythes. Pop. 2575 -2 A vil Bohemia, circle and 33 m E. Chrást, with a church, a school and two mills. Pop. 1840

MICHEL-ROMBACH a vil Hesse Cassel prov. Fulda, circle Hildfeld. It has a church, and three mills. Pop. 1001

MICHELSTADT a in Hesse-Darmstadt, prov. Starkenburg in the Odenwald, circle Miesbach, 20 m E. Darmstadt. It has a church school manufactures of woollens, cottons, and leather, and an iron, worsted, and several other mills. Pop. 3004.

MICHIGAN, one of the northern U States lat. 41 48' to 47 30' N, lon 82° 20' to 90° 10' W bounded, N by Lake Superior N E and E. Lake Huron S E. a projecting portion of Upper Canada and Lake Erie, S. Ohio and Indiana W Lake Michigan, and N W the Menomonee and Montreal rivers separating it from Wisconsin, length 344 m. breadth 300 m. area, 60 042 sq. m. It consists of two separate peninsulas—one, on the N W washed on the N E and S by Lakes Superior, Huron and Lake Erie, and the other on the S., washed on the W by E. and by Lakes Michigan and Huron. The N W peninsula, occupying nearly a third of the whole surface is comparatively elevated, and presents a succession of mountains and lakes, plains, rivers, and forests. It has not been accurately surveyed but it is not understood to possess much agricultural value. Along its E and S E shores, as far W as Point Detroit the only rock which becomes visible is limestone, accompanied with the usual indications of gypsum and saline springs. In the interior are extensive sand plains, almost sterile but relieved by tracts of spruce and sugar-maple forests. The latter tree is particularly abundant, and enables the natives to provide them selves with ample supplies of sugar. Few tracts can boast of being better watered. Numerous minor lakes are scattered over the interior about 40 large and 60 small streams discharge themselves upon its shores and a coast-line, estimated at 730 m., with several large bays and excellent harbours affords unusual facilities for navigation. The poverty of the soil is also compensated by the mineral treasures beneath it. Copper of the finest quality abounds in the neighbourhood of Lake Superior and large masses of native copper are often found in the river beds. The surface of the S peninsula is so level that few elevations occur which deserve even the name of hills. The interior however is gently undulating, and rises gradually from the lakes towards its centre. It is mostly covered with fine forests of timber interspersed with plains and prairies. On the shores of Lake Michigan are tracts of sand, sometimes covered with scanty vegetation though generally bare, and on those of Lake Huron, high sandy bluffs and low swamps prevail, but, with these exceptions, the soil is well adapted to all the ordinary agricultural crops—including wheat, rye, oats, barley, Indian corn, flax, hemp, and the various artificial grasses. The rivers which generally run near the centre, and flow either W to Lake Michigan, or E. to Lake Huron, are both numerous and important the larger of them being navigable for boats and canoes almost to their sources. Small clear lakes, also, teeming with fish, are seen in every quarter. The climate is much modified by the peninsular position of the state and hence, the intense cold, common in other regions under the same latitude, is so little felt, that it seldom becomes necessary to house cattle, even in the dead of winter. This advantage has been turned to good account, and both grazing and sheep-farming form extensive and profitable employments. Agriculture, however, is the great staple; and heavy crops of wheat are raised, for which the elevated lands are famous. Next to wheat, the most important crops are oats and Indian corn. After agriculture, lumbering is perhaps the chief employment. Manufactures have made little progress, but the trade is very important; and in addition to the vast natural facilities already adverted to has received the benefit of the railway system, two important lines, one called the Central, and the other the Southern railroad traversing the S. part of the S. peninsula from E. to W., and furnishing the means of a transit, to the final development of which it is difficult to assign limits. The prevailing religious body in Michigan is the Methodist, which, in numbers, surpasses all other denominations, next in number are Baptists and Presbyterians, and there are several congregations of Independents, Protestant Episcopalians and E. Catholics. The common schools, supported partly by state, and partly by local taxation, were attended in 1849, by 125,218 scholars, 4788 additional scholars were educated at private schools. By the constitution of 1850, every white male citizen who is major may vote at all elections. The Senate consists of 22 members, elected, one-half, annually, for two years. The House of Representatives consists of not less than 34, nor more than 100 members, elected annually. The governor and lieutenant-governor, elected by a plurality of votes, hold office for two years. All judges and justices of the peace are elected by the people. The first settlement in Michigan was made by the French, at Detroit, in 1670. In 1763, the country was ceded to the British, by the peace of Paris, and passed from them to the U States, at the close of the revolutionary war. It was erected by Congress into a separate territorial government in 1805 and became a state of the Union in 1836. Pop. (1840) 212 267, (1850) 337 054.

MICHIGAN a in U States Indiana, S. shore Lake Michigan, lat. 41° 42' N lon 86° 40' W, with three churches several stores, and large warehouses. It is the only lake port in the state. Pop. 700

MICHIGAN (LAKE) the second largest of the great lakes of N America. It is wholly within the U States, having the State of Michigan E. and N W, Wisconsin and Illinois W., and Indiana S. On the N E it communicates with Lake Huron by the narrow strait of Michilimackinac. It is 330 m long, and on an average, 60 m broad, area, estimated at 16,961 sq. m. Many tributary streams fall into it both from Wisconsin and Michigan. The coast is generally sandy but preserves great regularity. The lake is nearly free from islands excepting at its N extremity and on the Strait of Michilimackinac. There are only three bays of any note—Green Bay the largest, at its N W end so called from the unusually dark green colour of its waters and Great and Little Traverse Bays in the same quarter. The lake is said to be 564 ft. above sea-level, the greatest ascertained depth is 1000 ft.

MICHILIMACKINAC, a strait, N America, connecting Lake Huron with Lake Michigan and containing an island of the same name, called also Mackinac Island

MICHIPICOTON, a bay Upper Canada, N E. extremity of Lake Superior, into which falls a considerable river of same name, at the mouth of it stands Fort Michilicoton. In the bay is a small island of same name.

MICHEL, a vil Bohemia, 4 m from Prague, and the property of its university, with a church, a castle, and a flour-mill. Pop. 1000

MICHIOACAN a state, Mexico. See MEXICOACAN

MICHEL D par Eng Smith; 1840 no. P. 256

MICHELLEAM par Eng Survey; 2849 no. P. 768

MICHELLOVER, par Eng Durby 1830 no. P. 1809

MICKLETON par Eng Gloucester 1786 no. P. 269

MICUIPAMPA, a in Peru, dep. and 92 m N E.

Trinidad, prov. and 16 m N N E Cuzamora, L. bank of an affluent of the Upper Amazon, celebrated for its river-mines, which are 11,800 ft. above sea-level

MID-LOTHIAN See EMBSAY (County of)

MIDCALDER, par Scot Edinburgh, 7 m. by 8 m Pop. 1474

MIDDELBURG (Latin, Medoburgum, Medium Castellum), a town, Holland cap. prov. Zeeland, near the middle of all Walcheren, 47 m. S.W. Rotterdam, 5 m. N. by E. Flushing. It is a good-looking, remarkably clean town ornamented with numerous spires and towers surrounded by a broad canal, well supplied with fish, bordered by a prettily planted countenance, and environed by a large number of fine gardens, rich meadows, and bleaching-grounds. It is openly built, has numerous squares, of which the great market (Grootmarkt) is the most notable, and at the same time, one of the finest in the kingdom. On the N. side of the great market stands the splendid townhall composed of two portions, an older, in Gothic style, whose present front, overlaid with ornaments, were completed in 1518, and a new side wing in the Ionic style finished in 1784. On the N. front of the old building are 20 colossal statues of the counts and countesses of Zeeland the series closing with the Emperor Charles V. Among the other important edifices and institutions may be specified the abbey, an extensive structure, with a fine tower the courthouses, prison, exchange, gymnasium, academy of design, and other schools (theatre museum barracks, three Reformed and two E. Catholic churches, a Walloon and an English, a Baptist, and a Dissenting church; a synagogue, an infirmary an orphan hospital, and various benevolent literary, and scientific institutions. The harbor, though of considerable size, is smaller than once it was and the shipping trade is very limited, though at one time important, and including an extended intercourse with the E. Indies and other parts of the world. Some cotton weaving brewing chocolate-making tanning, lace-making, worsted-spinning and sail-repairing, are the chief manufactures, in addition to which a few vessels are built. It is an ancient place and was taken by the Dutch from the Spaniards, in 1574. Zacharias Jenson, a spectacle-maker here discovered the telescope, in 1600 this discovery has, likewise, been attributed to Johann Lipperhey, also a citizen of Middelburg. The ill-fated British Walcheren expedition, in 1809, here lost 7000 men, from the effects of the unhealthy climate fever and ague being very prevalent in spring and autumn a result of the marshy neighbourhood. In 1810, when Holland had been united to France, Middelburg was made the capital of the department of Bouches-de-l'Escaut. Pop. (1850), 15,934.

THE TOWN HALL, MIDDELBURG.—From a Dutch print.

MIDDELBARNIS, a vil. Holland, prov. H. Holland, the Overflakke, 18 m. S.W. Rotterdam. It is a one of the best-looking villages in the province has a neat townhall, three churches and a synagogue, a school and a poorhouse. It has a harbour, connecting with the Haringvliet and many of the inhabitants are employed in fishing, and in herring-curing, and the remainder in agriculture. Pop. 8104.

MIDDELSTUM, a vil. Holland, prov. Groningen, 10 m. N.W. Appingedam, with a church and a school. Pop. 739

MIDDLE, par. Eng. Shrop. 8809 ac. Pop. 1880
MIDDLE, par. Scot. Dumfriesshire, 80 000 ac. P. 2163
MIDDLEBURG, an isl., S. Pacific. See Eoa.

MIDDLEFURT, a town, Denmark, in Funen, on the Little Belt, across which there is bare a ferry to Jutland. It has a good winter haven, admitting vessels drawing 10 ft. The purpose-fishery is of some importance, and employs a good many of the inhabitants. Middlefurt was founded in the 11th century, and has suffered much from pillage, pestilence, and fire. Pop. 1600

MIDDLEHAM a market in and par. England, co. York (N. Riding), on the Ure, 9 m. S.W. Richmond with a market-house, and some woollen manufactures. Area of par., 2108 ac. Pop. 866

MIDDLEHAM BASIN, a par. Eng. Durham 6871 ac. Pop. 1719

MIDDELSBROUGH a river-port and par. England, co. York (N. Riding), on the Stockton and Darlington railway. The town, which is almost wholly of modern erection, is situated at the mouth of the Ure, 44 m. N. York. It consists of several regular streets, diverging from a square in the centre, lighted with gas. has a number of good shops a hand some exchange, in the Grecian style, a fine church in the later English style, with a square embattled tower surmounted by an elegant spire, and places of worship for Independents, Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans. A dock, exceeding 9 ac. in extent, has been constructed, with capacious warehouses and other accommodations for shipping, including two yards for building and repairing ships. There are four public breweries in the town, three iron-foundries a sailcloth manufactory extensive potteries, and brick and tile works. Pop. 7864. Area of par., 2300 ac.

MIDDLESEX, the metropolitan co. of England, bounded N. by Hertford, E. Essex, S.E. Kent, S. Surrey and W. Buckingham. It is further defined by the Thames on the S., the sea on the E. and the Gains on the W. It is the smallest counties in England, but the most important, from its containing the greater portion of the city of London. Area, estimated at 160 480 ac. of which 150 000 ac. are arable, meadow and pasture. The surface is generally flat, and mostly perfectly level, with exception of the slight eminences, Hampstead, Highgate, and Harrow-on-the-Hill on the N. side of London none of which exceed 400 ft. in height. The county, which belongs entirely to the basin of the Thames, is chiefly occupied by the London clay the remainder by the plastic clay, which attains a thickness of 100 ft. to 120 ft. The soil is various, mostly gravelly, and not naturally fertile but enriched, especially in the vicinity of London, by a profuse application of manure, from time immemorial. A tract of fine, rich, sandy loam also stretches along the Thames well adapted for garden ground, and is, in part, so occupied for the supply of the London market. There are some extensive commons in various parts of the county. Although the metropolitan county agriculture seems to be less advanced here than in most other counties in England, and, what is still more remarkable the farming implements are generally bad, clumsy, and antiquated. The principal crops are wheat, barley, potatoes, beans, pease, turnips and cabulage. But by far the largest part of the county is in grass, there being, it is said, 70,000 ac. of upland meadows and pastures, the management of which, particularly as respects the making of hay, is extremely well understood. The number of cows kept in the county for supplying the metropolis with milk, is between 7000 and 8000, usually of the Holderness breed. Many early horse fairs are held, and great fairs are held for the London market. Minerals of no importance, but, near London, vast quantities of earth and clay have been dug up, and converted into bricks. Middlesex returns 14 members to Parliament, two of which are for the county (Pop. (1861), 1,886,576)

MIDDLETON, several pars. Eng.—1, Essex, 875 ac. P. 170 —2, Norfolk, 8038 ac. P. 933 —3, Somerset, 850 ac. P. 108 —4, Warwick, 8640 ac. P. 492 —5, York (S. Riding); 3340 ac. P 649.—6, York (N Riding) 25,400 ac. P 194.—7 (Wilt-Ford), Suffolk, 1420 ac. P 620.—8, (Okeham), Northampton 1780 ac. P 1380.—9 (St. George), Durham 2050 ac. P 532.—10, (see also 254) Hereford, 2291 ac. P 401.—11 (Surrey), Devon 226 ac. P 194.—12 (Somerset), Oxford 1834 ac. P 507.—13, (see also 254), Durham 40,250 ac. P 5973.—14, (Tyne), York (N Riding) 6106 ac. P 732.

MIDDLETON a market tn. and par Ireland, co. and 13 m. E Cork with a church. R. Cathole chapel and convent, several schools, a market house, courthouses, bridewell, two large distilleries, breweries, and corn-stores. Area of par 5713 ac. Pop. 8168.

MIDDLETON (St. Leonards) a market tn. and par, England, Lancashire, agreeably situated at the confluence of two small streams, 8 m. N N E Manchester. It consists of a principal street, forming a continuation of the high road between Manchester and Rochdale and several minor streets, all irregularly built, but generally clean and has a fine old church several dissenting places of worship, a grammar, a national, and several other schools a mechanics institute, a handsome market-house, and extensive silk and cotton factories, in which a large proportion of the inhabitants are employed. A branch of the Manchester and Leeds Railway has its terminus in the market place, about 1½ m. E the Rochdale Canal passes. Area 17 903 ac. P 16 296 m. 5740

MIDDLETON'S ISLAND S. Pacific Ocean lat. 28 13' S lon. 160° 31' E. To the S.W. is a reef called Middleton's Shoal lat. 29 14' S lon. 158 53' F

MIDDLETON TOWN, a market to Ireland, co. and 8 m. S W Armagh; with a church Presbyterian meeting-house, school hospital, and distillery. Pop 501

MIDDLETON a city U States Connecticut a bank Connecticut river 34 m above its mouth, 92 m. N E New York. It is well built, chiefly of brick, the principal streets running parallel to the Connecticut. has a handsome court house, of Grecian architecture a fine stone custom-house, several banks, a jail, an almshouse, and eight churches, a Wesleyan university founded in 1831 with a library containing 6500 volumes, and a valuable collection of philosophical apparatus Middleton has considerable commerce and manufactures. The river is not navigable above the town but vessels not drawing more than 10 ft. can come close to the wharfs. Pop 7010

MIDDLEWICH a market tn. and par England co. Chester. The town 19 m E Chester on the Trent and Mersey canal has a handsome townhall, parish church, and places of worship for various dissenting bodies, a grammar school a national and a British school numerous small charities, and a literary and scientific institution a small silk-factory a trade, chiefly in salt obtained from brine springs in the neighbourhood and the town forms the centre of an excellent cheese district Fruit and vegetables are also raised abundantly in the vicinity and forwarded to the Liverpool and Manchester markets. Pop. 1242 Area of par 19 110 ac. Pop. 4493 (Local Correspondent)

MIDDLETON par Eng Somerset 2520 ac. P 737

MIDHURST, a parli bur market tn., and par England, co. Sussex. The town agreeably situated on a gentle eminence, r bank Rother 46 m S W London, is clean, and generally well built, has a church, a Baptist chapel, a free grammar and a national school; a set of almshouses, and several minor charities. Iron-works, formerly in its vicinity have been abandoned, on account of the expensiveness of fuel Midhurst sends a member to Parliament; electors (1851), 379 Area of par, 871 ac. Pop bur, 1481

MIDIAH, a machine in Turkey in Europe, prov Romania, on the Black Sea, at the mouth, and 1 bank Tolopaz lat. 41° 38' N lon. 28° 8' E It has a small roadstead, exposed to E winds, but sheltered by Cape Serres from the N. Here vessels may anchor in 10 or 12 fathoms

MIDLEY, par Eng Kent 2168 ac. Pop. 87

MIDMAR, par Scot Aberdeen, 12 000 ac. Pop. 1166

MIDNAPORE or MIDNAPUR, a tn and dist Hindoostan, presid and prov Bengal The town, 1 bank Choshi, about 70 m. above its junction with the Hoogly, and 70 m. S W Calcutta, but formerly a fort now converted into a jail. It has also an hospital barracks, and residences of the district authorities.—The town is bounded, E. by the Hoogly, and, on the other sides, by the districts Bardham, Beasoorah, Rangoon, Mohurungo, and Malabar, area, 5280 sq m. About half a century since, this district was nearly all a jungle, never cultivated but not wholly uninhabited. It has been somewhat improved in this respect, but still contains an immense extent of uncultivated and most fertile ground. Most of the land is tilled by the peasantry who pay the rent, the class of labourers who work for hire being scarce. The most important articles of agricultural produce are indigo, betel nut, and sugar Honey, wax, and lac, are obtained from the jungle portions of the district. The manufactures are few, comprising some cotton cloths, gunnys, metal and shell ornaments, and pottery Area, including Hudgeella, 6029 sq m. Pop 638,328.

MIDOE, a tn and par Portugal, prov Beira-Deixa, com Coa, 36 m. W S W Guarda. Pop. 1647

MIDSOMER NORRIS, par Eng Somerset, 3922 ac. Pop. 8799

MIDWOLDE, a vil Holland, prov Groningen, 5 m. N W Wintholp with two churches and a school. Pop. (agricultural) 1674.

MIELAN a tn France, dep. Gers, 21 m S S W Auch It has a promenade from which the Pyrenees are distinctly seen, and has some trade in sheep. Pop. 1171

MIERES a parl bur Cantino (San Juan Bautista) a tn, Spain, Asturias, prov and 10 m. S Oviedo, r bank Lena or Candín It has a church, a fine old palace, a townhouse, and two schools an iron foundry many flour-mills, and, in the vicinity, mines of cannon iron, sulphur, and coal, and a trade in these, and in mules, horses, cattle, and swine. Pop. 4000

MIES, or SIEBERSTADT, a tn Bohemia, circle and 14 m. W Pilsen r bank river Misa. It is walled, has three gates, two churches, silk-works, an iron, paper, and other mills, and several smelting-furnaces. Argentiferous lead is extensively worked in the neighbourhood. Mies, in 1487 31 000 Hungarians defeated a German army of 80 000.

MIESBACH, a market to Bavaria, cap dist, 16 m. S S W Munich with a church, chapel castle, hospital, and manufactures of salt-petre and pitch. Pop. 1400 Area of dist., 812 sq. m. Pop. 18,618.

MIETAU a tn. Russia. See MITAU

MIFLESSY a vil and com. France dep. Haute Savoie, prov Faucigny in a narrow valley with an ancient Gothic church. Pop. 2333

MIEZZA, a tn Spain, prov and about 64 m from Salamanca. It has ill built houses, irregular dirty streets, a townhouse church, primary school, and several oil and flour mills. Pop. 1061

MIGHARINA, a vil. Naples prov Calabria-Ultra 11 dist. and about 7 m W N W Catanzaro. Pop. 1600

MIGLIORICO a tn Naples, prov Basilicata, dist. and about 9 m S W Matera. Pop. 3745.

MIGNANEGO a vil. and com Italy Piedmont dir Genoa, 2 m from San Quirico, near the Rosta. It has a church and a train in corn, chestnuts, potatoes, and dairy produce. Pop. 2589

MIGUEL-LEZAR, a vil Spain, New Castile, prov Toledo, 65 m S E Madrid It has a townhouse, two endowed schools, a church, and some handloom weaving agriculture, and trade. Pop. 2200

MIGUEL (San) and Azores. See MICHAEL (St.)

MIGUEL (San) a gulf and harbour, New Granada, isthmus of Darien. The gulf forms an indentation of the Bay of Panama, E. side about lat. 8° 10' N lon. 78° 20' W

—The harbour is an inlet in the gulf, interspersed with a few islets, having an entrance about 6 m. wide, and extending about 8 m. inland, with soundings in 15 to 8 fathoms. Its communication, at its lower part, with Darien harbour through Boca Grande and Boca Chica passages, on either side a considerable island, the former encumbered with rocks, but the latter with 6 fathoms water. Darien harbour has a depth of 14 to 9 fathoms at low water, is about 16 m. long, by 6 m. broad, and completely sheltered. It receives the rivers Darien or Grande, Integstad, and Savanna, the last navigable for about 7 m. inland, and the tide rises to within the latter, about 11 m. further. These two harbours have been pointed out as furnishing an eligible termination to a tidal inter-oceanic canal between the Atlantic and Pacific, proposed to be cut from Caledonia Bay, to the Caribbean

See, a distance, to the Lara, where the tide ceases to affect it, of only 80 m.—(The Letters of Darwin in 1852 by Lionel Gishborne, London, 1858.)

MIGUEL (San), a vil Bolivia, prov Chuquisaca, on a granite height, 160 m N E. Santa-Cruz-de-la-Sierra. Several of its houses are in a dilapidated state but it has a large and handsome church, with a richly decorated altar, and a good organ. Pop. about 100.

MIGUEL (São), two places Portugal.—1, (de Ache) A tn. and par prov Beira-Baixa, in E. Castello Branco. Pop. 986.—2, (do Outeiro) A tn. and par prov Baixa-Alta, com Tondello, 9 m W S W Viseu. Pop. 1470.

MIGUEL (São) several places, Brazil.—1, A tn., prov and 20 m S S W Alagoas on a river of same name with a church, and a trade in tobacco and cotton, sent to Bahia or Maceio. Pop. dist. 2000.—The river, after passing the town, traverses a lake, on the shore of which is the village of Santa Anna, and falls into the ocean: total course, 56 m. Its mouth is barred, but small boats ascend to Santa Anna, and convey cargoes of cotton, sugar and timber, to be iron shipp'd into large vessels outside the bar.—2, A tn. prov Santa Catharina, in a bay of same name, 15 m N W Deserto. It has a church, a primary school, numerous sugar-works, a pottery for making glazed earthenware, and a tannery. The bay affords good anchorage, and shelter from the W wind in vessels of all sizes. Pop. dist. 5000.—3, A tn., prov and 80 m N Parahiba, with a church and a school in the distant excellent cotton in growth. Pop. 1000.—4, (de Pernambuco) A vil and par prov Minas-Geraes dist. and S. S. Cabota, on both sides of the Pernambuco, here crossed by a wooden bridge. It is built in the form of an amphitheatre, and presents a very pleasing appearance all the houses being provided with gardens. It has four churches. Millet and barlots are grown, and large herds of swine reared in the district. Pop. 10,949.

MIGUELITURIA, a tn Spain, New Castle, prov and 2 m S. Ciudad Real. Its houses are in general low but the streets are broad, paved and cheerful. In the main square stand the townhouse and prison. It has two primary schools, a church and four hermitages one of which, Santo Cristo de la Misericordia, is remarkable for the richness and elegance of its architecture. Agriculture and cat-le-rearing the manufacture of brandy leather brooks and tins coarse woollens, worsted stockings and oil-expressing, are the chief occupations. 1 op. 653.

MIKALITZGALVA, or MICHELDOXY a vil Austria. Transylvania, co. Nieder-Wessnburg, at the confluence of the Kokal with the Maros inhabited by Walachians. P. 118.

MIKALY, numerous places Hungary particularly.—1, (de Tisza) A vil, Haher Thies, dist. Jazygia, at the confluence of the Jazga with the Tisza, with a parish church, Pop. 1890.—2, (Nagy) A market vil. Haher Thies, co. and 87 m S W Zemplin, on the Latorca, here crossed by a bridge with an ancient church, a synagogue, a chateau, and two flour-mills. Pop. 2118.—3, (Honost-Szent) A market in, co. Eisenburg, 85 m S S W Oedenburg with a large cattle-market. Pop. 1784.—4, (O-Szent) A vil co. Temea, on the Baga Canal, E N E Temesvár. Pop. 2201.—5, A market in Thaher Danube, co. and 28 m S S W Oedenburg, near the Raab, with a church and a castle. Pop. 1500.—6, (Szent) A vil, Thaher Thies, co. Banabol in a fertile dist., about 12 m from Tokay with a Protestant church, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 4692.—7, (Szent) Transylvania. See CHENKATZAL.—8, (Pala) A vil, co. Banabol, 6 m from Fialkov, with a Protestant church. Pop. 2107.

MIHIEL (St.), a tn. France, dep. Meuse, in a valley on the Meuse, 21 m N E. Bar-le-Duc, with several ancient churches, manufactures of linen, leather and sailery, a cotton-mill, and some trade in corn, wool, and wine. Pop. 4876.

MIHILA, a tn. Saxo-Wesmar, circle and 8 m N Eisenach, 7 bank Werra. It has a church, and manufactures of velvet. Pop. 1294.

MIHOLAZO, or MICHOCENTRO, a market in Austria, Solovozia, co. Yaros, on the Drave, here crossed by a ferry 12 m from Slikos. It has a R. Catholic church. Pop. 2180.

MILAS, a river, Asiatic Russia, which rises on the E. slope of the Ural mountains, in gov Orenburg, flows E N E. past Tshelishinsk, crosses gov Perm and, after a course of about 290 m, joins r. bank Irt, 80 m E. Shadrinsk.

MILAJERES a river Spain, which rises in prov Teruel, at the foot of the sierra Javalambre and flows S E. to the Mediterranean, across prov Castellon de la Plana; total course, about 70 m. Affluents, Vailona, Mora, &c.

MILAS, a tn Spain, Andalusia prov and 14 m S S W Malaga, at the foot of sierra Blanca, about 4 m from the Mediterranean. It has a townhouse, a prison five schools, a church, four hermitages, and nine manufactures of brown, and one of white paper; no mill and 16 flour mills. P. 4083.

MILDEBCHT or KRONENBURG a vil Holland, prov and 16 m N W Utrecht at a scattered place with two churches, a school, and a neat townhall. Inhabitants engaged chiefly in dairy farming. Pop. 1335.

MILIRITICH a tn Russia, gov and 73 m N W Khar-kov with a church, and three annual fairs, at which large quantities of woollen and silk goods are sold. Pop. 7000.

MIKESZARZA, or FARMANOWA a vil Austria Transylvania, co. Kolosberg 20 m N N E. Hermannstadt, with two churches. Pop. 1867.

MIKHAILOW a tn Russia, gov and 32 m S W Nis san, cap. dist. on both sides of the Prone. It has 11 churches, inhabitants engaged in agriculture and general trade. 1 op. (1849) 8891.—The district has good arable and meadow land, yielding large quantities of corn, flax, hemp, and hops, and rearing great numbers of cattle for the Moscow market.

MIKHAILOWKA, several towns, Russia, particularly.—1, Gov and 54 m N W Koursk, on the Svesa. It has three churches, manufactures of linen yarn, and leather several distilleries, dye-works, and oil mills, and carries on a considerable trade in corn, wood, lamp leather and sheepskins. 1 op. 6000.—2, Gov and 70 m S L. Ekaterinow 1 bank Moskowa. Pop. 8581.

MIKHALI LIZA, a tn Asia Minor. See MUTALITICH.

MIKLOS numerous places Hungary particularly.—1, (Szent) A market tn. Haher Danube, co. Luptan with a church. Pop. 1708.—2, (Szent) A vil, co. Stuhlweissenburg on the Sarus 12 m from Földvár with a church. 1 op. 1187.—3, (Jar-Szent) A vil, Haher Danube, co. and 32 m N Eisenburg on the Maros, with a church and a flour and a saw-mill. Pop. 2137.—4, (Szent-Szent) A market in Thaher Danube, co. and 22 m S S W Oedenburg, above the Raab, with a church and a flour-mill. A little N of the town is the royal hunting seat, called Mon Bijoux. Pop. 1748.—5, (Kis Szent) a vil Thaher Thies, co. Temea, 80 m W S W Arad, with a church, and a hospital. Pop. 1472.—6, (Kis-Szent) A market in Haher Danube Little Kunszent, 86 m S. Pesth. It has a R. Catholic, and a Calvinistic church. Pop. 4780.—7, (Leath Szent) A vil Thaher Danube, co. Oedenburg, near the Ladita. Pop. 1290.—8, (Nagy Szent) A market tn. Thaher Danube, co. Torontal, 25 m W S W Arad on the Maros. It contains a R. Catholic and a Greek non-united parish church and a practice-economical industrial school. Pop. 1422.—9, (Leath-Szent) A vil, Thaher Danube, co. and 6 m S Wieselburg with a church and a castle. Pop. 1222.—10, (Szent-Szent) A vil co. and 4 m S Pesth on an island formed by the left arm of the Danube. It has a church. 1 op. 1808.—11, (Szent-Szent) A vil Thaher Thies, co. and 50 m N E E. Temesvár. Pop. 2086.—12, (Trok-Szent) A market tn. co. Hava, 56 m S W Debrézen with a primary school. The district is fertile, and yields good crops of corn, but the inhabitants are chiefly employed in rearing horses and cattle, and in fishing. Pop. 9101.

MIKLOSFALU, a vil Hungary, Thaher Danube co. Wieselburg, with a church, and a Lutheran chapel. P. 1240.

MIKOLA a vil Hungary, Thaher Thies, co. Szathmar 4 m from Szathmar-Neszedi, with a church, and a baking establishment. Pop. 1113.

MIKULINICE, a tn Austria, Galicia, circle and 12 m S Ternopol, on the Seret. It has a church, sulphur baths and an old castle, in which a factory for weaving fine linen has been established. The trade is considerable, consisting in fat cattle wax honey, hemp and bempen goods, and linen and woollen cloth. Pop. 2000.

MILAGRO [anc. Ayrmol], a tn Spain, prov Navarra, on a height, on the Aragon, 40 m S S by W Pamplona. It has three squares, a church, courthouse with prison, hospital, and two primary schools; brick and tile works, and lime and plaster kilns. Pop. 1059.

MILAN a tn. Algeria, prov. and 31 m. NW Constantine, on the ancient Roman road between that city and Algiers, and surrounded by gardens filled with the finest fruits and flowers. Pop. about 4000.

MILAN (Italian Milano) German, Mailand, Latin, Mediolanum, a city kingd. of Italy cap. gov. of same name, and of the whole Lombardic-venetian kingdom, in a beautiful and fertile plain, between the Adia and Ticino, which feed several canals one of which enclosing a considerable portion of the interior of the city, divides it into two unequal parts, while other three on the outside are available both for irri-

Among the public edifices of Milan, the first place belongs to the Duomo or cathedral, a vast and magnificent structure, inferior in magnificence to St. Peter's at Rome, but, in some respects, not unworthy its rival. It is composed throughout of white marble, and, though exhibiting a compromise in congruous mixture of styles, in which the ancient Gothic is one of the most impressive ecclesiastical edifices in the world. The Duomo, in its present form, was commenced in 1387, and has ever since been advancing to completion, without having yet reached it.

Its form is that of a Latin cross, divided into five naves, terminated by an octagonal apse and supported by 52 octagonal pilasters of uniform size except four, which, having to bear the noble cupola, are larger. Around the exterior are 4500 niches of which above 3000 are already occupied by statues, in the interior everything is of the most imposing and gorgeous description and the eye wanders almost overpowered by the number of grand and beautiful objects which claim its attention. Among the other remarkable edifices are the church of Sant' Ambrogio, founded by St. Ambrose in 387 and though completely repaired in 1681, still retaining so much of its original form and containing so many ancient epitaphs, and other relics of the ancient building imbedded in its walls, as to form a rich museum of early Christian antiquities the church of Sant' Felice, with an ancient campanile and interesting monuments, the church of San Lorenzo, terminating in a cupola, flanked by four ancient towers the church of Santa Maria delle Grazie, with a cupola and sacristy by Bramante, and the celebrated Last Supper by Leonardo da Vinci, unhappily so placed as scarcely to be recognized the church of Santa Maria della Passione, a magnificent edifice, with excellent paintings, and a magnificent museum,

- | | | | |
|-----------------------------|-----------------------------|------------------------|------------------------|
| 1. Duomo Cathedral | 4. Ambrogio | 8. Porta Vercelli | 12. Porta Corsica |
| 2. Basilica of San Pietro | 5. Basilica of San Pietro | 9. Porta Ticinese | 13. Porta Garibaldi |
| 3. Basilica of San Ambrogio | 6. Basilica of San Ambrogio | 10. Porta S. Stefano | 14. Porta Cavour |
| 7. Basilica of San Felice | 11. Basilica of San Felice | 15. Porta S. Vittorino | 16. Porta S. Vittorino |
| | | 17. Porta S. Vittorino | 18. Porta S. Vittorino |

gation and traffic. By railway, it is connected with Como, and E. with Treviglio, the latter part of an unobstructed line to Verona and Venice. The town is built in the form of an irregular polygon the perimeter of which exceeds 6 m., and is surrounded by walls, which were once flanked with large and massive bastions. These, with a single exception, have been removed and the space occupied by them and the eastern ramparts has been converted into pleasant walks, shaded by magnificent chestnut-trees. Though one of the most ancient towns in Lombardy it has been so often partially destroyed and rebuilt, that few antiquities remain, and, in consequence of the numerous changes and improvements of recent years, cannot be so soon altogether modernized. It is entered by 11 gates, several of which are magnificent. The leading streets, proceeding from these gates, are tolerably wide, well paved, provided with footpaths, and lighted with gas, the lateral streets, though, for the most part, slim, are less commodious and, in many places, become narrow and twisting. The houses are built, for the most part, of brick, and covered with tiles, but have often a handsome and showy exterior. The finest streets are the Corso di Porta Romana, Corso di Porta Nuova, and Corso di Porta S. Vittorino. All of these, more especially the last, have ranges of elegant mansions, which would be ornaments to any capital in Europe. The squares are scarcely on a scale of equal magnificence. The largest, called the Piazza d'Armi, occupies an immense space, obtained by the demolition of the citadel and its outworks. Part of it has been converted into an amphitheatre, 800 ft. long, by 400 ft. broad, much used in summer for races and shows, and, though capable of containing 30,000 spectators, not unfrequently crowded.

leum, regarded as one of the best works of the sculptor Andrea Fusina, the church of San Paolo, an elegant structure, in the form of a rotunda surmounted by a fine dome, and remarkable for the rich and almost overloaded ornaments of its facade the church of San Carlo Borromeo, a magnificent modern basilica the Palazzo Reale or La Corte, a large and handsome edifice, occupied by the viceroy adorned with numerous frescoes, and surrounded by a lofty tower the archiepiscopal palace, adjoining the cathedral and connected with it by a kind of tunnel, the Palazzo in Governo, embellished with a modern facade, and containing a vast court lined with porticoes supported by pillars, the Palazzo del Marmo now used as a custom-house and treasury, the Broletto of Palazzo Municipale less remarkable for its architecture than for the historical associations connected with it, and containing two large courts, which are used as a corn market, the Palazzo della Ragione or de' Turchini, a large square building, standing on open arches situated in the centre of the Piazza dei Mercanti, and partly used as a register office the Piazza dei Mercanti during the same years, more especially the Loggia degli Oculi, and the Palazzo della Città or townhall, the Palazzo di Solenne Lettere e Arte, with the Pinacoteca of the Brera, containing an ill arranged, but very valuable collection of paintings, and several fine busts and statues, the Biblioteca Ambrosiana, the earliest, and still one of the most valuable public libraries in Europe, the Palazzo di Giustizia, and de' Tribunali the former for the criminal court, and the latter for the ordinary courts of justice, the royal mint or Stamparia Reale, the general police-office, the barracks, forming a long and elegant range of buildings, capable of holding 4000 men; the prisons, one of which is regarbed as a model of its kind, the house of correction at Porta Nuova, and a great number of theatres, among which that called Della Scala takes precedence, accommodating 4000 spectators, and said to be the largest known, not excepting even the San Carlo of Naples.

Among the literary and educational establishments in addition to the Palazzo di S. Stefano, the Pinacoteca, and Ambrosian Library already mentioned, are an astronomical school, and an optical and meteorological school, each with an observatory attached the imperial college of Porta Nuova, the college Longone, two lycæums, with botanical garden and play most salubrious three gymnasia, an archiepiscopal seminary, a deaf and dumb institute, a school of practical chemistry, polytechnum, obstetric, veterinary orphan, military, nautical, drawing and numerous other schools, male and female. The principal benevolent endowments are the Ospedale Maggiore, richly endowed, and occupying a vast range of buildings in the Gothic style, with a facade adorned by five bas-reliefs, and a large square court enclosed by porticoes; the Ospedale di Santa Caterina, Ospedale dei Fate-bene Fratelli, Ospedale dei Santi della Monte di Pietà, the Infant house of refuge, the House of Incurables (the Casa degli Incurabili), the penitentiary and house of industry (Casa di Ricovero e di Istruzione) the military, orphan, and several foundling hospitals.

MILAN THE CATHEDRAL from the Piazza del Duomo.
From Chamber Map of the Milanese.

Milan notwithstanding its position and the great extent of its population, has few manufactures. The most important are tobacco, carried on in a large Government factory silks, cottons, lace, carpets, hats, earthenware, jewellery, and articles in gold and silver. The spinning and throwing of silk employ a large number of hands and furnish the staple article of trade. The other principal articles are corn, rice, and cheese. The occasional visits of the emperor, and the constant residence of a viceroy gave to Milan many of the appendages of a court and independent capital. It is also the seat of an archbishop, the seat of courts of primary resort, criminal and mercantile courts, and a court of appeal for all Lombardy. Its foundation is attributed to the Insubrian Gauls, but the first distinct notice of it occurs a.d. 221, when it was subdued by the Romans under whom it acquired so much importance, that in the decline of the empire, attributed to Constantine the Great, it ranks as the second city of Italy. In the middle of the fifth century it was sacked by the Huns, under Attila, and again in the following century by the Goths. Greater horrors yet awaited it; and the Goths, who had been driven out by Belisarius, having regained possession by the aid of the Burgundians, gave it up to the flames and put almost all its inhabitants to the sword. Having been rebuilt, it again rose to splendour and became very flourishing under the Lombards and Charlemagne. Arrogance grew with its prosperity and it lorded it so haughtily over the neighbouring towns and republics, that in 1158 when the emperor Frederick I. whose supremacy it refused to acknowledge, had resolved to take summary vengeance, the inhabitants of Parma, Cremona, Lodi, Como, and Novara, eagerly hastened to the task, and razed it to the ground. The result of this practice produced a reaction, and in 1167 the famous Lombard League was formed at Pavia, and among other important results, succeeded in bringing back the Milanese; and the city again rebuilt, became even more populous and industrial than it had ever been before. It long continued, however to be torn by internal factions, headed by the leading nobility, among whom the Visconti at last gained the ascendancy, and ruled it from 1395 to 1447. They were succeeded by the Sforza, whose last duke died in 1535. The Spanish rule now commenced, and lasted for 170 years, but ultimately, after long wars, in which all the great European powers were engaged, the peace of Utrecht was concluded in 1711, and gave the duchy of Milan to Austria. Her possession was interrupted by the victories of Napoleon, but restored at his downfall and Milan which the French had made the capital of their kingdom of Italy was afterwards the cap. of that part of it over which the Austrian sway extended. Among the natives of Milan are Pope Alexander II, Urban III, Celestine IV, Pius IV and Gregory XIV the jurist Alciato, the geometer Cardan, Baccaria, author of the celebrated work on Crimes and Punishments, Agnesi, a lady, celebrated for her scientific attainments, and Alessandro Manzoni, the first living novelist of Italy. Pop city (1848) 166,826, city and suburbs, 189,880.—The town is bounded N by Como, W by the Ticino, separating it from the Sardinian States, E by Lodi and Parma, and S by the Adda separating it from Bergamo. In the N, the surface, though not properly mountainous has some lofty hills which merge into undulating plains. Towards the Adda and Ticino these plains become flat, low and marshy, but the greater part of the surface is of a fertility which can scarcely be surpassed. Area, 768 sq. m. Pop 400,197.

MILANES an ancient division in the N of Italy which was bounded N by Switzerland, E the republic of Venice and the duchy of Mantua, S the Po, which separated it from the duchy of Parma, and W Piedmont. The W portion of it is now included in the Sardinian States; and the portion E of the Ticino, by far the larger of the two, in Austrian Italy. Milan was its capital.

MILK(R)E (Pork), a small town in par England co. Somerset, 86 m. S. Bristol with a church, chapel for Independents and Wesleyans, a guildhall, with a handsome doorway several schools, and two libraries, some leather-dressing and glove-making. It was formerly a par. bur. but was disfranchised by the Reform Act. Area of par 9277 ac. P 1744.

MILBOURN (St Andrew), par Eng Dorset 1071 ac. Pop 82.

MILDI N par Eng Suffolk, 1339 ac. 10p 165.

MILDLAU a vi Saxony circle Zurich had Wolkstein with a church and numerous oil and other mills. Pop 3072.

MILDENHALL, par Eng Wilts 4025 ac. P 480.

MILDENHALL, a market town and par England, co. Suffolk, on the Lark a tributary of the Ouse and the Eastern Counties Railway 11 m N W Bury St Edmunds. It consists of a principal and several minor streets, and has a large and handsome church with a lofty tower a fine portal, a richly-carved wooden ceiling and several ancient monuments and three dissenting places of worship a spinning-mill for raw silk, and a trade in grain. Area of par, 13,710 ac. P 4874.

MILHAM par Eng Norfolk, 2851 ac. Pop 581.

MILETTI a tn Bohemia, circle Budechow, 57 m N E Prague, on the Bistritz, with a castle, and church. P 1370.

MILETO, a tn Naples, prov Calabria Ultra II, 112 m. and about 4 m S W Monteleone. It is well built in the style of a bishop, and has a fine episcopal palace. It suffered much from the great earthquake of 1783. Pop 1460.

MILETUS, a ruined city Asia Turkey, near Andolia, 90 m. S.W. Ephesus, near the mouth of the Meander, formerly especially celebrated for its magnitude, its extensive commerce, and the numerous colonies which it sent out. The remains of a vast theatre of a Christian church formed out of a Greek temple of the Corinthian order and of a fine mosque, built of the ruins of Christian churches, still exist. An aqueduct also may be traced, and the site of several temples.
The modern village contains but a few huts, and not more than 50 inhabitants.

MILFORD, a vil U States, Delaware, 70 m S Philadelphia, N side Mispott creek. It has two academies and six schools, two tanneries, and numerous mills. Pop. 2856.
MILFORD, par Eng. Hants., 6286 ac. Pop. 1782.

MILFORD, a vil England, co and 6 m. N Derby with an established church, various dissenting chapels, several schools, a mechanics institute, manufactures of cotton, bleaching works, and an iron foundry. Pop. 895.

MILFORD, a seaport in Wales, co. and 6 m. N W
Pembroke, beautifully situated on the N shore of the haven of same name. It is of very recent origin and consists of three streets parallel to the shore and intersected by others at right angles. It is regularly and substantially built of stone, is defended by two batteries on the opposite sides of the haven, and has an elegant Episcopal chapel, with a lofty embellished tower and a richly-gilded roof, places of worship for Baptists, Friends, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists, a custom-house, quarantine establishment, spacious hotel and good market buildings. The town, situated opposite the Men of War Roads, the finest anchorage in that part of the haven derives its chief importance from the resort of shipping. Its principal business is shipbuilding which is still carried on to some extent, notwithstanding the removal of the royal dock yard, at which several ships of the line were built. The trade is chiefly in timber imported from America.
Limestone, and culm sent southeast and anthracite for drying salt sent in considerable quantities to London and other ports on the English and Bristol channels. The system of the coast are famous for their quality and the fishery of them is very active. Pop. 2837.—MILFORD HAVEN, one of the safest, deepest and most capacious in the kingdom forms a deep indentation in the S.W. coast of Pembroke, stretching about 10 m from E. to W. with a breadth of from 1 m. to 2 m and branching off into numerous bays, creeks, and roads. Owing to the strength and height of the tides, which in springs rise from 28 ft. to 30 ft. the largest vessels can enter or put to sea in any winds, more expeditiously than from any other large harbour in Great Britain. These advantages early marked out Milford Haven as an important naval depot, and as already mentioned a royal dock-yard was actually founded but the distance of the haven from the Channel which must always be the great naval thoroughfare, is such a serious disadvantage that the Channel ports still continue to maintain the preference.

MILIANAH [anc. Mimane] a to Algeria, prov and 68 m. S W Algiers on a mountain slope 8000 ft. above sea level. The streets are narrow and crooked, houses of two stories, built of mud and brick, and whitewashed. It has 23 mosques, 5 of which are of considerable size a limekiln a pottery and various kinds of manufactures. Roman remains are still occasionally met with here. In 1840, it was sued by the French to have been abandoned and delivered to the flames. It now contains a French garrison. Pop.
(1840) 2340 of whom 1109 are Europeans.

MILILLI or MILLILLA, a to Sicily, prov and 13 m.
N W Syracuse, r bank Cassara. A little to the S.W. are some traces of the ancient Hybla. Pop. 2500.

MILIS a vil Ital Sardina, div Cagliari, prov Bonchii, 5 m. N Oristano. It has several churches, and a trade in lemon-wood, oranges, and other fruit. Pop. 1450.

MILITARY-GRENADE, or MILITARY FRONTIER, a belt of country Austria, Germany stretching along the frontier of Turkey from the Adriatic Sea, and Delmas to Transylvania and bounded N by Croatia, Slavonia, Hungary, and Transylvania and S by Bosnia, Herzegovina, and 9928 sq m. in Pop. about 100,000. This military frontier, originally formed about the middle of the 16th century, by the Emperor Ferdinand I, has subsequently undergone repeated modifications, and now consists of three principal divisions—the Croatian frontier subdivided into those of Karlsfeld, Banat, and Warandja; the Slavonian-Serbian frontier, and the Banat frontier. The inhabitants are both cultivators of the soil and soldiers and the magistratures are officers of different grades. The properties are hereditary military fiefs, which the inhabitants hold from the state under different conditions of military services one of which is maintaining a permanent military cordon against Turkey, another duty is that of guarding against the incursions of neighboring wars. In time of peace, the force of the military frontiers is about 45,000 strong. The inhabitants are divided into 14 regiments of infantry 1 of horse, and 2 battalions of oxmen.

MILITELLO two places Sicily:—1, A to, prov and 21 m. S.W. Catania on the top of a rugged height, in a healthy district. Pop. 8000.—2, A to, prov and 49 m.
W S W Messina, in a valley on a small stream not far from its mouth, on the N coast. Pop. 2500.

MILITICIS (Maurum and Rara) two nearly-contiguous vills Hungary, Higher Danube cu Ban, about 14 m. from Zombor on the morass Mosonensis. They have a Catholic church, and a trade in wine and agricultural produce. Excellent melons are grown in the vicinity. Pop. Nemeth-Militicis, 3668 Batz-Militicis, 3662.

MILITTSCH a to Prussia, gov and 31 m. N.E. Breslau, chief place circle, on the Harzsch. It has a castle, three churches, a synagogue, a library hospital, manufactures of woolens, linen, and leather and several mills. Pop. 2707.

—The country is flat, well wooded and well watered, but not very fertile. Area, 278 sq m. Pop. 50,187.

MILLAN a to, Co. Cork, Ireland. It has a Catholic church, prov and 24 m. S.W. Logrobo 1 bank Cardigan. It is well and regularly built, has a church, a grammar school, primary school, and manufactures of ordinary linen several flour-mills, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1771.

MILLAS a to France, dep. Pyrénées-Orientales, 10 m.
W Perpignan, with a brandy-distillery, a breeding-stud and some trade in corn, barlees, cattle, brandy agricultural implements, &c. Pop. 1997.

MILLAU [Latin Mediomagus] a to France dep. Aveyron, in a rich valley near the confluence of the Dordogne with the Tarn 31 m. S.E. Rodez. It is surrounded by steep rocks, has one wide street and a large square, but most of the other streets are very confined though in general straight and lined with well built houses. It has manufactures of woollen goods, leather, leather gloves, and articles in chamois several silk mills, and a trade in wool, raw and spun, leather, wood, for carpentry and shipbuilding cheese of Roquefort, wine, almonds cattle, &c. Millau possesses courts of first resort and commerce, a chamber of commerce, agricultural society and communal college. It was long one of the strongholds of the Protestants. Pop. 8138.

MILLBROOK, two pars. England:—1, Bedford 1450 ac.
Pop. 600.—2, Hants 9646 ac. Pop. 6191.

MILLEDDGE VILLAGE, a to U States, cap Georgia, 145 m. N.W. Savannah lat 33° 7' N lon 83° 20' W, r bank Oconee, here crossed by a bridge at the junction of Fishing Creek and at the head of steam boat navigation. It is regularly laid-out, the principal streets being parallel with the river and crossed by others at right angles and has three spacious squares, a handsome schoolhouse, in the Gothic style, state-arsenal, market-house, penitentiary three churches, and an academy. Pop. (1850), 4095.

MILIBIMO a to Italy, Piedmont, div Genoa, prov and 14 m. W N W Savona r bank W Bormida, here crossed by a bridge. It is built in the form of a parallelogram, is walled, has a spacious street, the houses of which are lined by arcades an ancient parish church small hospital and a trade in wine chestnuts, silk, and charcoal. Pop. 1803.

MILLINGTON, par Eng. York (E. Riding) 2780 ac.
Pop. 259.

MILLTOM par Eng. Cumberland 98,472 ac. P. 2115.
MILLPORT a watering-place, Scotland, beautifully situated on the S.E. side of Isl. Cumbry, Firth of Clyde, with a handsome parish church, surmounted by a tower, a Scottish Episcopal church and college, forming an elegant range of buildings, with a pyramidal spire, and Free and Independent churches. It presents a very pleasing and striking appearance from the water, and is much resorted to by the citizens of Glasgow for bathing and summer quarters. P. 817.

MILLSTADT a vil. Austria, Tyrol, gov. Laybach, circle and 18 m. N W Villach, N shore of lake of same name. It has an old Benedictine abbey. Pop. 500.—The lake, about 9 m. long, by 2 m. broad, lies among beautiful scenery flanked by wooded hills rising from the shore and terminating in the distance in lofty mountains.

MILLSTREET, a market tn. Ireland, co. and 27 m. N W Cork; with an established church, a R. Catholic chapel, a dispensary, a convent school for girls, and a national school for boys. Inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture. Pop. 1501.—(Local Correspondent.)

MILTOWN, a small market in Ireland, co. Kerry 8½ m. S. Tralee, near the Mauna, navigable for ships of 100 tons to within a mile of the town. It has a neat church a handsome R. Catholic chapel, and three schools. Pop. (agglutinated) 797.—(Local Correspondent.)

MILTOWN, a vil. Ireland co. and 2½ m. S. Dublin on the Dodder with an established church, R. Catholic chapel, Wesleyan meeting-house and school. Pop. 756.

MILTOWN MALRAU, a tn. Ireland, co. Clare, 18 m. W Ennis, near a bay of the same name, with a parish church, R. Catholic chapel and a large hotel during the bathing season it is much frequented. Pop. 1453.

MILLY, several places France, particularly —1, [Latin, Miliosenses] a tn. dep. Seine-et-Oise, on the Ecole, 30 m. S S E Paris with a large square, spacious market-hall, hospital, a church and a trade in grain. Pop. 3078.—2, A. m. and com. dep. Oise, on the Little Tournai, about 8 m. N N W Beauvais. It was once strongly fortified, and stood several sieges, but only vestiges of one of the gates now remain. It has manufactures of woollen serge, and cloths, and wool and hemp mills. Pop. 1040.

MILNA a seaport in Austria Dalmatia, circle and 13 m. S. Spalato W coast in Dalmatia, on a large bay, which forms an excellent natural harbour. It has building-docks, at which a number of vessels are constructed. Pop. 3768.

MILNATHORPE, a vil. Scotland co. and 1 m. N Ktn. It is of neat appearance, consisting of five good streets and has, besides the parish church on a height at a short distance from the place, a Free and a L. Presbyterian church, several schools, a subscription library manufactures chiefly of tartan shawls, plaids, and Glasgow cotton goods and an important corn-market. Pop. 1805.

MILNGAVIE [generally pronounced Milgavie] a vil. Scotland, co. Berling, on the Alexander 6 m. N N W Glasgow. It is tolerably well built, and has a L. Presbyterian church, a subscription school and subscription library, a cotton factory, extensive calico-printing and bleaching establishments, and several corn-mills. Pop. 1483.

MILNTHORPE, a market in England, co. Westmoreland, on V bank Beha, which a little below, falls into the estuary of the Kna, and on the Preston, Lancaster and Carlisle railway, 7 m. S. by W Kendal. It consists of four short but tolerably well built streets, and has a parish church, in the centre of the town, with a spire-towered tower, a Scottish episcopal chapel a national and two other schools, a flax mill, a ropery, and quarries of limestone and marble. Pop. 1634.

MILLO, or MILON [anc. Meloe Greek, Melae] an isl. Grecian Archipelago, belonging to Greece, S.E. the gulf of Egina in its S.W. part is Mount St. Elias, 2088 ft. high, in lat. 36° 40' N lon. 24° 38' 50' E, (n) about 14 m. N.E. to S.W., and 1 to about 4 m. broad. It is mountainous, of volcanic formation, has hot mineral springs, and ridges of sulphur and steam its N coast is indented by a deep bay which forms a safe and excellent natural harbour, about 14 m. N W to S.E. by 1 m. to S.W. broad, with deep water. The island was once famous for its riches, fertility, and population but, since the plague committed such ravages in it a century ago, it has gradually declined. The staple produce is cotton, which is extensively cultivated by the women. A sufficiency of corn is raised to furnish a supply to some of the neighbouring islands. Milo, the capital of the island, stands upon a plain, about 2 m. from the coast, at the bottom of the harbour, towards the S.E., and is now nearly in ruins, the narrow streets being almost choked up with the material of fallen houses. The inhabitants are either fishermen or sailors, and are reported the best pilots in the archipelago.—AWR-MILO, an isl. about 2 m. long by 1½ m. broad, lies 6 m. N W; highest peak, 2380 ft. high shores mostly precipitous.

1 or II

MILOSLAW a tn. Prussia, prov. and 80 m. S E Posen with a church, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and several tanneries. Pop. 1418.

MILSON par Eng. Salop, 1035 ac. Pop. 170.

MILSTEAD, par Eng. Kent 1218 ac. Pop. 211.

MILSTON par Eng. Wils 2243 ac. Pop. 133.

MILTEMBERG, a tn. Bavaria, circle Swabia, cap. dist. at the junction of the Maden with the Main 30 m. W B W Würzburg. It is well built, and has two churches, a chapel a Franciscan convent, a deaf and dumb institution, an ordinary and an orphan hospital building docks, several mills and carries on an extensive general and transit trade. Pop. 3050. Area of dist., 83 sq. ac. m. Pop. 8694.

MILTON several par. England.—1 Berks 1481 ac. P. 449.—2, Cambridge 1878 ac. P. 544.—3 Northampton 1190 ac. P. 627.—4 (Abbot) Devon 6617 ac. P. 1248.—5 (Bishop) Bedford 1407 ac. P. 878.—6 (Dunstable) Somerset; 1231 ac. P. 107.—7 (Dunstable) Devon 4252 ac. P. 784.—8 (Exeter) Bedford 2070 ac. P. 445.—9 (West Gloucestershire) Kent; 868 ac. P. 997.—10 (Green), Oxford 4403 ac. P. 754.—11 (Exeter) Bucks; 1643 ac. P. 819.—12 (Lichfield) Wils, 8603 ac. P. 677.—13, (Leeds), Oxford. P. 418.—14, (South) Devon 1506 ac. P. 414.

MILTON a vil. and par. England co. and 15 m. S.E. Hants; with a church, Baptist chapel and school. Area of par. 6418 ac. Pop. (agglutinated) 1811.

MILTON or HANSMAN, a small vil. Scotland, co. Stirling 7 m. N W Falkirk, on the Carron here crossed by a handsome bridge, leading to the village of Denny, inhabitants chiefly engaged in calico-printing. Pop. 761.

MILTON AWAIS, a tn. and par. England co. Dorset, 10½ m. N by W Wareham, with a church and school a brewery long celebrated for the quality of its beer and, near it, Milton Abbey the seat of the Earl of Portlinton. Area of par. 3420 ac. Pop. 315.

MILTON AVERESBURGH, a market in and par. England, co. Kent on the Milton Creek, which gives a navigable communication with the Swale 3 m. E by S Chatham. The church picturesquely situated about 1 m. from the town is large and handsome, with an embattled tower built of square flints, and there are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Independents and a free court. The trade consists chiefly in agricultural produce, including flour, for which there are numerous corn-mills and ovens, obtained from extensive fisheries, and, from the excellence of their quality in great demand in the London market. Area of par. 2556 ac. Pop. 2407.

MILTSCHIN or MILON a tn. Bohemia, circle Tabor 47 m. S.S.E. Prague, with a church, school, and townhouse. Pop. 1500.

MILTRIN a peak, Atlas Mountains (which see).

MILVERTON a market tn. and par. England, co. Somerset, at the W extremity of Taunton Dean vale, 7 m. W Taunton. It has a spacious parish church, of the time of Henry VII. three dissenting chapels, an old house called the Parsonage, said to have been built by Cardinal Wolsey; a free school, manufactures of hales, and several silk-mills. Area of par. 5475 ac. Pop. 2146.

MILVERTON par Eng. Warwick 1180 ac. P. 1061.

MILWAUKEE, a tn. U. States, Wisconsin, on both banks the Milwaukee, near its entrance into Lake Michigan. It contains a courthouse, a jail and eight churches. Some stone-ware, and great numbers of bricks, of which many colors are made here. Steamboats ply to Buffalo. In 1846, the exports and imports amounted to $213,400. Pop. (1840), 1700; (1850), 10,028.

MILWICH par Eng. Stafford 9937 ac. Pop. 591.

MILZANO a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy gov. Milan, prov. Brescia, 3 hunk Melia; with two churches, and a chapel, corn wine, and silk are raised. Pop. 1369.

MIMCINA, a considerable tn. Morocco, prov. Dar-el-Medinet, 180 m. S.E. Morocco lat. 30° N lon. 5° W. beautifully situated among palms, and inhabited by Barbary, Moorish, agriculturalists, and some Jews.

MIMMS, two par. Eng. —1, (North), Herts; 4925 ac. Pop. 1178.—2, (South) Middlesex 5185 ac. Pop. 265.

MIN or MIN-KIAN a large river, China, prov. Fokien formed by the junction of several considerable streams, which mits Wt Yen Ping about lat. 26° 42' N, lon 118° 15' E whence it flows S.E. to within about 10 m. of its mouth, when it suddenly turns to the N.E., and falls into the N Pacific at Heceta Bay; lat. 26° 0' N lon. 119° 26' E. Total course, about 110 m. and owing to its regular depth, one of the most useful rivers in China.

MINAM, a vii. See MICHAM.

MINARD par. Irel. Kerry 6056 ac. P 799

MINAS-GERAES, the most populous, though not the most extensive prov. Brazil, bounded N. by Pernambuco and Bahia, E. Bahia and Espírito-Santo, S. Rio-de-Janeiro and São-Paulo, S.W. São-Paulo and W. Goyas lat. 14° 50' to 22° 50' S. lon. 41° 50' to 48° 50' W., area, 216,460 sq. m. Much of the surface is mountainous, an extensive chain traversing it N to S., and sending out several ramifications, particularly one towards the W., which takes the name of serra Negra. This chain divides the surface into three distinct basins—the largest of all in the W. and N., belonging entirely to the São Francisco, which rising within it, and draining it both directly and by numerous affluents, flows N. into the province of Pernambuco and Bahia, a second, on the W. side of the chain, draining the whole of the E. side of the province by the Paraíba, Doce, and Jequitinhonha, which carry their waters E. to the Atlantic and the third, and least of all on the S.W., formed by the serra Negra on the N., and the serra Maniqueira on the E., drained by the Grande and its affluents, and belonging, through it, to the basin of the Rio-de-la-Plata. Though the province lies within the tropics, its climate, greatly modified by the elevation of its surface, is both temperate and healthy. The only exceptions are the low tracts which are periodically flooded, and contain extensive swamps and stagnant pools. The original settlers of the province were attracted to it by its great mineral riches—its mines of gold, its diamonds, rubies and other precious stones—and for a long time the agricultural, and other important capabilities of the country were almost entirely overlooked. As population increased, the cultivation of the soil, much of which is of the greatest fertility, attracted attention, and considerable tracts were brought under the regular cultivation of sugar-cane, cotton, and millet. In more recent times, tobacco has become an important crop, and large coffee plantations have been formed. Many of the finer fruits of Europe also, have been introduced and no inconsiderable portion of surface is allotted to the ordinary cereals, so that the agriculture of this province, though still very imperfect, surpasses that of any other province of Brazil. Another important source of wealth is the vast herds of cattle and swine which graze the pastures or feed on the man of the forests. In the forests themselves are more sources of wealth. The timber and dyewoods are of the most valuable descriptions, and numerous varieties of gums, balsams, and medicinal plants, grow spontaneously. The gold and precious stones of the province, though greatly diminished in production are still very important but they by no means constitute the whole of the mineral riches of the country. Numerous other metals and minerals, of the greatest economical importance, have long been known to exist, and some of them have begun to be partially worked. In particular, diamonds from here have been exported to the neighborhood of Ouro-Preto, and furnish many of the large cuttings used in the sugar-houses, and numerous other implements of housework. Among the other minerals, of which good account may yet be made, are silver, platinum, copper, lead, bitumen, limestone, sulphate, alum and saltpetre. Manufactures are beginning to gain some footing in the province. That of iron has been already mentioned and both hats and cottons, though of a coarse description, are made to such an extent as to furnish important branches of mineral trade. The foreign trade, however, is of much more consequence. The principal exports are cattle, swine, beans, cheese, tobacco, coffee, hides, skins and furs of wild animals, dyewoods, molasses, &c., the principal imports are the manufactured tissues and other fabrics of Europe, articles of luxury, wine, and wheaten flour. For administrative purposes, Minas-Geraes is divided into 14 comarcas. It sends 20 deputies to the General Assembly, and appoints 10 senators. The Provincial Assembly, composed of 32 members, holds its sittings in Ouro-Preto. Pop. 300,000.

MINAS-NOVAS (formerly, Vila do Paraíso), a tn. Brazil, prov. Minas-Geraes, on a height between the small rivers

Bom-Successo and Paraíso tributaries of the Arapahú 350 m. N.N.E. Ouro-Preto. The three principal streets, in the form of a Y, are wide and well paved and lined with houses, which, though of earth, make a good appearance. The chief buildings are the townhouse, four churches and three chapels, a Latin and two primary schools, and the Hospital of Mercy. The chief trade is in cotton, which is of excellent quality. Pop. in 1800; alt. 10,000

MINAU, a tn. and river, Persia. See MAMNA.

MINAY, a tn. Spain, New Castle, prov. and 84 m. N.W. Albuera, on a plain, with a parish church, a court house and prison, a boys and a girls school, manufactures of various articles in separate, and a trade in these and in agricultural produce. Pop. 1940.

MINCH (Tung) the channel off N.W. coast, Scotland between the mainland and the island of Lewis it is about 30 m. wide, and, on either side, are numerous lochs or narrow penetrating inlets.—The LITTLE MINCH is the channel between the island of Skye and Long Island, its narrowest part is about 15 m. wide.

MINCHIN HAMPTON, a market tn. and par. England, co. and 12 m. S. by E Gloucester. The town on an eminence E. of the vale of the Severn, has important manufactures of woollen cloth, which form the staple of the whole district. There are three Established churches within the parish, besides four Dissenting chapels. To the W. of the town is a large tract of common, called Amberley, with a remarkable empancipation, supposed to have been made by the Dukes A.D. 873. Area of par. 4685 ac. 1 top 4460.

MINCIO a river, kind of Italy which issues from the S. extremity of Lake Garda at the town of Peschiera flows circuitously S. past Gotsch forms the boundary between Gova Verona and Mantua turning E. expands into a lake, and inundates the ground around Mantua, immediately below which city it again resumes the character of a river, flows S.E., and joins 1 bank Po about 9 m. below Mantua. Its whole course is about 42 m. and, with exception of the port two around Mantua, is navigable throughout for barges of the same size as those which navigate the Po.

MINDANAO or MASAUTANAO (Inhabitants of the lakes) an Isl. Indian Archipelago next to Luzon the largest of the Philippines, of which it is the most S. In shape it somewhat resembles an isosceles triangle, having its E. side for its base, and extending N. to S. from Point Bangan lat. 9° 50' N, lon. 126° 22' E., to Point Mindanao, lat. 5° 52' N lon. 126° 22' E. and W. to E. from Point Allipapan lat. 7° 6' N lon. 127° E., to Cape St. Augustin or Pandagan, lat. 6° 4' N lon. 126° 15' E. From N. to S. it measures 300 m., and W. to E. somewhat less. Hilagan Bay on the N., and Iligan or Illanog Bay on the S., nearly cut it in two. Washed by the Sea of Celebes on the S.W. by that of Mindoro on the N.W. and by the Pacific Ocean on the E., it is separated N. by the Strait of Surigao from the Island Leyte, and S. by that of Basilan from Island Basilan. Its line of coast is marked with many bays and headlands, which afford excellent shelter to ships during storms but strong currents make its W. side dangerous. Of the dependent islands, that of San Juan, which lies about 20 m. off the E. coast, is the most remarkable. Although, by Dampier's account, 12 m. long and 24 m. wide, and represented as a full degree in length in recent charts, navigators have doubted its existence.

The Spaniards occupy the N. portion of Mindanao, divided into provs. Cagayan and Misamis, the former producing the most gold of all the Philippines and a small tract at its S.W. extremity on the Strait of Basilan formed into the presidio of Zamboanga. The W. coast, between the two portions of the Spanish territory, is under independent chiefs; and the remainder of the island, including the central portion, nearly all the S., and a considerable extent of the E. coast, is under the suzerainty of Mindanao—the Bay of Iligan being the peculiar haunt of the piratical tribes named Ilanos, Ilanones, or Lamocnas.

The island itself is very imperfectly known in most respects. Its mountains are of immense altitude, and are clothed nearly to their summits with deep dense forests. Numerous volcanoes, some extinct, others in full ignition, occur among them; but Mount Calatan, near the source of the river Retan, seems the only one known, by name, to geographers. So numerous are the lakes, that the island has port, some of them trade with Bristol in grain, beer, timber, flour, and leather, others with Wales, whence they bring coal, salt, and limestone. Area of par. 4581 ac. Pop. 1542.

MINBO [see Mineo] a tn. in W. prov. and 38 m. S.W. Catania, on an embayment near a sulphurous lake, and possessing a college. Pop. 8000.

MINESOTA, or MINNESOTA, a territory, U. States of N. America; lat. 45° 30' to 49° N. lon. 99° 30' to 102° 12' W. bounded N. by British America, E. Lake Superior and territory of Wisconsin, S. Iowa, and W. unsettled territories, length, N. to S., about 800 m., average breadth, about 250 m., area, estimated at about 85 000 sq. m. The surface is generally level, consisting of a succession of plains, on which nothing deserving the name of mountains occurs, but to which their gradual depressions and elevations often give an undulating appearance. In some places the margins of rivers become lined with high bluffs, and the ground is much broken. The drainage belongs to three basins—Hudson's Bay, which receives its waters chiefly from Red River, which flows N., and discharges itself into Lake Winnipeg, Lake Superior, which is fed by numerous streams from the E., and the Gulf of Mexico, into which the far greater part of the drainage is brought directly by the Mississippi, which has its source here, and numerous affluents but more especially St. Peter's and the Missouri. In addition to these rivers, and many tributaries which traverse the territory in all directions, and make almost every part of it accessible by water, beautiful lakes cover some of the large extent, and almost all supplied abundantly with fish, are profusely covered over the surface. The soil is generally fertile, and admirably adapted for agricultural purposes, though at present little else is seen than interminable forests or extensive prairies, rounded over by immense herds of buffalo, and numerous varieties of larger and smaller game. Notwithstanding the general features of the surface, its elevation above the sea-level gives it an easy and thorough drainage, keeping it in a great measure free from swamps and, at the same time, securing to it a salubrious climate. The chief settlements, yet made in the territory, are confined to the promontories between the Mississippi and St. Croix on the S. and the Red River on the N. by the census of 1850, the population belonging to them was 6077. All the rest of the territory is in possession of the Chippewas and Sioux Indians who are estimated at about 12 000, and have their principal hunting grounds on the vast prairies W. of the Mississippi. The legislature of this newly created territory met, for the first time, in the end of 1849.

MINEWITHE N. One of the Scilly isls. England area, about 16 ac.

MINGALA, or MINGULAY an isl. Scotland, co. Inverness, one of the Hebrides, 2½ m. long by 1½ m. broad. P. 118. See Hebridean Islands.

MINGLANILLA a vil. Spain New Castile, prov. and 44 m. S.E. Cuenca, with broad, but steep and irregular streets, and a primary school. Pop. (agricultural) 1948.

MINGOLSHHEIM a vil. Baden, circle Middle Rhine, 20 m. S.E.E. Mannheim, with a church, a mill, and a sulphur spring. Pop. 1840.

MINGRELLA, a Russian province, bounded N. by the Caucasus, E. Imeretia, S. Guria, S.W. the Black Sea, and N.W. Great Abkhazia area, 1705 sq. m. The surface is generally mountainous, but slopes generally S., particularly towards the Rioni, its principal stream. The mountains are generally covered with magnificent forests, and both the lower slopes and valleys are fertile, yielding good crops of millet and abundance of excellent fruit. A good deal of silk and honey are also produced. Mingrelia nearly corresponds with the ancient Colchis, it became a vassalage of Russia in 1803, but is governed by its own prince, who takes the name of Dushan. Pop. about 70 000.

MINHO, a prov. Portugal, bounded N. by the river Minho, which separates it from Galicia, in Spain, E. Galicia, and prov. Trás-os-Montes, S. Douro, and W. by the Atlantic, length, N. to S., 80 m., breadth, 52 m. The surface is generally mountainous, being traversed by ramifications of the Cantabrian chain, particularly Gaiães, Gueto, and S. Catharina. The principal rivers are the Minho, Lima, Cávado, Ave, which fall into the Atlantic, and the Tago, an affluent of the Douro. The most important products are wine, millet, flax, cork, and oranges. Numerous herds of cows graze the pastures, and the province has long been famous for its pork. Game, both large and small, and fish, are very abundant. The principal manufactures are linen, hats, and cordery. The most important export is wine. For administrative purposes, Douro is divided into five comarcas—Braga, the capital, Barcellos, Guimarães, Monção, and Póvoa-de-Lima. Pop. 395 923.

MINHO, [see Mineo, Spanish, Mineo] a river of the Iberian peninsula, which rises in the sierra Monduldo, in the N.E. of Galicia in Spain, flows directly S. through a very mountainous country, passing the town of Lugo. About 6 m. above the town of Orense, its volume is nearly doubled by the accession of the Sil, which joins it on the left. It flows thence S.W., passes the town of Ribadavia, forms part of the boundary between Spain and Portugal and falls into the sea by two mouths, between which a small island is formed, after a course of about 150 m. It abounds in salmon and lampreys.

MINIATO (BAY) or SARMIENTO, a tn. in Tucson, 33 m. W. S.W. Florence, on the narrow ridge of a hill, near the confluence of the Rion and the Forks which form the Arizo. It is well built, is the see of a bishop, and has a court of first resort, a handsome cathedral, and several other churches, an episcopal palace, a diocesan seminary, a lyceum, two monasteries, and a large hospital. Pop. (1853), 3464.

MININGSBY, par. Eng. Lincoln, 780 ac. Pop. 493. MINISH, an isl. W. coast Irel. on Galway 14 m. S.E. Clifden, forming one side of Ard Bay. It is about 2 m. long. Inhabitants about 500 chiefly fishermen.

MINNAH a tn. Arabia. See Oman. MINNIGAFF, par. Scot. Kirkcaldy 86,787 ac. Pop. 2054.

MINNYTHIVE, a vil. Scotland co. and 17 m. N.W. by W. Dumfries with an ancient cross, and near it is a monument to the memory of the Rev. James Beazley, the last who suffered martyrdom for religious freedom in Scotland. P. 687.

MINORCA [Latin, Baleares Minor, Spanish, Menorca, French, Minorque, Dutch Minorke] an isl. Mediterranean belonging to Spain, and is called from being the second largest of the Balearic group; lat. 39° 43' to 40° 4' 48' N. lon. 8° 48' and 4° 50' E. greatest length, N.W. to S.E.E., 86 m., average breadth, about 10 m.; area, 250 sq. m. It is situated S.E. of Majorca from which it is separated by a strait of 27 m., and to the province of which it is administratively attached. The coast is very much indented on all sides except the S. and generally presents a succession of bold headlands, enclosing small creeks and bays, of which several form good harbours. Of these the best and most frequented is Port Mahon, the capital of the island. The surface is very much broken, and rises from all sides towards the centre, where it becomes mountainous, and in Mount El Toro attains the height of about 5000 ft. The soil is not generally fertile, still, in good seasons, the quantity of wheat and barley grown is sometimes equal to the consumption. The other principal products are all, wine, hemp, flax, oranges and lemons. Some good cheese is made, and a considerable number of horned cattle, sheep, mules, and asses, are kept. Considerable attention is paid to the rearing of bees. Iron, copper and lead, are found in abundance, but, owing to the scarcity of fuel for smelting and not worked, and marble, porphyry, and alabaster, superior to that of those of Italy, might be worked in several districts. The manufactures are limited to a few coarse articles of primary necessity, chiefly of hemp and flax, and the trade merely employs a few coasters, and an occasional vessel from abroad, loaded chiefly with hides and timber. The inhabitants have a good physical form, are by no means deficient in courage, make excellent sailors, and still use the sling with the dexterity for which they were so famous in ancient times. They are, however, very indolent, ignorant, and bigoted. The first possessors of Minorca were the Carthaginians, who drew from it, in common with the other islands of the Balears, a number of excellent sailors, who distinguished themselves during Hannibal's wars in Italy. It afterwards passed successively into the hands of the Romans, the Vandals, and the Moors. The last were expelled in 1585 by the Spaniards. During the greater part of the 18th century it belonged to the British, who finally ceded it to Spain at the peace of Amiens. For administrative purposes, it is divided into the four districts of Mahon, Alayor, Mercaderes, and Ciutadella. Pop. about 40,000.

MINORI, a. to Naples, prov. Principato-Ceras. dist. and 7 m. W. W. Salerno, near the Gulf of Salerno. It is the seat of a Greek bishop, suffragan of Amalfi. Pop. 2200.

MINOW ISLANDS, a group, E. Africa, Mozambique Channel, of N. W. coast Madagascar, lat. (N point) 17° 49' 30" S.; lon. 48° 59' E. They amount to about 27, and with exception of two or three which are low and of coral formation, are lofty and precipitous, presenting ranges of basaltic columns. In the Great Minow, which is the largest of the group, and is of a very peculiar shape, resembling a pair of compasses, rather more than half exposed, with one leg 4½ m., and the other nearly 8 m. long these columns are slender, perfectly straight, and ascend unbroken about 60 ft. up the precipice, presenting a grand and imposing appearance while, from the base of the precipice, another mass of curved basaltic columns descends to the depth of 12 fathoms.

MINSHULL CHURCH par Eng Chester 2286 ac. Pop. 880.

MINSK, a gov. Russia, bounded N. & E. by gov. Vitsebsk, E. Mohilev and Osmolov, S. Kiev and Volynia, and W. Grodno and Wilna. lat. 51° 20' to 55° 40' N., lon. 25° 20' to 30° 40' E. In shape it bears a considerable resemblance to an isosceles triangle, with its vertex in the N. and its base resting on the S. greatest length, N. to S. 290 m., average breadth, 160 m. area, 18,317 geo. sq. m. This government, though generally flat, is traversed in the N. by part of the great dorsal ridge which forms the watershed between the basins of the Baltic and the Black Sea. To the former basin the N. portion sends its waters by the Dvina (which, besides forming the N. boundary of the government, receives the Dniepr from within), and by the Memel or Niemen, which, together with its affluent the Vilia, runs in the government. To the latter basin the S. portion sends its waters by the Dnieper which, besides bounding the government on the S.E., receives from it the Beresina and the Pripiet, each augmented by numerous tributaries. In this S. portion large marshy tracts extend on both banks of the Pripiet, and in spring are generally under water, except the whole country the appearance of some vast lakes. In such circumstances, anything like a regular system of agriculture is altogether impracticable. Where the surface is more elevated, and less exposed to inundation, it is to a great extent covered with sand or with a poor sandy soil it being only in particular patches that a fertile loam occurs. Barley and oats are grown in far greater quantity than might be expected in the circumstances, and fully equal to the consumption. Hemp and flax also are raised in considerable quantities, and hops and tobacco occasionally. The chief wealth of the country is in its forests, which occupy a large part of the surface, and, where the ground is dry, yield excellent timber. A great proportion of the inhabitants are employed in felling it, and preparing it for market. Neither manufactures nor trade have made much progress. The former are in a great measure confined to linen-weaving, the latter consists chiefly of wood, mats, potash, meal, hemp, flax, honey wax, and some horses and horned cattle. The inhabitants are mostly Russians, of the orthodox or mixed Greek church. But E. Catholics are in generally professed by the higher classes. For administrative purposes, Minsk is divided into 10 districts or circles—Minsk, the capital, Wilna, Dima, Borsoun, Igoum, Bobruisk, Slutsk, Pinsk, Moryt and Retovitcha. Pop. (1850) 1,067,000.

MINNE, a. to Russia, cap. above gov., on the Svalofsch, 420 m. S. W. St. Petersburg. It is irregularly built with narrow streets houses generally lean, and of wood, but some fine edifices occur among the palaces of the nobility. It is the seat of a Greek Archbishop, and of a S. Catholic bishop, and contains two castles, several Greek and E. Catholic churches, a Greek monastic a synagogue, and a gymnasium. It has some manufactures of woollen cloth, hats and leather, and a considerable general trade. Pop. (1843), 23,502.

MINSTEAD, par Eng. Hants 12,800 ac. Pop. 1054.

MINSTER, several pars. Eng.—1. Cornwall 3223 ac. P. 478.—2. Kent 6170 ac. P. 1503.—3. (Lewell) Oxford, 1980 ac. P. 450.—4. (St. Neots) Kent 11,085 ac. P. 10,615.

MINSTERWORTH, par Eng. Gloucester 1938 ac. P. 494.

MINVAL or MARVAL. See BAY.

MINTEN MAGNA, par Eng. Dorset 2064 ac. P. 396.

MINTAGHS or BARRON-LEW par Irel. Donegal 2256 ac. Pop. 237.

MINTING, par Eng. Lincoln 2648 ac. Pop. 408.

MINTLYN, par Eng. Norfolk 1100 ac. Pop. 44.

MINTO par Scot. Roxburgh 4500 ac. Pop. 467.

MINTO ISLAND, one of three islands, forming the Amphitrite or Acteon group of the Low Archipelago, in the S. Pacific Ocean lat. 21° 23' S. lon. 126° 52' W. It occupies the centre of the group, is low and wooded but has a heavy surf on the beach, and no appearance of harbours.

MINTY par Eng. Wiltshire, 8470 ac. Pop. 775.

MINOGLANO or GARYABANA a vil. and com. Tuscan duchy and 77 m. N. W. Lucra, in a narrow inlet enclosed by lofty mountains with a church. Pop. 2348.

MINYER (Str.) par Eng. Cornwall 8688 ac. P. 1275.

MINWERE, par Wales, Pembroke 1957 ac. Pop. 94.

MIOGLIA a vil. and com. Italy Paduana, div. Alessandria prov. and S. Aquis near the Ebro with a modern church, remains of an ancient strong castle, and a trade in corn, wine, and dairy produce. Pop. 1078.

MIOG-YANO a lake, Norway, in the Elfeldalen at the N. foot of the lofty Mount Grindadalen, in the S. W. part of Christiania bail. Brudeberg. It forms a narrow expanse, stretching W. to E. about 24 m. with a breadth of not more than 1 m., and is the principal source of the Balva.

MIOSEN, a lake, Norway, prov. and 86 m. N. E. Christiania. It is of a long irregular shape stretching N. W. to S. E. 65 m. with a breadth nowhere exceeding 9 m. It receives its chief supply of water from the Longan, on the N. W. and discharges itself at the S. E. by the Wernen, an affluent of the Glommen. A steamer plies upon it.

MIPIBU, a m. Brazil prov. Rio-Grande-do-Norte, on the small river of same name and on the Lake Pagar, 40 m. S. S. W. Natal, and 20 m. from the sea. It has a church and a primary school and raises, within the district, large quantities of rice, millet, mandioc, tobacco, and sugar. The woods abound with fruit-bearing trees, and both the rivers and lake are well supplied with fish. Pop. 8000.

MIQUELON two isls. belonging to France N. America, off S. coast Newfoundland at the entrance of Fortuna Bay and forming, with the neighbouring island of St. Pierre, a French colony, area, 100 ac. Pop. (1849) 2101.—Great Miquelon is in lat. 47° 4' N. lon. 66° 20' W. immediately S. of it is Little Miquelon. Both islands abound in wood, and the inhabitants, amounting in 1846, to 510, are principally occupied in fishing.

MIRA—1. A. to Spain New Castle. prov. and 43 m. B. E. Guena, indifferently built. It has a church, courthouse, prison, school, and several hermitages, one of them in a beautiful classical grotto. Manufactures of earthenware, several mills, and a trade in corn, fruit, hemp, and silk. Pop. 1519.—2. A. to and par Portugal prov. Douro com. and 14 m. S. by W. Aveiro, on a small isl. in the bay of the Atlantic. Inhabitants almost exclusively fishermen. Pop. 5080.—3. A. to Austria Italy gov. and 10 m. W. Venice, on the Brenta-Morla. Pop. 2800.

MIRABELLA a. to Naples, prov. Principato Ultra, dist. and 10 m. S. W. Arzano. Near it a great number of Roman antiquities have been found. Pop. 3550.

MIRABELLO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Alessandria prov. Casale, near Ocimiano r. bank Grana. It has a church, a Capuchin monastery a castle, and a trade chiefly in wine. Pop. 2248.

MIRABELLO a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy prov. and about 8 m. N. Pavia where the battle of Pavia was fought, in 1525 when the French were defeated and their king Francis I. taken prisoner. Pop. 1678.

MIRAFLORES or de Sanza, a to Spain New Castle, prov. and 30 m. N. Madrid, on the slope of the mountains which separate the two Castles. It has a church, courthouse, and primary school flour-mills and a trade in fine wool, fruit, and charcoal. Pop. 1542.

MIRAGENIL, a to Spain See PUERTO-GENIL.

MIRAMACHI a bay and river British N. America, E. coast, New Brunswick. The bay is 20 m. wide at its entrance, by 21 m. inland and contains several islands, of which Fox and Passages islands are the most considerable. The river falls into the bay after a N. E. course of about 90 m. of which 40 m. are navigable for large vessels. On its banks are the towns Chatham and Newcastle. A considerable quantity of timber is shipped from the river and bay.

MIRANDA, two places, Portugal.—1, (do-Carmo), A. ta., prov. Douro 15 m. S.E. Coimbra, on the Douro, here crossed by two bridges. Pop. 3844.—2, (do-Douro), (ant. Constant), A. ta., prov. Trás-os-Montes, 7 bank Douro, which separates it from Spain, 46 m. N.E. Moncorvo. Once a place of some importance, and the see of a bishop, it has still some remains of fortifications, and ruins as a city. Pop. 460.

MIRANDA DO-ALTO A. ta. in Spain, prov. Navarra, 1 bank Arga, here crossed by a bridge, 38 m. S.E. E. Pamplona. It has a church, with two towers and a fine facade, a court house, prison, primary school the remains of a Moorish castle, a large flour-mill and a trade in cattle and agricultural produce. Pop. 1250.

MIRANDA DO-ESBO, a fortified vil. Spain, Biscay prov. and 41 m. N.E. Burgos, intersected by the Ebro. It has a substantial townhouse, a Latin grammar, and a primary school three suppressed convents a castle with barracks, on an eminence commanding the town an hospital for the poor, and three parish churches. Agriculture, and the manufacture of linen brown paper potteryware, and leather are the chief occupations. Pop. 1742.

MIRANDA DEL-CASTAÑO A. ta. Spain Leon prov. and 46 m. S.W. Salamanca. It is walled, has four gates, is defended by an ancient castle, and has a church, townhouse, and prison, a primary school an hospital manufactures of linen and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1128.

MIRANDE (Latin Miranda) A. ta. France, dep. Gers, 1 bank Base 10 m. S.W. Auch. It is clean well built has walls still in good condition four gates, leading, by four large streets, to the centre of the town which is occupied by a square manufactures of leather and a trade in corn, wool, hams, quills, &c. Miranda possesses a court of first resort. It was founded in 1289 by the third count and became the capital of the county of Armagnac. Pop. 3706.

MIRANDELLA (ant. Colindavara) A. ta. and par. Portugal prov. Trás-os-Montes, 28 m. N.W. Moncorvo, 1 bank Taa, here crossed by a magnificent bridge of 18 arches. It is surrounded with old ruinous walls, and contains an hospital. Pop. 1320.

MIRANDOLA, A. ta. duubly and 18 m. N.N.E. Modena. It is walled and regularly fortified well built, the see of a bishop, and has a fine cathedral a venerable palace, long occupied by the Visconti when Mirandola was the capital of an independent duchy, several convents and hospitals, and several silk-mills. One of the sovereigns, known by the name of Pio di Mirandola, acquired a distinguished name in literature. Pop. about 4000.

MIRANO A. ta. and com. kingd. of Italy gov. Venice, prov. and 13 m. N.E. Padua, on the Mazon at the commencement of the canal of Mirano. It lies in a plain has district courts and offices, a church, and three oratories. Pop. 2444.

MIRAYE, A. ta. Spain Catalonia, prov. and 80 m. S.W. Tarragona, with a church an ancient Moorish castle, and a primary school manufactures of earthenware, two distilleries, two oil-mills and some transit trade, which employs a number of the inhabitants as muleteers. Pop. 1726.

MIRE A. vil. France, dep. Indre-et-Loire, about 7 m. from Tours, famous for the great battle fought in its neighbourhood in 781, when Charles Martel gained a signal victory over the Saracens, and slew Adelmus their leader.

MIREBALAIS, a district France, which belonged to the upper division of the former prov. Poitou, and is now included in France. Its capital was Mirbeau.

MIREBAU (Latin Miribellus) A. ta. France, dep. Vienna, 17 m. N.W. Poitiers. It has a church, founded in 1217, and a trade in corn, wax, wool, and sheep. Pop. 2445.

MIRECOURT (Latin Miracura Curia) A. ta. France dep. Vosges on the Madon, 17 m. N.W. Epinal. It is poorly and irregularly built, has a court of first resort and commerce, and a small public library of 7000 volumes important manufactures of lace and silk, and is the central locality of a district famous for making all kinds of musical instruments above 6000 persons being so employed within the town and neighbourhood. It has some trade in articles of luxury, sheet-iron, linen, cane, wine, and sheep. Pop. 5208.

MIREPOIX (Latin Mirapois) A. ta. France, dep. Ariège, on the Lers, here crossed by a handsome bridge, 16 m. S.E. Foix. It is well built, and clean has a church, with a fine choir, surrounded by seven chapels; a well-kept-out cemetery, a communal college, hospital, and several schools; manufactures of common linen, flannel, coarse woollens, wadded, and soap, and a trade in corn and poultry. Iron, jet, and coal are wrought in the neighbourhood. Pop. 2368.

MIRFIELD, A. vil. and par. England, W. Riding of Yorkshire. The village, situated in a beautiful and fertile district, 1 bank Calder near the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway about 3 m. S. by W. Dewsbury, is a large straggling place extending for a considerable distance along the river and has a neat and commodious church, Methodist, Independent, Baptist, and Moravian chapels considerable manufactory, chiefly of coarse woollens, exported to Ireland and S. America; and cards for machinery some large flour-mills and mending establishments, and a trade in mineral produce. The village including the hamlets of Batleyford and Hopton, has an area of 3890 ac., so finely undulated and cultivated several beautiful country seats among which those of Kirkstall Hall and Blake Hall are conspicuous. Pop. 6988.

MIRGOROD, A. ta. Russia, gov. and 50 m. N.W. Poltava, 1 bank Khorol. It is the chief seat of the ecclesiastical authorities of the government, contains three churches, and, besides carrying on an important general trade, has four yearling factories. Pop. (1851) 6418.

MIRIBEL (Latin Miribellus) A. ta. France dep. Ain, near 7 bank Rhone, 81 m. S.W. Bourg. It is supposed to occupy the site of a Roman camp. An old castle in the neighbourhood, and many other ancient remains, are supposed to belong to Roman times. Pop. 1983.

MIRIM, or Mazim, a considerable lake, S. America, in neutral territory, between Brazil and Uruguay, close upon the coast. N.E. extremity in lat. 32° 10' S. It is about 90 m. long by 25 m. broad at the widest part, and is connected with the Laguna de los Patos, a still larger lake, situated further N. by the river Mirim 30 m. in length, and navigable. Between it and the sea is a third lake, called Mangueira.

MIRITI A. vil. and par. Brazil, prov. and 30 m. N.E. Rio-de-Janeiro. It contains a parish church built of stone and has brick and tile works, and some trade in iron, millet, and coffee. Pop. 3000.

MIRK (Cape), Africa, N.W. coast, lat. 19° 25' N. lon. 16° 25' W., a very low sandy point, near the S. termination of the great bank of Arguin, and by some of the shoals of which it is intersected, is the approach of all large vessels. MIRROPOLIS, A. ta. Russia, gov. and 80 m. S.W. Koursk on the Poul. It is surrounded by an earthen rampart and a fosse and has seven churches inhabitants chiefly agriculturalists. Pop. (1848) 7651.

MIROTTIT A. ta. Bohemia circle Frachin, on the Lom nit, 50 m. S.W. Prague, with a church, synagogue, town house, school and hospital manufactures of linen and potash, and some general trade. Pop. 1300.

MIROW A. ta. Marklenburg-Schwerin, esp. hall and on a lake of same name, 11 m. W. S.W. Rostock; with a church two castles with gardens a normal school, manufactures of woollen cloth and tobacco, dyeworks, and a mill. Pop. 1568. Area of soil. 80 sq. ac. m. Pop. 6607.

MIRROWITZ, A. ta. Bohemia, circle Frachin, 43 m. S.W. Prague with a church, school and townhouse inhabitants employed in agriculture and weaving. Pop. 1100.

MIRZAPORE, A. ta. and dist. Hindoostan presid. Bengal prov. Aitchahad. The town, 7 bank Ganges, 52 m. S.W. Benares, lat. 25° 10' N. lon. 85° 35' E. is large and flourishing, well built, consisting of handsome European houses, and inhabited by a large number of Hindoo families dwelling near the banks of the Ganges. It is a place of extensive inland trade, and the principal cotton mart of the province. It is also noted for its manufactures of carpets, and various cotton fabrics, and has likewise some manufactures of iron. The population is remarkable for activity and industry. Pop. above 100,000. Area of dist. 5285 sq. m. Pop. 881,288.

MISCHKIN A. ta. Russia gov. and 59 m. W. by N. Jaroslavl 1 bank Volga, with a church some general trade, and several annual fairs. Pop. 1000.

MISERDEN, par. Eng. Gloucester 2484 m. P. 489.

MISINTO, or Misinto, A. ta. Austrian Italy, prov. Milan, with a church and chapel, a singular charitable endowment, by which several sums are annually bestowed upon the poor and destitute, not by the wants or merits of the individuals, but by lot. Pop. 1160.

MISKE, several places Hungary particularly -1 A vil. Hither Demeo, on Pesth, about 35 m. from Baja with a church. Pop. 1144. -2, A vil. Thier, Thier, on Asad on the Tis, 4 m. from Nagy-Zsened, with two churches, and a trade in cattle and agricultural produce. Pop. 1237.

MISKOCE, a to Hungary cap. co. Bored 1 bank. Bina, 34 m. N. E. Kila. It is well built, and has two public squares and a great number of handsome houses a fine parish church a Greek church with a tower faced with copper; two Protestant churches a Minorite convent with a church of modern construction, a synagogue, county-hall a R. Catholic and a Protestant gymnasium, a head, national, and several other schools. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture and have a considerable trade in fruit, and is a kind of wheat bread for which the town is famous. Besides the weekly market, there are five annual fairs which are important. Pop. (1846) 80 000.

MISLITZ, or MISLAW a market in Austria, Moravia. circle and about 18 m. from Zimm on the Taya. with a church and three annual fairs. Pop. 1058.

MISMOCO or MISOX also CHEROKEE, a to and par Swit. south, on Grieco cap. dist. and in the valley of its river. bank Misox, 4 m. S. W. Coira. Near it are the remains of the old castle of the lords of Misox considered one of the finest ruins in Switzerland. Part of the building is still used as a church. The beauty of the valley was much injured by an inundation in 1834, which covered a large space with deep beds of rocks and gravel, and swept away 50 houses and 200 chalets, besides numerous bridges. Pop. 1282.

MISRAGLIA a to and com Italy Lombardy pop. and 14 m. S. E. Com. cap. dist. the residence of a judge. It has a parish church. Pop. in and com. 1838 dist. 16,344.

MISRELMITEH a to Nubia, peninsula of Sagar S. of Khartoum, about four hours W. from the Bahir el Jebel. It is situated on a bare plain, and consists of houses built of white stucco, in the form of a crescent, round a large square, with a deep wall in the centre. A few better houses, though only of mud, are occupied by opulent slave-merchants. The market is very numerous attended, and is the resort of many merchants from Souakin, who barter cotton, spices and perfumes, for gold, while those from Abyssinia bring slaves and a few horses.

MISSENDEN two parts Eng. Bucks. -1 (Great) "731 ac Pop. 308" - (Little), 5173 ac Pop. 1143.

MISIONES, a territory, La Plata, E. of Corrientes, between the rivers Parana and Uruguay, to the boundary line of Brazil. The surface of the country is undulating and the soil fertile. The climate is moderately warm. Productions - rice, maize tobacco, sugar and cotton. It was the seat of the most famous missions of the Jesuits, who here endeavored, not without considerable success, to civilize the surrounding savages. When the order was expelled from S. America, this district contained 100,000 persons, inhabiting 80 towns, reduced, in 1825, to about 1000. Candelaria, the capital, 1 bank Parana, had formerly a population of more than 8000.

MISSISSIPPI one of the S. States of N. America lat. 30° 10' to 35° 4'; lon. 85° 10' to 91° 25' W. bounded N. by Tennessee, E. Alabama S. E. the Gulf of Mexico, S. and S. W. Louisiana, and N. W. Arkansas length, N. to S. 325 m., greatest breadth, 198 m. area, 47,114 m. In shape it is very regular its N. E. and S. W. limits being defined by lines which are almost mathematically straight, while the Mississippi on the W. and the Gulf of Mexico on the S., give it the advantage of great natural boundaries, the former winding along its frontiers for 580 m., and the latter washing from 70 m. to 84 m. of coast. From the Gulf northwards, for about 100 m., is almost dead land, covered with pine forests cedar swamps, prairies, and inundated marshes. More inland the ground rises, and becomes much broken by low hills, but nowhere becomes mountainous. Some ranges of bluffs follow the course of the Mississippi, at greater or shorter distances from its banks. This river receives the far larger part of the drainage, being augmented from within the state on its L. bank by the Yazoo, and its tributary the Sandoway the Big Black, the Homochitto and many minor streams. The other rivers of consequence are the Pearl and Pascagoula, which proceed directly to the Gulf and the Tombigbee, which, after watering the N. E. part of the state, quits it for Alabama. In the N., where the thermometer ranges from 26° to 84°, the climate is tolerably mild and agreeable; but in the S., below lat. 18°, it is both extremely hot and unhealthy. The vegetation has corresponding distinctions resembling that of the temperate zone in the N. and presenting among its trees, several kinds of oak elm, maple, hickory walnut, dog-wood, and cotton-wood, while the vegetation of the S. is almost tropical. Throughout this region the perogee abounds, and venomous snakes are very common and not confined to it, but over the whole state, the turtle-dove, mocking-bird, and humming-bird are seen. Where the pine forests extend, the soil is light and comparatively barren, in the N. W., on the borders of the Yazoo, it is composed of rich black mould in the lower alluvial districts it is of remarkable fertility but often suffers severely from inundation. The staples of the state are first cotton and next sugar the other crops cultivated are chiefly Indian corn, bananas, sweet potatoes, to beco and indigo. Manufactures and trade are of very limited extent. Few internal improvements have been made and the only railroads yet constructed are the Vicksburg and Brandon, 59 m. in the Mississippi, only completed between Natchez and Madison 23 m. long and a small portion of the St. Francisville and Woodville. The most numerous religious denominations are the Methodists and Baptists the number of scholars at common and primary schools was (1850) 6236. By the constitution of 1817 when the state was first formed every free male white, 21 years of age, enjoys the suffrage. The legislature consists of a senate and house of representatives the latter not less than 36, nor more than 100 are chosen every second year, the former, not more than one third, nor less than one-fourth, of the representatives, are elected for four years but one half are renewed every two years. Pop. (1850) 806,555 of whom 808 898 are slaves.

MISSISSIPPI (Great water), the principal river of N. America and wholly within the territory of the U. States, passing through more degrees of latitude than any other river in that continent, perhaps than any other on the globe. The source of this mighty stream is pretty generally believed to be Itasca Lake, the lac la Pêche of the French, a beautiful sheet of water, 7 m. or 8 m. in extent, lying among hills of the vital formation, near lat. 47° 10' N. lon. 95° 34' W. 690 ft. above sea-level. The stream which issues from it and which constitutes the head of the Mississippi is 20 ft. broad and 3 ft. deep. It first flows in a N. direction through smaller lakes to Lake Travers, and leaving the lake near the place of entrance, it turns to the E. through Cass Lake to Little Lake Winnipeg, from which it takes that general S. course which it afterwards keeps to the Mexican Gulf into which it discharges itself about lat. 33° N., at the extremity of a long tongue of land which stretches 50 m. into the sea, by five mouths called passes, with bars on which are 13 ft. to 14 ft. of water. It has formed a delta considerably larger than that of the Nile. Its breadth of the river nowhere corresponds with its length, its greatest width not exceeding half a mile while, for 2000 m. from its entrance into the Gulf of Mexico, no perceptible difference in its breadth occurs. Its entire length is estimated at 1810 m. The Mississippi is a rapid, discharging torrent loaded with mud its violent floods, from the melting of the snow in the high latitudes, sweep away whole forests, by which the navigation is rendered very dangerous, and the trees being matted together in masses many yards thick, are carried down by the spring floods and deposited over the delta and Gulf of Mexico, for hundreds of square miles. The number of its tributaries of the first second and third class, are so numerous that it would be difficult even to name them. Amongst those of the first class are the Missouri, Arkansas, and Red River, joining it from the W., and the Ohio from the E. Before their junction, the Missouri is a stream much superior to the Mississippi, both in length and volume, and has much a steeper descent than the Rhine. It is sometimes considered the main stream of the Mississippi, in which case the length of the latter would be 4265 m. The Mississippi is navigable for 2240 m. and, together with the Missouri drains an area of about a million and a quarter of square miles. No tides enter the Mississippi, but it is subject to annual inundations. Notwithstanding this, however, and other disadvantages, its trade and navigation are much greater than those on most rivers of the continent in the N. hemisphere. 700 steamers, besides a large fleet of flat-bottomed boats, navigating its valley in 1852. The most important towns, close on its banks, are St. Louis and New Orleans.

MISSISSIPPI, a maritime co., Turkey in Europe, prov. Roumelia, on the Black Sea; lat. 43° 36' N. lon. 27° 40' E.

MISSOULONGHI a tn. Greece, Livadia, on an extensive flat, thickly wooded with olive-trees, and watered by the Acheion and Avenna, 23 m. W. Lepanto. It is small and otherwise defended, so as to be a place of considerable strength. It greatly distinguished itself during the war of independence, when it was besieged by the Turks, and though ultimately reduced by famine, caused an immense loss to the besiegers. The walls are washed by the sea, but, owing to a vast shoal, it is only accessible by sailing-boats. Other vessels cannot approach nearer than from 4 m. to 5 m. Lord Byron died here in 1824.

MISSOURI, par Eng. North 6129 ac. Pop. 837

MISSOURI, one of the U. States of N. America lat. 36° 30' to 40° 30' N. lon. 89° 30' to 96° W., bounded N. by Iowa, E. the Mississippi, which separates it chiefly from Illinois, but partly also Kentucky and Tennessee, S. by Arkansas, and W. by the Indian territory from which it is partly separated by the Missouri; length N. to E. 215 m. breadth, 380 m., area, 67,431 sq. m. The surface, though nowhere so elevated as to become mountainous is traversed by numerous hills and swelling ridges, and is more diversified in its features than any other state of the Union. In the S. E. corner it is almost an alluvial flat. Among the most remarkable objects presented by the state are its two hills, situated in St. Francois co. to the W. of Fredericktown and composed of micaceous sand of iron, of which it yields about 80 per cent. The one runs 850 ft. above the plain, and is 1½ m. across its summit, the other called the Pilot Knob, has a base 1½ m. in circuit, and a height of 203 ft. Many other mineral treasures, including lead, copper and beautiful marble, are found in different districts. The most important rivers are the Mississippi and the Missouri, which here unite their accumulated volumes. The former as already mentioned, is continued without interruption, along the whole of the E. frontier the latter after bounding the state on the S. W. winds across it W. to E. dividing it into two unequal portions, and receiving various navigable tributaries—the Lamine, Osage, and Gasconade, on the r., and the Grand and Chariton, on the l. The only other important streams are the Salt, which joins the Mississippi 86 m. above the Missouri, the Maramee, which joins it 18 m. below St. Louis the White and the St. Francois, in the S. E. and the Six Ralls, in the S. W. The most fertile tract of country within the state, is that which is situated within the fork of the Osage and the Missouri, but the whole land to the N. of the latter river is equally remarkable for its picturesque scenery, and its agricultural and pastoral capabilities. The crops of Indian corn, oats, and wheat, are unusually large. Flax, hemp, and tobacco, also form important staples and numerous numbers of cattle, sheep, and swine, graze the pastures, or subsist on the meat of the forest. The only manufactures of any consequence have their chief locality at St. Louis, the foreign trade is limited, but there is a very large and increasing amount of internal traffic, for which the numerous navigable streams afford unobstructed facilities. No railroads have as yet been commenced, though several have been projected. The largest religious denominations are the Methodists and Baptists, but the Presbyterians and E. Catholics have also numerous congregations; education, in its higher branches, has been well provided for by the Missouri and St. Louis universities and several colleges, but the common school system is still very defective. The legislature consists of a senate and house of representatives, both chosen by the universal suffrage of the whites the former for four years, one half retiring every second year and the latter for two years. Jefferson city is the capital Missouri, originally a portion of the territory of Louisiana, acquired by the U. States in 1803, was erected into a state and admitted into the Union in 1820 (Pop. 1850 622,044, of whom 37,423 are slaves).

MISSOURI, a river, N. America, which is formed in the Rocky Mountains by the junction of three branches, called Jefferson, Madison, and Gallatin's rivers, about lat. 45° 30' N., and lon. 109° 30' W.; winds circuitously along the base of the mountains, then E., till it reaches the N. W. extremity of the territory of Missouri. Here it begins to flow

S. E. separating that territory the state of Iowa, and the N. W. of that of Missouri, on the E. from the unexplored and unsettled territories on the W.; then traverses the state of Missouri W. to E., and, on reaching the W. frontiers of Illinois, joins the Mississippi on its r. bank, and more than doubles its volume. Its whole course, estimated from the highest point of Jefferson's river is about 2600 m. For the first 500 m. it presents scenes of almost unequalled grandeur, forcing its way through narrow gorges, which rise perpendicularly from the water's-edge, and forming over stupendous cascades; but, for the remaining 2000 m., there is no serious impediment to its free and uninterrupted navigation. Its affluents are very numerous on both banks, but by far the most important of them, the Yellow Stone, the Nebraska or Platte, and the Kansas, fed by the same mountain ranges in which it has its own source, and each, at least, 600 m. in length. At its junction with the Mississippi, the channel of the Missouri contracts, and does not exceed half a mile in width.

MISSISSIPPI (LAKES), British N. America, intersected by lat. 55° 30' N. and by lon. 78° 30' W. length, N. E. to S. W. 70 m. greatest breadth, 30 m. It is very irregularly shaped. The Rupert flows from it W. into James's Bay.

MISTEK, a tn. Austria, Moravia, circle Pressau 10 m. W. S. W. Tschann; with a church, a castle, and manufactures of woollen and linen cloth. Pop. 2620

MISTELBACH a tn. Lower Austria, on the Ennsbach 30 m. N. N. E. Vienna. It is one of the largest and best-built market towns of Lower Austria; has a church—a Barnabite cloister, an hospital, and an important corn-market; inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture and weaving. P. 2468

MISTERBLANCO a tn. Sicily prov. and N. W. Catania. It has thermal baths. Pop. 3900.

MISTERTON, three par. England.—1 Leicester 3050 ac. Pop. 589.—2 North 5420 ac. Pop. 1748.—3, Somerset 1417 ac. Pop. 564

MISTLEY par Eng. Essex 2115 ac. Pop. 1516

MISTRA a tn. Greece, in the Morea, and 37 m. S. by W. Tripolizza. It rises in an amphitheatre, upon a mountain which faces the E. and is surrounded by walls in a very ruinous state, in which are two gates. It is intersected also by a stream, has narrow, dirty, and very uneven streets, but the houses, surrounded with cypresses, plane-trees, and orange-trees have a pleasing and picturesque appearance. On a detached rock rising about 500 ft. above the adjoining plain is the castle or citadel a Venetian fort of an octagonal form and surrounded with a regular encircled wall, nearly in ruins. Within it are a mosque, some remains of marble, and some wretched habitations, built of the spoils of antiquity.

MISTRETTA (non. Assastra or Aytrastretta), a tn. Sicily prov. and 55 m. W. S. W. Messina. It occupies a lofty eminence near a bank of the sea, and in its vicinity is a petroleum spring. Pop. 3000

MISZLA, a vil. Hungary Thither Danube, so. and 10 m. from Tolna with two churches Pop. 3279

MITA, a tn. Central America Guatemala, in the Corregimiento of Chiquimala. Pop. 3300

MITAU a tn. Russia. See MITAVU

MITCHAM par Eng. Surrey, 2993 ac. Pop. 4641

MITCHELTON par Eng. Monmouth, 3000 ac. P. 360

MITCHELDEAN a market tn. in par. England, so. and 11 m. W. Gloucester with a church, a school, and some manufactures of leather. Area of par. 690 ac. P. 683

MITCHELDEVER, par Eng. Hants 6940 ac. P. 1089

MITCHELMERSE, par Eng. Hants; 5933 ac. P. 1203

MITCHELTOWN, par Ire. Meath; 973 ac. P. 245

MITCHELTOWN a market tn. Ireland, so. and 27 m. N. by E. Cork on the declivity of a hill with a square, an elegant Gothic parish church a handsome cruciform E. Catholic chapel Kingston college, a benevolent institution for maintaining 12 Protestant gentlemen and 18 poorwomen a market and court house, barracks, and a brick town in plan, interior and orn., sent to Cork, Youghal, and Limerick. Near it are flax and tacking mills a blanket manufactory, an extensive bleachfield, and Mitchelstown castle, the mansion of the Earl of Kingston. Pop. 8079.

MITFORD, par Eng. Northumb. 9285 ac. Pop. 700.

MITTIERO, or MITTIANO, one of Cook's ill., S. Pacific lat. 30° 1' S., lon. 157° 34' W.; length, N. to E., about 4 m., breadth, 1 m. It lies low, and is generally arid and sterile.

The inhabitants have a mean and wretched appearance, and, owing to famine, and the invasion of neighbouring islanders, have been reduced to about 100.

MITLA, a vil. Mexican confederation, state and 80 m. S.E. Oaxaca, formerly the burying-place of the Tlapotecas monarchs. Pop. about 700.

MITRE ISLAND one of the Queen Charlotte isles. S. Pacific Ocean lat. 11° 55' S lon. 170° 9' E. (n.) It is a barren uninhabited rock, with two remarkable prominent towers, one resembling a mitre, the other a steeple. It was discovered by Captain Edwards in 1791.

MITROVICA or MITROVICA, a to Anstrut, Slavonia, dist. and 22 m. S.W. Fethersburg near L. bank Save. It contains a P. Catholic and three Greek churches, a castle and two schools, and has a considerable trade in cattle and hides. Pop. 5200.

MITSOO OR BIWAKO a great lake, Japan, lat. Nippon, said to have been formed in one night in 285 n.c. by an enormous depression of the ground, which occurred simultaneously with the upheaving of the mountain Fuzi Yama, the loftiest of all the mountains of Japan. It is said to measure about 70 m. S. to N. and 21 m. E. to W. In its N. part is the lake of Tsubo-ban, which emerged from the bottom of the water A.D. 82.

MITTAGONG RANGE, a range of hills in New S. Wales, co. Camden. It is the name also of a town in the same co. 56 m. S.W. from Sydney.

MITTAU or MITAU (Latvia, Jelgava) a to Russia, cap. gov. Courland, in a low flat, and sandy district on the Aa, over which is a bridge of boats, 20 m. S.W. Riga. It covers a very large space, of which, however, a considerable portion is occupied by gardens and is on the whole very indifferently built. Houses chiefly of wood, painted green or reddish-brown, many of the streets narrow and crooked, but some also wide, straight and regular. The most interesting building is the castle, the residence of the old Duke of Courland. It had almost become more ruin when in 1739 Maribai Hiron the favourite of the Empress Anna, commenced a palace on the same site and completed it after his return from exile. It stands on an island surrounded by the canals of the Aa. Among the other buildings, may be mentioned four churches—a Greek, a R. Catholic, a Lutheran, and a Reformed, three synagogues, a museum, a library of 20,000 volumes, an observatory, a gymnasium with fine professors, an hospital, an orphan and a lunatic asylum, a casino, and a theatre capable of containing 3000 spectators. Its manufactures which are of little moment, include linen, hosiery, soap, and leather and its trade is very limited. Pop. (1852) 18,619.

MITTELBACH, a vil. Saxony, circle Zwickau, bail. Chemnitz with stone quarries and two mills. Pop. 1219.

MITTELBERG, a vil. Austria, Vorarlberg, dist. Bregeunwald with a parish church. Pop. 1447.

MITTEL-KATZACH a vil. Hesse-Cassel prov. Fulda, bail. Korbach. It has a church, and five mills. Pop. 1098.

MITTELWALDE, a to Prussia, gov. and 35 m. N.E. Breslau, on the Neisse, with two churches, an hospital and small theatre, manufactures of linen, hosiery and tobacco, a brewery, distillery, bleachfield, a tile-work, and two dye-works. Pop. 1808.

MITTELZELL, a market in Bavaria Lower Franconia, dist. and near Würzburg on the Main over which there is here a ferry. It has a trade in wine and fruit. P. 1441.

MITTENWALD a market on Upper Hesse, 1 bank Isar, here crossed by a bridge, 50 m. S.W. Munich, with three churches, manufactures of musical instruments and silk, and a trade in timber. Pop. 2000.

MITTENWALDE, a to Prussia, prov. Brandenburg, gov. and 28 m. S.E. Potsdam with a church, an hospital, and manufactures of linen. Pop. 1865.

MITTERBURG or MITRO, a to Austria, Illyria, cap. circle, on the Flava, 80 m. S.E. Trieste, with a castle situated on a rocky eminence, a head school, an hospital, and a considerable trade in trade, for which its situation at the point where several roads meet, gives it great advantages. Pop. 2212. —The climate has generally a thin chalky soil but produces some good wine, olives, gail nuts, and silk. Area, 1877 geo. sq. m. Pop. 230,000.

MITTERTEICH, a market in Bavaria, circle Oberpfalz, 29 m. E. Regensburg, with two churches manufactures. Vol. II.

of linen and woollen stuffs, a saw and several flour mills. Pop. 1559.

MITTON, par. Eng. Lancashire, 18,108 ac. P. 8318. MITTON KOTI a in Punjab, and 1 bank Indus, lat. 28° 54' N. lon. 70° 25' E. surrounded with flourishing date-groves. The adjacent country is periodically inundated by the Indus the climate is then unhealthy. Pop. 4000.

MITTWEIDA two places, Saxony circle Zwickau.—1. A to 1 bank Zschoppan 36 m. S.E. Leipzig. It has a handsome church, a house of correction, a town school and many features of linen, cotton, flannel, sailcloth, parchment, and leather a tile work two bleachfields a spinning and two other mills. Pop. (1849) 7012.—2. A vil., dist. Schwarzenberg, 54 m. S.E. Leipzig with manufactures of fire-arms, a ropery a stamping and several other mills. Pop. 1083.

MITYLENE or MYTILENE, (anc. Lesbos), an isl. Turkey in Asia, Grecian Archipelago off Anatolia, and in front of the Gulf of Adramyti greatest length, N.E. to S.W. about 45 m. greatest breadth about 30 m. It is deeply indented particularly on the W. by Port Ouloni and on the S. by Port Lero both of which form good harbours. The surface is generally elevated and is intersected by a long range of mountains, in which the most conspicuous summits are those of Olympus in the S., Ordymus in the W. and Lepethos in the N. Between the mountains are numerous plains and valleys, which are naturally fertile and having the advantages of an excellent climate and numerous streams for irrigation might easily be made remarkably productive, but are sadly neglected. The loftier districts are generally well worked, and furnish excellent timber, which is largely exported particularly for shipbuilding. The principal objects of culture are the vine and the olive the corn raised falls short of the consumption. The most important mineral is marble. The principal town is Castro on the S.E. coast, where it occupies the site of the ancient Mytilene, the other towns are Molvo on the N. and Caloni on the W. besides these there are numerous villages. The island suffered severely during the Greek war its population, previously about 60,000 has been diminished a half. Among the great number of distinguished individuals to whom it has given birth are Theophrastus the disciple and successor of Aristotle in the Peripatetic school. Philinus the first one of the Greek poets, the poet Alkman, and the poet Sappho.

MIUS, a river Russia which rises in the S.E. of gov. Ekaterinburg flows first S.E. entering gov. Don Caucasus then S.W. and falls by a wide estuary into the Sea of Azov about 30 m. S.W. Taganrog after a course of about 110 m. Its chief affluents are the Krinka, which joins it on the right.

MIXBURY par. Eng. Oxford 2680 ac. Pop. 412.

MIXTAD a to Prussia, prov. and 80 m. S.E.E. Posen with a church. Pop. 1209.

MIXTACALAN, a table-land, Mexican confederation occupying the greater portion of the dep. Oaxaca, and extending from the plains of La Puebla and Mexico, S. and E. to the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, average elevation 5000 ft. above sea-level. Towards the Pacific it is indented by wide valleys, which stretch nearly N. to S. but even these are of very considerable height. The town of Oaxaca, which lies in the principal valley is 4800 ft. above sea-level and the ruins of the castle of Mitla stand on adjacent ground, 5300 ft. high.

MIZAN ILA, a ruined city Mexican confederation 85 m. N.E. Jalisco on an isolated plateau near the Gulf of Mexico.

MIZEN HEAD, a promontory, Ireland, co. Cork, forming the S.W. point of the isl. lat. 51° 32' N. lon. 10° 45' W.

MIYFFK or MIYFFK a market to Bohemia, circle Beraun about 17 m. S.W. Prague. It has a parish church, and a castle. Pop. 1000.

MOA an isl. Indian Archipelago, Timor group lat. 8° 20' S. lon. 128° 10' E. 24 to long. and 12 in broad. It has a mountain resembling the peak of Tenerife, but not so high, and is rich in buffaloes, sheep, pigs, goats, and poultry. Inhabitants partly Christian, partly heathen.

MOAR, a river peninsula of Malacca, which, rising in the mountains of Pahang, considerably to the W. of Mount Ophir, pursues a winding course in a S.W. direction, for above 100 m. and in a channel so deep that, but for the bar across its mouth, it might be navigated by vessels of the largest size, for 70 m. or 80 m. It abounds with large alligators.

MOATE, a market tn. Ireland, co. Westmeath, 10½ m. S.E. Athlone, with a parish church a R. Catholic convent and chapel, a large school, a courthouse and a bridewell, a branch bank, and a medical dispensary. Pop. 1979.

MOBILE, a city and port, U. States, Alabama, 7 bank miles at its entrance into Mobile Bay, lat. 30° 18' 38" N, lon. 88° 04' 45" W. (n.) It is built on a beach titled and extensive plain 15 ft. above the level of the tides, and open to refreshing breezes from the bay. The principal public buildings are the courthouses, jail, osteom-house, city hospital, a U. States naval hospital, and several other benevolent institutions. There are three banks, an academy, and 14 churches, including two Methodist and two Baptist for colored people, other three Methodist and a Baptist, two Presbyterian, two Episcopalian, and two R. Catholic, one of which is a cathedral. It has also a synagogue, a theatre, an amphitheatre, sundry markets, and gas and water works. It is defended by a fort, on a long, low sandy point, at the mouth of the bay, and 80 m. below the city. Vessels drawing more than eight ft. water pass up Spanish river, 6 m. round a marshy island into the Mobile, and then drop down to the city. Next to New Orleans Mobile is the greatest cotton mart of the S. Its warehouses have accommodated for 202,000 bales of cotton. The exports of that article to foreign countries, in 1851 amounted to 420,846 bales, weighing 218,460,336 lbs. In 1851 the total foreign exports amounted to $2,911,073 and the foreign imports to $184,178, employing 209,000 tons of shipping. But the coasting trade, carried on chiefly with the Atlantic ports is much more extensive than the foreign. Pop. (1848), 12,673 (1850), 20,513.—The bay is about 80 m. N to S, by 12 m. broad, and affords some of the best harbours in the Gulf of Mexico. It narrows inland and on the S. is protected from the sea of the gulf and from the wind by a narrow strip of land leaving an entrance at its W. end only about 3 m. wide. Except at the entrance, the bay is deep and the anchorage safe.—The river, which falls into the bay above the town, is formed in the S.W. by the junction of the Alabama and Tombigbee, two large rivers, which have each a S. course of several hundred miles.

MOCCAS par Eng. Hereford, 1163 ac. Pop. 207.
MOCCHELE, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Turin prov. and in the valley of Susa, 1 bank Does Episcopia with a handsome church, a charitable endowment and a considerable trade in dairy produce, wood and cattle. Pop. 2301.

MOCEJON a vil. and com. Spain, New Castle, prov. and about 7 m. from Toledo with two churches, townhouse, prison, and two primary schools, manufactures of chocolate, and a trade in wine, and in bread. Pop. 1690.

MOCHA or MOLENA, an important Arabian seaport, on the Red Sea, about 40 m. within the Strait of Babel Mandeb, lat. 13° 20' N, lon. 43° 20' E. It lies in a bay formed by two low points projecting into the sea, about 5 m. asunder. On each of these points is a castle with a few guns. Between them extends the sea-wall, which protects the town and allows access to it only by a single gate opposite to which is a well-constructed sunna pier or jetty approachable by small vessels. The conditions for large vessels is three or four miles from the shore, and has good holding ground in five or six fathoms, but little shelter. The town extends ¼ to ½ a mile and a half along the shore, with a general width of half a mile, and has a pleasing, impressive appearance. The houses next the sea are well built of stone, and lofty with stucco ornaments and brilliantly white. Beyond these are seen two mosques, four of them large, and one of great magnitude. Mocha is the chief port andemporium in the dominions of the sultan of Hama, and owes its importance, and perhaps its origin, to the slave trade, which has been always centered in it. It was hardly known in the beginning of the 16th century and was still so open though prosperous down at the commencement of the 19th. But from that time, the increasing demand for coffee in Europe continued to pour a tide of wealth into Mocha, until the cultivation of the coffee-plant in the W. Indies, and elsewhere, diverted the trade more or less into new channels. The country round Mocha is an arid, sterile plain without fresh water, a supply of which, for the use of the town is led by an aqueduct from the village of Muta, 20 m. distant, at the foot of the hills. The coffee, therefore, which bears the name of Mocha, is not produced in the immediate neighbourhood of this town, but on the wooded hills of the interior and particularly near the town of Babel-el-Fakih, where the best kinds are collected and thence consigned to the merchants at Mocha. A large quantity of coffee is carried to this market from Harrar also, at the S. E. foot of the Abyssinian Highlands, and is found to be fully equal, if not superior, to the produce of Arabia. In deed it is now admitted that the native country of coffee (in Arabic Kaffa) is Kaffa on the S. confines of Abyssinia, whence the culture of the plant was introduced into Yemen. The intimate connection subsisting between the interests of Mocha, and the activity of the trade in coffee, is represented by the popular traditions respecting the titular saint of the place, Sheikh Shadeli, who is said to have taught the Arabs the use of coffee, and to have been also the founder of the town. The chief gate on the land-side of Mocha is called Bab Shadeli, the principal well in the town also bears the saint's name, and the mosque which covers his tomb still attracts many pilgrims. After being accessible at all seasons, hide fast to become the chief mart of Yemen as well as of the opposite or Somali coasts. Mocha is at present therefore, in a state of decline, and its population does not probably exceed 5000 souls.—(Niebuhr, Travels in Arabia, Valumbia & Trucel).

MOCHA, from the North.—From Capt. C. F. Meade's Memoirs and Egyptian Itinerary

MOCHA, an isl., 20 m. off coast of Chili, prov. Araucaria, lat. 38° 25' S, lon. 73° 56' W (n.), about 7 m. long 3 m. broad, and rising 1250 ft. above the sea, anchorage indifferent landing bad, and no supplies, with exception of wood and water, the best of excellent quality. Previous to the 18th century, it was inhabited by Araucanian Indians, who were driven off by the Spaniards.

MOCKRUM, par. Scot. Wigton, 20,000 ac. P. 940.
MOCKERY, a tn. Prussia, prov. Saxony, gov. and 11 m. N. Magdeburg, on the Elbe, with a church, an hospital, and a distillery. Pop. 1685.

MOCKMULBL, a tn. Württemberg, circle Neckar, at the confluence of the Neckar with the Jast, 10 m. E. Neckarsalm with a church and a castle. Pop. 1624.

MOCLAN, a tn. Spain, Andalucia, prov. and 20 m. N. W. Granada, 7 bank river of same name. It is poorly built, has a church, townhouse, prison, and school and a trade in grain and fruit. It was once a Moorish fortress, and so strong that it was called the shield of Granada. Pop. 2780.

MOCLINEJO, a vil. and com. Spain, Andalucia, prov. and 10 m. from Malaga, with a church, two primary schools, several mills, and a trade in ravine, sent to Malaga. P. 1068.

MOCONESI a vil and com Italy Piedmont, div Genoa prov Chiavari, 9 m. from Clesgora, near the Lavagna, here crossed by a stone bridge. It has two churches, and a trade in corn, wine, and oil Pop. 2829

MOCSA a to Hungary, Hither Danube, co. and 7 m. S. S. E. Komorn with a church. Inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture, and in fishing in a neighbouring lake P 2187

MODAIR, or TANCA KARA, a vil Asiatic Turkey, pach and 32 m. S. Bagdad, 1. bank Tigris occupying the site of the ancient Ctesiphon and Seleucia, capitals of Syria, and afterwards of Persia. Little now remains except part of the palace of Chosroes, called Tanca Kara, which is seen from afar on the plain, presenting a front of 300 ft. in length, by 160 ft. in depth, having an immense vaulted hall in its centre. The city walls may also be traced to a considerable distance on both banks of the river

MODENA (DUOMO DI) [French, Duché de Modène] a duchy Italy, bounded N. by Austrian Italy and the district of Guastalla, forming an isolated portion of the duchy of Parma. W. Parma, the grand duchy of Tuscany and the Sardinian States S. the Mediterranean, the duchy of Lucca, and Tuscany and E. the Papal States lat. 43° 08' to 44° 57' N. lon. 9° 46' to 11° 21' E., cap. city Modena. The duchy thus bounded, consists of four distinct portions. Two of these, of small extent, are completely isolated—the one being situated wholly within a part of Tuscany, and the other enclosed on the N. and E. by Tuscany, and on the S. and W. by Sardinian States. The third portion, larger than the other two, though still comparatively small, is nearly enclosed by Sardinia, Tuscany, and Lucca, but reaches S. to the sea, and towards the N. is connected by a long and narrow belt with the fourth and main portion of the duchy. This portion, constituting five-sixths of the whole, is very compact, and has a rhomboidal form having a length $\frac{1}{2}$ to S. of 55 m., and a central breadth of 30 m., area of the whole duchy about 1800 sq. m. The whole of the N. portion with the exception of a mere patch scarcely deserving of notice is situated on the E. side of the Apennines, which, whilst it attains the height of 6975 ft. in Mount Cimone, and covers a great part of it with their ramifications. These however rapidly subside in proceeding N. and finally merge into fertile and beautifully undulating plains. The whole of this N. portion, with exception of the small patch already referred to, belongs to the basin of the Po, which forms a small portion of the N. W. boundary, but receives the far larger part of its waters by numerous streams, which, descending from the principal chain of the Apennines pursue their courses N. in lateral valleys. Of these streams, the most important are the Panaro, Secchia, and Crostolo. The other portions of the duchy lie on the S. side of the Apennines and are drained by the Magra and its tributaries, with the exception of a small portion which sends its waters directly to the coast. The geological structure of the duchy is very simple. The alluvial deposits, spread so widely and deeply over the plains of Lombardy are continued S. into Modena, almost to its centre where they are succeeded first by a narrow belt of tertiary marls and sandstone, and then by a considerable tract of the anticlinal rocks which form the upper extremity of the secondary formation. The smaller portions of the duchy are partly occupied by the Jura limestone. Towards the shore, diluvial and alluvial deposits again appear. The minerals are not of much consequence, but include iron, marble, gypsum, sulphur and petroleum. The climate differs considerably on the N. and S. sides of the Apennines. On both sides it is temperate and healthy but on the N. side the winter cold is sometimes keen, whereas on the S. it is scarcely felt, and the oranges and olive flourish vigorously in the open air. The soil is generally fertile, especially in the plains and is cultivated, if not with much skill at least with great industry very often on the metayer system. Besides the ordinary cereals, rice, maize and hemp are largely cultivated. Much attention is also paid to the culture of the vine, the olive, and the mulberry. By means of the last, large quantities of excellent silk are produced. Both manufactures and trade are insignificant.

Modena, after passing through the hands of a great number of masters, was finally created into a duchy in 1453 and settled on a branch of the family of d'Este, which has given Europe so many of its sovereigns. This settlement was never effectually dissolved till the French Revolution, when it lost its independence, and was merged successively into the Cisalpine Republic and the Kingdom of Italy. The duke who had been stripped of his possessions, resumed them in 1814. The government, unprovided with constitutional safeguards, is almost absolute. For administrative purposes, the territory is divided into four governments—Modena the capital Reggio Garagnano, and Massa-d' Carrara, to which should be added the delegazioni governative of Frignano and that of Lantignano. Pop. 568 678

MODENA [see Modena] a Italy up. above duchy, pleasantly situated in a somewhat low but fertile plain, between the Secchia and the Panaro, 85 m. S. S. E. Mantua. lat. (observatory) 44° 38' 58" N. lon. 10° 10' 35" E. (L.) It is walled, built with great regularity and has spacious and well-cleaned streets generally lined with porticoes, of which several are handsome. It consists of three principal parts—the citadel, which, with its espallades, occupies about a third of the whole, the old town, and the new town. The last, the greater part of which has sprung up within the last half century, is in many parts elegant. The most remarkable edifices and establishments are the Duomo or cathedral a fine specimen of Romanesque, adorned in front with numerous carvons

MODENA CATHEDRAL.

From Gaily Knight's Woodcut Atlas of Italy

sculptures the church of San Francesco, a handsome Gothic structure, containing a fine group of the Taking Down from the Cross, in terra cotta, by Bagarelli, several other churches, the ducal palace, begun in the 17th century but enlarged by numerous modern additions, and now forming a splendid structure, with a large collection of paintings, several of them by the first masters, a museum, containing curious medals and sculptures, and a library rich in MSS. the public library, of 80,000 vols., the theatre, the halls the college of law and medicine substituted for similar chairs in the university which was suppressed in 1832, several other important educational institutions and charitable endowments. The manufactures, which have lost much of the importance they once possessed, consist chiefly of silk goods, silk twist, woolsens and hampden cloths, leather, and glass the trade—notwithstanding the advantage of a canal which traverses the town, carries barges of 80 tons, and communicates with the Po—on a very unimportant. Among the distinguished individuals to whom Modena has given birth, are the antiquary Sigismondo, the learned Muratori, author of the well-known dictionary which bears his name, the poet Molza and Tassoni, and the scato-modist Thalpinus Modene is the see of a bishop, and, as the residence of the court and the seat of government, both attracts a higher order of society than usual in a town of the same magnitude, and possesses many important public offices as well as scientific, literary, scientific and artistic. It is situated under the Etruscan, and rises to such splendor under the Romans as called forth a eulogy from Cicero. It afterwards was repeatedly sacked by the N invaders, whose ravages have left few vestiges of its ancient grandeur. Pop. nearly 30,000.

MODANF a la France, dep. Savoie, prov. Moriana. 1 bank Area 1" m S E. S. Eau Giovanni di Moriana 3500 ft. above the sea with a handsome church manufactures of coarse woollens, and a trade in dairy produce. Pop. 1800.

MODBURY a hor. market tn. and par., England, co. Devon 12 m. E. Plymouth. The town consists of four streets which descending declivities from the four cardinal points meet at the bottom of a valley. Many of the houses have slate fronts. It has an ancient embellished church, places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyans, and Society of Friends, and woollen-plain and hat manufactures, but not so flourishing as formerly. Area of par., 6768 ac. P. 1859.

MODERNA par. lat. Watford 7518 ac. 1 1758

MODERN Monza, or Monza, a la Hungary co. and 16 m. N. N. E. Proseburg. It is walled has three gates, in front of each of which is a suburb. It is well built, has a Benedictine monastery and church with a lofty tower ad joining it faced with copper, R. Catholic, Bohemian, Lutheran, and Calvinistic churches, governor's house and townhouse. Neither the trade nor manufactures are of much consequence though a good deal of linen is woven and bleached. 1 5010

MODERHILL, par. lat. Tipperary 8101 ac. P. 688

MODIA [see Atopsy] a la. Sicily par. and 81 m. S W. Syracuse cap. dist. in a narrow craggy valley. 1 bank beach. It is ill built, but has a large square and some handsome mansions, a castle and several churches and convents. The valley of Ippusa, in the vicinity is interesting from the number of troglodyte caves it contains. 1 17 500

MODIGLIANA [anc. Castrum Modunum] a la. Tuscany 38 m. N. E. Florence on a spur of the Apennines. It is walled, and has an old castle, several churches, a college, an hospital, and a trade in wine, oil, and silk. Pop. 1853, 3299.

MODJALIA [anc. Africa, Egypt, a la. Senegal lat. 15 55 N. lon 18° 5' W. inhabited by Marabouts, of the Moorish nation of the Dowdies, who reserve valuable offerings from the faithful.

MODLING a market in Austria. See MEYERLING

MODON a small seaport in Greece, W coast Moria. about 5 m. S Naxos. lat. 36° 48' N; lon 21° 41' E. It is ill constructed, and falling into decay, but is walled, and defended by a fosse. At its S. extremity is a lighthouse, and beneath it an ancient wall, enclosing a port for small craft. Modon was nearly destroyed by the Russians in 1770.

MODOS, a vil. Hungary. Thibet 1264, co. Terontal, 27 m. S. W. Temesvar on the Theiss with two churches, and several flour-mills. Pop. 1089.

MODERENY, par. lat. Tipperary 12 165 ac. P. 3554

MODUM, a vil. and par. Norway. par. Agderhusen on the stream which issues from lake Tyri 27 m. W. Christiansia. Pop. 4664.

MODLITVOE, or MALATVO, a maritime tn. in Ceylon. V. E. coast, on a river sufficiently deep at the mouth to admit small craft, lat. 9° 15' N. lon 80° 45' E.

MODLMYNE, a seaport in India. See MOULMYNE

MOEN, an isl. Russia. See MOOR

MOEV a la. and com. Belgium prov. W. Flanders, about 6 m. S. E. Courtray. It has a brewery, two tobacco factories, and several mills. Pop. 7400.

MOEN [Latin Moen, Phrygian Demos] an isl. Denmark S. E. of Sweden, from which it is separated by a sandbank and a very shallow channel, greatest length, about 18 m. in greatest breadth 13 m. area, including the small dependent islands of Hyrd and Bogge 70 sq. m. Its highest part is 400 ft. above sea, and more than half of it is not over 160 ft. high. The whole island belongs to the extraneous formation, and generally consists of masses of fine white chalk, intersected by flints. The soil consists generally of alluvium with a mixture of marl sand, composing a loam of great fertility. Most of the high grounds are covered with beech wood and smaller trees, which, seen from the sea, have a striking appearance. There are no proper straits on the island, and only a few lakes, which are of small extent, but considerable depth. Moor belongs to bail Frislev. Its chief town is Steen. Pop. including Hyrd and Bogge, 18,300.

MOERKEKE, two villa. and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders—1 18 m. N. E. Ghent with five breweries, two tanneries, four bleacheries, several corn and oil mills, linen and cotton weaving and some trade in grain timber and hay. Pop. 3899.—2, 13 m. N. E. Ghent with manufactures of linen, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1281.

MOERKE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. W. Flanders, on the Moerdijkvaert 18 m. W. C. W. Brugge. It has two breweries, a bleachfield, an oil and a flour mill. Pop. 1160.

MOERIS (JAXA), or Bahr-el-Khazoo (Lake of the Horn) lake, Central Egypt 40 m. S. W. Cairo lat. (E. and) 29° 55' N. lon 30° 58' E. about 25 m. long, by 3 m. broad, curved at its W. end and 23½ ft. deep at its deepest part. A great portion of the shores is rocky the remainder is flat and sandy and encumbered with salt. It communicates, by two large branches, with the Nile, during the inundations of the latter. It abounds in fish.

MOERKEKE a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. W. Flanders, 5 m. N. E. Brugge. Inhabitants chiefly engaged in domestic weaving and laundry. Pop. 2910.

MOERKEKE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. W. Flanders, 19 m. E. Ghent, 1 bank Scheldt with manufactures of linen and hampen fabrics, two breweries, two flour and two oil mills. Pop. 6237.

MOFFAT a vil. and par. Scotland co. and 20 m. N. N. E. Dumfries, pleasantly situated in the valley of the Annan, enflamed from three sides by lofty hills and much resorted to for its mineral springs. It has an established church with a conspicuous spire, a Free and a U. S. Presbyterian church, a market-house, watch bank and assembly room, several schools, reading rooms and baths. The principal spring is saline-sulphureous. Inhabitants chiefly engaged in agriculture. Dr. David Welsh, late professor of ecclesiastical history New College, Edinburgh was a native of the parish. Area of par. 88,400 ac. Pop. 2304.—Local Correspondent.

MOGADOR or BURNA, a considerable seaport in Morocco, lat. 31° 30' 29" N. lon 9° 47' 58" W., about 110 m. W. of S. the city of Morocco. It stands on a low sandy spot, which terminates towards the sea in rocks forming high-water syrtis, the sea flows quite round the town, leaving an extensive swamp behind it. It is of an irregular form, encompassed by a wall with flanking batteries at each angle, and a line of heavy guns on that portion of it which fronts the sea. The streets are straight but narrow, buildings chiefly in the old Spanish style, and of two and in some cases three stories, and mostly white-washed. The mosques are, some of them, splendid specimens of architecture. The streets are crowded with people—Jews, Moors, Egyptians, &c.—and with camels, speckled Arab steeds, mules and oxen, some with riders, others coming in from the different gateways leading to the country, laden with jars and skins of water, and packs of fruits and vegetables. The Jews, who amount to about 4000, reside in a quarter appropriated to themselves, and separated, by a wall from that of the Moors, whose portion is called the citadel where, also the foreign merchants live. The whole of the laborious work in the town and port, is performed by Jews; and the domestic servants are all Jews or Jewsesses. The harbour which is formed by an island to the S. of Mogador, 3 m. long by 3 m. broad, is suitable for vessels of 150 tons. The market is amply supplied with provisions of all sorts, including fish, poultry, and game, also fruit and vegetables, all at reasonable prices. The principal exports are wool, gum, wax, hides, skins, almonds, honey, ostrich feathers and gold-stuff imports, iron, hardware, and cotton goods, vessels entered in 1858, 100 of 28,576 tons; cleared 91 of 20,641 ton value of cargoes, £269,324 and £385,068 respectively. Mogador was founded in 1760, by the emperor Suleiman who was desirous of considering at the principal seat of commerce in the empire. With this view he gave the merchants ground to build upon, and allowed them to export produce free of duty. Pop. variously stated from 8500 to 30,000.

MOGADOURO a la. and par. Portugal prov. Tracoste, 22 m. N. E. Moncorvo on a height. It is walled defended by a castle, and contains a Franciscan convent. Pop. 563.

MOGAUAG, a tn. Burmah, at the junction of the Mogauing or Kungking and Nanyang rivers, 70 m. N.W. Bhamo. It extends about a mile E. and W. along the first-named river. The town consists of about 800 houses, and is partly surrounded by a wicker stockade. Within the stockade the inhabitants are Shans, outside they are Burmese, Shwans, Annamese, and a few Chinese. The houses of the Shwans are large, comfortable, read residences; those of the Burmese and others are the same as the houses to be seen in all parts of Burmah Proper, but exhibit signs of great poverty those of the Chinese however are comfortable, and relieve the poverty stricken aspect of the place, which has no bazaar. — Four Asiatic Soc. Bengal, April, 1837.]

MOGUELY two parts Incl. Cork —1, 6430 ac. Pop. 2218 —2, 9709 ac. Pop. 1873

MOGUESHA par Incl. Cork 3489 ac. Pop. 1925

MOGEL-TORSEN, a vil. Denmark. See TORSEN.
MOGELSBURG a tn. and par. Switzerland, can. and 13 m. W.S.W. St. Gall with a church, used both by Protestants and R. Catholics; several cotton factories, and a considerable transit trade in flour, leather, salt, beer, &c. Pop. 2960.

MOGENTE, a tn. in Spain prov. and 43 m. S.W. Valencia. A bank castle. It has a townhouse and prison, endowed primary school for each sex, a palace belonging to the Marques de la Romana, a church, and a suppressed monastery, and, in the vicinity, are three hermitages, several fountains, and a planted promenade with some glass making and six flour-mills. 1 op. (agricultural), 3594.

MOGGHO or BORZO a vil. kingd. of Italy gov. Varese, prov. Brianza, 24 N. Udine, with several district courts and offices, and a church. Pop. 2792.

MOGHYANI a tn. Lugal. See MUNGOYANA.
MOGI has churches in Brazil prov. and 35 m. P.N.E. São-Paulo, about 4 m. from 1 bank town. It has a handsome parish and three other churches, a Carmelite convent, a Latin and a primary school, manufactures of woolen cloth and a trade in sugar, rum, cotton, and coffee, which are carried by mules to Santos or São Sebastião, and then shipped for Rio-de-Janeiro. Pop. dist. 9000.

MOGI-GUAÇU a vil. and par. Brazil, prov. and 170 m. N.E. São-Paulo, r. bank river of same name. It has a church and a trade in cattle and swine and good fishing in the river.
MOGI-MUNIZ a tn. Brazil prov. and 115 m. N.W. E. São-Paulo, 1 bank river of same name with a handsome church, a Carmelite convent, and a trade in horses and cattle, poultry, cheese, millet, cotton, sugar and rum. P. dist., 6000.

MOGILÉF a gov. and tn. Russia. See MOHILEV.
MOGILNO a tn. Prussia, prov. W. Prussia, gov. and 23 m. S.W. Bromberg, cap. circle, on a lake with three churches, a synagogue, Bernardine cloister and hospital. Pop. 1505. Area of circle, 297 sq. m. 1 op. 34,313.

MOGLINGEN, a vil. Württemberg circle Neckar bail and near Ludwigsburg, with a parish church. Pop. 1163.

MOGOBO, a vil. Isl. Sardinia, div. and about 84 m. N.W. Cagliari, on an elevated plateau of same name, with a church, a Carmelite convent, and a primary school, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and a trade in corn. P. 2160.

MOGUER a tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 4 m. E. Huelva, 1 bank Tinto 5 m. from its mouth. The streets are generally broad, straight, and paved and a considerable portion of the houses are two stories high. It has three squares, in one of which stands the townhouse, an elegant dome edifice, with a gateway in the upper part, three schools, a custom house, an hospital, seldom occupied except by vagrants and a handsome church, of the Carmelite order, with a tower built after the model of the Giralda at Seville. Agriculture, flour-mills, brandy distilleries, and a few hand looms for coarse linen and hempen stuffs, are the chief means of employment. Oil, wheat, &c. are imported, and wine, the principal production of the district, exported. Pop. 5437.

MOGYOROD, a vil. Hungary co. and about 10 m. from Pesth with a church. Pop. 1001.

MOH or MOCHER a vil. Austria, Transylvania, near Hermannstadt, with a Greek non-united church. P. 1185.

MOHA, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 19 m. S.W. Liège, on the Malainque. It has several quarries of paving stones, a tile-works, a brewery an oil, two hemp and two flour mills. An inferior kind of coal (terre-bouille) is worked in the vicinity. Pop. 1099.

MOHACS, a tn. Hungary Thither Danube, co. Banya, cap. dist. on the Danube, 25 m. E.S.E. Fünfkirchen. It is the site of a bishop, whose palace is the most handsome edifice of the town and has a R. Catholic, a Greek non-united, and a Protestant church, Franciscan monastery, post-office, county buildings, and gymnasium in active trade, at its quay on the Danube, where considerable quantities of wine, agricultural produce of all kinds corn, wood and other articles, are weekly loaded and despatched, chiefly to Vienna. The annual fairs, five in number are much frequented and, at the principal one, 30,000 head of fat cattle are often sold. The steam boats on the Danube have a station here. Two famous battles have been fought in the neighbourhood of Mohacs—one, in 1526, when Bolgman at the head of 200,000 Turks defeated and slew Lova II., at the head of 30,000 Christians and the other in 1680 when the Turks were defeated with the loss of 20,000 men. Pop. 10,060.

MOHALITZ, a tn. Asiatic Turkey, See MENAHUT.
MOHAWK a river U. States, New York. It rises near Lake Ontario and after a course of 135 m. first S. and then E. by 8 joins the Hudson 10 m. above Albany. It has two principal falls, which afford extensive water-power.

MOHEDAS, two places, Spain.—1. A vil. Lirrenadura, prov. and 30 m. from Caceres, consisting chiefly of mean houses huddled together without any order. It has a parish church, courthouses, prison, and primary school several oil and flour mills, and a trade in oil and corn. Pop. 986.—2. (de la Jara) a vil. New Castle, prov. and 65 m. from Toledo with a church, a courthouses, and primary school several oil and flour mills and a trade in corn, wine and cattle. Pop. 1059.

MOHILEV a gov. Russia, bounded N. by Vitebsk, E. by Smolensk S.E. Orel S. Czernigov and W. Minsk, lat. 53° 30' lon. 28° 45' to 33° 30' E. greatest length N. to S. 210 m. breadth breadth 113 m. Though containing part of the watershed which divides Europe into two great basins, the surface is generally flat, consisting of a very extensive S. and a much smaller N. plain. The former belongs to the S. Drina, and sends its waters to it by two small tributaries, the latter to the Dnieper which, besides traversing a great part of it centrally and forming part of its S.W. boundary is also augmented within it by the Dvina, on the right, and the Sej with its tributaries Ostr and Berez, on the left. Besides these rivers, the government has several small lakes, and numerous large swamps. Much of the soil is fertile, and, though under very imperfect culture, produces good crops of rye, barley, oats, hemp and flax in other parts, the soil consists either of a cold damp hungry clay or of a loose and almost sterile sand. A considerable portion of the surface is well wooded with oak and fir, and furnishes excellent ship-timber particularly maple. All along the banks of the rivers are rich meadows, on which large numbers of fine cattle are fed. Sheep also, are numerous, and have been very much improved by crossing with the breed of Saxony. The rivers abound with fish, and the forests with game. Bog-iron ore occurs in extensive beds, and is worked to a very limited extent. The manufactures and trade are almost wholly in the hands of the Jews and very insignificant. The former include a few coarse woollen, linen and cotton thames candles, soap, glass and leather the latter is chiefly in timber floated N. by the Dvina to the Baltic, or S. by the Dnieper and its tributaries, to the Black Sea. There is also a small export of hemp, flax, yellow and peach. The inhabitants are a mixture of Lithuanian Russians and Jews and their circumstances are, for the most part, far from comfortable. For administrative purposes, the government is divided into 13 districts. Mohilev is the capital. Pop. (1860) 950,000.

MOHILEV, a tn. Russia, cap. above gov. r. bank Dnieper, 212 m. W. S.W. Moscow lat. (Smith coll.) 53° 58' 45' N. lon. 30° 30' 25' E. It consists of four quarters two of which are surrounded by a rampart and form the town, properly so called, the third, built on a height, forms the Kremlin or citadel, the fourth is a suburb. The town is tolerably well built partly of stone and partly of wood, and the streets are wide and paved. Near the centre is a large octagonal square, surrounded by handsome stone buildings, among others, the bazaar and the palace of the Greek arch

MOHILEV. The number of churches is 30, of which the R. Catholics have five, and the Lutherans one. The Jews, who are numerous, have two synagogues. There are also four convents, two ecclesiastical seminaries, a gymnasium, high school hospital, several poorhouses, and a prison. The staple manufactures are tobacco and an extensive trade is carried on with Riga, Memel, Danzig and Odessa, in leather, wax, honey, potash, oil, and grain. Mohilev besides being the residence of the principal authorities of the government, is the see both of a Greek and R. Catholic archbishop. Many of the Russian nobility reside here, and much of the ground in the vicinity is occupied by gardens. Pop. (1851), 15,568.

MOHILEV a. in Russia, gov. Podolsk, cap. dist. 1 bank Dniester, 60 m. E.S.E. Kazanets. It stands partly at the foot, and partly on the side of a lofty acclivity, and has several Greek and R. Catholic churches, a convent, a school, an active trade, and several well frequented fairs. P. (1842) 9504.—The manner in the S.W. of the gov., well watered and wooded, has a fertile soil, producing rich pastures.

MOHILL, a market to, and par. Ireland, cos. Longford and Leitrim. The town is on Longford, at the foot of a hill, 94 m. E. by S. Carrick-on-Shannon, has an Established church, a R. Catholic chapel and a Methodist meeting house, a dispensary, fever hospital, and munition works, and some trade in corn, butter and pigs. Pop. (agricultural) 1826. Area of par. 6697 ac. P. 1539.—(Local Correspondent).

MOHILL LA one of the Comoros isles, Indian Ocean, at the N. entrance of the Mozambique Channel lat. (S. point) 12 20' S. lon. 44 0' E. (a.) 16 m. S.E. R. Comoro. The coast is rocky with some landing-places here and there. In the interior it is high and mountainous, and thickly clothed with wood, but contains a good deal of fertile land, on which sheep and cattle are reared, and grain and fruits raised. Mohilla was, at one time considered the best of the Comoros for obtaining refreshments but the preference has, for many years been given to Johanna, on account of the anchorage being safer than at any of the others. At the S. end of the island are several small sales with a coral reef around them, behind which good anchorage is to be had. There is also an anchorage place near the shore, at the N. end of Mohilla, and one on the E. end, where refreshments may be obtained.—The principal town is Dong situated close to the beach. It is walled and, along the sea-side, is a solid rampart or platform for a battery of guns. The queen's house, at the N.W. corner of the town, is built in the European style. The principal mosque is situated on the beach outside the town wall.

MOHIM or MARIN, a. in Hindostan, presid. Bengal, prov. and 82 m. W. N.W. Delhi. It covers a large extent of ground, and was once a place of importance, though now ruinous and almost deserted.

MOHLIN a. in, and par. Switzerland, can. Aargau, 11 m. E. Basel with a church and school. Pop. 1973.

MOHRA, a. vil. Saxo-Mannung, on the Mohrloch with a parish church. It is the place from which Luther's family originally came, and where his parents lived before their removal to Eisleben; it possesses a statue of the Reformer.

MOHRIN a. to Prussia, prov. Brandenburg, gov. and 37 m. Frankfurt, on the Schippe, and a lake. It is walled; it has a court of justice, a parish church, a mill and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1850.

MOHRING —in Bavaria. See MOHRING.
MOHRINGEN—1. A vil. Württemberg circle Neckar lat. and near Stuttgart, with a church and two mills. Pop. 2145.—2. A. in Baden, Lake circle, on the Dembe, 29 m. N.W. W. Constance. It has a castle, manufactures of calico and hosiery, tile-works, and a trade in sheep. Pop. 1200.

MOHRUNGEN a. in Prussia, gov. and 60 m. S.W. R. Paderborn, cap. circle, between Lakes Mohrung and Soberung. It has a church, castle, and house of correction (near houses of lunatic, and a trade in yarn. Pop. 5770. Area of circle 856 sq. m. Pop. 45,911.

MOJABAT, a. both or term of the sea, Scotland, in a district of the same name, S.W. coast of Inverness-shire. It is about 4 m. long W. to E., and is comparatively shallow, a great part of it being laid dry at low water. In its mouth is the island of Shana, on each side of which the sea enters by narrow channels. It gives its name to a mountainous district, about 18 m. long by 8 m. broad, between Lochabail, Loch Eyle, Loch Aylor, and the sea.

MOIE, or MORE, a. vil. and com. France, dep. Haute Savois, prov. Genevoise, 5 m. from Annemasse, with a church, a charitable endowment, the remains of an old castle, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1839.

MOILAH, or MOHRA, a. maritime vil. and fortress, Arabia Petros, on the Red Sea, about 45 m. S.W. from the entrance to the Gulf of Akabah lat. 37 40' N. lon. 85° 29' E. (a.) It is one of the stations used as a depot for grain for Muscatine pilgrims. A small garrison of Turkish soldiers protects the place. Excellent water and sheep are to be obtained here, but the anchorage is unfit either for ships or boats.

MOIMENTA NA BUNDA a. in, and par. Portugal, prov. Beira-Alta, com. and 31 m. S.E. Lamego. P. 1250.

MOINES (lit. aux) a small isle France, Gulf of Morbihan off the coast of dep. Côtes-du-Nord about 13 m. N. Lannion. It is the largest of the group called Sept Îles or Seven Isles, and the only one which is inhabited. It is surrounded by steep rocks, but has two good roadsides, both of which are defended by a fort.

MOIRA, a. vil. and par. Ireland, on Down 14 m. S.W. Belfast, near the railway thence to Armagh, with a handsome Established church, two Presbyterian meeting-houses, a Methodist and R. Catholic chapel, several schools, a handsome courthouse, and a market-house, mullin and embleir weaving, in which the inhabitants are chiefly employed. Area of par. 8096 ac. Pop. 3436.—(Local Correspondent).

MOIRBAU (Latin Musconow), a. in France, Turn-et-Garonne, r. bank Tarn, here navigable and crossed by a handsome bridge, 15 m. W. N.W. Montauban. It is surrounded by a shady boulevard, occupying the site of the ancient ramparts, is well built has a fine old church, entered by a remarkable portal, on which numerous fantastic sculptured figures are engraved, a court of first resort and commerce, a communal college, and a considerable trade by the Tarn particularly in fine flour, exported to the Levant and the colonies, oil, saffron, wine, and wool. P. 6168.

MOJACAH, a. in Spain Andalusia, prov. and 40 m. N.E. Almería, and about 5 miles from the Mediterranean. It has two squares, a townhouse and prison, two primary schools, a religious and one almost inaccessible a grammar school, and three hermitages, a flour and three oil mills, a work for smelting argenteous ores, obtained from the Sierra Almagra, and some agriculture. It was wrested from the Moors by Ferdinand and Isabella in 1488. Pop. 4800.

MOJADOS, a. in Spain Leon, prov. and 16 m. S. Valladolid on a gentle slope above 1 bank Caga. here crossed by a bridge of six arches. It has two churches, a palace, courthouse, prison primary school, several flour mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1062.

MOJATSK, or MOJALSK, a. in Russia, gov. and 63 m. W. S.W. Moscow cap. dist., on a height bounded on two sides by deep ravines, and on another by the Mojalka, which is crossed by three bridges, and here joins the Moskwa. It is defended by a fortress, was almost entirely destroyed after the battle of the Moskwa, and has been rebuilt in a much less proved form. It has three churches of stone besides seven of wood; a convent, superior school and almshouse, and a considerable trade in corn, wool, and deals. Pop. (1850) 2863.—The fortress contains large tracts of forest and several extensive marshes, and is in general not very fertile. Area 511 sq. m. P. 51,500.

MOJURKH, a. in K. W. Hindostan, principlality and 45 m. S.E. Bhatnagar lat. 29° 1' N. lon. 72° 11' E. in the desert extending through the N. part of the State. It has walls about 50 ft. high, and 3½ ft. thick, with numerous bastions. A mosque conspicuously surmounts the gateway, and a little to the N. is a Mahometan tomb, with a couple, profusely ornamented with coloured glazed tiles.

MOJOLA or MOJOLONA a. vil. and com. Italy Piedmont Prov. Cuni, about 4 m. from Doguette 1 bank Stura, with a church and a charitable endowment. Pop. 1028.

MOJSEAN, or MOJSAV, a. vil. Hungary Thäher, com. Marosvas, about 20 m. from Balgha, with a Greek church and a monastery in its neighbourhood. Pop. 1768.

MOKCHA or MOJOKA, a. river, Russia, which rises in the S. of gov. Pensa, a little N.E. of Tobolsk. Flows S. to N. across gov. Pensa, bends round to the W., enters gov. Tambour and flows W. S.W., and joins r. bank Oka, about 18 m. above Ekaterin. Total course, about 260 m., principal affluents, the Ias on the r., and the Yad and Tana on the l. bank. It is well stocked with fish, but not navigable.

MOKHA a seaport, Arabia. See MOGHA.

MOKRIN is in Hungary. Further Thence so Torontai, 20 m. from Szeged. It has a Greek church and a trade in corn, fax, hemp, cattle, sheep, and swine. Pop. 5354.

MOERHANSK, a to Russia, gov and 23 m. N N W Pensa, esp dist., on the Moksha. It has six churches, all of wood, a Greek convent, a manufactory of woollen cloth and distinguished itself in 1717, by its valiant defence against an invasion of the Tartars of the Kuchan. Pop (1851) 9103 MOLA, several places, Naples—1, (or de-Berò, (Latin Turris Subura) a m and seaport, prov and 12 m. E.S.E. Bari, on the Adriatic. It consists of an old and a new town, the former surrounded by a wall and ditch, and defended by a castle but the houses poor and in bad condition, the streets narrow, irregular, and dark. The latter, lying along the sea-side, is much better built. The harbour is insecure, and the roadstead though it has depth of water for the largest vessels, is quite open. About 7000—2, (di-Gaeta), a tn. prov Terra-di-Lavoro dist. and 4 m. N E Gaeta, on the Apennine way near the foot of the Apennines, inhabitants, fishermen. Chero had a villa in the vicinity, and is said to have met his death here from the assassin of Antony—3, A tn. in Sicily, prov and about 20 m. S.W. Messina, on a lofty promontory, walled and defended by a strong castle.

MOLAHIFFE par Irish Kerry 9805 sq. P 2370

MOLAR, a vil Spain, New Castile, prov and 23 m. N Madrid with two small squares, irregular and ill-paved streets, a townhouse, prison, two schools a church and three hermitages, and near it some mineral baths Pop., chiefly agricultural 1487.

MOLARE or MORIANE a tn. Italy, Piedmont, dir Alessandria, prov and 10 m. E S E Aqm in a beautiful valley 1 bank Orba with a large and handsome church and a trade in corn wine and cattle Pop. 1499 MOLARE, or MORDANE par Eng Kent 1449 sq. P 540.

MOLABANA a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, dir Genoa, about 1 m. from Biagellina, near the Buegno, with a church, and a trade in corn and wine Pop. 1871

MOLD, a par her market in and par N Wales, co. Flint. The town is pleasantly situated on a fertile plain 64 m. S. Flint, on a branch of the Chester and Holyhead railway. The houses are for the most part well built, generally of brick, amply supplied with water, and well lighted with gas. It has an elegant established church, with a lofty tower, four dissenting chapels, a national, British, and several private schools, and two commodious market-halls. There are several large collieries and lead-mines in the immediate neighbourhood, which employ a good many hands, but the inhabitants are chiefly occupied in agriculture. Mold unites with Flint, &c., in sending a member to Parliament. Pop. (1851) 5459

Area of par, 18,104 sq. P 10 898.—(Local Correspondent)

MOLDAU, MOZNAVA or Beava, a market in Hungary, co. Abaujvar, on the Bodva, 16 m. from Kaschau. It was once a place of some importance surrounded by walls and entered by several gates, and has still a handsome courthouse, a large old church, manufactory of leather three mills, and an extensive trade in corn Pop. 2455.

MOLDAU (Bohemian, Wlawa), a river Bohemia, which rises in the Schwarzwald belonging to the Böhmerwald, in the S. of the Kreis Frischau, on the frontiers of Bavaria flows first S.E. to Rosenburg, where it suddenly turns almost due N, and continuing to follow that direction, though in a somewhat crooked course, passes Budweis, where, on the right, it receives the Malca, and reaches Moldau town, a few miles below which it receives also on the right, the Lugeh nitz, still proceeding N it receives the Wottawa on the left, near Klingenberg, the Sava on the right, near Dalrie, and shortly after, on its left, the most important of all its tributaries, the Beroun. Having now become a noble river it traverses the town of Prague and ultimately, after changing its direction, and turning the E. joins 1 bank Elbe, 17 m. N Prague. Its whole course is about 290 m. It begins to be navigable at Rosenburg, where its N course commences, but at first only for shallow barges. Below Prague it floats vessels of 80 tons. It is well supplied with fish.

MOLDAU-TURN, a tn. Bohemia, circle and 18 m. N Budweis on the Moldau. It has a church, chapel barracks, townhouse, hospital and castle, built near the site of an ancient castle of the Tumpfers. Over a chalybeate spring in the town a bathing establishment has been erected. There are several mills Pop. 3531

MOLDAVIA (PRINCIPATUL ROMÂNIEI) [German, Moldau, Turkish, Bulgar or Kara Eghor, a state of E. Europe, and one of the three Danubian principalities, under the suzerainty of Turkey capital city Jassy. It is bounded N and E. by Russia, being separated from gov Bessarabia by the Pruth, Yalpuch, Kirsan, and Sarikuts, S. Wallachia and Turkey and W. the Austrian provinces of Transylvania and Bukovina, lat 44° 50' to 47° 18' N lon 26° 18' to 30° 12' E. It is 320 m. S.E. to N.W. and about 100 m. E. to W. throughout three-fourths of its length, the remaining fourth abruptly diminishing to about 45 m. The general surface of the country, excepting the W. frontier, may be represented as composed of undulating plains of great beauty and vast extent, covered with luxuriant crops of grass. Towards the W. the plains are succeeded by hills and valleys formed by detached branches of the great Carpathian chain, which separates this country from Transylvania. It is watered by several considerable streams, the largest, the Sireth traverses it longitudinally, nearly throughout its entire length. The other larger rivers are the Ristritza, Birlut, Moldava, Tiras and Tassila all affluents of the Sireth, in its turn a tributary of the Danube, and all flowing N to S. As already mentioned it has also the Pruth on its E. border, and, for a short distance, the Danube on its S. limit. It possesses considerable mineral wealth, of which, however little advantage has been taken. Rock-salt abounds in the vicinity of the Carpathian mountains, asphaltum is found in several parts, and a great quantity of saltpetre is produced, chiefly in the N. part of the country while in the sands of several of the rivers, particularly the Ristritza, small quantities of gold are found. Many parts of the country are poor, and uncultivated, and but thinly inhabited, while others support a numerous population, and are remarkable for their beauty and fertility, other portions, again are covered with extensive forests. The climate is warm in summer but frequently severe in winter. In hot seasons and in the neighbourhood of marshes, it is unhealthy. The principal products are wheat, barley, millet and maize, wine and tobacco are also produced in considerable quantity—some of the former of excellent quality, particularly when vintages of the mountains, which are more pure. Agriculture, however, is but indifferently understood, and the implements of husbandry of the worst and most rude description. But by far the greater portion of the country is in pasture, on which vast numbers of cattle, horses, sheep, and goats are reared. Large herds of hogs, also, are fed in the forests. The Moldavians pay considerable attention to their breed of horses great numbers of which are sent into Austria and Prussia for the service of the light cavalry. The cattle, in general, are superior to those of E. Europe, and are driven for sale as far as Vienna, and even to Breslau in Silesia. The wild animals are stag, wild boar, bears, wolves, foxes, wild goats, hares, and martlets. Bees also abound. The manufactures of the province are very trifling, and are calculated for home consumption alone. Its foreign trade, however, through its port of Galatz, on the Danube (which see) is considerable and is increasing. The principal exports are wheat—large quantities of which are brought down the Danube from Hungary—maize, maize and sugar, tallow, wine, plank and deal preserved beef, bagging stuff, &c. Imports, manufactures and twist, sugar, coffee, iron, oil, dried fruits, lamons, tobacco, caviar salted fish, skins, alba, or coarse cloth, &c. But there is, besides this, a large internal or inland traffic, chiefly in cattle, with Russia, Austria, and Turkey. The great bulk of the people in Moldavia are employed more or less in agricultural pursuits, the poorer classes cultivating the lands of the richer and receiving payment in kind instead of money. They are a very intelligent and industrious race, quiet and harmless, and though given to drinking yet quarrelling and fighting are almost unknown among them. They are also extremely hospitable to strangers; but it is said of the upper that they are harsh towards their inferiors, distrustful, and vindictive. The principal food of the peasantry consists of a kind of dough made of the flour of Indian wheat, sometimes mixed with milk. Their dress consists of a loose kind of pantalon, which is fastened to the waist by a tight leather hollowed stems from the house downwards with a tight waist cord and a short jacket over it. On their feet they wear sandals of goat-skin. The women are generally clothed from the neck to the ankles in a long gown of light-coloured thick cotton made tight at the waist. Under ordinary circumstances, the poorer classes go barefooted, and use no covering for the head excepting a handkerchief. The foundation of the Moldavian language is Latin, intermixed, however, with number of Slavonic and Turkish words. Education is in a very low state. The established religion is that of the Greek church, although there are a great number of Turks, Armenians, Jews, and Gypsies, in the principality the last so numerous as to form a marked feature in the structure of its society. Moldavia is governed by a prince named the Hoepodar who is elected by the nobles of the first rank (boyards) delegates from the lesser nobility from the cities of the town and the learned bodies, but this nomination must be submitted for the approbation both of Russia and the Ottoman Porte the latter of whom confers investiture. A diet, composed of nobles and clergy discusses all propositions made by the prince, and votes taxes, but all decisions require to be submitted for the sanction of Russia. Moldavia is divided into 12 districts, subdivided into 59 circles, and has 81 towns. Jassy the capital, and Galatz, the principal port, by far the most important. The army is organized on the Russian plan, and can be reinforced by a considerable number of peasant militia, but it has no cannons or fortresses. Moldavia has been tributary to the Porte since the 16th century. Its political state was again fettered by the treaties of 1858 and 1859 (the latter that of Adrianople) between Russia and Turkey while maintaining the sovereignty of the latter the country was placed under the protection of Russia. In 1834 Turkey recognised the right of Moldavia to display a national flag. P (1839) 1 419 105

MOLDE, a small seaport, Norway W coast prov Bomsdal, on a bay of its own name. 83 m S 8 W Christianand. It has a church an hospital an active fishery and a trade in timber and pitch. Pop (1855) 1454.

MOLDOVA two places Hungary.—1 (U) A tn. Further Thesse, on Krasova, 56 m E Belgrade with a R. Catholic church, and extensive copper-mines, and several smelting-furnaces, in the neighbourhood. P 2800.—2 (G) A vil. Banat, and 55 m. E by S. Belgrade, near the Danube, opposite an island of the same name with a church and school house, and the ruins of an ancient castle. Pop 1678

MOLÉ, a river England, which rises on the border of co. Sussex, traverses Surrey and enters the Thames opposite Hampton Court. total course about 30 m

MOLEMBAIX a vil and com. Belgium prov Hainaut, 80 m. N W Mons. It has manufactures of linen, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1598

MOLENBEK (or Moan) a tn. and com. Belgium, prov Brabant, on the Senne, and partly traversed by the canals of Charleroi and Willebroeck. It is surrounded by elegant villas, and contains a handsome church, and the excellent geographical establishment of Philip Vandermaelen. There is also a musical society. It has a saw and a flour mill a large pottery a carriage-factory foundries, tanneries, breweries, and distilleries, and a good general trade. P 7299

MOLEREY or Molner two par. England, Surrey.—1 (East) 780 ac. Pop. 765.—2 (West) 950 ac. Pop. 480

MOLLEWORTH, par. Eng. Rutland, 1740 ac. P 245

MOLFETTA, a tn. and seaport, Naples, prov and 15 m. W N W Bari, on the Adriatic. It has a striking appearance, being approached from the sea, and a number of good houses, some of them built of a white stone resembling marble; but the streets are narrow, and by no means clean. It has a cathedral and several other churches, and a college manufactures of linen and salt-petre a harbour, well sheltered, except on the N, and provided with a building-dock and a considerable trade in corn, oil, and fruit. Pop. 13,000

MOLNEM Bessarabia, a vil and com. Belgium, prov Brabant, on a small stream, 6 m. N W Brussels. It has two flour-mills. The inhabitants are almost all employed in agriculture. Pop. 1000

MOLINA, two places, Spain.—1 A vil., prov and 6 m N Murcia on the Segura. It is mostly scattered in groups of houses over a considerable extent of ground, and has a square, used as a market-place, a town-house, grammar three primary schools, a church, two sacristies, a cemetery three mills, some linen-weaving, a silk-works, and a pepper-mill. In the neighbourhood are three hermitages, and some productive salt-pools. Pop. 3086.—2 (de dragon), a tn. New Castle, prov Guadalajara, 105 m. N E. Matamoros, on the Galleo or Molina, at the foot of a hill crowned with an ancient fortress. It has an old wall with seven gates five squares, a town-house prison, a primary and an advanced school, several monasteries, one of them converted into a theatre, another into a barracks, and a third into an elementary school-house an hospital, four hermitages, some four, five fallow, and two chocolate mills, potteries, a brick and tile work, some looms for domestic linen-weaving, and a tannery. Agriculture and cattle-rearing are likewise carried on. Pop. 3458

MOLINARA a tn. Naples, prov Principato-Ultra, dist. and 13 m. N W Ariano. Pop. 3000.

MOLINETTO a vil and com. France, dep. Alpes Maritimes, 10 m. from Bospelle with a parish church two monasteries an almshouse, and a trade in wood and cattle. P 1000.

MOLINCH, a tn. Spain, Aragon, prov Teruel 68 m. S. S. E. Saragossa with a church and primary school manufactures of linen, and a trade in wheat, oil, apples, and other fruit. Pop. 1379

MOLINS-DE-REY a tn. Spain, Catalonia, prov and 6 m. S. W. Barcelona, 1 bank Llobregat, with a church, court-house, primary school manufactures of plan and printed cottons and lace, and a trade in wine, hemp, and fruit. P 1056

MOLIRÃO, a vil. and par. Brazil prov Rio-de-Janeiro, in the serras das Orgãos between the sources of the Grande, an affluent of the Paraíba with a numerous inhabitants chiefly Indians imperfectly civilized. Pop. 1000

MOLISE, a prov. Naples S. S. MANDIO.

MOLITCHNIA or MOLICHNIA TORY a river Russia, gov. Taurida, which rises S. E. of Orskhov flows S. W. and, after a course of about 70 m., expands into Lake Molotchne, which communicates with the Sea of Azof. Several German colonies have been established on its banks

MÖLK, or MILX (anc. Melchum) a vil. Lower Austria, r. bank Danube, 45 m. W Vienna, notable for its Benedictine abbey, situated on a rock which overhangs the town, 180 ft. above the river. It has more the appearance of a royal palace than a cloister, and occupies the site of an earlier edifice, in which the Habsburg princes of Austria used to reside. It is one of the richest establishments of the kind in Europe and, at the period of Bonaparte's invasion, 1805-9 when enormous contributions were levied upon it, supplied his army from its cellars with 50,000 phials of wine for several days in succession. The church of the abbey is gorgeously adorned within with gold and red marble, and is celebrated for its fine organ, and the library, which occupies a magnificent apartment, contains 20,000 printed volumes and 1600 MSS. There is also a good collection of paintings. MÖLK is one of the Danube steam boat stations. Pop. 1000

MÖLL, a tn. and com. Belgium, prov and 83 m. P Antwerp, r. bank Moll-dieche with a handsome church four chapels, an hospital, prison, two primary schools, two dyeworks, a brewery distillery some corn and oil mills, and manufactures of woollen fabrics, tobacco, hats, leather, and bricks. Pop. 5021

MÖLLAND par. Eng. Devon, 8168 ac. Pop. 603

MÖLLEAAR, or MÖLLEAAR, a small stream, Denmark (el. Seeland). It rises a little S. E. Slangerup forms several small lakes, and after a course of about 20 m. falls into the Sound about 9 m. N Copenhagen. It is of no navigable, but of considerable manufacturing importance, from the number of public works to which it furnishes water-power

MOLLEDA (San Esteban), a vil. Spain, Asturias, prov and about 18 m. from Oviedo, on an uneven site, with a church primary school and numerous flour-mills. P 1900

MÖLLHAUSEN, a vil. Wittenberg. See Essenau

MÖLLINA, a tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov and about 85 m. from Malaga; notably well built, with a church, and two primary schools. Pop. (agricultural), 1771

MÖLLIS, a vil. and par. Switzerland, cant. and 4 m. N Glarus, cap. dist., near r. bank Linth, at the foot of the Frohnalpstock with a parish church, an old house, interesting as the place where some of the earliest Swiss confederates used to hold their meetings; manufactures of woollen cloth, and a trade in Schabziger cheese and in wine, which is partially grown in the vicinity. Pop. 1064.

MOLLN, or MOLLAN, a tn. Denmark; Slesvig Lauenburg, on a small lake of the same name, 13 m. S. Lübeck. Remains of the chief occupation of the inhabitants. P. 2730.

MOLLN a vil. Upper Austria, circle Traun, on a hill between the Steier and the Mollnsee. Stealing with a church, and manufacture of scythes, and Jews harps. Pop. 1246.

MOLOGA, a tn. Russia, gov. and 70 m. N.W. Jaroslavl cap. dist., in a marshy country, at the confluence of the Mologa with the Volga. It has two churches, a considerable trade, particularly in linen, corn, and provisions, which are purchased in the S., and find their market occasionally as far as Petersburg. Many of the inhabitants are employed as plowmen, harnessed, and raftsmen. P. (1843), 4346.—The district is partly of a marshy, partly of a dry and fertile soil. Wood covers extensive tracts, but is in general of small size, or indifferent quality. Pop. 68 871.—The river rises in N.E. of gov. Tver, flows W.S.W. to Makino, then suddenly turns N. enters gov. Novgorod and ending E., reaches Luga. Proceeding thence easterly, it ultimately turns S.E., forms part of the boundary between gov. Novgorod and Tver, passing Yegorovsk, enters gov. Jaroslavl, and joins the Volga. A total course about 400 m., but so very irregular that the direct distance between one of its sources and its mouth, little exceeds 100 m. It is navigable for the largest barges from Ustjuga. Its principal affluents are the Sereb river, Roboje Tobogoda, and Xana on the l. and the Klama and Lona on the r. bank.

MOLOKAI, or MONOROI, one of the Sandwich Is. Pacific Ocean lat. 21° 9' N. lon. 156° 51' W. (n.) It is long and irregular and is apparently formed by a chain of volcanic mountains, 40 m. long, and 7 m. to 9 m. broad. The mountains are lofty, and are broken by numerous deep ravines and water-courses, the sides of which are frequently clothed with verdure and ornamented with shrubs and trees. There is but little level land in the island, and consequently few plantations, but several spots repay the trouble of cultivation, although scarcely one-third of it is a barren waste, and but thinly inhabited. The inhabitants are very poor, and ill-provided with necessaries. Pop. (1840) 6000.

MOLOKAI, par. lat. 22° 30' N. lon. 156° 51' W. (n.) It is long and irregular, and is apparently formed by a chain of volcanic mountains, 40 m. long, and 7 m. to 9 m. broad. The mountains are lofty, and are broken by numerous deep ravines and water-courses, the sides of which are frequently clothed with verdure and ornamented with shrubs and trees. There is but little level land in the island, and consequently few plantations, but several spots repay the trouble of cultivation, although scarcely one-third of it is a barren waste, and but thinly inhabited. The inhabitants are very poor, and ill-provided with necessaries. Pop. (1840) 6000.

MOLTON (Molton), par. lat. 54° 35' N. lon. 1° 35' W. (n.) It is long and irregular, and is apparently formed by a chain of volcanic mountains, 40 m. long, and 7 m. to 9 m. broad. The mountains are lofty, and are broken by numerous deep ravines and water-courses, the sides of which are frequently clothed with verdure and ornamented with shrubs and trees. There is but little level land in the island, and consequently few plantations, but several spots repay the trouble of cultivation, although scarcely one-third of it is a barren waste, and but thinly inhabited. The inhabitants are very poor, and ill-provided with necessaries. Pop. (1840) 6000.

MOLUA, a nation in the interior of Africa, E. of Congo, with whom the Portuguese in Angola have had communication, with the view of establishing a commercial intercourse. It is governed by a prince, entitled Mafu. Yanvo or Mafu, to whom, in 1802, the Portuguese sent two native mercenary travellers, who rescued the capital by a circuitous route of 77 days, from Pango Andongo (about 150 m. from Loanda). Our authentic information respecting this kingdom, is compressed in the following particulars.—The Molua (correctly Alua, the plural of Molua) occupy the valley of the Lufia, a great river; the main branch of the Lufia, and which may be traced upwards, in a S.E. direction, to lat. 11° W. of the Lufia, and at no great distance from it flows another large river, the Lufia, not fordable. But the Lufia receives its chief accessions from the hills or mountains on its right or E. side, the road from the capital to the Lufia, a distance of 400 m. up the valley, being crossed by at least 100 streams, several of which are not fordable. The capital stands between two small streams, the Inghe and Lufia, which, uniting lower down, flow W. into the Lufia. Its position is probably within the limits of lat. 4° 2' S.

Vol. II.

lon. 19° 20' E. The S. boundaries of the kingdom are 34 days from the capital, being formed, on the W. side of the valley, by the desert ridge which separates the Lufia from the Congo, and on the E. by the river Lufia, where begins the district of the mines (of salt and copper) which formerly belonged to the Mourop, but is now annexed to the dominion of the Kaimbe.

MOLUCCAS (Tas), or SPICE ISLANDS, (Dutch, Molukken French, Molouques), three groups of islands. Indian Archipelago, between Celebes and Papua, and lat. 8° N. and 5° S. 1, The Ternate Islands, or Moluccas proper, consisting of the Ternate, Gilolo, Sautian, Obi, Marori or Morri, and numerous islets.—2, The Ambon Islands, including besides Ambon, which is the chief seat of government for the whole Moluccas, the isle of Ceram, Bourco, Ambuan, and other smaller islands.—3, The Banda Is. (which are) They are nearly all mountainous, and some of them have peaks rising to a height of 7000 ft. or 8000 ft. mostly volcanic, and there are still several active volcanoes in the group. They are very subject to earthquakes a serious visitation of this kind took place on November 23, 1852 the shocks continuing at intervals till December 22 following. Great loss of property and considerable loss of life were sustained by it in the Banda Islands, where the volcanic action seems to have been strongest, but its devastating effects were also felt in Ambon and Ceram, where many lives were likewise lost in Ternate, Sautian, and Gilolo. Cloves and nutmeg, and nut and nutmeg, are exported to Europe and India, nutmeg, nutmeg, and nutmeg, to China. A small quantity of gold, and some birds of paradise, are also exported. The whole number of islands amounts to some hundreds, but most of them are small and uninhabited. The Moluccas have been for centuries alternately in the possession of the Spaniards, Portuguese, and Dutch, but were taken from the latter by the British, in 1796, and restored to them in 1801. In 1810 they were again captured by the British, and in 1814 again given up to Holland, in whose possession they still remain. The general language on the coast is the Malay.

MOLUCCAS, Ireland, Antiquary 929 as P. 786. MOLUCCAS a vil. and com. Spain, Andalusia, par. and about 85 m. from Sevilla, agreeably situated among gardens, watered by mountain streams. It has a church, a suppressed convent, townhouse, prison two schools an oil and several flour mills, and a trade in fruit. Pop. 3206.

MOMBARCANO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont div. Cune, prov. and N.E. Mondovì, on the Balbo with a church and the remains of an old castle and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1080.

MOMBARCANO a tn. Italy Piedmont div. Cune, prov. and N.E. Mondovì, on the Balbo with a church and the remains of an old castle and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1080.

MOMBAS or MOMBARAN (the former the common, the latter the literal Arabic form in the language of the native race, Mpeka), an isl. and E. coast, Africa, lat. 4° 8' S. lon. 39° 49' E. Two small rivers the Yumbo to the N. the Pambala to the S. each with a course of 15 m. or 20 m., run to the same estuary in the middle of which lies the island, about 3 m. long N. to S. and 2 m. wide. The channel separating it from the mainland on the W. is fordable in one place at low water, but the ford is dangerous, and cannot be said to present facilities to an enemy. The shore of the island are everywhere bold, the rock being a sort of conglomerate. When the Portuguese first arrived at this place, at the end of the 16th century, they found a large and well-built town, with a great deal of trade and the people apparently wealthy. In 1607 Almeida took Mombas, and destroyed it by fire. In 1688, the Portuguese again took possession of the island, and appear to have retained it till about 1770. During this period they erected the fort, castle, great tank, and other structures, which remain more or less dilapidated to the present day. The castle stands on a rock, not perpendicularly and is still capable of being rendered a strong hold. Mombas, at the present day, is but a ruin. Its inhabitants are mostly sunk in abject poverty, and wretched hovels are now scattered among the crumbling walls of stately buildings. A few stone houses still remaining, are inhabited by Arab merchants. Immediately behind the walls of the town, on the N. side, is Jokili, a few miles village, that is, a suburb inhabited only by Mahomedan Africans. At the S end of the island is another village of mixed population, called Kilindini. The whole population of the island, probably, does not exceed 6000. The harbour of Mombasa is said to be quite perfect, secure, commodious, roomy and open to the sea-breezes. The Arabs of Muscat having sided in expelling the Portuguese in the early part of the last century, obtained the sovereignty of the place. But in the latter half of the century Mombasa recovered its independence, in defiance of which it maintained an obstinate struggle with the Sultan of Zanzibar. Threatened by him, it placed itself under the protection of the British flag in 1823, was immediately filled with Europeans, and enjoyed for three years a return of marvellous prosperity. But the British government not accepting the cession of the place, the flag was struck in 1826 and the forces of Sultan Said fled aided by an American adventurer with a heavily armed ship, obtained possession of the town soon after. The fall of Mombasa is regarded in E. Africa as a most interesting and celebrated event, and the place, so valiantly defended, has obtained a new name, and is now generally called by the natives Vita, that is, Battle.

43

The mainland, near Mombasa, rises gradually to the W for about 15 m. when it spreads into a plain having a general width, E. to W. of 20 m. S. along this plain, which has an elevation of perhaps 600 ft., rises a chain of hills, to a general height of 1000 ft. Wamun Peak or Jombo (lat. 4° 32' S.) however attaining a height of 2500 ft. Numerous perennial streams run from these hills and the elevated plain to the sea. Towards the interior the country makes to a sea-like plain of hills elevation, and extending into the interior beyond our knowledge, but interrupted by several mountain groups, rising abruptly from it, and not connected in systems. Immediately W. of Mombasa, the high plain extends further and several hills as Kadaro, Manugu, &c. rise from it some of which are visible from the coast. Beyond these hills again, are the Ndara and Bura ridges, running N and S about 60 m. or 70 m. from the sea and called, collectively, the Taita mountains. They probably attain an elevation of 8000 ft. and are well wooded on their summits. The woods on their sides abound in bananas and sugar-cane, while the thorny thickets at their feet, where they reach the low and dry plain serve to protect the villages above.

But beyond these mountains and even visible over them from the hill of Kadaro, stands the giant of these regions, Kilimanjaro or Kihina Njaro [Mount Njaro], distant 120 m. perhaps from the coast. The missionaries of the Church Missionary Society residing near Mombasa, insist on crowing the summit of this mountain with perpetual snow but their evidence on this point, intrinsically weak and defective, is also directly opposed to the statements of the natives, who say positively that perpetual snow is unknown in E. Africa, and who, at the same time, celebrate Kihina Njaro for its great height, and for its carnelians, agates, rock-crystals, and other precious stones, as they deem them for the sake of which it is much visited. From the hills on the side of Kihina Njaro, may be seen Jombo or Wamun Peak on the sea-coast, and Kadaro towards Mombasa. Towards the S.E. the isolated mountains of Ufigo and Pwiro rise abruptly from the level plain. At their N base is the long and narrow lake Iten. Beyond these heights, in the same direction, are seen the mountains of Usambara, near the river Pangani. The Taita mountains, in the E., are followed towards the N.E. by some other smaller masses of similar height and character. The level plain is generally dry, with occasional tracts of thorny thickets, but no large tracts. One or two small rivers run through it from the Taita mountains, whether to the coast or to Lake Iten is not evident. But several copious streams flow from the S. side of Kilimanjaro and probably unite to form the fine river which reaches the sea in lat. 5° 26' S. under the name of Pangani. From the same mountain runs the Tavo or Chava, N.E. to join the Ozi. From this rapid sketch the general drought of the country may be easily understood. For the sources of the Tavo running into the Ozi and of the Pangani are 120 m. from the coast, and these two last-named rivers are 800 m. asunder but of the extensive region encompassed by these streams, the greater part is destitute of running waters, and perhaps the slopes towards the sea-shore is alone adequately watered.

To the N. of Mombasa, the maritime region has the same features as to the S., and slopes to the shore from hills, 15 m. or 15 m. distant, but the hills meet increases in breadth towards the N., and towards the third parallel of latitude it becomes the haunt and home of Galla tribes, who spread devastation around them. At the small river Mbuga, about 5 m. from Mombasa are extensive stone ruins of a remarkable character and the natives say that similar ruins of well-built towns occur every four or five miles along the coast, as far as Mas Gombi [Lower head], 80 m. from Mombasa. Among the ruins so described are those of the once celebrated Malindi (lat. 3° 18' S.), which was destroyed in the last century by the Galla. Just beyond Mas Gombi begins the great bay named in the charts Pormo, and by the natives Panamha [Hippopotamus Bay]. At its S. end is the mouth of the Sabaki, which rises among the hills of the Galla [at the N. end of the Ozi, a river of considerable magnitude]. If returning to the interior we cross the river Tavo, and advance N.W., we arrive in a short time at the river Adli flowing at the foot of a high bank or ridge through a break in which lower down, it turns N.E. and doubtless reappears on the coast, under the name of Ozi. N. of the Adli and W. of the Galla country are the plains of Ukamba. These are bounded on the N. by the large river Dana, the course of which we know not, but suspect this to be the river which discharges its waters behind Pata Island. (See PATA.) N. of this river is another group of mountains, which are said (but the accounts are extremely obscure) to reach the limits of perpetual snow. They are called Kanu or Ndunketu, and stand probably in lat. 38°-39° E., and about a degree S. of the equator. The Dana and two other rivers flow from them.

The natives immediately round Mombasa are called by the general name of Wailika [ling. M'Wika] that is to say people of the bush or wilderness [uluka]. They are tall and robust of a dark-brown complexion, but well featured, and not negroes. Their country (the maritime district) is extremely beautiful resembling a fine park, with noble trees, single or in groups, scattered widely over an undulating surface, and so productive, that its inhabitants live in abundance with little or no labour. The indolent Wailika cultivate only a little maize, their villages are often large, and generally form a hollow square wherein the cattle are penned, which if left unprotected at night, would be quickly devoured by wild beasts, particularly hyenas. In the middle of the village, is generally a large and well-finished building, intended, perhaps, as a temple or civil palace, but ordinarily used as a place of carousal, where the men meet to intoxicate themselves with palm-wine. The Wailika do not bury their dead, but leave the corpse outside of the village at night, to be carried off by the hyenas. Though Pagans, they use circumcision. Their usual clothing is a blue cotton wrapper round the waist, and another thrown over the shoulder, their weapons are swords and poisoned arrows. One or two tribes of this people are distinguishable by their habits. The Wailigo close to Mombasa on the W. and S., cultivate the soil with axes, and hold great markets of agricultural produce. They grow much tobacco, yet less than they consume. The Waseggu, further S. near Wamun have the finest cattle and the largest herds in E. Africa. These are the Mossegogo of Portuguese history, the valiant and vigorous pastoral people, who saved Mombasa from the Zulus in 1820. They still retain the custom of wearing dye caps. There is reason to believe that the Waseggu, though now perfectly assimilated to their neighbours in language and manners, are of Abyssinian origin. The Maungulo [Water-Figs or Porpoises] a little further S. on the coast, also an ancient tribe, unite pastoral occupations with those of the coaster and fisherman, and are comparatively rich. These people are ruled in their several districts or villages by petty chiefs, without any permanent authority or political combination.

The great level plain behind the maritime chain of hills is a desert extending over some thousands of square miles, in which there is no fixed habitation, except on the summits of the mountains, rising abruptly from the plain, which are tenanted by parties of Wailika from the E. or of Molemba from the N. The plain itself is left to the antelopes, of many species, urolas and giraffas, which take the dry open ground, relegating the urolas and urolas to the elephants, and the tangled thorny thickets to the rhinoceros. But predatory bands of Wailiki people of Abyssinian origin, of whom we have no satisfactory account, occasionally sweep over it, and render it unsafe. The hilly country (Kilima) at the foot of Kilima Njaro, is regarded on the coast as a natural fortress or bulwark against the irruptions of Galla and Wakowli. It is called Chaga, which seems to be the name of the thornbush, used as a fence round villages. In Kilima or Chaga, the people do not live in loose villages as on the coast, but are united under an absolute king and all their social organizations have a military character.

The Wakamba, who occupy the plains N. of the Ahi. N.W. from Mombasa, N.E. from Kilima Njaro, seem to be a peculiar race, although their language is akin to that of the coast. In Mombasa they are known under the name of Meromungo. These people are much inferior to the Wakika in size and strength, but elegantly formed and though quite black, have fine features, without the least trace of negro coarseness. They are the traders and carriers of the interior, but the extent of country over which their traffic moves, is prodigiously exaggerated by misconception. It has been said that their country is a two months journey distant from Mombasa whereas the truth is that the caravan road ordinarily travelled by them does not exceed 250 m. in length. They convey to the coast the ivory and skins collected by the wild hunters of the interior. They themselves have a wild look. Besides a wrapper of cotton or grass cloth, they wear over the shoulder a loose and often handsome mantle of lynx or leopard skin. They treat brass as highly round their arms at an early age, and as the wire is never removed the muscular development is hindered and deformed, and strength necessarily impaired by it. The Meromungo have iron of the finest quality which is exported in small bars to Persia and India, for the manufacture of sword-blades. They themselves manufacture swords after the pattern of those of the Knights Templars, received probably from the Red Sea, where swords of that form have been long in vogue. The traffic of the Meromungo all centres at present in Mombasa, but divides while Malindi flourished the commerce was chiefly made by this native nation whose plains are not above 120 m. from the site of that city—(Oswen Voyages, Account of Mombasa de by Lieut. Emery R.V., in the Journal of the Royal Geog. Soc. Missionary Intelligence vols 1-11.)

MOMBASIGLIO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont div. 10 mi. port and about 8 m. from Mondovì; r. bank Monza with a church and a trade in corn, wine and chestnuts. Pop. 1057.

MOMBELLO a village in Italy Piedmont, div. and N.W. Alessandria, with a church and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 2861.

MOMBELTRAN, a tn. Spain Old Castile prov. and 33 m. S.W. Avila. It is well built, has two squares, two churches a fine old castle, in the form of a pentagon, which belonged to the old Duke of Mombeltran, a large and commodious townhouse, hospital, two schools, manufactures of linen, earthenware, copperware and hats several oil and flour mills and brick and tile works. Pop. 1195.

MOMBELTRILL a tn. Italy Piedmont, div. and W. of Alessandria; r. bank Tiglieno here crossed by two bridges. It has a church and a trade in wine. Pop. 2440.

MOMBRO DE TARRAGONA a tn. to Spain, Catalonia, prov. Tarragona, r. bank Salado; with a church a distillery and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1198.

MOBELLANO or MONTEPELLANO, a tn. France, dep. Savoie r. bank Isère here crossed by a stone bridge of 11 arches. It has an ancient church a Dominican convent barracks, a hospital and a trade in corn, wine, fruit, and hemp.

MOBIGNIES, a tn. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut 86 m. S.E. Mons. It has manufactures of woollen and cotton hosiery two breweries an oil and several flour mills. Pop. 2490.

MOELLING or MÖNCHENSWAN a vil. Bavaria Lower Franconia dist. Obernurg with a church, a chapel, and a mill. Pop. 1291.

MOMO, a tn. Italy Piedmont, div. and 8 m. N.W. Novara, 1 bank Agogna. It has a court of justice, and two churches. Pop. 1297.

MONCANTERRO, a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont div. Turin, prov. Susa, with a church, and some trade in wine. Pop. 1529.

MOMPIANO, a vil. and com. Italy, Lombardy gov. Milan, prov. and 8 m. from Brescia, in a fine vine and mulberry district. The hills around contain numerous springs, from which the fountains of Brescia are supplied. P. 3070.

MOMPOX, a tn. New Granada, prov. and 140 m. S. by Santa Maria, 1. bank Magdalena lat. 6° 18' N. lon. 74° 30' W. The streets, which extend along the river for two miles are well laid-out but the houses are badly built. There are here a good quay and a custom-house, built very high, on account of the periodical floods of the river, which takes place in December and raises the waters 12 or 18 ft. higher than their usual level. Mompox is the depot of all the foreign goods destined for the consumption of the valley of the Magdalena. It is greatly infested with mosquitoes and alligators. Pop. 10,000.

MONA PASSAGE AND ISLAND W. India. The passage is the channel between the islands of Hayti and Porto Rico, about 50 m. in breadth. The strait, about 4 m. by 2 m. is situated at the S. entrance to the passage, and nearly in its centre lat. (E. point) 18° 5' N. lon. 67° 50' W. (p.) It is low, and without promontories, has no trees of any considerable height, but is nearly covered with brushwood.

MONACHLOGDDU par Wales, Pembrokeshire. P. 502.

MONACO a principality Italy on the Gulf of Genoa enclosed on the land side by France dep. Alpes Maritimes (see same name, which has about 7 m. E. Nice. Until early in 1861 it comprised the communes of Rococarana and Mentone, besides the town and territory of Monaco. It had an extent of 10 m. by 5 m. pop. 7000, and by the treaty of Paris, 1815 was placed under the protection of the King of Sardinia, who was allowed to keep a garrison in it. By a treaty concluded in February 1861 the Prince of Monaco ceded to France the communes of Rococarana and Mentone for an indemnity of 4,000,000 francs and by a treaty concluded November 9, 1860, he gave up to France his customs rights for five years for an annual payment of 20,000 francs. The principality was founded in the 10th century in favour of a member of the house of Grimaldi, with which it has since remained. The territory is now restricted to the town of Monaco (anc. Monaca Arx) and its immediate environs, an area about 5 sq. m. The town is beautifully situated on a plateau which projects with a precipitous front into the Mediterranean, and is walled and defended by a castle, but is completely commanded by an adjoining hill. It is composed chiefly of old houses but has a fine esplanade, in which stands the palace of the prince. It has also a fishery and a harbour at which some trade, chiefly in oil and fruit, is carried on. Pop. in and principality 1787.

MONAGAY, par Iral Limerick 22 791 ac. P. 3681.

MONAGHAN an island co. Ireland, prov. Ulster bounded N. by Tyrone, E. Armagh and Louth, S. Monagh and Cavan, W. Fermanagh greatest length, N. to S. 87 m. greatest breadth, E. to W. 23 m. area, 500 sq. m. or 318,793 ac., of which 265,696 are arable. It is hilly in the N.W. and E. soil of every variety, that in the more level portion forming the N. part of the great central limestone plain of Ireland, very fertile, but in the hilly parts composed of stiff clay difficult to work. It contains a number of rivers and lakes, but all of them are small. Agriculture, is the greater proportion of the inhabitants is engaged was formerly in a very depressed state, but is now improving. The number of acres under crop, in 1851, was 164,068, more than a half of which was growing oats and about a seventh potatoes, the remainder distributed between wheat, barley, rye, beans, peas, turnips, mangel-wurzel, flax (14,902 ac.), clover, &c. The linen manufacture is reviving. In December, 1851 there were 140 national schools in operation, attended by 18,909 children. The county is divided into five baronies, and returns two members to Parliament constituency (1854), 4119. Principal towns, Monaghan, the capital, Ballibey, Clonas, Castleblayney, and Carrickmacross. Pop. (1841), 300,449 (1851), 141,768—(Thom's Irish Directory).

MONAGHAN, a market tn. and par. Ireland, dep. above co. The town 70 m. N.W. Dublin, on the Ulster canal, has a spacious square or market-place, clean streets, the whole lighted with gas; a handsome courthouse, jail, infirmary, and several churches, a parish church, a R. Catholic and Wesleyan chapels, and two Methodist meeting-houses, a fever hospital, many workhouses, and several schools. The river tery, with a church of modern construction, a Cistercian monastery, a charitable endowment, two schools, and a trade in corn, rice, fruit, and wine. Pop. 2300.

MONCOGDO, a vil. and com. kingd. of Italy, Piedmont, dir. Alessandria, prov. and 20 m. W. Asi; with two churches and two castles, one of them in ruins gypsum quarries, and a trade in wine. Pop. 1811

MONCOUQ or MONTECOUQ, a town, France, dep. Lot, 15 m. S. W. Cahors. It stands between two valleys, on a conical spur, crowned by a square tower, which in early times served as a citadel, and commanded the district around. Pop. 1144.

MONDA, a town, Spain, prov. and 35 m. W. Malaga, it has a townhouse and prison a ruinous castle, three elementary schools, a parish church, a hermitage, and three brandy distilleries. Pop. (agricultural), 8904

MONDANIA, or MOUDANIA, a maritime town and gulf, Asia Turkey, S. E. shore Sea of Marmara. The town stands on the S. shore of the gulf, lat. 40° 20' N. lon 28° 52' E. It consists of about 1000 houses, equally divided between Turks and Greeks. There is no harbour, and a very high surf constantly beats against the shelving shore. It is nevertheless, the usual place of embarkation for Constantinople. The environs are singularly beautiful and highly cultivated.

The town extends 18 m. E. of the town, and is enclosed by high mountains, the summits of which are clothed with pine and other shrubs, while the valleys are well cultivated and produce vines, figs, mulberries, olives, &c. The gulf runs inland, in a S. direction, for 25 m. and has a breadth at its entrance of about 10 m.

MONDEGO (Latin Mondia), a river Portugal which rises on the N. W. side of the Serra Estrella, prov. Beira-Baixa, about 6 m. S. S. W. Guarda, flows easterly first N., then W. S. W., past Castelo Coimbra, and Montemor-o-Velho, and forming the harbour of Figueira and the small island of Murraça, where large quantities of salt are made, falls into the Atlantic, after a course of about 80 m. Its principal affluents are, on the right the Dão and Frio and on the left the Alva, Coia, and Aguaça. It becomes navigable at the confluence of the Dão.

MONDEGO a river Brazil. See EUROPEAN MONDEJAR, a vil. Spain, New Castle, prov. Guadalajara, 30 m. E. Madrid. It has a townhouse, a palace of the Marquis of Belzaga, an hospital for the sick poor two granaries, two endowed elementary schools, and a church, a flour and five oil mills, a soap and a chocolate manufactory. Pop. (agricultural) 2224.

MONDIE two places, Portugal.—1. A town and par. prov. Beira-Alta, 19 m. S. S. E. Lamego, par. bank Trazos. Its inhabitants spin and weave a good deal of silk. 1. 665 —2. (de Basto) A town and par. prov. Tras-os-Montes, 1. 665 Tamega, 66 m. S. W. Reguenga. Pop. 1600

MONDIOH, an isl., W. Africa. See ACROTIUM.

MONDONEDRO, a city Spain, Gallia prov. and 29 m. N. E. Lago, built in the form of an amphitheatre, houses generally good streets paved and clean. It has a townhouse a seminary for theology philosophy Latin, and primary education various other educational establishments, a prison an hospital for the sick, a convalescent hospital a cathedral, built in 1844, a solid Corinthian structure an episcopal palace, a number of hermitages, a nunnery and two suppressed convents, one of which is now used as a theatre. Agriculture and cattle-rearing are the principal occupations of the inhabitants, but there are also 12 flour-mills, three tanneries, six potteries, a bell-foundry, and a hat manufactory. Pop. 7600

MONDOVI (Latin, Mons Regalis) a town, Italy Piedmont, dir. Cour, dep. prov. of same name, 50 m. W. Geneva. It is walled, flanked with bastions, and defended by a dilapidated citadel, is well built, has a fine square of a hexagonal form, lined with handsome edifices, adorned with arcades. It is the seat of a bishop, the seat of a court of law, and several important public offices, and has a cathedral and four other churches; a splendid episcopal palace, five convents, a royal college, diocesan seminary, a townhouse, superior elementary and infant schools, a theatre, an academy of music, literary society a flourishing and several other hospitals manufactures of woollen last, fanny and wax candles, confectionary, soap, and earthenware, numerous silk and worsted mills, dye-works tanneries, a trade in the above articles of manufacture, and in corn, wine, fruit, and ship timber. P. 15,921

MONDRAGON, a walled town, Spain, Biscay, prov. Guipuzcoa, 34 m. S. E. Tolosa, on the Devia, with regular and straight streets, a townhouse, church and porchouse. In the neighbourhood are quarries of limestone and freestone, and mines of excellent iron. Pop. 2114.

MONDRAGON, a town, Naples, prov. Terra di Lavoro, dist. and 17 m. S. E. Gaeta with quarries of marble, and mines of sulphur. Pop. 2100

MONDREH, a town, Upper Austria, N. bank lake of same name, 15 m. E. N. E. Salzburg, with an old church, a hand some palace, hospital, pyramidal manufacture of crystals and iron pans and several mills. Pop. 1170.—The Lack, about 6 m. long, by less than 2 m. broad, is about 1400 ft. above sea-level and surrounded by mountains.

MONTEAH, a town, Hindoostan, presid. Bengal prov. and dist. Bahar, at the junction of the Sone and Ganges, 21 m. W. Patna lat. 25° 59' N. lon 84° 02' E.; remarkable for a beautiful mausoleum of freestone, one of the most elegant specimens of Mogul architecture to be met with.

MONTEGILIA a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, dir. Genoa, prov. and 10 m. E. S. E. Chiavari on the E. shore of the Gulf of Genoa. It is flanked on the E. and W. by two old dilapidated forts, has two churches, a trade in wine and oil, and a productive fishery harbor very indifferent. P. 2200

MONPIN (Latin, Monses), a town, France dep. Basses-Pyrénées, 11 m. W. Pau, with a considerable trade in wine, and near it is a salt spring, and mines of copper iron, and lead. Pop. 1277

MONTEVASSIA, or MONTEVASSIA a maritime town, Greece, E. coast Moraa, 12 m. N. Cape Mabo, lat. 36° 41' N. lon 28° 2' E. It is built on an inlet about 4 m. in length and less than 4 m. in breadth, connected with the mainland by a bridge, 200 yds. long, the houses, many of which are of Venetian construction, are piled upon one another and intersected by narrow narrow streets. It has little trade, and no harbour. Pop. about 2000

MONTEGILLO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, dir. Cour, prov. and 17 m. E. N. E. Mondovì par. bank W. Berninella, here crossed by a stone bridge. It has a handsome church a Gothic castle, several silk mills and a trade in wine. P. 1400

MONESTIER or MONESTIER, several places France, particularly MONESTIER, (Latin, Monasterium) a town, dep. Hautes-Alpes 9 m. N. W. Briançon, well built with hot sulphureous springs, cotton mills, and manufactures of linen and nails. Pop. 1276

MONNEYDEN par. Eng. Suffolk 1086 ac. Pop. 135

MONNEYDIE par. Scot. Perth, 10 m. by 5 m. P. 821

MONNEYGALL, a vil. Ireland, King's co. 74 m. S. W. Rosetta with a R. Catholic chapel and two schools. P. 691

MONNEYMORE, a market to Ireland co. and 84 m. S. E. Londonderry with a handsome parish church a R. Catholic chapel several dissenting meeting-houses, several schools, a market-house, courthouses, and linen-hall. Linen is manufactured extensively in the town and vicinity. P. 781

MONFALCONE, a walled town, Austria, Hydra, circle and 10 m. S. S. W. Goru on a height near the Gulf of Trieste much resorted to for bathing. A small harbour was formed on the neighbouring shore in 1826, and since then the trade has become considerable. Pop. 1260

MONFEEA, or MONFEEA an isl., E. coast Africa, Zanguebar lat. (N. point) 7° 38' S. lon 39° 57' E. It is long and narrow about 9 m. from the mainland, rises abruptly from an unfavourable depth surface low and flat, of the usual coral and sand foundation. It is covered with trees, and surrounded by a labyrinth of shoals and islets, so thickly distributed between the island and the main, as to render the channel almost impassable for vessels. There is anchorage on its S. and W. sides. It is said to be fertile, and to afford water and provisions.

MONFLANQUIN a town, France. See MONTEFLANQUIN

MONFORTE, a town, Spain, Valencia, prov. and 14 m. W. Alcala, on the Vinalopo. It has a granary two primary schools, an ancient castle, in which the parish church is built, three hermitages, and a cemetery, several brandy distilleries, and an oil and three flour mills. Pop. 2163.

MONFORTE-DE-LENGRA, a town, Spain, Galicia, prov. and 39 m. S. Lugo. It is surrounded with ancient walls, and possesses an ex-convent of Jesuits, two churches, a townhouse, a Benedictine monastery a nunnery, an hospital, and two herding; flour-mills, and looms for linen and woollen stuffs. Wines and beers are exported. The butchers of Monforte are celebrated, and the bacon delicious. Pop. 4064.

MONFORTE, two small places, Portugal.—1. A tn. and par. prov. Alentejo, 17 m. S. by E. Portalegre, on a hill so steep as to be difficult of access. It is famous for its melons, so much, as well as wine, it carries on a considerable trade. Pop. 805.—2. (de São Lourenço) A tn. prov. Trás-os-Montes, 8 m. E. Chaves. The district around is very fertile, and produces chestnuts, good wine, and excellent butter. Pop. 450.

MONFORTÉ, a tn. Isly, Indiana, div. Can. prov. and 9 m. S. Alton, with three small squares a church, castle, communal house and a trade in wine. Pop. 2169.

MONFORTÉ, a tn. Brazil, prov. and 55 m. N. Para, ul. Marajo, on a height overlooking the bay of that name. In habitants all Indians engaged in trade and agriculture, and raising considerable quantities of rice which they sell in Para.

MONFRIGÉ, a tn. Savoy, prov. Gurgent, dist. and 11 m. W. N. W. Sion. Pop. 6000.

MONGARDINO, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Alessandria, prov. and 5 m. S. Asti; with a church and a trade in wine. Pop. 1060.

MONGATZ, a tn. Hungary. See MUNKACS.

MONGEHAM, two pars. Eng. Kent.—1. (Great) 874 ac. Pop. 370.—2. (Little) 1160 ac. Pop. 134.

MONGEWILL, par. Eng. Oxford 1638 ac. P. 187.

MONGHIE, a fortified town, Hindoostan, presid. Bengal, lat. 25° 35' N. lon. 85° 30' E. It is of considerable antiquity and was at one time a place of some celebrity as a military station, having been fortified by a high brick wall and round towers at the angles with a deep ditch in front. It is now little more than a mere assemblage of mud huts, with exception of a few handsome houses and bungalows, belonging to Europeans, mostly situated within the enclosures of an extensive old fort and palace, now falling in ruins.

THE PORT OF MONGHLEE.—From Thames's Oriental Pictures.

MONGHARDINO, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Genova, prov. and about 12 m. from Novi with a church, two palaces in a ruinous condition, and a trade in fruit and cattle. Pop. 1660.

MONGIBELLO, the Italian name of ERNA.

MONGOLIA, a vast region of N. E. Asia forming, actually a portion of the Chinese empire, and occupying the space between China proper and Asiatic Russia. Its precise limits, according to Chinese authorities, are lat. 35° and 52° N., and lon. 23° and 138° E. bounded N. by the Russian govts. Yenisei and Irkutsk N. E. and E. by Manchuria, S. by provs. Chihli and Shensi, and the Yellow River, S. W. by Kansou and W. by Gobi and Th. length, E. to W. about 1700 m., greatest breadth, 1000 m. area, 1,400,000 sq. m. The central portion of this extensive tract is occupied by the great sandy desert of Gobi, having an area of 300,000 sq. m., interrupted only by a few spots of pasture and low brush. Wide tracts are flat, and covered with small stones or sand, and widely separated from one another are low hills destitute of wood and water. The general elevation of this region is 4220 ft. above the sea. Mongolia is intersected at various points by chains of lofty granite mountains, the summits of which are in many parts clothed with a variety of trees. The principal ranges are the Altai, and its various subordinate chains, extending E., under various names, as far as the banks of the Amoor, and the Ala-shan and In-shan ranges. Its rivers are numerous, particularly in the N. where occur the Solenget, Orkhon, and Tola, which unite their streams, and flow into lake Balkal and the Keroul and Onon, tributaries of the Amoor. In the S. are the Sira, muren, and its branches, with several others in the region of Kokonor. The chief lakes S. from the desert, are Kokonor or the Azure Sea, and the Olung and Dauring near the sources of the Yellow River. In the N. W. are the Urumsoor, Altunor, Alaksoor, and the Iki-ard near the town of Gobi. All the plains of Mongolia are richly sown in winter and in some of the E. parts, bordering on Chihli the people make their houses partly under ground, to avoid the inclemency of the season, the hills to the N. being too low to screen the country from the polar blasts. In summer again, the heat is in many parts so great that not even a blade of grass can grow. The space to the N. of Gobi, to the confines of Russia, about 160 m. wide, is warmer than the desert, and supports a greater population than the S. side. The thermometer in winter falls 30° and 40° below zero, and sudden and great changes are frequent. Many large portions of Mongolia, both S. and N. of the Gobi, are sufficiently fertile, and might be turned to good account by the natives, but for their preference of a nomadic to an agricultural life, choosing rather to wander about with their herds and flocks, than to cultivate the soil.

Pines, fir, birch, ash elm, and white poplar grow on the mountains, and in the same region are found red currants, wild peaches and various shrubs. A little millet, wheat, and barley are grown, but the chief dependence of the people is on their cattle, and on the corn which they receive from China, in exchange for their sheep and other animals. The consequence is, that they are often reduced to great distress in winter, bordering, frequently, on absolute want. Their flocks, likewise, suffer from extreme cold or disease. The wild animals of Mongolia are boars, bears, wolves, hares, foxes, snakes and squirrels; there are also wild horses and goats. The birds comprise cranes, wild geese, ducks, moorhens, quails, and swans. The rivers abound with fish.

The Mongols are of the middle size, but muscular and strongly built, their faces broad, square, and flat, noses particularly low and flat; eyes small, oblique, black, and keen; thick lips, short chin, with very little beard, and large and prominent ears. Their black and strong, almost wholly shaven head, excepting a little tuft on the crown. They live principally on milk, butter, and cheese. Horse-flesh is considered a delicacy, but the wealthy only can indulge in it. Their favorite national liquor, as among all the Tartar nations, is Koumiss or Koushan, fermented mare's milk, in which they often indulge to excess. In religion they are Buddhists. Polygamy prevails among them, and divorce is frequent. The Mongols form the principal stock of a race widely diffused over the plateau of central Asia, and consisting of two great divisions, the Eastern or Mongols proper, and the Western or Calmucks. The former only are found in Mongolia, and are divided into three great nations—the Tabakhar, Kalhas, and Samet. The Tabakhar possess the best part of Mongolia, or at least which skirts the Chinese wall on the N. and obtained the confidence of the court of Peking, by submitting to the Manchous before they had made much progress in the conquest of China. The Kalhas occupy the N. part of Mongolia, along the frontiers of Siberia, and voluntarily placed themselves under the protection of the Chinese, when threatened with destruction by the Ooloth Calmucks in 1689.

The Sunset occupy the country intermediate between that of the Kalkas and Thabheri. They all claim descent from the celebrated Genghis Khan, who in the beginning of the 13th century united the different races under his sway and in the course of his devastating conquests, both westward and southward, made the Mongols of whom little had been previously heard, to occupy an important page in the world's history. The conquests of Genghis Khan were extended by his son Oghis, who subdued the whole of China, and overthrew the caliphate of Bagdad, while other hordes, under the khans Munka and Batu forced their way into Russia, devastated large portions of it, pillaged Moscow, entered Poland in 1240 and were threatening all Germany with destruction, when in 1241 their progress was arrested by their signal defeat at Whalstait. After the death of Oghis in 1243, all further attempts on Europe ceased but nearly half a century longer the empire which he had established continued to flourish, and stretch from the Chinese Sea W to the frontiers of Poland, and from Hindostan N to the frontiers of Siberia. At a later period, under Timur or Tamerlane, the Mongol empire, which had been gradually crumbling to pieces, acquired new lustre. But the revival proved temporary, and at his death a complete disruption took place. The fragments, however, were so large as in some instances to be sufficient to found new dynasties. One of the most important of them was that of the Sultan Baber who in 1519, founded the empire of the Great Mogul in Hindostan, and kept as Delhi a court of almost unparalleled splendour of which some faint traces are still exhibited by his descendants. The supreme administration of Mongolia is vested in the board or tribunal of foreign affairs at Peking.

MONGRANDO, a tn, Italy, Piedmont, 3 m N N E Turn on the Elvo, with three churches, manufactures of hardware and a trade in wine and rice. Pop 5724.

MONHEIM, — A tn in Bavaria, circle Swabia, 86 m S S E Augsburg, a capital manufactures of needles a brewery, tile-works, and a trade in cattle. Pop 1417 — A tn, Rhenish Prussia, 6 and 10 m. S S E Düsseldorf, on the Rhine, with a church, a castle, and manufactures of woollens, linens, and earthenware. Pop 1210.

MONIFIETH a vil and par Scotland, co Forfar, the former 6 m. E by N Dundee, on an eminence not far from the sea, has an established and a Free church, two manufactures of machine, a flour-mill, and one for spinning flax. 1 p. 868 Area of par 604 ac. Pop 4267.

MORIKIE par Scot Forfar 1000 ac. 1 op. 1317

MONIMAIL par Scot. Fife 6000 ac. Pop 1102.

MONINGTON, par Wales, Pembrokeshire, 1010 ac. P 127.

MONISTROL, or MONISTROL-LES-LUXES a tn France dep. Haute-Loire, N E Le Puy, with manufactures of lace blonde ribbons satin, and ironware a tannery, paper-mill dye works, and important grain markets. Pop 1112.

MONISTROL-DE-MONESTRAT a tn Spain Catalonia, prov. and 27 m. N W Barcelona, at the foot of the mountain of Montserrat, a bank Llobregat, here crossed by a bridge of one arch, remarkable alike for the width of its span and its elevation. It has a church, an hospital, and a hospital belonging to the old monastery of Montserrat; manufactures of cotton cloth and cotton twist, a copper foundry and several mills. 1 op. 1299.

MONIVAIRD AND STROWAN, par Scot. Perth 21 000 ac. Pop 790.

MONIVISA, a vil and par Ireland, co and 17 m. E by N Galway, an Episcopal church, a R. Catholic chapel and a school. Area of par. 21 892 ac. Pop 5119.

MONJOS (Loe), [The monks], four small low islands, 3 Pacific extending nearly 5 m. E to W lat. 0° 57' S, lon 145° 41' E (x).

MONKE three par. England — 1 (Heslerton) Durham 7180 ac. Pop. 2709. — 2, (Okehampton), Devon; 1438 ac. Pop. 270. — 3, (Soken) Suffolk 1569 ac. Pop 448.

MONKLAND, par Eng Hereford, 1079 ac. P 179.

MONKLAND, two par Scotland Lanark — 1, (New) 25,000 ac., including the town of Aldrich and several populous villages the most of whose inhabitants are engaged in the extensive coal and iron mining and iron-smelting carried on here. Pop 23,201. — 2, (Old) 6 m by 4 m, including several populous villages and numerous extensive iron and coal works. Pop 27,333.

MONKLEIGH, par Eng Devon 2177 ac. Pop. 800.

MONKNASH, par Wales, Glamorgan; 1584 ac. P 110.

MONKNEWTOWN, par Ireul Meath, 2674 ac. P 683.

MONKES, three par. England — 1 (Melford), Suffolk 2099 ac. Pop 722. — 2 (Horton) Kent 1079 ac. Pop 185.

— 3 (Kerby, Warwick, 9640 ac. Pop 1839.

MONKSGRANGE, par Ireul Queen's co, 864 ac. P 226.

MONSIEUVILLE, par Eng Somerset 1005 ac. P 511.

MONSIEUR, par Ireul Waterford 2111 ac. P 126.

MONSIEUR, par Ireul Cork; 1541 ac. P 213.

MONSTRON, a vil, and par Ireul co and 5 m. S W

Dublin with a church, a castle and a neat cemetery. Area of par 3052 ac. P 17 890.

MONKTON AND PASTWICK par Scot Ayr 8003 ac. Pop. 1990.

MONKTON five par. England — 1, Kent 3864 ac. P 288. — 2 (Farleigh) Wills 1796 ac. P 359. — 3 (Moor) York 4280 ac. P 421. — 4 (Wim) York (W Biding) 1692 ac. P 356. — 5 (West, Somerset) 8079 ac. P 1746.

MONKTOWN, par Ireul Meath 1270 ac. Pop 361.

MONKWEARMOUTH par Eng Durham, 6419 ac. Pop 16 111.

MONMOUTH or MONMOUTHERIE, a maritime co Eng land bounded N by co Hereford and Brecknock, W the latter and Glamorgan S and S.E. the estuary of the Severn and E. Gloucester, area, 818 720 ac., of which about 270 000 ac. are arable, meadow and pasture. Surface much diversified a considerable portion being mountainous and rocky the remainder consisting of fertile valleys and gentle slopes adorned with woods and pastures, and highly cultivated fields. The geological formations are the old sandstone E of the Oak and the coal measures of the S. Wales coalfield, W of the Oak, skirted by a narrow band of carboniferous limestone. The most important mineral productions are iron, coal, limestone, and various other kinds of stone valuable for building and other purposes, lead-ore is met with — and there are some quarries of breccia celebrated for making ash millstones. The soil is generally good. Wheat, barley, and oats are the chief crops — and small orchards are numerous. Flax is manufactured to a small extent, as are also a few coarse cloths woollen stockings, and coarse caps. Monmouth returns two members to Parliament Chief towns Monmouth (op Aberavenny, Caerleon, Chepstow Pontypool. P (1851) 187 418.

MONMOUTH a par. and town, and market tn. England, cap above co in a beautiful valley at the confluence of the Monnow and Wye the former here crossed by an ancient and the latter by a handsome modern stone bridge, and on the railway to Hereford, 21 m. W S.W. Gloucester. It consists of a spacious street, leading through an ancient arched gate at the Monnow bridge to the market-place, and of several other streets diverging in different directions, and has a parish church with an elegant spire 210 ft. high a district church, Independent Primitive Wesleyan Baptist, and R. Catholic chapel, a free grammar, national, and infant schools a handsome range of almshouses, workhouse, and tin plate iron works, paper and cotton mills, a considerable trade favoured by the navigable Wye, and a handsome new market-house. The castle of which some portions still remain, was the favourite residence of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster and the birthplace of Henry V and was thrice taken during the last civil war. Monmouth sends a member to Parliament. Pop 5710.

MONNBRIGHT or MONNBRIGHT, a vil. Dutch Luxembourg, 8 m. S.W. Luxembourg; with a church and school. Pop. (approximate) 1300.

MONNICKLADAM or MONNICKLADAM (Latin, Monnickladam), a tn. Holland, prov. Holland, 9 m. N.E. Amsterdam, on the Zander Zee. It is surrounded by an arched plain planted with trees, affording a pleasant promenade; and has a townhouse, weighhouse, exchange, three churches; an orphan hospital, two public schools a soap-work, a ropery, two boat-building yards, and a corn and a saw mill but fishing and trading in cheese are the chief occupations. Pop. 2203.

MONNINGTON par Eng Hereford, 1012 ac. P 87.

MONOK a tn Hungary, Bihar Thistle, co Szabolcs, 90 m. S.E. Pesth with two churches. Pop. 2463.

MONOMOREZI perhaps more correctly, Monomorezi generally written by the Portuguese of the 16th and 17th centuries, Monempe, or Monempepe, a great empire of E. Africa, on the W side of the great lake called Nyasa or the sea. The same name was given, by early writers, to the sovereign and to the country, though they state that it belongs properly to the former. At the present day Monomotani is no longer united under a single ruler but is divided into several kingdoms, respecting the relative importance of which we have no information. In the 16th century when the empire flourished it was said to extend S. to the Maurens (the union of Malda opposite to Monomotani) or the 12th parallel; others placed its S. limit at Mongala, lat. 10° S. In the N it was said to reach Garunga, in Abyssinia, or according to the maps of that day, the fourth parallel of S lat., on the W it had the lake and on the E. it was supposed to approach the coast in the direction of Kilwa. According to our recent information, the most S. kingdom of Monomotani is in lat. 9° where the lake is distant about 450 m. from Kilwa. The most N countries, Manika and Pijha, are probably under the fourth parallel, and 600 or 700 m. from the sea. As to the E. frontier of Monomotani, we only know that, on the great caravan route from the coast, in lat. 6° 30', to Oha, in lat. 7° 30' it is reached in 46 days; the distance thence to the lake being 24 days more. But it is not improbable that, when the empire subsisted in its vigour it occupied some stations down the Lufiji, to protect the caravans, and to exercise an influence on the coast.

Of the numerous countries included under the general title of Monomotani, six are said to constitute independent kingdoms, namely, Uruwa (the Ruwaga of early writers) on a S. branch of the Lufiji, lat. 8 to 9° S. Uruwa, Ugiu, Oha or Uha, Uru and Uanga. These kingdoms, as far as is ascertained, from S. to N., the capitals being all apparently at the W side of the country next to the lake. The king of Oha is sometimes represented as the paramount sovereign of Monomotani but the truth seems to be, that his sway extends over the country ordinarily visited by the caravans from Kilwa.

The caravan for Monomotani assembles at Burumaji on the coast, opposite to Zanzibar in lat. 6° 30' S. The route goes a point S of W and in 10 days, reaches the Ruvu, the mouth of which is a few miles N of Burumaji. On the 15th day the same river in which the hippopotamus and crocodile are very numerous, is crossed a second time. So far the road lies through the country of the Zeruana. Beyond the Ruvu, it goes over the Ruwaga Hills and the country of the Nefin. In about 30 days, the caravan arrives at Marara (Trade) in the country of the Wazaga. To this point all the roads from the coast converge, and the caravan from Burumaji is swelled by arrivals from the N bank of the Ruvu, and from Kilwa, in the S.E. In the neighbourhood of Marara are several rivers, the Lufiji being the chief, which inundate the plains to a great extent during the rains. Beyond Marara, the caravan crosses the Kidji, soon enters the valley of the river a branch of the Lufiji, called Sivaba—a name probably derived from Waiba, the people of Oha—and continues ascending it for twelve days, when the river disappears on the left and the road, passing through the country of the Ezumbe, leads in 14 days, to Luangwara, the frontier town of Oha, in Monomotani, and 20 days from the capital. The river Sivaba is again met with at Uungu, six days from Oha. The mountains of the Wabala, S. of this river and E. of Monomotani are said to abound in salt and iron. The caravans reach Oha in 70 or 75 days. The lake is four days distant to the W, but there seems to be little or no traffic on it in this quarter and few of the Arab merchants who visit Oha ever set it.

The people of Monomotani are, collectively, Mwanazaga. This name, given to the race and language both in Monomotani and Monomotapa, signifies, native of Uruwa, and points out that country as the cradle of the widely-spread nation. It is remarkable that, in Monomotapa, while the empire existed in all its state the chief officers of the king's guards were entitled Mwanagwa, evidently in allusion to the N and original home of the race. The natives of Monomotani are tall and well made, black but not with exaggerated negro features. They wear such a load of ornaments, rings, beads, &c., appended to their ears, that they are obliged to support them by means of a band over the head. They twist brass wire round the neck, and over the chest and shoulders, so as to resemble a coat of mail. Their dress consists of a waist-cloth and a scarf of cotton they weave and dye narrow cotton cloth themselves, but the richer classes prefer the manufactures of India. The superior civilization of the Monomotani is shown chiefly in the employment of beasts of burden; for the ass, here a fine animal carries all their merchandise to and from the coast. The journey between Oha and the coast takes about four months and a half and six weeks or two months are spent on the sea-side, so that the expedition down and back again occupies 10 months. The number descending annually is from 8000 to 10,000, of whom the great majority coasting on the coast opposite to Zanzibar, round the mouth of the Ruvu a few go to Kilwa, and some northwards. The opinion prevails in Zanzibar, that the kingdoms of Monomotani are now recovering their former prosperity and power.

MONOMOTAPA an empire E. Africa, of great religious magnitude and power at the time of its discovery, in the beginning of the 15th century, when, owing to the ignorance and excited temper of the age, it was described in very exaggerated terms. It was said to have a circumference of 1000 leagues and, even at the present day, the estimated length of the river Zambezi, which gives the breadth of the empire, is double of the truth. The name Monomotapa, or more correctly, Monita Motapa signifies the Empire or Kingdom of Motapa; literally perhaps, Motapa itself or himself. Of Motapa we know little; some say it was the capital of the kingdom, and others were called Madragan, others make it the metropolitan province. The empire appears to have been co-extensive with the diffusion of the Mwanazaga race, S. of the Zambezi, it reached, therefore, from this river S. to Inhambane, W. to Malindi, but did not go beyond the basin of the Zambezi. On the E. it extended to the sea in Sofala, but did not embrace the mouth of the Zambezi; its N. boundary on the sea-shore, being the river Tendaclio. The emperor of Monomotapa appears to have been the same person as the Quave or king of Sofala; but on this point the Portuguese writers are not clear. The capital of the Quave, called Zumbulo or the court, was said to be 10 days inland on the river of Sofala, and six days further it was the capital of Monomotapa. The missionary Gonzalez Sylveira, travelled to the latter by a circuitous route through Teft, which he estimated at 600 m. He baptized the king, queen, and 300 of the nobles, but soon after (1568) incurred the suspicion of being an executioner, and was put to death. About 10 years later Barreto led an expedition from Sofala, where the Portuguese had established themselves in 1505, for the express purpose of conquering the gold and silver mines. He advanced from Sofala, in a direction parallel to the Zambezi, on its S. side. In the mountains he met with an obstinate resistance from the Mungudi, and had great difficulty in reaching Teft. He concluded his pretended conquest by agreeing to pay the sovereign of Monomotapa an annual tribute, as it is ingeniously called by Don Santos and the Jesuit Thoman which consisted, in the time of the former (1600), of 200 pieces of cloth. In Thomaz's time (1700) it had dwindled into some cheap and shabby articles of European manufacture annually accorded to the native capital by a small band of soldiers, who remained as the emperor's body-guard till relieved the following year. In 1567, the emperor of Monomotapa, being distressed by revolts and civil dissensions, consented to renounce to the Portuguese his mines and half of his domains, provided that they would concede to him the possession of the other half. Such is the account given of their title to Monomotapa by the Portuguese, whose dominion in these countries has never been much more than nominal. In the middle of the last century, the empire was dismembered, and its provinces became independent. The chief kingdom which have sprung out of the ruins of the empire are those of the Quave (Sofala) the Mwanze (Quangwa), S.W. of the former, the Sedada (Madenda) further S. on the river Save, and the Changamira, whose seat seems to be in the interior, towards Malindi. The title of Motapa is not yet forgotten in the country, and we believe it is assumed by the Changamira. On the death of the Quave, in 1603, no male successor to him was elected, and the sovereign power was assumed by the queen, a wise female still reigning in 1835 when our information terminates. Among the ruins of Monomotapa are usually mentioned the stone buildings on Mount Nkura, near the gold-mine. The true form of the name has been preserved to us by Do Coma; while

De Barros informs us that these walls were of rough stone, without mortar. Subsequent writers, however, describe the buildings as of timber, stone, and mortar; they add, also, inscriptions in an unknown language, and, changing the name into Ahar, conclude that this country was Ophir, and the buildings in question the towers raised by Solomon. However, it is not necessary to look so far back for the origin of these walls. The Arabs of Yamen and Hadramaut, who frequented Soffia at an early age, were excellent masons, and the natives themselves, in stony districts, build rough stone walls without mortar as fences for their villages and cattle grounds. The word Li-ahin means in fact, walls of this description.—(De Barros Decades; João do Santo, Bibliotheca Orientalis, 1809.)

MONONGA BA, a tn. Madagascap cap. of the Vromine tribe, dist. Ibará, about lat. 23° S. lon. 48° E. It consists of about 500 houses, situated on an affluent of the Manang-hara, and both well built and fortified.

MONONGAHELA, a river, U States, rising at the foot of the Laurel Mountains, Virginia, and, after a N course of 800 m. uniting with the Adgashy at Pittsburg, in Pennsylvania, to form the Ohio. It is navigable for large boats 60 m., and for small boats 200 m. from its mouth. Its principal tributaries are the Cheat and Troughlygony.

MONOPOLI, a tn and seaport, Naples, prov. and 37 m. E. S. E. Bari on the Adriatic. It ranks as a fortress of the third class being seated on an eminence, walled, and defended by a castle. It has two suburbs, consisting of well-built houses but the town itself is indifferently built, the houses being too lofty for the width of the streets, render them dark and gloomy. It has a cathedral and numerous other churches, two harbours, with great depth of water but imperfectly sheltered, and a trade in woolen and cotton cloth (both extensively manufactured in the town) wine, and olives. Pop. 18,000.

MONOR, a tn Hungary. Hither Danube, co. and 30 m. S. E. Pesth with two churches. P. (chiefly Protestant), 5,408.

MONOSTOR, several places Hungary particularly—
1. A vil., Hither Danube on Baranya, 37 m. S. E. Fünf kirchen with a church, and some trade in corn wine and cattle. Pop. 1245.—2. A vil. Hither Theiss co. Temesvar with a Greek church. Pop. 1720.—3. A vil., Hither Danube, co. Pesth, on an isle of the Danube with two churches. Pop. 900.—4. (Apost) A vil., Hither Danube, co. Szekes with a church, the ruins of an old monastery and four mills. Pop. 818.—5. (Apost) A vil., Hither Danube co. Bacs, 1 bank Danube with a church the ruins of an old abbey and some trade in wine and cattle. Pop. 1179.

MONOSTORSZEG, a tn Hungary Hither Danube, co. Bacs 1 bank Danube, with which a navigable canal here communicates 41 m. S. E. Fünfkirchen. It has some trade in corn wine, flax, wood, and cattle. Pop. 4249.

MONTOVAR, a tn Spain, Valencia, prov. and 22 m. E. N. Alicante on the Yndago, defended by a castle and a fortified hermitage, which are perched on two summits. It has some level and other steep streets, all kept very clean, five squares, the largest of which is used as a market-place and a bull-ring, a townhouse, hospital, reading-room, small library, pretty theatre, convent, various educational establishments, a church, three hermitages, and a cemetery some wool-carding, distilleries of brandy and liquors, manufactures of soft soap, tanneries, flour and oil mills, weaving of linen serges, seahs, blankets, and other woolen stuffs some of which articles are exported; but the chief occupation is agriculture. Pop. 2200.

MONQUETTES, par. Scot. Aberdeen, 20,000 ac. Pop. 2286.

MONREAL DEL CAMERO, a tn Spain, Aragon prov. and 34 m. N. W. Teruel, 1 bank Jiloca, with a church, a townhouse, primary school, and fine fountain; manufactures of woolen and linen cloth, and several flour-mills. P. 1516.

MONREAL, or MONREALA, a tn Sicily prov. and 3 m. W. S. W. Palermo, on a height commanding a magnificent view. It was founded in the beginning of the 13th century by the Norman prince William II. named the Good, who also founded its magnificent cathedral and the Benedictine convent, which possesses an excellent library. Monreal is the see of a bishop, and has a college. Outside the town, picturesquely situated among steep rocks is a royal summer residence, called Rema. Pop. 12,988.

Vol. II.

MONROE, a tn, U States, Michigan, 37 m. S. E. W. Detroit, 1 bank Raisin, 24 m. above its mouth, in Lake Erie with a courthouse, jail, and seven churches. Flour, saw, and paper mills, a foundry, tannery, woolen factory, and two printing-offices. Pop. 1703.

MONROIG, a vil Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 17 m. W. S. W. Terragona, near the sea coast. It has an hospital, elementary school, and a parish church. Here it are quarries of limestone and gypsum and mines of antimony. P. 3668.

MONROVIA a seaport tn., W Africa, cap. of Liberia, on the peninsula of Mesurado lat. 6° 18' N. lon. 10° 50' W. 1. bank of the Mesurado river. It is a thriving place, consisting of large commodious houses, has several churches and schools, is the residence of a British consul, and, being the chief port of the colony, carries on a considerable trade. Pop. above 1000.

MONROYO a tn Spain, Aragon, prov. Teruel 50 m. S. E. Saragossa with a church, primary school, manufactures of woolen cloth, hempen shoes and a trade in oil and wax. Pop. 1896.

MONS [anc. Montes Hannovae] a fortified to Belgium, cap. prov. Hainaut, 27 m. S. E. E. Tournay on the railway from Brussels to Valenciennes, and intersected by the Trouille here crossed by three bridges. It has five gates, and is commanded by a castle, Chateau-Lias, built on the site of an ancient Roman camp. Two lakes interrupt the approach from the E., and from the facilities afforded for laying the whole circumjacent country under water by admitting the river, access to the fortress is rendered difficult. The town is clean, regular and has a flourishing appearance. Its principal streets are wide and straight, though occasionally somewhat steep and some of its eight squares are spacious, and lined with handsome houses and public buildings. It has five churches, those of St. Warden and St. Elizabeth being beautiful structures. St. Gottle townhall, civil and military hospitals, court house, arsenal, and theatre, a school of art, academy of music, mineralogical, architectural and horticultural societies; medical seminary, orphan asylum, a deaf and dumb institution, two lunatic asylums, a college and numerous public and private schools. Its manufactures consist of linen, woolen and cotton fabrics, muslin lace, fireworks, cutlery, musical instruments, clay-pipes, soap, oil candles, chimney, bricks, earthenware, vinegar, tobacco and sugar, it has also copper lead, and pewter foundries, several breweries and bleach fields. An active trade in timber coal, extensively mined in the vicinity, building-stone, marble, horses cattle and corn, the transfer of which is facilitated by a canal, connecting with the Scheldt. In 1625 Jean IV. Duke of Brabant aided by Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, besieged and took the town. It afterwards sustained several sieges, and was ultimately in the hands of the Austrians, Spaniards, and French till 1794, it fell to the latter, and was retained by them till 1814 when it was ultimately incorporated with Belgium. Pop. 20,617.

MONSANTO, a tn and par. Portugal, prov. Beira Baixa, com. and 41 m. S. E. Guarda, on a lofty and rugged steep. It is walled, and defended by a castle. Pop. 1230.

MONSARAZ, a tn. Portugal, prov. Alentejo, com. Elvas, on a rock near r. bank Guadiana, 27 m. S. F. Evora. It is walled, and defended by a strong castle. Pop. 1250.

MONSIEA par. Ire. Tipperary, 5035 ac. Pop. 1164.

MONBELICK, a tn Italy Venetia, gov. Venice, prov. and 13 m. S. by W Padua, on a lofty rocky eminence. It is walled, has four churches, an old castle, manufactures of hats, several silk-mills, and a considerable trade, facilitated by the canal on which the town stands. On the slope of Mount Gelbo, near the town, is a picturesquely-situated monastery where a temple of Jupiter is said to have stood; and in the neighbourhood a great many vipers are caught, from which the well-known Theriac or Troscio of Venice is made. P. 5400.

MONHERRAT, or MONTEHERRAT, a mountain, Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 19 m. N. W. Barcelona, near r. bank Llobregat. It is 3580 ft. in height, and consists of a great number of lofty, isolated peaks, between which the ascent is made with great difficulty. About midway up the E. side stands the famous monastery of the same name, in which Charles V. spent his last days. It possesses an image of the Virgin whose alleged marvellous powers were used to attract vast numbers of pilgrims and, perched on the surrounding rocks, are numbers of hermitages, several of which have been compulsed by the most distinguished saints of the Bousch calendar. As the mountain stands in the line of the royal road from Marone, across the Lohengau, advantage was taken of its strong natural position in the war of independence, and several fortifications were erected upon it.

MONSHEIM, a vil. Wittenberg, circle Naumburg, and near Leutenberg, on the Kruenbach, with a parish church. Pop. 1011.

MONSTER, a vil. Holland, prov. S. Holland 15 m. W. N. W. Rotterdam, near the dense close upon the N. Sea. It has a good communal house, two churches, and a school. Inhabitants engaged in agriculture, gardening, and shell-fish gathering. Pop. 1540.

MONT DE MARAIS, (Latin, Mons Marianus) a tu France, cap. dep. Landes, at the junction of the Douze and Midon, which here form the navigable Midouze, and are spanned by handsome bridges, 63 m. S. Bordeaux. The streets are, in general, clean and regular, and adorned with numerous public fountains, and, though once one of the smallest and least populous of the departmental capitals, has made considerable progress within recent years. It has a church, prefecture courthouse, prison, hospital and barracks, a court of first resort, a society of agriculture, commerce, and arts, and a communal college. The principal trade consists in forwarding the wines and brandies of Armagnac to Bayonne. It has manufactures of common woollens, blankets, silk-cloth and leather. Pop. 1553 4453.

MONT BLANC, the loftiest mountain of Europe, belonging to the Pyrenean chain of the Alps, and rising 15 723 ft. above the sea-level, is situated in the Sardinian States, on the frontier of France, Savoy and Austria, lat. 45° 50' N. lon. 6° 52' E. In this latitude the snow line is 8000 ft. and, consequently 7700 ft. of the mountain are within the region of perpetual snow and ice. Its shape when seen on the N. or S., is pyramidal. On the S.E. it presents an immense wall of snow, on which, of course, few glaciers can be formed. These, of which 19 in all are counted, are chiefly on the N. W. slope, where the glaciers Des Bordes, Bon, Talfer, and Mer de Glace, are seen. The mass of the mountain consists almost entirely of granite. Its summit was first reached by Baccard in 1785, but the ascent has since been made so often and with so few accidents, that it is perhaps less hazardous than has been commonly supposed, though much is unquestionably due to the precautions used by Government to ascertain the sufficiency of the guides, and regulate the mode of ascent.

MONT-CENIS, a mountain, Switzerland. See CENIS.

MONT-SE-ADRIEN, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 33 m. W. N. W. Mons. Pop. (agricultural) 1486.

MONT ST-JEAN, a vil. Belgium, prov. Brabant, 11 m. S.E.E. Brussels. It was the centre of the British position at Waterloo, and is the name by which the French usually designate that battle.

MONT ST MICHEL, a vil. France, dep. Manche, in the Gulf of Brittany 3 m. S.W. Avranches. It consists chiefly of an isolated rock, above 5 ft. in circumference, and 400 ft. high, situated about 2 m. from the coast, among sandy flats, which are regularly covered by the tide, and was at one time strongly fortified, and is now used as a central state prison. It contains a church, and the extensive remains of an ancient abbey. Pop. 1063.

MONT-SAINT-ANNE, a vil. and com. France, dep. Haute Savoie, div. Annecy and 7 m. S.E. Bonneville, on an elevated plateau of Mount Bugey, with an ancient church, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1308.

MONT-SAINT-ANNE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, on the L'Esch d'Heure, 21 m. E. Mons. It has manufactures of iron and nails, a brewery, liniment, and quarries. Coal is worked in the vicinity. Pop. 1874.

MONTA (Latin, Montana) a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Cune, prov. Alba, with two churches, a large and magnificent castle, a monastery, public school, and a trade in wine, wool, and silk. Pop. 2593.

MONTABAU, a vil. and com. Germany, Sleswig-Holstein, 10 m. E.N.E. Coldingen, a walled city, formerly a school of arts, manufactures of linen, a tile-works, and a paper and other mills. Pop. 2737.

MONTAGUTE, see Bag, Somerset 1485 ad. P. 1042.

MONTAFUNERTHAL, a wild and romantic valley, Austria, Tyrol, in the S.E. of Vorarlberg, near St. Peter and traversed by the El. It forms a district of about 150 sq. m. includes 10 parishes, is governed by its own landmann, and has a pop. of 8900. Its chief town is Schranz. Its entrance is by a narrow pathway, through a wild ravine, but it soon opens out, and becomes both beautiful and fertile, abounding particularly with cherry-trees, from the produce of which much cherry brandy is made. The chief employment is the rearing of cattle, but many of the inhabitants emigrate in summer, and find employment as builders of ships, and house servants. They are a simple-hearted, virtuous race, and greatly distinguished themselves in the war of independence.

MONTAGNA, a tu. and com. Italy Lombardy, prov. and 2 m. E. Sondrio with a church and a ruinous old castle, which figured in the early history of the Valellina. P. 1948.

MONTAGNAC, several places, France, particularly a tu. dep. Herault, r. bank Herault, 23 m. W. S.W. Montpellier, with several distilleries and a trade in serge, wool, and sugar. See Maison de Lattin, famous for his long captivity in the Bastille, and the wonderful ingenuity and perseverance he displayed in order to effect his escape, was born here. Pop. 3441.

MONTAGNANA, a tu. Italy Venetia, gov. Venice, prov. and 22 m. S.W. Padua. It is surrounded by ancient walls, with lofty towers, all built of the finest brick and furnishing a beautiful specimen of medieval fortification and has five churches, a handsome theatre, an old castle, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and a considerable trade in hemp. Pop. 9800.

MONTAGUE ISLAND ---1 One of the New Hebrides, S. Pacific Ocean lat. 17° 26' S. lon. 168° 17' E. ---2, An Isl. N. Pacific Ocean, W. coast of Russian America, forming the N. W. side of Prince William's Sound, lat. (6. point) 56° 46' N. lon. 147° 30' W. (lat. about 50 m. long and 10 m. broad. ---3, An Isl. S.E. coast, Australia, lat. 36° 18' S. lon. 150° 24' E. (lat. nearly 2 m. N. to S. with 12 shoals near its W. end, with rocky bottom. ---4, An Isl. 5 m. coast, China, prov. Chekiang, lat. (5. point) 39° 10' N. lon. 122° 5' E. (lat. 5. One of the Sandwich islands, S. Atlantic, lat. 53° 27' S. lon. 26° 44' W. (lat. 5.))

MONTAIGU (Flamish, Scheperkerke) a tu. and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, 26 m. N.E. Brussels with a beautiful church, several breweries and distilleries, and a considerable trade in straw. Pop. 2267.

MONTAILLEUX, a village and commune of France, department of Savoy 2 m. from Chambéry with an ancient church. Pop. 1168.

MONTAIRMONT, a vil. and com. France, dep. Savoie, prov. and 7 m. N. Morvans with an ancient church, a magnificent sanctuary and a trade in corn, cattle and dairy produce. Pop. 1500.

MONTALBAN, two places, Spain ---1 A tu. Andalusia, prov. and 15 m. S. Cordova, with almost mathematically straight streets, a church, courthouse and two primary schools, and manufactures of linen, hosiery, oil mills, hosiery, and a trade in corn, oil, linen, and fruit. Pop. 2324. ---2 A tu. Aragon, prov. and 37 m. N. N.E. Teruel, one of the best in Lower Aragon, but almost destroyed during the last civil war. It has a church, primary school, and hospital, manufactures of linen, woollen, and hempen cloth, several marble quarries, and a mine of coal. Pop. 926.

MONTALBANO, a tu. Naples, prov. Basilicata, dist. and 35 m. S.W. Matera. Here the Roman consul Curius defeated the army of Pyrrhus. Pop. 3800.

MONTALCINO, a tu. Tuscany, prov. and 30 m. S.E.E. Siena. It is walled, and otherwise fortified, is the see of a bishop, has a court of law, several public offices, a cathedral, two churches, limestone quarries, and a trade in the exquisite wine of the district. Pop. (1858) 2399.

MONTALDO, several places, kingd. of Italy Piedmont ---1 (di Mondovì) a vil. and com. div. Cune, prov. and 6 m. S. Mondovì, with an ancient church, a courthouse, mines of iron, and a trade in corn and fruit, particularly chestnuts. Pop. 1961 ---2 (d'Asti) a vil. and com. div. Alessandria, prov. Alessandria with a church, quarries of limestone and gypsum, and a trade in wine. Pop. 1020 ---3 (di Biella) a vil. and com., div. Cune, prov. and about 6 m. from Alba, with a church, a round tower, forming the only remains of an ancient castle, and a trade chiefly in wine. Pop. 1425 ---4, (di Soncino) a vil. and com., prov. Asti. It was once fortsed, but now only consists of a single street, with an ancient tower and a church. Pop. 1055.

MONTALEGRE, a tn and par. Portugal, prov. Trás-os-Montes, 32 m. W.S.W. Chaves. It stands high, and has an old castle, and a trade in butter, cows and calves. Pop. 508.

MONTALEGRE, or Gratará, a tn. Brasilien, Guiana, prov. and 150 m. E.N.E. Para, on a height to an island of the Amazon, near the mouth of the Grapapira, with a church, a saw-mill, and some trade in sandalwood, cotton, coffee, and cloves. Pop. dist., 4000.

MONTALENGO a vil and com. Italy Piedmont div. Turin prov. and about 8 m. S. Ivrea, on the canal of Caluso; with a handsome modern church, a castle, finely seated on a height, an elementary school, manufactures of straw bonnets, and a trade in wine and fruit especially chestnuts. P. 1340.

MONTALTO several places. Italy.—1. A vil and com., div. and 80 m. E.N.E. Alessandria, with a handsome church an old castle, and a trade in wine. P. 1932.—2. A vil and com., div. Nee (France) about 12 m. from St. Remo; with two parish churches an hospital and a trade in wine, fruit, and olive-oil. Pop. 1050.—3. A vil and com. div. Turin, prov. and 2 m. S. Ivrea, on the Dora, and in the vicinity of three lakes. It has a church, lambrun, and quarries of building-stone. Pop. 1820.

MONTALTO, a tn. Italy. The Marches, dioc. and 8 m. N.N.E. Ascoli, near r. bank Aso. It is a bishop's see. Pope Sixtus V. was born here. Pop. 1500.

MONTALTO (Latin, Monte), a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Citra, dioc. and 8 m. S.W. Cosenza. Pop. 2430.

MONTALVANEJO a tn. Spain, New Castile prov. and about 34 m. from Cuernca, indifferently built with a church, a hermitage, a primary school and hospital, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1139.

MONTALVO a tn. and par. Portugal, prov. Beira-Alta, 16 m. S. Castelo-Branco, near the river an affluent of the Tagus. It is fortified, and has an annual fair. Pop. 1242.

MONTALVO, a tn. Spain, New Castile, prov. and about 30 m. from Cuernca poorly built, with a church primary school, dilapidated townhouse the ruins of a Moorish castle, manufactures of salt-petre, with which the soil of the surrounding district is strongly impregnated and a trade in salt-petre and corn. Pop. 1141.

MONTANA, a tn. Italy Piedmont, div. and 14 m. N.E. Turin near the Orco; tolerably well built, with a court of justice, two squares a church an old castle, two Latin and two communal schools, and a trade in cattle and excellent tobacco. Pop. 4400.

MONTANCHEA, a tn. Spain, prov. and 20 m. S.E. Cáceres with steep but paved and clean streets; a town-house, prison two professorships of Latin and three elementary schools, a church and several hermitages, a nursery and several fountains; 50 flour and four oil mills. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in different kinds of traffic, exporting chiefly their rich laces and hangings, which are much esteemed as well as their wines, which formerly constituted one of the principal sources of wealth. Pop. 5587.

MONTARGIL, a vil. and par. Portugal, prov. Alentejo, 42 m. S.W. Portalegre. Pop. 1311.

MONTARGIS (Latin, Vallonensis) a tn. France, dep. Loiret, on the Loire, at the junction of the Long and Briare canals, 29 m. N.E. Orleans. It stands near an extensive forest of the same name, and is tolerably well built, has manufactures of common cloth, leather and paper, and a trade in corn, saffron wax, honey, leather wool, and cattle. P. 7272.

MONTAIRE (Latin, Monte), a tn. France, dep. Oise, 7 m. from Senlis; with a church, an old castle, forges, foundries, a paper, a saw and a rolling mill. P. 2226.

MONTAUBAN (Latin, Albense Mons, or Mons Aureolus), a tn. France, dep. Tarn at Garonne, 242 m. S. by W. Paris, lat. 44° 0' 55" N; lon. 8° 19' 45" W (c). It stands on a plateau, surrounded by the Tarn, the Tescou, and a deep ravine. The town proper which is surrounded by walls, and entered by several handsome gates, is not of great extent, but has extensive suburbs, which stand on the opposite bank of the Tarn, and communicate with the town by a bridge of boats, composed of seven large arches. At the extremity of the bridge, near the suburbs, is a gate, in the form of a triumphal arch, and, at the other extremity, is the Hotel de Ville, a handsome square structure, with four turrets at its angles. The town is well built, and has clean wide streets, and three fine squares. Among the public buildings are a handsome cathedral, in the form of a Greek cross, and of Italian architecture; a prefecture, public library, bishops palace, and theatre. It has considerable manufactures of common woollens, known by the name of Montauban serge, corded, still-husky soap, cottons, delaines, broads and starch, also breweries, tanneries, worsted and filling mills and a trade in corn, for which Montauban is an entrepot to several towns of the S. flour leather woollens, oil, goose-feathers, groceries, draps, &c. Montauban is the see of a bishop has courts of first resort, and commerce, a consulting chamber of manufactures, a society of agriculture, science, and belles lettres a communal college, a diocesan seminary a secondary ecclesiastical school, and a Protestant theological faculty. It was one of the first towns which embraced the Reformation, and has, in consequence, been often subjected to the most cruel persecutions. Pop. (1852) 16,509.

MONTAUD, a tn. France, dep. Loire l. bank Farned about 1 m. N. St. Etienne. Pop. 2863.

MONTAUK POINT, a lofty promontory, U. States, state and 115 m. E. New York, the most E. extremity of Long Island. On it is a lighthouse, 180 ft. lat. 41° 4' 12" N. lon. 71° 52' W (c).

MONTAZZOLI, a tn. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Citra dioc. and S.W. Il-Vasto. Pop. 1927.

MONTAUD (Latin, Mons Boreus), a tn. France dep. Côte-d'Or on the Brenne, and the canal of Burgogne, 40 m. N.W. Dijon with an ancient church an old chateau, in which the celebrated naturalist, Buffon, was born, manufactures of woollen cloth, druggs, laces, traw, and leather and a trade in hemp, wood, wool thread, &c. Pop. 2076.

MONTBELLARD (Latin, Mons Algedardus) a walled tn. France dep. Doubs 40 m. N.E. Besancon. It is generally well and regularly built has a court of first resort, a communal college and a public library of 10,000 volumes, a chateau, placed on a commanding height, now used partly as a lock-up house, and partly as a record office. Hotel de Ville, public markets, several churches, an hospital, ancient college, &c. manufactures of clocks and watches, about 4000 of the latter being annually finished; homery, various tanneries, agricultural implements, fish, sythes, Paris point, a cotton-mill and numerous fountains. Montbellard is also one of the important trade with Switzerland and has also a good deal of general trade in corn, groceries, cheese, linen leather &c. and oak deals, timber for carpentry and ship-building &c. The naturalist, G. Cuvier was born here. Pop. 6224.

MONTBLANCH a tn. Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 19 m. N.W. Tarragona, with a townhouse, five elementary schools several churches a prison, an hospital for the sick poor nine flour and seven oil mills several hand-mills, a tannery and some cotton manufactures. Wine, filberts, and other fruits are exported. Pop. 4114.

MONTBRISON (Latin, Montbrisonensis) a tn. France, dep. Loire, 37 m. W.S.W. Lyons; in general ill built houses low and of a mean appearance, streets irregular and narrow. It has however, spacious and finely-planted boulevards, formed on the site of the ancient fortifications, a Gothic cathedral, founded in 1225, a court of first resort, communal college, primary normal school, secondary ecclesiastical college, agricultural and commercial society; but both in manufactures and trade are unimportant. Pop. (1852) 5994.

MONTBROU, a tn. France, dep. Charente, 16 m. E. An. gouleme, on the Tardouze, with forges, an iron and a paper mill, and, near it, a lead-mine. Pop. 1385.

MONTCEL, a vil. and com. France, dep. Savoie 5 m. from Aix l. bank Seron; with a small church and a trade in potatoes, chestnuts, and cattle. Pop. 1115.

MONTDIDIER (Latin, Mons Desiderii), a tn. France, dep. Somme, on the slope of a hill, washed by the Don, 21 m. S.E. Amiens, houses generally old, and almost all the streets walled and ill-paved. It has a townhall, college, court-house, and church of St. Peter, manufactures of hosiery, the staple, employing about 45,000 persons within the arrondissement, serge, percale, stocking-loom, cotton mills, tanneries, and a trade in corn, cattle, coal, &c. Pop. 3774.

MONTDRAGON, or Montmaison (Latin, Mons Dracensis) a tn. France, dep. Vancluse, r. bank Les, 20 m. N.W. Avignon. Pop. 1769.

MONTE-ALTO, a tu Brazil, prov Bahia, comarca Unha, with a church and a trade in corn, millet, and cattle.

MONTE-ARAZO, a vil Sicily, prov and 8 m. W N W Girgenti, on an embankment, and long noted as a resort of bandits. Pop. 1000.

MONTE-CALVO, a tu Naples, prov Principato-Ultra, dist. and 4 m. N W W Aviano, with eight churches, and an annual fair, which lasts three days. Pop. 4500.

MONTE-CAZZO a tu Tuscany prov and 23 m. W N W Florence with a large and handsome parish and three other churches, and a trade in wine, olives, hemp, flax, and dairy produce. Pop. 3230.

MONTE-CAROTTO a tu Italy The Marches deleg. and 34 m. W S W Ancona. Pop. 2500.

MONTE-CAYO. See ALBANO

MONTE-CHERNO See OROSI (Mount)

MONTE-CHILARO, a tu and com Italy Lombardy, prov and 18 m. S E Brescia, 1 bank Chiese. It is surrounded by ancient walls, and was once defended by a strong castle, of which, however, only a single tower now remains. It has two churches, a new and beautiful hospital, an orphan asylum, and a rich charitable endowment (congregazioni di carità) an extensive transit trade and numerous silk and several other mills. Pop. 6700.

MONTE-CHENET a tu bay and river, N W coast, id. Bay of republic of Santo Domingo. The town is situated a few miles N W from the mouth of the river, and was formerly a place of some importance, but is now much reduced, having no other resource but the cattle raised in its territory.—The bay is lat. 19° 58' N lon 71° 38' W (a.) Opposite, are a group of small, low islets, covered with mangroves and called the Heron Brothers, situated on a shoal called the Shoal or Bank of Monte Chénét, which extends 14 m. to the W.—The river rises on the N E side of Mount Yague near the centre of the island, from which it flows N about 25 m., when it bends round to the N W., and, after a further course of about 70 m. falls by two mouths into the Bay of Manzanilla.

MONTE-PALOMBO a tu Naples, prov Principato-Ultra, dist. and 31 m. N E S. Avellino with an annual fair. Pop. 4000.

MONTE-PALOMBO a tu Naples, prov Salerno, dist. and 13 m. W N W Larino, with two annual fairs. Pop. 2450.

MONTE-FORTE, a tu Naples, prov Principato-Ultra, dist. and 5 m. W N W Avellino with two churches, and a glass-work. Pop. 8600.

MONTE-LICONE a tu Italy deleg. and 6 m. N E E. Macerata. Pop. 4021.

MONTE-MAGGIORIO, a tu Sicily, prov and 20 m. S E Palermo. Pop. 4000.

MONTE-MANARO, a tu Naples, prov Principato-Ultra, dist. and 10 m. W S. San Angelo de Lombardi. It is the seat of a bishopric, and has an annual fair. P. 1800.

MONTE-MON KOVO, a tu Portugal, prov Alentejo, com. and 33 m. S W Evora, near the source of the Guadiana. It is the native place of the celebrated traveller Mendes Pinto, whose supposed love of sloth and indolence in the marvellous has made his name the generic term for his class. The manufacturers consist of leather and easternware. Pop. 2747.

MONTE-MON-VIZIO a tu Portugal, prov Douro, r bank Montego, 14 m. W Coimbra. It is a very sumptuous place, surrounded by a wall in a ruinous condition, and defended by an old castle and has a number of antiquities, and an annual fair. Pop. 8775.

MONTE-MOZZANO, a coastal mountain, Brazil, forming a promontory on the S. of the Bay of Espírito-Santo, prov of that name. In clear weather, it can be seen by vessels at the distance of 40 m., and is hence an important landmark.

MONTE-ROTONDO a tu Italy deleg. and 36 m. S E W Regio with a castle. Near it pure alum and sulphur are obtained. Pop. 1000.

MONTE-SAN ANGELO, a tu Naples, prov Capitanata, dist. and 28 m. N E Foggia, defended by a strong castle the son of a bishop, with a great number of churches, and the remains of a Roman temple. Pop. 11,500.

MONTE-SAN-GIULIANO, a tu Sicily, prov and 8 m. S N E. Trapani, on a mountain anciently called Eryx, covered by a strong barren castle. It has a great number of churches and convents, and an hospital. The mountain is 5400 ft. high, and was famous for its temple of Venera Erycna. P. 6800.

MONTE-SAN-SAVINO, a tu Tuscany 37 m. S E Florence. It is well built has a court of justice, two churches, a castle, and a trade in oil, wine, corn, and cattle. P. 4131.

MONTE-SANTO, a tu Brazil prov and 210 m. N W Bahia with a church and a primary school. Limestone and ironstone abound in the district.

MONTE-SARRO a tu Italy deleg. and 11 m. N E E. Macerata. It stands on a hill near the Adriatic, where it has a small harbour for fishing-vessels. Pop. 1600.

MONTE-SOANNEGO, a tu Naples, prov Basilicata, dist. and 7 m. S. Matera. Pop. 5600.

MONTE-SOMMARI, a vil Tuscany, prov Pisa 23 m. S E. Leghorn, with a church and a castle. Pop. 1653.

MONTE-VAPO, a tu Sicily, prov Girgenti, dist. and 19 m. N. Sciacca. Pop. 2980.

MONTE-VETROLARI a tu Tuscany, 21 m. W N W Florence, with a church. Pop. 1637.

MONTE-VIZIO, a seaport tu, cap. republic of Banda Oriental del Uruguay N W coast entry of the Plata lat. 34° 55' S.; lon 66° 15' W (a.) 130 m. E E E. Buenos Ayres. It is situated on a gentle elevation, at the extremity of a small peninsula, and is surrounded by a strong wall mounted with guns, and further defended by a citadel or castle, of different construction with bulwarks and batteries. It is pretty well built houses mostly of one story flat-roofed, and floored with brick. There are no public buildings deserving notice excepting the cathedral which is rather a handsome structure although awkwardly situated. There is also a townhouse and prison in one edifice. The harbour is shoal having only from 14 to 19 ft. water but the bottom being very soft, vessels receive no damage by grounding; it is exposed to the S. W. winds, which blow right into it, causing a good deal of sea. The chief trade is in hides, tallow, and dried or jerked beef the first two are exported to Europe, and the latter is sent to the West Indies, especially to the Havana. The cargo comes from Chile, in square plates, is sometimes shipped here, as well as meat or tea of Paraguay. The imports principally consist of British cottons, woollens, hardware, flour, wine, spirits, tinned, sugar, tobacco, boots, shoes, salt, &c. The climate is humid, and the weather in the winter months, June, July, and August, is, at times, boisterous; and the air keen and piercing. In summer, again, the heat is oppressive. The climate, however, is represented as being, on the whole, cheerful and healthy though sultry; the soil is the neighbourhood fertile, and abounding in vegetable products. Fish and fowl are cheap. Pop. 10,000 to 15,000.

THE CATHEDRAL, MONTE-VIDEO.—From Valdivia, looking across the Muelle.

MONTEALEGRE, a tn. Spain, Murcia, prov. and 33 m. S.E. Albacete, with a townhouse, three elementary schools, a hermitage, a church, a flour-mill, and a brandy distillery. Pop. (agricultural) 5187.

MONTEBELLO, a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Ultra I, dist. and 10 m. S.E. Reggio. Pop. 1450.

MONTEBELLO, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. and 25 m. N.E. Alessandria, 1 bank Cupa, with a church and a trade in silk and fruit, particularly nuts, apples, and pears. The French here in 1800 defeated the Austrians. P. 1486.

MONTEBELLO a tn. kingd. of Italy gov. Venice, prov. and 19 m. S.W. Vinesia, near the Chiampo. It consists of small but clean-looking houses, and has an old castle and a church. A battle was fought here between the Austrians and French, in 1813. Pop. 3600.

MONTEBELLUNA, a tn. kingd. of Italy gov. Venice, prov. and 14 m. W. V. Treviso. It is the seat of several district courts and offices and contains a church. Pop. 4089.

MONTEBOURG (Latin Montis Burgi), a tn. France, dep. Manche 16 m. S.E. Cherbourg with the remains of a fine Benedictine abbey, manufactures of lace and tacking and some trade in sheep. Pop. 2658.

MONTECALVO a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Alessandria, prov. Voghera with a church, a castle, and a trade in white wine. Pop. 1150.

MONTECALELLA a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. and 4 m. N.E. Alessandria, 1 bank Tanaro with a magnificent castle, three churches, and a trade in wine. P. 1200.

MONTECATINI, two places, Tuscany.—1 (di Val di Cecina) Prov. and 25 m. W. N.W. Florence with a handsome church, copper mines, and a trade in honey. Pop. 1673.—2 (di Val di Nievole) A tn., prov. Pistoia, dist. and S.E. Pisa with an ancient and handsome church and mineral springs. Pop. 3732.

MONTECCHIO,—1 A tn. Italy duchy Modena near bank Lenza, 24 m. W. Modena. Pop. 3300.—2, (Maggiore) A vil. and par. Austrian Italy prov. and 7 m. S.W. Vienna with a church, and two annual fairs. Pop. 4137.

MONTELI (Latin Montesui), a tn. France, dep. Tarn-et-Garonne, 5 m. W. W. Montauban, on a lofty summit, and once strongly fortified. Pop. 1712.

MONTELLANO a tn. Spain, Italy, Piedmont.—1 A vil. and com. div. and 25 m. W. Alessandria with a court of justice, two churches, an ancient castle, some manufactures of woollen and linen stuffs and a trade in wine and cattle. Pop. 1900.—2 A vil. and com. div. Alessandria, prov. Aosta, 5 m. from Spigno once defended by a strong castle now in ruins. It has two churches and a trade in wine, fruit and cattle. Pop. 711.

MONTECHIARUGOLO a vil. and com. duchy and 10 m. S.E. Parma, 1 bank Ersa, with a magnificent castle a public school, and manufactures of gunpowder. Pop. 3967.

MONTECRESTESE, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Novara, 5 m. from Domo d'Ossola with a very ancient church, and a trade in wine and dairy produce. Pop. 1816.

MONTEFIASSONE, a tn. Papal States, Belg. and 10 m. N.W. Viterbo, on a lofty eminence, near E. shore of Lake Bracciano. It is not well built, but is a bishop's see, and contains a cathedral, an imposing edifice. Near it is the church of San Flaviano, a Gothic building, founded in 1080, and preserving a strange mixture of round and pointed arches. Montefiascone has long been famous for mineral wine. In the vicinity is a sulphurous lake. Pop. 4809.

MONTEFRIO, a tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 30 m. W. N.W. Granada. It is very irregular, and of unpleasant aspect with broad, and paved, but crooked streets. Besides the townhouse and prison, the only buildings and institutions worth mentioning are the granary, five elementary schools, an hospital for the sick poor, and three churches. It has also eight flour and seven oil mills, three manufactories of soft soap, a brandy distillery, and four fulling-mills. Pop. (agricultural) 1901.

MONTEFURIO a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Ultra, dist. and 3 m. N.W. Avellino. Pop. 6500.

MONTEGICAR, a vil. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 20 m. N. Granada, with a townhouse, a beautiful fountain, two schools, two granaries, a church, and an oratory. Near it are quarries of limestone, gypsum, and freestone, and mines of lead and manganese. Pop. 2466.

MONTEGO-BAY, a seaport in N.W. coast, Jamaica, cap. co. Cornwall on a bay of same name, with a harbor protected by a breakwater, but still somewhat exposed to a heavy swell from the N. lat. (for) 18° 39' 34" N. lon. 77° 58' W. It is defended by a battery, has a customs house, where the slaves are held, and carries on a considerable trade. Pop. about 4000.

MONTEGROSSO a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Alessandria, prov. and 5 m. S.E. Asti, 1 bank Tigullio with four squares, two churches, a monastery, a school and a trade in excellent wine. Pop. 3250.

MONTEHERMOBO a vil. Spain, Extremadura, prov. and 47 m. N. Oseares with broad paved streets, and two squares, a townhouse, three elementary schools, and a church; manufactures of iron implements for husbandry, as well as domestic use and some traffic in grain and cattle. Pop. (agricultural) 8726.

MONTEJAQUE a tn. Spain, Andalusia, 48 m. W. Malaga, near the Guadalev, indifferently built, with a church, courthouses, two primary schools, manufactures of white soap and cork, and a trade in corn and maize. Pop. 1688.

MONTELEONE, two towns, Naples.—1 (San Hippocrene) Prov. Calabria-Ultra II, at a height, 15 m. N.E. Nicotri. It ranks as a fortress of the fourth class, and is defended by a strong castle. Its houses are chiefly of wood, and most of the streets crooked and badly paved. It has four churches, a royal college, a court of commerce and several silk mills. Pop. 6630.—2, Prov. Capitanata, dist. and 7 m. S.W. Bovino with three annual fairs. Pop. 2440.

MONTELMARTE (Latin Mons Adamari), a walled tn. France, dep. Drôme, at the junction of the Rhodan and the Isère. It is generally well built, and on a rising ground where it stands the citadel or castle. It has a court of first resort, a communal college, manufactures of wrought silk, wicker-work, serge leather, common and morocco hosiery, &c. cotton-mills, tile-works and bookbinding and a trade in morgan (a kind of cake made of almonds and honey), corn flour and olive oil spun silk, cattle, and nine annual fairs. It was one of the first towns which embraced the Reformation, and makes an important figure in the civil wars. Pop. 6886.

MONTELI, a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Ultra, dist. and 10 m. S.W. San Angelo de Lombardi. It has eight churches. Pop. 5900.

MONTELLANO a tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 37 m. S.E. Seville with two squares, a townhouse, granary four elementary schools, a church, two soap manufactories, and 10 oil and 5 flour mills. Pop. (agricultural), 4287.

MONTELOVEZ COAHUILA, or MONTOLOVA, a tn. Mex. con confederation, state Coahuila, 123 m. W. Monterey Pop. 3500.

MONTEPMAGNO a tn. Italy, Piedmont, div. and 13 m. W. N.W. Alessandria, with a remarkably elegant church, in the form of a rotunda, with Ionic pillars supporting a dome a castle, a communal school, and a trade in wine fruit, and silk. Pop. 2588.

MONTEMALE a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Cuni, in a mountainous dist. in the valley of the Grana, with a church, an old castle in ruins, a trade in corn wine, and chestnuts and quarries of limestone and alabaster. P. 1516.

MONTEMAYOR, a tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 16 m. E. Cordova, with a square, in which stand the townhouse and the granary. It has also an ancient castle with three beautiful Gothic towers, an elementary school, a church, and four hermitages. Pop. 3180.

MONTEMIETTO a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Ultra, dist. and 8 m. N.E. Avellino. Pop. 3000.

MONTEMILONE, a tn. Naples, prov. Basilicata, dist. and 16 m. E. N.E. Melfi, with three churches. Pop. 1480.

MONTEMOLIN, a vil. Spain, Extremadura, prov. and 90 m. S.E. Badajoz, with broad, straight, paved, and rather clean, but sometimes steep streets a townhouse, six churches, two elementary schools, a house of refuge, and, in the environs, two hermitages, and a fine old Moorish castle. Besides agriculture, the natives are employed in sheepskin, several oil and numerous flour mills; in manufactures coarse woollens and linens, soap, bristles, and tins. The son of Don Carlos takes from this place his title of Count of Montemolin. Pop. 3320.

MONTEMOR, or Alma de Foz de Iguaçu, a tn. Brazil, prov. Paraná, 1 hour from Foz de Iguaçu, 13 m. from the sea, 10 m. S. S. M. Miguel, with a considerable trade in meat, made of a straw or rush called peripá. Almost all the inhabitants are Indians.

MONTEMOR-NOVO, a tn. Brazil, prov. São Paulo, 60 m. S. Oeste, composed of a few detached hamlets built round the parish church, and chiefly inhabited by Indians, of very indolent habits. The district is sandy, but well watered, and grows some of the best cotton in the province. It has some trade also in rum and agricultural produce. Pop. dist., 2000.

MONTEMUREO, a tn. Naples, prov. Basilicata, dist. and 34 m. S.E.E. Potenza. Pop. 6000.

MONTENAKEN or MONTENAKEN a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Limburg, 15 m. S.W. Hasselt. It is an ancient place, was once defended by a strong castle, and is memorable for a great battle fought in its vicinity in 1313, between the Liege and Brabantines, when the latter were defeated with a loss of 8000 killed, and 4000 prisoners. It has an annual fair, chiefly for woollens, cotton stuffs, ironware, pottery glass, &c.

MONTENEGRO [Montenegro, or Therapogor, Turkish, Koradagh, Black mountain] a small territory, European Turkey practically independent, though tributary to the Ottoman Porte, lat. 42° 10' to 43° 56' N. lon. 18° 41' to 20° 22' E. bounded W. by Dalmatia, N. Herzegovina and part of Bosnia, and E. and S. Albania. Area about 300 sq. m. It is divided into eight nahies or departments, which with their approximate population, are as follows:—

| Name of Dep. | Pop. | Name of Dep. | Pop. |
|--------------|--------|--------------------|--------|
| Katunika | 24,000 | Pipert | 8,500 |
| Ternavika | 32,000 | Servizika Moravika | 9,100 |
| Rutinka | 21,000 | Kutinka | 16,200 |
| Zabranavika | 4,800 | | |
| Skopavika | 14,000 | Total | 97,000 |

In 1944 the population was estimated at 190,000

The general aspect of the country is that of a succession of elevated ridges diversified here and there by a lofty mountain peak, some of them attaining elevations of 1000 ft. or 6000 ft., and in some parts looking like a sea of immense waves turned into stone. The whole territory is wild and rugged to the extreme, but has also a few beautiful and verdant plains and valleys in which the soil is exceedingly fertile. Two of these favoured tracts are the department of Ternavika and the valley of Skopavika, watered by several streams, the principal of which is the Morava or Morava, which falls into the lake of Scutari. The climate is healthy. Forests of valuable timber cover many of the mountain sides. The most common are oaks and holly; ash, beech, fir, walnut, hazel, wild pear, poplar, willow, alders, and the Kotina (Rhus Cotinus) used for dyeing and tanning. The cultivated productions are Indian corn, potatoes, cabbage, cauliflower, and tobacco with several kinds of fruit-trees, including the peach, apple, pomegranate, mulberry and others. In the department of Ternavika, already mentioned, apples, vines, carobs, almonds, figs, quinces, walnuts, &c. also grow in abundance. Agriculture is in a very rude and inefficient state, and though every cultivable piece of land, even if only a few feet square, is planted with Indian corn, potatoes, or some other useful plant, yet there is an insufficiency of food for the population, which is on the increase. Sheep, goats, and pigs, are reared in great numbers, the two former affording a profitable supply of wool and cheese for exportation. Game is not abundant, but fish are taken in great quantities and are of excellent quality particularly the trout, which are celebrated, and some of them of immense size and a species called Scorpaena, is caught in large quantities and sold for export to Vienna and Trieste. Manufactures, with exception of a coarse woollen stuff called Strucko, used at once for cloaks and blankets, and a few other articles of wearing apparel, are unknown; the women also condescend with the needle; and the shirt-clothes, and borders of their cloth dresses are neatly worked in silk, and patterns of coloured cloth. The chief occupations of the inhabitants are agriculture and fishing; the latter carried on principally in the lake Scutari. The exports of Montenegro are smoked mutton-bones, milled fish, wax, honey, hides, tallow, cheese, butter, dry-wood, fir-wood, charcoal, cattle, pigs, pork, swine, wool, tobacco, turmeric, shells, fruits, Indian corn, potatoes, cabbage, cauliflower and other vegetables. The chief imports are cattle, and some horses; tobacco from Turkey, salt, sugar, iron, oil, malt fish, wax, candles, wine, brandy, coffee, sugar, arms, gunpowder, lead, flint, glass, shoes, saddles, cloth, linen and cotton stuffs handkerchiefs, &c. &c. The Montenegrins are generally of tall stature, and well proportioned, with singularly powerful voices, which enables them to carry on conversations at incredible distances; foreheads good, face rather square, moderately aquiline, or straight nose, and sunken eyes. Both men and women are very robust; the latter are often beautiful when young, but soon lose their good looks by laborious and unbecoming occupations, being the beasts of burden of Montenegro. The people, generally, are cheerful in manner, extremely brave, and hospitable and courteous to all excepting the Turks, whom they hate with an excessive and enduring hatred, inspired by the sufferings inflicted on their country by their invasions, and which they eagerly seize on every opportunity of avenging by a sanguinary and unrelenting retaliation. In war, they cut off the heads of their dead and wounded enemies, and of all taken with arms in their hands, and arms of those of their wounded comrades, which they cannot save from the hands of the enemy. The men go at all times fully armed, whatever be the occupation in which they are engaged. The Montenegrins mode of living is hardy and primitive, and their food simple, consisting of coarse unleavened bread, made of Indian corn, cheese, milk and vegetables. Meat and fish they seldom taste. The houses are of stone, generally with thatched roofs, but many are covered partly or entirely with wooden shingles. The total number of towns and villages in the country is between 500 and 800 but of the former there is not one deserving the name, the largest not having a population of 1200. None of them are walled, and few can be said to have any streets. The language of the Montenegrins is a dialect of the Slavonic, and is considered very pure. In religion they are all of the Greek church. Education is hardly thought of; many of the priests can neither read nor write, and there are only two schools in the whole country—one at Cetinje, for 30 boys, and the other at Dobrovolje, for 24, and both established so recently as 1841. Montenegro is governed by a Vlach or prince, who is at once a bishop, a judge, a legislator and a commander-in-chief. The office is hereditary in the family of Petrovitch Montenegro has been for nearly a century, in a sense, under the protection of Russia. The chief families have been educated in St. Petersburg, and appointed to grades in the Russian army and the annual tribute due to the Porte, about 240,000, has long been paid by a remittance from the emperor of Russia. In 1858 the Turks sent an army of 24,000 men against Montenegro, with the view of reducing it to complete subjection; but, after some sanguinary conflicts, the Turks were induced to recall their army without having accomplished the object of the expedition.—(W. Litch's Dalmatia and Montenegro, &c.)

MONTENEGRO, a tn. Naples, prov. Samio, dist. and 11 m. N.N.W. Larno, with an annual fair. Pop. 3500.

MONTENOTTE, a vil. Italy Piedmont, div. and 26 m. N. Geneva. It is memorable as the scene of a victory which the French gained, on 1798, over the Austrians at the commencement of their conquests in Italy.

MONTEDORIBIO a tn. and com. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Citra, dist. and 8 m. W. & W. E. Vasto. Pop. 1800.

MONTAPAGANO, a tn. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Citra, dist. and 16 m. E. Teramo. Pop. 2000.

MONTPELOSO, a tn. Naples, prov. Basilicata, dist. and 23 m. W. N. W. Matera. It is walled, and is the seat of a bishop. Pop. 4570.

MONTPEULIANO a tn. Tuscan prov. and 51 m. S.E. Florence, on a lofty summit about 1800 ft. above the sea. It is the seat of a bishop, has a court of first resort, and other public offices, a beautiful church, several palaces, manufactures of soap, oil-mills, and a trade in the wine of the district. Cardinal Bellarmine is said to have been born here. Montepulciano is an ancient Etruscan city, and has many interesting remains. Pop. (1853) 9040.

MONTESALE, a tn. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Citra, dist. and 14 m. N. N. W. Vasto. Pop. 3180.

MONTEBEAU, or Montebello, or Montebello (Latin, Conducta Scironum), a tn. France, dep. Seine-et-Marne, 13 m.

2. Fontainebleau, at the confluence of the Yonne and the Seine, both navigable, and each spanned by a bold bridge, and on a branch of the Troyes and Lyons railway. It is surrounded by a steep hill, crowned by the chateau of Serrilly, a handsome modern edifice, and is generally well built; has a collegiate church, a considerable trade, chiefly for the supply of Paris with flour, timber, cattle, &c., and important manufactures of earthen and stone ware, in imitation of the English. In 1814, it was the scene of Bonaparte's last victory. Pop. 4826.

MONTEREGGIONE, a tn. and com. Tuscany, about 8 m. from Siena, on a low height. It is walled, and has a church, and a strong castle. Pop. 3581.

MONTERRI, —1, A city, Mexican confederation, cap. of New Leon, on the Tigris, at the head of a large and beautiful valley, 85 m. E. by N. Saltillo, lat. 26° N., lon. 100° W. It has well-paved streets, houses of stone, in the Moorish style, with flat roofs and is the most important place in N. Mexico. Near it are gold, silver and lead mines. Pop. about 15,000.—2 (San Carlos de) A seaport to U. States, Upper California, on bay of same name, 80 m. S.E. San Francisco lat. 36° 58' 24" N., lon. 121° 53' W. (h.) It is surrounded by wooded hills, and contains a fort a guard-house, a church and a custom-house.—The bay is about 85 m. wide at the entrance and stretches about 16 m. inland.

MONTERRUOLI, a tn. Naples, prov. Salerno, dist. and 4 m. S. Isernia. Pop. 1740.

MONTERRUOLI, a tn. and com. Tuscany, 10 m. S.E. Siena, near r. bank Arbia with a church, and a trade in ears cattle, and silk. Pop. 8807.

MONTERRUOLI, a tn. Naples, prov. Otranto dist. and 8 m. W. S. W. Lecce. Pop. 1890.

MONTERRUOLI, a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Ultra II dist. and 10 m. E. E. Monteleone. Pop. 3000.

MONTERRUOLI, two small places, Italy. Piedmont.—1 A vil. and com. div. Genova, prov. Levante 4 m. from Leranzo, partly fronting the sea. It has a church a Cuginum convent, and an ancient tower, on a lofty height a tunny fishery and a trade in wine olives, and lemons. Pop. 1199.—2, A vil. and com. div. Cuneo, in a mountainous district, on the Grana, here crossed by a wooden bridge. It was, in early times, defended by a strong castle, and had some mines of silver and iron. Pop. 1292.

MONTERRUBIO, vil. Spain. Extremadura, prov. and 14 m. S. W. Badajoz, tastefully and irregularly built, with a large square, a townhouse, prison granary three elementary schools, a parish church, a chapel several fountains, and a cemetery house for the dead, a manufactory of common chairs, and numerous flour-mills. Pop. (agricultural), 2500.

MONTESA, a tn. Spain, prov. and 88 m. S. W. Valencia, on an eminence rising in the middle of a beautiful valley and possessing a magnificent and once strong and important castle, which was injured by an earthquake, March, 1748. It has a townhouse, hospital, two endowed schools, a church, and three hermitages. Pop. 1050.

MONTESANO, a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Citra, dist. and 11 m. S.E. La Sala, on a steep mountain. Pop. 7100.

MONTESARCHIO, a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Ultra, dist. and 14 m. N. W. Avellino. Pop. 7800.

MONTESQUEL, Vaucluse, a tn. France, dep. G. rous, 29 m. S. Toulouse with manufactures of woollen cloth and druggs, salt-petre, and tile-works. Pop. 2305.

MONTU, no. Po a vil. and com. Italy. Piedmont, div. and 18 m. N. E. Turin, r. bank Po, with three churches, a public school the ruins of an old castle, limekilns, and a trade in corn, millet, wine, and hemp. Pop. 1070.

MONTU, no. Po a vil. and com. Italy. Piedmont, div. Cuneo, prov. Alba, 8 m. from Canale, with a church of hawthorn, a large castle, silk-mills, and a trade in wine, wood, and chestnuts. Pop. 3600.

MONTU, no. Po a vil. and com. Italy. Piedmont, div. Cuneo, prov. Alba, 8 m. from Canale, with a church of hawthorn, a large castle, silk-mills, and a trade in wine, oil, and silk. Pop. 3487.

MONTEVERDE, a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Ultra, dist. and 20 m. E. N. E. St. Angelo de Lombardi. It is a bishop's see. Pop. 2200.

MONTEVERDE, or MONTEVERDE, in America, in the N. Pacific Ocean, Caroline group lat. 5° 37' N. lon. 155° 48' E. They are of coral formation and consist of about 80 low islands arranged in the form of a circle, connected by reef, and enclosing a lagoon about 20 m. long, by 15 m. broad. The shores are frequented in the season by hawk-bill turtles, and the surface of each island is densely covered with coconut, bread-fruit, palm trees, and various kinds of wood. The inhabitants are tall, well made, and active.

MONTFERRAND, a tn. France, dep. Puy-de-Dôme; properly only a suburb of Clermont Ferrand.

MONTFERRAT or MONTFERRATO an ancient duchy, Italy which was bounded N. and W. by Piedmont, S. by the republic of Genoa, and E. the duchy of Milan and had Casale for its capital. It is now included in the Sardian States, where it forms part of diva. Alessandria, Coni, Genoa, Novara, and Turin.

MONTFLANQUIN, or MONTFLANQUIN a tn. France dep. Lot-et-Garonne, 25 m. N. Agen; the houses are tolerably well built, but most of the streets steep, narrow, and irregular. Pop. 1552.

MONTFOOT, a tn. Holland, prov. and 9 m. S. W. Utrecht, 1 hank IJssel. It is well built, was formerly fortified and still has three gates, and is partially enclosed by a wall has a townhall, two churches, an hospital, two schools and the remains of a once strong castle, now used as a school. Agriculture, the cheese trade, and rope-spinning, are the chief occupations. Pop. 1799.

MONTFORD par Eng. Salop 2976 ac. Pop. 496.

MONTFORT several places, France particularly.—1 (St. Med.) [Latin Mons Fortis] a dep. Ille-et-Vilaine, at the confluence of the May and Chaulaines 14 m. W. Rennes. It is enclosed by ramparts, flanked with towers, and surrounded by a wide fosse, but a vast enclosed space to the W., N., and E. of the present town, indicates that it must at one time have had nearly ten times its present extent. It has fax mills, bleachfields, and a very extensive tannery and carries on a considerable trade in butter tallow hamp, wood, linen common straw, cattle, agricultural implements, &c. Pop. 1858.—2, a tn. and com. dep. Landes, 11 m. E. of the manufactures of raimous machines and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1544.—3, (L. Anseroy) [Latin, Mons Fortis Anseroy] a tn. and com. dep. Seine-et-Oise, with the remains of a strong castle, of the counts of Montfort one of whom led the infamous crusades against the Albigenses. It has also a church, and a trade in corn, fruit, hay, horses, and cattle. Pop. 1760.

MONTFORT, a vil. Drotel Lumburg, near Maestricht, with the remains of an old castle, which has been restored and modernized. Pop. 686.

MONTFRIN, a tn. France, dep. Gard 19 m. N. E. Nimes, 1 hank Gard, here crossed by a suspension-bridge. It has manufactures of linen and some oil mills. Pop. 2321.

MONTGELLAFREY, a vil. and com. France dep. Savoy, prov. Moriana, about 4 m. from La Chaux-de-Fort, with an ancient church and a trade in butter and cheese. Pop. 1000.

MONTGOMERY or MONTGOMERYSHIRE an island on N. Wales bounded N. by Denbighshire, E. and S. E. Shropshire, E. Radnorshire, S. W. Carmarthenshire, and W. and N. W. Merionethshire. Area, 491 500 ac. consisting mostly of wild, rugged, and sterile mountains, varying from 1090 ft. to 1600 ft. in height, the culminating point Pen-y-mont, of the Berwyn range, which occupies the N. W. part of the county, 2468 ft. high being just within the border of Cardiganshire. Notwithstanding the generally mountainous character of the county, it contains some fine and fertile valleys, the most extensive and fruitful of which is the Severn. The county is almost entirely occupied by the slate rocks which overpread so large a portion of Wales; but granite, greenstone, conglomerate, and the new red sandstone, also occur in different places. Lead and zinc are procured, and also some copper. Little more than 60,000 ac. are under tillage, chiefly in the narrow valleys, and on the E. side of the county bordering on Salop. Wheat, potatoes, and mangold-wurzel, are the principal crops. Orchards and gardens are numerous in the vale lands on the E. side of the county. The quantity of produce five grazing land is estimated at 180,000 ac., a great portion of which is appropriated to the dairy. In the hilly districts, the principal object of the farmer is the rearing of cattle, to be fattened in more fertile parts. The cattle of the uplands are small, breeds of sheep various. Great numbers of very small and hardy ponies, commonly called twinnies, are reared in the hilly districts of the county. Fennells are extensively manufactured, as are also what are called "Wales plains" or "cottens." The principal river in the Severn. The county town sends a member to Parliament; suggested elections (1884), 1886 ac. m. Montgomery Pop. 67,835

MONTGOMERY (Welsh, Tŷddu), a par. border market tn., and par., N. Wales. The town cap. above is, is picturesquely situated, 55 m. W by N Birmingham, partly at the base, and partly on the lower declivities of a hill. It consists of two principal streets, and a market-place, which are well kept; and has a fine ancient cruciform church, in the early English style, places of worship for various Dissenting bodies, several private academies, and a free school. There being no manufactures, the people generally are employed in agriculture. In connection with Welsh Newnham, it sends a member to Parliament. Area, 3368 ac. P. 1248.

MONTGOMERY a tn. U. States, cap. of Alabama, on a high bluff 7 bank Alabama, at the head of steam-boat navigation. It has seven churches and two academies 40,000 bales of cotton are shipped yearly. A railroad, 67½ m., connects this place with West Point, Georgia. P. (1840) 2350

MONTGOMERY ISLANDS, a group of six small rocky isles, off N.W. coast Australia, at the entrance of Devil's Bay, the largest is 70 ft. high, lat. 15° 45' S.

MONTHEI a vil. and par. Switzerland can Valais at the entrance of the valley of Lys, near r. bank Rhone 21 m. W. Sion, at the foot of a hill crowned with the ruins of an old castle. Cretaceous are very numerous here. Pop. 1623.

MONTHERMÉ a tn. France, dep. Ardennes, l. bank Meuse, here crossed by a suspension-bridge 328 ft. long, 10 m. N. Metz. It has manufactures of earthenware, and extensive glass-works at which fine flint and Bohemian glass are made. Pop. 1558.

MONTICELLI several places, Italy Lombardy particularly—1 A vil. and com. prov. and E.S.E. Pavia, near l. bank Po, with a church. Pop. 1261—2 (d'Olivo) A vil. and com., prov. Brescia, near l. bank Olho with two churches a sacristy and a chapel.

MONTICELLI several places, Italy particularly—1 A vil. and com. Piedmont div. Cune, near Alba, near the Tanaro, with two churches, two convents a very old castle, and has a little trade in wine. Pop. 1663—2 (d'Onegno) A vil. and com., duchy and 26 m. N.W. Parma, well built, with a beautiful collegiate church, a Jewish and several public schools, an hospital and ruinous old castle, and a trade in corn, wine, and cattle. Pop. vil. 1000, com., 7802—3 A vil. and par. Tuscany, 5 m. N. Florence with a church. Pop. 1805—4 A tn. Papal States, 19 m. N.E. Roma. P. 1095

MONTICELLO several places, Italy Lombardy, particularly—1 A vil., prov. and 14 m. E. E. Come with a church, and manufactures of wine. Pop. 1650—2 (d'Inverigo) A vil. prov. Brera, dist. and 5 m. from Inverigo with two churches.

MONTICIANO a tn. and com. Tuscany, 16 m. from Siena. It is walled has a church thermal sulphureous springs, and some trade in wine. Pop. 2028.

MONTIERI a tn. Tuscany 10 m. S.W. Siena with two churches, a castle, iron-mines, and a trade in chestnuts. Pop. 1071

MONTIGLIE a tn. Italy Piedmont, div. and 27 m. N.W. Alesandria, near San Vercelli, here crossed by a stone bridge. It has two churches, a castle, and a trade in corn, wine, and hemp. Pop. 8063.

MONTIGNAC, several small places, France, particularly—1 A tn. dep. Dordogne, or the Tarn, 24 m. E.S.E. Fungaux overlooked by the majestic remains of an ancient castle, which played an important part in the English and the civil wars. Pop. 2661.

MONTIGNOUB-LACOURNEX, a vil. and par. Tuscany, duchy Lucca, dist. and 3 m. from Massa-Ducale, with an ancient church and a castle, and some trade in wine and oil-olive. Pop. 1465

MONTIGNY-LEZ-TALLON, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, r. bank Sambre, 24 m. E. Mons; with contributions of iron-ore, two breweries, a flour-mill and lace-making machines. Pop. 1462.

MONTIGNY-LEZ-SAMBRE a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 2 m. E. Charleroi, l. bank Sambre; inhabitants principally employed in agriculture and the working of iron-mines. Pop. 3811.

MONTIJO, a tn. Spain, Extremadura, prov. and 19 m. E. Badajoz, on the Guadiana. It has a town-house, a palace of the count of Montijo, a granary, an hospital, linnings, six elementary schools, a summary and a church, manufactures of sailcloth and frieze, flour-mills, and an oil-press. Pop. (episcopal), 2860

MONTILLA a city Spain Andalus, prov. and 19 m. S. Cordova, on two hills. The houses have a good appearance, being clean and extremely white. The streets are broad, clean, and very well paved; and there are three squares, a town-house, a prison, a palace, belonging to the duke of Medinaceli a public and various private schools, an asylum for orphan girls, a poorhouse and frugalizing hospital, an hospital for the sick poor, a parish church, formerly a mosque; a chapel-of-ease, seven hermitages in or near the town, three convents, and two cemeteries. Agriculture, numerous flour-mills, five potteries, three soap and three silk manufactories, and manufactures of linen, napery coarse cloths and frieze, are the chief sources of occupation, and wine and oil are exported. Montilla was wrested from the Mussulmans by Ferdinand III, who peopled it with Christians. It was the native place of the great captain Gonzalo Fernandez de Cordoba whose family were the lords of this place. Pop. 15,524

MONTILLANA, a vil. Spain, Andalus, prov. and about 30 m. from Granada, with a church, monthouse, primary school, a flour-mill, and a trade in wheat. P. 1057

MONTIVET or MONTIVET a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Aosta, 5 m. from Yver, l. bank Dora Baltea here crossed by a wooden bridge. It has a church and a chapel and a trade in corn and wood. Pop. 1400.

MONTIVILLIERS (Latin, Montivilliers) a tn. France, dep. Seine-Inférieure, 6 m. N.E. Havre, at the extremity of a pretty valley, walled by the Leveche. It has a cheerful aspect, a rapid stream circulating in its streets through a good meadow of the houses have an antique appearance. It has a church, manufactures of woollen cloth lace, and sells sugar-refineries, tanneries, bleachfields, paper and cotton mills, and a trade in corn, cattle, cloth, leather groceries, and ironmongery. Pop. 8086.

MONTJEAN (Latin, Mons Johannis) a tn. France, dep. Maine-et-Loire, r. bank Loire, 30 m. N. Beaupreux. Near it is an important coal-field which, passing under the bed of the Loire, communicates with that of Monteville. Pop. 1470.

MONTJOIE (anc. Mons Joie) a tn. Rhemish Prussia, gov. and 13 m. S.E. Aix-La-Chapelle, at the confluence of the Lambeck with the Rour, in a wild romantic district. It contains the ruins of a fine old castle, said to have been a hunting-seat of Charlemagne, two churches, an Urmine convent, and superior grammar-school; has manufactures of linen casimere, and coverlets, a dye work, and several sawmills. Pop. 2520

MONTJOYE (Latin, Mons Joie) a tn. France, dep. Allier, 39 m. S.W. Moulins on the slope of a hill covered by the ruins of the old castle of the dukes of Bourbon, and washed by the Cher here crossed by a handsome stone bridge. During the Middle Ages, it was a strong fortress, and part of its massive walls, flanked with towers, still remains. It is tolerably well built, and has manufactures of linen, serge, bombazine, and cordons, and some trade in corn, wine, fruit, cheese, and cattle. Pop. 6105

MONTLAI (Latin, Mons Laus) a tn. France, dep. Ais, 26 m. W.S.W. Bourges; with manufactures of heavy clothing, peak-making sewing thread, and a trade in corn, rape, maize, woollens, hemp, and hemp-seed. P. 2840

MONTMARTRE (Latin, Mons Martia), an extensive suburb on the N. side of Paris (which see)

MONTMÉDY (Latin, Montmedus), a fortified tn. France, dep. Meuse, on the slope of a hill, washed by the Oth, 25 m. W. Luxembourg, ranking as a fortress of the fourth class because strong, and seven narrow and ill held-out. It has manufactures of lincory and lincory, corn and oil, and a trade in wine, hides, gloves, rails, and corn. Pop. 1648.

MONTMELIAN, or MONTMELIAN, a tn. France, dep. Bavière, on bank where was created by a bridge, 7 m. S.E. Chambéry. It was once so strong as to be regarded as the bulwark of Savoy, and the key of its Alps. But, after standing several sieges, its fortifications were finally demolished by Louis XIV., in 1703, and its famous castle, which crowned a rock overhanging the town, now exists only in a few fragments overgrown with briars and nettles. It has little trade, but a good wine, which bears its name, is grown in the vicinity. Pop. 1800.

MONTMIRAIL (Latin, Mons Mirabilis) a tn. France, dep. Marne, on a height near r. bank Petit Morin, 89 m. W S W Châlons; with a fine chateau, manufactures of leather, and a trade in corn, wool, and cattle. It was the birthplace of Cardinal Retz. Pop. 2222.

MONTMORENCY, a river, Lower Canada, which joins the St. Lawrence, 7 m. E. E. Québec, after a course, N to S., of about 15 m. It has a splendid current of 242 ft.

MONTMORENCY, or EXMONTREY (Latin, Monsmorencium), a tn. France, dep. Seine-et-Oise, 9 m. N Paris, very irregularly built, with an old chateau and church. The forest of Montmorency which stretches over an extensive plateau above the town, is a great summer resort of the Parisians. One great object of attraction is a house called the Hermitage, in which Montmorency resided for some time. Montmorency has a considerable trade in vegetables and fruits, particularly chestnuts and cherries, for the supply of the Paris market. Pop. 1850.

MONTMORILLON (Latin, Mons Maurillon), a tn. France, dep. Yonne, on both sides of the Garonne, 27 m. S.E. Pontils. It was once a place of great strength, and was celebrated for a hospital of Malcom-Dieu, founded in the 11th century by Robert du Fm part of the ruins of which still exist. It has a court of first resort an agricultural society, and a secondary ecclesiastical school is famous for its biscuits, has fine paper-mills and bleaching-works, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1850.

MONTMORIN a vd and com. Italy, Lombardy, prov. Lodi, dist. and 6 m. S. C. Crema, here crossed by a wooden bridge. It has a church with two oratories, and several oil and other mills. Near it, in 1705 the Imperialists under Prince Eugene, were defeated by the Imperialists under the Duke of Vendôme. Pop. 2448.

MONTMORIN, two places, France—1. [Latin, Mons Mons], a tn. dep. Lot-et-Garonne, r. bank Lot, 35 m. N W Blois. It was once fortified, and immediately above it stands the old castle of St. Omer. It has manufactures of linen, woollen hosiery, and leather. Pop. 2475.—2. A tn. and com., dep. Lot-et-Garonne, 11 m. W Savignac, with manufactures of vitriol. Near it immense quantities of peat are annually cut, and cattle-rearing is extensively carried on. Pop. 4500.

MONTONA, a tn. Austria, Illyria, gov. Istria, 31 m. S. Trieste; with a collegiate and deanery church, an elementary school, and a considerable trade in ship-timber. Pop. 1100.

MONTONE (Imo, Monte), a river, Italy, which rises in the E. slope of the Apennines, in the N. of Tuscany, flows N. E. enters the Romagna, passes Forlì, where it receives the Robbè passes Ravenna, 6 m. N. E. of which it falls into the Adriatic, local name, about 46 m.

MONTONE, a tn. Italy, prov. Syracuse, dist. and 8 m. W S W Modica. Pop. 4000.

MONTOPOLI, a tn. Tuscany 24 m. W S W Florence, walled with a church, a castle, and a trade in corn and silk. Pop. 2574.

MONTORIO, two places, Naples—1. A tn., prov. Abruzzo-Ultra I. dist. and 6 m. S. S. W Taranto, with two annual fairs. P. 1520.—2. A tn., prov. Basilicata, dist. and 4 m. S. Lacio. Pop. 1500.

MONTORIO, a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Ultra, dist. and 12 m. N. E. Caserta, with considerable manufactures of linen. Pop. 3200.

MONTORO, a city, Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 27 m. N. E. Cordova, on a rocky and uneven peninsula, formed by the Guadalquivir, here crossed by a fine bridge, houses crowded, streets narrow and generally steep, but tolerably paved, and provided with lamps. It has five squares, one of which is used as a marketplace, and another as a promenade on a hill of good architecture, one of the best institutions of the kind in Andalusia; a granary, a townhouse, a foundling hospital, a college for young ladies, with a church attached; and various public and private schools for elementary education a parish church, with a Gothic façade, and a tower 150 ft. high, an auxiliary parish church, and, in the tower and environs, numerous hermitages. There is no drinkable water in the city, and the inhabitants require to supply themselves from a fountain on the opposite side of the river. The neighbourhood abounds with quarries of calcareous stones, rubble, and pebbles, as well as mines of antimony, copper, and cobalt, but these have been abandoned and there are several fine bridges over the tributaries of the Guadalquivir. Agriculture is the chief occupation, but there are seven fulling-mills, eleven flour and numerous oil mills. The principal articles of export is oil, in great quantities, and about the best in Andalusia. Pop. 10,753.

MONTPELLIER, a tn. U States, America cap. Vermont, about the centre of the state, 150 m. N. N. E. Albany; lat. 44° 18' N., lon. 71° 22' W. It has an elegant cathedral, a courthouse, and several churches, an academy, several mills and manufactures, and six printing-offices. It became the capital of the state in 1805, and was incorporated in 1815. Pop. (1850), 4112.

MONTPELLIER (Latin, Mons Maurillon) a tn. France, cap. dep. Hérault, finely situated on an undulating acclivity washed by the Lers, about 6 m. N. of the Mediteranean and 78 m. W N W Marseilles. It has been much celebrated for the brightness of its atmosphere, and the mild salubrity of its climate, and, in consequence, long continued to be recommended by British physicians as a proper residence for their pulmonary patients. A different opinion now prevails, and its variable climate, blowing sunbust, alternating with cold mistral blasts, and atmosphere, though clear, charged with impalpable dust, are considered positively hurtful to the lungs. One great cause of the mistake was the peculiar richness and beauty of the landscape of the vicinity, the whole district, for above 3 m. around, being studded with handsome country seats embosomed among trees, or surrounded by gardens, orchards, vineyards, and olive-plantations. The town itself, enclosed by an old wall in ruins, and defended by a chain of no great strength, rises in the form of an amphitheatre, along a slope, the summit of which, 168 ft. above sea level, is occupied by the Place de Peyron, forming part of the splendid promenade of the same name, which, though its trees are somewhat stunted, and its grass not very green, has been laid-out at vast expense, and with much good taste, commands magnificent views and is boasted of—not without cause—as one of the finest promenades in Europe. At one of its extremities stands the Chateau d'Es, a kind of fountain-temple, which receives its water from a noble aqueduct of 83 large arches and 2000 ft. in length, led across the valley from an opposite hill, and sends down copious supplies to every quarter of the town. Montpellier has its greatest length from E. to W. It is irregularly built, the houses are, in general, of good construction, but most of the streets are steep and narrow, and the public squares want both extent and regularity. The buildings deserving particular notice are not numerous. The principal are the cathedral, a large edifice, in a confined position, and not of much architectural merit, seven arch. Its Catholic churches, and a Protestant church, the old episcopal palace, now occupied by the school of medicine, the theatre, exchange, with a fine Corinthian colonnade, Palais-de-Justice, and triumphal arch, of the Duc de Orleans, forming the gateway of Peyrou. The most important public establishments are the Ecole de Médecine, a medical school of great celebrity (said to have been founded by Arab physicians driven out of Spain), with valuable anatomical collections, and splendid amphitheatre, the botanical garden, an extensive establishment, well kept up, and containing, in an arched recess shaded by cypresses, the remains of M. Temple, the Marquis, whose early death and funeral are so imaginatively described in Young's Night Thoughts, the public library the Musée Fabre, a picture-gallery, remarkably rich in works of the best masters, several large and well-managed hospitals, particularly the general hospital and Hotel Dieu St. Eloi, central house of correction, etc. Montpellier is the see of a bishop, and the seat both of a high court, with jurisdiction over departments Hérault, Aveyron, Aude, and Pyrénées-Orientales, and of a court of first resort and commerce. It also possesses a commercial chamber and exchange, a university, academy, college, diocesan seminary, and secondary ecclesiastical school facilities of medicine and science, special school of pharmacy, agricultural and antiquarian societies, &c. It has manufactures of woollen cloth, woollen covers, muslin, asphalts, verdigris, mineral acids, and other chemical products, corks, ligatures, perfumes, several cotton-mills, tanneries, sugar-refineries, and numerous distilleries of brandy and spirits. The harbour of Juvenal formed by the sea, and not a mile distant from the town, gives great facilities for trade: the principal articles of which are wines, brandies, spirits, olive-oil, fruits, leather, wool, copper, verdigris, &c. Pop. (1867) 37 611

MONTPELLIER (Consol dist) an ancient dist. France, formerly dependent on the province of Lower Languedoc, but, previously, long governed by independent counts. It contained 230 parishes and four abbeys. It now forms part of dep. Hérault.

MONTPEÑIER, a vil France, dep. Fay de Dôme, 9 m. N.E. Nîmes. It had a celebrated castle, which was demolished in 1633, and gave the title of duke to the youngest son of Louis Philippe. Pop. 640

MONTPEZAT several places, France: parishes:—1 A tn dep. Puy-de-Dôme, 16 m. E.N.E. Montbrun with a handsome church, some hosiery manufactures, and numerous fairs. Pop. 1099—2 [Latan, Mons Puzosus], A tn and cum dep. Ardèche, 20 m. N.W. Largentière, in the midst of a volcanic district, a meanly-built, miserable place, with some manufactures of serges, and other woollen stuffs, flannel jackets, and cutlery and silk-mills, and a considerable trade in corn, hay and timber. P. 2902 MONTPEZAT, or TRADON, a vil 1st France on a plain at the base of a mountain range, about 80 m. S.E. Saumur. lat. 46° N. lon. 106° 15' E. It stands in a cultivated country ornamented with Chinese villas. It is of large extent, covering an area of about 8 m. long by 1½ m. broad and has a large and industrious population almost all Chinese who work the neighbouring gold-mines.

MONTREAL, a city and river-port British America, cap. of Lower Canada or Canada East, on the S. site of the lon. 72° 25' W. It is the principal city and second port in Canada, and is favourably situated for intercourse with both provinces, as well as with New York and Boston, being at the head of the ordinary navigation from the Atlantic, and at the foot of the grand chain of canals which connects the great Lakes Ontario, Erie, Huron, and Superior, with the river and the ocean, the obstruction to the navigation of the river caused by the Lake St. Peter a broad shallow part of the St. Lawrence, about 45 m. N.W. from Montreal, having only a depth of 9 ft. to 12 ft., is now in process of being removed. Montreal

AR. PLACE D'ARMES, MONTREAL.—From the river after C. Knipfing, Montreal.

occupies a low tract of land, about 2 m. wide, between a considerable and very beautiful elevation, called Royal Mount, and the river and is divided into the upper and lower town; in the latter the streets are narrow and ill paved, and the houses generally in the French style gloomy-looking having dark iron shutters. The upper town is much more agreeable, here the streets are wide, and the houses well built, large, and commodious, generally of a grayish limestone, and roofed with tin or sheet-iron which glittering in the sun, and combined with the effect of the lofty spires and towers of the town gives to the latter a very imposing appearance when viewed from a distance. The town is well supplied with water and the streets are lighted with gas. The more remarkable public buildings most of which are in the principal street, Rue Notre Dame, are the townhall, the seminary of St. Sulpice, the Hotel Dieu a large hospital for the reception of the sick poor, the convent of Notre Dame, designed for female instruction, the general hospital two convents English and Scotch churches, courthouse, new jail Government-house, Nelson's monument, the Quebec barracks, the new R. Catholic cathedral in the perpendicular style, and esteemed one of the finest buildings in N. America, and the market-house, a magnificent pile, fronting the wharf. The educational means of the city comprises a French college, a university, founded in 1821 with five professors, and open to persons of all religious denominations, a R. Catholic theological school, and several classical and scientific academies. There are also a library and reading-room, a natural history society, a mechanics institute, savings bank, and other useful associations, and the largest banking houses in British N. America have their head offices here, several of which are situated in the Place d'Armes. The harbour which is formed toward the St. Lawrence is secure, and the wharfs, more than 1 m. in extent, are large massive structures of wood, exceedingly convenient for loading or unloading vessels and, by the employment of steam-tugs, the difficulties presented in the navigation of the St. Lawrence by the rapids, are entirely overcome. In 1862 there entered the port of Montreal 525 ships, ton. 259,901 of which 314 were from Great Britain, 105 were British colonial, and 5 from the U. States. There cleared the same year 521 tons. 259 900, of which 428

- | | | |
|-------------------------|----------------------|----------------------|
| 1. Cathedral. | 2. General Hospital. | 3. Place d'Armes. |
| 4. St. Sulpice College. | 5. Hotel Dieu. | 6. English Seminary. |
| 7. St. Nicholas. | 8. St. Vincent. | 9. St. Joseph. |

16 of Montreal in the St. Lawrence river, here above 5 m. wide, and on the site of the Indian village of Hochelaga, 140 m. S.W. Quebec, 600 m. from the sea; lat. 45° 30' N.,

vessels of 948,776 tons were bound for ports in the United Kingdom. But the amount of shipping affords an imperfect view of the trade of this increasing city, from the circumstance of Quebec engrossing the greater part of the timber trade, and, consequently, having a much greater amount of shipping and, also, from the obstruction of Lake St. Peter, already adverted to, causing a large quantity of goods to be sent to Montreal in lighters. Besides the shipping trade some business in furs is carried on by the Hudson's Bay Company, who have various stations at no great distance from Montreal and there are cast-iron foundries, distilleries, breweries, soap and candle works and manufacturers of hardware, including excellent cutlery, floor-cloth, and carriages, especially beautiful sledges or sleighs, as they are more commonly called. Extensive confiscations are of frequent occurrence—the most recent is that of July 8 and 9, 1855, when 1108 houses, of an estimated value of $240,815, were destroyed. Montreal is connected by railway with New York and Boston, and in autumn 1855 the line to Portland will be opened. A bill has been passed for the formation of a line from Quebec to Montreal and thence to Kingston, Toronto, and Hamilton, where the Great Western railway begins, proceeding through London to Detroit. The climate in summer is hot reaching often 90° in the shade; and the winters are severe, the temperature ranging for weeks from zero to 10° below it. The French language is much spoken. The population consists of French Canadians, English, Scotch, Irish, and Americans, and is estimated at 50,000.—The island of Montreal, on which the town is built, is situated at the confluence of the Ottawa with the St. Lawrence, it is 82 m long and about 10 m broad at the widest part, generally level, with exception of the mountain which rises N W of the town, and is watered by numerous small streams. The soil is for the most part fertile, and well cultivated and the climate peculiarly favourable to the growth of apples and pears.

MONTREAL, several places, France, particularly.—1. A town, dep. Aude, 11 m W Carcassonne with an ancient church, contains one of the finest castles in France. Pop. 2173.—2. A town and com. dep. Gers, 9 m W Omond, on the Aunay with several mills, tile-works, lincolns, and distilleries. Pop. 2727.

MONTREUIL (Latin, Monte Reuchi), a town, France, dep. Haute-Garonne, at the confluence of the Garonne and Neste. It is clean and well built, and has, in particular a handsome quarter on the Garonne, divided into two parts, which communicate by an elegant marble bridge of six arches. The knitting of stockings, and other worsted articles is carried on and there is a considerable trade in soap, cattle, mules, skins, and timber. Pop. 2848.

MONTREUIL, several places, France, particularly.—1. (near-Mor) (Latin Montreuilum Ambianorum) A town, dep. Pas-de-Calais, near 2 bank Canche, 20 m S S E Boulogne, a fortress of the second class. It has a court of first resort, an agricultural society, and communal college a tall, slim boyan church, with towers, and a fine doorway, manufactures of black soap, a salt refinery, paper-mill, breweries, and tanneries and a trade in wine, brandy, cognac, and petite eau de vie, which are largely exported to England. It had a strong fortress as early as the fifth century. In a large circular tower still standing, in the middle, Bertha queen of Philip I, endured a long and harsh captivity, which only terminated with her life. Pop. 2885.—2. (near-Ros) or Montreuil-le-Fort, (Latin, Montreuil), A town and com., dep. Seine, near Vincennes, about 7 m. from Paris. It is a handsome, cheerful town, interspersed and surrounded by nursery and other gardens, in which great quantities of vegetables and fruit are raised for the Paris market. It has a large and handsome church, apparently of the 12th century, and manufactures of porcelain, and tile-works, and plaster-works. Pop. 3008.

MONTREUX, a vil and par. Switzerland, can. Vaud, 40 m. E N E Geneva, N bank Lake of Geneva, and bearing the reputation of being its most sheltered spot, is much recommended to invalids who cannot cross the Alps. The proportion of deaths to the population is said to be the smallest in the world. About 2 m. from Montreux, is the celebrated castle of Chillon. Pop. 2009.

MONTREUIL (Latin, Monte Treuere) a town, France, dep. Loire-et-Cher, 17 m. S S W Blois, on the Cher, and surrounded by old walls, flanked with towers, still in good preservation. It has the picturesque ruins of an ancient castle, part of which fell in 1755 and crumbled a church; some trade in wine and wool, and manufactures of serge and leather. Pop. 1200.

MONTROSE a royal and par bor and seaport, and par Scotland, co. Forfar. The town stands on a sandy peninsula, and is a large expanse of water, called the Bay, lat. 56° 42' 30" N, lon. 3° 33' 0" W, 7 m. N M. Edinburgh, on the railway from Dundee to Aberdeen. The appearance of the town, altogether, is exceedingly pleasing, the streets, which are well paved, and lighted with gas, being, in general, spacious, open, airy and cleanly and the houses substantial and comfortable-looking, and, in some localities, elegant. The public buildings are the townhall two stories high, with a spacious arcade below, and containing a courtroom, newroom, public library, guildhall, and other public rooms. The lunatic asylum, said to be the first institution of the kind in the kingdom; the infirmary, house of refuge, the museum, containing a valuable collection in every department of natural history, together with a variety of coins and relics of antiquity the academy on the E side of the town, and a magnificent chamber, which crosses the S Esk. It has a parochial and two Free churches, two U Presbyterian, an Independent, an English Episcopalian, a Scotch Episcopalian, two Baptist, a Methodist, and a Glorious meeting-house. Montrose has long been celebrated for its educational institutions, the principal of which is the academy where all the more useful and some of the more elegant branches of learning are efficiently taught. There are also two Free Church schools, one for boys and one for girls, about 80 others, public and private, besides several free schools, and two infant schools. There are two principal libraries in the town—one containing 10,000 volumes, the other 3000 volumes also a library belonging to the town grammar-school several well-selected congregational libraries and a neat reading-room belonging to the Bazaar Society. The principal business in Montrose is flax-spinning and weaving. At present (1851), there are five communities, consuming together, 6750 tons of flax, and employing 2150 persons. There are also three large flax spinning-mills and two bleaching-works, connected with the town, on the N Esk, which give employment to 500 work-people. The number of persons employed in weaving and manufacturing linen is estimated at 1400 the power looms at 130, and the hand looms at 400, together producing 1450 pieces of cloth weekly. Scotch of a superior quality is manufactured to a considerable extent there being three establishments in the town for making that article; also two iron foundries, a corn and flour mill, and a little ship-building is carried on. The harbour of Montrose is one of the best on the E coast of Scotland. It is formed by the entrance of the S Esk into the N Sea, near the S extremity of the Bay wharf, on a rocky promontory on the S. side of the river, a lofty white beacon is erected. The entrance, though somewhat narrow, is at all times easy, except during E. storms, and is quite accessible to vessels requiring large draughts of water there being 18 ft. on the bar at low water of spring-tides. Two light-houses, one 42 ft. high, the other 55 ft. high, were erected, in 1818, on the N E side of the river about 400 yards apart. The lights are visible in clear weather from the distance of 8 m. The quays and wet docks are about 1½ m. from the entrance of the river, the latter is capable of accommodating 6000 tons of shipping. In 1851, there entered 47,480 tons of shipping 5463 tons of which were engaged in the foreign trade and there cleared 58,048 tons, of which 13,509 belonged to the foreign trade. The chief imports are flax and hemp, coal, and herring, and the exports—manufactured goods, grain, and cattle. James Graham, Marquis of Montrose, was born in the town in the year 1812. Andrew Melville, and his nephew, James Melville, were born within a short distance of it. George Wishart studied and taught here and Sir Alexander Burnes, the traveller was born in the vicinity and studied here. Montrose unites with Arbroath, Brechin, Forfar and Bervie, in returning a member to Parliament. The parish extends, N to S, 5 m. and E. to W 2½ m.; contains some fine scenery, and is highly cultivated. Pop. of bor, 14,353, of par, 15,353. (Local Correspondent.)

MONTROUGE (Latin, Monte Reuchi), a town, France, dep. Seine, about 4 m. S W Paris, divided into Grand Montrouge and Petit Montrouge, the latter of which stretches almost to the Paris Barrière d'Enfer as the old entrance to the catacombs. It is a great holiday resort of the Parisians. P 1838

MONTBECCHI, a range of mountains, Spain, Catalonia, prov Lerida, stretching E. to W about 36 m., and intersected by the river Noguera Pallaresa.

MONTBERRAT, or MONMONTERRAT, one of the British West India Islands, Leeward group, nearly at equal distances (30 m.) from the islands of Nevis, Antigua, and Guadeloupe, lat. (N pole) 16° 50' N lon. 63° 15' W (a). It is of an oval form, 10 m. to 12 m. long, $7\frac{1}{2}$ m. broad, and 34 m in circumference. Area, 30,000 sq. m., of which about two thirds are mountains and barres, the remainder is well cultivated about 5000 ac. are appropriated to sugar, 3000 ac. to cotton, 3000 ac. to provisions, and 2000 ac. to pasturage. The E side of the island has an uncultivated appearance, with high mountains, covered with cedar and other useful and valuable trees but on the W the land slopes down towards the sea, and is clothed with beautiful plantations. The climate is on the whole healthful. The quantities of sugar rum, and molasses, which form the chief products of the island, exported in 1843 and 1844, were—

| | 1843. | Quantities. | 1844. |
|-----------|---------------|-------------|-------|
| MOLASSES. | Pounds 100 | 520 | 34 |
| RUM | — | 48 | 14 |
| | Gals. — | — | 340 |
| SLAOS | Hbls 432 | 616 | — |
| | 33° | 650 | — |
| | Barrels 2,012 | — | — |

(cotton, wool, arrow root, and tamarind are also among its exports)

The government of the island is vested in the Governor-in-chief of the Leeward Islands, who is represented by a president, assisted by a council and house of assembly. Plymouth the capital, is on the S.W. side of the island and is a small but neat and well built town, the houses constructed of a fine gray stone. On February 8, 1843, Montserrat sustained considerable damage from an earthquake. Pop. (1844), 7365, of which not more than 150 are white.

MONTU BENCARIA a tn Italy Piedmont, div Alessandria, prov and 10 m. E.N.E. Voghera on the Versa with two churches, and a trade in wine and silk. Pop 3450 MONTU DU GARS a vil and com Italy, Piedmont, div Alessandria, prov and 16 m. E.N.E. Voghera, on the Versa, near its confluence with the Po, with a church a large and splendid palace, and a trade in excellent wine. P 1963.

MONTUINI, a tn Spain, Isl Majorca, on a height in the centre of a plain completely encircled by other hills, 17 m. E. Palma. It contains a parish church, courthouse prison, and two primary schools, and has several flour-mills, a distillery, and a trade in corn figs, and fat swine. From the numerous remains of houses and old sepulchres on the adjoining hills, Montuini appears to have once been of much greater extent and importance than at present. Pop. 1867

MONTZEN a vil and com Belgium, prov and 21 m. N.E. Laige, on the Gurelle, with a limestone quarry, lunelike, a fulling, a worsted, and a flour mill. Pop. 1070

MONVILLE, a tn France dep. Seine-Inférieure, at the confluence of the Orne and Cailli 10 m. N Rouen. It has manufactures of muslin, cotton-mills and some trade in cattle. Pop. 2606.

MONXTON, par Eng. Hants, 1141 ac. Pop. 260.

MONY, a tn France, dep. One, about 9 m. S.W. Clermont, with manufactures of broad-cloth, serge, molleton, and muslin and worsted and fulling mills. Pop. 2283

MONYMUSE, a vil and par Scotland, co. and 18 m. W by N Aberdeen. It has a square, a very ancient Established church, and a small Episcopal chapel. Area of par, 12,600 ac. Pop. 585

MONZA [anc. Mediolan or Mogontia] a tn, Italy Lombardy gov and 9 m. N h E. Milan, on the railway to Como, and on the Lambro, which divides it into two parts, and is here crossed by three bridges. Its site is somewhat elevated, and its air remarkably pure and healthy. In early times it was surrounded by walls, flanked with bastions, and defended by a castle, but these have almost entirely disappeared, and great improvements have been made by levelling and planting the ramparts. The town is of great antiquity, and has a quiet, venerable air, the houses are, for the most part, substantially and often elegantly built and the streets are regular, and paved with flints. The most remarkable edifices are the cathedral of St John Baptist, originally founded in the beginning of the 7th century by the celebrated Lombard queen, Theodelinda, subsequently repaired and enlarged, and now forming a beautiful structure, surmounted by a lofty spire, adorned by numerous sculptures and paintings, and so rich in endowments and interesting gifts bestowed by the queen and others, as to be a kind of medieval museum. The church of San Gerardo, recently finished in the form of a rotunda, and several other handsome churches the Broletto or townhall, an Italian Gothic structure attributed to Frederick Barbarossa, and annexed to it a fine campanile, with fortified battlements; the palace, in which the viceroys of Milan usually resided in summer situated immediately outside the town, the Barnabite college, diocesan seminary, gymnasium handsome theatre, penitentiary house of industry, monf-de-pied, and hospital. In the town and immediate neighbourhood above 5000 looms are employed in weaving cotton goods of various descriptions, but especially flannels. There are, also, manufactures of hats, leather, bricks, tiles, and sausages, for which the town has long been famous. Under the Romans, Monza made some progress, but did not attain its highest prosperity till the time of the Lombards, who fortified and embellished it, and made it the capital of their kingdom. After their fall it was for a time independent, but afterwards became a dependency of Milan. Pop 18,194.

THE CATHEDRAL OF MONZA.—From Enns, Lombardic Photograph

MONZAMBANO a vil and com Italy Venezia, prov and N.W. Mantua, r bank Minolo with a church and two chapels. The Austrians were here defeated by the French in 1800. Pop. 2739

MONZE CAPE, or RAS MOANZEKE, a sharply-projecting headland, forming the W extremity of the coast of Swine, and the E. frontier of Beloponistan lat. 24 51' N; lon. 50° 37' E. (a) It is of moderate height, but is rendered dangerous by the shoals, which extend 3 m. from the shore. On the N.W. of it is the island of Chitney or Churna, with a channel 4 m. wide and 6 to 7 fathoms deep.

MONZIE a vil and par Scotland, co. and 15 m. W Perth; the former, a collection of thatched stone cottages. It has an Established church, and about 1 m. distant is a Free church. Area of par, 60,000 ac. Pop. 1190

MONZINGEN, a vil Rhensish Prussia, gov and 29 m. S Coblenz, on the Nahe, with a Protestant church, and two mills. Pop 1065

MONKON-PAU, a garrison in Spain, Aragon, prov. Huesca, 62 m. E. Saragossa, on a hill, crowned by a castle, and washed by the Cinca and Bosa. Of its ancient fortifications, there are only some slight remains. It has a town house, a hospital, four elementary schools, two churches, a military hospital, and a nursery. P (agricultural) 2807.

MOODHILL, a tn. Hindoostan, presid. Bengal, prov. and 46 m. S.E.W. Belgaon.

MOODKEE, a vil. Punjab, 65 m. S.E. Lahore, where, in November 1848, the first action, or rather series of actions, took place between the Sikhs and the British forces, which terminated in the former being compelled to retreat the Punjab.

MOOGABAD, a tn. Hindoostan, prov. and 40 m. E.N.E. Ajmeer; with a mosque, several temples, the largest of which belongs to the Jains, and some good gardens. The Jains, who are numerous, engross a large proportion of the trade, consisting of banking and general traffic.

MOOLA, or GURDAYA PAB, Beloochistan, leading, by a circuitous route, from Kalat to Gush Gundava. It commences near the source of the Mula; lat. 28° 10' N.; lon. 68° 12' E. at the height of 5250 ft. proceeds S.E. for 50 m. near the course of the river, through a succession of deep and rocky gorges, then turns suddenly N.E. and keeps N. for 50 m. to its termination, near Kotree, in Cutch Gundava. In 1889, the Anglo-Indian detachment, under General Willshire, marched through this pass to Soinda, after storming Kalat. The road is better, and the ascent easier, than in the Bolan Pass; water and fuel are abundant, and some supplies may be obtained.

MOOLKIER, a tn. Hindoostan, prov. Oudela, on the Moosten, which flows a cataract, 82 m. E.S.E. Surat. It is in a very dilapidated and almost desolate state but has ruins of many handsome edifices. The fort, about 1 m. S., crowns a steep and lofty rock.

MOOLOOPETTA, a tn. Hindoostan, on the Carnatic coast, 90 m. N.E. Cape Comorin famous for its salubrity and hence much resorted to by invalids in March and April.

MOOLTAN, MOULTAH, or MULTAH, an ancient city Punjab, 184 m. S.W. Lahore. 1 bank Chenab, from which it is distant about 8 m. lat. 30° 8' N. lon. 71° 28' E. It is upwards of 3 m. in circumference, and is surrounded by a dilapidated wall, and overlooked on the N. by a fortress of some strength. The houses are built of burned brick, have flat roofs, and sometimes rise to a height of 6 stories their lofty mass giving a gloomy appearance to the narrow streets. The bazars are extensive, but are also inconveniently narrow. They are, however, abundantly supplied with articles of traffic, as are also the shops, of which there are between 4000 and 5000. The principal manufactures are silks, cottons, shawls, longoes, brocades, and tawees, the last four held up particular estimation. Mooltan has besides, an extensive foreign trade with the countries W. of the Indus, and a large banking business is carried on by its merchants, who are considered extremely wealthy. The fortress already alluded to, built in 1640, on the site of the old city stands on a mound of earth, and is an irregular figure of six sides, the longest of which, towards the N.W., extends for about 400 yds. It is surrounded by a wall, substantially built of burned brick, about 40 ft. high outside, but not more than four or five inside, in consequence of the accumulation of the materials of other buildings, and surmounted by 80 towers. The vicinity is covered with a vast quantity of the ruins of tombs, mosques, and shrines. Many of these have been substantial edifices, and all tend to show the former extent and antiquity of the city. The gardens around are numerous, and well stocked with fruit-trees, as mangoes, oranges, citrons, limes, &c. Its date-groves also yield much fruit, and vegetables are grown in great abundance. Mooltan is one of the most ancient cities in India. It was taken by the Mahomedans at the close of the 8th century, again at the commencement of the 11th, and a third time by Timurlane at the close of the 14th. Latterly it fell into the hands of the Sikhs, from whom it was taken by the British in 1849. *P*op. estimated at 50,000.

MOON, or MUN, a small vil. Russia, in the Baltic, in the N. entrance of the Gulf of Riga, and N.E. lat. Oesel, from which it is separated by a narrow channel, greatest length, about 9 m.; breadth, about 6 m. It contains some arable and pasture land, but is almost destitute of trees. A great portion of the inhabitants live by fishing and not a few trout for maintenance to the wrecks cast upon their shores.

MOONDER, or MOORANA, a tn. Bundel, 30 m. N.N.W. Seithan, on the road to Luckhanna, of considerable extent, and in a level, fertile, and well-cultivated district.

MOORE, par. and tn. Ire. Kilmas 7281 ac. P 1078.

MOONZIE, par. and tn. Ire. Kilmas 7281 ac. P 1078.

MOORE, a market tn. Hungary, Thither Danube, ca. and 17 m. N.W. Stuhlweissenburg is a valley on a small stream of the same name. Many of the houses are handsome, and it contains two castles, two churches, a Capuchin monastery, a county hall and barracks, with a riding-school. It has a considerable trade in corn, horses, and cattle. P 7000.

MOORBURG, a vil. Germany belonging to, and 5 m. S. Hamburg. 1 bank Elbe with a church and two mills. P 1817.

MOORBY par. Eng. Lancashire 950 ac. P 159.

MOORCHURCH, par. Ire. Meath, 5291 ac. P 893.

MOORDECHT, a vil. Holland, prov. S. Holland, 11 m. N.E. Rotterdam on the IJssel. It has three churches and a school, rope spinning, boat building and other employments therewith connected and a considerable trade in hemp. P 3101.

MOORE par. Ire. Roscommon 26,728 ac. P 8770.

MOORE POINT W. Australia, forming the S. extremity of Port Grey lat. 36° 4' S. lon. 134° 37' 40" E.

MOORFAGAGAH par. Ire. Mayo, 1769 ac. P 294.

MOORGHIAH a river Afghanistan, rises near Ghazwan; lat. 35° 27' N. lon. 65° 28' E. flows nearly due W. for about 100 m., when it takes a N. and N.W. direction, and is subsequently lost in the sandy deserts of Khiva, about lat. 38° N. after a course of 370 m.

MOORLEY a tn. British India, prov. Bengal cap. of dist. Jessore, 52 m. N.E. Calcutta lat. 23° 1' N. lon. 89° 15' E.

MOORLINC par. Eng. Somerset 9553 ac. P 2489.

MOORSCHEL, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. W. Flanders, 26 m. S. Bruges, r. bank Houte. Weaving, brewing, and the manufacture of thread, ropes, and oil, are carried on. P 4328.

MOORSEL, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, 18 m. E.S.E. Ghent with a church, two chapels, a castle, a townhall two distilleries three breweries, an oil and two flour mills. P 2807.

MOORSHEDABAD a city Hindoostan, presid. Bengal, and cap. dist. of same name, r. bank Ganges, one of the most sacred edifices of the Ganges lat. 24° 11' N. lon. 88° 15' E. The town extends 8 m. along both sides of the river. The houses, though many of them are of brick, have a mean and dilapidated appearance. There are several public buildings but with exception of the palace of the Nawab, rather a handsome structure, they are all in a ruinous condition.

GRANT AT MOORSHEDABAD — From an Original Drawing by Capt. R. Smith, 46th Regiment.

dition. There is here a giant, the stage of which are cut in the hard clay and propped with wood and though thus altogether wanting in the usual elegance of these structures, has an interesting appearance, from the picturesque forms of the buildings near it, and from the gambles shade of a venerable banyan-tree, by which it is overhung. Notwithstanding the generally mean aspect of the city, being little more than a vast assemblage of mud and straw huts, without the smallest attempt at order in arrangement, the height of the banks of the river on which it stands, the numerous domes and minarets, with terraced houses, rising from amid the surrounding trees, combine to present some delightful views of Indian scenery. Being a place of great traffic, the river displays a very animated scene, being covered with boats, while the shores on each side are lined with merchant vessels. There are considerable manufactures here of silk and other fabrics. Moorehead is the seat of one of the six courts of appeal under the Bengal presidency and of a British college founded in 1826. Pop. estimated at 165,000.—The district of Moorehead has an area of 1866 sq. m. Principal products, silk, rice, and indigo. Pop. 1,045,000.—The district of Moorehead includes the districts Moorehead, Begowah, Bangura, Rajshahi, Patna, and Beerboom, area, 17,508 sq. m. Pop. 4,816,876.

MOORELLE, a vil. and com. Belgium prov. W. Flanders, 23 m. S. by D. Brugue with six breweries, a tobacco and two chocolate factories and several corn and oil mills. P. 6469 MOORWINTSTON, par. England Cornwall 79.6 ac. Pop. 1084.

MOOSBURG a to. Bavaria, circle Upper Bavaria, r. bank Isar, 79 m. N. E. Munich, ancient but well built with three churches, a town square, a foundling and two other hospitals, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1759.

MOOSE.—1 A river Upper Canada, issuing from Lake Minicou, to the N. E. of Lake Superior and, after an E. course of 800 m., falling with the Abitibi into James Bay.—2 A small lake Bahamas, 20 m. S. E. the Great Bahamas.—3 (A small) A lake, U. States, Maine, 40 m. long, and 10 m. to 15 m. broad, the source of the E. branch of the Kennebec River.

MOOSA, a to. Asiatic Turkey. See MOSE.
MOOTA MOOTA a river Hindoostan, pres. Bengal prov. Arracanah, formed by the junction of the Moota and the Moota, at the town of Pootah. It afterwards joins the Beemah, one of the main effluents of the Kutta, and in this way furnishes a route by which a light canoe might in the rainy season, pass from within 75 m. of the W. coast of India to the Bay of Bengal.

MOQUEGUA or MOQUEGUA a prov. Peru cap. same name, W. of the Cordillera lat. 16° 50' to 17° 35' S. fertile towards the sea. It has many large vineyards, which produce great quantities of wine and brandy and abounds in fruits, among which are olive of excellent quality.—The town is situated in a pleasant and fertile valley 1 bank. lat. 17° 25' S., and has a good church, and several convents. P. 10,000.

MORA.—1 Par. Ireland, Tipperary, 3623 ac. P. 808.—2 A to. and par. Portugal, 35 m. W. Estremoz, on the Odvor or Dvor. Pop. 907.—3 A river Moravia which rises in circle Otava, flows first S. E., then N. E. and, after a course of about 50 m., joins r. bank Odra, 3 m. above Troppan.

MORA.—1, A vil. Spain, Aragon, prov. and 22 m. S. E. Teruel, with narrow and irregular streets a townhouse, an hospital, a Latin and a primary school, a Gothic collegiate church, and three hermitages. Near it are thermal baths. Pop. (segmented) 1925.—2 A to. Spain, New Castile, prov. Toledo, 18 m. S. E. Madrid, built of earth, the streets, though broad are for the most part unpaved. It has three squares, used as market-places a townhouse, prison, four elementary schools, a church, and an oratory. Near it are two hermitages, and a castle, which was formerly a state prison. Agriculture, export manufactures, 11 oil and 7 flour mills, and 16 manufactures of soap, which is its main resource at Madrid, are the chief sources of employment. The royalties in the civil war, in 1821, set fire to the parish church, in which 3000 persons of all ages and both sexes perished. P. 5094.

MORA a to. Central Africa, Soudan, cap. of Mandara, lat. 10° 20' N. lon. 14° 45' E. It stands in a hollow, enclosed by lofty hills, and is a place of considerable importance, though only founded in 1814. The palace of the chief, the principal residence, is situated at the extremity of a large square.

MORA DE RARO, a to. Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 82 m. W. Tarragona, r. bank Ebro. It has a townhouse and prison, a castle, built by the Carlists on the foundations of an ancient mill. Pop. 8421.

MORAD, or MORAD, a river, Asiatic Turkey, the E. head-stream of the Euphrates. It has its source on the N. declivity of the Argat-Dagh mountains, par. Erzerum lat. 38° 10' N., lon. 45° 40' E. from which, after making a N. bend, it flows W. and N. W. to its junction with the Frat, or W. arm of the Euphrates, which occurs near Kaban, lat. 38° N. lon. 50° 50' E. total course, 280 m. to 270.

MORADABAD a to. Hindoostan, cap. dist. of the name, prov. and 100 m. N. E. Delhi, lat. 28° 51' N. lon. 78° 48' E. r. bank Yamuna. It is a populous and flourishing town, though mostly built of mud, has, however, a spacious bazaar or market-place.—The district has between lat. 28 and 30° of N. lat. Its principal produce is sugar, cotton, and wheat.

MORAGY or MORAZZ, a vil. Hungary Thither Denab, co. Tolna, 4 m. from Bataszek, with a church, and a trade in corn, wine, and cattle. Pop. 1469.

MORAL-de-CALABRATA, a to. Spain, New Castile, prov. and 17 m. S. E. Ciudad Real, in the skirts of the sierra of San Cristobal, with generally low houses, a church, townhouse, granary, prison, small hospital, three elementary schools; numerous flour-mills, and oil-presses and mills, and manufactures of cloths and bales. Pop. 4120.

MORALLA, numerous places, Spain, particularly—1 A to. Extremadura, prov. and 48 m. N. W. Caesara, poorly built once fortified, and still covered by two gates. It has a bull arena, a church, a courthouse, a prison, and primary school. manufactures of soap, and several flour and oil mills. P. 1814.—2 (de Monsejo), A to. New Castile, prov. and 13 m. S. W. Madrid, with a church, courthouse, prison, primary school, and a trade in charcoal and wheat. P. 544.—3 (del Vaso), A vil. and com. Leon, prov. and about 14 m. from Zamora, with a church, townhouse, prison, primary school, several distilleries, and a trade in wine and brandy. P. 929.

MORALEA, several places, Spain—1, (de Toro), A to. Leon, prov. and 28 m. E. Zamora, with a church, primary school, hospital, and a trade in corn, wine, and tassel. P. 907.—2 (de Zamora or del Vaso), A vil. old com. Leon, prov. and 4 m. S. Zamora, with a church, courthouse, prison, primary school, and a trade in corn and wine. P. 1080.

MORANNE, a to. France dep. Maine-et-Loire, l. bank Sarthe, about 20 m. N. N. E. Angers with a paper-mill. Pop. 1238.

MORANO a to. Naples, prov. Calabria-Citra, dist. and 5 m. W. N. W. Castrovinci, with manufactures of silk and woolens. Pop. 8532.

MORANO, a vil. and com. Sardegnia Stato, div. Alghero, prov. and 5 m. N. W. Casale, l. bank Po; with three churches, and a trade in corn, rice, and dairy produce. P. 9204.

MORANT.—1, A town S. E. coast, lat. Jamaica, 20 m. S. E. Kingston, on the bay and at the mouth of river of same name. It has a considerable and increasing trade. Pop. about 7000.—The river has a S. course of 14 m. The bay is exposed to S. and W. winds, but sheltered from all others.—2, A port or harbour, lat. Jamaica, about 5 m. E. from the bay. It is a good one, but the rocks extend to the distance of 1 m. from the shore, on each side of the entrance, and the breadth of the channel between is only a cable's length, and a half, lat. 17° 55' N.; lon. 78° 21' W. (a).—3, A point, Jamaica, the extreme E. point of the island; lat. 17° 55' 45' N.; lon. 78° 11' W. (a). In 1843 a east-iron light-house, made in London was erected on this point. The light is revolving.

MORAY, a lake, Scotland, on Inverness 16 m. N. W. Fort William, about 10 m. long and 1 m. to 3 m. broad.

MORARD-de-CLARENCE, a cape, S. Australia, lat. 36° 55' S. lon. 150° 52' E.

MORAT (German, Marten), a to. Switzerland, can. and 8 m. N. W. Fribourg, E. shore lake of same name. It stands on a steep height, is partly covered by old walls, and partly overlooked by an old castle. In 1476, an immense Burgundian host, led by Charles the Bold, was defeated under its walls by comparatively a handful of Swiss, and left 15,000 dead on the field, in addition to the thousands who perished in the lake. Pop. 1650.—The lake (German, Martensee), about 5 m. long and 8 m. broad, and 60 fathoms deep, is separated by a narrow spit from the Lake of Neubothal, into which it discharges itself by the Rroya. Steamers ply between Morat and Neubothal.

MORATA, a vil Spain, New Castile, prov and 19 m S E Madrid, on the Tago. with unpaved but level streets, a townhouse, prison, small hospital, house of refuge, granary, two elementary schools, a police, belonging to the count of Almansa, a church, fulling-mill, brandy distillery, two flour-mills, and an oil-mill. Pop. (agricultural), 2485.

MORATA-DE-JASON, a vil Spain, Aragon, prov and 31 m S.W. Saragosa, r bank Jalon, with a church, a palace, belonging to Count Morata, a townhouse, prison, primary school, an oil and two flour mills and a trade in oil, wine, hemp, flax, and fruit. Pop. 1425.

MORATALLA, a vil Spain, prov and 47 m. N.W. Murcia. It has generally narrow, crooked and irregular but paved streets, two squares, townhouse, and prison, several elementary schools, an hospital, a large and substantial church, and a cemetery, with a hermitage, manufactures of coarse cloths and soap, a fulling mill, three brandy distilleries, and numerous flour and oil mills. Pop. 8080.

MORAU (Klam) a vil Austria, Moravia, circle Troppau, had Treudenthal with manufactures of iron wire, a paper and two tin mills. There are several mines in the vicinity. Pop. 1217.

MORAVIA [German, Mähren French, Moravie], prov Austrian empire, including the margravate of Moravia, properly so called, and Austrian Silesia. lat. 48° 40' to 50° 32' N. lon. 15° 18' to 19° E. bounded, N by Prussia, N.E. Galicia, E and S.E. Hungary, S Hungary and Austria, and W Bohemia, greatest length, E.N.E. to W.S.W., 190 m. greatest breadth, 118 m., area, 7973 geo. sq. m., of which 1497 geo. sq. m. belong to Austrian Silesia, forming the N.E. part of the province, and 6476 geo. sq. m. to the margravate.

Silesia and Moravia Proper though now incorporated, have a very marked nature, the latter in the Sudetes, which stretch between them N.W. to S.E. and form the watershed between the basin of the Vistula and Oder on the N. and that of the Danube on the S. The boundary on the W. is formed by a low mountain range, which gradually ascends as it proceeds N. and finally unites with the Sudetes, the boundary on the E. is formed by the Carpathian chain and hence Moravia Proper consists of a large basin, surrounded by mountains on the N. and W. and open only on the S., towards a central point to which all its slopes converge, and all its drainage is carried.

In physical conformation, it thus bears a considerable resemblance to that of the neighbouring kingdom of Bohemia, with this difference, that the basin of Bohemia is on a much larger scale, and, with its converging slopes, follows an opposite direction. In this respect, Moravia has a considerable advantage, being completely sheltered in the directions from which frosts and storms are most to be feared, and enjoying the full benefit of a S. exposure. Its climate accordingly is milder and more genial than that of most European countries under the same latitude.

In the immediate neighborhood of the more elevated districts, the cold is occasionally severe, but the average height is not so great as seriously to affect the annual temperature. Few of the sum mits exceed 1000 ft. and only the two culminant points of Schönborg and Glasberg, both in the circle of Olmütz, approach 1500 ft. Moravia Proper belongs wholly to the basin of the Danube, being drained by the March, which traverses it circuitously N. to S. and by its tributaries the Thaya and Iglaue, and other minor streams. Both the Oder and Vistula take their rise in the Sudetes, on the borders of Silesia, and directly or by important tributaries, carry off its whole drainage.

In both divisions of the province lakes are numerous, but none of them are, individually, of great extent. The minerals are of considerable importance and include gold, silver, lead, copper, iron, coal, graphite, alum, opopona, porcelain clay, and marble. The precious metals, however, have ceased to be worked, and even iron and coal are very much neglected. The soil is generally fertile, and all the ordinary cereals, leguminous, and root crops, are raised in abundance. The mode of farming, however, is very defective; and several of the worst rations, which have long been imported from all quarters where the art of agriculture is properly understood, here prevail. Flax of excellent quality is extensively grown in several districts, and fruit is so abundant that many parts of the country have the appearance of one great orchard but the favourite culture is that of the vine, for which both the soil and exposure of the province seem admirably adapted. It occupies a large extent of surface, and probably would have occupied much more, and not Government began to fear that it was supplanting more necessary, if not more lucrative crops, and issued an edict limiting the extent to which it will allow it to be carried. The pear-tree, in general excellent, occupy a large extent of surface, and the rearing of cattle, sheep, and horses is extensively practised, and well understood. The sheep in particular, have been much improved by judicious crossing with the merino, and furnish a wool, to the excellence of which the woollen manufactures of the country owe no small portion of their prosperity. The horses, too, are of a strong, hardy breed and are much used, in the Austrian service, for heavy cavalry. Manufactures, however, have made great progress within the present century and in all the great branches of industry, in iron and ironmongery, leather, linen, cotton, and woollen tissues, particularly the last, Moravia is inferior to none, and takes precedence of almost all the provinces of the Austrian empire. Other manufactures deserving of notice, are silk, glass, paper, potash, and beet-root sugar. The trade, in most of these articles, is of considerable importance. The means of transport were formerly deficient, the March being the only navigable river; but the addition of railways by which a considerable part of the country has recently been opened up, has already done much, and promises to do still more for its prosperity. The far greater part of the inhabitants are of Slavonian extraction. The proportions have been estimated at two-thirds Slav, and only one-third German. The language chiefly spoken, and called Moravian, is merely a Slav dialect. German, however, is generally understood by all classes. The religion professed is R. Catholic. Elementary education is generally diffused, and numerous gymnasia furnish education of a very superior order. Professional studies are successfully prosecuted at the University of Olmütz. For administrative purposes, Moravia is divided into eight circles, of which six belong to Moravia Proper, namely, Brün, the capital, Olmütz, Hradish, Iglaue, Franzau, and Zösch and two to Austrian Silesia, namely, Troppau and Teschen. It has both a civil and a military governor and possesses some of the forms of a free constitution in its Assembly of States, whose powers, however are extremely limited. The total amount of taxation is fixed at Vienna, and all that the States do in regard to it is to fix the proportion of the amount to be paid by each. Pop. Moravia Proper (1842) 1,764,896, Austrian Silesia, 458,833; total (1846), 2,250,594.

MORAVICZA, two towns Austria—1, Croatia, co. and S.W. Carlsbad; with a Greek church. Pop. 2088.—2, Hungary, Thibier Thaus co. and 38 m. S. Temesvár; with a R. Catholic church. Pop. 1170.

MORAWA a river Austria. See MARCH.

MORAYSHIRE, a co. Scotland See DORNA.

MORAZONE, a vil, and com. Austrian Italy, gov.

Milan, prov. Como, within 12 m. of the city. Pop. 1230.

MORBEGNO a vil in Austrian Italy, gov. Milan, prov. and 19 m. W.S.W. Sondrio, on the Berio, near its confluence with I bank Adda. Its site is so unhealthy, that it is said to owe its name to the diseases engendered by the stagnant marshes in its vicinity. It is, however, well built, and has a church, an hospital, manufactures of silk, hats, and refined wax, several silk-mills, and a trade in cheese. P. 8150.

MORBELLO, or MURZELLO, a vil. and com. Sardinian States, div. Alessandra, prov. Aiguà 4 m. from Fossano, with a church, a castle, an old tower, a sulphate spring, and a trade in elasticated charcoal, and dairy produce. P. 1000.

MORREYA [Morish, Mor-er-ya] a river, Morocco, formed by the junction of several head-streams, that have their sources in Mount Atlas about lat. 32° 35' N.; lon. 8° 30' W. The junction of all the head-streams occurs at lat. 33° 30' N., lon. 6° 30' W., from which point the river flows N.W., and falls into the Atlantic about 36 m. N.E. of N. Cape Blanco total course, about 190 m.

MORBIHAN, a machine dep. France, lat. 47° 37' to 49° 15' N. lon. 12° 5' to 14° 45' W. head, by the dep. Loire-et-Morv., R. Finistère, R. the Bay of Biscay, S.E. dep.

regards edible productions, but contains some valuable timber
—(Lang's Cookland, Martin's British Colonies.)

MORETON HAMPTHEAD a market tn. and par England, on Devon. The town on the verge of Dartmoor forest, 10 m. W. R. W. Exeter, consists chiefly of houses in the cottage style, many of them thatched. It has a spacious ancient church with a lofty tower, several Dissenting chapels, a national school, a literary society and a farmers' club. Area of par. 7656 ac. Pop. (agricultural) 1859 —(Local Correspondent).

MORETON-LE-FRANC, a small market tn. and par England, co. Gloucester the former, 38 m. E. N. E. Gloucester has a church and school. Area of par. 900 ac. Pop. (agricultural), 1812

MORETTA a tn. in Italy Piedmont div. Coni, prov. and 8 m. N. Valenza, r. bank Po. It has two squares three churches, a palace, townhouse, old castle and a trade in corn, wine, cattle, and dairy produce. Pop. 5000

MORETTES, a tn. Brazil, prov. São Paulo on the Nhandiquara, near its mouth, in the Bay of Paranaguá, and to the S. of the mountains of Curitiba, principal trade in Paraguay tea and rum, shipped at the port of Paranaguá.

MOREUIL, a tn. France, dep. Somme, on the Avre, 12 m. S. E. Amiens. It has manufactures of woollen and cotton hosiery stocking-loom, paper-mills, and tanneries. P. 2319

MOREVIE, a tn. Hindustan, peninsula of Gujerat, sep. dist. Meeuloo-Kanata, on the Meeuloo, lat. 29° 59' N. lon. 70° 55' E. Both the town and district are held by a younger branch of the Cuttack, whose ancestors obtained it from the Emperor Akbar, as a reward for rendering the unfortunate Sultan Musafir of Gujerat.

MOREZ (Latin, Moricum) a tn. France, dep. Jura, 27 m. S. E. Loude-Barrière, on the Blaise, in a long and narrow gorge, which is scarcely wide enough to admit a street and the two rows of houses which line it. It has several mills, forges, manufactures of clock-work, dials, telescopes, Paris point wire, and numerous tanneries. Pop. 2804

MORFASO, a vil. and com. Parma, 1 bank Lariano 28 m. S. Piacenza has a handsome church, and some trade in cattle and timber. Pop. 2699

MORFELDER, or MORFELDER a vil. Hesse-Darmstadt, prov. Starkenburg, dist. and 8 m. W. W. Langen, with a church and a mill. Pop. 961 MORGANS, par. Irel. Limerick 1215 ac. 1 op. 316.

MORGARTEN, a mountain slope, Switzerland on the confines of cant. Solvys and Zug, 6 m. N. Solvys, near the N. shore of Lake Egeri, and memorable in Swiss annals as the scene of the first victory gained over their Austrian oppressors. A force of 30 000 regular troops, having allowed themselves to be lured cooped up so as to render their numbers unavailing, were equally defeated, in an hour and a half, by 1800 mountaineers. A chapel was erected at the time to commemorate the event, and service is annually performed in it on the anniversary of the victory.

MORGES (German Morsee) a tn. and par. Switzerland, cant. Vaud, on the lake, and 26 m. N. E. Geneva. It has spacious parallel streets, lined with well built houses, a handsome church, an old castle now used as an arsenal, a harbour on the lake, at once spacious and secure, and a considerable transit trade. Behind the town rises the old castle of Willkomm. Pop. (1850), 8941

MORGEK, a tn. kingd. of Italy, Piedmont div. and 15 m. W. N. W. Aosta, 1 bank Dora Baltea, here crossed by a wooden bridge; with a church, a Capuchin convent, two ancient castles, an elementary school, slate and limestone quarries, and a trade in wine and fruit, particularly nuts. Pop. 1210

MORGOBEJO, a tn. Spain, prov. and 41 m. N. E. Leon, 1 bank Ca. with a church, a primary school, and a trade in corn, fax, fruit and cattle. Pop. 1869

MORGONDA, a Maresca, a vil. Austria, Transylvania, 16 m. from Sombath, with two churches. P. 1079

MORHAM, par. Scot. Haddington; 1540 ac. P. 349

MORI, a market tn. Austria, Tyrol, about 2 m. from Novaredo, on the Adige, at the confluence of the Comerio with a church, a marble quarry, and a trade in oil, silk, tobacco, wine, and chestnuts. Pop. 4090.

MORIALME, a vil. and com. Belgium prov. and 17 m. S. W. Namur, with important iron-mines, which here supply two blast-furnaces. Pop. 1100

Von. II.

MORIANA (San Giovanni di) or MAURENNE (St. Jean des), a tn. Ardman States, div. Savoy, cap. prov. of same name, 1 bank Arc, near the confluence of the Arve, at the opening of a beautiful valley, 53 m. S. E. Chambéry. It is, in general poorly built, streets steep and narrow, and has a cathedral, an hospital, gymnasium, convent, and fine triumphal arch, and an extensive transit trade. Pop. 8084

MORIMONT, a tn. France, dep. Jura, 15 m. N. E. Besançon, on the Savoy River, 15 m. N. E. Besançon and 8 m. S. E. Tuzin and Yver, consists chiefly of a valley, traversed, E. to W., by the Arc a tributary of the Isère, and hommed in on the N. S., and E. by lofty ranges of the Alps. It rears great numbers of cattle, sheep, and goats, and yields marble, and beautiful rock-crystals. Pop. 53 344

MORIEZSFELD a vil. Hungary, Thutler Theas, co. Temesvar with a R. Catholic church. Pop. 1450

MORINGEN, a tn. Hannover, Hildesheim, prov. and 10 m. N. W. Göttingen entered by three gates. It has a court of justice, and several public offices, two churches, an hospital, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1585

MORKOWITZ, a market in Austria, Moravia, circle Kladisch, 12 m. from Wischau, with a church a castle, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1302

MORLAIX (Latin, Moricum) a tn. France, dep. Fini stores, at the confluence of the Jorlen and Kerfont, which uniting their streams as they fall into a small estuary, form a harbour extremely difficult of access, though secure when entered, 34 m. N. E. Brest. It is picturesque situated in a valley so narrow as only to admit the streets, the quays which line it, and two streets, one on each side, composed in part of quaint, antique houses with steep, wooded hills rising behind the one, and gardens, intermingled with rocks and wood behind the other. The principal square is of great extent, and adorned with some fine mansions, but the only public edifices, deserving of notice, are the large and elegant buildings occupying the site of the ancient Hotel de Ville, and containing the municipal offices and law courts, the town and com. halls, and the churches of St. Mathurin and St. Michel. The manufactures are linen all, cordage, and especially tobacco for which the Government has a splendid factory, in which from 800 to 400 persons are employed. The trade is in butter, corn, oil seeds, tallow, honey, wax, leather, oases, swine, sheep, horses, linen, thread, bleached and raw paper, flax, hemp, wine, and brandy. Pop. 8961

MORLAND par. Eng. Westmorland, 15,280 ac. P. 1943

MORLANWELZ a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Namur, 16 m. E. Mores with manufactures of woollen stuff, linen ties, black soap, oil and lime. Near it are rich coal pits. Pop. 1995

MORLEY, three pars. Eng. — 1 Derby, 8513 ac. Pop. 1090 — 2, St. Botolph Norfolk, 760 ac. Pop. 291 — 3, (St. Peter) Norfolk, 950 ac. Pop. 147

MORLEY a vil. England, co. York, W. Riding 4 m. S. W. Leeds on the railway to Huddersfield. It has a church several dissenting chapels, four schools, and a mechanics institution. The staple trade is the manufacture of cloth in which most of the inhabitants are employed. Pop. 4921

MORMANNO, a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Citeri, dist. and 18 m. N. W. Catanzaro. Pop. 5800

MORMENTZEL, a hill, Austria, Transylvania, in the narrow pass of Bocsa, on the Great Banias, above which it rises above 1800 ft. In 1846, an immense mass dipped from this hill into the river here about 800 ft. broad, and chok ing it up, laid the valley of the Banias above under water.

MORMOIRON (Latin, Mormiron) a tn. France, dep. Vaucluse, 7 m. E. Carpentras, r. bank Arzon with manufactures of sulphate of iron, and coal-mines. Pop. 1643

MORNESE a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Genoa, prov. and 5 m. from Novi with a church, an ancient castle in a very dilapidated state, and a trade in wine. Pop. 1102

MORNICO, a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy gov. Milan prov. Bergamo near 1 bank Chiese with two palaces, and several churches. Pop. 1992

MORNING-THROAT, par. Eng. Norfolk 1001 ac. P. 140

MORNINGSIDE, a vil. Scotland, about 1 m. S. W. Edinburgh, of which it may almost be considered a suburb. It contains many handsome villas, an established extension, and a Free church, and two schools, and is remarkable for the mildness and salubrity of its air. Near it the Royal St.

Edinburgh Lunatic Asylum, and the nursery of St. Margaret. Pop. 1725.

MORNINGTON a vil Ireland, co. Meath, on the Boyne, 8 m. N E. Drogheda. It gave the title of Earl to the father of the Duke of Wellington. Pop. 138.

MORNINGTON ISLAND, N Australia, Gulf of Carpentaria lat. (N part) 16° 24' S., lon. 139° 27' E. (n.) about 30 m. long N E. to S W, and 10 m. broad, rocky, with some portions of vegetable soil, producing bushes and trees. It is inhabited.

MOROCCO, an empire and city, Africa. See MAROCCO. MORON, or MORON DE LA FRONTERA, a tn. Spain, Andalucía, prov. and 23 m. N E. Seville, near the Guadaira. The houses vary much in height, and the streets are, some of them, regular, spacious, dry, and elevated, while others are narrow, irregular, low and damp. In the principal square stands the small townhouse. It has also a prison, granary, eight primary schools, a Latin grammar-school, three hospitals and three churches, with three convents and several convents and nunneries. On a hill E. of the town are the ruins of the ancient castle, for several centuries one of the most important strongholds in Spain. It was blown up by the French in 1812. Agriculture is the prevailing occupation, but there are also four manufactures of hase, one of soft soap, several of limes and gypsum, five potteries, numerous flour and oil mills, and a few looms for linens. Moron has been long the head-quarters of gangs of robbers, who have infested this part of Spain. Pop. 10,192.

MOROS, a vil and com. Spain, Aragon, prov. and about 60 m. from Saragossa, with a church, townhouse, hospital, primary school, two four-mills, four distilleries, and a trade in wine. Pop. 1125.

MOROSZO, a tn Italy, Vicenza, vis. Cona, prov. and about 7 m. from Biadene, on the bank Biadene, here crossed by a wooden bridge, with two churches, a palace, a monastery, and a trade in corn, salt and dairy produce. Pop. 1900.

MORPETH, a par. bor., market tn. and par. England, co. Northumberland. The town is situated in the midst of a fertile and highly cultivated district, 14 m. N by W New castle, on the railway to Berwick. It has two principal streets, paved, and lighted with gas, a townhall, an elegant bridge of three arches over the Wansbeck, at the E. end of the town, a prison and court-house, an old market-cross, a fine old parish church in the decorated English style, at a short distance from the town, a handsome chapel of ease, several dissenting places of worship, and a R. Catholic chapel, a grammar and several other schools, a mechanics institute, a dispensary. The woollen manufacture, and tanning, are carried on to some extent, especially the latter. Dr. Morrison, the Chinese scholar and missionary, was a native of Morpeth, and it also gives the title of Viscount to the family of Howard. The borough returns a member to Parliament. Registered electors (1851) 415. Pop. 10,013. Area of par., 8177 ac. Pop. 5920. (Local Correspondent.)

MORPETH, a tn. and river-port, New S. Wales, co. Northumberland, at the head of the navigable part of the Hunter River 78 m. N E. Sydney. It has an Episcopalian church, a Wesleyan chapel, several schools, a steam flour-mill, a soap and candle manufactory. Steamers and sailing vessels constantly ply between this place and Sydney.

MORRA, a tn. Italy, Piedmont, vis. Coni, prov. and 6 m. S W. Algho, on a hill, above r. bank Tanaro. It has a handsome church, two monasteries, a townhouse, hospital, public school, and a trade in wine, cattle, and chestnuts. Pop. 2600.

MORRA, a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Ultra, dist. and 3 m. N E. St. Angelo de Lombardi, with two annual fairs. Pop. 8300.

MORRISTOWN, a vil, U. States, New Jersey, 27 m. W New York, on a plateau which commands an extensive view. It has a central public square, a court-house, with a jail; a bank, four churches, and an academy, paper, grist, and oil mills, iron-works, and several wagon factories. P. 5500. MORRISTOWN MILLER, par. Ireland, Kildare, 1872 ac. Pop. 1233.

MORRO DE SÃO PAULO, a vil Brazil, at the foot of a promontory on the N extremity of the Isl. of Funchal, S. of Bay of All Saints, prov. and 50 m. S W Bahia. It is defended by a battery, and contains a church and a primary school. The promontory, crowned by a cask of cannon, is a conspicuous object at a great distance, and is an important landmark.

MORRO-GRAVATO, a vil and par. Brazil, prov. Minas-Geraes, 15 m. S E. Outeiro, with one of the most beautiful churches in the province, inhabited almost all miners or labourers. Pop. 5000.

MORRO-GRAVATO, a mountain range, Brazil, which, after forming part of the boundary between provs. Goyas and Minas-Geraes, enters the latter, becomes the base of the chain known by the name of Pyrenees, stretches W till near Matapique, and then turns S E W. It here forms the watershed between the waters of the N and S., and gives rise to some of the great rivers of Brazil. It is almost everywhere covered with forests, and, from May to September is enveloped in mists.

MORRONE, a tn. Naples, prov. Sanico, 10 m. S W Lerno, with an annual fair of eight days. Pop. 2500.

MÖRS, a tn. Rhensish Prussia. See MARSIN. MÖRS, an Isl. Denmark, prov. Jutland, in the Limfjord, cap. Nykjøbing. In the centre it rises to a height of 283 ft., and, with exception of a few sandy and stony tracts, where heath is the only vegetation, it is all fertile, but almost destitute of wood. It makes some figure in the early history of Denmark, particularly in the war between Harold, Godson of the emperor Otto II., in 975. Area, 104 geo. sq. m. Pop. 13,500.

MORSEBURG, a tn. Baden, See MESSINGEN. MORSECH, a vil. Baden, circle Middle Rhine, bail. Ealingen, with a church. Pop. 1200.

MORSHANCK or MORSHANCK, a tn. Russia, gov. and 60 m. N Tambov, cap. dist. r. bank Tana. It contains one stone and two wooden churches; has manufactures of mill-cloth, a vitrol work, several tallow melting establishments, paper falling and saw-mills, and a considerable trade in corn, honey and cattle. P. (1851) 10,683.—The fields yield good crops almost without manure, has rich pastures and more wood, both for timber and fuel, than its own consumption requires. Area, 1430 geo. sq. m. Pop. 104,681.

MOSTON par. Eng. Norfolk, 3295 ac. Pop. 149. MORTAGNE, several places, France, particularly — 1. (see France). [Latin, Mortuarius], a tn. dep. Orne, 22 m. E. N. E. Alençon, in a commanding position on the top and E. slope of a hill. The principal square, on the top of the hill, is surrounded by a series of steep steps, but most of the other streets are either horizontal, or have only a gentle declivity, and are lined with good houses. The chief public edifices are the church, palais-de-justice, extensive well-stored prisons, and several fountains, supplied with water by a steam-engine, which sends it up from the valley. The staple manufacture is linen, both strong and slight, intended for export to the colonies, and for wrappers, and it has other manufactures of delfware and leather, and a trade in linen, grain, hemp, sheep swine, horses, and cattle. P. 4892.—2. (see France). A tn. and com. dep. Vendée, 25 m. N E. Bourdeaux. Vendée supposed by some to be the Roman Segara. It is situated on a series of slopes, washed by the Sèvre, the Nantes, and has uneven, narrow, badly paved streets, and ill built houses, standing amid heaps of ruins, the effect of the fearful devastation inflicted on the town by the war of La Vendée. It has manufactures of linen, paper, and leather, and a trade in linen, leather, horses, and sheep. P. 1650.

MORTAGOA, a tn. and par. Portugal, prov. Beira-Alta, 20 m. N N E. Coimbra. Pop. 840.

MORTAIN [Latin, Mortuaria], a tn. France, dep. Manche, 64 m. S. W. St. L. on the Canche. It is a decayed lifeless town. Near it are the finest, and almost only cascades in Normandy. Pop. 1614.

MORTARA, a tn. Italy, Fishport, vis. and 34 m. S E E. Novara, cap. prov. Mortara or Lovellina, on a height above r. bank Arrogna, here crossed by a bridge. It is walled has a court of law and several public offices, three churches, a theatre, several inferior schools, no hospital, and a trade in rice, corn, and silk. Pop. 5316.

MORTEH, or MORVENA, an Isl. Austria in the Adriatic, off the coast of Dalmatia, north about 25 m. S E. Zara. It is about 6 m. long, and nearly 2 m. broad; contains a parish church, and has some trade in wine and oil. Pop. 1100.—On it is a vil. of same name, supposed to occupy the site of the ancient Colchester.

MORTES (Rio das), two rivers, Brazil.—1. A river, which rises in prov. Minas-Geraes, among the mountains E. of Barbacena, flows W., is crossed by the road from Rio-de-Janeiro to Ouro-Prato, at some distance below receives the Mortes Pequena, on its left, and joins a bank Grande, near the small village and port of Moeda, after a course of 120 m.—2. A river, which rises in prov. Mato-Grosso, on the W. slope of serra Calapo, flows first N.W. then E. receiving a number of small rivers, the largest of which are the Roncador, and the two outlets of Lagoa-Grande and, after a navigable course of about 400 m. joins the arm of the Araguaia, which flows to the W. of the Isl. of Bananal or Santa Anna, in lat. 12° S.

MORTHOE par Eng Devon 4621 ac. Pop 387
MORTIER a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 9 m E.W.E. Lodge, with manufacture of woollen and linen cloth several mills, and a trade in corn. Pop 1046

MORTIER an Isl. Indian Archipelago. See MORIX
MORTIZZO, a vil. and com. Parma, 6 m N.E. Piacenza, on the Po whose sluggish and lifeless course through it is supposed to have given it its name. It has a public school, and a trade in cattle and swine. Pop 3601

MORTLACH par Scot. Rann 56 000 ac. Pop 2804
MORTLAKE, par Eng Surrey, 1158 ac. Pop 6110

MORTLETON par Eng. Tipton, 1840 ac. P 358

MORTLOCK ISLES a small group, S. Pacific Ocean lat. 4 45' S, lon 157° E, discovered, in 1795, by Captain Mortlock who called them Hunter Islands, but the name of the discoverer himself, given by Krusenstern, has prevailed

MORTON, six pars Eng.—1 Derby 2800 ac. Pop 556.—2, Nottingham, 408 ac. Pop 140.—3 (Alicote) Worcester 1480 ac. Pop 255.—4, (Beggott) Warwick, 1160 ac. Pop 150.—5, (on-the-Hill) Norfolk, 877 ac. Pop 148.—6 (Frisney) Northampton, 1225 ac. Pop 076

MORTON par Scot. Dumfriesshire, 7 m by 4 m. P 2482

MORTRELL, vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 5 m S.E. E. Antwerp near the railway in Mechlin. It has many factories of wax tapers two breweries a tannery a malt and a flour mill and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop 1413

MORTY an Isl. Indian Archipelago off N.E. end of Isl. Gilolo lat (N point) 2 44' N lon 128° 25' E. It is about 65 m long 10 m to 25 m broad and has an agreeable appearance from the sea, the land rising gently from the beach. It abounds in sugar trees, but is very thinly inhabited. The channel which separates this island from Gilolo, is called Morty Strait. It is about 30 m wide, having Riew Island at its N. entrance. In the bay, formed by the latter island and Morty there is said to be good anchorage with fresh water plenty of wild hogs, deer wood pigeons, &c., on the islands contiguous.

MORUM a tn. Brazil prov. Sergipe, on the Ganhoema raba, W. of Santo-Amaro. It has a parish primary school custom-house, and a port, which is the entrepot for the sugar made in the neighbouring districts sent to Bahia

MORVAH par Eng. Cornwall, 1226 ac. Pop 387
MORVAL, par Eng. Cornwall, 3562 ac. Pop 740

MORVAT, a tn. France, which formerly depended on the province of Roussillon, and is now included in depart. Aveyron. It gives its name to a mountain range which branching off from the W. side of the Cote-d'Or, stretches for about 40 m. first W. N.W. then S.W., and terminates at the sources of the Yonne.

MORVEN, par Scot. Argyle 86 868 ac. Pop 1547

MORVILL, par Wales, Pembrokeshire, 2661 ac. Pop 139

MORVILL, par Eng. Dorset 5186 ac. Pop 507

MORZARCO, or Morzacco, a vil. and com. Italy. Piedmont, div. Alessandria, prov. Acqui, a bank Bormida, with a church a fine castle and a trade in corn, silk cattle, and agricultural produce. Pop 1900

MORZINE, a vil. and com. France dep. Haute Savoie, prov. Chablais, 12 m S.E. Le Blot, on the Dranse, here crossed by a stone bridge with a church a public school and quarries of roofing slate. Pop 2020

MORALSK, a tn. Russia. See MAMALASK

MORAMBIQUE, or MOZAMBIQUE, an Isl. and city E. coast Africa, lat. 16° 12' S lon 40° 49' E and the metropolis of the Portuguese possessions in that quarter. The harbour to which this place owes all its importance, is an inlet of the sea in the mainland, 5 m. deep and 5½ m. wide. Three small rivers flow into it at its head, while across its entrance extend three small islands, which, with reefs and shoals, break the swell of the ocean, and render the anchorage within perfectly safe in the worst weather. On the middle island, which is about 1½ m. long N.E. to S.W. and hardly ½ m. wide, stands the city. The other two islands St. George on the N., St. Jago on the E., are both uninhabited. All three are low coral banks covered with sand. The uninhabited islets are clothed with trees and vegetation, while the sandy area of Mozambique, in the middle, is entirely covered with the city and its defences. When Vasco da Gama touched here on his first voyage to India, he found the place in the possession of the Arabs and that it had been long distinguished as an excellent boat harbour may be inferred from its native name, which is properly Masambico the plural of Masambico, a boat or canoe. Within two years from that time it was taken by the Portuguese, who then at the height of their fame and power, commenced vigorously the erection of their E. African capital. The fort of St. Sebastian at the N. end of the island, however was not built till the beginning of the 18th century. It is a great work, mounting 80 guns, and although, at the present day neglected and in disorder, it is still strong. At the other end of the island is fort St. Lorenzo. The governor's palace is a very large and regular edifice, the custom house, the churches, ten in number, besides five chapels and the quays and wharfs, are all constructed in a style of solidity and grandeur far beyond the present importance of the place.

The streets are narrow, but the houses are lofty and well built, with flat roofs made to hold the rain-water as the water drawn from the wells in the island is brackish. But, notwithstanding the solidity of its structure, Mozambique is now sinking rapidly into decay. Its trade and political importance are gone, and it has nothing to expect but poverty and desolation. The city covers about half of the island, on the remainder are huddled together the huts of the free coloured people. This black town is a busy place, being all a retail market. Good meat is hardly procurable at any price. Of the 6000 inhabitants of this little island, not quite 500 are free. Of these about 30 are Portuguese, the remainder being Canzanos (Portuguese Creoles from Goa), Arabs, Banyans, and blacks. There is but little morality in Mozambique. The slave-dealing so long carried on here, the liberal and restrictive commercial policy, which gives rise to a system of smuggling, and various other causes, have produced an unusual depravity of manners. The deadly nature of the climate, perhaps, is not without its influence in inducing men to make the most of the present by abandoning themselves to the unscrupulous love of gain and unbridled dissipation.

The chief residents in the island are Banyans, through whose hands passes all the trade with the interior. As the island of Mozambique is quite incapable of producing anything for the support of its inhabitants, these procure the requisite supply of cattle, grain, &c., from Madagascar or the Comoro Islands. Fresh vegetables and fruit are obtained from the adjacent mainland. The peninsula on the N. side of the bay belongs to the Portuguese. On the isthmus which joins it to the continent, at the head of the bay stands the village of Mesural, where the trade is carried on with the natives, who come down from the interior at certain seasons, bringing ivory, skins, wax, &c. nearer to the island is Cabesela Grande where the Portuguese officers and merchants have their villas and gardens, and, at the end of the peninsula, the village of Cabesela Pequena receives the Arab and other Mahometan inhabitants of the place. The Banyans reside at Lumbo a village between the latter two. But the Portuguese dominion does not extend beyond this narrow territory, and even the safety of Mozambique—the metropolis of the capes-general of E. Africa—has been threatened more than once by the petty chiefs in the neighbourhood.—Muthana at the N.W., and Samulo at the E. side of the bay.

Mozambique is the seat of a bishopric, subordinate to Goa, but religion is little thought of in the place, and the conversion of the natives is not even attempted. The clergy are chiefly Canzanos. Until 1769, the governor of Mozambique was subordinate to the viceroy of India, but in that year the Captain General of E. Africa was severed from India, and placed immediately under the crown. The territories really embraced under this high-sounding title were never great and are, at the present day, next to nothing. The Portuguese claim of possession in E. Africa extends at of defence. The enclosed space, forming the nominal site of the city, though a considerable portion of it is unoccupied by buildings, has an uneven, undulating surface and is traversed by the navigable Moskva, which, entering near the middle of the W side of the wall, makes a series of remarkable serpentine windings, and quits it at the S.E. corner. Within the city the Moskva receives a small tributary called the Jacosa, which joins it from the N.E. The most remarkable prominence within the enclosed space, is the hill of the Kremlin, which is situated near its centre, and rises suddenly up from the N or E bank of the river. It is nearly of a tetrahedral shape, and surrounded by an immense white wall 60 ft. high, and about 1 m. in circuit. This wall is flanked by embattled towers, and gives access, by several gates, to the interior which formed the original nucleus of the city and is still the site of its most important and characteristic edifices. The part not built upon is occupied by well-kept-out gardens. Immediately to the E of the Kremlin is the second quarter the Kitai Gorod, or Chinese city, fenced round by a wall which is flanked with towers and buttresses. Around the Kremlin, as centre, two large circles have been drawn—the inner one, with a radius of 7 m., and the outer with a radius of 11 m. in length. The circumference of each circle consists of a wide belt of freely-planted boulevard. The inner circle stops short at the N bank of the river. The outer circle is completed proceeding across the river, and enclosing a considerable space on the S. bank. The space enclosed between the Kremlin and the Kitai Gorod, and the inner boulevard, is called the quarter of the Beloi Gorod or White City, while the other area, included between the two boulevards so far as it lies N. of the river is called the quarter of the Kremnoi Gorod. All the enclosed space beyond the four quarters now described, whether situated on the N or the S bank of the Moskva, is regarded as suburbs. Those in the former direction are formed into regular streets which extend to the very barrier but in the latter direction the streets are mostly confined within the outer boulevard. The strange irregularity with which Moscow is built, is one of the first things which force itself on the notice of the visitor. This might have been expected to be remedied by the great conflagration of 1812 but though the incongruities are certainly fewer than they were, enough still remains to give the city its old characteristic features. The streets in general continue uneven and tortuous, numerous paltry lanes open all at once into magnificent squares and long rows of little yellow wooden houses abut on vast colossal structures. In order to describe the principal edifices, we must again return to the crowded with numerous epulas of glittering gold and silver, and presenting one of the most striking views of which any European city can boast. Returning by the Spass Vorota, or Gate of the Redeemer, over which is a picture of our Saviour, the object of the deepest reverence, and through which, in consequence, none must pass without being uncovered, we are at once introduced to the most interesting and important buildings of Moscow. The first we notice is the Terem or old palace of the Czar, it consists of four stories, which diminish in ascending till the uppermost contains only a single room, and is surrounded with balconies, with stairs both within and without, leading to each separate terrace; the lowest floor contains the throne and audience chambers the highest was the residence of the Czarinas and their children the walls are richly and almost grotesquely decorated, and covered with portraits of the Czar, armorial bearings, &c. The main body of this palace was so much injured by the French, that repair was impossible, and its place has been supplied by the Bolshoi Dvorets or Large Palace, built by the Emperor Alexander and sometimes called after him, the Alexandrovsk Dvorets, an immense pile and not without an imposing effect but its modern style and decorations are in bad keeping with the venerable structures with which it is associated. The same may be said of the Maloi Dvorets or Little Palace, built by the Emperor Nicholas, containing some interesting pictures by Bernardo Belotto de Canalotto, and a collection of all the works that have been written concerning Moscow in French, Russian, and German. The Baburoi Ploshchad, or Cathedral Square, situated on the summit of the Kremlin and enclosed within a magnificent iron railing contains the Uspenski Sakhar or Cathedral of the Assumption, and two churches—the Arkhangelski Sakhar or Church of St. Michael and the Lady of the Cave. The cathedral in which the emperors are crowned bears no resemblance, either without or within to the cathedrals of W Europe. It is a clumsy building with heavy pillars which support five epulas, and like the walls glittering with gold from top to bottom, the golden ground covered over with grotesque traceries of sacred subjects, it was founded in 1226 and rebuilt in 1472. Immediately behind the cathedral is the Bykofski Dom or House of the Holy Bynd, so called because a section of the Bynd has its office in it, and contains the Mir or Holy Oil, which is used in the baptism of all Russian children, and is prepared at intervals of about two years with many mysterious and fantastic ceremonies in two large silver kettles. A much more valuable treasure of the Holy Bynd is a library, remarkably rich in rare manuscripts. The church of St. Michael is a sombre building lighted by windows so dimly, as to do little more than make darkness visible. Almost all the Russian sovereigns, from Ivan Danilovitch, down to Peter the Great, are buried here their figures, natural size, are painted in fresco round the walls each over against his own tomb, where he sits wrapped in a white mantle. Immediately adjoining is an odd looking church, with walls of immense thickness, said to be the oldest in Moscow, and constantly

MOSCOW THE GENERAL VIEW OF THE KREMLIN.—From David E. Pavlovitch Hittorff's 'Archaeologie et Russie'.

Kremlin, previously stopping to view it from the most favourable spot—the S side of the bridge Moskva Rakoa. Here it seems to rise out of the water, picturesquely adorned with turf and shrubs; while above its snowy wall and verdant foliage palaces and churches rear their majestic heads plunged with devotees. The church of the Annunciation is paved with fine pebbles of Jasper agate, and ornamented. Within the Kremlin also, is an immense pile of building, lining the sides of a triangle, one side being occupied by the senate, which contains the offices of the various local departmental authorities. The church of the Annunciation is a sombre building lighted by windows so dimly, as to do little more than make darkness visible. Almost all the Russian sovereigns, from Ivan Danilovitch, down to Peter the Great, are buried here their figures, natural size, are painted in fresco round the walls each over against his own tomb, where he sits wrapped in a white mantle. Immediately adjoining is an odd looking church, with walls of immense thickness, said to be the oldest in Moscow, and constantly parapets, and the other two by the treasury and arsenal. The chief attraction here is the upper story of the treasury, containing the crowns of the early Cæsars, arranged in regular succession; several thrones, warlike trophies, and musketeer's curiosities. The arsenal contains 100,000 stands of arms, the cannon taken from the French during their disastrous retreat, and numerous other military trophies. Nearly in the centre of the buildings of the Kremlin, now described, and far overtopping them all is the famous Ivan Veliki, or tower of John the Great, which rises without ornament of any kind, to the height of 209 ft., and is surrounded by a gilded dome, on which, as on the other gilded domes of the Kremlin, the cross is displayed above the crescent. It is ascended by a good staircase, and simply rewards the toil of ascent by the magnificent view which it commands. It consists of several stories, in each of which hangs a stupendous bell one of them weighing 64 tons. Another bell, nearly trebling this enormous weight, called Gur Kolokol or the Mensher, stands at the bottom of the tower on a pedestal of granite, to which it was raised in 1887, by the Emperor Nicholas, after having rested for a century buried on the spot into which it is said to have fallen when the tower, in which it was suspended, was burned down. A huge fragment was broken from it by the fall. Its height is 21 3/4 ft., diameter 22 1/2 ft., and least thickness 5 inches. Immediately to the E. of the Kremlin, between its walls and those of the Kitai Gorod, stands, in the Kremlin Ploshad or Red Place, the cathedral of St. Basil one of the strangest specimens of architecture anywhere to be met with: it has no less than 20 towers and domes all of different shapes and sizes, and coloured over with the most varied hues—some green, spread like net-work, over a yellow ground, one red with broad white stripes, and a third gilded. The whole is a perfect baffle, and through different accounts of its origin are given, the most credible seem to be, that it was a whim of Ivan the Terrible, to try how many chapels could be erected on the same spot, and under the same roof where religious service could be simultaneously performed without mutual interference. The architect was an Italian, and so pleased his employer that the savage despot put out his eyes, in order that he might never be able to build another like it. It is impossible to state the number of churches in Moscow, some making them 1500, and others reducing them to 250. The smaller number, if proper churches only are included, is probably the more accurate: but it is scarcely possible to traverse a street, in which clustering domes and minarets do not meet the eye. The number of monasteries, also, is very great. Those most deserving of notice are the Donskoi, situated near the S. barrier surrounded with ancient walls, painted in broad stripes of white and red, surrounded by battlements like those of the Kremlin, and containing, within its enclosure, six churches and chapels, several courts, a plantation of birch wood, and dwellings for the Archimandrite and monks, the Semenuvskoi, at the S.E. corner of the wall, near where the Moskva quits it, and with more of the appearance of a fortress than a monastery its lofty battlemented walls being notably mounted with a few small pieces, and the Devichii convent, at the S.W. corner, with walls, flanked by 16 towers several churches, one of them containing the tombs of several Cæsars and princesses, and a churchyard beautifully laid-out with shrubs and flowers, and containing a great number of fine monuments. Close to this convent is the Devichii-fell or Madams' Field, where the emperors, on their coronation, entertain their subjects. The Emperor Nicholas here, on that occasion, died 50,000 persons.

Among educational establishments, the only one deserving of particular notice is the University whose jurisdiction is not confined to the city or government of Moscow, but extends over govts. Tver, Smolensk, Koustrinov, Volginsk, Riazan, Tambou, Orsk, Tula, Kaluga, and Smolensk. It was established by the Empress Catherine, in 1755, consists of four faculties, and is attended by about 900 students. Its scientific collections are poor, compared with the best of those in the W. of Europe, but it is tolerably rich in anatomical preparations; in connection with it is a gymnasium, a library of 50,000 volumes, an observatory, botanical garden, &c. Among benevolent establishments are the Alexander Hospital and St. Catherine's Hospital, both near the N. barrier and another hospital of St. Catherine, near the N.E. corner:

two military hospitals in the E., a widow's hospital in the W., and St. Paul's Hospital and the Gallatin Hospital in the S. Another hospital, the Foundling, situated on the N. bank of the Moskva, a little to the E. of the Kitai Gorod, has acquired more celebrity than all the rest: but whether it is entitled to be ranked among benevolent establishments, is questionable, its encouragement to vice being palpable and notorious, as all children up to a certain age, are received on presentation, and no questions asked. The number actually in the house, or supported in some way or other by the institution, is upwards of 25,000. Moscow possesses two theatres—one, where the performances are in French and the other, or the Alexander theatre, where they are in Russian. Among the other buildings or places worthy of notice, are the great riding-school, to the W. of the Kremlin, supposed to be the largest building in the world unsupported by pillar or prop of any kind the principal bazaar, or Gostinny Dvor, in the Kitai Gorod, a colossal building of three stories, where wholesale merchants, to the number of more than 1000, regularly carry on their trade the Riad, an open space in the same vicinity occupied by narrow streets of shops, the bazars, along the E. side of the inner boulevard and the two-vozes, a large oval camped N and S., and almost touching the S. barrier. The number of open and planted spaces throughout the city is very great. Several of these, including the boulevards, have been already mentioned; and we may now add the Princess Gallatin's gardens, stretching along the bank of the Moskva, and beautifully laid-out, but now partly occupied by the Empress's villa and the Sparrow hills to the S.W. Manufactures of various kinds are carried on to a great extent within the city; but bear only a small proportion to those which are carried on at its account in the surrounding towns and villages. The principal establishments are for textile fabrics, chiefly woolen, cotton, and silk, in all of which, much steam power and the most improved machinery, are employed the other principal articles are hats, hardware, leather chemical products, beer, and brandy. From its central position, Moscow is the great entrepot for the internal commerce of the empire. Great facilities for this commerce are given by water communication, which extends, on one side, to the Baltic on another to the Caspian and, on a third, to the Black Sea and by the railway to St. Petersburg. In winter, the traffic over the snow in sledges is enormous as many as 2600, loaded with goods for Tula alone, have been known to leave the city in a single year.

Moscow for administrative purposes, is divided into 21 districts; and is under the immediate charge of a general and military governor. It is the seat of important civil and criminal courts and of various superintending boards of police, manufactures, trade, &c., and has several literary scientific, and other societies; among which, one of the most prominent is the Bible Society established in 1818. The foundation of the city dates from 1147. Its nucleus was the Kremlin which, at first, was nearly surrounded by a palisade, and formed an important military station. For a long time it continued to be a dependency on the principality of Vladimir, and in 1238, when the cruel Baton-Khan devastated Russia, it was both sacked and burned. In 1393, it was again sacked and the inhabitants were dragged away into slavery by Tamaghai. It afterwards became a prey to intestine dissensions—several princes disputing the possession of it, but at last Dmitrii, nicknamed Donskoi, became sole master, and died in 1389, after having done more for its prosperity than any one into whose hands it had previously fallen. From this time its prosperity continued to advance, though not without repeated interruptions by fire, pestilence, famine, and war. It now became the capital of Moscow, and afterwards of the whole Russian empire, but was deprived of the honour in 1708 when Petersburg was founded, and became the royal residence. It still, however, possesses all the grandeur, and many of the other features of a capital. Many of the nobility reside in it, and, both in salubrity and central position, it possesses natural advantages which no political preference can ever confer on St. Petersburg. The principal event in the history of Moscow, is the burning of it in 1571, for the purpose of dislodging the French from their winter quarters. The damage then done has been long since repaired, and Moscow has risen from her ashes more beautiful than she ever was before. Pop (1850), 575,900.

MOSDOK, a tn Russia prov Caucasus, esp. dist. 68 m. K.S.P. Georgievsk, on a height above the Terek. It is strongly fortified by nature, being only accessible on two sides, and has been considerably strengthened by art. It has generally spacious and straight streets, lined by very ill-freely-built and gloomy-looking wooden houses a Greek, an Armenian, and a R Catholic church an hospital, merchant-house, and quarantaine establishment and manufacture of morocco leather and brandy Pop. (1840) 10,869

MORIS, or MOOR, an isl., Indian Archipelago, Banda Sea, N from Thaur Laut; lat. 6° 30' S.; lon. 131° 30' E.; 20 m. in circumference

MORILAH, or MARILAH, an Isl. Arabia See MASSELA
MORILLE, an B. dep. France lat. 48° 51' to 49° 53' N., lon. 1° 30' to 1° 45' E.; bounded N. by Rhénish Prussia, German and Belgian Luxembourg, E. Rhénish Prussia, S. daps Bas-Rhin and Meurthe, and W. Moselle It is of very irregular shape, terminating in the E. and W. in mere points, which are 107 m. distant from each other, while it bulges out toward the N. and S., till it attains a breadth of 41 m. area, 2084 sq m. The surface is very much broken in the E. by ramifications of the Vosges, and in the W. by those of the Ardennes. None of them, however, attain a height exceeding 650 ft. The greater part of the heights are covered with fine forests, in which, though larger game is becoming scarce, the smaller varieties of it abound. They are generally of a round shape, and descend by gentle slopes, often clothed with orchards and vineyards. In their last descent, they do not merge into extensive plains, but form long withdrawing valleys, drained by numerous streams. The largest and most beautiful of these valleys is that of the Moselle, which traverses the department centrally from S. to N. and by itself, or its tributaries drains nearly the whole of it. The soil in many parts, in light, and much better adapted to oats and rye than wheat, but the proportion which the viable beans to the waste land is very great—the former occupying three-fourths and the latter only about one-eighth of the whole surface. Considerably more than one fifth is in wood. The cereals raised leave a considerable surplus for exportation. The principal crops, after these, are beans and pease, lentils, vetches, millet, roots, and flax. A few hops are grown. Various kinds of fruits are raised or raised and in great perfection. Many sunny slopes are covered with vineyards, but though the culture is careful, the wine produced is, in general, indifferent. The domestic animals are almost, without exception, of very inferior breeds; and dairy produce is so much neglected, that neither the butter nor cheese of the department can find any market beyond its limits. Mari, gypsum, and limestone, abound. The only metal of economical importance is iron, in the form of oxide. It is extensively worked open cast, and more partially by shallow pits. Interesting fossils are of frequent occurrence, particularly in the calcareous acclivities which line the valleys of the Moselle and its tributaries. Manufacturing industry is largely developed, and embraces almost all kinds of textile fabrics, iron, and ironmongery, embroidery porcelain glass beer liquors, furniture, &c. The trade includes almost all the articles of manufacture, with the addition of agricultural produce and timber. After falling under the power of the Franks, this department was included in the kingdom of Austrasia, of which Metz was the capital. In the 9th century it changed its name to Lotharing, and continued with the emperors of Germany till 1657 when Henri II., by conquest, secured it to France. It is divided into four arrondissement—Metz the capital; Briey Sarreguemine, and Tolonville subdivided into 27 cantons, and 683 communes. Pop. (1828) 469,694

MORILLE (German Mosel Latin, Mosella) a river of Europe, which rises in France, S.E. of Remiremont, dep. Vosges, across which it flows N.W. into the centre of dep. Meurthe, whence it proceeds N.N.E. past Metz, and across dep. Moselle, into Rhénish Prussia, and after passing Treves, in a remarkably winding course, falls into the Rhine, at Coblenz. total course, about 300 m., of which 250 m. commencing at the junction of the Meurthe, are navigable. Its principal affluents are, in France, r. bank Vologne, Meurthe, which joins it below Nancy, and Sella, which it receives at Metz, l. bank Madon, Meuse, Orne, and, beyond France, a bank, Sarre, which joins it above Treves; and l. bank Ruhr, Kill, and Elz. Of these affluents, the Meurthe, Sarre, and Ruhr, are navigable.

MORHARIS, a tn Russia. See MORANE
MORLAND, or MORLANDEN, a point off N.W. coast, Norway the most S. of the Lofodden N. B. is at Flingsö, and S.W. the celebrated whilpp of Milford.

MOSKONISI, an Isl. Asiatic Turkey, pash. Anadolu, Gulf of Adramyth lat. 39° 20' N. lon. 36° 40' E. about 4½ m. long. It is mountainous, and is connected with the mainland by sands. On the S. side is the village of Mosko, which has some trade in fruit and cotton.

MOSKVA, or MOSKWA, a river, Russia, which rises in gov. Smolensk, flows E., enters gov. Moscow passes near Mojaisk, and entering Moscow on the W., winds through it, and, on quitting it at its S.E. corner turns S.E., and keeping this direction till it reaches the S.E. corner of the gov., joins l. bank Oka at Kolomna, total course, about 210 m. A little above Moscow its navigation is interrupted by a catamar, but, from the city downwards, it is navigable to its mouth.

MOSNICZA, a vil. Hungary. Thaur. Thaur. See, co and 2 m. from Temesvár, with a Greek church. Pop. 1170

MOSQUERELA a walled tn Spain, Aragon prov and 28 m. E.N.E. Teruel with a church an old palace in which King Jaime I. of Aragon used to spend the hot season. a grammar and a primary school, manufactures of serge, and a trade in tinher Pop. 2136

MOSQUITIA, or MOQUITO TERRITORY an extensive but not well-defined country, occupying the N.E. portion of Central America, between lat. 11 and 18° N., and lon 88 10' and 88° W. and bounded N. and E. by the Caribbean Sea, S. Costa Rica, from which it is separated by the river San Juan, S.W. Nicaragua, and W. Honduras. Area, including some contested portions claimed by Costa Rica and Nicaragua, 54,000 sq m., and including them about 28,000 sq m. The surface is very mountainous in the W. being traversed by a lofty chain, which stretches across the country in a N. direction, and furnishes the sources of all its important rivers, which following the general slope, flow either N. or E. The largest of these rivers are the Roman or Aguan, forming the boundary of Mosquitia on the N.W. the Tinto or Wac, and the Escondido or Begovia. The soil is in general remarkably fertile, and has a most luxuriant tropical vegetation producing in abundance all the staples of the West Indies, large quantities of mahogany and other cabinet timber, dyewoods, drugs, &c. The climate, though on the whole healthy, is very trying to European constitutions. Valuable minerals are said to abound in the interior and along the coast great quantities of tortoise-shell of the finest quality are obtained. The Mosquito Indians, the native, and almost the only inhabitants, are an active and daring race, tolerably expert in the use of firearms. Their chief assumes the title of King of Mosquitia, but they have considered themselves under the protection of the British Government, and have, in fact, long enjoyed its protection. Its capital is Bluefields or Bluefields.

MOSS, a seaport in Norway, prov. on the bay, and 82 m. S. Christiansund traversed by a stream, on which a great number of saw and iron mills have been erected. It has a good harbour at which there is a considerable export of deals and iron. Pop. (1855) 4599

MOSSINGEN, a tn Württemberg circle Schwarzwald, 7 m. S.E. Rottenburg. It is a stirring, industrious place, with a church, a distillery and a considerable trade P. 2744.

MOSKILLICH a tn Baden, Lake circle, on the Albis, 25 m. N. Coire with a church and a castle. The Austrians under Krü, who were here defeated, in 1809, by the French, under Moreau. Pop. 1638 MOSSO (Santa Maria), a vil and com Italy Piedmont div Turin prov and 11 m. N.E. Biella, near the Strona, here crossed by a stone bridge. It has several churches, a gymnasium, manufactures of woollens, and a trade in potatoes, walnuts, chestnuts, cattle, and dairy produce. Pop. 1426.

MOSOCZ, or MOSOCSEN, a market tn. Hungary, Elber Danube, co. Thaurus 17 m. N.E. Neusohl, with two churches and three churches. Pop. 2766

MOSTOWN par. Incl. Louth, 3818 ac. Pop. 1027

MOSTRIM par. Incl. Longford, 10 844 ac. P. 3168.

MOSTAGANEM, a tn. Algeria, prov. and 471 m. E.N.E. Oran, about 1½ m. from the Mediterranean. It is composed of two towns, which have each an enclosure, and are separated from one another by a rock valley covered with gardens. It possesses strong military works, and ample accommodation for troops. The men are all artisans, agriculturists, or merchants. It has manufactures of carpets, coverlets, woollen cloaks, and jewellery, and a considerable trade, with the interior. Pop. (1849), 6408, of whom 3877 are Europeans.

MOSTAR (108 barcel.), a tn. European Turkey, cap. prov. Herzegovina, on both sides the Neretva, here crossed by a beautiful Ruman bridge of a single arch, 85 ft. 3 inches span. It has in a plain about 8 m. long, by 2½ m. broad, 73 m. N.W. Cazaro; lat. 43° 30' N. lon. 17° 58' E. occupies a larger space than is needful, has generally unpaved streets, a visir's palace, a number of mosques and two extensive well-supplied bazars, and carries on a considerable trade in cattle, corn, wine, fruit, wax, and tallow. Pop. 7800—(Wilkinson's Bosnia and Montenegro.)

MOSTARDAS a vil. and par. Brazil, prov. São Pedro do Rio-Grande, in a sandy and infertile district, between Lagoa Petas and the Ocean 56 m. S.S.E. Alegre with a church. It raises millet, barberries, and excellent melons. Pop. 3000.

MOSTERTON, par. Eng. Dorset, 958 ac. Pop. 346.

MOSTOLER, a tn. Spain, New Castile, prov. and 10 m. S.W. Madrid, in a plain near the Guadarrama, here crossed by a magnificent stone bridge. It is in general poorly built has a church, a handsome modern townhouse, prison, and primary school, and a trade in corn and fruit. Pop. 1550.

MOSTYN a vil. and township Wales, co. Flint, on the estuary of the Dee, and on the Chester and Holyhead railway, about 4 m. N.W. Holywell. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the coal-pits in the neighbourhood. Steamers ply regularly to Liverpool. Pop. 3091.

MOSUL, or MOSUL, a large in Asiatic Turkey cap. prov. of same name, 220 m. N.W. Bagdad pleasantly situated on a bank of the Tigris, near which are extended to be the ruins of Nimrud. It is a considerable dependency on the middle, and is surrounded by wall but is in a state of decay and ruin. Its principal ornaments are a college, the tomb of Sheikh Abdul Kader, and the remains of a beautiful mosque, with a fine minaret. The coffee-house, baths, khans, and bazars, are also handsome buildings. The city has declined in commerce as in everything else. At present its bazars are small and inferior in appearance, and its streets thronged with poor. In point of trade, it is chiefly a thoroughfare for the traffic between Bagdad, Syria, and Constantinople. It has, however, considerable commercial intercourse with the interior of Mesopotamia. Its principal manufactures are rapies and other cotton stuffs, such as shawls for turbans, and caftans. It was formerly celebrated also for its muslins hence the name of that description of fabrics, the manufacture of which was carried on to a great extent. The wine, bread, and cheese, sold here, are all of excellent quality. The climate is extremely hot in summer, and the winters mild, although there is sometimes a fall of snow which continues on the ground for a day or two. In the vicinity there are several warm sulphur springs, also some extensive quarries of marble so soft in quality that it can be cut and hewed like wood, and is much used in building for particular purposes. The city has been repeatedly devastated by famine and plague. On one occasion of this kind, where both were combined or quickly followed each other it is said that 100,000 persons were cut off. Pop. estimated at 40,000.—(Southgate's Travels in Turkey and Persia, Chamber's Expedition to the Euphrates and Tigris.)

THE PARALLEL lies in the W. part of Kurdistan, between lat. 35° 30' and 37° 55' N., lon. 42° and 43° 50' E. length, N. to S., about 140 m. most breadth, 100 m. watered by the Tigris, and its affluents the Great and Little Zab. In wet seasons the crops are abundant, but a long period of drought is invariably followed by famine.

MOZELAVINA, a vil. Austria, Slavonia, co. Varcon, on the Drava, about 20 m. from Etkice with a church. P. 1850.

MOTA-DAS-CURVO, a tn. Spain, New Castile, prov. Cuenca, 66 m. S.E. Madrid with a townhouse, granary two primary schools, an hospital, a church, manufactures of earthenware, soap, coarse woollens, and numerous flour and oil mills. Pop. 8765.

MOTA-DAS-MAGUAS, a vil. Spain, Lugo, prov. and 37 m. W. Valledoid with a townhouse, a magnificent palace of the Dukes of Aze, an elementary school, Latin school, and two churches. Pop. (chiefly agricultural), 1822.

MOTAGUA or MATAGUA, a river, Guatemala, which flows in the mountains of Dept. Solola, about lat. 15° 30' N., and lon. 91° W. flows first S.E. for about 80 m., then E. 120 m., and finally, N.E. 20 m., falls into the bay near the W. limit of the State of Honduras. Its mouth is encumbered by a dangerous bar. The principal affluents, which all join it on the r., are the Pisayo, Sacatepeque, Platanos, and Chiquimala.

MOTALA a market in Sweden, lin. and 35 m. W.W. Liphjoping, r. bank Motala, near its mouth in the N.E. shore of Lake Wetter. The Gota canal, which connects Lake Wetter with the Baltic, has here its terminus in a fine harbor and docks.

MOTCOMBE par. Eng. Dorset 4841 ac. Pop. 1555.

MOTHE-DE-HAULT, a tn. France, dep. Deux Sèvres r. bank Sèvre-Niortais, 9 m. N.E. Niort. It contains one of the finest châteaux in the department has a trade in cattle and mules manufactures of coarse goods, tanneries, and flour-mills. Pop. 3026.

MOTHELL two pars. Ire. 1., Waterford, 30741 ac. Pop. 5288.—3., Kilkenny 7092 ac. Pop. 168.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS, or STAPPA, a group of islets, Norway not far from the North Cape, and off the W. coast of Magdalen. They consist of a central and, rising precipitously to a great height, a other part, also precipitous, but much less elevated, grouped around it. They form a conspicuous mark to vessels coming from the White Sea, and their peculiar arrangement has caused them to receive from English mariners the former of the above names. They are frequented by immense numbers of the guillemot, and every spring are visited by the Laps in search of eggs.

MOTHERWELL, a vil. Scotland, co. Lanark, 12 m. S.E. Glasgow on the Caledonian railway. Inhabitants chiefly employed in the extensive iron and coal works of the locality.

MOTHEVEY or MYRTON, par. Wales, Carmarthen, 11,914 ac. Pop. 1069.

MOTHERS, or MOTHERS-TRAVERS, a vil. and par. Switzerland, cant. and 15 m. W.S.W. Nottelbach, beautifully situated in the valley of Travens, among fertile, well-cultivated fields. It is well built, and contains, on an isolated height, an old castle, now used as a prison. The chief manufactures are lace and watches.

MOTILLA DEL-PALANQUE, a tn. Spain, New Castile, prov. and 86 m. S.E. Cuenca. It is tolerably well built, and has a commodious church, a courthouse, an orphan school, a primary school, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth several oil-mills and a trade in corn and saffron. Pop. 7748.

MOTIR, or MOTIR, an isl., Indian Archipelago, Moluccas, off W. coast Gilolo, lat. 0° 30' N., lon. 127° 30' E. It is a volcano, and is fruitful, yielding palm, sugar, cotton, and coconuts. Its inhabitants manufacture large quantities of excellent coarse potteryware, whence the island is frequently named the Potter.

MOTILLO (Latin, Mastello), a tn. Naples, prov. Otranto, dist. and 16 m. N.W. Otranto. It is the see of a bishop.

MOTRICO a vil. Spain, Biscay prov. Guipuzcoa, 81 m. N.W. Tolosa, on the Bay of Biscay, and W. bank of the estuary of the Deva. It has two squares, several palaces, two townhouses, and two small prisons, two primary schools, and a handsome church. It was a place of considerable commercial importance, and there are traces of its having been walled. In 1603, it was almost entirely burned by accident. P. 8900.

MOTRIL a city, Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 88 m. S.E. Granada, about 1 m. from the Mediterranean lat. 35° 42' N., lon. 5° 34' W. It is irregularly built, in some parts the streets are narrow and crooked, in others open, unlighted, dirty, and neglected while in others again they are broad and straight, and the houses of a better description. It has a townhouse, granary, and ill proportioned collegiate church all in the great square a barracks, a fish-market, a manumy, with a pretty church, several suppressed convents, whose churches are used as chapels of ease, various schools for primary and advanced education, and a neglected hospital. In the neighbourhood are several hermitages. The port of Motril is generally understood that of Alhondra, about two leagues, and the reach of Granada, whose vessels under 50 tons load and unload, and which are defended by a castle. The wharves at the latter is only safe from some winds.

Motson is the depot for the exports and imports of the provinces of Granada and Jaen. On an average of the two years 1844 and 1845, 244 vessels, of 8160 tons, entered this port, and 232, of 5599 tons, cleared, the chief articles of import being rice, baked corn, sugar, cinnamon, cacao, coal, leather, iron, and cotton and woollen tissues; and the chief exports, oil, figs and raisins, oranges, wine, brandy, corals, carpets, lead, tannery, dry-wood, &c. Agriculture employs the greatest portion of the inhabitants. There are two sugar manufactories—one of rum, made from honey or sugar-cane, the former being the best—two soap-works—nine pottery, about 120 looms for coarse cotton, 18 hakebones, four flour and four oil mills. Pop. 18,170.

MOTSONAK, a market in Hungary, co and 8 m. S.W. Munkacs; with a handsome summer residence of the bishop of Munkacs, to which the whole place belongs. Pop. 1748.

MOTTA, numerous places kingdom of Italy particularly—1, A. to gov and 26 m. N.W. Venice, r bank Livenza, the seat of several district courts and offices, with a parish church, two sanctuaries and an oratory manufactures of linen and hats, and dry-works. Pop. 1800.—2, (Visconti) prov and N.W. Pavia, near l. bank Ticino, with two churches, and several industrial establishments. Pop. 3350.

MOTTA, several places, Naples, particularly—1, (San Giovanni) A. to prov Calabria-Ultra l., 7 m. S.E. Reggio. P. 1140.—2, (St. Lucia) A. to prov Calabria-Ultra l., dist. and 9 m. N.W. Nicastro. P. 8150.—3, (St. Anna) A. to. Slotty, prov and 6 m. W. N.W. Catania with a remarkable basaltic rock in its neighbourhood P. 1450.—4, (Coronata) A. to Slotty, prov and 86 m. S.W. Messina, near the N.E. side of Mount Etna. P. 1390.

MOTTA-ALCANTARA a vill and com Italy, Piedmont, prov and about 7 m. from Aosta with three churches a castle, and a trade in corn, wine, and wool. Pop. 1434.

MOTTA D'AFFRERO a vill and com. Slotty, prov Messina, dist. and 4 m. W. Mistrretta. Pop. 1554.

MOTTA DI CORTE, a vill and com Italy, Piedmont di Novara, prov and about 9 m. from Verelli with an ancient Gothic church, a small castle, and a trade in corn and maize. Pop. 1280.

MOTTE-SHROVEX a in France dep Savoie 4 m. N.W. Chambéry situated partly on a hill and partly on an unhealthy plain, with a church, and a trade in cattle and dairy produce limestone quarries, and seams of lignite. Pop. 8711.

MOTTISFOAT, par Eng. Hants; 2759 ac. Pop. 556.

MOTTISTON, par Eng. Hants 1107 ac. Pop. 143.

MOTTILING or METILKA (Latin, Motulka) a in Austria, Illyria, duchy Carinthia, 48 m. S.E. Laybach, near the Kailash; with a castle and a church. P. 1000.

MOTTRAM or LOMBARDIA, a town and par. England, co. Chester. The town, 3 m. E. by S. Manchester is built chiefly of stone has a spacious court-room, an Established church, three dissenting chapels, two extensive print-works, and several large cotton factories in which the great body of the inhabitants are employed. Pop. 5247. Area of par, 23,979 ac. Pop. 23,364. (Local Correspondent).

MUTZINGEN a vill Württemberg, circle Schwarzwald, 5 m. S.W. Herrenberg; with a church and a small castle. Pop. 1038.

MOUDON, or MUDER (Latin, Mundum), a town and par Switzerland cant. Vaud, on the Broye, crossed by a stone bridge, 14 m. N.E. Lausanne, overlooked by the old castle of Oranges. It has a church, townhouse, and a square tower, which once formed part of a castle, built in 1103, by Count of Neuchâtel several markets, and a considerable inn-trade. Pop. 1367.

MOUGHTREY par Wales, Montgomery 5025 ac. P. 519.

MOULDEN, or FUMERAN, a town in China, cap. Manchuria, and par Liao-Tung or Shikling, on a branch of the Man, about 500 m. N.E. Peking; lat. 41° 50' N.; lon. 123° 37' E. It is surrounded by an external wall about 10 m.

Virt. 11

to circum, and has also an inner wall 3 m. in circuit, enclosing the emperor's residence, the government offices, courts, and other buildings connected with them, which are all arranged on a plan similar to those of Peking. In 1631, the Manchoo monarchs made Moulden the seat of government, and succeeding monarchs have done much to enlarge and beautify it. The port, Kinchen about 45 m. S., near the Gulf of Liao-Tung in the Yellow Sea, has a considerable trade in cattle, pulse, and drugs. See LIAO-TUNG.

MOULS (Lis) a town and port, lat. Guedeloupe, N.E. coast, div Grande-Terre, r bank, and at the mouth of a small river; lat. 16° 21' N. lon. 61° 27' W. Pop. 10,000.

MOULIN, par Scot. Perth, 16 m. by 7 m. P. 3022.

MOULINS, numerous places, France, particularly—1 (near Allier) (Latin, Ros Gervon), cap. dep. Allier, in a fertile plain, r bank Allier, here crossed by a handsome bridge, 164 m. S.E. Paris. The streets, in general are neither regular nor wide, but they are clean, tolerably paved, and lined by good houses, built of brick. It has some good squares, numerous fountains, a cathedral, a college occupying the buildings of a convent, founded by the dukes of Montmorency; the remains of the ancient famous castle of Moulins, the barracks, public Hotel de Ville, and general hospital, a court of first resort and commerce a consulting chamber of manufactures, society of rural economy agricultural society, college, primary normal school, and gratuitous school of design, manufactures of excellent cutlery, hardware, both in silk and cotton, eight, articles in ivory, woolen and cotton covers, worsted and cotton mills, rope works, and a tannery; a trade in iron, wood, charcoal, coal, wine, salt, cattle, swine, &c. Pop. (1852) 14,781.—2 A. to, dep. Nord, properly only a suburb of Lille. Pop. 4317.—3 (en-Ghêvre) A. to dep. Nièvre, at the confluence of the Gers and Guignon, 33 m. E. Nièvre, with the remains of a strong castle, a spacious and handsome church, manufactures of coarse woollen cloth, serge, linen, bombazine, and leather, and a trade in corn, wool, leather and cattle. Pop. 1542.

MOULMAIN MAGALHAES, or MOULMAIN a seaport in India beyond the Ganges, Tanasserim coast, lat. 16° 30' N., lon. 97° 37' E. (s), at the mouth of the great river Salween or Thanlyin, with the island of Bala directly opposite. It is about 200 ft. above the level of the river, has a good harbour and a considerable trade. Its chief exports consist of teak-timber, rice, tobacco, stick lac, betel-nut, ivory, cocconuts, and live-stock. The imports consist mostly of European cotton goods and marine stores. The principal trade is with Calcutta, Madras, Rangoon, and Penang, but a portion has of late years been directed to London. It was founded in 1625, by the British, as a military station but, being equally well situated for trade, has become a flourishing seat of commerce. Pop. 10,000.

MOULMAIN.—From the Illustrated London News.

MOULSEY, par England. See MOULSEY.

MOULSFORD, par Eng. Berks, 1489 ac. Pop. 168.

MOULSOE, par Eng. Berks, 1180 ac. Pop. 263.

MOULTAN a city, Punjab. See MOULTAN.

MOULTON five para. Eng.—1, Lincoln; 12,785 ad. Pop. 2558.—2 Norfolk; 1918 ad. Pop. 238.—3 Northampton 1860 ad. Pop. 1811.—4, Suffolk; 5164 ad. Pop. 498.—5, (West R. 2500) Norfolk; 1947 ad. Pop. 471.

MOUNT para. Wales; Cardigan; 1142 ad. Pop. 141.

MOUNT BURN, par. Eng. Essex, 1404 ad. Pop. 379.

MOUNT CANON, a vil., U. States, Illinois, r bank Wabash, 66 m. S.E. Springfield; with a courthouse, jail, two churches, an iron-foundry and several mills. P. 1300.

MOUNT-CHAMBERS, a small tn. Ireland, co. and 8 m. W. Donegal; with a market-house and school. Pop. 539.

MOUNT DUNSTON, an isl. U. States, Maine, 28 m. S.E. Presque Isle, 15 m. long, by 13 m. broad, soil fertile. It has several excellent harbours, and employs a considerable amount of shipping in the coasting trade and the fisheries.

MOUNT EMBROUZE, and MOUNT EMBURY, two mountains in the N. island of New Zealand. The former, also called Patuwaki, is situated immediately S. of the Bay of Plenty, on the parallel of 38° S. and meridian of 177° E. and has a height of 10,000 ft. The latter, called also Tararua, situated considerably E. of the Cape of same name; lat. 39° 40' S.; lon. 174° 15' E.; a volcanic and consists of a singular, almost conical, but is about 80 m. in diameter, rising from a generally level country to the height of 8840 ft. Numerous torrents rush down its sides into the sea.

MOUNT HOLLY, a vil., U. States, New Jersey, 18 m. S. Trenton; with a courthouse, jail, five churches, a woolen factory, and several mills. Pop. 1300.

MOUNT SHANNON, a vil. Ireland co. and 35 m. S.E. by R. Galway; with a parish church, R. Catholic chapel, and market-house. Pop. 861.

MOUNT VERNON, numerous places, U. States, particularly a vil. Ohio, 51 m. N.E. Columbus; with a courthouse, jail four churches, several mills, and two printing-offices. Pop. 2362.

MOUNTFIELD par. Eng. Sussex, 3841 ac. P. 761.

MOUNTMELLICK, a market to Ireland, Queen's co. 45 m. W.S.W. Dublin almost surrounded by the small river Ouseway. It has a neat courthouse, a spacious union work house, and a considerable barracks a handsome chapel of ease, a neat R. Catholic chapel two Methodist chapels, and a Friends meeting house several schools a national instruction society and a dispensary; manufactures of flannel and coarse woollen cloths, soap and candles, a large brass and iron foundry and a flour-mill. P. 3657.—(Local Correspondent).

MOUNTNESSING par. Eng. Essex, 4005 ac. P. 645.

MOUNTON—1, a par. Eng. Monmouth 407 ac. Pop. 67.—2, a par. Wales, Pembrokeshire 880 ac. Pop. 23.

MOUNTREATH, a decaying market tn. Ireland, Queen's co. 69 m. W.S.W. Dublin on an affluent of the Nore, surrounded with extensive bogs on the one side, and on the other by the Ballyfin mountains. It has a market-house, a courthouse, and a school; a parish church a R. Catholic, and a Methodist chapel; and several schools. Inhabitants chiefly employed in cotton and worsted weaving and carding wool. Pop. 3079.—(Local Correspondent).

MOUNTS BAY, in the English Channel, on the S.W. coast of Cornwall, formed by two large promontories, of which that on the E. terminates in Lizard Point, and the other, in the Lizard Head. The most remarkable object within the bay is St. Michael's Mount, from which it takes its name.

MOUNTSOREL, a market tn. England, co. and 7 m. N. Leicester with two Established churches, Methodist and Baptist chapels, national, free, and infant schools considerable manufactures of stockings, and, near it, extensive and valuable quarries of granite. Pop. 785.—(Local Correspondent).

MOUZA, a walled cn. Portugal, prov. Algarve, 22 m. E.N.E. Beja, about 2 m. E. the Guadiana. It has some manufactures, and carries on a considerable trade with Spain. Pop. 2660.

MOURAO, a tn. and par. Portugal, prov. Alentejo, com. Elvas, not far from L. bank Guadiana, 83 m. S.E. Beja. It has a handsome square, several spacious streets, and is defended by a castle. Pop. 1400.

MOURCOURT a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 88 m. W.W. Mons; with a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1768.

MOURNEABBEY par. Ire. Cork; 11,456 ac. P. 3463.

MOUREZOUK, MAMMOUR, or MORMAK, a vil., N. Africa, cap. of Fezzan lat. 26° 50' N; lon. 14° 15' E.; in a low sandy, and unhealthy situation, subject to the effects of neighbouring sea salt lakes, and, at times, to the intolerable heat of 132° to 138° in the shade. It appears to have been anciently built of stone, but now consists principally of Arab wattage or huts of earth and sand. It contains extensive ruins of ancient buildings and is surrounded with a high wall, constructed here for purposes of defence than for levying duties upon all commodities which enter the city. It is well supplied with water a small stream passing the walls, and there being besides, numerous springs. It was once one of the greatest seats of the inland commerce of this part of Africa, and the emporium of most of the intercourse between the N. and E. regions of that continent. A great part of this traffic is now transferred to other places, but it still maintains an important commercial position being the last place in the caravan route from Tripoli to Bornou where proper supplies of food, camels, &c., can be obtained. Pop. 8600.

MOUSECRON or MOUSECRON a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. W. Flanders, 5 m. S. S.W. Courtray, near the junction of the railways from that town to Lille and Tournay. It is well built and has a large calico and manufacture of woollen and cotton stuffs, tobacco pipes, mustard, refined salt, bricks, hats, chocolate, candles, culinary leather, oil, &c. Pop. 5672.

MOUSEHOLE, a vil. England, co. Cornwall, at the foot of a hill on the sea-shore opposite to St. Clement's Isle, about 3 m. S. Penzance, and, though now an insignificant place, poorly built is one of the oldest in the country, and was of some importance, till destroyed by the Spaniards during the reign of Elizabeth, in 1595. Its only public edifice is a Wesleyan chapel. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the pickling and packard fisheries. The port is defended by two batteries. Pop. 1014.

MOUSE, a tn. Asiatic Turkey. See Mice.

MOUSEUL, a tn. Asiatic Turkey. See Mosul.

MOUSTIER, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, on the Rome 25 m. N.W. Mons with manufactures of linen and hosiery, breweries, a flour-mill, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1843.

MOUT par. Scot. Shetland, 6000 ac. Pop. 686.

MOUT a tn. Asiatic Turkey. See Mosul, 68 m. S.E. Kocis lat. 36° 40' N; lon. 38° 25' E. on the site of an ancient Greek city, of which some interesting memorials still exist, presenting in the grandeur of their features, a melancholy contrast to the tatter squalor and wretchedness of the present town. The obelisk, temples, and other public buildings of the ancient city, may be still clearly distinguished, with long colonnades and porches, while marble pillars lie half-buried in the different parts, or support the remains of ruined mosques. It has a castle, the walls of which are surrounded by battlements flanked with square towers.

MOUTA, a tn. and par. Portugal, prov. Alentejo, on a creek formed by the mouth of the Tagus, 10 m. S.E. Lisbon. It has an annual fair. Pop. 1900.

MOUTAPILLY, or MUPALAY, a tn. Hindoostan, at the E. extremity of the Coromandel, 180 m. N. Madras, with an extensive coasting trade.

MOUTIER-GRANDVAL, or MUTHIER, a vil. and par. Switzerland, can. and 23 m. N. Bern, L. bank Rhine; in a valley of great beauty, and said to derive its name of Moutier from the ancient Minister of St. Germaine, founded in the 7th century, and occupying a height in its neighbourhood, but fast falling to ruin. A good many of the inhabitants are employed in weaving ribbons, and spinning silk and cotton. A number of curious petrefactions have been found here, and form an interesting private collection. Pop. 1298. See Mithras.

MOUTIERS, a tn. France, dep. Savoie, formerly cap. prov. of same name, on both sides of the lake, here crossed by two bridges, at the point where four valleys meet, 55 m. N.E. Chambery. It is the see of a bishop, the seat of a court of law, and several important public offices, and has two churches, one of them a cathedral; an episcopal palace, two monasteries, a diocesan seminary, a royal college, hospital, prison, and barracks, important silk-works, and a trade in horses, cattle, and mules. Pope Innocent V. was born here. Pop. 2680.

MOUEBAUX, a tn. France, dep. Nord, 6 m. N. E. Lille, with manufacture of calico, satin, granula, and best-rot sugar. Pop. 2149.

MOUY, a tn. France, dep. Oise, 6 m. S. W. Clermont, on the Thérain. It is the centre of important woollen manufactures consisting chiefly of the broad-sleeve and coarse serge, molendins, marlins, &c., and has several worsted and felling mills. Pop. 2292.

MOUZON, (Latin, Mosagnum Remorum) a tn. France, dep. Ardennes, 3 m. S. E. Sedan, pleasantly situated among meadows, r bank Meuse, here crossed by a stone bridge, and on the canal of Meuse. It is a very ancient and all-built place, and has an old and interesting parish church manufactures of woollen cloth and cotton hosiery several tanneries, distilleries, and fulling-mills, and a trade in honey. Pop. 1835.

MOUZANGAIE, a tn. Madagascar, N W coast S. side the Bay of Bombastak lat. 10° 10' S.; lon. 45° 40' E. It is an ancient place, and was, in 1834, a place of some consequence, possessing a population of 10,000 but has been since pillaged by the Hovas, and left almost in ruins. It has still seven mosques, of which three only are used, and a trade in silk, imported by the Arabs and Moors of the Persian Gulf. Pop. about 1000.

MOVIDDY, par. Irel. Cork, 6183 ac. Pop. 1547.

MOVILLE, two par. Irel. —1, (Lower) Donagall, 15 950 ac. P. 5204 —2, (Upper) Donagall, 19,982 ac. P. 4418.

MOVILLE a small market tn. and favourite sea-bathing resort, Ireland, co. Donagall, beautifully situated W shore Lough Foyle 9 m. N. E. Londonderry. Pop. 778.

MOW, a tn. Hindoostan. See Mow.

MOWAL —1, A tn. Hindoostan, presid. Bengal, prov. Behar, 7 m. E. Patna lat. 26° 34' N.; lon. 79° 7' E. —2, A vil. Hindoostan, prov. and 30 m W N W Agra with a large mud fortress, and on a hill about 2 m. distant, another and more formidable one.

MOWEE, one of the Sandwich Is. See MAUI.

MOWNEY, par. Irel. Tipperary, 1522 ac. Pop. 890.

MOXOS, a large prov. in N. of Bolivia, dep. Beni, having T. Smith, N. and W. Peru, and E. Brazil. Chuquitos and Santa Cruz. It extends on each side of the Mamore which passes nearly through its centre. The Beni also traverses its W. side, and numerous other streams intersect various points. It has also many lakes, all surrounded to some considerable extent by swamps. The country is inundated for more than four months in the year, namely, from December to April. The climate is hot, moist, and unhealthy. Excepting along the banks of the streams which are higher than the intervening surface, there are, in general, no woods, while the flat tracts depressed below the general level, of which there are many, are covered with impenetrable reeds and rushes. The territory is chiefly inhabited by wileks and wandering tribes of Indians, who forbid access to its interior.

MOY, a river Ireland, rising in co. Sligo, and after flowing N. and W. through that co. and Mayo, enters Killala Bay after a course of about 40 m. It is navigable to Ballina, or 6 m. from its embouchure.

MOY, a market to Ireland, co. Tyrone, 5 m. S. by E. Dungannon, on the Blackwater, with a handsome market-place, a courthouse, an elegant church, a large R. Catholic chapel, places of worship for Independents, Methodists, and Wesleyans, and several schools; manufactures of linen, and a little trade in wool, corn, timber, and slate. Pop. 857.

MOY, and DALLASGARR, par. Irel. Enniscorthy, 26,000 ac. Pop. 957.

MOYA —1, A tn. Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 28 m. N. Barcelona. It consisted of 500 houses prior to 1835, when it was burnt by the Carlists; now it contains only 350, some of them unoccupied, primary and grammar-schools, a church, and an hospital. It has manufactures of woollen and cotton fabrics, and three flour-mills. Pop. 2649.—2, A tn. composed of a multitude of villages, lat. Grand Canary, with two primary schools, an oratory two hamlets, and a church. The inhabitants obtain a precarious subsistence by seafaring, and providing the capital of the island with game, such as wild pigeons, rabbits, and partridges, of which there are great abundance. It has seven mills for grinding toasted millet, whilst, after undergoing that process, is called gofa, and constitutes the chief article of food. Hundreds of the inhabitants sometimes emigrate to America, to avoid perishing of hunger. Pop. 8700.

MOYACOMB, par. Irel. Caidow, Wicklow, and Wexford 17,485 ac. Pop. 3616.

MOYALIFF, par. Irel. Tipperary, 3022 ac. P. 2429.

MOYANA, par. Irel. Queen's co., 8224 ac. P. 1288.

MOYARTA, par. Irel. Clare, 16,511 ac. Pop. 5227.

MOYBOLGUR, par. Irel. Meath and Cavan 6761 ac. Pop. 2104.

MOYCARKY, par. Irel. Tipperary, 3336 ac. P. 780.

MOYDOW, par. Irel. Galway, 32 596 ac. P. 5067.

MOYDOW, par. Irel. Longford, 4626 ac. Pop. 1218.

MOYGAWNAGH, par. Irel. Mayo 10,269 ac. P. 1181.

MOYGLAKE, par. Irel. Meath 4589 ac. Pop. 299.

MOYLAGH, par. Irel. Meath 7457 ac. Pop. 1938.

MOYLAKE, par. Wales, Pembroke, 2449 ac. P. 458.

MOYLAKE, par. Irel. Westmeath 1726 ac. P. 250.

MOYLLOUGH, par. Irel. Galway 21,387 ac. P. 5149.

MOYMET, par. Irel. Meath 3225 ac. Pop. 490.

MOYNE, two par. Irel. —1, Par. and tn. Tipperary, 5314 ac. P. 1758.—2, Par. Wicklow 8463 ac. P. 773.

MOYNE RIVER, a river S. Australia, Portland Bay dist. It falls into Port Fairy at the town of Belmont, lat. 142° 15' E.

MOYNE, par. Irel. Clare, 9860 ac. Pop. 1055.

MOYOBAMBA, a tn., V. Peru, dep. Trucillo r bank river of same name, 56 m. E. by S. Chacabamba, lat. 8° 30' S. Cotton, sugar and tobacco grow in great abundance in the vicinity and fruit is plentiful.—The river is an affluent of the Huallaga, it rises in Ecuador, prov. Maynas, lat. 6° 50' S. and, flowing S. E. falls into the Huallaga, in lat. 7° 8' S., total course above 140 m.

MOYRE, par. Irel. Galway, 100 932 ac. Pop. 8058.

MUDA, a tn. and par. Portugal, prov. Trucillo, 6 m. E. Mossero. Iron is mined in the neighbourhood. Pop. 420.

MOZGHAN, a tn. Hindoostan, principality and considerably S. W. Bahawalpur. It is defended by a lofty fortress built of kiln-burnt bricks.

MOZ (Pomro de), a tn. Brazil, prov. and 230 m W S W Para, r bank Xingu, about 16 m. above its junction with the Amazon, with a handsome church, a prison and a port, where the canoes halt on their way from Para to prov. Goias. Pop. 4000.

MOZAMBIQUE, E. Africa. See MOZAMBIQUE.

MOZDOK, a tn. Asiatic Russia, gov. Caucasus, r bank Terek, 148 m N N W Tiflis. It is very indifferently built, most of the houses being of wood, plastered with clay covered with straw, and only one story high, but has rather a cheerful appearance, in consequence of the beautiful and well-stocked gardens which everywhere surround the houses. The best edifice is a R. Catholic chapel; there is also a Russian church. The inhabitants live chiefly by the products of their gardens and vineyards, and by the manufacture of morocco leather, and a kind of spirit prepared from grapes. There is also some trade, Mosdok being a small emporium between Russia and the Caucasus and Georgia. Pop. (1849) 10,869 chiefly Armenian, Georgian, and Circassian.

MOZET, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 4 m. E. Namur, on the Sambre. It has manufactures of copperware, a blast-furnace, and other iron-works as well as three flour mills. Iron and pipe-clay are mined in the vicinity, and many of the inhabitants are employed in burning timber. P. 1781.

MOZET, a tn. Bohemia. See Bohemia.

MOZTE, or Mozte, a tn. Russia, gov. and 145 m. S. E. Kinsk, on the Enget. Pop. 8000.

MOZZATE, a vil. and com. Italy, Lombardy, gov. Milan, prov. Como, near r bank Bosmina, with a church. P. 1611.

MBICHA, or Bumazanza, a vil. Bohemia, circle Blatow, on a small stream, 2 m. from Starokostan, with the remains of an old castle, and a mill. Pop. 1171.

MBIN, a tn. Russia, gov. and 80 m. S. S. E. Chernigov, r bank Ocher. Pop. 1800.

MBICEEN, a tn. Prussia, prov. Posen, gov. and 20 m. W N W Bromberg on the Middle Rhine and a lake, with two churches, a synagogue, and some manufactures of woollen and hosiery. Pop. 1084.

MISCHENO, or Messant (German, Wessant), a tn. Bohemia, circle Bunzlau, 72 m. N. N. E. Prague, with a church and an hospital. The chief employment is weaving. Pop. 1814.

MISLA, a tn. Algeria, in the Sahara, 119 m. S.E. Algiers. It is divided into six quarters, is intersected by the wady Malle, and has some jewellery, dyers, and wool-carders, all Jews. Pop. about 1500.—(Dunant).

MISLET, a tn. Russia, Georgia, in the angle formed by the confluence of the Aragvi with the Kur, 10 m. N.W. Tiflis. It is said to be one of the oldest towns in easternmost, tradition asserting it to have been inhabited by some of the earliest descendants of Noah, and was formerly the capital of Georgia, was 30 m. in circuit, and contained 80,000 men capable of bearing arms. It now consists of mean houses, many of them half, and some of them wholly underground, but has, among other remains of ancient magnificence, a spacious and beautiful cathedral, built in the form of a cross, with many walls, arches, and cupola, and still used for service after the Greek ritual, but in the Georgian language. Other objects of interest are the ruins of the ancient palace of the Georgian princes, and an old castle. Mislet is supposed to be the Artaban and Misletia of Pompey and Harmaeus of Fliny.

MISSETT, a market in Bohemia. See KOLBATEA.

MISTA, a river Russia, which rises in Lake Matina, goes Tver flows N enters gov Novgorod across which it pursues a circuitous course N.W. and falls into the N. shore of Lake Ilmen, about 7 m. S.E. Novgorod, after a course of 240 m. It is encumbered with cataraacts but is naturally navigable, and has been much improved by means of sluices and extensive cuttings. One canal gives a communication between Lake Matina and the Tverian, an affluent of the Volga, while another canal, by uniting the Msta and Volkhov, avoids the dangerous navigation of Lake Ilmen.

MISTISLAWA, a tn. Russia, gov and 55 m. E.N.E. Mokhov, r. bank Volga. It has six churches, three convents, a college, formerly belonging to the Jesuits and a synagogues, some manufactures of linen and a considerable trade with Erga, m. flax hemp, and corn. Pop. (1851) 6675.

MITZENSK, a tn. Russia, gov and 85 m. N.W. E. Orel, at the confluence of the Mtsna with the Zoucha. It is tolerably well built, has 11 churches and 2 convents, and a considerable trade in corn and hemp. Pop. (1854), 14,776.

MUCH (HAYMONA and BERNARDINA) two nearly-contiguous vils, Dalmatia, circs and 9 m. from Spalato, near the Dobrava, with a court of justice and a church. Pop. 1550.

MUCH WENLOCK England. See WENLOCK.

MUCHAMILL, a tn. Spain, Valencia prov and 4 m. N.E. Alicante, r. bank Castalla or Morogrove with a town house, prison, several elementary schools, a church, and four hermitages. Near it are numerous country houses with fine gardens belonging to the wealthy mahabads of Alicante. Pop. (agricultural) 9254.

MUCHELN, a tn. Prussia, prov Saxony gov and 10 m. W.S.W. Merseburg on the Gieselsbath. It has a parish church, a school house manufactures of woollen cloth, and a worsted-mill. Pop. 1086.

MUCHELNEY par Eng. Somerset 1068 ac. P. 340.

MUCHEROVAN, a tn. Asiatic Russia, Georgia, on a lofty height with a number of manikies or houses half underground. It is the head-quarters of a regiment, and generally the station of a battalion and has barracks, an hospital and, in the vicinity, an old church, built out of the rock, which has been converted into a powder-magazine.

MUCK, one of the Hebrides, Scotland, on Arran, 3 m. W.S.W. Isl. Egl., about 2 m. long by 1 m. broad shores in general, low and rocky, but rise, in some parts, into cliffs of considerable size; soil of the interior generally fertile. P. 68.

MUCKAIREN par Scot. Arran, 9 m. by 6 m. P. 788.

MUCKALEN, two vils. Irel. Kilkenny.—1, 8706 ac. Pop. 818.—2, 1129 ac. Pop. 489.

MUCKAMORE-GRANGE, par Irel. Antrim; 3922 ac. Pop. 1540.

MUCKART, par Scot. Perth; 4800 ac. Pop. 685.

MUCKING, par Eng. Essex; 2631 ac. Pop. 239.

MUCKLESTON par Eng. Salop and Stafford; 2651 ac. Pop. 1726.

MUCKRANOVA, or MURKANA, a tn. Hindoostan, prov and 85 m. N.W. Ajmer; with marble quarries, which are extensively worked.

MUCKROSS, a small peninsula, Ireland, co. Kerry, between the middle and lower Lakes of Killarney, containing the ruins of an abbey founded in 1440.

MUCKTUN, par Eng. Essex; 1025 ac. Pop. 108.

MUCKUDDKA, a vil. Hindoostan, prov Malwa, 113 m. N. by E. Oolha, in a circular basin, enclosed by steep hills, and accessible only by a N. and S. opening, each closed by a wall and gate. This opening is the only pass, for many miles, through a mountain ridge separating prov. Malwa from the Harowaty country, in Ajaier.

MUCKWANPOOR, or MACWANPOOR, a tn. Hindoostan, Nepal, cap. dist., 20 m. S. Kathmandoo, a place of considerable strength.—The nursery farms a belt, about 20 m. wide, immediately S. of the Nepal valley and the river of Banu, and contains partly of a rugged, hilly country, and partly of a level country called the Terai, which, with some poor, contains a large proportion of rich land.

MUCURI, a river, Brazil, which is formed by several small streams in the E. of prov. Minas-Geraes flows E., receiving the Tootoe-de-Bentos in the Cordillera-de-Almores; enters the town of Porto-Alegre, and falls into the channel between the reef of Farolado and the mainland m. lat. 16. 15. about 80 m. N. of the São Mateus total course, 160 m. Canoes can mount up as far as the Cordillera-de-Almores, and sloops take in their cargo a S. Porto-Alegre.

MUDFORD par Eng. Somerset 2030 ac. P. 429.

MUDGUL, or MURUTU, a tn. Hindoostan Nizam's dominions, 88 m. S.W. Hyderabad, cap. dist. It is an ancient place, which, as early as 1512 was ravaged by the Mahometans. It is still a place of considerable extent, and an important military station. The district belongs partly to the Nizam and partly to the British.

MUFF par and to Irel. Donegal, 16,030 ac. P. 3256.

MUGA several places Spain particularly:—(San Lorenzo de la Muga) A. valled in, Catalonia, prov and 31 m. N. Gerona. It is indifferently built, has a church the ruins of an old castle a primary school, two flour-mills, and a trade in corn oil and wine. Pop. 1207.

MUGAIDOR, a seaport in Spain, Galicia, prov and N.E. Coruña, on the S. shore of the r. or bay of Ferrol. It is a struggling, irregularly built place with a church, a mill, manufactures of linen and coarse twinning, an active fishery particularly of sardines, and a trade in fresh and salted fish. Pop. 1782.

MUGLE, a tn. and par Portugal prov Estremadura, 11 m. S. Santarem, on a stream of the same name, an affluent of the Tagus. Pop. 1070.

MUGLHA, a tn. Saxony circle and 80 m. S.E. Leipzig, on the Döllnitz with an ancient church, a chapel, castle, manufactures of linen a brewery, and three mills. P. 3765.

MUGLENDORF, a vil. Bavaria, Upper Franconia, 37 m. N.E. Nürnberg. Near it are several remarkable stalactite caves in which has been named the Franconian Switzerland.

MUGGENSTURM, a vil. Baden, circle Middle Rhine, ball and near Badstet, with a church. Pop. 1584.

MUGOLA, a tn. and seaport, Austria, Illyria, gov Istria, on the gulf and 5 m. S.W. Trieste, with a church, an elementary school and a small harbour which enables it to carry on some trade in wine, oil, and fish. Above the town stands the castle of Altunza. There are extensive salt-mines in the neighbourhood. Pop. 1437.

MUGGINTON par Eng. Derby, 6234 ac. P. 719.

MUGLITZ, or MUGLITZ, a tn. Austria, Moravia, circle and 20 m. N.W. Olmutz, r. bank March, on the railway to Prague. It has a church and poorhouse, manufactures of woollen cloth, and four mills. Pop. 4000.

MUGNANO, a tn. Naples, prov Terra di Lavoro, dist. and 8 m. E. Nola. Pop. 3600.

MUHALLITCH, MUHALITCH, or MUHALITCH, a tn. Asiatic Turkey, Anatolia, at the confluence of the Sanghavi and Edzoon, about 15 m. above their mouth, in the Sea of Marmora, and 85 m. W.S.W. Brusa, lat. 40° 15' N., lon. 28° 58' E. It consists of about 2000 houses, and, though possessed of few manufactures, carries on a considerable trade, particularly in silk, which is extensively reared in the surrounding districts. In 1840, the product of silk raised by Muhallitch, and its vicinity, amounted to 35,925 lbs. It has also a considerable trade in melons, and other vegetables, raised on the E. side of the Lake of Apollonia, and transmitted directly by water to the capital. Pop. about 11,000.

MÜHLBERG, two places, Prussia.—1. A tn., gov. and 53 m. E.N.E. of Merseburg, on the Elbe with a castle, three churches an hospital and a law court; inhabitants employed in agriculture and fishing. In 1547 the Protestants were sustained a ruinous defeat from the Emperor Charles V., and their leader Frederick John, elector of Saxony was made prisoner. Pop. 8848.—2. A vil., gov. and S.W. Erfurt, on the Weidenebach, with a church, a tile-work, limekiln, and two mills. Pop. 1145.

MÜHLBURG, a tn. Baden, circle Middle Rhine, about 1 m. W. Carlsruhe. It is an old place; with two churches, and manufactures of sherry and madder. Pop. 1450.

MÜELDORE, a tn. Upper Bavaria, cap. dist. on the Inn, 44 m. E.N.E. Munich, with a castle, four churches, two chapels an hospital, and orphan asylum; and some trade, particularly in corn. Pop. 1599.

MÜHLERBACH, MÜLBAACH, or SAACH. See SAACH. A tn. Austria, Transylvania, in the Saxons, 80 m. W.W. Hermannstadt. It consists of the town proper, surrounded by walls, with two gates, and of two suburbs; is defended by two forts, and built with considerable regularity. It has several churches, a Lutheran lyceum, and a Franciscan monastery; manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and a trade in wine. Pop. 4300.

MÜLHAUSEN two tns. Prussia.—1. A walled tn., gov. and 39 m. N.W. Erfurt, upon circle, in a fertile district, on the L. main. It has four churches, of which that called the High Church is the finest. a gymnasium, three hospitals, an orphan asylum, workhouse, and an institution for the education of neglected children. manufactures of linen and woollen cloth leather and tobacco, and several breweries, distilleries and oil mills. Copper and iron are worked in the neighbourhood. Minister the famous Anabaptist, who collected a deluded host of 80 000 men, and induced the Thuringians presents to rise in revolt; in 1524, when his head-quarters here. Pop. 19 728.—The circle is generally flat well wooded, and fertile. Area, 158 sq. m. Pop. 45,121.—2. A tn. gov. and 15 m. S.E.E. Kilmberg on the Doms, with a Protestant church and chapel. Pop. 1668.

MÜHLHAUSEN, or MÜLHAUSE (ann. Mülhausen) a tn. Bohemia circle Tabor, 45 m. S. by W. Prague with a castle, townhouse, two churches, three chapels, a school, manufactures of woollen cloth and earthenware and a beet-root sugar factory. Pop. 2194.

MÜLHEIM two places, Germany.—1. A vil. Hesse-Darmstadt, prov. Starkenburg, dist. and near Seligenstadt, on the Rodach, near its confluence with the Main. It has a church an ancient tower, tile-works, and numerous mills. Pop. 1296.—2. A tn. Württemberg, circle Schwabwald hall and 10 m. N.E. Tuttlingen, on the Danube. It has a church and two castles. Near it are iron-mines. Pop. 550.

MÜHLTRUFF or MÜLTRAUF a tn. Saxony, circle Zwickenau, hall and 10 m. W.W. Plauen with a court of justice, a castle, situated on a precipitous height. manufactures of linen and hosiery, tile works, a brewery and four mills. Pop. 1702.

MÜLSE, or MÜSA, a river Austria, which rises near a village of same name, in the N. slope of the North Alps, chiefly Salzburg, flows E.N.E. then S.E. through Styria into Hungary, passing Judenburg, Bruck, and Gröden and joins 1 bank Drave 35 m. E. Warasdin total course, 240 m. Its principal affluents are, on the left, the Liesing, Müra, and Lendra and on the right, the Sulm. Its current is very rapid, and unfits it for proper navigation, but it is much used for floating, and is well supplied with fish.

MÜHRENGEN, a vil. Württemberg, circle Schwarzwald, hall. Eberh. with a church and a castle. Pop. 1140.

MULDEN, a tn. Holland, prov. N. Holland, 7 m. S.E.E. Amsterdam, at the mouth of the Vecht, in the Zuider Zee. It is intersected by the Vecht, which is here crossed by a bridge, and has an old castle, two churches, an orphan hospital, and a boat-building yard, but the chief occupation is fishing; and trading in cattle from Friesland, Denmark, &c., which are landed here. Salt-boiling, formerly carried on, ceased in 1845. Pop. 1116.

MURRAYSONDE, par Scotland, co. Strirling; area, 7000 ac. Pop. 2647

MUIRKIRK, a vil. and par. Scotland, co. and 21 m. E.N.E. Ayr, on a branch of the Glasgow, Dumfries, and Carlisle railway. It has a neat and substantial parish, Independent, and two U. Presbyterian churches, important coal-works, blast-furnaces, and malleable and other iron-works. In the parish are three 'martyrs' stones, one of them that of John Brown of Priesthill so atrociously murdered by Claverhouse. Area of par, 30,000 ac. Pop. 2428.

MUKALLAH, a tn. Arabia. See MAKALLAH.

MUKELD a tn., cap. of the country of the Sagri Patana, in the N.W. of the Punjab; lat. 33° 10' N.; lon. 77° 50' E. about 20 m. above Kalahugh, at the apex of the angle formed by the junction of the Budawan with the Indus, and so close to the steep banks of the latter, that, during its periodical rise of about 50 ft.; it washes the lower story of some of the houses.

MUKRAN, a prov. Beloochistan. See MEHRAN.

MULA, a tn. Spain, prov. and 31 m. W. Murcia. It is the principal square of the city of the parish churches, the town-houses, prison, and clock tower. small square where markets are held, is a place, with arcades of stone and poplars. Besides the above the only public buildings and institutions are five primary schools, a grammar an hospital for the sick poor, a theatre, built in 1846, the parish church of St. Domingo, a picturesque-situated and beautiful monastery and a hermitage. Agriculture is the principal occupation, but there are two copper-mills, nine potteries four brandy distilleries, a soap manufactory, and various looms for woollen, linen, and hemp fabrics. Pop. 3910.

MULAYNE, a vil. Hindooistan, kingdom of Oriss. N.W. Lucknow. It is a large place, composed almost entirely of mud huts, huddled together in the most irregular manner.

MULBARION par Eng. Norfolk, 1845 ac. P. 557. MULDE, a river Germany which rises in the Erzgebirge, on the frontiers of Bohemia, flows N.W. across Saxony passing Zwickenau and Grunna, enters Prussia, and joins 1 bank Elbe at Dessau in Anhalt, total course about 130 m. affluents the Barten and Frisberg Mulde.

MULGRAYE, a cape and port, N.W. coast, Russian Asia, Behring's Strait. The cape, lat. 59° 45' N. lon. 138° 43' W. (n.) has anchorage for large vessels.

MULGRAVE ARCHIPELAGO an extensive archipelago, Pacific Ocean, extending between lat. 11° N. and 10° S. lon. 165° and 180° E. and comprehending the Radack, Radik, Mulgrave, Krusenstern, and Gilbert islands.

MULGRAVE ISLANDS, a group, N. Pacific Ocean above archipelago, about lat. 6° 14' N. and lon. 171° 55' E. They are of coral origin, and form a chain of atolls of a quadrilateral shape, which, on the E. side, has a double belt of islands. They are connected with each other at low water, and appear to have only two entrances—one St. for boats, and another for large vessels. The space within is navigable by every description of vessels, having generally a depth of 22 to 27 fathoms. The islands themselves, covered with coco-nut and bread-fruit trees, &c., have a very pleasing appearance.

MULHACEN a mn. Spain. See NEVADA (SUCREA).

MULHAUSEN (French, Mülhausen ann. Arbisch Mulhausen) a tn. France, dep. Haut Rhin 51 m. S.W. Strasbourg on the railway to Basel. It is divided into the old and the new town. The former stands on an island, formed by the Ill, which here divides itself into several branches, and is crossed by four bridges. It is in the shape of an irregular oval, very much elongated. The streets are generally winding, but tolerably wide, well paved, and clean, and lined with well-built houses. The principal buildings are the Reformed and R. Catholic churches. Hotel de Ville, and college. The new town S.E. of the old, extends from r. bank Ill to the Rhine and Rhine canal, which has here a spacious basin. The streets are spacious and regular. Till the middle of the last century the only manufacture of any consequence in the town was woollen cloth, but the manufacture of cotton prints and muslins having been introduced, has made much rapid progress, that Mülhausen now ranks as one of the most important manufacturing towns in France. In addition to the branches already mentioned, others have been introduced, particularly flowered silks, damask, and other linen, hosiery straw hats, stained paper, starch, parchment, and chemical products. There are also numerous woollen, flax, and cotton mills; printworks, bleachworks, extensive engine-works, and tannries, both for common and morocco leather. The trade is very important, and, in addition to the articles of manufacture, includes corn, wine, brandy, groceries, and raw cotton. MULHAUSEN possesses a court of commerce, consulting chamber of manufactures, conseil de prud'hommes, industrial society, and communal college. For many centuries it was the capital of a small republic belonging to the Swiss Confederation, but, in 1798, it dissolved its connection with the Confederation, renounced its independence and became incorporated with France. The celebrated mathematician, Lambert, was born here, and a column has been erected to him in one of the squares which bears his name. Pop. 28,716.

MULHAUSEN, two places, Württemberg, circle Neckar. The one is situated on the Rhn. in bail. Vaihingen and has a church. P. 939. The other, on the Neckar bail. Cannstadt, has a church and a castle. P. 907.

MULHEIM, several places Germany, particularly—1, (near-Rhein) A tn. Rhinisch Prussia, gov. and 8 m. N.E. Cologne, esp. circle, on the Rhine, here crossed by a suspension-bridge. It has two churches and a synagogues manufactures of silk, cotton, cambrics, tallow and wax candles, soap, leather vinegar and brandy and a trade, both general and transit, particularly in corn and timber, both sold and in plank. Pop. 5643. The canal is holy in the E, where it is traversed by the Sauerland Mountains but is well watered, and generally under cultivation. Area, 113 geo. sq. m. Pop. 89,724—2, (near-Euhr) A tn. Rhinisch Prussia, gov. and 10 m. N.E. Düsseldorf on the Ruhr which here becomes navigable, and is crossed by a chain bridge. It has three churches, a synagogues, and various manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, paper tobacco green soap, starch, and gun powder, a large factory at which steam-engines are made on an extensive scale, spinning mill and building yards, and an important trade, particularly in coal, which is worked in the neighbourhood. Pop. 10,181—3, (near-Mulheim) A tn. Baden circle Oberkirch, esp. dist., 16 m. N.N.E. Basel on the railway to Freiburg. It possesses a superior burgher school a casino, and a bathing establishment. Pop. 2692. Area of dist., 72 geo. sq. m. Pop. 20,979.

MULHOUSE, a tn. France. See MULSAUX.
MULHUPPANT, par. Irel. Dublin 4067 sq. P. n.o.
MULL, an isl. Scotland, one of the Hebrides, co. Argyll, open to the Atlantic on all sides except the E. where it is separated from the mainland by the Sound of Mull. lat. (N. W. point) 56° 56' N. lon. 6° 20' W. (a). It is so irregular in shape that it is scarcely possible to specify its average length and breadth. Measured a little N. of its S. shore, from W. to E., it has a length of about 28 m. whereas, near its centre, where it is deeply penetrated by Loch na Keal on the W., and less deeply by the Sound on the E., the whole distance from shore to shore is reduced to an isthmus of scarcely 4 m. Its greatest width, due N. and S., is about 21 m. area, 301 sq. m. It is the third in magnitude of the Inner Hebrides, and belongs to what Dr Macculloch has given the name of trap islands, the whole of its rocks being composed of trap, with the exception of a narrow belt of limestone stretching for a considerable distance, but not continuously along its S. shore and of the larger tract in its S.W. extremity forming the promontory of Roa, and composed, on its E. side, of quartz rock and mica slate, and, on its W. side, of granite and gneiss. But below the upper trap rocks a tertiary fossiliferous bed has been discovered, resembling on an earlier trap formation. The irregularity of form already referred to as characteristic of the shore, is displayed over the whole surface, which is broken throughout by mountain ridges, often rising by successive stages towards the interior. The culminating point is situated in Bannoch, which has a height of 3168 ft. Its great elevation makes it a very conspicuous object along the W. shores of Scotland, and more especially to vessels coming from the N. into the Sound of Mull, but, owing to the rounded form which the mountains generally present—these summits covered of bare heath, and the absence of deep and well-defined valleys—it would be difficult to find an equal extent of mountain land so devoted to grand or romantic scenery. Its most remarkable natural objects are its caves, several of which formed, apparently, by the decomposition of trap veins, are of great size, and its basaltic cliffs and arches, remarkable instances of which are seen at Carraig, on the S.E. coast. The soil, however, as might be anticipated from its constitution, is of great natural fertility.

THE GARRIGS ANCHORS AND BASALTIC CLIFFS MULL
From a Sketch by H. R. Graham, Esq.

and few parts of Scotland can boast of possessing better pasture, or rearing finer cattle. The extent of arable land is very limited and chiefly confined to the low grounds along the shore. The climate, though mild, is extremely humid, and the weather is subject to sudden variations. Strong gales and violent storms are of frequent occurrence. The greater part of the island is divided into stock farms, and great numbers of cattle, sheep, and horses are reared. The last have most been noted for their hardiness. At one period, the loss of the surface is said to have been covered with wood from neglect or mismanagement, it had almost disappeared but a better spirit now prevails, and plantations of larch, fir, and other trees, have recently been formed. The inhabitants not employed in pastoral or agricultural operations, are engaged in fishing particularly during the herring season. The coasts are also well supplied with white fish, and both salmon and sea-trout are found in the mouths of most of the streams, but notwithstanding the encouragements both by Government and individuals, the fisheries have not proved so successful as was anticipated and, from the absence of fall and regular employment, the circumstances of many of the inhabitants are not very comfortable. Ecclesiastically, Mull is divided into three parishes. It contains a number of villages, but the most important place is Tobermory near the N.E. extremity of the island. Pop. 8920.—THE SOUND OF MULL connects Loch Linne, and Loch Sunart separates the island of Mull from the district of Morven is about 17 m. long, by 1 m. to 5 m. broad, and contains several islands.

MULLACREW, a vill. Ireland, co. Louth 8 m. S.W. Dundalk, with several fairs. Pop. 627.
MULLAGH par. and m. Irel. Cavan 12,873 ac. P. 4427.
MULLAGHBRAK, par. Irel. Armagh, 7901 ac. Pop. 4694.

MULLARY par. Irel. Louth 8637 ac. Pop. 885.
MULLETT a peninsula, W. coast, Ireland, co. Mayo united to the mainland by a narrow isthmus formed between Black Bod Bay and Broadhaven.

MULLIGAU a tn. and strong fortress Hindostan prov. Candahar, on the Mucy, 75 m. N.W. Armgahed lat. 31° 51' N. lon. 74° 56' E. It was surrendered to the British, after an obstinate resistance, on June 14 1818.

MULLINACUFF par. Irel. Wicklow; 6616 ac. P. 1320.
MULLINAHONE, a market tn. Ireland, co. and 26 m. E. Tipperary with church, R. Catholic chapel, and the remains of an ancient monastery. Pop. 1306.

MULLINAVAT, a vill. Ireland co. and 20 m. S. by E. Killybeggy, with a church, R. Catholic chapel and several fairs. Pop. 599.

MULLINGAR, a market tn. Ireland esp. co. Westmeath, finely situated on the Roona, 44 m. W. by N. Dublin, on the Royal Canal and the railway to Galway. It consists of one principal street about 1 m long with several subordinate ones diverging from it; houses, for the most part, are well built of stone, and slated. It has a handsome courthouse, jail infirmary, an extensive union workhouse, and barracks capable of accommodating 1000 men. A parish church with tower and spire, a beautiful and spacious R. Catholic chapel, and places of worship for Presbyterians and Wesleyans, a convent of presentation nuns, connected with which is a school, where 500 poor girls receive instruction; diocesan, national, and Protestant schools, two tanneries, a brewery, and a trade in wool and other articles. The remains of ecclesiastical buildings which flourished here at an early period attest the antiquity of the town. Area of par, 21 008 ac. Pop. 11 499.

MULLINS (Sw.) a par Ireland, Caidow and Wexford 21,151 ac. Pop. 5078.

MULLION par Eng Cornwall 4766 ac. Pop 706.

MULLROSE, or MULLROSA a m. Prussia, prov Brandenburg, gov and n. S.W. Frankfurt between two lakes, on the S side of a canal of same name, and traversed by the Schlaube, by which the lakes are connected. It has a church, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1818.

MULRANEY par Irel Wexford 2483 ac. 1 1285.

MULROY BAY, a deep inlet, N coast, Ireland, co. Donegal, between Lough S. Hill and Sheep-Haven about 10 m long. Its shores are remarkable for their beauty.

MULSEN, two places, Saxony.—1 (St Jacob), A vil circle Zwickau, about 8 m from Glauchau, well built with a church, manufactures of calico several bleachfields, hie-works, and cotton, saw oil and flour mills. Pop 8149.—2, (St. Nicolas) Near the former with a church manufactures of embroidery, and several mills. Pop. 2055.

MULTAN a city Panjab. See MONTANA.

MULTEDO a vil and com Italy Piedmont, div and about 6 m from Ganzo, with an ancient church a ruinous castle, manufactures of paper and cotton stuffs, a brass foundry and a trade in wine and chestnuts. Pop 1695.

MULTYFARNHAM, par and tn. Irel Westmeath 8978 ac. Pop 1080.

MUMBLES HEAD a promontory, England N side Bristol Channel, coast of Glamorgan forming the W entrance of Swansea Bay lat. (light) 51° 34' N lon 8° 58' 16" W (n). Its light has a height of 14 ft.

MUMBY, par Eng Lincoln 8620 ac. P 829.

MUMBLEWELL, a vil and par Switzerland, can. and 12 m. N N E. Solothurn, with manufactures of paper and playing cards, and a considerable trade in cheese. Pop. 1381.

MUNASSA, a tn. Hindoostan, prov Ajmer 97 m. E Odeypore 1440 ft. above sea-level. It consists of upwards of 1000 houses, and has a good bazaar. lat. 24° 28' N, lon 75° 16' E.

MUNCASTER, par Eng. Cumberland 8166 ac. P 693.

MUNCHBERG a tn. Bavaria, circle Upper Franconia, cap dist., on the Fulda, 18 m. N E. Bamberg. It has two churches, some linen and cotton manufactures, and four mills. Pop. 2200. Area of dist. 124 sq ac m. Pop. 21,859.

MUNCHBERG, a tn. Prussia, prov Brandenburg, gov and 20 m. N W Frankfurt, between lakes Fazole and Kirsche. It has two churches, and manufactures of bombasine. P 264.

MUNCHEN cap Bavaria. See MUNICH.

MUNCHENHAMPTON a tn. Germany, duchy Saxony Weimar 26 m. from Weimar, with a church, an hospital, and a mill. Pop. 1622.

MUNCHENBUCHSEE a vil and par Switzerland, can. and 6 m. N Bern with an old castle, now converted partly into a granary and partly into a parish church. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, rearing cattle and digging peats, of which large quantities are annually sent to Bern. Pop. 3216.

MUNCHENGATZ, a tn. Bohemia, circle Banská 49 m. N E Prague, on the Isère; with a large and handsome castle, three churches, and an hospital. A congress was held here in 1828. Pop. 900.

MUNCHHAUSEN, a vil. Hesse Cassel, Oberhessen 45 m. S.W. Cassel with a church, and five mills. P 1150.

MUNCHINGEN, a vil. Württemberg, circle Neckar, 6 m. N.W. Stuttgart; with a church, and a castle. P 1498.

MUNCHING (Sw.), par Irel Clare and Limerick 4564 ac. Pop. 3797.

MUNDACA, a tn. and com. Spain, Biscay. I. bank river of same name, near its mouth in the Bay of Biscay, 30 m. N E Bilbao. It has a small square, in which the public buildings stand, an ancient but handsome church, a courthouse, a public primary, and two private schools; manufactures of fish-bone, and a fishery, which gives employment to most of the inhabitants. Pop. 1683.

MUNDATTA, a small tn. Hindoostan, prov Malwa S. side of a tal in the Nerbudda, and famous for the sanctity of its pagoda, dedicated to Siva; lat. 22° 14' N lon 76° 17' E. The island, on which the town is built, is of moderate height, and was formerly fortified. The Nerbudda does not here exceed 100 yards in breadth but is extremely deep.

MUNDEE, MUNDO, or MUNDI a tn. Panjab, 160 m. E Lahore, lat. 31° 40' N lon 76° 53' E. near the confluence of the Sukty with the Beas. It contains the rajah's palace, surrounded by a beautiful garden containing a profusion of the finest fruit-trees and flowers, a large and well-stocked bazaar, and has near it, productive mines of iron and salt, whence the greater part of the prince's revenue is derived.

MUNDELSHEIM a vil Württemberg, circle Neckar, bell and N. Marbach, on the Neckar, in an excellent wine district, with a castle and a fine old church.

MUNDEN two pars Eng. Here.—1 (Great) 3862 ac. Pop. 554.—2 (Little) 2204 ac. 1 op. 628.

MUNDEN a walled tn. Hanover, gov. Hildesheim at the confluence of the Fulda and Weser, which united streams form the Weser, 14 m. W S W Göttingen. It has two churches and a chapel a synagogue, gymnasium, industrial school and an old castle, once the residence of the Gualpian ancestors of the royal family of Great Britain and now used as a magazine, manufactures of leather beer and brandy and a harbour, at which an important trade, both general and transit, once was carried on. Münden used to be one of the greatest linen marts in Germany, the annual sale within it amounting to the value of above £150,000. Pop. 4001.

MUNDEHEIM, a vil Bavaria, Palatinate, dist. Multerstadt. It has a church, and an active trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1940.

MUNDEH, a tn. to Hanover, principally Kalenberg, near the source of the Havel. It is an old place, and has an hospital and several salt springs. Pop. 1936.

MUNDELSINGEN a walled tn. Württemberg r bank Danube, 18 m. S.W. Ulm with three churches, manufactures of linen, muslin embroidery and wick yarn a bleachfield, and several mills. Pop. 2000.

MUNDESSOR, or MUNDUSSOR, a tn. and fort, Hindoo stan, prov Malwa, 86 m. S.E. Odeypore, lat. 24° 6' N lon 75° 8' E. The interior is in a ruinous condition but the walls and gateways are still good. The fort is a square of nearly 136 yards.

MUNDFOORD, par Eng Norfolk 2050 ac. Pop. 385.

MUNDHAM, two pars Eng.—1 Norfolk 1547 ac. Pop. 292.—2 (North) Sussex 1892 ac. Pop. 444.

MUNDLAH a tn. and fort, Hindoostan, prov Guml wana, I. bank Nerbudda, lat. 22° 43' N lon 81° 2' E. The town and fort are separated by an artificial ditch, and though formerly very strong, are now going to decay.

MUNDLEYSH, a tn. Hindoostan, prov Malwa on the Nerbudda, here crossed by a ferry 5 m. E. Mithalwar. It is enclosed by a mud wall defended by a wall built stone fort, and carries on a considerable trade, being the great commercial, as well as military thoroughfare between Hindoostan Proper and the Deccan.

MUNDO a river Spain which runs about 15 m. S.E. Alcaraz, in La Mancha flows S.E., and falls into the Segura in the district of Llorio, total course about 60 m.

MUNDON, par Eng Essex 4295 ac. Pop. 387.

MUNDLEY, par Eng Norfolk, 674 ac. Pop. 451.

MUNKEPOOL, or MUNKPOOL—1, A prov India. See CAMAY.—2 A tn. India, E. of the Ganges, formerly cap. of Camay in an amphitheatre of hills; lat. 24° 30' N lon. 84° 30' E. It was once a place of importance, though it now presents few indications of former greatness, except two broad and deep ditches, occupying the sites of the ancient palaces of the rajahs, and the residence of their principal officers, and still containing some small brick temples. It was taken by the British in 1774, and wrested from them by the British in 1825.

MUNERA a vil. Spain, prov and 28 m. N. W. Alhacete; with a townhouse, prison, elementary school, church, and hermitage. Pop. (agricultural) 2549.

MUNGABHTT, a fort, Persia, prov Khusistan, 78 m. S.E. Shuster near the source of the Jorahi; lat. 31° 27' N. lon. 50° 10' E. It stands on an isolated mass of rock, is difficult of access, and was of great celebrity during the Persian wars. The open ground on the summit of the rock is about 1/2 m. in circumference, and contains two perennial springs. Mungabht is the name, also, of a range of hills in Khusistan, a continuation of the Koppe chain; they are lofty and precipitous, the highest peak being within the range of perpetual snow, and are destitute of soil and vegetation.

MUNGHUB, a tn. Hindoostan, prov Ajmer, div Harwarree. It is enclosed by a stone wall, and has a large annual cattle fair. Pop. about 4000.

MUNGO (Sr.) par Scot. Dumfries 5000 ac. Pop. 640.

MUNGRET par Ireland, Limerick, 6149 ac. Pop. 2178.

MUNGUIA a vil. Spain, prov Buzay, 9 m. N. N. Bilbao, with a townhouse, prison and endowed elementary school for both sexes, an old palace, and two churches. Industry—agriculture, six flour-mills, and an iron-works. A fair for cattle is held the first Sunday of every month. Pop. (agricultural) 2010.

MUNGULGHEREE, a tn. Hindoostan, N. Circars, dist and 12 m. N. E. Guntoor. It consists of well-built houses, generally striped red and white, and has two temples—one half-way up the mountain, in great rapids for nearly the other at its foot with a gateway 160 ft. high, in the form of a slender obelisk.

MUNGULEAUT a tn. Hindoostan, prov Bengal, 1 m. N. Durrut. lat. 25° 58' N. lon. 88° 20' E. streets spacious, and houses good. Curious customs are manufactured here to a considerable extent.

MUNICH (German, München) the cap. city of Bavaria. It lies in an extensive but uninteresting plateau, about 1700 ft.

and is of a somewhat circular shape. It was at one time surrounded by walls and ditches, and entered by lofty walled gates. The ditches have been filled up, and the walls thrown down, but a few of the gates, with their loopholed and embattled flanking towers, still remain. The part of the town which may still be regarded as Munich proper, is traversed by two principal streets—the Sendlinger-Strasse, continued by the Theater and Ludwig-Strasse, S. W. to N. E., and the Marien-Strasse, running from W. to E. These streets, by their intersection, divide the town into four principal parts—

MUNICH THE ROYAL PALACE.—From Altheim, Muenchener in Pictorial.

Anger, on the S and S.E. Gruggenauer, on the E and N.E. Kreuz, on the N.W. and Hack, on the S.W. In this part of the town the houses are generally ancient, irregular both in size and form, and of quaint, but not picturesque architectural features, their fronts crowded with windows, and ornamented with stucco-work or rude fresco paintings, flanked with lantern-like projections or arched windows, at the corners, and surmounted by high roofs perforated with three or four tiers of small windows.

This ancient town, though it contains the Government offices, and many public edifices, is surpassed, both in extent and magnificence, by the new town, which has risen up, chiefly to the N and W, with almost unexampled rapidity and splendor, mostly under the patronage of the late king, Louis I., and made Munich, in proportion to its size, one of the finest cities and capitals of Europe. This new town, commenced within the present century, and on a site of the most unattractive nature, being little better than a swampy waste, already there than doubles the size of the old town. It contains many splendid edifices and collections, of which any capital might be proud, and has been built on a regular plan, previously arranged by the Government. The public edifices are so numerous

MUNICH

English, Munich

(see list of cities)

1. Koenigsplatz (Royal Palace)

2. Marienplatz

3. Hauptplatz

4. St. Michaels Church

5. St. Michaels Church

6. St. Michaels Church

7. St. Michaels Church

8. St. Michaels Church

9. St. Michaels Church

10. St. Michaels Church

11. St. Michaels Church

12. St. Michaels Church

13. St. Michaels Church

14. St. Michaels Church

15. St. Michaels Church

16. St. Michaels Church

17. St. Michaels Church

18. St. Michaels Church

19. St. Michaels Church

20. St. Michaels Church

21. St. Michaels Church

22. St. Michaels Church

23. St. Michaels Church

24. St. Michaels Church

above sea-level 1. m. N. 184 m. S.E. Frankfurt-on-the-Main; lat. (observatory) 48° 9' 45" N. lon. 11° 54' 55" E. (L.). The original nucleus of the town is situated near its center.

that little more can be done here than to specify the most conspicuous of them. These are the cathedral, a vast pile, entirely of brick, with two lofty towers, terminating in domes 333 ft. high; St. Michael's or the Jesuits church, a handsome Italian structure remarkable for its wide roof supported by pillars, and containing a fine monument to the Duke of Leuchtenberg, by Thorwaldsen, the church of the Theatines, another Italian structure, beneath which are the burial vaults of the royal family; the church of St. Lewis, a modern building of brick, faced with white marble, decorated externally with statues by Schwanthaler and internally by the finest frescoes of Cornelius, and lighted by windows of magnificent painted glass, in which the newest art, supposed at one time to be lost, is outvalued the church of All Saints, less massive and ambitious than the former, but thought to surpass it in elegance, the Royal Palace, consisting of an old central building of vast extent, but little architectural merit, and two splendid modern wings, the Gallery of Sculpture, or as it is somewhat pedantically styled, the Glyptothek, a church and classical modern edition of the Ionic order, by Von Klenze, containing an admirable series of the finest ancient and modern sculptures, formed entirely by the late king, out of his own private purse, and then given up to the public the Pinakothek or picture-gallery, another beautiful edifice by Von Klenze, possessing the additional merit of being admirably adapted to the end for which it was erected, containing one of the richest collections of pictures in the world to the greatest possible advantage the Jesuits college, the buildings of which now furnish accommodation for the museum of natural history and other cabinets, the university, the only one in Bavaria, attended by about 1400 students, and the library of 640,000 vols. including 16,000 MSS. the theatre with a lofty Corinthian portico, and the Odéon, a handsome edifice, devoted to musical entertainments. In addition to the public edifices, properly so called, Munich is rich in monuments, which adorn its squares, gardens, and public promenades. Several of these are in the Hofgarten, a large square enclosure, near the palace, finely planted, and surrounded by an open and richly ornamented arcade.

The manufactures are numerous, and in some particular branches, have acquired a high name. Among others may be mentioned mathematical, optical and surgical instruments gold and silver lace, jewellery glass, carriages, bells, musical instruments, iron and copper ware, leather and paper there are also numerous breweries, employed in making a beer which is famous over Germany, and forms a most important branch of trade. Munich having all the usual appendages of a capital, is the residence of ambassadors and ministers from all the different courts of Europe. The seat of the high courts of legislature and of law, and of all the more important offices of the state, and possesses numerous societies for the promotion of science, literature, and the fine arts. Its celebrity is almost entirely of recent creation and there is nothing in its annals deserving of particular notice. It is said to owe its origin to some salt warehouses, erected as entrepôts for the salt brought from Salzburg and Reichenhall, and to derive its name, München or Mithun from the monks to whom the warehouses belonged. Pop. 95,581

MUNICHOF, or BAKATAPURA a vil Hungary about 9 m. from Parsdorf with a trade in corn, wine, and timber Pop. 1122

MUNIESA, a tn. Spain, Aragon prov and about 50 m. from Tercel, with a handsome church, a townhouse, prison, and primary school. Pop. 1148.

MUNIT LA, a vil. Spain, Old Castile, prov and 38 m. N. E. Logroño. It has regularly built houses, but steep, narrow and crooked streets, a townhouse, prison hospital two elementary schools, two churches, and three hermitages manufactures of coarse cloth, falling-mills, and dye-works. Pop. 1728

MUNIPPOOR, Ind. see MUNKPOOR.

MUNKACS or MUNKASHO, a tn. Hungary Hither Thaus, on Beregh, cap. dist. in a plain on the Latoraua, here crossed by a long bridge, 75 m. E. S. E. Kaschau. It has a Protestant, a Greek, and a R. Catholic church, a Basilian monastery a synagogue, and an old castle manufactures of hooley important iron works, one of the largest sulphate-works in the monarchy, stone quarries, and a trade in wheat and wool. About 2 m. E. from the town, in a low and marshy plain, an isolated rocky steep suddenly rises to the height of 200 ft., and is covered by the remains of the celebrated strong castle of Munkacs, from which the town derives its name. Pop. 3223

Yon. II.

MUNKZWALM, a vil and com. Belgium, prov E Flanders, on the Swalm, 16 m. S. Ghent; with a brewery, an oil and flour mills. Pop. 1241

MUNNESTADT, a tn. in Bavaria, circle Lower Franconia, cap. dist., on the Lauer 87 m. N. E. Würzburg. It has a court of justice, three churches, two chapels a gymnasium, a Latin school, an Augustine monastery, an hospital all and other mills, and a trade in wine and hops. Pop. 1579 Area of dist. 64 sq. m. Pop. 12,748

MUNO a vil and com. Belgium, prov Luxembourg, 32 m. W. N. W. Arlon. Pop. (agricultural) 1587

MUNSINGEV a tn. Württemberg, circle Dambach, on the rough Alp, more than 3000 ft. above the sea, 30 m. S. E. Stuttgart; with a church, and an old castle. Pop. 1600

MÜNSINGEN, or MÜNSEN, a vil and par. Switzerland, can and 7 m. S. E. Bern, supposed to occupy the site of an old Roman town. It is named in more recent times, for the great meeting held at it in 1831, when a new constitution was adopted, and the rule of the oligarchy overthrown 1 op. 4928.

MUNLEY par Eng Hereford 1926 ac. Pop. 186

MUNBLOW par Eng Salop 3604 ac. Pop. 867

MÜNSTER, a gov. Prussia, prov Westphalia, bounded N. by Hanover E. gov. Minden, S. gov. Arnheim and Düsseldorf, and W. Holland. Area 2115 sq. m. The surface in the N. W., and particularly in the N. E., has extensive tracts of sand and heath, only occasionally broken by low ridges and isolated hills. It is more hilly in the N. E., where it is traversed by some of the most distant ramifications of the Teutoburger Wald. In other directions, sand, heath, and fertile plains alternate with each other, and are sometimes intersected by forests none of which, however are very extensive. The principal rivers are the Rhine and the Lippe. The principal minerals are iron and coal. The soil is, on the whole, only of indifferent fertility, and the corn produced, though generally equal to the consumption, in some districts falls far short of it. Potatoes are the most valuable and prevalent crops are hemp and flax. The pastures also are very extensive, and in the lower grounds, of rich feeding qualities, raising great numbers of live stock of all descriptions. The chief manufactures are iron, woollen, linen cotton and silk stuffs worsted and cotton yarn, hosiery, leather oil, lime, and earthenware. The government is divided into 10 circles. About six-sevenths of the whole inhabitants are R. Catholics Pop. (1849) 451,868.

MÜNSTER, a tn. Prussia, cap. prov Westphalia, and above gov. in a wide plain on the Aa, 78 m. N. E. Cologne, with which and with Hanover, it is connected by railway. It was once fortified, and is still entered by eight gates, though the fortifications have been levelled and planted, and now form agreeable promenades. It is in general tolerably well built the principal edifices are the cathedral an ancient Gothic structure, the three other churches of Oberwasser, St. Leger and St. Lambert, all in the purest Gothic, particularly the last, on the tower of which, the iron cage in which the Anabaptist leaders were suspended previously to their execution, still hangs, the townhouse, also a beautiful apical men of Gothic, with a colonnade running round its lower story, and a fine hall called the Frieden Saal, because the peace of Westphalia, in 1648 was signed in it; the exchange, museum, theatre, house of correction, and an old castle, formerly the bishop's palace, and now occupied by the commandant. As capital of the province, it is the seat of several important public establishments, particularly courts of law, one of which has jurisdiction over the whole province. It is also the see of a R. Catholic bishop, and possesses a R. Catholic high school, with philosophical and theological faculties, a gymnasium deaf and dumb institution, veterinary school, school of design, normal seminary and society for the encouragement of domestic history and antiquities. The manufactures consist chiefly of woollen, linen, and cotton goods, leather starch tobacco, and refined sugar. The trade, which is considerable, includes, besides the above articles of manufacture, wine, beech hams, &c.

Münster was long governed by independent bishops, in whom a warlike was often more conspicuous than a Christian spirit; but the most memorable events in the history of the town, occurred in 1535-36, when it fell into the hands of the Anabaptists, John of Leyden, Bernhard Knipperdolling, and Bernhard Knechtling, who, under the pretext of Christian freedom, taught the wildest doctrines, and practiced the grossest Socialist abominations. Pop. (1849) 24,864.

MUNSTER, a. n. France, dep. Haut-Rhin, in a narrow valley enclosed by hills, 10 m. W. S. W. Colmar, near the Pech. It has one of the largest cotton print-works in France, employing about 1200 hands; manufactures of calico, cotton and paper mills, and a trade in cheese, cherry brandy, butter, and cattle. Pop. 5625.

MUNSTER, the largest of the four provs. into which Ireland is divided, occupying the N. W. portion of that kingdom bounded N by OConnors and E Leitrim S. St. George's Channel and W the Atlantic Ocean. Greatest length E to W, 143 m. greatest breadth, N to S, 131 m. Area, 6,064,579 ac., of which 5,574,618 ac. are arable the remainder uncultivated land, plantations, towns, and water. It comprises the counties of Clare, Cork, Kerry, Limerick, Tipperary and Waterford. Its S. W. coast is extremely rugged, being deeply penetrated by bays and inlets, the most noticeable of which are Dingle Bay, the estuary of the Kenmare, Bantry and Dunmore Bays, all of which enter the land from 10 m. to 20 m. Pop. (1841) 2,396,161 (1851) 2,014,811.

MUNSTER, a vil. Hesse Darmstadt prov. Starkenburg near Offenbach with a church. Pop. 1886.

MUNSTER-THAL, two valleys, Switzerland. The one in the E. of can. Grisons, gives its name to a juradiction, is surrounded with very lofty mountains, and traversed by the Rhod. The other, which is also called Val Mousere, is situated in the N. W. of can. Bern and is among the most interesting and romantic valleys of the Jura, consisting of a series of narrow and rocky defiles, covered with black forests, and alternating with open basins, covered with verdant meadows and encircled by villages. It is traversed by the Rhod., and an excellent road from Basel to Neuchâtel.

MUNSTERBERG, a walled tn. Prussia, prov. Sillesia, gov. and 57 m. S. Breslau, esp. circle, r. bank Ohlau. It has several courts and offices two churches, a chapel, synagogue, and hospital some manufactures of tobacco a dye-works, and several mills. Pop. 4501. Area of circle, 103 sq. m. Pop. 81,777.

MUNSTEREIFFEL, a tn. Rheinish Prussia, gov. and 30 m. S. S. W. Cologne, on the Rht. and Eschweilerbach. It has five churches and chapels a gymnasium manufactures of linen leather and potash, a dye-works, and numerous mills. Pop. 1926.

MUNSTERHAUSEN, a market tn. Bavaria, circle Swabia r. bank Mandel, 23 m. W. Augsburg with two churches and a castle. Pop. 1270.

MUNSTERHAGEN, a vil. Baden circle Middle Rhine, gov. and 10 m. S. W. Coblenz. It has an ancient church, adorned with several statues two chapels manufactures of linen and leather, and a weekly corn market. The Roman emperor Caligula was born here. Pop. 1620.

MUTTE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders 9 m. S. Ghent with a brewery an oil and two flour mills. Pop. 1095.

MUNTENDAM, a vil. Holland, prov. and 15 m. S. E. Groningen, with a church and school. F. (agriculture) 1225.

MUNTERNAUGHT, a vil. Ireland, Gov. 6487 ac. Pop. 2214.

MUNTOK, Munrook or Muroo a tn. Indian Archipelago esp. Mol. Banca with a Dutch fort, government offices, a small trade, and a pop. in 1845, of 4000.

MUNZENHEIM, a vil. Baden circle Middle Rhine, gov. and near Bretten, with a church. Pop. 1145.

MUNZIFAT (Lath. Mous Fagi) a tn. Bohemia, circle Rakonitz with a townhouse and hospital. Pop. 1845.

MUNZKIRCHEN, a vil. Upper Austria, circle Ins. dist. and near Vöcklabruck. It is an ancient place, and has two churches. Pop. 900.

MUNOJO a river in N. of Europe, forming part of the boundary between Sweden and Russia. It issues from Lake Ajkila on the confines of Finmark in Norway, flows S. E. E., and after a course of about 170 m. joins the bank Tornet, at Paulo-Kangas. At the village of Muondelake, it forms a magnificent cascade, more than 100 ft. in height.

MUNONENKA a vil. Russia, Finland, dist. and 212 m. N. Uleaburg r. bank Muzio, of which there is here a cascade, 100 ft. in height.

MUOTTA THAL, a lofty secluded valley, Switzerland, can. Schwyz, traversed by the river and having for its chief place the village of Muotta, 4 m. E. S. E. Schwyz. The river furnishes water-power to several saw-mills, at which, among other articles, sounding-boards for pianos are cut. In this valley a sanguinary struggle took place, in 1799, between the French, under Lecourbe, Mortier and Massena, and the Russians, under Szwarnow. The latter was nearly hemmed in on all sides, but valiantly cut his way and made a most masterly retreat. Pop. 1555.

MUR, a river Austria. See MURRA.

MURAD a river Asiatic Turkey. See MORAD.

MURAFFA, a market in Russia, gov. Podolia, on a river of same name, 87 m. N. Isampol. Pop. 1800.

MURANO, a tn. and par. Italy Venetia, gov. and 1 m. N. Venice, on ist. of its own name the largest of those which are situated in the lagoons of Venice. It contains several remarkable buildings, among others the cathedral of San Donato, built in the 15th century and forming a fine specimen of the Byzantine style the church of San Pietro a San Paolo, and the palace of Trevisano. Murano was a place of importance in the beginning of the 16th century when it had acquired great celebrity particularly for its manufacture of glass, long regarded as the finest in Europe. The manufacture is still carried on but to a very limited extent, the principal article made being beads of which there are two large factories. Pop. 2000.

MURANYALLA, a vil. Hungary Hither Theiss, on Gonic 40 m. from Bessenau. It has a church, paper and saw mills and a trade in hemp, flax, and cattle. In the vicinity are iron-mines and iron-works, and there, also, fine crystals and garnets are found. Pop. 1213.

MURASKINA, a tn. Russia, gov. and 61 m. S. E. Nijel Novgorod with 14 churches and manufactures of soap, leather gloves, and articles in tin, silver and iron. P. 6080.

MURAT a tn. France, dep. Cantal, r. bank Allagnon, 24 m. N. E. Aurillac, near the foot of Mount Cantal. It is built on a steep rising steep, paved with slippery basalt, and surrounded by a high wall. It has a parish church, convent of Benedictines, now used as an hospital manufactures of coarse woollens and lace and a trade of some importance in wine and Cantal cheese. Pop. 2394.

MURAU or MURAU, a tn. Austria, Styria, circle and 61 m. W. by N. Grätz, on the Mur at the foot of a hill crowned by the castle of Ober-Murau. It has a Capuchin monastery, posthouse, hospital and extensive iron-works. Pop. 1500.

MURAUVA MURANA or MORANA, a vil. Isl. Sardinia, dist. and 18 m. N. E. Cagliari with several churches, a primary school manufactures of woollen linen and lampen cloth and a trade in corn, fruit, wood, and alum. P. 1980.

MURAZZANO a tn. Italy Piedmont, dep. Coni prov. and 12 m. E. Mondovì. It has a court of law three churches, a lofty square tower, forming part of an old strong castle, an hospital several schools, silk mills and a trade in wine, cattle, and dairy produce. Pop. 2890.

MURGA DE PANORAMA a tn. and par. Portugal, prov. Beira-Alta, 15 m. E. N. E. Villa Real near 1 bank Theiss. Amantia, a species of asbestos, is found in the neighbourhood. P. 800.

MURCIA a prov. Spain, forming part of the ancient kingdom of same name and bounded on the N. by prov. Albacete, W. Almeria, E. entirely and E. partly by the Medi terranean, and partly by prov. Alicante; area, 5970 sq. m. A considerable portion is composed of ranges of hills, reaching an elevation of 2800 ft. producing oaks and pines, and containing mines of copper, iron, lead, and silver, and quarries of marble. There are also extensive plains, which are rendered amazingly fruitful by irrigation, and producing wheat, maize, oats, flax, pepper, oil, vane, kidney beans, and all sorts of vegetables, rice, oranges, lemons; the mulberry-tree, the cork-tree, the palm &c. but where water is wanting, the country is thinly peopled, and almost a desert. The littoral plains, especially about Cartagena and Alicante, are much subject to earthquakes and are rendered unsalubrious by salt marshes. Its principal rivers are the Segura, and its tributaries the Thyella, Mundo, Quipar, and Guadaleña. Among the products of Murcia are likewise included sulphur, Armenian bole, salt, alum, borilla, and spermo genes. Agriculture is the main occupation of the inhabitants, but considerable numbers are also employed in the lead and silver mines in the manufacture of silk, serape, ribbons, satin, plush, serapes, beams, cotton, linen, hemp, paper, &c. The principal towns are now provided with regularly-trained teachers, but, as yet, not more than one in fifty of the population receives instruction in the schools. This province is regarded as the Bombes of Spain, having produced very few men who have attained distinction in any way. The better classes vegetate in a monotonous, unusual existence, their chief pursuits being the cigar and the glass. Pop. 400,000. — The ancient kingdom was bounded N. by La Mancha, E. Valencia, S. the Mediterranean, and W. Granada, and included what is now prov. Murcia, the greater part of prov. Albacete, and portions of provs. Jaén and Almería. After passing through the hands of the Romans and Goths, it was conquered by the Moors in 712, and continued with a slight interruption to be subject to the Kaliphs of Cordova, till 1089. In that year it was raised, for the first time, by Mohamed-ben Ali (called by Castilian writers Huelin) to the dignity of a kingdom, but in the following year, when the Infante Don Alonso, son of king San Fernando, was proceeding with a formidable army against Andalucía, ambassadors from Murcia met him at Toledo, gave in their submission and declared the kingdom of Murcia a dependency of that of Castile. In 1264 Huelin endeavoured to make it again independent, but failed in the attempt, and was finally destroyed by Alonso and James I. of Aragon. It has ever since been united with Castile.

MURCIA a city Spain cap. of ancient kingdom and modern gov. of same name, lat. 38° N. lon. 1° 19' W., 80 m N N W Cartagena, on the Segura, which divides the town into two unequal portions, connected by a handsome bridge of two arches. The city is surrounded by a brick wall erected during the late civil war, and is entered by three principal gates. The streets are generally broad straight, and well paved, and the houses mostly two stories high, are painted in pink and yellow colours those of the nobles, some of which are lofty and spacious have pretty gardens attached. Among the public buildings, the most important is the cathedral, whose principal facade, a combination of Corinthian and composite architecture, produces a fine effect, while the interior although it contains some objects of interest, rather disappoints. It was begun in 1308 and altered in 1821

St. Fulgentius and St. Isidore, which form one range of building. The other chief edifices and institutions consist of the college of St. Leandro, which is a academy of music connected with the cathedral, the hospital of St. John, with spacious apartments for the sick, and a magnificent staircase; an hospital for convalescents, in connection with the preceding; a house of refuge, a foundling hospital, the townhouse, granary town summary an institute for advanced education, founded in 1837, with chairs of Latin, Greek, mathematics, mental philosophy, morals, theology natural history, phy sics, geography and history which were founded, in 1847 by 228 students a normal school numerous private elementary schools in which are educated about 10,000 boys, and 600 girls a school of design, with four professors, and about 150 pupils eleven parish churches, the best of which are those of St. Lorenzo St. John and St. Bartholomew with several numerous hermitages, oratories, and numerous suppressed convents, a bull-ring and a good botanical garden. Agriculture employs a great proportion of the inhabitants, silk pepper maize and barley being the chief products but there are also manufactures of coarse cloths and bands of different colours, of silk stuffs, especially taffety and plush, linens, hats gloves, saltpeetre, also, silk spinning-mills, dye-works, potteries, tanneries, soap-works, and 21 flour-mills. On considerable commerce is carried on in raw, spun and dyed silks, and in some of the other manufactures above mentioned, as well as in grain and fruits.

The first undoubted mention of Murcia occurs at the division of Spain into provinces by Ximé in 747, and it soon after figures as one of the principal Moorish cities in Spain under the name of Murash. It was wrested from the Moors by St. Ferdinand in 1240. It was sacked by the French during the peninsular war, and plundered of its wealth and works of art. Pop. including the suburbs 55,000.

MURDER ISLAND, an Isl. Mozambique Channel. See FRENCH ISLAND.

MURIE (LA) a tn. France, dep. Isère, on a hill top, 80 m. S Grenoble. During the civil war it was well fortified, and defended by a ditched and stout repeated towers. It has manufactures of coarse linen, sails and leather, and a trade in corn, cattle and coal, which is worked in the neighbourhood. Pop. 9433.

MURELLO a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont div. Coni prov. and about 7 m from Saluzzo, with an ancient church a mon.atory with a church attached a ruinous castle, a communal school two silk mills, and a trade in vegetable and cattle. Pop. 1682.

MURSET (Lat. n. Muriclus, a tn. France, dep. Haute-Garonne at the confluence of the Louge with the Garonne, which is here crossed by a suspension-bridge, 11 m S S W Toulouse. It is well built of brick and famous for the serge which it stood in 1213, and the bloody battle fought under its walls between Simon of Montfort and Peter II king of Aragon, aided by the Count of Toulouse, whom the latter was signally defeated and the king lost his life. The manufactures are coarse woollens, leather, and white stoneware, in MURCIA. — From Chapter I. Espagne.

The bulw. began in 1593 and finished in 1766, rises in compartments like a drawn-out telescope, and is crowned with a dome. It commands an extensive view of the huerta (plain) of Murcia, studded with farms and drooping palm-trees, as well as of the city, with its flat, bluish roofs and cane pigeon house. The cathedral suffered much in the earthquake of 1809, when the tower Acadé, and dome of the transept were crumbled. The seat of the bishop, who is exarch to Toledo, was transferred to Murcia from Cartagena, from which latter he still takes his title. In the plans stands the capacious episcopal palace, built in 1759 one of the finest edifices of its class in Spain; and in close proximity to it, the college of Isidore of English. Pop. 2320. MURFREESBOROUGH a t. U. States, Tennessee, on a commanding eminence, above an affluent of the Cumberland, 28 m S E Nashville. It was once the capital of the State, is neatly built of brick, and has a Presbyterian church, a courthouse jail and market-house. Pop. 1500.

MURKIN, par. Ind. Kerry; 10 699 ac. Pop. 2425. MURKIN—1, A vil. and par. Switzerland, com. Aargau, 11 m S W Zurich. It contains a richly-endowed Benedictine monastery, seated on an eminence about 1500 ft. above the sea, and possessing an extensive library and a good collection of coins. The inhabitants of Muri are chiefly employed in agriculture, and have also some manufactures of silk goods. Pop. 1898—2. A vil. and 18 S. E. from, where Louisa XVIII of France, when Comte d'Artois, resided for some time.

MURIAHE, a river, Brazil, which rises in the Serra do Poco, prov. Rio-de-Janeiro, and flowing S.E. for about 46 m., joins 1 bank Parahibá. One of its affluents is the muddy stream of the Morro, whose waters are said to be poisonous, and on its banks grows a tree called guaratambo, the roots of which are also said to be poisonous.

MURIALDO, a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont prov. and 16 m. W. from, 1. bank W. Bormida, here crossed by a bridge. It has two churches, limestone quarries, and beds of fine pottery—earth. Pop. 3078

MURIELLA, several places, Spain, particularly —1, (de Gallego) A to Aragon, prov. and 44 m. N. Baza, 2, bank Gallego, here crossed by a stone bridge of three arches. It is one of the oldest towns in Aragon is poorly built, and has a church, townhouse, two primary schools, and two prisons manufactures of linen, several flour-mills, and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 648—3, (de Rio de Lera) A to. Old Castle, prov. and 7 m. S. Logroño, 1 bank Lera, with a church, townhouse, prison, and two primary schools and some trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1163—8 (of Fructo) A to. prov. Navarra, on a height above the Aragon 41 m. S. E. Pamplona with a church an ancient tower, a townhouse, prison and primary school a flour-mill, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 564.

MURISANGO, a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Alessandria, prov. and about 14 m. from Lasale, 1 bank E. Sava, with a church, a castle, blue and gypsum quarries, and a trade in corn, wine, and hemp. Pop. 3000

MURITIBA or PAISI, a vil. and prov. Brazil prov. Bahia 4 m. S.W. Cachoeira with two handsome churches, and a primary school. It raises tobacco, of excellent quality also sugar-cane, coffee, and oranges in great abundance. Indigo, and other valuable plants grow spontaneously

MURITZ, a lake in the S.E. of Mecklenburg of very irregular shape greatest length N to S 18 m., central breadth about 1 m., area, 99 sq. m. It is the largest lake in Germany, communicating on the N with Lake Felsen belongs to the basin of the Baltic

MURLO or VEACOVANO, a vil. and com. Tuscany 13 m. from Siena, with a church, a castle and a trade in oil, silk cattle, and dairy produce. Pop. 5449

MURNAU, a market tn. Upper Bavaria, between Lakes Staffell and Reg 85 m. S.W. Munich. It has two churches, a castle, an hospital manufactures of articles in leather glass-work, coal mines, and a trade in corn and cattle. P. 1497

MURO, two places, Naples —1, A to, prov. Basilicata dist. and 16 m. S.W. Melfi, supposed to occupy the site of ancient Numistro, where a battle was fought between Marcellus and Hannibal. Jean I. queen of Naples was strangled here in 1832.—2, A vil. prov. Terra d'Otranto, dist. and E.N.E. Gallipoli. Pop. 1500

MURO, a tn. Spain, ul. Majorca, 24 m. N.E. Palma with a church, primary school, suppressed monastery a marble quarry and a trade in corn wine, and cattle. Pop. 3018

MURONI, a tn. Russia, gov. and 75 m. S.E. Vladimir, 1. bank Oka. It is one of the oldest towns in Muscovy contains a cathedral, and 16 other churches, and has manufactures of linen, leather, soap, and tiles, and some trade in leather and corn. Pop. (1849) 9109

MUROS, a tn. Spain, Asturias, prov. and 20 m. N.W. Oviedo, 1. bank Nalon near its mouth; with a church, three hermitages, and a primary school, and a trade in cattle, wine, &c. Pop. 1076

MUROS, a seaport to Spain, Galicia, prov. and 56 m. S.W. Coruña, on a bay of the same name. It consists of two principal streets and three small squares, and has a handsome collegiate church, a fine old belfry, a primary school, court-house, and prison, manufactures of linen, a fishery, several mills, and some trade. Pop. 4792

MUROWANA-GOZAR, a tn. Prussia, prov. and 15 m. N.E. Posen, circle Obornik. It has a Protestant and a R. Catholic church and manufactures of linen, leather, and tobacco. Pop. 1611

MURRAGE, prov. Ireland Cork; 8785 ac. Pop. 1864

MURRAY, an island co. New S. Wales, 89 m. N.W. to S.E., breadth, 10 m. to 46 m. Area, 1,456,080 ac.

Cap. Queenbeyan, on the Queenbeyan river —3, A co. W. Australia

MURRAY, a large river, S.E. Australia. Its source is uncertain, but believed to be in the Australian Alps, near Mount Wallington or Kosciusko about lat. 36° 30' S., from which it flows in a N.W. direction to lat. 36 S., when it proceeds W., though not without some pretty wide deviations, to lon. 144 25° E. where it again takes a N.W. direction to Mount Loock about lat. 34 10° S. lon. 141° 50' E., from which it flows W. but following a regularly deviating course, to Elbow, lat. 34 S.; lon. 139° 46' E. and there suddenly bends round, and runs S.W. to Lake Victoria, into which it falls at Wallington, lat. 35° 30' S. Its course is so tortuous and eccentric, as to render it difficult to give its development but it cannot be under 700 m. Its principal affluents are the Murrumbidgee and Darling, the former joining it at lat. 34 46° S. and the latter at 34 6° S. The sea-mouth of the Murray which is at the head of Encounter Bay Lake Victoria, by which it is interrupted, communicating with the former by a short and narrow passage, called the Goodwin Channel, is about the third of a mile in breadth and when the river is flooded a strong current runs out of it with such rapidity that the tide setting in at the same time, causes a shore and hugging sea. The difficulty and danger of approaching it is further increased by the tremendous swell that rolls into Encounter Bay the breakers rising to a height of 15 ft. or 16 ft., before they burst in one unbroken line, as far as the eye can see, it is only during the summer season, and after several days of W. wind that the sea subsides, and the roar of breakers ceases for a time.

MURRAYSHIRE, a co. Scot. See ELKIN

MURRHARDT, a tn. Württemberg, circle Neckar, 7 m. N.E. Backnang, with a church, a Latin school an old Benedictine abbey salt-works, and a colliery P. 2460

MURROES, par. Scot. Forfar 4600 ac. Pop. 648.

MURRUMBIDGEE, a district of New S. Wales between lon. 144 and 147 10° E. having the river Murray on the N. and the Murrumbidgee on the S. It is one of the largest districts in the colony containing 13,000,000 ac.

MURRUMBIDGEE, a river of S.E. Australia, rises in the W. ridge of mountains, situated to the S. of the parallel of 35° S. and under the meridian of 149° E. at a distance of about 80 m. from the sea. It flows in a N.W. direction and is joined by the Lachlan at lat. 34 25 S. latterly taking a S.W. course and falling into the Murray, at lat. 34 45° S. Its whole course is upwards of 400 m. direct distance about 300 m. It is navigable up nearly to its sources, but is rendered difficult and dangerous by snags, and occasional rapids and shoals. Much of the land traversed by this river is of excellent quality

MURSLPY, par. Eng. Bucks 2840 ac. Pop. 538

MURSTON, par. Eng. Kent, 1483 ac. Pop. 191

MURTAH, a vil. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 48 m. S.E. Granada, divided into two portions by a deep stream. It has a square townhouse, prison, two elementary schools and a church. Inhabitants employed in mining and in agriculture some common linen is woven and hauppen sandals and soap are made, and there is a brandy distillery. Pop. 2970.

MURTER, a tn. Switzerland. See MORA

MURU, a small tn. Japan, ul. Nippon, situated on the strait of Matsushima, opposite lat. 35° 30' N. It contains only about 600 houses. Its harbour is much frequented by coasting vessels, being very secure and well sheltered by a lofty mountain. Horae-hides are tanned here in the manner of Russian leather MURUT, a tn. in N.W. Hindoostan, princip. and S.W. Bahawalpore. It is surrounded by mud walls, strengthened with numerous towers, and is a place of importance, being both a military station, and theemporium of a large trade in grain, though of very indifferent appearance.

MURUTSI or MORUTSI, an African tribe to the W. of Delagoa Bay, near lat. 25° S. and lon. 28 E. They have made much more progress in civilization than their neighbors, have stone fences enclosing their houses, which are plastered and painted yellow, and often ornamented with pillars, carved mouldings, and wall-painted figures. They manufacture large quantities of iron and copper, converting the former into excellent cutlery, and even castings, and the latter into fine wire, out of which they make beautiful elastic chests. They are also ingenious workers in wood, cultivate tobacco and sugarcane, in addition to the ordinary crops of beans, corn, millet &c. and have immense droves of cattle. They sell their manufactures to the Betchaps and other B. tribes, obtaining in return skins, ivory &c., and thus carry on a trade which is supposed to extend from 400 m. to 500 m. Their capital is Kurrrohoane.

MURVIEDRO [see Saguntum]; a tn. Spain, prov. and 16 m. N Valencia, r bank Palancia, at the foot of a hill crowned by the citadel, and about 4 m. from the sea. The present wall is altogether Moorish, and girdles the irregular eminence like that of Alharcane the key to Seville as this is to Valencia. The cathedral with the towers San Fernando and San Pedro, is placed at the extreme height. Murviedro is a struggling, miserable place. The streets are lighted, and in general paved but narrow and crooked. Besides the custom house, townhouse, and prison, there are a small theatre, savings-bank, hospital, various schools, a solid Corinthian parish church, a chapel of ease, a convent, and seven hermitages. Agriculture and wine-making are the prevailing occupations, but there are also four brandy distilleries, flour and oil mills. Saguntum was founded, a.c. 1884, by the Greeks of Saenytus (Zante). It was then a seaport, but the land has since gained upon the sea, which is now above 8 m. distant. Being the first frontier town, and allied to Rome and being also extremely rich it was attacked and destroyed by Hannibal a.c. 219. It was rebuilt by the Romans, and became a municipality. Of its former grandeur but few and slight traces remain, as it has been ever since used as a quarry by Goths Moors and Spaniards. The famous theatre is placed in the slope above the town, commanding delightful scenery, it was much destroyed by Suetes, who used the stones to strengthen the castle. Pop. 5349

MURZUK a tn. Africa. See MONTROUX

MURZUSCHLAG or MARZSCHLAG a market tn. Styria, Austria and 23 m. N E E. Bruck on the Mftr. and the railway from Vienna to Trieste. It has a parish church a Franciscan monastery a school a burgher hospital, many factories of soythes and needles, iron mills and other iron-works a trade in cattle, and two annual fairs. Pop. 957 dist 3388

MURBA a populous village in Arabia, prov. Yemen about 30 m. E Mocla. lat. 18° 30' N. lon. 43° 21' E. It was in former times the seat of the trade which is now transferred to Mecca, which it still supplies with fruit and fowls.

MUSBURY par. Eng. Devon 1718 a. Pop. 206

MUSCAT, MAMAKAT of MASCAT [French Mascate], the chief city of Oman, cap. of the State of the Imam or Sultan of Muscat and a seaport of great commercial importance, on the Indian Ocean, near the E angle of Arabia; lat. 23° 34' N. lon. 58° 50' E. The cove of Muscat, as the harbour is called is an inlet of the sea about three-fourths of circumference of weather which renders it difficult to enter the cove of Muscat. This is the Bay of Matrah. The town of Muscat stands at the S. side of the cove, in a hollow, under cliffs 400 ft. or 500 ft. high, and debarré even from the view of the sea by the surrounding high rocks. Its appearance by no means corresponds with the wealth and importance of the place. A few good houses, in the Persian style, occupy the narrow space at the water side, but large and stately buildings are few, and the Sultan's palace (a plain edifice) the governor's house, and a few minarets, alone rise above the humble mass of flat-roofed huts or houses. The streets are extremely narrow so that a few palm-leaves laid across between the houses above, completely screen them from the sun. The situation of Muscat at the foot of high cliffs and nearly surrounded by bare rocks, renders it one of the hottest places in the world. The thermometer in the shade, rarely descends below 90° the land thermometer, at night, is hot and sultry floating to Europeans the climate is insupportable. But, on the other hand, the excellence of the port and its convenient position near the entrance of the Persian Gulf, will always make it important as a station for shipping. It is also naturally strong and, in European hands could be made impregnable. Of water a sufficient supply is obtained from wells about 40 ft. deep. At the bottom of the bay, on the W. is the town of Matrah, distant, by land about 3 m. from Muscat, of which it may be considered as a suburb and little, if at all, inferior to it in population. Here are the docks for building and repairing shipping. Matrah has the character of a large fishing village a large proportion of its population being fishermen, boatmen and pilots. As it stands in an open plain exposed to the sea breeze it is cooler than Muscat, so that many of the wealthier merchants of the latter place have their dwellings at Matrah and spend only the hours of business in the neighbouring city. The combined population of Muscat, Matrah, and intervening villages has been variously estimated at 25,000 and at 40,000. The latter estimate is probably excessive but the place is eminently prosperous its foreign imports are for an Arab town very large, and therefore it may be inferred that its population is on the increase. The causes of this prosperity demand a few words of explanation, which naturally finds its place in the historical review of the State in question.

In the latter half of the last century Muscat had already attained under a ruler who bore the religious title of Imam the eminence to which, as a seaport it is entitled for its security and convenient situation. In 1806 Said Saïd, the present (1850) ruler succeeded to the sovereignty, having removed his cousin Badr, who had a prior title by assassination. Badr was the favourite of the Badowin and like them, inclined to the doctrines of the Wahabîs. These fanatical reformers had advanced to the very borders of Oman and made an alliance with the powerful and practical tribe of the Jowdani who occupied the rocky coasts on the N of Oman, W of Ras Mascandim. The British in Bombay had, in the mean time resolved on the complete suppression of piracy in the Persian Gulf and the subjugation of the Jowdani. Under these circumstances, an alliance was readily formed between Bombay and Muscat for the prosecution of the war against the common enemy on the W and N W of Oman. In 1819, the parties were reduced to make unequalled submission and, two years later, a British expedition marching into the interior of Oman from Ras el Hâd, humbled the insurgent Badowin and effectually restored tranquillity in that quarter. Thus Said Saïd owed his firm establishment in power to his alliance with the British, and he appears, fortunately, to have been quite aware of the advantages derivable from a continuance of their friendship so that, to his docility under the wise and kindly counsel offered him by the Government of Bombay, may be fairly ascribed the great progress which the countries embraced in his dominions have, in a few years, made in political strength, productive industry physical improvement, and general civilization.

MUSCAT — From Zaphira, Campaigne de Constantinople de la Regente L. Armand.

a mile long, with half that width, spanning N W and consequently completely sheltered from the prevailing winds or monsoons. Immediately W of this inlet is a more capacious bay facing N E, and therefore exposed to the winter monsoon but capable of affording shelter to shipping under those cir-

Said Said's system of government is distinguished by careful abstention from any violent exercise of arbitrary power by request for his aid and property complete religious toleration, moderate impost, and no monopolies, and by the prohibition of foreign slave-trade. Great numbers of Indian Jews, fleeing from the rapacity and oppression which they experienced in Syria and the peninsula of Bagdad, have settled in Muscat, where they may live unmolested by any mark of separation. The Banyans in Muscat are allowed to worship Kalf Devi in their own temple, and the Brahmins to keep a herd of sacred cows. Persians, Syrians, Afghans, and Hindoos, with their variety of creeds, elsewhere the sources of bitter animosity here coexist, under the influence of general toleration, to live in harmony together. The liberality of Said Said is, happily, equalled by his intelligence and enterprise as a merchant prince. His dominion is somewhat singular in its nature, and almost wholly maritime. It commences on the E coast of Aden, at the river Moosibue, about 60 m. S. Cape Delgado, and continues N as far as the equator. This, however, does not imply any territorial possessions beyond what is necessary to secure the trade of the coast. In like manner a large portion of the coast of the Persian Gulf has been swept by the fleets of the Afghans, Zanzibar, Mozambique, and Pemba included the coast ruled by him, for the most part only commercially cannot have an extent of less than 3000 m. For the administration of this widely-extended empire, he has provided a naval force unsurpassed in the East. He possesses an 84 gun ship two "4s, several frigates, and, altogether, 50 or 60 square-rigged vessels carrying guns, most of them built at Bombay after European models.

It must be observed that Sultan Said Said has never assumed the religious title of Imam which is often erroneously bestowed on him, nor does he style himself Sultan of Muscat. Indeed the island of Zanzibar has now become the seat of his central government his chief source of revenue, and principal residence. It is the point, also, whence his mild influence, borne along by commerce, is likely to render the greatest service to humanity. See ZANZIBAR.—Robert's Embargo to the E. Coast of Mosambique, &c. Roschberg's Voyage Keppel's Personal Narrative, Wellsted's Voyage to the City of the Calicut.

MUSKEROE, a vil Spain prov and 6 m N Valencia, about 1 m from the sea with a church, townhouse prison and primary school and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1041.

MUSGRAVE (GREAT), par Eng. co. Westmorland 4060 ac. Pop. 175.

MUSHI MOON, or MOON, a to Asiatic Turkey, fish and 75 m S S E Erzerum finely situated on a round and conical hill, at the foot of the ridge of Jebel Nisard or Nishan, has fifty narrow streets, seven mosques, and four churches and well-supplied bazars, exhibiting articles of Persian manufacture and Glasgow shawls, which many of the middle class of inhabitants use for turbans and girdles. The chief trade of the place is in the hands of the Armenians. The vine is much cultivated in the vicinity and excellent wine made. Grain and tobacco are also amongst its principal products. Pop. about 5000 of which the greater portion are Mahomedans, the remainder Armenians.

MUSKASH, a group of the Atlas, off E coast Abyssinia lat. 11° 43' N lon. 43° 19' E. They are situated on a coral reef extending N E to S W., for 7 m., are elevated at most 30 ft. above the sea, are covered with a few mangrove and other trees, and afford tolerable anchorage in a gap of the reef, but have not a drop of water. They were purchased, in 1840, by the British Government, from the Sultan of Zanzibar.

MUSHELD-ER-RA, a maritime tn. Persia, prov Mazandaran, on the Caspian Sea, 10 m. N Baltooni, lat. 36° 45' N lon. 52° 50' E. It consists of about 300 houses.

MUSKAU or MUSKOW, a tn. Prussia, prov Silesia, par and 86 m W N W Legnica, r bank Laba. It has a Protestant church, porcelain, extensive pottery, and four glass and two wool mills. Pop. 2387.—Several vine farm dependencies of the town. One of them contains a fine castle, with two towers, and is provided with a library of 9000 volumes, and some good collections of antiquities, another has a large park, considered one of the finest in Germany with a bathing establishment adjoining, and a third an alum-works.

MUSKERRY, a mountainous district, Ireland, in the centre of co. Cork. It is divided into the baronies of E. and W. Muskerry Area, about 811,000 ac. P. (1841), 90,511. MUSKRAM, two par. Eng. Kents—1 (North), 5190 ac. Pop. 877—2 (South), 2631 ac. Pop. 805.

MUSKILLO, NAZOO or ODA an isl. group, N Paide, belonging to the Malgrava Archipelago about lat. 6° N and lon. 165° E. They consist of a number of small islands, distant 1 m. to 6 m. from each other apparently connected by reefs and ledges, and more especially by narrow isthmuses, which divide them into two distinct portions extending for about 30 m. N W to S E. They are very low and dangerous, but are well covered with trees, and densely peopled.

MUSKINGUM a river U. States, formed in State Ohio by the junction of the Tuscarawas and White Woman at Coshocton. It flows circuitously S S E and joins r bank Ohio at Marietta. It is navigable by barges to Coshocton, and, being connected with the Ohio canal gives a convenient communication N to Lake Erie and W to the Susquehanna.

MUSONF two rivers, Italy—A river Venetia, which flows S S E past Castelfranco, divides into two branches, the one of which is contained, and joins l bank Brenta, while the other turns E, and falls into the lagoons opposite Venice, total course, about 40 m.—2 A river, The Marches, which flows circuitously N N F past Macerata, then S S E, and falls into the Adriatic, 3 m. N E Loreto total course, 38 m.

MUSBACH a vil Bavaria, Palatinat, 10 m S. Neustadt in the midst of vineyards. It has a parish church and a trade in wine. Pop. 2068.

MUSSELBURGH a burgh of regality Scotland, co. Edinburgh, on a bay of same name at the mouth of the Leith in the North of Forth and on the N British railway 6 m. S Edinburgh. It consists of the town proper and a suburb on the opposite bank called Fisher-row with which it communicates by three bridges—one of them elegant, and another so ancient as to be supposed of Roman origin, is irregularly, but substantially built, and has, besides the parish church, seated on a commanding height, at some distance above the town Free U. Presbyterian Episcopal and Independent churches a grammar and other schools, a neat townhall with a curious old tower attached to it, which was built in 1590 out of materials from the ancient chapel of Loreto, manufacturers of sailcloth, hosiery, silken-ware, hats, and leather, an extensive pottery for coarse ware, several tanneries, a very ancient harbour at which coals are exported, and some other trade carried on, on which there are annually held and an annual fair which lasts two days. A large number of the inhabitants live by fishing. The battle of Pinkie, in 1547, was fought in the vicinity. Musselburgh unites with Leith in sending a member to Parliament. Pop. 7092.

MUSNE'DOM (Gaza) Arabia, the N extremity of a remarkable promontory called Ras el Jebel, projecting into the Persian Gulf, forming the point of separation between the latter and the Sea of Oman or Arabian Sea lat. 33° 24' N lon. 56° 34' E, separated from the Persian coast by the Strait of Ormus. It is the termination of a mountainous tract, and is much indented on its E side.

MUSNOMELLO a tn. Sicily prov and 18 m N W Calascabate. It has an old castle, and near it are found iron, phosphor, rock-salt, and a variety of fine pebbles, agates, Jasper &c. Pop. 6300.

MUSON a vil and coe Belgium, prov Luxembourg, 11 m S S W Arlon, with a trade in agricultural produce. There are iron-mines in the vicinity. Pop. 1465.

MUSTAPHA (PARA) two tns European Turkey—1, Rommelia, 18 m N W Adrianople l bank Mariza, here crossed by an elegant bridge, built by Mustapha Pasha—2, (Poland), Scavia, l bank Nisava, 18 m E by S Nisna, on the road from Balgrade to Sophia.

MUSTAR a tn. Switzerland, co. Graubünden.

MUSTON two par. Eng.—1 Leicester 1693 ac. P.

411—2 York (E. Riding) 2226 ac. P. 899.

MUSTUNG—1 A tn. Belochistan, 65 m N E Kalat, 5700 ft. above sea-level, lat. 29° 46' N lon. 66° 47' E. It contains about 400 houses, surrounded with a crenelated wall and has a rich district, producing the finest fruits in abundance, besides grain, madder, and tobacco—2, A tn. Tibet near the supposed source of the Gandak, lat. 29° 53' N lon. 39° 5' E.

MUSZYNA, a tn. Austria, Galicia, circle and 18 m. S.E. Silesia, on bank Poprad; with a church, and a trade in linen. Pop. 1700.

MUTEODU, a tn. Hindoostan, Mysore, 80 m. N N W Seringapatam; with an extensive manufacture of the glass-rings worn by the native women round their wrists.

MUTFORD, par Eng Suffolk 1874 ac Pop. 485

MUTHILLI, a vill and par Scotland, co and 17 m. S.W. Perth, on a slope above the Earn. The villas consist of a single wall built and well-kept street, and has a very handsome parish, a Free, and an Episcopalian church, and three schools. A few of the inhabitants weave cotton goods for Glasgow but the far greater number are employed in agriculture. Area of par 78,800 ac Pop 2976.

MUTHREE, a river Hindoostan See IMPAL.

MUTIGNANO, a tn. Naples, prov Abruzzo Ultra II dist and 31 m. S.E. E. Teramo Pop. 1600

MUTOVA, or MATVA, one of the Karakulaks. N Pacific lat. 48° 4' N, lon. 158° 12' E. It rises to the height of 4500 ft. is a volcano, but of doubtful activity.

MUTIS, a vill. Hungary Thüder Danube, co. Tolna about 14 m. from Bexard; with a handsome church and a trade in corn, wine, and cattle. Pop. 1619

MUTTESCHOLTZ, a tn. Prussia, dep. Bas-Rhin, 4 m. W N W Schalkstein on the Zemba. It has a manufacture of indigo-pastel, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1980

MUTHERSDORF a market tn. Bohemia, circle and 27 m. W N W Eltitz, on the Goldbrunnenbach with a parish church, a courthouse, a castle, manufactures of lace, glass-works, and several mills. Pop. 994

MUTTERSTADT a market tn. Bavaria, Palatinat, on the Pfingstgraben, here crossed by a bridge, 30 m. N E Landau. It has a trade in corn, and in tobacco, which is extensively grown in the vicinity Pop. 8746.

MUTTAE a vill. Hungary, Hither Danube, co. and about 10 m. from Arva, near the frontiers of Galicia. It has a R. Catholic church, several saw-mills, and a trade in cattle and furs. Pop. 389

MUTTON ISLAND a fortified islet, Ireland, Galway Bay 1 m. S. Galway. It has a light house, with fixed light, 38 ft above sea-level lat. 53° 15' N, lon. 9° 3' W

MUTTRA or MATARAH, a tn. E Arabia. See MISCAR.

MUTWALA (Mufutsef) an isle Hindoostan, Gulf of Mansar, separated from Calcutty by a narrow strait. It is about 10 m. long and 2 m. to 3 m. broad soil sandy but favorable to the growth of coconut trees, great numbers of which are raised here fishing, and making chinquin (lime) by burning shells, are carried on

MUTZSCHEN a tn. Saxony circle, and 22 m. F S E Leipzig, with a castle, and manufactures of linen. Rock crystals, known under the name of Mutzschen diamonds are found in the neighbourhood. Pop. 1689

MUTZIG, a tn. Prussia, dep. Bas-Rhin, 14 m. S.W. Strasbourg with an old castle of the bishops of Strasbourg, now converted into a manufactory of fire-arms Pop. 3594

MUT (Liu) (Latin, Caput de Mochon) a tn. France, dep. Var, 5 m. S.E. Draguignan near the confluence of the Argens and Merve. It contains a famous tower, in which seven Provencals, after killing in an attempt to assassinate the Emperor Charles V., shut themselves up, and defended themselves against his army till five of them were mortally wounded. The remaining two surrendered, and were hanged on the spot. Le May has saw-mills, driven by water, and tanneries. Pop. 1899

MUTYEN a vill. and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, on the Dyle, near the railway from Louvain to Malines, 18 m. N Brussels. Pop. (secundum), 1790

MUZAR, a tn. Bohemia, on the oval and 12 m. S.E. E. Hahli. It consists of about 500 houses, can muster about 1000 horse, and is famous for its tomb, which was built nearly four centuries ago, consisting of two lofty cupolas, and the object of numerous pilgrimages. Trebeck, the last of Moorcroft's unfortunate party, died here

MUELLAC, a tn. France, dep. Morbihan 15 m. S.E. E. Vannes, near the mouth of the Vilaine; with manufactures of hats. Pop. 1318

MUZA, a tn. New Granada, dep. Boyaca, 55 m. N N W Bogota. It has a tolerable church, three convents, and a poor population of about 300 families.

MUZAFFERNAGUR, a tn. Hindoostan prov and 65 m. N.E. Delhi; lat. 29° 27' N lon. 77° 40' E. It is populous, has two considerable bazars, a large proportion of brick buildings and an old fort.

MYACONDA, or MYCONDA, a tn. Hindoostan, prov Mysore, 22 m. N W Chitildroog. It is protected by a fort, which defends an important pass W into the valley of Chitildroog

MYCONE, an anc. city Greece Morea, near the modern village of Karleia, 16 m. S.W. Corinth. It was founded by Persians, a.c. 1800, is famous in Grecian history as the capital of Agamemnon, the chief leader of the Greeks at Troy, and was destroyed by the Argives after the Persian war, a.c. 466. It stood on a rugged height, in a recess between two lofty eminences and was defended by a citadel the entire circuit of which is still visible, with walls in some places, from 15 to 20 ft. high MYCONIS, or MYCONI, a small isl. Greece Archipelago lat. 37° 29' 18" N lon. 28° 31' 21" E. It is of a triangular form, nearly 8½ m. E to W and 6 m. S to N, and mountainous but none of its summits are of any great elevation. The soil is dry but fertile producing barley figs and an excellent species of white beans also orchids, and a good red wine, of which 500 pipes are made annually. Game, of all kinds is abundant but water is scarce, the only description obtainable being rain water, which is regularly preserved in cisterns. On the W side are the towns of Karamanli and Fort Korb, and on the N W side the town of Mycone. Inhabitants mostly sea-faring men and considered the best in these seas. The roadstead before the town of Mycone is well sheltered from winds at N N E but S W and W winds blow directly in. Pop. 6000 of whom about 5000 are m to m of Mycone.

MYDRECHT a vill. Holland See MISCAR.

MYDRIM par Wales, Carmarthen, 6905 ac. 109 996.

MYER or MYRAH, a tn. Hindoostan, pres. Bengal prov and 106 m. S W Allahabad. It is enclosed by a mud wall and defended by a small but strong fort, occupied as a residence by the independent chief to whom the town, and an adjoining tract of country belongs.

MYLAI a tn. Saxony circle and 12 m. S.W. Zwickau near the railway thence to Hof with a castle and a chapel, manufactures of linen, bobinet, and straw-plate an alum work supplied from a mine of alum which in the neighbourhood two cotton and several other mills. Pop. 1849 3028

MYLEMSLOWN par Ire. Kildare 4845 ac. P. 787

MYLLETYEN par W. Ales, Carcasson 1519 ac. P. 286

MYLOR, par Eng. Cornwall, 5002 ac. Pop. 2268

MYLOS, a vill. Greece Morea, 4 m. S W Argos, near the Lernean marsh, where Hercules is fabled to have destroyed the Hydra. Demetrios Tzani, with 600 men here defeated twice that number of Egyptian troops MYNIFHMORE, a small isl. Ireland, co. Mayo, in Clew Bay 6 m. W Newport-Point. It is about ½ m. in length is uninhabited and is a coast-guard and fishing station. Immediately S. of it is a smaller island, called Myntahag.

MYNYDIELWYN a vill. England, co. Monmouth about 8 m. W Pont-y-Pool. It contains the three hamlets of Glawr-wyl, Myntidithan, and Pennau and has a spacious and handsome church, with a tower place of worship for Baptists, Independents, Welsh and Wesleyan Methodists, and extensive coal mines, iron-works, and sandstone quarries. Area 15 938 ac. Pop. 5994

MYOO or MYOU, a river, Aracan having its source in or near the Eadgong Hill 2230 ft. high lat. 21° 30' N from which it flows S and falls into the Bay of Bengal, about lat. 21° 15' N, 20 m. W from the mouth of the Aracan, total course, about 90 m.

MYOOS-HOMTOS, an anc. resort, Egypt, now deserted and uninhabited, on the Red Sea lat. 27° 30' N lon. 83° 43' E., once famous as the emporium of Arabian and Indian merchandise, from whence 120 vessels annually sailed to India. The situation is a flat, marshy plain, extremely unhealthy. The port is a small bay protected from the violence of the sea.

MYROES, par Ire. Cork 4119 ac. Pop. 2270

MYSHALIA, par and Ire. Carlow 9460 ac. P. 1932

MYSELENICE, a tn. Austria, Galicia, 16 m. S. Cracow on the Rabe. It is surrounded by lofty hills and has a small square market place and two schools. Pop. 2141

MYSELOWITZ, a tu. Prussia, prov. Sillesia, gov. and 57 m. S.E. Oppeln on the Promna, here crossed by a wooden bridge, 480 ft. long. It has a R. Catholic church and school; a synagogue, and a townhouse. Pop. 1768.

MYSOLE, a large isl., Indian Archipelago, Pitt's Passage, between Camau and the N.W. extremity of Papua; lat. (W point) 1° 57' S. lon. 129° 41' E. (a). It is 60 m. long E. to W. and 15 m. average breadth. The sea-coast of the island is inhabited by Makowese, and the interior by the original natives. At certain seasons of the year, herds of pandanus frequent the island in great flocks and are caught with bird-lime, when they are dried with the fish on, and exported. Trepane, nutmeg bark, ambergris, pearls, pearl-oyster shells, to a limited extent, are exported and coarse piece-goods, cutlery blades, iron in bars, chinaware, looking-glasses, and brass-wire, imported. The channel between the E. and of Mysola, and the W. point of Papua and Salawaty is about 30 m. broad. On the S. side of the island is the village and harbour of Ifofa.

MYSOBE, a prov. of peninsular India, in the Deccan, grand Madras; lat. 11° 25' to 15° N. lon. 74° 43' to 78° 40' E. greatest length, N.W. to S.E. 280 m., greatest breadth, 240 m. area, 80,898 sq. m. It consists, wholly of an elevated table-land the base of which as it is indeed of all the Deccan, is granite, with many syenite and trap rocks. It is enclosed on the E. and W. by the Eastern and Western Ghats and on the S. by the Nellorey mountains. The soil consists of vegetable mould, 100 ft. thick, an inexhaustible source of fertility. The elevations by which the level of the table-land is interrupted, are often large masses of syenite or granite, rounded in their outlines and standing naked and detached, or in clusters together upon the plain. Much of the country is overran by jungle. The principal rivers are the Vadvadi, Cavery, Toombodra, Bhadr. Arka, nadi, Pennar Palur and Pennar but, excepting the Cavery none of these streams attain any magnitude until they have quit the limits of the province in which, excepting the Cavery the sources of them all lie. There are no lakes in the N. part of Mysore, but many large tanks and artificial reservoirs in the high grounds. The climate is salubrious, the air temperate and bracing and moisture abundant, without being in excess. The province, though judiciously cultivated (arising in part from the inferiority of the cattle and implements used), produces rice, raggy wheat, and other grains (sugar beet, opium, castor-oil and various other articles. Raggy or ragree, a kind of millet, is the grain principally cultivated, as it forms the food of all the poorer classes. The W. forests yield large supplies of sandal and other valuable woods. Sheep are very numerous—red, white, and black; and there is, also, an inferior breed of horses. Mysore abounds in iron-ore, which is worked by the natives but in a very imperfect manner. Principal manufactures—black and white umbrellas, woollen carpets, and shawls. Cotton manufactures are few and of inferior quality. The inhabitants are chiefly Hindoos, and are generally stouter and taller than the people of the Carnatic. There are also considerable numbers of Mahomedans dispersed through different parts. The greatest language is the Kanarata or Kanarasi. The principal towns are Mysore, Seringapatam, Chittidroog, Nuggur and Bangalore. The province is divided into three great districts, namely Chittakul or Chittidroog Nuggur or Bednora, and Puttur or Seringapatam. The government is nominally in the hands of a native prince, but actually vested in the British resident at Mysore, appointed under the Madras presidency. Pop. estimated at 3,000,000.

MYSOBE, a tu. S. Hindostan cap. above prov. 10 m. S. Seringapatam lat. 13° 19' N. lon. 76° 42' E. It is large and populous; and is enclosed by a wall of red earth. The streets are regular and the houses intermingled with trees and temples. The fort, which is separated from the town by an esplanade, is built in imitation of the European style. It contains the rajah's palace and the dwellings of the principal merchants and bankers and many other private edifices. To the E. of the fort, and about 5 m. from the city is Mysore hill, a conical mountain, about 1000 ft. high, on the summit of which is the British residency.

MYSOBE ISLAND. See SHOUTER ISLAND.
MYTHOLMOYD, a vil. England, on York, W. Rad. 6 m. W. Halifax, a station on the Lancashire and York shire Railway. It is well built of stone, has a church, chapel for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists; a national school, and two cotton and two worsted mills, wool-combing and handloom-weaving are also carried on.—(Leeds Correspondent).

MYTILENE, an isl. Greece Archipelago. See MYTILENE.
MYTON upon SWALS par Eng York (N Riding), 1480 ac. Pop. 214.

MYZUM or MYTHU, a vil. Amtrix, Galena curle and about 40 m. from Stry with iron-mine, a blast-furnace, malleable iron works, and manufactures of articles in iron.

MZCANOW, a tu. Russian Poland, 80 m. S.W. Warsaw with two churches. Near it is the old castle of Radomowce pasturesquely situated on a lake. It figures much in early Polish history. Pop. 1050.

MZENSK, in Russia. See MZENSK.

N

NDIANGUI, a vil. W. Africa, Wollo country. 1 bank Senegal lat. 15° 22' N. lon. 15° 50' W. This rapidly-rising village was formerly the capital of Wollo and is a halting-place for ships ascending the river.

NTIAGAR, a vil. W. Africa, Wollo l. bank Senegal, lat. 15° 22' N. lon. 15° W., of considerable size, but thinly inhabited. It has some trade in mats, millet, and dried fish.

NYASSA, a lake, Africa. See NYASSA.

NAAGHI, a vil. of N.E. Afghanistan, 20 m. S.W. Bazaar lat. 34° 15' N. lon. 71° 15' E. supposed to be the Azura of the historians of Alexander, the capture of which was one of the most arduous exploits of that conqueror.

NAALDWIJK, a vil. Holland, prov. S. Holland, 18 m. W.W. Rotterdam with a large old townhouse, a Calvinistic and a R. Catholic church, almshouses for old men, a school, and numerous market-gardens, in which the inhabitants are employed. Pop. 2183.

NAARDEEN, a tu. Holland, prov. N. Holland, 12 m. S.E. Amsterdam, near the Zuider Zee, fortified by Vaanhoe and Coehorn. It is entered by two gates; has a beautiful townhouse, two bomb-proof watch houses, a arsenal, magazine, two churches, a synagogue, two hospitals, and two schools. Agriculture, wood-cutting in the neighbouring forests, and some calico-weaving, employ the inhabitants. Pop. 2155.

NAAS, a tu. Ireland, co. Kildare, 17 m. S.W. Dublin on the railway to Limerick. It is a very ancient place, was once the residence of the kings of Leinster and surrounded by walls, of which only some fragments now remain. It now consists of a principal and two other streets, indifferently built, and has a parish church, a handsome R. Catholic chapel, an old castle, finely situated, and now used as the vicarage, a diocesan, parochial, and national schools, barracks, a large poorhouse a jail, and some trade in corn and poultry. Pop. 2071.

NAAST, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, on the Sambre, 10 m. N.E. Mons with dist. works, a distillery, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1458.

NAB, a river, Bavaria, formed by the union of the Wald Nab and Hald Nab, which both have their sources in the Fichtelgebirge, and, proceeding S.E.E. in parallel directions, gradually approximate, and join at Ludw. The united stream, now navigable, takes the common name of Nab, and flows easterly S.E.W. to its mouth in the Danube, 8 m. W. Ratisbon. Total course, about 100 m.

NABAJOA, a river, U. States, Utah, an affluent of the Colorado, which it joins in lat. 37° N.; lon. 111° 48' W. after a W. course of about 200 m. It rises in the sierra de los Minthras.

NABAL, a tn. agency and 48 m. S.E. Tunis, on a small peninsula in the Gulf of Sydn, near the ruins of the ancient Napoca. It is famous for its pottery.

NABBURG, a tn Bavaria Upper Palatinate, on the Nab and the Hutenbach, 80 m. N Ratibon with three churches, manufactures of linen a brewery and a flour and quarry Pop. 1960

NABOQ, or NABSTO a river and cape, Persia, prov Laristan. The river has its sources in the province of Fars near Firozabad about lat 28 40' N, lon. 52 48' E., from which point it flows S.E. to lat 27 41' N lon. 56° E when it bends to the S.E. and falls into the Persian Gulf a little S. from the cape of same name, which is in lat. 27° 25' N lon. 52 89' E. (n) About 8 m. inside this cape, lies a small town of the same name, on the S. side of the bay formerly a lurking-place for pirate vessels.

NABULUS, NAMZOUS, or NAMZOUS [anc. Shechem, Morbah, and Samaria], a city, Asiatic Turkey Palestine cap Samaria, pers. Acra. 80 m. N Jerusalem, lat. 32° 12' N lon. 35 26 E It is most beautifully situated principally along the E. base of Mount Gerizim, surrounded with fertile soil and well watered fields and gardens of flowering and fruit trees. In form, it is long and narrow consisting of but two streets. The houses are of stone, lofty and well built particularly in the Samaritan quarter. It has several mosques and bazars, and a Greek church, manufactures of soap which is of superior quality, and cotton fabrics and a considerable trade. It is also frequented by caravans from Egypt, and other neighbouring countries. A little N from the town at the foot of Mount Elai there are many sepulchral excavations, and on the summit are other ruins. The chief objects here venerated and visited are the tombs of Joseph and of Joshua, and Jacob's well—the last 5 m. on the road to Jerusalem. Pop. estimated at 8000

NACHAR, a vil of N.W. India, state Bussaher dist. Kuvaur on a hill, sloping down towards r bank Sutlej about 7000 ft above sea-level, 50 m N.E. Simla. It is a large place, containing many good houses and has much cultivated ground, cropped chiefly with millet and buckwheat and numbers of fine fruit-trees among which walnuts, apricots, and mulberries, were common, and the vine, though not in a thoroughly suitable climate, ripens its fruit. About 8 m above the village, the Sutlej is crossed by a singular wooden bridge.

NACHOD, a tn. Bohemia, circle and 10 m N.E. Küngrázka, on the Metau. It has two churches, an old castle an hospital and some linen weaving. Pop. 2166

NACIMENTO a tn. Spain, Andalusia prov and about 24 m. from Almería with uneven, uncommodious streets, a church, chapel-house, prison and primary schools several oil and flour mills and a trade in corn maize oil, wine and silk. Pop. 8000

NACKENHEIM, a vil Hesse-Darmstadt, Rheinhessen, circle Mainz, near Oppenheim, with a church, townhouse, school and numerous mills. Pop. 1128.

NACKINGTON par Eng. Kent 906 ac Pop. 140

NACOGDOCHES, a tn U. States, Texas cap. dist. lat 31 40' N lon 94 85 W on one of the upper branches of the Neches. It was formerly a military establishment of the Spaniards. In 1819, it was entirely broken up and abandoned but it has since recovered and may now contain between 2000 and 3000 inhabitants

NACTON par Eng. Suffolk 1989 ac. Pop. 610

NACUNDI, a tn lat. Nivaria, one of the Fæges group, on a stream, about 30 m above Bawa. It stands among beautiful scenery embellished by clumps of noble trees but has suffered much from wars with the people of Amban. Pop. about 600.

NADAB, a vil Hungary Thither Thales co Arad on the White Hozes with a church several flour-mills, and a considerable trade in cattle. Pop. 1947

NADAE, two places, Hungary.—1 A vil Thither Thales, co. Arad, with a church. Inhabitants chiefly occupied in rearing horned cattle swine, goats, and bees. Pop. 1124.—2 A market tn. Thither Danube, co Frensburg with a church synagogue, and distillery Pop. 1422

NADARD two places, Hungary.—1 A vil, Thither Danube, co. Baranya, dist. Mohacs with a church and a handsome summer palace of the bishop of Fünfkirchen. Vol. II.

Near it is a good quarry Pop. 2314.—3 (or Nadavos) A vil Thither Thales, co. Abanyur on the Hernad, about 16 m from Kiskun with a handsome church, three churches and a large mill Pop. 1136

NADINDAL, a tn. Russia, Finland dist. and about 12 m. N.W. Åbo on a lake with a church, manufactures of woollen woare and a trade in cattle and provisions. P. 600

NADZIFGIL, or NADZIFGIL, a vil Hungary Thither Debrec co. Frensburg about 80 m from Tyrnau, in a well wooded district, with a church and extensive manufactures of baskets, and other articles of cane. Pop. 1966

NADUDYAR, two places, Hungary.—1 A market tn. Thither Thales, co. Szabolcs, 20 m W S.W. Delmezin. It has a Protestant and a Catholic church a synagogue, and a considerable trade in all kinds of agricultural produce. Pop. 6171.—2 A vil, co. Pesth with a Catholic church. Pop. 1646

NADLE a tn. and par Switzerland, cant. and 4 m N Glarus, near 1 bank Linth. It stands at the foot of the Bau Giarne contains a handsome church and a Capucin monastery occupying a height on which an ancient castle formerly stood, and has manufactures of pottery. In 1588, a handful of Swiss peasants here signally defeated ten times their number of Austrian troops. Pop. 1847

NADERTON par Eng York (E Riding) 4330 ac. Pop. 1260

NAGAMANGALAM a fortress, Hindoostan presid Madras, prov Mysore lat 12 49' N lon 76° 48' E It has a square citadel in which are two Hindoo temples, and all the public granaries and store-rooms.

NAGAP—1 A small tn. or vil Central Assa, principal place of a petty state, also called Nagap, on the banks of an affluent of the Ghight defended by a fort.—2 A considerable walled tn, Afghani tan on the plain of Dainow W of the Indus, and at the foot of the Salt or Kala Dagh range of mountains. It is a commercial place, and has a good bazaar. The surrounding country is fertile and well cultivated.

NAGARA—1 A tn, in Horoe, in Banjerassian, where metal pieces capable of firing 3 lb. shot, and muskets, are made. It has a considerable trade in deer's skin and deer's horns, sold chiefly to the Chinese. The deer are hunted in herds and taken with affian cords, and afterwards killed 50, 60 and even as many as 100, are sometimes taken at one time.—2 A river, Banjerassian an affluent of the Ranjer which it joins about 85 m N N.E. the town of Banjerassian after a S.W. course of about 100 m. through a fertile and populous district.

NAGARANU a tn. Hindoostan kingdom of Ondé, dist Bainswara, about 70 m E.S.E. Lucknow. Pop. 5000

NAGHERLE a military station and fort, Hindoostan principality Sikkim 87 m N N.E. Purneah lat. 26 56' N, lon 86 50' E. It is a place of great strength naturally and is considered the key to the hills in this quarter.

NAGOLD a tn Württemberg circle Schwarzwald on the Nagold 26 m S.W. Stuttgart. It contains the ruins of an old castle and a bathing establishment, erected over a mineral spring and has manufactures of woollen and linen cloth tanneries, dye-works, and worsted mills and a trade in wood. Pop. 2597

NAGONE or NAGORA a large vil Hindoostan, prov and 100 m S.W. Allahabad, composed of mud houses, roofed with tiles lat. 24 87 N lon 80° 25' E NAGORE several places Hindoostan.—1 A tn prov Bengal 63 m W.S.W. Moorshabadi lat. 23 55' N lon 87 20 E of great antiquity having been a celebrated fortress as early as 1244 when it was esteemed the bulwark of the Bengal province against the incursions of the W. mountaineers. An area of 10 m. in diameter round the town, was formerly enclosed by a mud rampart and entrenchment, which is still in tolerable preservation. The ruins of a palace, belonging to former rajahs, seated on the margin of the sea tank, with several mosques, are all the vestiges that now remain of this ancient town.—2 A walled tn prov Rajpootana, 68 m N.E. Jondpur famous for its manufactures in brass and iron. Water scarce. Pop. about 40 000.—3 A seaport in coast of Coremandel lat. 10° 49' N 4 m N Negapatam It is populous has several good streets and well-stocked bazars, and a considerable number of trading vessels, some of 200 and 300 tons burthen. There is here a curious mineral.

150 ft high and several white pagodas, that form excellent sea-marks, erected at different times by the nabobs of the Carnatic. A considerable trade is carried on in piece goods, rice, &c., with Sumatra, Malacca, &c. The harbour is formed by the Nagore, and has 6 ft. on the bar at high water. The anchorage is 3 or 4 m off the entrance, in 5 or 6 fathoms. The coast is low and at times inundated near the mouth of the river.

NAGOTAMA a tn Hindoostan, prov Arrungnag, 57 m. S.S.E. Bombay lat. 18° 30' N. lon. 73° 16' E.; with a remarkable stone bridge of admirable masonry.

NAGPOOR or BICKAR (Kumbhwar), India. See BEHAR. According to the parliamentary report on the trigonometrical survey of India, printed in 1851 the area of Nagpoor is 76,452 sq. m. and the population 4,650,000.

NAGPOOR or NAGPORE, a large tn Hindoostan, cap above kingdom, 440 m. N.N.E. Bombay lat. 21° 9' N. lon. 79° 11' E. It occupies a low situation, is of very irregular figure and 7 m in circumference. The principal streets, with one exception, are narrow, mean and dirty, intersected by many lanes and water courses, which last during the rains swell to torrents frequently impassable. The principal building is the rajah's palace but it has no pretensions to either beauty or splendour being completely choked up by mud and cluttered both close under the walls. Some of the principal clubs and bankers have large houses of brick and mortar with flat roofs, but most of them are old and dilapidated. It is a military station and contains some missionary schools. Pop. about 115,000.

NAGY ALMAJ, two places, Austria, Transylvania — 1. A vil. co. Hódos, near Klausenburg, with a Greek church. Pop. 1248. — 2. A vil. co. Havrad on an affluent of the Maros, 26 m from Sibot with a Greek church. Pop. 950.

NAGY ALÓD, a vil. Austria, Transylvania, 6 m from Bismark with two churches. Pop. 1401.

NAGY ASZAR, a market tn Hungary, co. Szeged, on the Unga, 42 m. N.W. Fodlarburg, with a Franciscan monastery and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1066.

NAGY BALON, a vil. Hungary, co. Buzsach about 10 m. from Maros with a trade in cattle and wine. Pop. 2054.

NAGY BETHA, a market tn Hungary, co. Trenbchin, a bank wagg about 9 m. from Silem with a R. Catholic church a synagogue an ancient castle manufactures of earthenware and a trade in timber. Pop. 2980.

NAGY BOGNER, a vil. Hungary, co. Marmaros on the Theiss, 5 m. from Sargeth with a Greek church, and salt-works. Pop. 2355.

NAGY BUC, a vil. Austria, Transylvania, near Sasnt Martony with a Protestant and a Greek church. Pop. 1494.

NAGY CSEZ, or SCHÖNBACH, a vil. Transylvania, near Hermaudstadt with a Protestant and a Greek church. Pop. 1680.

NAGY DIBOR, a vil. Austria. See HETAU.

NAGY VÁRAD, a tn Hungary. See KÖNYVÁRDEIR.

NAGHAN, a tn Hindoostan, cap of princely territory 128 m. N. by E. Delhi, lat. 30° 35' N. lon. 77° 16' E. 32,677 above sea level. It is a neat town and open town, built of stone, and a place of considerable strength.

NAJIBA, a river Germany which rises in an isolated district of Oldenburg in the S. of Rhenish Prussia flows N.E. then E., separating Rhenish Prussia from the Hesse Homburg district of Mossemburg and Rhenish Bavaria and finally N. between Rhenish Prussia and Hesse-Darmstadt, to its confluence with the Rhine, at Bingen. Its principal affluents are on the r., the Glan, Alsea, and Appel and on the l., the Iran Hain Flech, and Simmer total courses, about 75 m. of which 25 m., commencing at the confluence of the Glan are navigable.

NAIR-EL-AST a river Syria. See ASBY.

NAIAD a group of low coral isls. N. Pacific, Caroline Is. lat. 5° 39' N. lon. 153° 32' E. They are connected by coral reefs, forming a lagoon inside occupying an area 15 m. in circuit are covered with cocoa nut and bread-fruit trees and appear to be well inhabited. Between this group and that of Young William there is a clear passage, 6 m. wide.

NAJALA, a tn Bavaria, circle Upper Franconia, 1 bank Salza, 38 m. N.E. Bamberg with a church, and woollen and cotton manufactures, also, wheat, rice and copper works a quarry of green marble, several mills, and some trade in cattle. Pop. 1610.

NAILEEA par Eng Somerset, 2771 ac. Pop. 2543.

NAILEEA a vil and par England, co. Somerset, a station on the Bristol and Exeter Railway, 6 m. S.S.W. Bristol with an ancient parish church, surrounded by a lofty embankment, and planned tower, Independent and Wesleyan chapels an extensive manufactory of crown glass, numerous collieries, and quarries of building and paving stone. Pop. 2350.

NAILETONE, par Eng. Leicestershire, 2506 ac. Pop. 668.

NAILESWORTH, a tn England co. Gloucester, on the road from Bath to Cheltenham 2 m. W.S.W. Minchin Hamp-ton; with an Episcopal chapel places of worship for Independents Baptists, Wesleyans and Friends, a philosophical institution, and several woollen cloth factories, in which almost all the inhabitants are employed. Pop. 1121.

NAIMAN, a tn. Central Asia, Khanat and 17 ro. S.S.E. Khiva on a canal from the Amoo. It lies high is surrounded by a well-kept wall, and has a fertile soil the cultivation of which is the chief employment of the inhabitants.

NAIN, a tn Hindoostan kingdom of Oude, dist. Seion, about 45 m. N.W. Allahabad. Pop. 10,000.

NAIN, a tn Palestine mentioned in the New Testament as the place where our Saviour performed one of the most remarkable and interesting of his miracles, by restoring the widow's son to life. The locality has never been lost sight of, but the town, now called Nain and about 3 m. S. by W. Mount Thabor has dwindled into a small hamlet.

NAIRAI one of the Fergana isls, 5 Pandes, famous for its manufactures of mats, baskets, &c. in which a large ex-change trade is carried on with the other islands of the group.

NAIRN or NAIRNBERG, a small tn. co. Scotland, bounded N. by the Moray or Murray Firth E. by co. Elgin or Moray S. E. by a detached portion of co. Inverness W. by a detached portion of Ligon and W. by Inverness, cap. Nairn. It is about 22 m. long N. to S. and 13 m. broad E. to W. It is 300 sq. m. or 128,000 ac. of which about 20,000 ac. are under cultivation. The S. part of the county is hilly and composed of granite and granite rocks the lower valleys are occupied by the old red sandstone and are of a more fertile nature. Marl and freestone are found — the former in abundance. The principal rivers are the Findhorn, along which much beautiful and picturesque scenery occurs and the Nairn both having their sources in the co. Inverness and flowing in nearly parallel courses, S.S.W. to N.N.E. There are a few small lakes, the largest in the N. part of the county. The soil is various along the coast. It is generally a rich loam on a sandy or gravelly bottom or a stiff rich clay. Considerable attention has been paid to the improvement of the breeds of cattle. There are about 8000 ac. of natural wood remaining, and about 4000 ac. of plantation the latter said to be, generally in a thriving state. The only manufacture is a little woollen cloth. The chief trade consists in the export of timber corn sheep cattle, and salmon. Pop. (1851), 9360.

NAIRN a royal burgh and seaport Scotland, cap. above co. 1 bank and near the mouth of the Nairn. It is a clean healthy little town and consists of one spacious, and several narrow and irregular streets lighted with gas. It has a jail and a courthouse a handsome academy an Established and a Free church, several Dissenting chapels, and an elegant Episcopal chapel. Coal lime, groceries, &c., are imported and timber, fish, stones, and grain exported. The harbour is formed chiefly by a pier at the mouth of the river but, from the accumulation of sand it is not accessible to vessels of large size. The cod and haddock fisheries are very extensive. Nairn is fast rising into repute as a watering-place for which all the usual conveniences and amusements have been established including bathing &c. The environs are pleasant and finely varied. Pop. burgh (1851) 8430.

NAJAG, a tn. France, dept. Aveyron, 1 bank Aveyron, here crossed by a handsome stone bridge, 80 m. W.S.W. Rodez. It is commanded by an old castle whose masonry walls resisted the wild attempts of the revolutionists of 1793 to overthrow them, and has manufactures of serge and peak sheeting and a trade in flax for which the town is famous, linen, cattle, prunes, and hemp. Pop. 1368.

NAJADASS, a vil Hungary, forming a Walschitz-illy rian regemental district about 10 m. from Walschitz, on the Nairn with a Greek non united church. Pop. 1735.

NAJERA, a tn Spain Old Castile, prov. and 6 m. W. Logroño 1 bank Najerilla, streets generally dark, dirty and indifferently paved. It has a courthouse, a large and substantial prison, two primary schools, three small hospitals, three parish churches, two convents, two promenades, two tanneries, seven flour-mills and a few looms for ordinary linens, wine, garden stuffs, and fruits, are exported. Although a place of little importance now, Najera was once the residence of the kings of Navarre and here St. Ferdinand was crowned. Some traces of its former splendour may be found in the Benedictine monastery of St. Mary where he entombed 65 bodies of the royal families of Castile and Navarre. Pop. 3590.

NAJERILLA, a river, Spain, Old Castile, prov. Logroño. It flows N. and joins the Ebro 8 m N by E. Najera toll course, about 20 m. It abounds in excellent trout, barbel and eels.

NAKAB-AT-HAJAR, a ruined city in S. Arabia, Hail-mant, lat. 14° 40' N lon 47° 35' E, on a hill, which stands out in the centre of an extensive and fertile valley, called, by the natives Wadi Mafrah. It presents nothing but a mass of ruins, surrounded by a wall its history is unknown but it is supposed to date from a very remote period.

NAKEL, or NACKEL, a tn. Prussia, gov. Posen, gov. and 16 m. W Bromberg, r bank Netze, and at the commencement of the Bromberg canal. It has two churches and a synagogues manufactures of woollen cloth hats and leather and some trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 2188.

NAKHITSCHIEWAN, two places, Russia — 1 A tn. gov. Ekaterinodar dist. and 7 m E N E Bostor r bank Don. It stands on a height. Some wide, regular and well cleaned streets and is built of good houses, generally in the Oriental style. 1 contains three churches a convent school and printing-press, all Armenian, and a large bazaar well supplied with all kinds of merchandise from Persia and India has manufactures of cotton and silk stuffs, and morocco leather soap-works and brandy distilleries and carries on an extensive trade both with the inhabitants of the neighbouring districts and the more distant Tartary, Kazan and Cossacks. It also has relations with Astrakhan and Constantinople. One of the most lucrative branches of its trade is pearls and precious stones. The inhabitants are almost all Armenians, the town having been originally the one of an Armenian bishop, who some time the residence of the Armenian Patriarch. Pop. (1803) 14,105.—2 A tn. Trans-Caucasia, on an elevated plain near 1 bank Aras, 175 m S Tiflis said to have been founded by Noah. It consists of regularly formed streets and near, well built houses, mostly of freestone, but partly of wood plastered with mortar and all covered with tiles and has a considerable number of well-stocked shops, three churches, and a townhouse, manufactures of morocco leather earthenware, &c. tile works, and a considerable trade with the adjoining districts. Pop. (1842) 1998.

NAKHODLI, a tn. Persia, prov. Azerbijan S.S.W. lake Urumiyah. On a height overlooking the town is a quadrangular fort with eight bastions.

NAKILLO a maritime tn. Persia, prov. Laristan lat. 28° 38' N lon 55° 30' E, with a fort and a detached tower for its protection. Near the shores are regular settlements, but the anchorage is exposed to N.W. winds.

NAKO, a vil. Tibet, dist. Pits or Spits among the W Himalayas, 12,000 ft. above sea-level and on the shoulder of the great mountain, Porygel, which has an additional height of 10,000 ft. 108 m N.E. of Sini. It contains a Buddhist temple, surrounded with full-sized figures of the different incarnations of Buddha, and, though too high for fruit-trees, grows crops of grain, particularly barley. The inhabitants have the pure Tartar physiognomy.

NAKO NAKO, a group of small islands, W coast, Isl. Sumatra, W from (a) Nias lat. 0° 50' N governed by a rajah NAKOFALVO, or NAKOFALVO, a vil. Hungary Thither Thales, co. Torontal, 37 m. E. by N Temesvar, in a fertile gran district. It has a church. Pop. 3206.

NAKSEKOV (Latin Naxos) a tn. Denmark, the largest and most important on Isl. Laaland on a flood of same name. It was at one time fortified, and exports a great deal of corn. Near it, finally situated on the flood, is the old castle of Asilholm or Christiansholm, once a place of great strength, which figures much in the early history of Denmark. Its extensive garden possesses the richest collection of exotic plants of any private garden in the kingdom. Pop. (1851) 2855.

NAL, a small walled tn. Baluchistan lat. 27° 30' N lon. 65° 50' E. with a fort, and supposed to be of great antiquity.

NALABU or AKALABU a seaport tn. Sumatra N.W. coast kingdom of Aceh lat. 4° 30' N lon 96° 5' E. It has a considerable trade in pepper gold dust, &c. Provisions abundant, and moderate in price. anchorage in 5 to 7 fathoms, tolerably sheltered by a reef from N.W. winds.

NAL E OASA and UASA, two towns, nearly contiguous Lower Austria, near the Schottstadel, about 5 m. from Tetschendorf in a district covered with vineyards. They have a parish church, and a trade in wine. Pop. 21195.

NALCHA, a tn. Hindostan prov. Malwa, Indore 2000 ft. above sea-level lat. 22° 25' N, lon. 75° 29' E. It is an ancient place mostly ruined but partly rebuilt in 1830. Among its remains are a palace, mosque, and a fine artificial lake and the whole country for some distance, attests the former magnificence by the ruins of mosques and other public buildings.

NALDA, a tn. Spain, Old Castile, prov. and 6 m. S.S.W. Logroño, r bank Ebro. It has a church, a townhouse an old castle, primary school, and suppressed Franciscan convent manufactures of common linen two distilleries, several oil and flour mills, and a trade in fruit, vegetables, and wine. Pop. 4782.

NALINVES, a vil and opm Belgium prov. Hainaut 27 m E Mons with two breweries a bleachfield, two corn-mills and a trade in corn. Pop. 1514.

NALLIKKE, a tn. France, dep. Vendée, about 17 m. W Fontenay-le-Comte with a large manufactory of oil from rapeseed a tannery and some trade in corn. Pop. 1040.

NALON (name Nadun) a river Spain, Asturias, prov. Oviedo. It rises about 27 m S.E. Oviedo flows W.N.W. through a coal country, receives the Candul, Trubia, Pignua and Nora, and falls into the Bay of Biscay at Naves, total course, about 60 m. It is well supplied with fish.

NAMALOUK IBLANDS, a group of several islands, Pacific Ocean Caroline Is. lat. 5° 55' N lon 151° 10' E. They are low, 3 m. to 2 m. each in circumference, and almost entirely covered with coconuts and bread-fruit trees, numerous uninhabited, and all surrounded and connected with a coral reef which furnishes trapping and pearl-oyster.

NAMAQUA (GRAP AND LITTLE See HOTTENTOTS).

NAMAQUA (ALAND See HOTTENTOTS).

NAMAQLAS See HOTTENTOTS.

NAMENY two places, Hungary — 1, (Kis) A vil Thither Thales, co. Szatmar 9 m from Keszthely-Bemolny with a Protestant church. Pop. 1811.—2 (Fenecs) A market tn. co. Bergh, 1 bank Tisza, 65 m S.E. Kacsan with a Protestant church a synagogues, and an old castle. Pop. 809.

NAMESZLO a market to Hungary Thither Danube, co. Arva on the White Arva 55 m N.E. Kremnitz with a church, synagogues, handsome manor-house and a considerable trade in linen with Transylvania. Pop. 1068.

NAMIRACHI, two places Austria, Moravia — 1, A market tn. circle and 27 m N. of the town, here crossed by a stone bridge of seven arches. It has a church and manufactures of woollens and casimires. On a rocky eminence, on the opposite side of the river is an old castle, in which one of the most extensive cloth factories in the empire has been established. Amethysts and topazes are found in the vicinity. Pop. 3200.—2 A market tn., circle and 10 m W Olmitz, on the Elava with a church and an old and a new castle. Pop. 800.

NAMONOLITU a coral at group, 1 seide Ocean Caroline Is. lat. 8° 35' S lon 149° 47' E to 150° 31' E.

NAMOURA one of the Friendly Islands. See ATRA MOORA.

NAMSLAU a walled tn. Prussia Silesia, gov. and 31 m E Breslau 1 bank Wula. It has a castle, two churches, an hospital and infirmary a courthouse, and provincial and city courts manufactures of woollens flannels, and ribbons, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 3924.

NAMUR, a prov. Belgium bounded, N by Brabant, N.E. by Leige, N.W. Luxembourg, S and S.W. France, and W. Hainaut greatest length, N to S of m. greatest breadth, 37 m, area, 1418 sq. m. The surface of this province is greatly diversified, exhibiting alternately mountain and valley wide level plains, and wooded heights. In many parts, particularly on the banks of the Meuse and Sambre, the scenery is very picturesque so much so, that part of the road from Namur to Dinant, has been named Little Switzerland. Almost the whole province belongs to the carboniferous system, and is characterized by its usual strata of limestone, sandstone, shale, coal and iron. The only varieties of coal worked within this province are a pure subbituminous coal or splint, not intense enough to caking and an earthy coal, called terre houille. Iron also, and lead and sulphur are found and building stone slate, marble, porcelain and pipe-clay abound. The province is well watered by the Meuse, with its tributary Liese, proceeding from the S. and the Sambre from the W. uniting at Namur, and then flowing E. These rivers abound in fish. About one-half of the whole surface is cultivated, one-third in wood, and somewhat more than one-eighth is waste. The chief vegetable productions are the ordinary cereals, oil-seeds, cherry fruit, medicinal and dye-plants. In some places the vine is cultivated. The extensive forests furnish good timber and fuel for the iron-works and shelter large numbers of game and vermin. The industry of the province, both manufacturing and commercial, is largely developed. Its vitriol is particularly famous. For administrative purposes, Namur is divided into three arrondissements—Namur, the capital, Dinant, and Philippeville subdivided into 16 military and 15 civil cantons. Pop. (1849), 268,143, nearly all of whom speak Wallon.

NAMUR (Flemish, Namuren; German Aachen; Latin, Nemurum) a town in Belgium cap above prov at the confluence of the Sambre and Meuse, 35 m. S.E. Brussels. It is surrounded by walls, and is a place of great strength being defended by good works on both banks of the Meuse and Sambre, and also by a citadel seated on steep rocks, rising up at the confluence of the two rivers. It is entered by four principal and seven minor gates and maintains a communication between its different quarters by means of two bridges—one of three arches across the Sambre, and another of nine arches across the Meuse. The town is beautifully situated and is, on the whole, well built, with clean and spacious streets, and several handsome squares. Frequent sieges and bombardments have deprived the town of almost all its ancient buildings. Among those of more recent times are the cathedral, one of the most handsome modern churches of Belgium; the church of St. Loup, the church of Notre Dame, and the churches of St. Nicolas, St. Joseph, and St. Jean Baptiste; the Hotel de Ville, and the belfry tower. Namur is the seat of a bishop, the seat of a court of assizes and of courts of first resort and commerce and possesses a chamber of commerce, a royal observatory, a Jesuit college, an academy of painting, a school of design and architecture, a public library, a mineral and philosophical cabinet, a chemical laboratory, an agricultural society, a seminary, an episcopal normal and various other schools, a penitentiary, a deaf and dumb asylum and several other benevolent institutions, an arsenal, and barracks.

NAMUR.—From Schinkel's Sketches on the Meuse.

Namur is the Belgian Sheffield, and is famous for cutlery. Tunneling, which consumes nearly a tenth of the population, is the other great staple. The export trade is considerable, and is greatly favoured by two navigable rivers. Other means of communication are ample. Steamers ply daily on the Meuse; and railways give easy access to Brussels, Mons, and the French frontier. Namur dates from the seventh century, under the name of Nannum, Narionum, Narionum, and Nannum. It was taken by Louis XIV. in 1692, and retaken by William III. of England, in 1693. Its fortifications were demolished by Joseph II. of Austria, in 1784 and restored in 1817. Pop. (1846) 22,218.

NAN CHANG, a city China, cap prov Kiangsu, r bank Kan-Kiang lat. 38° 40' N. lon. 115° 40' E. surrounded by a wall 8 m. in circumference. It is accessible by water from all sides. Barrow estimates the shipping he saw before the place, independently of innumerable small craft, at 100,000 tons.

NAN LING, a mountain range, China, which separates the basins of the Yangtze Kiang and Kan-Kiang and provs Quangtung and Quangse from Hoonan and Kweichow.

NANA numerous places, Hungary particularly — 1, (Also) Thither Danube co. Tolna with a Greek church. It stands in a well cultivated district, in which a good deal of wine is produced. Pop. 1057 — 2 (Also) Co Tolna with a Protestant church. Excellent tobacco is grown in the district. Pop. 1873 — 3 (Also) Thither Theiss, co. Herve, in a marshy district, on the Theiss, 29 m. S.E. Erlau with a court of justice, and a Calvinistic church. Pop. 2847.

NANAN, a town Hungary Thither Theiss, co. Szabolcs, Haszduk dist. on the borders of a very extensive morass, about 60 m. E. Erlau. It has a Protestant and a R. Catholic parish church, and a considerable trade in cattle and agricultural produce. Pop. 7787.

NANCHE a town China, prov Chekiang beautifully situated in a valley of some name, at the confluence of a stream with the Hoo-chow about 40 m. W. Yau-chow. It has a neat and clean appearance, much resembling that of an English town, and consists of houses, generally of two stories ranged along the banks of the river with a picturesque hill behind. It appears to be about 8 m. in extent, and to carry on a very extensive trade, the river being covered with boats, which are constantly plying between it and Yau-chow, Hangchow, and many other places both above and below. Pop. about 200,000. — (Fortuna's Tea Districts of China.)

NANCOWRY one of the Nicobar Isles Bay of Bengal, lat. 27° 57' N. lon. 93° 45' E., about 25 m. in circumference soil rich, yielding great quantities of coconuts and other fruits, including plantains, limes, tamarinds betelnut, and mulluri, a species of bread fruit. Between this island and two adjoining islands, there is a spacious anchorage, in which vessels may lie in perfect security.

NANCY (Latin, Nannecum) a town France, cap. dep. Meurthe, finely situated in a fertile plain, near L. de Bourmont, 177 m. E. Paris on the railway to Strasbourg. It has been styled the prettiest town in France, and the garden, though somewhat extravagant, is not altogether undeserved. It is divided into the old and the new town. The former is, for the most part, irregularly built, streets narrow and winding, but several of the buildings are elegant, and not a few of them compensate, by their antiquity for the want of uniformity in their structure. The new town is remarkably elegant, streets straight and spacious, intersecting each other at right angles and the houses, almost without exception, handsome. The Place Royale, surrounded by six corners the public buildings, and communicating, by a triumphal arch, with the Place Carrière, has seldom been surpassed. The principal edifices are the cathedral, a modern structure in the Italian style, the church of St. Eptre with a lofty tower and a fine portal; the church of the Cordeliers, built in 1484, and containing the tombs of several dukes of Lorraine, the ducal chapel, entered from the church of the archbishop, and built in the form of an octagonal mausoleum; the Hotel de Ville, the university royal college, theatre, barracks, museum library, and several hospitals. In the Place Royale is a fine statue of Stanislas Leszczynski king of Poland, who passed the latter years of his life here as duke of Lorraine, and bestowed upon the town many of its finest modern embellishments. The Cours d'Orleans, occupying the highest part of the town, and finely planted is the principal promenade. Nancy is the seat of a bishop, possesses courts of first resort and commerce a con- sulting chamber of manufactures, a university an academy a central agricultural society, an academy of sciences, a second day school of medicine, a botanical garden, a school of surgery and a theological seminary. &c. The manufactures consist of broad-cloth, and other woollen stuffs, homery, lace, all kinds of embroidery, stamped paper, silk, liquors, chemical products &c. There are also numerous cotton-mills, dy- works and tanneries. The trade is in corn, wine, brandy, leather wool &c., and there are three fairs—two of two days each, and one of twenty days. The most memorable event in the town of Nancy, is the battle fought under its walls, when the duke of Burgundy (Charles the Rash), was signally defeated by René II. duke of Lorraine and lost his life. Pop. (1852) 88,706.

NANDAN SAR, a small lake, Cashmere, hold in high reverence by the Hindoos, and visited by them in pilgrimage. lat 33° 21' N, lon 74° 30' E.

NANDERE, or NANDARA, a tn and dist Hindoostan, Decan, Nizam's dominions. The town on L. bank Godavary 136 m N N W Hyderabad lat 19° 18' N lon 77° 55' E. contains a good fortress, built of stone and is a place of general pilgrimage to the pilgrims of the Sikh religion.—The district is about 150 m long by 85 m broad fertile well watered and capable of being much improved.

NANDRAG, a vil Hungary. Hither Thelus, co. Gömör at the foot of Mount Zelenik about 30 m from Tornallya with a Protestant church, several distilleries, and a transit trade, as well as a trade in iron. Pop 851.

NANEH, a tn, Afghanistan 30 m S Ghuznee lat 33° 26' N lon 68° 12' E near the W extremity of the extensive plain of Khetay, on the bank of an affluent of the Ghuznee. Elevation above the sea, 7502 ft.

NANFIO on Isl. Granian Archipelago. See AWATITI.

NANGASAKI or NAGASAKI one of the five imperial cities of Japan and the only place in the empire open to foreigners and that only through Desima (wharf see). It is situated on a peninsula formed by the deep bay of Ohomura, W coast, Isl. Kiusiu, lat 32° 43' 52" N lon 129° 43' 53" E. The harbour of Nangasaki is deep about 4 m long, and 1 m broad, affords safe anchorage is sheltered from all winds, and defended by numerous batteries on its shores and islands. The town and its suburbs contain 92 streets, 11,451 houses spreading up the side of one of the hills by which the har- bour is skirted. The houses, being constructed of wood, with a mixture of clay and chopped straw and paper win- dows are very inflammable, and conflagrations are frequent. Each house is enclosed by a verandah, and has a garden be- hind, invariably laid-out, however small, with the greatest effort at the picturesque rockeries, water falls, lakes, and a family chapel, are amongst the most frequent of the orna- ments. Japanese contains two government palaces, three of the princes of Fisen and Takuma, who furnish alternately the supplies of the port the offices of the charges d'affaires of the princes of Satsuma, of Tamsima, and of the other pro- vinces of Kansa. a college of interpreters for the Dutch and Chinese; a Dutch factory on the artificial island of Daimon and a Chinese factory called To-shin-yaki forming the S. suburb. It has, likewise, a prison a house for the insane, an arsenal a botanical garden, several theatres, and a great num- ber of tea-houses and other places of amusement, and is the rendezvous of merchants, learned men, and idlers from all parts of the empire. Its port is filled with ships and its shops and warehouses, for the sale of porcelain—of which there are here an extensive manufactory—spices, cotton, silk, and China goods, are very numerous. There are 61 temples within a short dis- tance of Nangasaki. Like the private houses, these temples are plainly built, and unconsumed, always encircled by a verandah, and surrounded by many smaller temples, like shrines, and enclosed in a garden. The larger ones are called yamato, the smaller ones 'myas. The Japanese and Dutch assert to the gardens as places of amusement. In most of the temples are large rooms, inappropriate to the service of the gods, used for the accommodation of travellers or let out as banqueting rooms. Pop. (Siebold) 38,127 exclusive of mili- tary and about 6000 priests, monks, and others, in the employ- ment of the Shogun. Some estimates raise it to 70,000.

NANGIS [anc. Nangasema] a tn France, dep. Seine-et- Marne, 17 m. E N E Melun with a somewhat clumsy Gothic church, the remains of a strong castle manufactures of leather and a trade in cattle corn, Eric cheese, poultry &c. P 1919.

NANJINGODE a vil Hindoostan, Decan, prov and 15 m S. Mysore, on the Kapul, which, in the vicinity, is crossed by a native bridge, consisting of a long series of tall pointed arches, each about 5 ft wide and remarkable for the solidity of the architecture. The village contains a celebrated temple of Iwa.

NANKA a group of three small isls Indian Archipelago, in the Strait of Banca. They possess good water.

NANKA ISLANDS, three mls. Indian Archipelago, Strait of Oeapa, between isls. Silliton and Banca, 4 m. or 5 m from the Banca shore. Great Nanka, the largest, is 1½ m in extent, in lat 2° 26' S, lon 105° 48' 30" E. is moderately elevated as is also Little Nanka, but the middle island is low. Ships in want of wood or water frequently touch here to procure a supply, which may be got conveniently on the largest island.

NANKIN [officially Kiangning, a celebrated city China cap. of prov. Kiangnan r. bank Yang-tse-Kiang 640 m. S. by E. Peking, lat 32° 28' N lon 118° 49' E. (N). It is 18 m in cir- cumference, and is surrounded by a wall generally above 40 ft high. The river opposite the city, 1½ m broad 25 fathoms deep, with a rocky bottom, and a current of 3 m to 6 m an hour. The city lies 3 m S. from the Yang-tse-Kiang, but a part of its walls approaches within 700 paces of the water. The principal streets are of moderate breadth, clean, well- paved and lined with handsome shops, but the houses are in general mean, and only one story high. The view of the city from the porcelain tower is said to be exceedingly pleas- ing, the whole interior of the city being visible, and the houses so closely packed that the streets can scarcely be traced while the large trade-like roofs of the temples and the curious gable-ends of the pawnbrokers shops alone out in their various gaudy colours, and the sea of houses which surrounds them. The part of the city occupied by the Man chos is separated by a cross wall from the Chinese town. The great extent of the wall renders the defence of the city difficult besides which it is overlooked from the hills on the E. On that side there are three gates the land towards the river is marshy and the gates are approached on stone cause ways. A deep canal or dike runs up from the river directly under the walls, on the W. serving to strengthen the ap- proaches on that side. The most remarkable structure now existing in Nankin is the porcelain tower called by the Chinese, the Recompensing Favor Monastery built in 1411, pre-eminent above all other similar buildings in China for its completeness and elegance. It is of an octagonal form, 361 ft high and consists of nine stories each adorned with a cornice and gallery and covered with a roof of green tiles, with a bell at each corner which sounds when agitated by the wind. On the top is a pinnacle in the shape of a pine- apple, surmounted by a golden bell. A spiral staircase in the middle of 190 steps, carries the visitor to the summit. In the interior are some apartments richly gilt, and otherwise elaborately adorned. There are, in the city, extensive manufactures of fine sash and crape, and the cotton cloth which foreigners call Nanken derives its name from this city, paper and ink of fine quality and beautiful artificial flowers of pith paper are produced here. Nankin is cele- brated also for its scholarly and literary character, as well as manufactures having many large libraries and book-stores. It is the residence of the governor-general of three provinces, and, consequently the centre of a large concourse of officials, educated men, and students seeking for promotion.

Nankin was, at one time, the most celebrated city in the Chinese empire, and capital of S. China. But, since the seat of Government was transferred to Peking, it has lost its im- portance, and a great part of its population about a third of its area being it is supposed, now unoccupied. The ancient wall of the city can be traced for 35 m., but all its ancient palaces have disappeared, and the only remarkable remains of royalty now extant are some sepulchral statues, situated near the walls. It was at Nantes that the British compelled the Chinese to assent to their terms of peace in 1842. Pop. estimated at 400,000.

NANNECH is near Wales, Denbigh and Flint. P. 331. NANOUIKI and Pacific lat. 0° 11' N. lon. 178° 59' 30" E. 64 m. long, and 8½ m. wide at the E. and diminishing to 2 m. at the W. end, it is of coral formation. It affords neither wood, water nor refreshments. It is, however, thickly inhabited and contains several towns.

NANOUIKI or STONKHAM ISLAND, S. Pacific Ocean, Bishop's Islands; lat. 0° 45' S. lon. 174° 31' E. (s.), 19 m. long, and 8½ m. wide, of coral formation, and partially covered with coconuts, pandanus, and other trees.

NANT is in France, dep. & vegros, 52 m. E.S.E. Rodez. The limestone rocks in the neighbourhood contain a number of very remarkable caverns. Pop. 1628.

NANTGWAII L., par Wales, Cardigan 4603 ac. Pop. 783.

NANTIERRE [Latin Nemetodurum] is in France, dep. Seine, near the Seine 6 ri N. W. Paris, on the railway to St Germain en Laye. It is generally well built and being the reputed birthplace of St Germain, contains a chapel which has long been a noted resort of pilgrims. It has manufactures of glass, wax cloth and chemical products. It is famous for its cakes, and sends a vast number of slaughtered swine to the Paris market. Pop. 2538.

NANTES [Latin, Condominium Nannetense] is in France, dep. Loire inférieure, r. bank Loire, where it receives both the Erdre and the Sèvre-Nantaise, 269 m. N. W.

between the different parts of which is kept up by at least 16 bridges, several of them handsome. The situation, on an important navigable river within 40 m. of the ocean, is most advantageous for commerce; and the whole town is so well placed, and so regularly and, in some parts, so splendidly built, that it justly ranks as one of the finest towns in France. It has a number of elegant squares, which have little by comparison with some of the best in the capital. Its quays, which line the banks of the river, are particularly magnificent and form a promenade of almost unequalled variety and beauty. They extend nearly two miles, are spacious, well planted, and adorned with elegant mansions, while the shipping which crowds the harbour of La Fosse, and the number of vessels which are ever in motion on the surface of the stream give great animation to the scene. The public edifices most deserving of notice are the cathedral externally an unassuming pile, from the undrained towers not rising much higher than the roof, but possessed of a fine portal richly sculptured, the castle, an enormous mass of irregular buildings, flanked with round towers the castle of Bonifay, with a very lofty polygonal tower the Hotel de la Préfecture, with two fine façades of the Ionic order and regarded as the handsomest edifice of Nantes the exchange with a peristyle of 10 Ionic pillars supporting an entablature adorned with 10 statues, each corresponding to a pillar the theatre museum of natural history picture-gallery old mint, now occupied by the courts of justice public library containing 30,000 volumes and several valuable MSS the chapter-house and Hotel Dieu or general infirmary Besides the promenade of La Fosse already mentioned, those of St. Peter and St. Andrew opening into each other, of Henry IV and of the people, are deserving of notice. Nantes is the see of a bishop, and possesses courts of first resort and commerce, a chamber of commerce and exchange a conseil de prud'hommes a bank, college, diocesan seminary, and secondary ecclesiastical school a secondary school of medicine, a hydrographical school of the first class, an agricultural, a horticultural, and an industrial school. The manufactures consist of woollen coarse, super, flannel printed stuff, canvas, varnished hats, marine cordage, chemical products, glue, ship biscuits, &c. there are also

THE CASTLE AND CATHEDRAL, NANTES.—From Tour de la Cathédrale, La Loire.

1. Hôtel St. Pierre (Cathédrale).
2. Hôtel St. Pierre.
3. Hôtel St. Pierre.
4. Hôtel St. Pierre.
5. Hôtel St. Pierre.
6. Hôtel St. Pierre.
7. Hôtel St. Pierre.
8. Hôtel St. Pierre.
9. Hôtel St. Pierre.
10. Hôtel St. Pierre.
11. Hôtel St. Pierre.
12. Hôtel St. Pierre.
13. Hôtel St. Pierre.
14. Hôtel St. Pierre.
15. Hôtel St. Pierre.
16. Hôtel St. Pierre.
17. Hôtel St. Pierre.
18. Hôtel St. Pierre.
19. Hôtel St. Pierre.
20. Hôtel St. Pierre.

1. Hôtel St. Pierre.
2. Hôtel St. Pierre.
3. Hôtel St. Pierre.
4. Hôtel St. Pierre.
5. Hôtel St. Pierre.
6. Hôtel St. Pierre.
7. Hôtel St. Pierre.
8. Hôtel St. Pierre.
9. Hôtel St. Pierre.
10. Hôtel St. Pierre.
11. Hôtel St. Pierre.
12. Hôtel St. Pierre.
13. Hôtel St. Pierre.
14. Hôtel St. Pierre.
15. Hôtel St. Pierre.
16. Hôtel St. Pierre.
17. Hôtel St. Pierre.
18. Hôtel St. Pierre.
19. Hôtel St. Pierre.
20. Hôtel St. Pierre.

1. Hôtel St. Pierre.
2. Hôtel St. Pierre.
3. Hôtel St. Pierre.
4. Hôtel St. Pierre.
5. Hôtel St. Pierre.
6. Hôtel St. Pierre.
7. Hôtel St. Pierre.
8. Hôtel St. Pierre.
9. Hôtel St. Pierre.
10. Hôtel St. Pierre.
11. Hôtel St. Pierre.
12. Hôtel St. Pierre.
13. Hôtel St. Pierre.
14. Hôtel St. Pierre.
15. Hôtel St. Pierre.
16. Hôtel St. Pierre.
17. Hôtel St. Pierre.
18. Hôtel St. Pierre.
19. Hôtel St. Pierre.
20. Hôtel St. Pierre.

Paris, with which it is connected by railway. The Loire here forms a number of islands, two of which constitute among the finest quarters of the town, the communication city. The manufactures consist of woollen coarse, super, flannel printed stuff, canvas, varnished hats, marine cordage, chemical products, glue, ship biscuits, &c. there are also wool-mills, numerous sugar-refineries, and blossomfields. The building-decks are of great extent and fit out vessels from 1000 tons and under, which have long borne a high name for their sailing properties. The trade is greatly favoured, not merely by the river, but by a canal which communicates with Brest, and, more recently, by the railway which connects Paris with the W coast. It includes a great variety of articles both for the home, the colonial, and the foreign markets, and employs 576 vessels, having an aggregate burden of 69 381 tons. Before the conquest of Gaul by the Romans, Nantes was the capital of the Namnetes. In 445 it valiantly withstood a siege of 60 days by the Huns. During the ninth century, it was thrice taken by the Normans, and almost entirely ruined. In 1118 when it had again become prosperous, an accidental fire reduced the greater part of it to ashes. During the English wars in France, it suffered much repeatedly falling into the hands of opposite parties. For a long time it formed one of the most valuable possessions of the dukes of Brittany but, in 1485, the heiress of the dukedom, Anne of Brittany who was born here, having here married Louis XII., it passed with the rest of her possessions to the crown of France. The most memorable event connected with the history of Nantes is the famous event named here by Henry IV. April 30 1598, securing the Protestants in the free exercise of their religion and making them eligible to all civil and military employments. The revocation of this edict by Louis XIV., in 1685 is still better known than the signing of it, and involved the kingdom in disasters from which it has never completely recovered. P (1837), 85 869

NANTOLYN par Wales, Deming 5800 ac P 346
NANTINA par River Lomeric 7922 ac 1 of 2048
NANTMEL, par Wiler Badner 16,587 ac P 1415
NANTUA Latin Nantua in France, dep. Ain, 20 m. E. Bourg in a wild gorge of the Jura at the E extremity of the lake of its name, bounded by bare precipices and frowning woods. It consists of three nearly parallel streets and has a church originally belonging to an abbey in the Romanesque style a court of first resort, manufactures of muslin, cotton cloth, cashmere tissues, covers, coarse carpets, and bone comb, also several cotton and silk mills, tanneries, distilleries, paper and saw mills and a trade in corn and wine, for which Nantua is an entrepot between France and Switzerland. It is obtained from the lake, cheese, and carp, sheep. Pop 3248

NANTUCKET a vii and port, U States Massachusetts

N side Isl Nantucket, 80 m. E S E. Boston, at the bottom of a bay 6 m long and almost land locked, lat. 41° 10' 56" N lon 70° 0' 12" W. It is compactly built, has narrow streets, and small churches, an academy, with a small library, and was nearly destroyed by fire in July 1845, when 860 buildings were burned down. It was the first town in the U States to engage in the whale fishing, and is still only surpassed in this trade by New Bedford. In 1830 it had an aggregate tonnage of 29 012, of which 19 050 tons were registered in the whale fishery. In 1844 there were brought in 17,817 barrels sperm-oil 6461 barrels whale-oil, and 68,300 lbs whalebone. The harbour is good. Pop. township, 3462.

The island is about 20 m. from the mainland, of a triangular form about 15 m long with an average breadth of 4 m area, 60 sq m. In some parts the soil is very productive, but most of it is sandy and sterile. The land is chiefly held in common, and a large number of sheep and cows are reared. The inhabitants are mostly employed in navigation, and particularly in the whale fishery. This island, with a few small ones adjoining, constitute Nantucket county.

NANTWICH a market to and per England on Cheshire. The town 17 m. S E. Chester, on the railway thence to Crewe, and on both sides the Weaver, here crossed by a beautiful stone bridge, is also intersected by the Birmingham and Liverpool Junction Canal. It has four principal streets, houses, for the most part, of timber and brick, with projecting porches, a magnificent cruciform church several Dissenting chapels, and a Friends' meeting house, a free grammar-school, a blue-cap school and several almshouses. Shoe-making, chiefly for the London and Manchester markets, is the chief branch of manufacture and salt was at one time extensively made. It has also some trade in cheese and other farm produce. Area of par 8165 ac Pop 5871

NAGO, a cape, Spain prov Valencia 47 m. S. E. Alicante, lat. 38° 44' N lon 0° 12' E

NAGOS (Pocov) (Lanarot) in Lanarot S E. side. It is sheltered from the N. E. by rocks and has two entrances with 14 ft. at high water in the N. and 17 ft. in the S. entrance the depth within is 27 to 10 ft.

NAPAGLIDIA a market to Austria Moravia, circle and 5 m. N. by Bratuch 1 bank March with a church and 1 handsome chateau seated on a rocky eminence P 2590

NAPAKIANG the principal seaport of the Loo-Choo islands, lat. 26° 12' 30" N lon. 127° 41' 30" E (p.) It has a secure harbour

NAPKOWIA, a vii Hungary Fidesz 1 house c. 500, 4 m. from Nagy Kalló Pop 1397

NAPI P S (Italian Napoli di Napoli) a former kingdom of Europe now a portion of the kingdom of Italy. The following account refers to the country while still an independent state. It is composed of the S. portion of the Italian Peninsula, and the island of Sicily with its appendant groups, and hence not unfrequently designated by the name of the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies—Sicily a di qua del Faro or Continental Naples and Sicilia a di là del Faro or Sicily I. Naples. As Sicily is described under its own head, the present article is confined exclusively to the continental part of the kingdom consisting of the ankle, year heel and foot of the boot to which Italy as a whole bears so striking a resemblance. The kingdom of Naples, thus limited extends from lat. 37° 55' to 42° 50' N, and lon. 13° 15' to 18° 30' E and is bounded N. by the Adriatic and the Papal States N. W. the Papal States W. S. E. the Medi terranean and N. E. the Adriatic greatest length, N. W. to S. E. 345 m., average breadth about 95 m. For administrative purposes, it is divided into 15 provinces of which the names, area, population and extent under cultivation, &c., are exhibited in the following Table —

| Province | Area in sq. m. | Area in sq. m. | Altitude, m. | Wood area, m. | Pop. habit., 1856 | Cit. or towns | Population, 1856 |
|-----------------------|-------------------|-------------------|-----------------|---------------------|----------------------|---------------|---------------------|
| Abruzzo-Ulteriore | 940 | 701 448 | 614 744 | 76 728 | 315 399 | Chieti | 17 724 |
| Abruzzo-Ulteriore I | 955 | 5 468 | 441 144 | 83 076 | 249 285 | Teramo | 19 809 |
| Abruzzo-Ulteriore II | 1 308 | 1 695 640 | 790 864 | 196 772 | 328 181 | Aquila | 21 109 |
| Bari (Terra Di) | 1 738 | 1 648 932 | 774 444 | 146 364 | 497 438 | Bari | 37 597 |
| Basilicata | 3 184 | 5 617 082 | 1 246 632 | 434 940 | 601 828 | Potenza | 25 820 |
| Calabria-Ulteriore | 1 950 | 1 836 448 | 954 954 | 359 812 | 435 511 | Cosenza | 15 547 |
| Calabria-Ulteriore I | 1 660 | 581 596 | 380 628 | 214 372 | 319 688 | Rossano | 14 628 |
| Calabria-Ulteriore II | 1 650 | 1 554 062 | 8 6 800 | 118 586 | 381 147 | Catanzaro | 14 788 |
| Capitanata | 1 308 | 1 920 581 | 869 736 | 904 416 | 318 416 | Yggria | 26 038 |
| Lucania (Terra Di) | 1 655 | 1 756 576 | 1 081 648 | 117 478 | 750 013 | Casserta | 35 720 |
| Naples | 9 6 | 372 164 | 178 8 8 | 30 35 | 635 142 | Naples | 416 475 |
| Ostento (Terra Di) | 2 171 | 2 050 680 | 1 250 618 | 67 254 | 409 000 | Avellino | 19 897 |
| Principato-Ulteriore | 2 170 | 1 258 620 | 280 58 | 106 103 | 556 609 | Frosinone | 18 628 |
| Principato-Ulteriore | 1 064 | 571 994 | 558 440 | 80 70 | 285 416 | Abruzzo | 26 573 |
| Saragat or Melfe | 1 304 | 381 384 | 586 796 | 299 438 | 280 649 | Lecoropolis | 16 454 |
| Total | 84 658 | 19 988 338 | 11 761 308 | 5 234 375 | 6 010 975 | | |

General Features.—The coast where washed by the Adriatic. Is generally low and unbroken exhibiting only one very marked projection in the spur formed by Mount Garfano, from which the shore, in proceeding N. curves gracefully round, nearly in the shape of a regular arc and in proceeding N. first forms the large Gulf of Manfredonia, and then traces a continuous line almost free from curves, as far as the town of Ostento. The Mediterranean shore is of a different character being for the most part, bold and rocky, broken into numerous bays with projecting headlands, and, in the S. E. so deeply indented by the Gulf of Taranto, as to form two very remarkable peninsulas—the less, on the E. between that Gulf and the Adriatic, and the other stretching far to the S. E. between the same gulf and the opposite shore of the Meditopography. The interior may be generally characterized as mountainous, being traversed by the Apennines, which, entering it from the Papal States, proceed through it from E. and then in a S. direction till they reach its extremity near the Strait of Messina, at the same time throwing off numerous branches, which intersect the country in all directions. Several of the loftiest summits of the Apennines are situated in Naples, among others, Mount Corvo, the culminating point of the whole range, 9619 ft. Mount Averno, 9181 ft., and Mount Vesuvius, 9174 ft. But the surface is not always mountainous. Even between the highest ridges, valleys, generally narrow, but often of great length, intervene. Among the lower ramifications, where the hills assume rounded forms, large undulating tracts, equally distinguished by beauty and fertility are found, and towards the coast, both on its E. and W. side, the hills altogether disappear, and are succeeded by extensive plains. The largest of these is on the E. side, the plain of Apulia, in prov. Capitanata, Bari, and Otranto, but the most celebrated is in Terra di Lavoro, where it forms a deep alluvial flat, stretching N. from the capital along the shore for 40 m., with an average breadth of nearly 30 m.

Rivers.—The rivers of Naples are very numerous, and carry their waters either to the Adriatic or the Mediterranean. They generally take their rise in the Apennines, at no great distance from the coast, and hence are seldom of great magnitude. To the Adriatic belong the Volturno, Pescara, Sangro, Trigno, Riferio, Portora, Candelaro, Cervaro, Carpelle, and the Ofanto, to the Mediterranean, the Garigliano, Volturno, Sole, Basceto, and Irindano. The principal lakes are the Lacus or Fucinus, in A. Bruzio (Umbria) and the lagoons of Lucca and Vulsini in prov. Capitanata, near the shores of the Adriatic.

Climate.—With its surface so greatly diversified the climate necessarily varies much according to locality. In the mountainous districts, where the loftiest summits begin to obtain a covering of snow towards the end of October and retain it for nearly six months thereafter the cold is severe, and makes it impossible to cultivate many plants which grow vigorously under the same latitude, in more favourable circumstances. Even in lower districts, which have a northern exposure the effect is nearly the same, though snow falls seldom, and never lasts long. A very different climate prevails when the surface is low and the hills only serve to protect it from the northern blasts. In such circumstances the summer heat often becomes extreme, but the rigours of winter are unknown, and both spring and autumn are delightful. In the plain of Terra di Lavoro, already mentioned, and several other favoured spots, the climate is of this description, and vegetation, subjected to no check, is always luxuriant, yielding for the slightest exertion of labour the most exuberant returns.

Geology.—In geological structure, the E. of Italy bears a considerable resemblance to the N., though the direction of the strata is nearly reversed. In the N., the primitive rocks of granite and gneiss are situated on the frontiers, and the secondary and tertiary formations come successively to the surface in proceeding S. In Naples, granite, gneiss, and mica schist are the predominating rocks in the S. extremity, and are connected N. with few interruptions, occupying the greater part of the toe of the boot. Patches of Jura limestone appear in the same quarter, but the prevailing strata are modern, and consist chiefly of the marls, travertine, and sandstone, of the tertiary formation. The same formation is largely developed on the shores of the Gulf of Otranto, from which it proceeds N. W. covering a great part of the shore of the Adriatic. It is overlain by calcareous strata, which form a long, narrow belt on the W. side of it, and are succeeded by the Jura limestone. This formation occupies two very extensive tracts—one extending over a large space in the S. part of the kingdom, and the other stretching along the W. coast, between the Gulfs of Polignano and Salerno. Another tract covers the greater part of the province of Bari. A different formation, not yet mentioned, though in some respects more interesting than all the others, is the volcano, which stretches along the Gulf of Naples, and part of that of Otranto, and covers a large part of the province of Terra di Lavoro with the decomposed lavas, to which it owes its remarkable fertility. There can be no doubt here as to the centre of the volcanic agency, which still continues active, and repeatedly within the Christian era, has burst forth and overwhelmed celebrated cities.

Vegetation, Zoology, &c.—In the northern and southern provinces of the kingdom, the rugged and mountainous nature of the surface, in a great measure, excludes the operations of agriculture. A considerable proportion of it is, accordingly occupied by forests, on which magnificent timber is grown, and the remainder, consisting of extensive tracts of natural pasture, is devoted chiefly to the rearing of horned cattle, sheep, and goats. In the southern part of the kingdom, the general but occasionally oppressive warmth of the climate, secures a large amount of produce, though, with a few rare exceptions, the system of agriculture pursued is wretched in the extreme. The crops follow each other without any regular rotation and the implements are of the most antiquated and inefficient description. It is not uncommon to see oxen employed in thrashing out the corn by treading upon it. Wheat, barley, maize, and rye form the principal crops, and, on the finer soils are remarkable both for abundance and quality. On the lower flats, rice is frequently grown. The mulberry and the olive, also, are generally cultivated on a large scale, yielding silk and oil in such quantities as to form important articles of export. Cotton, liquorice, and tobacco form leading crops in particular districts, and many varieties of fruit, especially figs, lemons, and oranges, are very abundant. But the culture which seems to be regarded with most favour and in which most skill is displayed, is that of the vine, which though seldom seen in extensive vineyards, covering large, continuous tracts to the exclusion of other crops, is so generally intermingled with them in all parts of the kingdom, that the aggregate produce must be very great. Several of the wines bear a very high name. Among others may be mentioned the well-known Lacryma Christi and the wine grown like it, on the slopes of Vesuvius. There are few countries in which frugality might be turned to better account, but it appears to be imperceptibly undervalued, and is confined within far too narrow limits. Among domestic animals, by much the most numerous are sheep, to the rearing of which considerable attention is paid. Among horned cattle are several good native breeds and large herds of buffaloes wander over some of the marshy plains. The horses of Calabria, though distinguished in name, have long been famous for activity and spirit, and those in the neighbourhood of Naples were at one time so highly esteemed, as to be in considerable demand in other countries. They have, latterly been allowed to degenerate and the export has all but ceased. The most common beasts of burden are asses and mules. Numerous herds of goats are kept among the mountains and hills, almost in a wild state, are left to seek their food in the forests. There, too, game, both large and small, is very abundant and wolves are not uncommon. Various reptiles, and other animals, many of them venomous infest the more E. parts of the kingdom. Stinging insects exist in such numbers, during the warm months, as to make residents there at that season anything but desirable. Fish abound both in the rivers and on the coasts. On the latter, the tunny and anchovy fisheries are carried on to a large extent, oysters, also, continue to be as celebrated as they were in ancient times, and in many places fine coral is fished up. The minerals of the kingdom have not been properly explored, there are few indications of metals, but beds of rock-salt are found chiefly in Calabria, sulphur in the volcanic region, and alum sulphate, and sulphate in several districts, the quarries furnish excellent marble and lava, which are extensively used both for building and pavement.

Manufactures and Trade.—Manufactures have not made much progress. In some places large factories exist; but, in general, artizans work at home. The most important industrial product is silk, which is not only spun to a large extent, but woven into excellent fabrics. The other principal articles are woollens, flannels, hose, straw hat manufacture, and macaroni. Trade, which, if left to its natural resources, might soon become important, is cramped and almost destroyed by burdensome regulations. Under the pretext of affording protection to native industry the most important foreign products are excluded by enormous duties; and then, in order to secure a revenue, even home products are heavily burdened. In such circumstances, competition with countries where a more enlightened policy prevails is impossible, and trade is necessarily confined to the import of those articles of necessity or luxury which the inhabitants cannot or will not want.

and the export of those in the production of which their native superiority is sufficient to overcome all other disadvantages. The latter consist principally of agricultural produce, wine, oil, liquors, coral, lamb and kid skins, mace, iron, rags and bones. In 1860, there arrived in Neapolitan ports, 23,364 vessels, of which 2371 were foreign aggregate tonnage, 500,507, and there cleared the same, 23,166 vessels, of which 9386 were foreign, tonnage, 807,959. In 1851 the mercantile marine included 10,568 vessels, tonnage, 221,740, being an increase, over 1859 of 8566 vessels, and 65,228 tons.

In carrying on this trade, Naples has the advantage of a great number of excellent harbours but is greatly hampered by the want of sufficient means of internal communication. The only railway yet completed is in immediate communication with the capital—one line stretching from it, in a S. E. direction, close to the coast, and as far as the town of Salerno and another stretching N. to the town of Capua. There is also a branch line to Nola. In Naples, accounts are kept in ducaes which are nearly equal to 8s. 6½d. Sterling. The principal coins are gold-pieces of 50 15 and 5 ducaes, and silver pieces, called carlini, each of which is $\frac{1}{12}$ of a duca. For minor fractions, the carlini is subdivided into 100 grani. For weights, 1 lb. of 12 oz. = 11 oz. avoirdupois, and the rotolo = 81 oz. avoirdupois are used; larger weights are the centaro, of 100 rotoli, and, lesser weights, the once and the ottavo, the former being $\frac{1}{8}$ and the latter only $\frac{1}{16}$ of the lb. For dry measure, the tomolo = 1 45 Winchester bushels, and the corro = 88 tomoli, and for liquid measure, the botto = 62 imperial gallons, the botto = 12 botte, and the corro = 2 botte, are the standards. The principal linear measure is the palm = 10 98 English inches. 8 palmi make a canna, and 7000 palmi a Neapolitan mile = nearly $\frac{1}{16}$ in English. The standard square measure is the pavimento containing $\frac{1}{16}$ square palmi; the paso = 30 pavimenti, and the oggio = 30 pasi. The oggio is equal to 8 rods 12 perches.

The Government of Naples is a hereditary monarchy, which, from the absence or inefficiency of constitutional checks, makes a very near approach to despotism. A nominal parliament holds its sittings regularly at Naples, but its privileges are so restricted that all power, legislative no less than executive, virtually centres in the Crown. Numerous courts ascending gradually to a supreme court of cassation, have been erected for the administration of justice and are said to administer it with considerable impartiality, when the questions to be decided are strictly private, but when they happen to have a political bearing the judges are too apt to become mere tools of the court, indeed it is beyond a doubt that, in regard to political liberty and political justice, no country of Europe stands lower in the scale than Naples. The total number of criminal offences in 1850, was 16,628. Of these, 4016 cases involving 5805 accused, were brought before the high court, when 1799 were liberated and 4518 condemned. The number of accused in 1855, was 5617 being larger in proportion to the population than in 1850. The E. Catholic is the established religion, and is nominally protected by almost all the authorities. Education is scarcely respected, the gross ignorance and misery prevail, and all the thoroughfares swarm with mendicants. It would seem, however, that the natural advantages of the country are so great as to cause a continued increase of population, in circumstances where it might almost be expected to retrograde. In 1855, the population, N. of the Straits of Messina, was 5,946,000. In 1845, it was 5,258,618. The revenue, obtained partly by indirect taxes, but chiefly by an enormous land tax amounting to a fourth of the rent, was estimated, in 1849, at 23,325,935. The army, raised partly by conscription and partly by voluntary enlistment, numbered 64,287 men. The navy consists of one ship-of-the-line of 50 guns, 11 frigates, six of them with steam-power, and a number of smaller vessels, numbering, in all about 500 guns. The total number of persons—sailors, marines, officers, &c.—employed in immediate connection with the navy, is 5882.

History.—Confederal Naples corresponds nearly, in its N. part, to Campana and Samnium, and, in its S. part, to Apulia, Lucania, Messapia, and Bruttium. The last four are often comprehended under the name of Magna Græcia, given to them because long occupied, if not originally peopled, by colonists from Græcia. The frugal lives, and independent and warlike spirit of the natives, have been celebrated by classic historians and poets, but their resistance to Rome proved ineffectual, and, shortly after the defeat of Pyrrhus, they were annexed to the Roman republic, and long formed one of its most valuable portions. On the breaking up of the Roman empire, the country was overrun by hordes of barbarians, and passed successively under the domination of Goths, Lombards, Arabs and Normans. In more modern times, also it has been subjected to numerous vicissitudes. In the early part of the 16th century it came into the possession of Spain, which retained it for nearly two centuries, and governed it by viceroys. In 1734, it was erected into an independent monarchy, in favour of the Infanta Don Carlos, or, as he is sometimes called, Charles of Bourbon. His reign was not without vigour and much good was done but on his accession to the throne of Spain, in 1763 he was succeeded by his son Ferdinand IV, then only in his eighth year. A regency was accordingly established, and the nation experienced all the evils of a long minority. The king himself, when even after he became major showed little inclination to exercise his rights and the Marquis Tanucci who had long been at the head of the regency continued virtually sovereign. Ferdinand, though not devoid of natural talents gave himself up to the pleasures of the table and the chase, pursuing a course which, to say the least of it, was very unkingly. His queen was animated by a very different spirit and, having succeeded in obtaining Tanucci's dismissal, took the reins into her own hand, and managed them with great talent, though too often in a capricious tyrannical and vindictive spirit. The French revolution new broke out, and extending its conquests in all directions ultimately established its ascendancy even in Naples. The king who had at first shown symptoms of reviving spirit, soon relapsed into pusillanimity and fled across the Straits, leaving his Neapolitan subjects to their fate. Strange to say, the strongest resistance which the enemy experienced proceeded from a quarter where it might least have been expected. While the court and the greater part of the nobility had fled, and the great body of the upper and middle classes were either treacherous or cowardly, the lowermost of Naples, composed of the very dregs of society homeless wretches, who could neither gain nor lose by political changes, raised the patriotic standard and fought like heroes or rather demons for as may be supposed, the destruction of the warfare were hideous. Napoleon ultimately succeeded in placing first his brother Joseph, and, on Joseph's removal to Spain, his brother-in-law Murat, on the throne of Naples. During Napoleon's reverses, Murat sought to secure his crown by abandoning him but by subsequent proceedings forfeited both the crown and his life. Ferdinand regained his throne and made many liberal promises, which were not fulfilled. His successor Francis II continued the abuses of the old regime. The discontent of his subjects broke out in 1860, on the arrival of Garibaldi in universal rebellion. The king was deposed and Naples declared part of the kingdom of Italy December 17 1860.—(See Cor. del. Italia.)

NAPLES (Italian, Napoli; Latin, Neapolis; German, Neapel; Spanish, Neapolé), the cap. city of the above kingdom, and of prov. of same name, on the W coast of Italy, 117 m. S. E. Rome in lat. (observatory) 40 51 48 N., and lon 14 15' 30" E. [N.] Its site is one of the most magnificent which can well be imagined, on the N. side of a nearly semicircular bay, partly stretching along the shore, and partly climbing the adjacent heights, bounded on the W by the picturesque heights of Posillipo, and on the E by the lofty tips of Vesuvius, while the surrounding country, rich in natural beauty displays numerous additional attractions from the numerous villas and other objects with which nature art has embellished it. The best distant view of Naples is obtained in approaching it from the sea, and on passing the beautiful islands which guard the entrance to the bay. A favourite and most picturesque view is obtained from the Vomero, a rising ground, covered with fine villas, to the W. of the city the fort of St. Elmo comes into the foreground on the left, the city and the bay studded with sails, form the centre of the picture, while the vista is terminated by the smoking crater of Vesuvius. Naples is neither surrounded by walls, nor regularly fortified, but is protected by three forts or castles—St. Elmo, the largest of these, occupying a hill on the N. W. side, and containing casemates and other works built on of the rock. Castello Nuovo, almost close to the sea; and Castello dell'Oro, on a rocky islet, connected by a jetty with the land. Immediately adjoining is a large covered and common fountray which has the appearance of a fortification, being streaked with bastions. The great mass of buildings of which the city consists, forms an irregular oblong the greatest length of which from N to S is 3 m. the breadth from E. to W., about 1½ m. and the circuit nearly 8 m. By including the suburbs, which encroach so closely upon the town that they can hardly be distinguished from it, this circuit will be nearly doubled. Of the gates, some of which are now near the centre of the city, that of Capua, with relish scattered over the different quarters of the city and fine promenades are furnished by several of the quays along the shore. Among others may be mentioned those of Santa Lucia, and Spaggia di Chiaja. The latter which is of great length, is adorned with numerous marble statues, and in fine evenings is crowded with equipages, often of an elegant, and often of a very grotesque description, every Neapolitan who can muster any sort of conveyance dandling to appear on foot.

NAPLES, from the Vomero.—Drawn from Nature, and in Wood, by W. L. Lethbr.

The public edifices are not very remarkable, and suffer much in the estimation of strangers who have come from the N of the peninsula, from being contrasted with much more noble structures. The most deserving of notice are the cathedral, a large Gothic building erected on the site, and supported by 100 granite pillars, originally forming part of a temple of Apollo, much injured by the overloading of incongruous ornaments, but held in high veneration in consequence of possessing the relics of St. Januarius or Gennaro; among others, the phial of his blood, the annual melting of which, on the 19th September is one of the few public miracles with which the church of Rome still ventures to delude its votaries the church of San' Apostoli, said to have been originally founded by Constantine the Great, on the site of a temple of Mars, and, though subsequently rebuilt, still very ancient the church of St. Paul, a handsome edifice, internally faced with marble, the churches of St. Martin Del Parto, San Saverio, St. Philip de Neri, and other churches, to the number in all of nearly 300, several of them of architectural merit, and almost all of them richly decorated the Palazzo Reale (Royal Palace), an immense building of three stories each, of a different order of architecture, only partially completed according to the original design, but recently fitted up, and adorned with good paintings, the palace of Capo di Monte situated in the N outside the town, on an eminence of that name, and forming the usual summer residence of the king, commanding magnificent views, adorned with fine sculptures, paintings, and articles of vertu, belonging to the celebrated Parnass gallery and surrounded by beautiful gardens the old palace, where the courts of justice now hold their sittings the Palazzo degli Eminentissimi, originally built for the university, and occupied by it till 1790, but now converted into the Museo Borbonico, museum, by Benedetto da Majano, is the only one deserving of notice. The streets are tolerably regular, generally clean, and admirably paved with square blocks of lava, so exactly fitted that not the least inequality can be discerned but they are for the most part narrow as foot, and still narrower in appearance, both from the number of booths and other obstructions which are allowed to encumber them, and from the general construction of the houses. These are large, substantial, and lofty averaging not less than five or six stories, with flat roofs, covered with a composition of puzolana; and by the number of plants crowded upon them, converted into a kind of domestic arbutus, to which the inmates often resort to enjoy the breeze. Though generally displaying little architectural taste, the houses are abundantly provided with balconies and other projections; crowded, like the roofs, with plants and shrubs, of which any nation might be proud, containing not only a valuable library of 150,000 volumes, and many rare MSS. but an unequalled collection of gems, bronzes, vases, &c., chiefly obtained from the excavations of Pompeii and Herculaneum, seven theatres, of which that of San Carlo is remarkable for its magnificence, and is said to be the largest in existence, though its claims in this respect are disputed by that of Milan.

NAPLES, PALAZZO CAPUANO.—Drawn from Nature, and in Wood, by W. L. Lethbr.

The principal educational establishments are the university, which, since its removal from the Palazzo degli Studi occupies the buildings of an old convent, and is attended by about 1500 students, but does not possess much celebrity; the royal lyceum, military navigation, veterinary, musical, medical and other schools male and female. Among literary and scientific institutions are a royal society of arts, science, and antiquities, an observatory, a botanical garden, an agricultural society, and physical, chemical, and mineralogical cabinets. The benevolent endowments include several large hospitals, particularly the De Jacobelli and Della Annunziata, the latter partly for foundlings; the Reclusaria or Albergo dei Poveri, an orphan asylum or house of refuge, on a very extensive scale, a monte-de-piété, and a deaf and dumb institute.

The manufactures are much more numerous than important. At the head of them stands that of macaroni and vermicelli constituting the principal food of the great body of the people. Next to it are silk stuffs, and especially Gros de Naples, which owes its name to the extent and superiority of its manufacture here. The other leading articles are fire-arms, porcelain, tobacco, castings, lace, gloves, soap, carriages, violins, and other musical instruments, hats, woollen linen, and cotton stuffs. Notwithstanding the large extent of the bay, the actual harbour is of small dimensions, consisting of a mole, which projects nearly from the centre of the city and at which the water, though deep at its outer extremity, shallows so much near the town as to float only small vessels. It seems, however, to suffice for all the trade which is carried on. In 1868 there entered 5424 vessels of 828 184 tons and cleared 5314 vessels, 811 085 tons. The exports consist chiefly of boxes of iron, hoops, tinware, linseed, hemp, wheat, figs, gloves, liquorice, madder, coral, macaroni, oil, wine, wool, tallow, rags, and silk, raw dyed, and manufactured.

Naples, at first called Parthenope, because the men of that name was fabled to have been buried here, is of very ancient date, and was founded by a colony of Greeks, who had settled at Cumæ. It afterwards took the name of Neapolis, and is said to have retained strong traces of its Grecian origin to a late period of the Roman empire. It was inhabited by the emperors Adrian and Constantine the Great for numerous embellishments, and became a luxurious retreat, to which many of the wealthier Romans were accustomed to resort. In 536 it was pillaged by Belisarius, and a few years after when it had been rebuilt, the same disaster again befall it, at the hands of Totila. It was afterwards successively under the sway of the Normans, the emperors of Germany, and the kings of France and Spain. Under the latter it became the capital of an independent kingdom, but, having been brought within the vortex of the French revolution, was handed over by Napoleon, first to his brother Joseph, and then to his brother-in-law Murat. The Congress of Vienna having re-

1. Palazzo Reale.
2. Teatro di S. Carlo.
3. Piazza San Marco.
4. Palazzo di S. Giovanni.
5. Palazzo di S. Giovanni.

6. Arsenale.
7. Ospedale di S. Carlo.
8. Palazzo di S. Giovanni.
9. Palazzo di S. Giovanni.
10. Palazzo di S. Giovanni.

11. Palazzo di S. Giovanni.
12. Palazzo di S. Giovanni.
13. Palazzo di S. Giovanni.
14. Palazzo di S. Giovanni.
15. Palazzo di S. Giovanni.

stored the legitimate sovereignty Naples received its former masters. After a long period of misrule, they were ejected by Garnibaldi in 1860 and the whole of their dominions were then incorporated into the kingdom of Italy. F (1862) 447 065

NAPLES (BAY OF) (anc. Crater Sinus), an indentation W coast, Naples, in the Tyrrhenian Sea, having at its entrance between Cape Misenum on the N.W. and Cape Campanella, on the S.E., a width of about 20 m., and penetrating into the coast for nearly the same distance. At its N. entrance are the islands of Iolus and Procida, and at its S. entrance the island of Capri within, on its N. shore, the city of Naples rises like an amphitheatre, while, on the E., the view is terminated still more magnificently by Mount Vesuvius. Both ancient and modern writers celebrate the beauty and grandeur of its scenery.

NAPO (Riv.) a large river, Eosior near the W. end, near the mountain Andromeda, from which after a slight curve, it flows S.E. and falls into the Amazon, lat. 3° 25' N., lon. 71° 35' W.; total course, about 530 m. It has numerous large tributaries, the principal of which is the Unuray which joins it on the right, nearly as large as the principal stream, and whose sources are not far distant from those of the Napo and the Coco, and Amaru, both on the left. Its banks are inhabited by various tribes of savage Indians. The river abounds with fish.

NAPOLI DI ROMANIA, a town. Greece. See MOEN.

NAPOLI DI ROMANIA See NAUPLIA.

NAPOLI or NAUFIDA, a gulf, Greece, in the Archipelago on the S.E. of the Morea, about 85 m. long by 80 m. wide, named from the town of Napoli on its N. shore. It contains several islands, of which that of Spisada, near its entrance, is the largest.

NAPTON or THE HILL, par Eng. Warwick 4140 ac. Pop. 699

NARA.—1. A tn. Japan, lat. Niphon, 34 m. N. E. Mako. —2. A river Farsi States. See Niza NARANJO.—1. Two isls, Gulf of Panama. The largest is about 15 m. long N. to S. and the same distance from the coast of Panama. —2. (Narango), A port, N. E. coast, Cuba; lat. 21° 5' N.; lon. 76° 31' W. —3. A small river Isl. Hayti Santo Domingo, which falls into Spanish Bay, on the N. E. coast. —4. A river, Ecuador, falls into the Gulf of Guayaquil lat. 2° 28' S. lon. 78° 45' W. —5. A cluster of small isls. in the Philippines, 12 m. N. E. Masbate lat. 12° 29' N. lon. 128° 54' E.

NARAU, a tn. Hindoostan Oude 5 m. S. W. Rajpoot and almost surrounded by the British territories P 6000

NARBERTH a tn and par Wales, co and 12 m. N. E. Pembroke. The town, situated on an acclivity consists of four principal streets straight and well built, but badly kept and has a parish church of indifferent architecture, Baptist, Independent, and two Methodist chapels, a national and three other schools, and the ruins of an old castle. Pop 2822

NARBOLIA, or NURATOLIA, a vil. Isl. fardina, prov. Bessah with several churches, and a convent manufactures of woollens, and a trade in corn, fruit, and dairy produce. Pop. 1069

NARBONNE [Latin Colonia Decernorum] a tn France, dep. Aude in a beautiful plain, surrounded by lofty hills, 35 m. S. Carcassonne. It is enclosed by walls, and entered by four gates has dark winding streets generally lined by ill-built houses, and is traversed by the Rhodan canal. It is well supplied with promenades one is formed by the esplanade situated near the centre of the town and another called l'Allée des Soupirs, is particularly agreeable, having everywhere the appearance of a fine garden. The principal edifices are the cathedral a Gothic structure founded in and forming a conspicuous object from all directions; the old seminary now used as barracks; three hospitals, a small theatre, library, &c. The manufactures consist of verdigris, common linen, gray woollen bonnets, and leather. There are, also, distilleries, dye-works, and numerous brack and tile works. The trade is in corn, wine, brandy, oil, wax, salt, saltpetre, and excellent honey produced in the district, and well known in commerce. Narbonne possesses a sort of first resort and commerce, a hydrogeological school of the fourth class, and a secondary ecclesiastical school. It is one of the oldest towns of Gaul, and was the first colony which the Romans founded beyond the Alps. It became the capital of Gallia Narbonensis but, though as such, it must have contained many splendid Roman edifices, it is very poor in Roman remains. One great cause of this was the barbarous procedure of Francis I., who employed the ruins of ancient buildings in constructing the present walls which, accordingly, in many parts, exhibit battlements, filigree, and inscriptions. Pop 10 578.

NARBOROUGH, par Eng. Leicester 2657 ac. P 1288.

NARBOROUGH'S ISLAND, a group, S. Pacific, off Entrance Strait of Magalhães, about lat. 52° S., and lon. 76° E., consisting of 6 or 10 principal islands, and, apparently hundreds of smaller ones, and besides having a very barren and channel leak, extremely dangerous.

NARBURGH par Eng. Norfolk, 2645 ac. Pop 875

NARCISSUS, CLARENCE ISLAND or TATAGOTO S. Pacific, Low Archipelago lat. 17° 20' S. lon. 138° 28' W. It is about 4 m. long by 1 m. broad, and very low enclosing a lagoon. Its S. part is a mere reef, but its N. is well wooded with cocoa-nut trees. The inhabitants, supposed to be about 200 appear to be of a fierce and warlike disposition.

NARCONDIUM an isl. Bay of Bengal about 80 m. E. from the Great Andaman, lat. 13° 28' N. lon. 94° 18' E. (a) It is small of conical form, about 3600 ft. high, and may be seen from a distance of upwards of 50 m. It is unlighted and covered with wood.

NARDO, a tn Naples, prov. Otranto 9 m. N. E. Gallipoli in a beautiful plain well built and well paved. It is the see of a bishop, has nine churches, an hospital, and manufactures of linen cloths. Pop. 8600

NARBETA or NARDONA, a river, S. Europe, which rising on the W. side of the mountains of Pinde, forming the E. frontier of Herzegovina, flows first N. W. along the base of the mountains, then turns suddenly round flows circuitously S. S. W. enters Dalmatia, and falls, by three branches, into the Adriatic, opposite to the promontory of Babionello, after a course of about 170 m. Its principal affluents are, on the r., the Dretuniz, Josautin and Fehist and on the l., the Drinovnik and Krupa.

NAREW, a river Russia, which rises in dist. Volkovsk, gov. Grodno, flows W. N. W. across Bialyok, enters Russian Poland turns S. S. W. and joins r. bank Bug at Sierock total course about 200 m.

NARFORD, par Eng. Norfolk 2386 ac. Pop 116.

NARBEN an isl. Russia, Gulf of Finland opposite to, and 12 m. N. W. Reval. It is well wooded and having deep water around it, admits vessels to its shores. There is a lighthouse upon it.

NARI a river, Beloochistan, has its origin on the E. slope of the Hala mountains Sewardan, about lat. 80° N., lon. 68° E. and holding a general S. direction for about 50 m. is joined by the Kanbar or Bolan, at lat. 29° 34' N., lon. 67° 28' E. The united stream continues to flow S., and is finally lost in the arid plain of Cutch Gundera. When heavy rains fall it has a large body of water, but for many months in the year it entirely disappears.

NARNI [anc. Narnia] a tn Italy Umbria, deleg. and 21 m. S. E. W. Spoleto l. bank Terna, on a lofty hill. It is visible from a great distance, and has a very striking appearance, but it is badly built, and has narrow, dirty streets; a castle, now used as a prison, Gothic cathedral, seven other churches, seven monasteries, and five nunneries. The great object of interest connected with Narni, is a ruined bridge in the neighbourhood, supposed to have been built by Augustus, and bearing his name. It originally consisted of three arches, but one only remains. Its height is upwards of 80 ft., and the width of its piers nearly 30 ft. Taken in connection with the beautiful scenery around it, it is one of the

THE CATHEDRAL, NARBONNE.

From Voyage Pittoresque dans l'Inde, Paris: G. H. Taylor & Co.

1272 but undisturbed remarkable for the height of its ceiling (180 ft.) its light and graceful pillars, finely-painted glass, high altar and various monuments, particularly a magnificent one, of the 18th century, in white marble, the archbishop's palace, which has much the appearance of a fortress, and has immediately adjoining it a lofty square tower, of a yellow tint, rising up from the centre of the town far above all the houses, noblest and most interesting remains of imperial antiquity

 The emperor Nerva, and Pope John XVIII, were born here.
 Rom. 8000.

NARNOUL, a tn Hindoostan, prov Agra, on an affluent of the Jumna, 86 m S W Delhi. It is the frontier town of Jaypoor rajah, a place of considerable antiquity, and, though greatly reduced in size, still about 1 m long.

NAROWA a river, Russia, which issues from Lake Peipus, and forming the boundary between govs. Revel and St. Petersburg traverses the town of Narva, and falls into the Gulf of Finland, a little below Its course, first S. E. and then N. W. is about 50 m NARRA (EASTERN and WESTERN) two large branches of the Indus, in Sindh. The E Narra separates from the main stream on the E side, a few miles above Roree. lat.

77 44' N. lon. 68° 58' E. Taking a S course it passes by the ruins of Alora, where it is crossed by a bridge and thence continues to flow in the same direction until its water in the dry season is absorbed or evaporated in the desert of E. Spaine. During the low season of the Indus, it ceases to be a stream but when the inundation is at its height, it generally carries a very large body of water. The W. Narra, especially, as its name implies from the W. side of the Indus, about 245 m below Shindigah, is 100 m wide, lon. 68 34' N. lon. 68 54' E. It is nearly parallel to the main stream, and 100 m from it falls into Lake Macherah, in lat. 36° 58' N. The direct distance from the point where the Narra divaricates from the Indus, till it reaches the lake, is about 100 m.

NARRAGANSETT Bay an inlet of the Atlantic, U States, almost wholly in Rhode Island state, penetrating 25 m inland with a breadth of about 12 m. The entrance is between Point Judith, lat. 41° 20' N, lon 71° 40' W on the W., and Point Southeast on the E., a distance of 15 m. It receives the rivers Providence, Pawtucket, Tannock, and Pawtuxet is considered the best naval station N. of the Chesapeake, and is accessible at all seasons. It contains 15 islands, the principal of which are Rhode Island, Conanicut, and Prudence.

VARRAGMORE, a par Ierland, Kildare 12 270 ac
Pop 2164.

BAHRAIN GUNGE, a tn. Hindustan prov Bengal bank of a branch of the Brahmaputra, called the Situl 8 m S E Dacca, lat. 25° 57' N lon. 90 30' E. This is one of the most considerable inland trading towns in the province, and is remarkable for the bustle and activity that prevail in it. The inhabitants are nearly all commercial and carry on a great traffic in salt, of which it is the grand mart again tobacco and lime. Pop 15,000

BARKIMAN or VAROUMAK, a town Asiatic Turkey capital of same name about 12 m. S.W. Olti near the W. frontiers of Georgia. It is very ancient and was once a place of great importance, but has fallen into decay, and consists only of a few houses, and a venerable old castle, seated on a steep rock. Pop. dist. 3600.

NARVA is in Russia, gov. and 30 m S.W. St. Petersburg, 1 bank Narova, about 9 m. above its mouth in the Gulf of Finland. It is divided into the old and the new town—the former, occupied by Germans, and the latter, by Russians. The old town is defended by a castle, is built of stone and contains two churches, townhouses, exchange, and Germans; the new town, built of wood, contains a Lutheran church, but is on the whole a very miserable place. The principal manufactures are paper, iron, and glass. The principal trade is in timber by the river. The fishing is productive, and much fish is sent to the factories for its smoked salmons. The town and its long bay are famous for its smoked salmon. The trade, which once filled the harbour with shipping has greatly fallen off, but a new sort of business is still going on briskly.

hamp, and bar. Narva once ranked among the Hanseatic towns, and suffered much during repeated sieges. The most memorable event in its history is the battle fought under its walls, in 1700 when 9000 Swedes, under Charles XII., defeated 89,000 Russians, under Peter the Great. Pop 5500.

NARWAR, or NARWA, a town in Hindoostan prov Agre, r bank Sind 40 m S. by W Gwahar, lat. 25° 40' N, lon. 72° 51' E

NARYM a riv Asia, which rises in the N of the Altai mountains within the Chinese territories flows first N and then W into gov Omsk and, after a course of about 50 m. joins r bank Irtysh

NARZOLE a vil and com Italy Piedmont, div Cune, prov and about 15 m N Mondovì, l bank Tanaro; with an ancient parish church, and a monastery and a trade in corn, wine, and silk. Pop 3659

NABALY or NASZAL, a vil Hungary co. Komorn on a canal not far from Tata and near the road from Vienna to Pesth. It has a Protestant church, a mill & trade in cattle, corn and fish, particularly urabs. Pop. 1111

NASCA, or CASHA, a small seaport in, Peru, dep. Luma, at the mouth of a river of same name, lat. 14 57 S. lon 78 35' W (R) The harbour is good, but the town is in a state of decay. The surrounding country is fertile pro-

NAFIFY a vil. and par. England, co. Northampton
3 m. E.S.E. Welford, at the source of the Naze and A. on Both these rivers take their rise in the village, which is nearly in the center of England, and most villages on the line of

IN THE centre of England and must also be on the line or watershed between the German and the Atlantic Oceans the Vase flowing E to the former and the Avon W to the latter. Naseby also gives its name to the decisive battle fought in its vicinity in 1645 between the royalists commanded by the king and the parliamentary army commanded by Cromwell and Fairfax. A beautiful pillar commemorates the event. Area of par 3690 ac. Pop. 648

811.—2 Wales, Pembroke 1012 aa. Pop 155
 NASHUA a manufacturing tn U States, New Hampshire. 91 m S. by E Concord r bank Merrimac at the confluence of the Nashua It was formerly called Dunstable

It has six cotton-spinning and weaving mills chiefly propelled by water power, and manufactures of steam engines, locks, guns, tools shuttles, &c By railway it is connected with Lowell Worcester and Concord Pop 5820

NASHVILLE, a tn U States, cap. state Tennessee, I bank Cumberland, where its steam boat navigation ceases and on the Nashville and Chattanooga railway 560 m W S W Washington. It is pleasantly situated partly on the sides and summit, and partly along the base of a limestone height consists of the town proper, and suburbs now almost equalling it in extent and includes besides a number of well built streets, and a handsome public square. The prin pal buildings are the statehouse, finely placed on a commanding height, with spacious legislative halls and other convenient offices; the courthouse, a large and elegant structure, crowned by a dome, and supported by Ionic pillars; a university, occupying commodious buildings and well supplied with apparatus library, &c. from 12 to 14 churches, some of them beautiful and costly structures numerous schools and academies, a lunatic asylum, with accommodation for 100 patients, and a number of other useful and complete establishment, with cells for 200 convicts. The trade carried on both by the river and the railways is very extensive and the vessels belonging to the town, and composed of treasure, some of them magnificent passenger boats

NABIELSK a tn Russian Poland 27 m N Warsaw
The works which the Russians had thrown up here in 1808

VASIRABAD, or NIZHERABAD, a tn Hindoostan, kingdom of Oude, 65 m. S S.E. Lucknow Pop 8000
 VASO [anc. Agathyrum], a tn. Sicily, prov. and 45 m.

W S.W. MESSINA, on a height, above a stream of same name. It is walled has a number of handsome buildings and carries on a considerable trade, for the accommodation of which there are some storehouses on the shore below. Near it are ferruginous springs, said to be efficacious in nervous and climate decides they have the property of drying black whatever is thrown into them. Pop. 8000

NASSAU, a town and port, Bahamas. See NEW PROVIDENCE.

NASSAU (Duchy of), the fourteenth state in the German Confederation, cap. Wiesbaden, bounded, N and W by Rhenish Prussia, S. Hesse-Darmstadt, S.E. territory of Frankfurt and a small corner of Hesse-Cassel, and E. by detached portions of Hesse-Darmstadt and Prussia. greatest length, N to S, 56 m. average breadth, 43 m. area, 1856 sq. m. It is of a very compact form, and is all contiguous, with exception of the small patch of Reichelsheim within Hesse-Darmstadt. The surface is divided into two nearly equal portions by the Lahn, which traverses it E to W. Both portions are more or less hilly, and almost mountainous—that to the N., which has the least extent, but is, on the whole the more elevated of the two, being traversed by the Westerwald, by which it is so broken as to be chiefly covered with wood or devoted to pasture and that to the S. being traversed by the Taunus or Hahn, where the general elevation is much less, and almost the whole surface is profitably occupied by corn-fields, meadows, and vineyards. The average height of the duchy above the sea is about 1400 ft. The culminating point is the Feldberg 3720 ft. The whole duchy belongs to the basin of the Rhine, which drains a large portion of it directly, forming a considerable portion of its S. and W. boundaries. The other principal streams are the Main and the Lahn with their numerous affluents. The lakes are comparatively small. The climate in the S., is generally mild. In the N., somewhat cold, but throughout salubrious. The climate on the W. and S. slopes of the Taunus coast generally is flat, almost all the rest of the duchy is covered with trap. The soil when arable, is generally fertile and well cultivated, and in addition to the ordinary cereals, produces excellent hemp, flax, tobacco, root crops and fruit. The vine is extensively cultivated along the banks of the Rhine; and the vintage of Nassau is reckoned the best in Germany. The finest wines are those of Johannisberg, Rüdesheim, Assmannshausen, Geisenheim Hochheim, Markelbrunn, and Stouberg. The forests occupy a large extent of surface, and furnish excellent timber. The duchy is rich in minerals, and still more so in mineral springs. Among the metals are iron and manganese, worked to a large, and silver to a moderate extent. The slate quarries are extensive and valuable and there are excellent beds of potter's clay. Some lignite also is obtained. Manufactures have not made much progress, and trade, though of considerable importance, and very greatly facilitated by navigable streams, is chiefly in the hands of foreigners. The principal exports are cord wine, fruit, mineral waters, cereals and iron ware. The government of Nassau is a constitutional monarchy hereditary in the male line. As part of the German Confederation, it unites with Brunswick and has the 13th vote but in the plebiscite vote is the 14th, as already mentioned. Its contingent of men to the Confederation is 8028. The founder of the reigning family was Otto, brother of the Emperor Conrad I. Two separate lines having been formed in 1226, the younger ultimately succeeded to the throne of Holland, the elder remains in possession of the duchy. For administrative purposes, Nassau is divided into 26 seats or bailiwicks. Pop. 421,775

NASSAU, a town, duchy Nassau v. bank Lahn, here crossed by a chain bridge, 13 m. S.E. Coblenz. It is chiefly remarkable for its old and picturesque castle, seated on the opposite bank of the river, on the summit of a conical rock, and the cradle of the reigning families of Nassau and Orange. A little below is the castle of Stol, possessed by a family of which the celebrated Stein, the patriotic Prussian minister who so much distinguished himself by his reforms happily introduced into the army previously to the last European war was a member. Pop. 1060.

NASSERBAD v. Babocharan, 25 m. S.W. Kadj, on the route to Grewler, lat. 36° 18' N, lon. 61° 57' E.

NASSERIT, a vil. Tyrol, circle and near limit with a church, a school, manufactures of cotton goods, and iron mines. Pop. 1206.

NASSINGTON, a par. England, Northampton 1600 as Pop. 795.

NASSOQUE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Luxembourg, 34 m. N. Arlon; with manufactures of articles of serery, which employ the greater part of the inhabitants, and a trade in wood. Pop. 1000

NASSUCK, a large town and place of pilgrimage, Hindostan, prov. Arrangabad; lat. 19° 56' N. lon. 78° 56' E. It has two palaces belonging to the Pathwa, and some handsome buildings with gardens and vineyards. In the vicinity are some Buddhist excavations. They extend round a high conical hill, 5 m. from the town. Pop. 30,000.

NASTATTEN, a m. Nassau on the Mühlbach, 16 m. N.W. Wiesbaden, with two churches, and a saddle-shaped springs. Pop. 1587

NARZOD, a vil. Austria, Transylvania, on the Szamos, about 18 m. from Blotitz; with a Greek united church, and a German normal school. Pop. 1000

NARZVAD, a vil. Hungary, Thürier Danube, co. and 7 m. N. Komorn, on the Nytra, with a church. Pop. 9049

NATAL a British colony S.E. coast of Africa, between lat. 27° 40' and 30° 40' S. lon. 28° 40' and 31° 10' E., bounded, W by a lofty mountain range, designated by the different names of the Quthambuk, Kuthambuk, and Drakon mountains N and N.E. by the Buffalo or Umanysai, an affluent of the Tugela river separating it from the Zululand country E and S.E. by the Indian Ocean, and S by the Umanikulu, and its affluent Umanikulu separating it from Kaka's territory greatest length N.N.W. to S.E.E. 210 m. greatest breadth, measured from the mouth of the Tugela westward, 110 m. area, about 18,000 sq. m. The coast-line, which has a length of about 150 m., contains the mouths of numerous streams, but is so desolate of creeks and bays, that there is no one spot where sheltered anchorage can be obtained except at Port Natal a fine circular bay near the centre of the coast, completely land locked, spacious enough to contain whole fleets, and deep enough within to float the largest vessels but unfortunately encumbered at its entrance by a bar on which the water occasionally but very seldom, exceeds 11 ft. The surface is finely diversified rising by successive terraces from the shore towards the lofty mountains on its W. frontiers. These, forming the great reservoir of the numerous streams which traverse the country in an E. direction, except through precipitous ravines and rocky gorges, are loftiest in the S., where they attain the height of at least 9000 ft. and retain a covering of snow for above four months, towards the centre their height seldom exceeds 5000 ft., and towards the N. continuing to descend gradually, present only the appearance of hilly ridges and elevated plains. From the main chain, numerous transverse branches proceed nearly at right angles, and form a series of minor water-sheds, separating the basins of the different streams. The mountains descend very gradually on the W. and may be regarded as the elements of a very elevated table-land, but present very precipitous fronts to the E., and are so broken by chasms and ravines that they were at one time regarded as impassable.

A more careful examination has discovered several tracts across which horses and cattle can proceed but the only pass fit for waggons is that of De Beer in lat. 28° 20' S. and lon. 28° 02' E. The prevailing stratified rocks are sandstone and slate, often thrown into confusion and pierced by igneous rocks, particularly basalt, gneiss and porphyry which assume the form both of continuous ridges and isolated hills, and often cover extensive areas. No minerals rich in value except some anthracite and slightly bituminous coal, have yet been discovered. One seam of the latter is said to be 6 ft. thick. The colony has a great advantage over most of the districts of S. Africa, in an abundance of perennial streams which, though generally too shallow to be navigable, may easily be made available for irrigation. The most important rivers are the Tugela or Uthukulu, which, with its tributary Buffalo or Umanysai in the N., has a total course of about 150 m. the Umvoti, Umgeni, and Umkomani near the centre and the Umanikulu, which forms, as already mentioned, part of the E. boundary and has a course of about 80 m. The climate, on the whole, is extremely salubrious, and by no means trying to European constitutions. On the coast, the range of temperature is from 47° to 88° giving an average in summer of 76°, and in winter of about 66° in the interior at the town of Pieter-Maritzburg, the mean temperature of July, the coldest month, is 56° of February, the hottest, 80½ and of the whole year 67. The number of rainy days at the same town, in 1849, was 107, of which no fewer than 96 were between October and March, while only 17 days were left for the 6 months from April to September the greatest number of rainy days in one month was 23 in November. During the rainy season thunder showers are almost daily occurrences; but hot blasts are rare, the winds from the interior being greatly modified by passing over the Drachenberg ranges. Long droughts are almost unknown. Under such a climate, and with a soil of considerable fertility, vegetation must obviously be vigorous. Timber-trees every where exist in sufficient numbers for the wants of the colony, and, both on the W and N frontiers, form considerable forests, for the most part unencumbered by the underwood which prevails in Cape Colony and has there proved so obstructive to military operations. The soil on the banks of the river is generally rich and strong and well adapted either for agricultural or grazing purposes. On the higher forest and table land, cattle thrive well for at least nine months in the year and in the more level districts of the interior wheat, barley, oats, beans, and vegetables, of almost every description have been largely and successfully grown even two good crops of maize can be raised in the year. In many parts, the vine and fruit trees thrive well, and in several places along the coast, more especially in the vicinity of Port Natal, cotton yields a superior and abundant produce. In the same locality tobacco, indigo, sugar-cane, and coffee grow well. The inhabited districts are now seldom visited by wild animals, but in the less frequented parts of the interior herds of elephants, though greatly thinned in numbers, are occasionally seen. The lion and leopard are not uncommon, and hyenas, antelopes, jackals, wild dogs, foxes, and porcupines, are numerous. The more remarkable birds are the vulture, rock eagle, and Kaffir crane. The hippopotamus has still his haunts in several of the rivers, and numbers of small crocodiles frequent the Tugela. In 1862 the value of imports was £448,469 and of exports £127,238, the three chief articles of produce being ivory 101,016 lbs sugar 10,916 cwts., and wool, 906,328 lbs. In 1851 the imports were £38,544, and the exports £3607.

Natal, which was recognised by the British Government as a colony in 1840 is under a lieutenant-governor assisted by an attorney general, an auditor-general, a collector of customs, a surveyor-general, a crown prosecutor and a government secretary, who form a legislative and executive council. The first emigrant settlers of Natal were the Dutch Boers, who left Cape Colony in 1806, and by a treaty with Dingaan, the chief of the Zooloos tribes, obtained a territory nearly identical with that of the present colony. A treacherous massacre of part of the Boers by Dingaan, in 1838 led to hostilities, in which Dingaan was ultimately defeated and driven beyond the frontiers. In 1839 the Boers removed to Port Natal, and proclaimed themselves an independent republic formally renouncing their allegiance to Great Britain and declaring their determination to establish diplomatic relations with European powers. The establishment of a hostile settlement at the only port between Algoa and Delagoa Bays, and at the only proper entrance from the coast to the interior of S. Africa, was so obviously incompatible with British interests, that a small force was despatched from the Cape in 1841. The Boers permitted it to land, but shortly after commenced open hostilities, and finally shut it in within an entrenchment, consisting of a rude barrier of waggon and ox-wheels beset with fire. Here the British succeeded in maintaining themselves till additional assistance arrived from the Cape. The Boers, completely defeated after a formidable resistance, retired for the most part beyond the Drachenberg range and the sovereignty of Britain was finally established. For administrative purposes, the colony is divided into six districts or magistracies, of which that of Pieter-Maritzburg, centrally situated in the interior, contains a town of same name, which is considered as the capital, but the only seaport is D'Urban, cap. of the dist. of same name, situated on the shore of Port Natal, and rapidly rising in importance. Pop. of colony, about 840,102, of whom only 18,990 are white, and the remaining 326,112 Zooloos Kaffirs, who have renounced allegiance to their own chiefs, and have now the privileges of British subjects.

NATAL, a Malay tn. S.W. coast of Sumatra, dist. of Ayer Bangs, lat. 0° 18' N. lon. 99° 5' E. formerly a place of considerable trade. The anchorage is about 3 m. off the shore, in five fathoms water and is one of the worst roads on the W coast of Sumatra, having numerous shoals in it, and often a heavy sea running.

NATAL, a tn. Brazil, cap. prov. Rio-grande-do-Norte, 1 bank Potengi or Grande, about 4 m. from its mouth to the Atlantic, 170 m N by W Pernambuco. It is irregularly built and has narrow unpaved streets but the houses, though only of earth, have a showy appearance. Five churches, a governor's palace a Latin and two primary schools, a custom house, and a large building in which cotton is inspected before embarkation. The harbour has in a kind of bay, between the town and the fort of Bom-Jagoe and might be one of the most important in Brazil were due attention paid to it. The roadstead affords excellent anchorage, and the harbour which is now almost silted up might easily be cleaned out and made accessible to ships of considerable burden, bringing many things which the province wants, and taking in return cotton, Brazil wood, drugs, and other produce. Pop. dist. 10,000.

NATCHEZ, a city, U. States, Mississippi on a bluff 1 bank Mississippi, 150 ft above the level of the stream lat. 31° 50' N lon. 91° 25' W 809 m by the river from New Orleans. A portion of the city is built on the margin of the river, it is laid out in the form of a parallelogram, with streets intersecting each other at right angles, but the site is very uneven. Some of the houses are elegant but the most of them are of wood, and only one story high. Almost every house has a piazza and a balcony and many of them have gardens, finely ornamented with shrubbery, and well stocked with fruit trees. The public buildings are a courthouse, jail, several churches an academy a female seminary an hospital, orphan asylum a museum hall and theatre. Natchez is a great cotton mart, and has oil mills, and an extensive and increasing trade. Pop. 1850 2259.

NATLI Y two pers. Eng. Hants —1 (Boone) 1094 ac. Pop. 245 —2 Uo 1015 ac. Pop. 115.

NATHUDORA a tn Hindoostan prov Ajmer 34 m N Odypoor lat. 25° 8' N lon. 74° 11' E. celebrated for a Hindoo temple of great sanctity which is endowed with large estates.

NATHLASH (Str) par Irel Cork 1024 ac P 503. NATIVIDAD a city Mexico, off the coast lower Cal. forms near lon. 98° N by W lon. 115° W. It lies between the island and the promontory of San Angelo, forming the W entrance to the Bay of St. Sebastian, Yucatan is about 4 to long NE to SW of moderate elevation, and has a barren and dreary aspect. The passage between Natividad and the mainland is from 7 m. to 8 m wide, with a depth of 17 to 26 fathoms.

NATIVIDADE a tn Brazil, prov and 880 m N E Goyas. It is built with great regularity and has spacious streets, contains three handsome churches, a Latin school, school of mutual instruction for boys and primary school for girls and a trade in sugar tobacco mullet, and cotton. Near several mines are worked. 1 op dist. 2000.

NATOLIA, Asiatic Turkey. See ANATOLIA. NATRON LAKES, several lakes, Egypt, in a valley of same name, about 50 m W W Cairo. There are eight lakes which contain water all the year. The largest and most S. called On Rihel produces only murate of soda, or common salt. In the lakes that yield natron and murate of soda the two salts crystallise separately, the latter above, in a layer of about 18 inches thick, and the natron varying in thickness, according to the form of the bed of the lake, the thinnest being about 27 inches. All the lakes contain murate of soda, though few produce natron. The water in the lakes varies much in height at different seasons of the year. The largest of the lakes is about 24 m long, and 1 m broad. Most of the others vary from about 12 m. to 3 m in length, and 3 m. in breadth. The length of the Wady Matruh, or valley of the Natron Lakes is about 23 m, and its breadth about 54 m. It produces no trees, but abounds in the bulrushes used for making the well-known mats of Egypt.

NATIAM, a considerable tn. Hindoostan, Carnatic, 68 m N E Cape Comorin lat. 10° 14' N lon. 78° 19' E. NATTORE a tn Hindoostan, prov Bengal, 45 m N E. Moorshedabad; lat. 24° 25' N lon. 86° 55' E, a few miles from r bank Atul. In its vicinity are numbers of mulberry-trees. Nattore is the cap. of Rajshahy district, the headquarters of the judge and collector, and site of the jail.

NATSCHERADETZ, or NACHSBERG, a market in Bohemia close Kaurin, 46 m. S.E.E. Prague with a church, founded in 1340 a castle, with fine gardens, a school, an hospital manufactures of linen, and five mills. Pop. 1850.

NATUNAS ISLANDS, a series of isles, China Sea, extending from the W coast of Honan, near Point Daitou, a great way to the N.W. They are divided into three groups—the N. Natunas, the Great or Grand Natunas, and the contiguous isles and the S. Natunas, near Borneo. The N. Natunas consist of one considerable island, and several islets and rocks their N. extremity is in lat. 4° 51' N. lon. 108° 2' E. They are of moderate height, producing coconuts, and some other fruits, and are inhabited by Malays. The Great Natuna, lat. (N. extremity) 4° 30' N.; lon. 108° 14' E. is about 25 m. to 80 m. long N. to S. and about 20 m. broad E. to W. The interior is mostly high, and on the N. part of the island are two mountains of considerable elevation, one being 1890 ft. above the sea. The S. group consists of several high isles, the most southerly being in lat. 8° 34' N. lon. 108° 15' E.

NATUNAS, a vil. Austria, Tyrol circle Bozen in the valley of the Etsch or Adige, with a church, and a castle. Pop. 1450.

NATURALISTE CAPE, W. Australia, no. Sussex of which it is the extreme N.W. point, forming the W. side of Geographe Bay lat. 33° 31' 45" S.

NAL or DELTA COLONIA, (anc. Lacusum Promontorium) a cape, Naples, N.E. coast of Calabria-Ultra lat. 39° 6' N. lon. 17° 14' E. (s.) It was crowned by a celebrated temple of Juno Laetina, and near it, Hannibal embarked on finally quitting Italy.

NAUDAUN, a small in Poutah, I bank Besa lat. 31° 46' N. lon. 76° 18' E. occupying a delightful situation, and celebrated for its fine gardens. The Besa here is a deep, rapid, and clear stream, 150 yards wide, and running at the rate of 24 m. an hour. Near Naudaun is a celebrated Elysian temple surrounded with a richly arched roof, and emitting a dense in the rock from which issue jets of inflammable gas, which, when lighted are considered the breath of the tutelary deity. Naudaun was once a flourishing place, but has fallen into decay.

NAUDERIS, a vil. Austria, Tyrol circle and 27 m. S.S.W. Innsbruck. It lies high in an amphitheatre of hills, and has a church, an hospital, and manufactures of iron and steel. Pop. 1908.

NALEN a tn. Prussia, prov. Brandenburg gov. Potsdam 23 m. W. W. Berlin, on the Havelbach. It is entered by two gates has a church, townhouse, and hospital, manufactures of linen a brewery and a distillery. Pop. 4220.

NALGARD a tn. Prussia, gov. and 28 m. N.E. Stettin, between two lakes. It is walled, and entered by two gates has provincial and city courts a church hospital and pottery manufactures of woolen and tobacco, and several tanneries. Pop. 3587.

NAUGHTON par. Eng. Suffolk 854 ac. 1 op. 134.

NAUBERG, a tn. Hesse-Cassel gov. and 20 m. N.W. Hana. in a beautiful valley of the Uhr. It is an ancient place has two churches, several distilleries, and thermal saline springs, from which a great deal of salt is made. Pop. 1424.

NAUL, par. and tn. Irel. Dublin 2628 ac. Pop. 597.

NAUMBURG, a tn. Prussia, prov. Saxony gov. and 18 m. S.W. Merseburg beautifully situated in the valley of the Saale, in an amphitheatre of hills, covered with gardens and vineyards. It consists of the town proper, the freedom, (Herrnsiedlung) and three suburbs. The town is surrounded by walls. The principal buildings are five churches, one an old cathedral partly Gothic, and partly Renaissance, with lofty towers and a double choir; while two of the others deserve notice from the statues and pictures which adorn them a townhouse, gymnasium, industrial school, and two hospitals. The manufactures consist of carriages, playing-cards, woollen cloth hosiery and leather the trade is in these articles, and in oil, wine wool horse-hair and feathers. Naumburg possesses a savings-bank, and a bathing establishment. Pop. (1846), 15,290.

NAUMBURG, several places, Germany particularly—1. A tn. Hesse-Cassel, Hunsrück, 16 m. W. S.W. Cassel with a church, and the ruins of a strong castle, and several mills. Pop. 1768.—2. A tn. Prussia, prov. Silesia, gov. and

W. Liegnitz, r. bank Quedlitz; with a court of justice, two churches, die-works, and a walk and a flour mill. Pop. 1701.—3. A tn. same prov. gov. and N.W. Liegnitz, r. bank Bober, with a Protestant church, and a castle; a brewery, distillery, tobacco factory, fine dye-works, and a trade in cattle. At the foot of the hill on which the castle stands, a bathing establishment has been erected over two chalybeate and sulphureous springs. Pop. 373.

NAUVOORBAR, a tn. Hindostan, prov. Candahar; lat. 21° 22' N. lon. 74° 18' E. on a small stream which becomes dry in the hot season, and causes a great deficiency of water. It consists of about 500 inhabited houses, and a much greater number in ruins; and possesses, in its vicinity the tomb of Suddat Poir a Mahometan saint, built nearly 800 years ago, finely situated on a rocky height, and much visited by pilgrims. It was ceded by the Persians to Holon; and suffered severely from the ravages of the Pandahs.

NAUNDORF a vil. Saxony circle and 80 m. N. Dresden. It has manufactures of woollen stuffs. Pop. 1197.

NAUNHOF, a tn. Saxony circle and 11 m. S.E. Leipzig on the Parde. It has manufactures of linen, a spinning-mill, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1042.

NAUNTON two pars. Eng.—1, Gloucester; 8106 ac. Pop. 568.—2, (Boscawen), Worcester 1025 ac. Pop. 144.

NAUPLIA or NAUPLIA-ROKANA a seaport, Greece, Morea, near the head and on the E. side of the Gulf of the same name lat. 37° 33' 38" N., lon. 22° 48' E. (s.) occupying the site of the ancient Nauplia, one of the most ancient cities in Greece. The modern town stands upon the N.E. side of a height, with a tabular summit which projects from a steep ridge at the S.E. angle of the Bay of Argos. The principal street divides the town into two equal parts connecting two squares one of which is spacious and is principally occupied by barracks, restaurants, and coffee-houses. The streets are narrow but straight, and were formerly exceedingly dirty but they have been recently cleared of rubbish, and the entire appearance of the town much improved. Nauplia, in short, from being one of the most wretched, dirty and ruinous towns in Greece has become one of the neatest and most cleanly with tolerable shops and good looking houses. Some of the latter are spacious and even comfortable, but the new houses built in the European style, are, generally speaking ill constructed and ill arranged. In all of them, the lower story is appropriated to the horses, and from this a spacious staircase leads to the upper inhabited apartments. The houses, however, are, as a whole, exceedingly small, and the population so crowded, that in every room are found three or four inhabitants. The town is encircled by Venetian fortifications with several batteries, and has two fortresses one of which is on the summit of a lofty and precipitous rock, 720 ft. above sea-level and inaccessible on all sides but one. The Bay of Nauplia has excellent anchorages all over it, and there is a good harbour for small vessels. Nauplia had at one time an extensive traffic in silk, oil, wax, wine, corn, cotton, and sponge but this has of late years much declined and at present its trade is confined to the mere measures of life. The climate is extremely unhealthy and the town much subject to visitations of the plague. Pop. estimated at 15,000.

NAUTA a tn. Ecuador on the Amazon, a little above the confluence of the Uayali, about lat. 4° 30' S.; lon. 72° 40' W. It was founded in 1830, and consists of about 500 houses, most of which are large and rest on pillars, which support an immense roof covered with palm leaves. The principal edifice is the church, which is built of adobe whitened with lime. The chief employment is the growth of sugar-cane, and manufacture of sugar, almost every house having a small sugar-mill attached. Earthquakes are almost of annual occurrence. Pop. about 5000.

NAUTHPOOR, a tn. Hindostan, prov. Bengal, lat. 26° 17' N. lon. 87° 8' E. During the floods, the Gout river approaches it, but in the dry season, very extensive banks intervene between it and the navigable stream.

NAUVOO a tn., U. States, Illinois, I. bank Mississippi, 134 m. N.W. Springfield. It was a settlement of the Mormons, and occupied a large space covered, at intervals, with white-washed log-cabins, and some frame and brick houses. Its public buildings were a spacious hotel, called Nauvoo house, in which Joe Smith, the Mormon leader, had a suite of apartments; and Nauvoo temple, with a baptistry, and a be modelled on the houses of Solomon. During the real-estate of the Morones, the population was about 7000 but has been greatly diminished by their expulsion.

NAVA DELA ASUNCIÓN, or NAVA DE OCA, a tn. Spain, New Castle, prov. and 38 m. N. W. Segovia. It is tolerably well built, has two squares, a beautiful fountain, a church, courthouse, prison, and primary school; and a trade in corn, wine, fruit, and cattle. Pop. 1369

NAVA DEL-REY, a tn. Spain Leon prov. and 28 m. S. W. Valladolid, in an extensive plain. It has a handsome granary and hospital, a college, for classical literature, a theatre, six primary schools, a beautiful church, in the Roman style and manufactures of cloth, plain linens, searces, rums, chocolate, bricks, tiles, earthenware, and exquisite butter-cakes, sent not only to Valladolid but to the court. In the vicinity is a tract of whitish clay, which possesses the property of clarifying wines with great rapidity and at the same time without injury to their quality. A considerable quantity of it is used for this purpose not only in this province, but in those of Salamanca and Santander. Pop. 4824.

NAVA DEL-REY, a tn. Spain New Castle, prov. and 22 m. N. W. Segovia. It consists of mean houses of a single story with a church, courthouse, prison, two primary schools and a trade in agricultural produce and charcoal. Pop. 1307.

NAVARRA, a tn. Spain, Estremadura, prov. and 11 m. S. Cáceres, near the Tago, here crossed by a wooden bridge. It has a church, townhouse, with prison and primary school and four mills, and a trade in oil, wine and chestnuts. Pop. 1096.

NAVARRONA, a tn. Spain New Castle, prov. and 24 m. S. W. Toledo with a townhouse, small prison two schools, a church, and two flour-mills. The preparation of charcoal is carried on. Pop. 2161.

NAVAL, a tn. Spain, Aragon prov. and E. Huesca, on a lofty height with Javal, straight, and well paved streets. The inaccessible steep on which the centre of the town is situated makes it a kind of natural fortress. It has a church a courthouse prison primary school hospital, and the ruins of an old Moorish castle; manufactures of excellent liquors, confectionary, hampers shoes, and soap, several distilleries and a considerable trade, chiefly contraband. In the vicinity are extensive salt-works, which are considered the best in Spain. Pop. 1850.

NAVALCAB, a tn. Spain New Castle prov. and W. Toledo between the Tietar and the Guadalupe. It has a church, a townhouse, prison, primary school, and a trade in corn, wine, silk, and cattle. Pop. 1599.

NAVALCARNERO, a tn. Spain New Castle, prov. and 19 m. S. W. Madrid. It has a good townhouse a prison, an hospital and several elementary schools; a church and several chapels and hermitages. Pop. (agricultural) 1158.

NAVALMORAL, a tn. Spain, New Castle, prov. and about 19 m. from Avila, indifferently built with two churches, a courthouse, prison, primary school, numerous flour-mills, and a trade in corn, cattle, and fruit. Pop. 1435.

NAVALMORAL DE LA REA, a tn. Spain Estremadura prov. and 50 m. E. Cáceres with crooked irregular streets, mean-looking houses, a townhouse, several schools, a church, and manufactures of linen cloth, leather rush-chairs, wax candles and torches, oil, and soap. Pop. 3835.

NAVALMORAL DE PENA, a tn. Spain, New Castle prov. and 38 m. S. W. Toledo with 11 smaller and larger squares, regular streets, all paved and clean, a townhouse, prison, public granary, building, hospital, several schools, a church, with an original hermitage, and adorned with several good paintings; a fine robust Capuchin convent, and manufactures of serge, fringed cloth, goats' hair, earthenware, tiles, and leather. Pop. 2180.

NAVALUCILLOS, a tn. Spain New Castle, prov. and 38 m. S. W. Toledo; near which is an iron-works, employing 300 men and boys, and about as many horses and mules. Several tanneries, oil and corn mills, and the elaboration of wax, give employment to many of the inhabitants. Pop. including the hamlets of Alares and Robledo-del-Buay, 1919.

NAVAYILLAR-DE-PENA, a tn. Spain, Estremadura, prov. and 67 m. E. Cáceres, not far from the Guadiana. It is well and regularly built, has a church, townhouse, prison, and school and four mills, and a trade in corn, beef, and oil. Pop. 2220.

Vol. II.

NAVAN a market tn. and par. Ireland, no Month, agreeably situated on an acclivity at the junction of the Boyne and Blackwater 36 m. N. W. Dublin, on the railway and canal to Drogheda. It consists of three principal streets, tolerably straight, but indifferently built, and badly kept and has a very handsome parish church with an ivy-clad tower a large E. Catholic chapel, an endowed and several other schools, a county infirmary cavalry barracks, workhouse, and brew well a distillery brewery, pepper factory, and six mills a considerable and increasing trade in corn, and two weekly markets. Adjoining the town is the splendid ruin of Athlone castle P. 3979 Area of par. 3845 ac. P. 6852.

NAVARRINO a fortified seaport in Greece. Morea, W. coast, lat. 38° 54' 36" N. lon. 21° 41' 45" E. (a.) It stands on the S. E. side of the harbour is divided into an upper and a lower town and is surrounded by a wall without any fosse or ditch. The citadel on upper part is of an antique, but has no rampart, nor any outworks. The houses near the harbour are tolerably well built, the streets narrow steep uneven and dirty. Here are the remains of an ancient aqueduct, a fountain, and several marble pillars, which now support the facade of the grand mosque. The harbour is one of the best in the Morea having the long narrow island of Sphaghi in front, which extends in a S. W. direction for nearly 8 in. The principal entrance is to the S. of the island, the passage being nearly 1 m. broad, but when in, the harbour widens to 3 m. and its general depth, with exception of two shoal spots, are 26 to 19 fathoms. Here the British, French, and Russian fleets gained a victory over the Turks and Egyptians, October 20, 1827, and here, also the Spartan navy was defeated by the Athenians.

NAVARRIE (Spanish Navarra) a prov. Spain between Aragon Old Castle, and Biscay, cap. Pamplona bounded N. by France W. prov. Guipuzcoa and Alava, E. by Guipuzcoa and Logroño and forming an irregular oblong square, extending N. to S. about 140 m. and E. to W. 50 m. area, 2443 sq. m. Its N. boundary is very mountainous being composed of the W. slopes of the Pyrenees, which dip down towards the ocean and, by their numerous streams, supply the Ebro and Bidassoa, its principal rivers. Notwithstanding its proximity to the Pyrenees, the climate is rather temperate, as well as healthy the thermometer ranging from 26° to zero in winter and 86° to 93 in summer. As Navarre has both a lowland and highland district, it combines all the means of subsistence the latter supplying fuel and timber for building and the former wheat maize good vines especially those of Tx. de la and Tx. de la. Oil flax, hemp and all sorts of lacustrine plants as well as abundant pastures for cattle of every description. It also possesses mines of iron copper and lead; salt springs and rocks, and quarries of jasper marble, and slate. The rivers abound with trout, barbel and eels. Essentially an agricultural province Navarre has but little commerce its exports consisting chiefly of wool, hemp, sails, wax, salt, hides, liquors, wheat, combs, and box wood species; brandy, fruits, hogweed cattle, and swine, and its imports of linen, woolen and silk fabrics. It also exports wax, tanned leather, oil, almonds, soap glass, salt, hemp &c. The Navarrese live very much by themselves, each in his valley which is to them the whole world. Their bane is the all-corrupting habit of smuggling which their intricate frontier favours. The scenery is Alpine and picturesque, but the mountains are not so high as those of Aragon although the Altobarré reaches 5880 ft., and the Ad. 5218 ft. In the N. portion of the province, the Basque language is chiefly spoken. The bird-songs of Navarre are remarkable for their light nature, physical forms their temperate habits, endurance of hardships and privations, individual bravery and love of perilous adventures—qualities which have always rendered them formidable as guerrillas. As regards education, Navarre is in a very backward state. Pop. about 280 000.—The ancient kingdom of Navarre comprised both the modern Spanish province, sometimes called Upper Navarre and also French or Lower Navarre, separated from the former by the Pyrenees, and included in the ancient prov. of Bearn, now dep. Basse-Pyrénées. The wild and broken glens of this region possess the natural fastnesses of the ancient inhabitants when retreating before the Romans and Moors. They made common cause with the highlanders of Aragon, until about 843, when Infio Arista was chosen king of Navarre at Pampeluna, while the national liberties were guaranteed by the celebrated Fuero de Albarre. Navarre was annexed to Castile, in 1519, by Ferdinand the Catholic, partly by force, and partly by fraud. Jean d'Albret, the rightful heir, being abandoned by his French allies, who profited by his ruin, as the territory was partitioned. Ferdinand sealing all 8. of the Pyrenees, while the N. portion ultimately passed, with Henry IV to the crown of France.

NAVARRÉS, a tn. Spain, prov and S.S.W Valencia, on a height, in a plain called the Canal de Navarrés. It has a church, townhouse, two primary schools, and a trade in corn, silk, wine, and fruit. Pop. 1668

NAVARRETE (called sometimes De Zujón), a vil. Spain, Old Castile, prov and 7 m W Logroño, near r bank Ebro, in the centre of Rioja Castellana. It has two squares, a parish church, an hospital, private elementary school, manufactures of earthenware, oil and some wine, and handiwork. It is entirely undermanned by large wine-vineyards, into which some of the houses sunk a few years ago. Pop. 2002

NAVÁS, several places, Spain, particularly—1 (de Jorquera), A vil and com. Murcia, prov and 18 m from Albalade with a church, courthouse, primary school, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and a trade in these and in agricultural produce. Pop. 676—2 (de San Antonio) A vil and com. New Castile, prov and 20 m from Segovia, houses of one story, 11 houses, with a church, a primary school and some transit trade. Pop. 830—3 (de San Juan) A tn., Audulanza, prov and 35 m from Jaco near 1 bank Guadarrama, with a church, townhouse, primary school, manufactures of linen and hempen cloth, and a trade in corn, fruit, and cattle. Pop. 1450—4 (Fras) A tn. Leon, prov and S W Salamanca, poorly built with a church, townhouse, prison and primary school and manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and hats. Pop. 620.

NAVÁS-DE-MARQUE, a tn. Spain, Extremadura, prov and 17 m. N W Cáceres. It has narrow, but level and well paved streets, and well-built houses, a townhouse, green public primary two elementary schools, and a church. Out-growing, weaving cloth and linen, grinding corn, soap-boiling, brick baking, and spinning and dyeing black thread, are the chief employments. Pop. 4101

NAVÁS DEL MARQUE a tn. Spain Old Castile prov and 25 m. E.S.E. Avila, indifferently built with a church and old Moorish edifice, belonging to the duke of Medinaceli, a countess, prison and primary school, manufactures of coarse woollen and some trade in wool and timber. P. 2000

NAVÁS-DE-TOLOS, a small vil. Spain, Andalusia, prov and 39 m N. Jaso, on the high road from Madrid to Cadiz. Here a great victory was obtained by the kings of Castile, Aragon, and Navarre, over the Moors, who were commanded by Mahomet Ibn Abdallah king of Morocco. The Spaniards claim the whole merit of the victory, although they were assisted by 110,000 foreign crusaders, chiefly English and French. It is said that 200,000 of the Moors were slain, and only 725 Christians.

NAVÁZA, a small isl. Caribbean Sea, off W point Haiti, at S.W. entrance to the Whitbread Passage, lat. 18° 25' N lon. 75° 2' W (a). It is about 9 m. in length 13 m. broad, and consists of a flat level rock, apparently of volcanic origin, 300 ft. in height, and covered with small shrubs. Every part, excepting a small space on the N. side presents a rocky perpendicular cliff. It is frequented by vast numbers of sea-fowl, and fish abound in its immediate vicinity

NAVE, a vil and com Italy Lombardy gov Milan, prov and 5 m. N N.E. Brescia, near the junction of the Piave with the Garda. It has a church and a sanctuary, and manufactures of paper, bricks, and tiles. Pop. 2058

NAVILLI, a tn. Naples, prov Abruzzo-Ulter II, dist. and 18 m. S.E. Aquila. Pop. 1100

NAVENBY, par Eng. Lincoln 2110 m S P (1651), 1097

NAVER (Loon), a lake, Scotland, near the centre of Rutherlandshire, is a very mountainous district length S.W. to N.E., 7 m., greatest breadth, 3 m., greatest depth, 80 fathoms, area, about 9 sq m. Its banks are tolerably well wooded, chiefly with birch, and the scenery around is very interesting. It receives several tributary streams, of which the Minto and Strathgavany are the chief, and discharges itself by the Naver, which flows 18 m. circumstantially N. into the Atlantic, and is the largest stream in the county

NAVETOCK, par Eng Essex 4292 ac. Pop. 683.

NAVIA (SEA MANA), a tn. Spain, Asturias, prov and 44 m. W N W Oviedo, on a height above 1 bank Navia, near where it falls into the Bay of Biscay and forms a harbour. It has a church, townhouse, custom house, primary school, manufactures of linen, several flour-mills, and a trade in charcoal, iron and steel, and salt provisions. It is a very ancient place, and afforded an asylum to many distinguished Spaniards, while the country was in the hands of the Moors. Pop. 884.

NAVIA, a river, Spain, which rises in the mountains of Cebreco prov Lugo, Galicia, down N N.E., and falls into the R. of Burey, near the town of Navia, after a course of about 85 m

NAVIGATORS or SAMOA INLAND, a group, Pacific Ocean, N.E. of the Friendly Islands, lat. 13° 30' to 14° 30' S. lon. 168° to 175° W. They are eight in number—the principal being Savaii, Upolu, Taitalia, and Manua, area, 1450 sq m. They are of volcanic structure, having coral reefs, within which their harbours are usually situated. The soil is variable, and there is much bad weather, particularly during the winter months, when long and heavy rains, attended, at times, with high winds and northerly gales, are frequent. The soil of all the islands is rich, and is chiefly formed of decomposed volcanic rocks, yielding bread fruit, of which there are about twenty varieties, bananas, coco, paper-mulberry, tacao, from which arrow root is made, sugar-cane, coffee, sweet potato, pine-apple, yams, papaya, and tobacco. Tree-ferns, bayon trees, pandanus, several species of palms, the cocoa-nut, and the wild orange, are also found in greater or less plenty. Battans, 90 ft. in length may be seen running over the trees, haubous, wild sugar-cane, wild ginger, and wild nutmeg also abound. There are no native quadrupeds on the islands, but swine, cattle and horses, have been introduced, and are rapidly increasing. Poultry is plentiful. Snakes were found on one of the islands Upolu, and sea-serpents are said to have been seen off the islands. Fish are taken in great abundance. In personal appearance, the men of the Samoan group are in general superior to the women, there being among the former many specimens of manly beauty while the latter are rather ill-formed and stout, though, when very young, they are both lively and pretty. In disposition, the Samoans are kind, good humoured, intelligent, fond of amusements desirous of pleasing, and very hospitable. Both sexes are much attached to their children and entertain a profound respect for age. Like most other savages, however, they are indolent, covetous, fickle, and dishonest. Their language is soft and smooth, and is the only one of the Polynesian dialects in which the sound of S is found. Nearly all the foreigners resident on these islands are subjects of Great Britain, and the conduct of the natives towards them in the highest degree kind and respectful. The whole of the population of Manua, and nearly all that of Tutuila, have embraced Christianity. The natives are beginning to have a good notion of the value of money and of trading and supply fruit vegetables, and hogs to the shipping. Their only staple, however, notwithstanding the islands seem fit for growing every tropical production, is coconuts. The quantity produced in any year has not, however, exceeded 100 tons, although two times that quantity could be easily manufactured from the present trees, as immense numbers of coconuts are left to perish. A few small vessels trade from Sydney, but the wants of the people are principally supplied by American whalers, conveying to them blue, white, and unbleached cotton, printed calicoes, hardware, muskets, fowling-pieces, powder, shot, axes, &c.—(Wilkes' U. S. Exploring Expedition, Natural Magazine, &c)

NAVY DAY See MANANILLA

NAKOS or NAXA an isl. Greece, in the Grecian Archipelago, the largest of the Cyclades, S. from Myconos, lat. N (point or Cape Strans), 37° 30' N lon. 25° 35' E. (a). It is 18 m. long, 14 m. broad area, 170 sq m.; hilly but extremely productive, yielding fruit, wine, oil, cotton, silk, wheat, and barley while the higher grounds afford pasturage for cattle, horses, honey, and wax, are also exported. There are quarries of granite, marble, and serpentine, and on the W coast is a mass of emery. Abundance of maracade, or sulphuret of iron, is also found. When polished, it has for a time almost the lustre of real brilliants, and was formerly much used in the manufacture of ornaments in England.

being augmented from within it by a number of immigrants, under the names of the Smoky Hill, the Grand Saline, Solomon's, and the Republican Forks. The Indian is still in complete possession of the territory, and roams over it in quest of game or plunder.

NECESSIDADES or SANTO-ANTONIO, a vil and par. Brazil, near Santa-Catharina, 5 m. N. Desterro, with a church and a primary school and considerable exports of molasses, manioc, sugar and rum, for the last of which it has 30 distilleries. Pop. 3000.

NECHANITZ or NE-NECHASTRA, a market tn. Bohemia, circle and 24 m. E. Sudobrow on the Bistritz. It has a church and a school. Pop. 1054.

NECHOW, a tn. China, prov. Chekiang advantageously situated on the main road between Hway-chow and Ningpo. It is a busy place, carrying on an active trade with Hway-chow, Yuen-chow and Hing-chow. Pop. 50,000 to 60,000.

NECHALOVA or NUKALOVA, a tn. and Tzoupa, one of the Friendly Is. It occupies an elevated height on the S.W. coast, about 100 yards from the water's edge, and covers an area of 4 or 5 ac., surrounded by a deep, broad ditch, now partly filled up, and a strong wall or fence of reeds, like wicker-work, about 9 ft. high. The houses, about 350 in number, are of an oval form and have large pillars supporting a roof also oval. Each house has a court-yard, enclosed by a neatly interwoven reed fence, and containing bread fruit and coconut trees, and other useful plants and shrubs. The most conspicuous objects are two churches—one a neat, plain building, occupying a grass plot on the highest summit of the island. Both churches are under the direction of the Wesleyan missionaries who have long had a station here. P. 2000.

NECKAL, a river, Germany, which rises about 2000 ft. above sea-level, on the E. slope of the Black Forest, W. Germany, near the source of the Danube and the frontiers of Baden, proceeds S. N. E., traversing the N. W. corner of Hohenzollern, then E. N. E. to Esslingen, where, on reaching the Rhine, it takes a circuitous course N. through Württemberg, and enters Baden. On reaching the S. frontiers of Hesse-Darmstadt, its course, though circuitous, becomes almost due W. past Heilbronn and it joins S. bank Rhine at Mannheim. Its principal affluents are, on the l., the Isar, and on the r. the Fils, Ems, Murr, Kocher and Jaxt. total course, 270 m. of which about 120 m. commencing at Cannstadt, are navigable.

NECKAR-GRODNO, a tn. Baden circle Lower Elbe at the confluence of the Elbe with the Neckar 16 m. E. S. E. of Mannheim, with three churches, building yards, manufactures of leather and card-woven, and some shipping. Pop. 2150.

NECKAL-STRICKER, a walled tn. Hesse-Darmstadt, prov. Starkenburg on the Neckar 5 m. E. Heilbronn, with some shipping, a tobacco-factory, and a trade in wood. The steep hills in the neighbourhood are crowned with four feudal castles. Pop. 1521.

NECKARAU a vil Baden circle Lower Rhine, on an isl. in the Rhine, S. Mannheim. It contains a Protestant and a L. Catholic parish church. Pop. 1631.

NECKARBUHL, a tn. Württemberg circle, and on the Neckar 40 m. S. Stuttgart, with an old castle of the knights of the Teutonic order, a L. Catholic church, manufactures of leather, and some trade in wine. Pop. 3402.

NECKARTENZLINGEN, a vil. Württemberg, circle Schwarzwald, on the Enns, near Nürtingen. Hard by it is the chateau of Necker on a height above the Necker, formerly occupied by an ancient castle of same name. Pop. 1018.

NECKARTHAUFINGEN, a vil. Württemberg, circle Schwarzwald, 4 m. S. W. Nürtingen, 1. bank Necker here crossed by a bridge, on the road to Neudingen. It has a church and a market. Pop. 1040.

NECKER, an isl. Pacific lat. 28° 34' N.; lon. 154° 27' W. [a.] a mere rock, about 500 yards long, and 360 ft. high without a single tree on it, but vegetation abundant towards its summit, shores steep as a wall; the sea breaks with fury against it at all points. It was discovered by La Perouse, November 1, 1788, and was covered with guano.

NECKTON, par. Eng. Norfolk; 2749 ac. Pop. 1020.

NECEPAL or NECHASTRA, a vil. Hungary, Habsburg Danube, co. Thurocz, at the foot of Mount Caba, on a small stream of same name, 23 m. N. W. Neustadt with a Protestant and a L. Catholic church, a Protestant school, four chateaux, and a paper-mill. Pop. 1023.

NEDA (San Nicolas del), a tn. Spain, Galicia, prov. Coruña, S. bank Ferrol, here crossed by a bridge, at the confluence of the Jubla, 5 m. E. Ferrol. It is tolerably well built, has a substantial church, a courthouse, two primary schools, and an hospital; manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, a trade in agricultural produce, and bread, sent chiefly to Ferrol, and numerous mills. Pop. 1904.

NEDDANS, par. Ire. Tipperary 2886 ac. Pop. 605.

NEDÉCZ or NEDECS, a vil. Hungary, Habsburg Thales, co. Zips, in a valley near the Dunajec, in a very mountainous district, about 45 m. from Lentschau, with a church and an old castle. Pop. 1011.

NEDELICS or NEDONICS a vil. Hungary, Thälher Danube, co. Szabol, near the Drave, 4 m. N. W. Maram, with a R. Catholic church. Pop. 1001.

NEDENES or NEDENES, a hall. Norway, prov. Christendom bounded N. W. by prov. S. Bergenhus, W. Steinger S. W. Mandal, S. and S. E. the Skager Rack, and E. and N. E. Bragaberg, greatest length, N. N. W. to S. E. E., 180 m. mean breadth about 30 m. area, 3486 sq. m. The surface is mountainous in the N. and N. E., where summits of the Hingfjeld exceed the height of 4000 ft., but lowers gradually S. towards the shore. The principal river is the Torradal, which traverses the hillwork centrally N. to S. the other rivers, descending of notes, are the Klä, Topdal, and Mandal. There is much fine scenery in the valleys watered by these streams. Chief town, Arendal. Pop. (1855) 59,112.

NEDERBEEKEL, a tn. and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, 16 m. S. Ghent with several breweries, a salt-refinery, two bleachfields, two dye-works, and oil, mustard, and flour mills. Pop. 3763.

NEDERHASSILT a vil and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, on the Molenbeek, 22 m. S. E. Ghent. Weaving of linen and agriculture are the chief employments. P. 1517.

NEDERLANDEN kingdom, Europe. See NETHERLANDS.

NEDERWEERT a vil. Holland, prov. Limburg, 12 m. W. N. W. Roermond, with a church and school. Pop. 540.

NEDDING, par. Eng. Suffolk, 837 ac. Pop. 183.

NEDJED, a dist. Arabia. See NADJ.

NEDRIGAILLOW a tn. Russia, gov. and 104 m. N. W. Kharzov 1. bank Soula with three churches, and a coal desirable trade, particularly in tobacco which is extensively grown in the neighbourhood. Pop. (1843) 2676.

NEDUNTIVOS Isl. Ceylon. See DEMET.

NEDDE, a vil. Holland, prov. Gelderland 23 m. E. N. E. Arnhem, in a rich corn country. It has had streets, rendered disagreeable by numerous dung-heaps, a good-looking old Calvinistic church, a R. Catholic chapel and a school. P. 864.

NEDHAM, par. Eng. Norfolk 1137 ac. Pop. 335.

NEDHAM MARKET, a tn. England, co. Suffolk, 8 m. N. N. W. Ipswich, on the railway to Bury St. Edmunds with a large chapel belonging to the Establishment, an independent chapel, and a Friends meeting-house a free grammar and other schools and several charities, malt and gins are made in the town, and, near it, are brick and lime works. Pop. 1268 (see Local Correspondent).

NEEDLES (Tn) a cluster of remarkable rocks, England, off W. extremity of Isle of Wight, and so called from their pyramidal and pointed shape lat. (light) 50° 59' 54" N.; lon 1° 54' W. (t) They are five in number, though only three of them now stand boldly out of the water. They are composed of chalk, and, though white, are curiously streaked with black dots from the alternating strata of flints. The fragile nature of their component parts, and the violence of the waves, are continually making changes on their form and disposition, and about 60 years ago, the one to which, from being so sharp, and thin, the name of needle was most applicable, and which measured above 100 ft. in height from low-water mark, fell down and almost entirely disappeared. A lighthouse, called the Needle light, but situated near the edge of the alk, on the W. extremity of the Isle of Wight, has a height of 449 ft.

NEELGERRY, mountains, India. See NEELGERRY.

NEEMABEIRA, a tn. Hindostan, prov. Malwa, 17 m. N. W. Wessamb 1st. 24° 23' N.; lon 74° 50' E.

NEEMBUCCU a tn. Paraguay, in a marshy tract, near 1. bank Paraná, 100 m. W. S. W. Assumption, with a harbour, at which a considerable trade is carried on. Pop. about 1790.

NEEMLA, a small tn. Afghanistan, in the plain of Jalalabad, 8 m E Gushamak; lat. 34° 18' N; lon. 70° 8' E. Near it is a fine market.

NEEMUTCH, a tn Hindoostan, prov Ajmer 36 m S. by E Chittor lat. 24° 37' N lon. 75° E 1476 ft. above sea-level. It contains a good bazaar to the N.W. of which is a British cantonment.

NEEN two pars. Kong Salop—1, (Savage) 8779 ac. Pop. 446—2 (Sillars) 1779 ac. Pop. 218

NEEVON par. Lang Salop; 1140 ac. Pop. 118.

NEER, a vil. Holland, prov Limburg 5 m N Roermond on the Meuse, near its junction with the Meuse. It has a church and school. Pop. (agricultural), 678.

NELEHRYLISSEM, a vil. and com. Belgium prov S Brabant, on the Little Oude 51 m S S.E. Brussels. It has a brewery and a mill but the chief employment is agricultural. Pop. 1814.

NEERLINTER, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov S Brabant on the Great Oude 80 m E Brussels. It has two mills. Pop. (agricultural), 1888.

NEERHOLTEREN, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov Limburg on the canal from Hasselt to Hartogenbosch 60 m N.E. Hasselt. It has two oil and four flour mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1275.

NEERPEL, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov Limburg on the Dommel, 55 m N Hasselt with a brewery and a flour-mill. Pop. (agricultural) 1150.

NEFRWIDEN, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov and 24 m W.W. Lige on the railway to Triermost famous for two great battles fought on its plains—the one in 1698, in which the French, under Marshal Luxembourg defeated the allies, under William III of England, and the other in 1702, when the Austrians, under the prince of Coburg defeated the French under Dumouriez. Pop. 824.

NEERYSCHE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov Brabant, on the Yser, 6 m S.W. Louvain, with a brewery a mill, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1225.

NEFTA, a tn. N.W. Africa, regency and 217 m S.W. Tunis lat. 34° 13' N lon. 7° 55' E, close by several extensive salt lakes. It is rather a collection of villages separated from one another by gardens, than a town. Both the position of the place and the survivors are extremely poor.

The houses are generally built of brick, some of them with taste. It is divided into three quarters each of which has a mosque and school and in the centre of all is a square, which serves for a common market-place. It is the entrepot of the merchandise sent from the metropolis into the Sahara. Some Jewish artisans are tolerated here, on the known conditions of wearing a black handkerchief on their head and not mounting on horseback. The inhabitants are represented as strict observers of the Mahometan law, and as very hospitable. —(Dumas, Sahara Algérie.)

NEFTABACH, a vil. and par. Switzerland, can and 18 m N.N.E. Zürich r. bank Rhod. It lies in a vine district in which some of the best wine of the canton is produced, and contains the ruins of an old castle. Pop. 1452.

NEFYA, a bor. in, and par. Wales. See Nefyn.

NEGAPATAM, a seaport in Hindoostan coast of Coromandel, prov Carnatic 20 m S. Tranquebar, lat. 10° 46' 30" N lon. 79° 50' E, once a place of great importance, but now much decayed and depopulated the remains of some old fortified Dutch houses the obelisks and emblems of an extensive burying ground, and the ruins of a fort is the centre of the town, alone remaining to give some idea of its once flourishing condition. Negapatam was originally a small village, but was fortified and improved by the Portuguese. It was taken from them by the Dutch in 1680, who strengthened its fortifications, erected public offices, and established a mint. By degrees its trade increased and the town was resorted to by merchants from different parts of the world, and became the capital of the Dutch settlements in Hindoostan. Since 1763, when it was formally ceded to the British, its fortifications have been neglected, and most of its trade transferred to other places. A few coasters however still frequent it, and ships often stop there for provisions and water.

NEGOMBO, a seaport tn. Ceylon, 34 m N Colombo, near the mouth of the Kaywell. It is a place of some trade, but is resorted to by coasters only. It contains several places of worship, and is the residence of an assistant Government agent, who collects the revenue and customs. Negombo is famous for its fish, kid, poultry, eggs, and bread-fruit, vegetables, also, may be obtained in plenty at moderate prices, and game is abundant. It was formerly the place of residence of several respectable Dutch families, whose gardens were celebrated for their exotic fruits, originally introduced from Java, and the Malay peninsula. The country around abounds in excellent pastures. Very fine mushrooms are found here during the rainy season, and from the care with which the country is irrigated, a great deal of paddy is produced.

NFGHAIR, a dist. lat. lat and mapo Bernah. The district is situated at the S.W. extremity of Pegu, area, 9000 sq m surface low and, except where cleared for culture, overgrown with jungle and forest. Rice is the principal grain cultivated but maize, yams, sweet potatoes and furmosses roots are also raised. Bulk and cotton coarse goods are manufactured in the province. The objects of internal trade are rice, salt, salted and dried fish, sent inland from Bassein for which the returns are silk goods, lacquered ware, tobacco, omans, tamarind, cotton lac, lacquer petroleum, oil, dammer, iron salt-petre and sulphur. Large quantities of salt are manufactured on the sea-coast. —The Malacca, situated at the mouth of the W. branch of the Irawaddy, lat. 14° 2' N, lon. 93° 19' E, is small and has a harbour the most secure in the Bay of Bengal. The Madras Government established a small settlement here in 1687, but it was subsequently relinquished. In 1751 it was again occupied by the British and again abandoned. Six years afterwards it was ceded to the British by the Burman emperor Alompra. and in October 1759 it was attacked by the Burmese, and all the British settlers who could not effect their escape, were murdered. Latterly it has been almost entirely deserted and is overgrown with jungle, and intersected by salt-water inlets. —The Canal, forming the S.W. extremity of the district, is in lat. 10° 1' 30" N lon. 94° 12' E.

NEGRAR, a tn. and par. Italy, Venetia, prov and N Verona with numerous handsome villas, three churches, and 11 mills. Pop. 3476.

NEGHEPELISSEL (Latin Argus Pellicionis), a tn France, dep. Land-et-Garonne 10 m N.E. Montauban. The inhabitants early distinguished themselves in the cause of the Reformation, and it has still a Calvinistic consistorial church. It suffered dreadfully during the religious wars and was ultimately almost entirely destroyed by Louis XIII, who ordered an indiscriminate massacre of its inhabitants. It has some manufactures of cotton, cantery, and leather and a trade in corn. Pop. 1234.

NEGRILO PUNIS, two remarkable capes or headlands Jamaica, forming the most W. points of that island they are called, respectively N. and S. Negri, the former lat. 18° 23' N lon. 78° 33' W (a), the latter lat. 18° 18' 45' N lon. 78° 22' W (a) they are about 8 m apart, the intervening space forming a semicircular bay called Long or Negri Bay in which is a small island named Booby Island.

NEGRO, a cape W. Africa b. coast Bight of Biafra lat. 18° 45' S lon. 11° 49' E. It consists of a precipitous mass rising at the extremity of a low projecting point and hence, at a distance presenting the appearance of an island. It is composed of red sand and horizontal strata of different colours, abounding with varieties of fossil shells. On its summit, when seen by Douville was a small marble cross, erected by the early Portuguese.

NEGRO (Itro) a large river S. America constituting, throughout its whole length the boundary line between the Republic of La Plata and Patagonia. It is formed by the junction of two principal head streams, called respectively Capatzenhe and Encarnacion, or Lima Leuba (river of heebes) according to the natives. The former flows from the N., along the base of the Cordillera, having its sources on the E. slopes of the Chilian Andes, near the volcano Villarrica lat. 30° 10' S lon. 71° 10' W, the latter flows from the S.W. issuing from a lake called Melchumall lat. 41° 6' S. These two head streams unite at lat. 40° 4' S lon. 71° W. From this point, the Rio Negro proceeds N.E. under the Indian name Lima Leuba, to about lat. 30° 50' S, where it is joined by the Mequim, whence it flows nearly due W., to lon. 68° W. when it takes a S.E. direction, and falls into the Atlantic N. from the Gulf of San Matias; lat. 41° S.

lon. 68° 50' W. The entire length of its course is between 500 m. and 600 m., exclusive of windings, during the latter part of which it is known by the name also of the Cum Lander. In nearly the middle of its course, or about lat. 35° S., there occurs a large island or group of islands, formed by a diverging branch of the river, called Islands or Chibichol. Above it, the river is studded with innumerable small islands, which greatly obstruct the navigation. Further up it is bounded by steep rocky escarpments rising 500 or 600 ft. above the stream, which runs with great violence. Towards its mouth, the river is about a third of a mile wide, and flows in a broad and still current. The entrance into the Rio Negro is obstructed by a bar, on which there is only 6 ft. at low water and generally speaking, 11 ft. is the utmost draught that may enter it without incurring risk. The river was ascended nearly to its source by Villalino, a Spaniard, in 1773. It runs nearly parallel with the Colorado, at a distance of from 50 m. to 60 m., for about 270 m.

NEGRO (Rio) or GUATIMA, a large river, S. America one of the greatest affluents of the Amazon, mostly in Brazil, but having its source in New Granada. It is formed by the junction of two head streams, the Jauila and Tacapi, which unite at lat. 2° N. lon. 70° 25' W. whence it flows N. E. and E. to Maracá, lat. 2° 40' N., in Venezuela, when it suddenly turns S., holding on this course till it reaches 0° 10' S., when it proceeds E. lat. 3° 45' W., whence it flows S. E. E. and E. subsequently falling into the Amazon at lat. 3° 16' S. lon. 59° W. Its whole course is about 1000 m. The principal tributaries from the left or N. are the Casuquari, Cabari, Palaviri, Branco, Janapery, and the Anavetihari, from the right or S. and W. the Aguio, Tomo, Xis, Isanna, Hampes or Guapés, the largest affluent of the Negro, and about 30 smaller but many of them considerable streams. In the lower part of its course the Rio Negro has rather the appearance of a succession of lakes, united by comparatively narrow channels than that of a river, alternating, in some places, to a width of 15 m., 15 m. and 30 m. and sometimes narrowing to 1 m. at its mouth it is about 14 m. wide. The waters are lowest in March, in April they begin to rise and attain their highest level in August and in September they begin to fall; the difference between the highest and lowest level is about 30 ft. The upper stream of the Rio Negro is connected with that of the Orinoco by the river or natural canal of Casiquari. The junction takes place with the Negro at lat. 2° N. and with the Orinoco at lat. 3° 10' N., the distance between the two rivers, at these points, being about 120 m. NEGRO (Rio), a large river Uruguay. It rises in the sierra Cabatón, on the N. E. frontier of the State, about lat. 32° S., lon. 54° W. from which it flows generally N. W. and W. and falls into the Lugrany at lat. 33° 25' S. lon. 58° 25' W. total course, about 300 m. Its principal affluents are the Tumbi, from the N. or right; and the Tic, from the E. or left. It derives its name from the saraperilla plant, which grows on its banks in abundance, and, falling into the stream as it decays, discolors the water at the same time communicating to it medicinal virtues, which attain invalids to the village of Marceda, near its mouth. Its navigation is interrupted by numerous cascades.

NEGRO (Rio) several small rivers, S. America.—1. New Granada, an affluent of the Magdalena, flows from the N. E., and falls into the upper part of that stream at lat. 2° 38' N. lon. 70° 25' W.—2. New Granada, an affluent of the Meta, which it joins a little below its source, at Perito Marayal, lat. 4° 8' N., lon. 74° W. It flows from the N. W. and consequently enters the Meta from the left.—3. Paraguay, an affluent of the Taquari, a tributary of the Paraguay, having its source near Thapari, lat. 25° 36' S.; and, flowing S. S. W., joins the Taquari at lat. 26° 36' S.

NEGROPONT an isl. and m. Greece. See EUROPA. NEGROBO, an isl. and prov. Indian Archipelago, one of the Philippines, separated by narrow channels, from Pasey, on the N. W., and Zebu, on the S. E., and extending from lat. 9° 8' to 10° 58' N. lon. 123° 38' to 128° 20' E.; length 120 m. average breadth, 25 m. The W. coast is sandy and safe, but strong currents make the E. dangerous. A range of mountains, with several lofty peaks, runs N. to S., from which numerous rivers descend to the sea. The centre of the island is little if at all known. Earthquakes frequently occur, the climate is healthy, jamaica, the only common snaked, arises from the interperate use of palm-wine. Besides animals common to Negros with the other Philippines, it has some kinds of monkeys peculiar to itself, and also civets (Viverra). The rivers swarm with fish and crocodiles. The forests abound in cabinet woods of great beauty and fine quality. The cochineal insect is found in the S., but no one cultivates it. The wild tribes of the interior cultivate coffee and cacao trees, and traffic with the more civilized inhabitants of the coast, to whom they are dangerous only when provoked. The latter cultivate rice in the gnomit palm, for cordage the abaca, cacao, and tobacco. They weave to some extent, and are devoted to fishing. Negros produces, also, wax and honey palm-oil, chalk, rock-crystals sulphur, edible birds nests, and pearls. It derives its name from the Negritos, a small race of negroes, who, with the Igorrotes, occupy the interior. The province contains 28 pueblos or townships. The governor resides at Tinasmallan, on a creek on the W. of the island, where small brigas only can enter. The place is so poor that even the governor's house and the church are made of nipa. Pop. prov. 50,000, savage tribes unknown.—(Mallat, Les Isles Philippines).

NEGYHD, a vil. Hungary, Either Denab, or 60 and 80 m. from Nemcs, in the Wag with two churches. White coils and omelets are cultivated on a large scale, in the district P. 2328.

NEHAUEND or MAHAWUND a town, Persia, prov. Irak Ajem, cap. dist. in an angle at the junction of two streams which unite in forming the Koon 60 m. S. E. Kermanshew. It stands on the side of a hill, covered by a stand, and, though partly ruinous, has a number of good houses, and well-supplied bazars, and carries on a considerable trade with the mountaineers of Luristan. Its vicinity is covered with gardens, stocked with the finest fruits. Nehavend is famous for a battle fought, in 641, in which the Arabs signally defeated the Parasians, and overthrew their monarchy.

NEHEIM a town, Rhemish Prussia gov. and 6 m. N. W. Arnsberg, at the confluence of the Minna with the Ruhr. It has a church and three fairs. Pop. 1464.

NEHEREN, a vil. W. Urmberg, circle Schwarzwald, near Tübingen with a church. Pop. 1213.

NEHRUNG, a long and narrow belt of land, Prussia, stretching along the S. E. shore of the Baltic nearly in the form of an arc of a circle and separating it from the large lagoon of the Cursche-Liff; length nearly 80 m.; breadth nowhere exceeding 2 m. It is composed entirely of sand, which has been gradually rising so that vegetation it is a great measure destroyed and several heathles have been buried.

NEIBESHEIM, a vil. Baden circle Middle Rhine, ball Dresden, with a church. Pop. 1213.

NEIDENBURG, a walled town, Prussia, gov. and 95 m. S. by W. Königsberg cap. circle, on the Néika. It has two churches, and manufactures of woollen cloth, leather, and hats. Pop. 2742.

NEIGHERRY HILLS, NEIGHERRIES, or NEEL NEHERIA, a mass of mountains in S. Rhinodonta, partly in prov. Combarotto about lat. 11° 10' N. at the E. extremity of the E. and W. Ghamis, and, as it were, a connecting link between them, extending, E. to W., about 54 m. and, N. to S., about 15 m. culminating in a point, 9041 ft. high. They form a plateau, have peaks 5000 to 8000 ft. high, and several stations, resorted to by Europeans for the salubrity of the climate. The higher parts are often frosty even in summer, and in winter they are covered with snow. Lower down, the surface is a fine pasture like much of our downs, and the wild fruits of our own country are found in abundance. The deeper valleys are occasionally narrow and marshy, but the usual character of the less elevated portion is like the S. of Europe.

NEILSTON, a vil. and par. Scotland, on Benbow, on the Lorn, 9 m. W. S. W. Glasgow. It has an ancient parish church, Free and U. Presbyterian churches, several schools, a mechanics' institute, several cotton-mills, printworks, and bleachworks and four annual cattle fairs. Area of par., 24,820 ac. Pop. 10,577, of vil. 13,238.

NEIRAL, NAIRAI, or NIRAI, an isl. S. Pacific, Togoo group, E. of Koro. At Vamamoto, on the W. side, there is a harbour, with good shelter from the N., and anchorage in 15 fathoms, about 1 m. from the shore. The bay itself is of a circular shape, having all the appearance of an old crater, and, from having a shallow entrance, becomes in a manner isolated at low water, so as to form a beautiful lake. The inhabitants are famous for the manufacture of mats, baskets, &c., and carry on a considerable trade in them by means of barter with the neighbouring islands.

NEIBONE, a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, div Genoa, prov Chiavari, 4 m. from Ciamagna with two churches, and a trade in wine and olives. Pop. 3015.

NEIBSE, a m. Prussia, prov Silesia, gov Oppeln and on a river of same name, 47 m. S.E.E. Breslau, with which it is connected by railway. It is a place of considerable strength being surrounded by walls, and otherwise fortified. It is divided into three parts—the town proper, Frederick's town, and Fort Prussia. It is tolerably well built, contains two Protestant and several R. Catholic churches, a synagogue, several courts and public offices, a gymnasium, high school, an hospital, orphan asylum, institute for superannuated R. Catholic priests, several and other military establishments, and manufactures of fire-arms; a powder mill, cotton and several other mills and a trade in worsted and in building-stones, extensively quarried in the neighbourhood. It came into the possession of Prussia in 1741, when, after a valiant defence, it was taken by Frederick II. Pop. (1816), 8541; (1849) 17,194.

N.EISE, two rivers, Germany, which both have their source in Bohemia, their principal course in Silesia, and fall into the Oder. The one rises in the Riesengebirge near Reichenberg, traverses the E. corner of Saxony past Zittau, enters Prussian Silesia, and, flowing in a N. direction past Görlitz, Muskau, and Guben, where it becomes navigable, joins the bank Oder at Schleide, after a course of about 180 m. The other Neisse rises in the Schneeburg, belonging to the Prussians, which here form the boundary between Bohemia and Prussia. It flows through Silesia, first N. past Gits, then W. past the town of Neisse, and lastly, in a circuitous direction, N. E. past Schunberg, joining the bank Oder about 4 m. below its whole course, which is rapid, and about 100 m.

NEIVA, or NIZA, a river, Russia, gov Perm, which rises in the E. slope of the Ural Mountains, circled and 95 m. N.W. Ekaterinburg. It flows E.S.E. past Alapaevsk and Irbit, and, after a very winding course of nearly 800 m., joins the bank Tura at Nishinka. Its principal affluents are the Irti and the Irbit, which both join it on the right.

NEIVH, a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, div Coni, prov and 4 m. N. Alba, near the Tanaro, with a church, a communal school, and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 2,550.

NEJD (the elevated country) the general name of the central portion of the Arabian peninsula. Some Arab writers use the name in an abstract sense, and speak of the Nejd al Hajra or the Nejd al Yemen that is to say, the inland and elevated region of Hagar or Yemen; but ordinarily the word Nejd is employed without an epithet, to signify the country in the interior, enclosed by Hagar, Yemen, Hadramaut, Oman, El Ahsa and the Syrian desert. The country in question has been traversed but once by a European on the route from El-Katif, through El Ahsa to Medina and Yumbo, and probably it is not known perfectly to even the most experienced of the wandering caravans. The utmost that can be done, therefore, in the way of describing it, is to indicate the oases, so far as they are known, which give it importance, and the routes connecting it with surrounding countries. 1. On the N.W. frontier of Nejd, and on the road to Damascus, has Jof or Jofal Sirhan a rocky tract, embracing probably some well-watered valleys, and with the towns or villages Sakaka and Duma or Damaah the latter generally called by Arab geographers Dumat-ul-Jadid. The approximate position of this oasis is lat. 29° 40' N.; lon. 41° E. 2. About 150 m. S.E. of Jof is the mountainous district of El-Basra commonly known also by the general name of El-Jebel (the mountain) in which there are many villages, of which Hasa appears to be the most important. The names of Basma and Aja also frequently recur in Arab history and legend. With respect to the height of the mountains at this place, we only know that Arab travellers compare them to Lebanon (9000 ft.). At all events, it is certain that El-Basra is elevated enough to reach a humid region of the atmosphere, and to possess copious fountains and cool pastures, so as to have been always a chief centre of Arab migration. As it is about half way between Basra and Mecca it is the chief halting-place of the pilgrim-caravans from Persia and central Asia. In the early and flourishing ages of Arabian commerce, it served in like manner to facilitate the communication between the Persian Gulf and the Mediterranean Sea. 3. Kasim lies to the N. of El-Basra, probably about 100 m., and N.E. by E. of Medina. It extends between three and four days' journey W. to H. and two days N. to H. In 1819, when Capt. Selkirk passed through this country, he chief town was El-Haz, the former capital, Amush or Amush, which was El-Haz is a large town, surrounded by corn fields and plantations. The villages of Kasim are numerous and well supplied with provisions. 4. Ad-Djout Kasim towards the S.E., extends for five days, El Wehem. A tract affording good pasture. Then follows El Arod, which appears to be divided into two districts. 5. Derayah, the chief town of which with the same name acquired a temporary celebrity as the capital of the Wahabî and El Kharij. The town of Derayah stood on the banks of a constant stream and could be approached only through narrow defiles the country around was populous and productive. 6. El Kharij lies half way between Derayah and El Ahsa, all three being probably near the parallel of 26°. This oasis is also called Hailah, and resembles El Ahsa in its abundance of water and immense production of dates. 7. N. of Derayah, five or six days' journey, is Sadeir respecting which we have but little information. The country called by Arab geographers El-Yemadma, seems to have embraced El Kharij and Derayah. From this stretch of Nejd it will be apparent that the chain of wadis or oases which yield food for a comparatively dense population lie chiefly on the road between Bahrein and Medina while the populous districts towards the N. are situated on the hills which lie at the intersection of the caravan routes from the Persian Gulf to the coast of Syria, and from the Euphrates to Mecca. There is said to be S. of El Ahsa, on the road to Oman, an oasis named Yabrin or Jabin which is seldom visited on account of its insalubrity in its air water, and dates being diseased by the masons. But really there seems to be no temptation to penetrate into that quarter. S. of Nejd there extends an immense desert of deep, fine sand the accumulation of ages, under the influence of predominating W. winds, and which completely cuts off all direct intercourse by caravan with the countries in the S. The more elevated tracts of Nejd are celebrated for their pastures and feed immense droves of camels which browse on the bushes and thorny plants of the desert. In former times this paradise of the Bedouins was exclusively enjoyed by the Amash the most powerful of all the Arab tribes. But they did not hold it undisturbed for the Meccan merchants great tribes encamping between Kasim and Medina, habitually contended for a share. These fends were at length completely suppressed towards the close of the last century by the rulers of Derayah who then permitted all Bedouins without distinction of tribe, provided they were Wahabî to feed their camels in the plains of Nejd. Hence this country is popularly called 'the Mother of Camels', is annually supplies thousands of these animals for the use of the Syrian caravans. The camels of Nejd are swift and hardy, but not so large or strong as those of Egypt. The best breeds of Arabian horses also belong to Nejd. They have speed, symmetry and good constitution, but rarely exceed fourteen hands in height. Great numbers of them were sent to India at the beginning of the present century. The settled inhabitants of Nejd are chiefly Beni Yaza with these are mingled mercantile sojourners from various quarters, who buy up the camels and albs or overcoats made by the natives and supply the wants of the Bedouins.—(Burckhardt, Travels in Arabia, Fakhruddin, Description, &c., Jomard in Mémoires Hist. de l'Egypte, &c. vol. 1.)

NEJIA, or NEMSA, a m. Russia, gov and 37 m. S.E. Caerzogov cap. circle, 1 bank Oster. It is surrounded by an earthen rampart, and defended by a castle. It well built, has manufactures of silk stuffs soap, leather, perfumes, confectionary, and especially liqueurs, which are in great demand in Russia, and a considerable trade, being an entrepot between Leipzig and Demag on the one hand, and Moldavia, Wallachia, and the Crimea on the other. Pop. 16,000.

NEKORÉ (ONNA AND UZERE), two contiguous villages, Bohemia, circle Kladsko, about 4 m. from Gabelsburg on the banks of the wild Adler. They have a church, a school, a quarry, and a mill. Pop. 1460.

NELISSEER or NELISURAM, a tn. Hindoostan, prov. Malabar 50 m. S.E. Mangalore, with which it was formerly connected by a chain of large, and eighteen small forts, intended to defend the numerous inlets and anchorages for small vessels on the coast. These forts, since the British ascendancy have been allowed to decay.

NEL LORI' a tn. S. Hindoostan, presid. Madras, cap. dist. r bank of the Pennar near its mouth in the Bay of Bengal, 110 m N by W Madras lat. 12° 49' N, lon 80° 1' E. It is surrounded by a mud wall, with some towers of stone at intervals, but without the walls there are also extensive suburbs. It is a populous place, and carries on a considerable amount of business. The principal street, which is the quarters of a mile long, is composed of well furnished shops, but there are no buildings worthy of notice in the town. —The PENNAIR runs 7930 sq. m., lies between the 14th and 16th degree of N lat. Some copper-mines have been found in it, but not under circumstances that would admit of their being profitably worked. A considerable quantity of salt is made for the government, on the coast, near the town of Nellore. Pop. (1839) 328 726 (1851) 935,690

NELSON a tn and settlement, New Zealand N end of Middle Island or New Munster, finely situated on a flat, hemmed in by rugged hills, at the S.E. extremity of Bluff Bay and the mouth of a small river, called the Matai. The beauty of the site scarcely compensates for the serious disadvantages of having a harbour which only admits vessels of about 500 tons at high water and is left dry at ebb, and of being surrounded by a district much more remarkable for its romantic beauties than for its agricultural capabilities. The progress of the settlement has consequently been slow and the town though founded in 1841 and as well planned as circumstances would permit, continues to be little better than a straggling village. It consists of several streets surrounding a square raised about 40 ft. above them, and containing in its centre an Episcopal church, built of wood, in the form of a cross. There are also a Wesleyan chapel neatly built of brick a literary institution with a small library an agricultural and horticultural society, a brewery and several saw and flour mills. The importance of Nelson, as a seaport, would be greatly increased by the formation of regular docks, which have been projected, and might, apparently from the soft muddy bottom of the haven, be effected at comparatively moderate cost.

NELSON,—1, An isl. Chagos Archipelago Indian Ocean lat. 5° 40' 20" S lon 72° 22' E on the N and E. verge of the Great Chagos Bank, about 1½ m. in length, by 400 or 500 yards broad is low and rocky, and about 12 ft. above the sea.—2 A cape, S. Australia, forming W. side Port Phillip Bay lat. 36° 26' S. lon. 141° 26' E (s).—3, A port (Larson Bay) N.W. Australia, between Brunswick Bay and Prince Regent river lat. 15° 6' S. lon 125° 4' E (s).—4, An isl. S. Atlantic, one of the New S. Shetland group, lat. 68° 15' S. lon 38° 55' W.

NEMBU (anc. Nimbu) a tn and com. Italy, Lombardy prov. and N.E. Bergamo on the Serio with several churches, numerous silk-mills, tile and lime kilns, and several smelting-furnaces. Pop. 3039

NEMEA a place in Greece anciently celebrated for its games, in the N.E. of the Morea, 10 m. S.W. Corinth. It consisted of a sacred grove, which contained the stadium, theatre, temple, and other monuments. Of the temple, which was dedicated to Jupiter a portion of the cella, three standing, and several proptyle columns, almost entire, and a great deal of the entablature remain. The form and decorations are Doric. At a small distance S. from the temple are other remains of the Doric order and traces of the Nemean theatre are to be found at the foot of a hill not far distant. The plain or valley in which Nemea stands is surrounded with barren hills, of a dark and melancholy hue, giving to the place a singularly gloomy aspect.

NEMEDI two nearly contiguous vils. Hungary —1 (Mis) Co. and about 12 m. from Pesth, with a R. Catholic church, an octagon, and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 1946 —2 (Kis) with a church, and a trade in wine. Pop. 708.

NEMES-BIX, a vil. Hungary, Hither Tholis, co. Borsod, on the Sajó, 25 m. from Miskolc, with a Protestant church, and a trade in wood. Pop. 1197

NEMET a vil. Hungary Thither Tholis, co. Torontal, on the frontiers of Temes near the Bega, 8 m. from Kis-Bacsok. It has two Greek un-ruled churches. The inhabitants are Walachians. Pop. 1148.

NEMETH Fm., a vil. Hungary, Thither Tholis, co. Hoves, on the frontiers of co. Borsod, 1 m. from Eria. It has a parish church and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 1186.

NEMETH HOLZ or BOVA a market in Hungary co. Baranya, cap. dist., 6 m. from Molnacs. It has a R. Catholic church, a handsome chateau, and a trade in corn and wine. The inhabitants are Germans. Pop. 2038.

NEMETH Urvan, a tn. Hungary See GURUA.

NEMETHI SZABVARS, a tn. Hungary See SHAVARS.

NEMETHY numerous places, Hungary, particularly—1 (Hersend), A vil co. Zemplin, on the Hernad, 8 m. from Miskolc, with two churches a mill and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1510.—2 A market tn, co. Honth, dist. and 15 m. S.S.E. Bismuth, on a stream of same name, here crossed by a bridge, with a church, and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 702

NEMETZ, a vil. Austria Sciaevonia, generalship Peter-walden, l. bank Donau, 9 m. from Grefk. It has a parish church, and is the head quarters of a frontier regiment. Pop. 1315

NEMI a tn. Papal States, 17 m. S.E. Rome, on the margin of lake of same name. It contains an old feudal castle with a round tower. From the hills above the magnificent view is obtained. Pop. 1100 —The LAKE is evidently the crater of an extinct volcano, the sides of which are formed partly of basalt and partly of consolidated scoriae. It stands 1022 ft. above the level of the sea, and has a circuit of 5 m. It is of great beauty and is much celebrated by the Latin poets under the name of Lacus Nemonensis, or Speculum Dianæ.

NEMIKOV, a tn. Russia gov. Podolsk, in a fertile district, l. bank Dag 104 in E.N.E. kamensk with four churches and manufactures of linen and leather. Pop. 3000

NEMOULES (Lat. Nemosa, a tn. France, dep. Seine-et-Marne, 10 m. S. Fontainebleau almost surrounded by the canal and the river of Lohg here crossed by a handsome bridge. It is situated in a picturesque valley, surrounded on all sides by rocky eminences, is generally well built, with narrow streets and contains a handsome church and the remains of the old castle of the duke of Nemours. It has vineyard-works, breweries extensive vineyards, marble-works brick, tile, and lime kilns, and a trade in corn, flour wood, iron, and charcoal. Bignon, in the vicinity, was the birth-place of Mirabeau. Pop. 8782

NEMPHETT THURSWELL, par. Eng. Somerset 1773 ac. Pop. 284

NEMBOVA, or NEMBOVCE, a vil. Hungary Hither Tholis, co. and 9 m. from Trencsen on the Slava, here crossed by a bridge, with a church a chapel and a trade in salt. Pop. 625

NENAGH, a tn and par. Ireland co. Tipperary. The town is picturesquely situated on a height commanding a fine view of the Devil's-bit mountains 23 m. N.E. Limerick. It consists of a principal street, crossed nearly at right angles by four minor streets, is substantially built, and has an elegantly parish church, Wesleyan Methodist, and R. Catholic chapels, a national and other schools, a courthouse, and jail barracks, an old castle, the ruins of a Franciscan monastery, with some manufactures of woollens, tobacco soap, and candles, and a trade in bacon, butter and eggs. Pop. 5618 Area of par. 3295 ac. Pop. 11 665

NENDAZ, a vil. and par. Switzerland, can. Valais 8 m. S.W. Sion in a beautiful district, covered with corn-fields, meadows, and vineyards. It stands high, and has a fine, clear atmosphere, but the number of cretins is very great. On a hill in the neighbourhood, is an adam spring, which is much resorted to. Pop. 1450

NENE, or NAN, a river, England, formed by two streams in Northamptonshire one, which rises near Arbury Hill, S.W. Daventry and flows W., and another which flows S. from the village of Naseby. On their junction at Northampton, the Nene becomes navigable, flows N.E. forms part of the boundary between co. Northampton and Huntingdon, and after a course of about 20 m., falls into the Wash. Important improvements have recently been made in its channel.

NEUKUR, a vil. Soldau, 5 m. N. Schwanz; lat. 26° 24' N., lon. 67° 54' E. The surrounding country is fertile, but little cultivated.

NEROKAKK, a small seaport, Bassim, gov. and 40 m. W. Arhangal at the mouth of a stream which falls into the bay of the same name. It has the most extensive salt-works in the government.

NETTERSHAUSEN, a vil. Hesse-Cassel, Niederrhessen, circles and 9 m. from Rottenberg, with a church, an infirmary, and three mills. Pop. 1003

NENTHORN, par. Soot. Berwick, 8400 ac. P. 441

NEUNZING, a vil. Anstria, Tyrol, Vorarlberg, dist. Senzenberg, 3 m. E. by Feldkirch; with a church, manufactures of linen, and a cotton-mill. Pop. 1137

NEOGARAD a co. Hungary, bounded N. by co. Sohl, W. Hond, S. Pesth, E. Mayes and N.E. Gömbe. Area 12460 sq. m. In the N. the country is traversed by rapid cascades of the Carpathians, but the surface towards the centre, and the S., becomes flat or undulating. It is well watered by the Tisza or Ipoly the Keznya, and several other streams. The Dunab only forms a small portion of its S. boundary. In the mountainous districts, which are well wooded, and abound with game, almost all the available surface is employed in feeding cattle, sheep, and swine, but the lower lands are fertile, and yield rich crops of corn and flax, superabundance of fruit, and much excellent wine. Tobacco also is extensively grown, and some silk is produced. Manufactures have made considerable progress particularly in woolens and cashmeres, and the trade in the natural products of the country is extensive. It is divided into four districts—Lozowce, Pulask, Besecow, and Kekskio. The capital is Belessa Gyarmath. Pop. 201,000

NEOGARAD or MOULAN a market in Hungary. Hither Danube, co. of same name 37 m. N. Euda. with a church, a paper-mill, and on a hill above the town, the ruins of an old castle to which both the town and county owe their name. Pop. 1600

NEOZZELI, a vil., tal. Sardinia, prov. Sassari, on a hill beautifully situated but poorly built, consisting of several narrow, winding, and unpaved streets. It has a church and a primary school the remains of an old castle, and a trade in wine corn and cheese. Pop. 1028

NEOTIS (37) two places England.—1. A market in and par. oo. Huntingdon. The town is built on a hill, which there is here a stone bridge 9 m. S. by W. Huntingdon consists of three respectable towns with some smaller, and as for the most part well built. The market-place is spacious and convenient. It has a handsome church, with a fine tower, places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans, and a free school. Paper is manufactured here to a large extent. Pop. 2951. Area of par. 4750 ac. Pop. 3157.—2. A vil. and par. England, co. Cornwall in a beautiful and picturesque valley watered by a stream of same name, 5 m. W. W. Lud. with an elegant parish church, ornamented with 16 windows of finely painted glass, a ruined chapel, and vestry of a college or monastery founded in honour of St. Neot, brother of king Alfred. Area of par. 13 997 ac. Pop. 1628

NEPAUL, a kingdom of N. Hindoostan, N. of British India, lying between 36° 30' and 30° 18' N. and 80° 15' and 86° E. length, 915 m. breadth about 100 m., bounded N. by the Himalaya mountains, which separate it from Ti bet, E. Bikhim, Bengal, Babar, Orda, and W. Kanton. Area, about 45 000 sq. m. The lower part of the country, lying along the borders of Orda and Babar, and which is called the Turkyenne (low lands) consists of a long belt or strip of low, level land, about 20 m. broad. Beyond this is a strip of nearly the same width, of small hills, rising like terraces, till they gradually unite with the Himalayas. In several places, however, some fine valleys intervene between the latter and the former, but in general, no distinct boundary separates them. Among the mountains of Nepal are some of the highest summits on the globe, namely, Dwalagiri 28,863 ft. above sea-level, Jumnotri, 25 500 ft., Dhaulagiri, 24,740 ft. and Am Peak, 23 799 ft. The entire alpine region of the kingdom on the N. is from 30 m. to 40 m. in breadth, and throughout this space are scattered immense peaks covered with perpetual snow. Between these peaks there are narrow valleys, some of which admit of cultivation, Vol. II.

but by far the greater portion of this region consists of vast rocks, rising into sharp peaks, and the most awful precipices, wherever not perpendicular, covered with perpetual snow and almost constantly enveloped in clouds. This rugged territory consists in many parts of granite, and contains much iron, lead, and copper, with some iron, and a little gold, found in the channels of rivers. Mines of sulphur are said to be numerous, but little is known about them.

Nepal is intersected by numerous large rivers, but most of them have their sources on the table-land of Tibet, beyond the Himalayas through which they force their way by narrow channels of the most appalling depth. Of these rivers, the principal are the Gogra or Kanar, Gunduck, Tireool, Gogra, and Arun. Numerous small streams also traverse the low lands or tract called the Turkyenne which, not only serve for watering the crops in the latter end of the dry season but, when they are swollen by rains, become navigable, and enable the farmer to send the produce of his fields to a good market, and also serve to float down the valuable timber that abounds in the forests by which the hills are skirted.

Magnificent forests of oak, alder, and yew trees stretch along the declivities of the lower hills into the adjacent plains. The forests higher up exhibit a greater variety, gradually assuming more and more of an alpine character. Excepting at the summits of the mountains the trees are uncommonly large, and the vegetable productions generally of most remarkable sturdiness, beauty and variety. Everywhere, and at all seasons, the earth abounds with the most beautiful flowers, partly resembling those of India, but still more those of Europe. In the higher regions, the trees consist of various oak, pine, fir, walnut, chestnut, hornbeam, yew, laurel, lilies, birches, &c. The greater portion of the low lands (Turkyenne), is covered with long grass or reeds, which once a year are burned in order to keep the country clear, and to improve the pastures. The grass, however, seems to be of a very bad quality as the cattle that feed on it are in miserable condition. Both pastures and forests are in general common, and any person that pleases may use them. But some forests are reserved for the court. The principal object of cultivation is rice to which grain nearly one half of the cultivated lands is appropriated. The remainder being occupied by maize, cotton several kind of legumes, wheat, barley, sugar-cane, and two species of madder. In the mountainous parts, a valuable article of cultivation is a large species of cardamom and in other places ginger is grown to a considerable extent. None of the fruits of Nepal are good, excepting the oranges and pine-apples, but both of these are in great perfection. The peach grows everywhere wild, and is also raised in gardens but it does not ripen till long after the rainy season has commenced, and is generally half rotten before it becomes soft. There are few culinary vegetables, and these are of indifferent quality. Pasturage is generally speaking, scarce and insufficient a great portion of it positively bad, and hence the number of cattle and buffaloes is small. Considerable flocks of sheep, however are reared by some of the tribes on the mountain pastures the herbage of which, though not good, is less harsh and watery than that of the low country. Some of the sheep are of great size, have fine wool, and give a great quantity of milk, from which cheese is made. Horses are imported from Tibet, none being bred to the S. of the Himalaya. The wild animals are elephants, tigers, snow leopards, numerous black bears, of great size, hogs, badgers, hares, foxes, and jackals. Amongst the more remarkable birds are the Mandal and Dumphyra, two of the finest birds known, whose constant shade is the frigid regions of Nepal; and the diukor, known as the fire-eater from its reported power of swallowing fire, and pecking at ignited specks. The woods are inhabited also by vast numbers of a peculiar sort of birds which are tamed by the natives, on account of their singing or imitating the human voice. Fish abound in the streams of the Turkyenne.

The manufactures of Nepal are confined chiefly to two kinds of coarse cotton cloth, called khasi and changs, of which the dress of the middle and lower classes of the people is made. The whole dress of the higher ranks is imported, and consists chiefly of Chinese silks, and of the low country muslins and cottons. The military alone wear European broad-cloth. Articles in copper, brass, and iron, are also manufactured in various places, likewise bells, of a kind of bell-metal, called plant, but considered inferior to those of Tibet; and also a very strong paper, remarkably well fitted for packages, made from the bark of a shrub. The trade of Nepal consists chiefly in the exportation to British India of elephants' teeth, timber hides, ginger, catechu, turmeric, wax, honey, oranges, long pepper, ghee, hatched cinnamon, and large cardamoms, and the importation thence of Bengal cottons and muslins, silks of various sorts, raw silk, gold and silver lace, carpets, Nepali cotton, tea, sugar, soap, sandal-wood, quicksilver, coral, and in importing from Tibet, sheep, mules, skins of the much-dear shaggy tails quackilver, borax, sal-ammoniac, Chinese silk stuffs, paper, drugs, gold and silver, and exporting in return, rice, wheat, oil, iron, copper, cotton-cloth, catechu, juniper, boards, pepper, spices, indigo, tobacco, other skins, sugar, &c.

The people of Nepal are chiefly of the Tartar or Mongolian family divided into numerous tribes but they are, in some cases, considerably mixed with Hindoo blood, and possess the Brahminical faith though some still are Bonddhists. The aboriginal mountain tribes have Chinese or Tartar faces. The Nepwese occupy the more fertile part of what is called Nepal Proper pursue agriculture and commerce, and are far more advanced in the arts than any other mountain tribe. They are of middle size, with broad shoulders and chest, flat faces, small eyes, and spreading noses, with a sallow complexion. The mountain Hindoos, occupying the E. dominions of Nepal, are represented as deceitful and treacherous, cruel and arrogant towards those in their power and abjectly mean towards those from whom they expect favour. They spend their nights in debauchery their mornings in sleep and the day in the performance of religious ceremonies. The principal food of the lower class consists of rice, garlic radishes, and lentils. All classes drink spirituous liquors to excess. Most of the domestic servants are slaves. The country was formerly possessed by numerous independent rajahs, and then extended W. to the Butley; but about the middle of the last century the rajah of Ghorja began to extend his dominions by conquest, in which he and his successors were so successful that in less than 50 years they had conquered the whole of Nepal and made themselves kings of the territory. Subsequently a large portion of the kingdom was cut off by the British, who reduced its W. limit to the river Kaloo, which now forms its W. boundary instead of the Butley. The ordinary language of Nepal is the Prabhrya or mountain Hindoo dialect but the Nepwese have a language peculiar to themselves. Pop. estimated at 2,000,000.

NEPEA—1. An isl., E. Pacific Ocean, lat. 29° 2' S. lon. 107° 48' E. (n) about 4 m. from Norfolk Island, formerly used as a place of transportation for the refractory convicts from the former island, but now abandoned.—2. A bay in Australia, at the N.E. part of Kangaroo Island, about lat. 35° 33' S., lon. 137° 41' E. It is sheltered from all winds except the N.—3. A small isl. Torres Strait lat. 3° 34' S., lon. 148° 43' E. (n)—4. A rocky projection, S. coast, Australia, forming the E. point of entrance into Port Phillip lat. 38° 18' 30" S.; lon. 144° 42' 45" E.—5. A river N.E. of Wales, rises in Co. Cavan whence it flows N. marking the V.E. and E.W. boundaries respectively, of the cos. Cavan and Cumberlan, to lat. 55° 52' S. where it unites with the Warrage-gamba in forming the Hawkesbury.—6. A bay, on the W. coast of British N. America lat. 52° 52' N. lon. 127° 34' W.—7. A large steep bluff, Russian America, on the S. coast of Admiralty Island, lat. 57° 10' N. lon. 158° 54' W.

NEPI [anc. Nepete], a town Papal States, deleg. Viterbo, on the edge of a deep glee, 25 m. N.W. Rome. It is surrounded by old Gothic walls with towers and bastions, built in the middle ages, and partly resting on ancient Etruscan foundations. has several churches, three monasteries, two nunneries, a townhouse, a splendid modern aqueduct, and a number of Roman ruins. Its bishopric is one of the most ancient in Italy. In 1799, Nepi was taken by the French, and almost entirely burned down. Pop. 1798.

NEPOMUK or POMUK, several places, Bohemia, but the only one deserving of notice is a town, circle Klatzka and 55 m. S.W. Prague, with a handsome deanery church, built on the site of the town in which the celebrated St. John Hadl Nepomuk was born a superior school, townhouse, and hospital. On a rocky and well-wooded eminence above the town, stands the old castle of Grünberg. Pop. 1485.

NEPTUNE ISLANDS, a group of small isls., S. Australia, at the entrance into Spencer's Gulf, lat. 25° 25' 15" S., lon. 136° 7' 45" E.

NERA, or NAR, a river Italy, Umbria, which rises in the S. side of Mount Sibilla, one of the summits of the Apennines, S. deleg. Spoleto, flows first W. S. W. and then almost due S., till it recovers the Valino, coming from V. N.E. and forms the celebrated falls called Cascata delle Marmore, near Terni (4640 feet). It shortly after passes the town of Terni, and, proceeding S.W., joins the bank Tiber, a little below Orte. Its whole course, through a most romantic valley, is about 70 m.

NERAC [Latin, Stravica] a town France, dep. Lot-et-Garonne on the precipitous banks of the Baïse, 16 m. W.S.W. Agen. The old town is a dull, ill-built place and communicates by two stone bridges with the new town, which occupies a kind of plateau, and is both larger and handsomer than the old town. The church, of modern construction is large and well decorated, but the most interesting building is the old castle, now a mere ruin. Henri IV. spent part of his youth here, and here, too, at an earlier period, Calvin, and several other distinguished reformers, found an asylum from persecution at the court of the celebrated Margaret of Valois, queen of Navarre. It has manufactures of coarse woollenen, ship-biscuit, and corks for the wine merchants of Bordeaux, starch-works, tanneries, and numerous flour-mills and a trade in linen, hemp, flax, corn, flour, starch, cord-ropes, &c. &c. and partridge peas, which have long been famous. Nera is a very ancient town, and several interesting Roman antiquities, particularly baths, a temple and a palace, have been brought to light by excavation. Pop. 5900.

NERBUDDA [anc. Narmada], a large river, Hindoostan, having its sources in the hilly district forming the W. W. confines of Guzeratwah, about lat. 23° 40' N. lon. 81° 52' E. 2463 feet above sea level. It flows at first W. and N.W. through a high table-land to about lon. 73° E., where it takes a W. direction with a slight inclination to the S. and finally falls into the Gulf of Cambay in about lon. 21° 40' N. lon. 73° 5' E., the whole length of the course being about 600 m. It is obstructed by rocks, shallows and cataraets; but is navigable for boats as far up as the falls of Dase, about 250 m. from its mouth. In the wet season it rises, in some places 25 ft., and in others 70 ft. above its level in the dry season. In Malwa it has its channel excavated through columnar basalt, above which are beds of marl, impregnated with salt. The upper of these marls is of a light colour and from 30 to 60 ft. thick and rests horizontally on the lower bed which is of a reddish colour. Both appear to be tuff, composed of the materials of volcanic eruptions, and forming a covering from 60 to 70 ft. deep, overlying the basalt. Forests of deep jungle extend on both sides, and rise to the tops of the hills. It has no affluents of any considerable size.

NERKHINSK, a town Asiatic Russia. See Zarskoie.

NERKHITA, a town Russia, gov. and 27 m. S.S.W. Kostroma, L. bank river of same name with seven churches, and manufactures of linen in which also it carries on a considerable trade. Pop. (1851) 2698.

NERSENHEIM, a town Wurtemberg, circle Jaxt, at the foot of the Ulmsberg, crowned by an old Benedictine abbey, 16 m. S.S.E. Ellwangen; with a church, and manufactures of woollen cloth, carpets, and earthenware. A battle was fought here between the French and Austrians in 1776. Pop. 1010.

NERESI, a market in Austria, Delmatia, circle and 19 m. from Spalato, near the centre of the island of Braza. It is the seat of a court of justice and several public offices, and has a parish church and a considerable trade. P. 1556.

NERIS [anc. Ague Neris], a town France, dep. Ailler, 38 m. S.W. Montargis, near the Canal du Chene with an hospital, natural thermal baths, of a temperature of 115 to 121° Fahr. In the times of the Romans, Ague Neris was a place of considerable importance. Roman remains, including an extensive amphitheatre, aqueduct, baths, temples, palaces, mosaic pavements, statues of marble and bronze, and many medals and coins, have from time to time been discovered here. P. 1488.

NERJA, a town Spain, Andalucia, prov. and 15 m. S. Malaga, near the Mediterranean where it has a small harbour. It is tolerably well built, has spacious, commodious, and paved streets, three regular squares, a parish church, a modern townships, three schools, and manufacturers of common linen; two sugar-works, a paper and four flour mills, and a trade in sugar, fish, oil, and corn. Pop. 4595.

NERI (GREAT AND LITTLE), two small rivers, Russia, which both take their rise in dist. Perekavl, gov. Vladimir, at a short distance from each other. The Great Neri issues from Lake Pustobere, flows N.W. enters gov. Tver, and joins r. bank Volga a little below Medvedivsk. The Little Neri flows E. about 8 miles of Jaroslavl, and then, bending round to the S., joins 1 bank Klyasma below Vladimir.

NERO, NERA, or ROZOVY, a small lake, Russia, in S. of gov. Jaroslavl, about 10 m. long, N.E. to S.W. and nearly 5 m. broad. The town of Rostov stands on its N.W. shore.

NEROLA, a vil. Papal States, on a small affluent of the Tiber 25 m. N.E. Rome, with an old feudal castle of the Barber family, and supposed to occupy the site of Regillum, the place from which Appian Claudius migrated to Rome. P. 260.

NERONDE, a tn. France, dep. Cher, 17 m. S.E. Bourges, with two annual fairs. Pop. 1298.

NEROUSA, a river, Russia, which rises in gov. Orel, about 9 m. N. Dmitrovsk; flows first W. and then N.W. and, after a course of about 80 m., joins 1 bank Duna opposite to Trubitzsk.

NETICHA, a river, Siberia, which rises in the S.E. of a ramification of the Stanovoi Mountains, on the E. frontier of gov. Irkutsk, flows circuitously S. along the E. part of that government, and, after a course of about 140 m., joins 1 bank Selinka at Neretschuk. Its principal affluent is the Ulduga, which joins it on the right.

NETETCHINSK or NETCHUMSK, a tn. Siberia, gov. and 540 m. E. by N. Irkutsk, cap. circle, on the Netichia, near its confluence with the Selinka. It is surrounded by outworks, and is poorly built of wood. It contains a stone and two wooden churches, and has a considerable trade in furs. Owing to its low situation, it suffers much from inundation. Pop. (1851) 4993.—The climate of great extent is generally mountainous, but has good pastures and includes, among its minerals, gold, argentiferous lead, iron, and precious stones. Pop. 118,000.

NERVA, or NERVION [commonly, Neuse], a river, Spain, prov. Biscay. It flows N.W. past Bilbao and falls into the Bay of Biscay near Portugalete. Its total course is about 50 m.

NERVI a tn. Italy, Piedmont, 477 and 62 m. S.E. Geneva on a slope of Mount Mora, where it descends to the Gulf of Geneva. It has a court of justice, a handsome church, with very beautiful marbles, a number of fine villas, belonging to the Genoese, several public schools and a considerable trade in fruit, particularly lemons and oranges. Nervi has no proper harbour, but is visited by a considerable number of vessels, which, if large, lie in the roads, about 1 m. off. Pop. 4069.

NERVIANO a tn. and com. Italy, Lombardy prov. and 10 m. N.W. Milan, on the Olona, with two churches, an educational institute, a charitable endowment, and several silk and other mills. Pop. 2666.

NERE, two vills. Holland, prov. Friesland, —1, lat. Ameland. It has several churches and two schools, and is inhabited chiefly by sea-faring people. Pop. 570.—2, 23 m. N.E. Leeuwarden, with a church, a school, and a corn-mill. Pop. 588.

NERESCHIN, a tn. Russia, gov. and 86 m. S.S.E. Chernigov, cap. dist. on the Oster. It is surrounded with an earthen rampart, well built, and contains a castle, 15 churches, several convents, and almshouses, an atheneum, and a Greek school. It has manufactures of silk, soap, leather, and perfumes, is famous over Russia for its confectionary and liquors; and has a considerable trade in the articles of its manufacture, and in wine. Pop. 16,000.—The province is sandy and poorly wooded, but raises a good deal of hemp and a large number of cattle.

NERESCHIN, a vil. Austria, Slavonia, co. Syrmia, on the Danube, over which there is here a ferry, 4 m. from Illok. It has a parish church. Pop. 1427.

NESS (GAAV), par. Eng. Scot., 5379 ac. Pop. 618.

NESS (LOCN), a lake, Scotland, Inverness-shire, in the line of the Caledonian Canal, and, after Lochs Lomond and Awe, the largest in the country. It forms a long and narrow cagnine, stretching between S.S.W. and N.N.E., about 22 m.

with a breadth varying from 1½ m. to 2 m., and a depth of from 100 to 180 fathoms, though much less at the extremities. It occupies the centre of the valley of Glenmore, and is enclosed by rugged and barren mountains, averaging about 1000 ft. in height, and composed chiefly, on the N. side, of preloping of a reddish-coloured granite. Several fine valleys are seen opening transversely on the lake and on the S. side, a level tract, of a fertility and beauty not common in the Highlands, is seen, but there is generally a considerable want of wood, and the country is not very striking. It receives several streams, of which the Olch, which enters it on the S., the Morrison on the W. and the Foyers and the Farinagh are the largest, and discharges itself by the Ness, into the Moray Firth.

NESSP, or NEMSA, a river, Germany, which rises a little W. of Erfurt, in Prussian Saxony, flows first W. and then N.W. and, after a course of about 46 m., joins r. bank Werra near Eisenach.

NESSLAU, a tn. and par. Switzerland, can. and 16 m. S.S.W. St. Gall, in a beautiful valley near the Thur, with a handsome Protestant and a R. Catholic church and several schools. A good deal of saltpetre is obtained here. P. 3098.

NESSO, a vil. and com. Italy, Lombardy prov. Como, on a hill near E. shore Lake Como in a wild and romantic ravine where the Latis, a tributary of the Lecce, forms a magnificent waterfall, nearly 200 ft. high. It contains a very ancient church, and was once defended by a strong castle, which figures in the early history of Italy. Pop. 1019.

NESTB, or NESTRE, a river, France, which, formed by the junction of the Nests and Auzon and Nests de Louvain at Arras, after descending from the S. slope of the Pyrénées, in dep. Haute-Pyrénées flows first N. and then E., and joins 1 bank Garonne, near Mazades, after a course of about 45 m.

NESTING par. Scot. Shetland 20 m. by 4 m. P. 2430.

NESTON (GREAT) a tn. and par. England, co. and 11 m. N.W. Chester. The town is pleasantly situated on a slope above the estuary of the Dee, and consists of two principal streets. One has a spacious church with a fine baptistery, and a tower, place of worship for Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, Unitarians, Independents, and B. Catholics, a court-house, national and other schools, and is frequented for sea bathing. Some coal is worked in the vicinity. Pop. 1701. Area of par., 15,293 ac. Pop. 8278.

NESTVED a tn. Denmark, at Seeland, bail Jættie, 1 bank Susane, 44 m. S.W. Copenhagen with two churches, a small garrison, and connected, by a bridge over the Susane, with Lille or Little Nestved, which thus forms a kind of suburb. Its haven, which now admits only small vessels, enables it to carry on a little trade. But in olden times, when the Susane floated large ships, it was a place of considerable importance. Pop. (1861), 5785.

NESTVIJ or NESTVITZ, a tn. Russia, gov. and 80 m. S.W. Minsk, on the Ussha, with fortifications, in a very dilapidated state, and a Benedictine abbey. It is the capital of a duchy belonging to Prince Radzivil. Pop. (1842) 4730.

NESSMILLY or NESTMILLY a vil. Hungary, farther Danube, co. and 12 m. E. Komorn on the Danube, with two churches. It produces a wine well known in commerce. The emperor Albert II. died here in 1489. Pop. 1547.

NETHE (KINZEL), a river, Belgium, which rises in the N. of Limburg near Heersel, and flows E., enters prov. Antwerp and, turning W.S.W., passes Westerlo; then turns round, and, by a winding course, reaches Ingelhem, where it first becomes navigable. On reaching Laere, where it receives the Little Nethe, it turns S.W., and joins 1 bank Dyle. The united stream takes the name of Ruppel. Its whole course is nearly 50 m. Of those, about 15 m. are navigable.

NETHE (LIEZ), a river, Belgium, which rises in the E. of prov. Antwerp near Fostel and proceeds W.S.W. to Heersel, where it meets the Great Northern Canal from the E. From this point W. to Liere, where it joins the Great Nethe, a distance of about 15 m., it has been made navigable. Its whole course is about 20 m.

NETHEN a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, on a stream of same name, 18 m. S.E. Brussels. It has a paper-mill, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1235.

NETHER-EXE, par. Eng. Devon, 450 ac. Pop. 108.

NETHERAVON, par. Eng. Wilt; 5180 ac. P. 651.

NETHERBURY, par. Eng. Dorset, 6235 ac. P. 2066.

NETHERLANDS (THE KINGDOM OF THE), [Dutch, Het Koninkrijk der Nederlanden; English, Holland; French, Pays-Bas or Pays-Bas; German, Niederlande; Spanish, Países Bajos; Italian Orlande or Paisi-Bassi]. It embraces, at the present day the N and smaller half of the numerous provinces formerly combined under the same denomination, and lies between lat. 51° 15' and 53° N and lon. 8° 30' and 12° E. On the W and N it is bordered by the North Sea, on the E by Hanover and Prussia, and on the S. by Belgium. The river Ems marks the boundary towards Hanover; but between the Netherlands and the Prussian province W of the Rhine, the collimatory line is fixed rather by conventions than by nature on the S also, the boundary towards Belgium from the left bank of the Meuse or Mosse to the sea, though defined accurately by the treaty of November, 1831, to which the chief powers of Europe were parties, is not marked out by any natural feature.

General Description.—The Netherlands (or Low Countries, as the same implied) form the most characteristic portion of the great plain of W and N Europe. From the middle of Belgium a few miles N of Brussels, the country N E becomes a dead level, extending in monotonous sandy flats, through Hanover, Jutland, Holstein and, with little inter-ruption, through Prussia into Russia. But the lowest part of this immense level, and that which has most recently emerged from the sea, is undoubtedly the country lying between the mouths of the Scheldt and Ems, within this distance the Rhine joined by the Meuse, IJssel and other rivers, enters the sea through a number of arms and sluggish winding channels which by no means represent the magnitude of the main stream as it flows higher up. The delta of the Rhine may be conceived to have been in early ages liable to perpetual change of form, as new sand-banks were deposited blocking up the old channels, and leading to the formation of new ones. Besides, it is obvious that the river floods in forming a domain of alluvial deposits that is continued with the sea, and washed away the accumulations of sand or covered them with sand, according to the vicissitudes of weather and season. The soil of the Netherlands shows everywhere the proofs of this struggle between the ocean and the river, in the alternation of salt and fresh water deposits. It also bears evidence to the fact that these changes, effected by the floods of the Rhine, or by eruptions of the sea occurred frequently long after the country had become inhabited. Remains of forests now lie buried under the waves of the German Ocean, paved roads, traces of villages and of cultivation, are found beneath the mosses on the banks of the Fens, and many similar proofs can be adduced of great physical changes, respecting which history is silent. It must have been the first object, therefore, of the early occupants of this country, to secure the natural permanence of their territorial possessions. For this purpose they had recourse to embankments, high and strong enough to protect them under ordinary circumstances from the waves, and, placing wind mills on the embankments, as opposed to the sea breeze, they worked the pumps which drained the enclosed lands. But this drainage had a consequence which was doubtless not foreseen in the first instance, namely a general subsidence of the land, which with the gradual elevation perhaps of the beds of the rivers has made it necessary to increase the original embankments, and to continue the system of embankment to an unparalleled extent. The required skill grew with the gradually developed necessity. The art of the engineer in contending with floods, in constructing dikes and forming beaches, has attained the greatest perfection among the Dutch, who know how to secure important soils by simple means, such as faggots matting the growth of rushes. In short, the Netherlands present to our view, at the present day, an artificially constructed country, some portions of which are 16 ft. below the surface of the sea, and nearly all too low for natural drainage. The whole country is divided by dikes, some of these 60 ft. high, which protect portions of land from the sea, lakes, or rivers. These enclosed lands are called Polders. On the older dikes are roads and canals also joining the rivers and generally large enough to be navigable. The facility of communication was an advantage which the Netherlands formerly enjoyed in an eminent degree above the rest of Europe.

There are no mountains nor rocks in the Dutch Netherlands, which are popularly described as a country without mountains, trees (growing wild) or running waters (springs). The soil heights are the sand-hills, about 100 ft. high, along the coast of Holland, and a chain of low hills of similar origin perhaps, which extend from the middle of the province of Utrecht into Gelderland. In the absence of mountains and hills, there are of course no valleys whatever portion of the surface is not marsh, river or canal, must fall under the decomposition of waste lands, dikes, or polder. The work of reclaiming the waste is constantly going forward, in the provinces of N and S Holland alone about 90 lakes have been drained. The drainage of the Sea of Helder began in 1839 was completed in 1852 and the same year extensive operations were commenced in province Zealand, Island S. Zealand under the auspices of Sir John Rennie, having for their object the reclamation of 35,000 acres, which are covered several feet deep at high water yet still the waste lands are to and exceed a fifth of the whole area. The polders probably form one-half of the whole territory, and the extent to which this is subdivided by dikes may be conceived from the fact, that the local bodies charged with the management of the polders and the repairing of the dikes, exceed 300 in number.

Extent, &c.—The country thus described has an extent, from N to S. of 150 m. with a breadth, from W to E., of 120 m. throughout, area, 8360 sq. m. Its chief features are—the wide estuaries W and E. of the Scheldt, and of the Meuse, which latter bear off also the waters of the Rhine N of the Meuse, the Zuider Zee, which was formed by an intrusion of the sea in the beginning of the 13th century and now covers an area of 1200 sq. m. Between the mouths of the Meuse and the entrance of the Zuider Zee, a distance of 75 m., the coast is chiefly formed of sand-hills or dunes, frequently 180 ft. high dry and sterile to the last degree, and separating, with their broad land of irreclaimable loss, the fertile lands on the one side from the waves of the ocean on the other. In a line with these dunes, beyond the mouth of the Zuider Zee, runs a chain of islands, namely Texel, Vlieland, Schelling, Ameland, &c. which seem to indicate the original line of the coast before the ocean broke in upon the low lands. The coast of Friesland, opposite to these islands, depends for its security altogether on artificial embankments. The Lauwer Zee a deep bay on the coasts of Friesland and Groningen also owes its origin to an intrusion of the ocean and again the Dollart a gulf near the mouth of the Ems N of Groningen, was formed about half a century later than the Zuider Zee, and by a similar convulsion, which is said to have swept away 70 villages and 100,000 people. From the left bank of the Ems, the Bourtag morass an irreclaimable peat marsh, extends about 40 m. S W towards the Zuider Zee; the Peat, a marsh of like nature but less extent, lies near the left bank of the Meuse, on the E side of N Brabant.

Political Limits and Divisions.—The kingdom of the Netherlands is, at the present day reduced to nearly the original limits of the Seven United Provinces in the 16th century. The provinces now composing the Netherlands, properly so called, are the first ten given in the accompanying Table—

THE PROVINCES OF THE NETHERLANDS, Their AREA AND POPULATION in 1851 and 1852

| PROVINCE. | Area in sq. m. | Population. 1851. | Population. 1852. |
|--------------------------------|-------------------|----------------------|----------------------|
| N. H. Brabant | 1490 | 351,174 | 414,095 |
| Gelderland | 1478 | 375,231 | 411,947 |
| South Holland | 885 | 564,282 | 640,253 |
| North Holland | 727 | 488,454 | 554,121 |
| Zeeland | 823 | 200,340 | 232,546 |
| Utrecht | 490 | 189,498 | 16,681 |
| Friesland | 1025 | 311,075 | 379,184 |
| Overijssel | 1241 | 217,036 | 241,352 |
| Groningen | 652 | 120,560 | 114,486 |
| Drenthe | 774 | 80,719 | 100,000 |
| Linzburg | 645 | 391,020 | 326,775 |
| Total | 9499 | 3,076,146 | 3,610,346 |
| Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, 1849 | 796 | 126,486 | 305,181 |
| Total | 10,295 | 3,202,632 | 3,915,527 |

But the king of the Netherlands holds also a portion of Luxemburg with the title of Duke, and of Luxemburg with the title of Grand Duke, these domains, however, though annexed to the crown, are not incorporated in the kingdom of the Netherlands, but are held under a separate administration, and are regarded as such by virtue of which the king is constituted a member of the German confederation.

In addition to her European territories, the Netherlands possesses a wide extent of colonies and dependencies in Asia, Africa, and America, with which she carries on an extensive commerce and which contribute materially to her greatness. They are enumerated, with their area and population, in the following Table:—

COLONIES AND DEPENDENCIES OF THE NETHERLANDS, THEIR AREA AND POPULATION

| | Area in Sq. m. | Pop. at 1st Jan. |
|---|-------------------|---------------------|
| ASIA — | | |
| Java and the adjacent islands, 23 provinces | 89,118 | 13,640,080 |
| Sumatra, Div. of W. coast | 81,309 | 1,979,788 |
| " " " " " " " | 91,389 | 1,989,000 |
| " " " " " " " | 7,000 | 535,000 |
| " " " " " " " | 40,734 | 28,885 |
| " " " " " " " | 10,835 | 60,000 |
| " " " " " " " | 6,844 | 100,000 |
| " " " " " " " | 6,075 | 14,841 |
| " " " " " " " | 2,777 | 64,867 |
| " " " " " " " | 8,904 | 1,641,073 |
| " " " " " " " | 40,098 | 670,679 |
| " " " " " " " | 34,383 | 594,413 |
| " " " " " " " | 7,083 | 170,584 |
| " " " " " " " | 20,184 | 1,825,000 |
| " " " " " " " | 13,078 | 93,783 |
| " " " " " " " | 6,550 | 111,697 |
| " " " " " " " | 14,661 | 307,184 |
| " " " " " " " | 8,564 | 303,735 |
| " " " " " " " | 6,150 | 200,000 |
| AMERICA — | 44,498 | 1,055,925 |
| Guiana (of Surinam) | 45,000 | 37,632 |
| Islands of Surinam, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100 | 278 | 11,000 |
| AFRICA — | 64,378 | 84,068 |
| Coast of Guinea | 8,000 | 120,000 |

SUMMARY—TOTAL AREA AND POPULATION OF THE KINGDOM OF THE NETHERLANDS, INCLUDING THE GRAND DUCHY OF LUXEMBURG AND THE COLONIES AND DEPENDENCIES:—

| | Area in Sq. m. | Pop. at 1st Jan. |
|---------|-------------------|---------------------|
| Europe | 40,734 | 1,979,788 |
| Asia | 413,309 | 13,640,080 |
| Africa | 8,000 | 120,000 |
| America | 44,498 | 1,055,925 |
| | 44,498 | 1,055,925 |

Rivers and Canals—The chief rivers of the Netherlands are the Rhine, Meuse, Scheldt, IJssel, Vecht, and Hunze. The Rhine is above half a mile wide where it enters the Netherlands. It soon divides, the S and principal arm taking the name of West, and uniting with the Meuse, while the N arm, communicating with the IJssel, takes the name of Lek, a branch from it, named the Kromme (crooked) Rhine, winds by Utrecht to the Zuider Zee, while another very diminished stream, called the Old Rhine, flows from Utrecht by Leyden to the sea at Katwijk. The Old Rhine was formerly choked with sand a little below Leyden its present channel to the sea is recent and artificial. The Meuse, Meuse, or Menne, entering the Dutch Netherlands from Belgium, receives the Ruy of the Scheldt, only the mouth, the S and the W, or Old Scheldt, lie within the Dutch boundary. The IJssel and Vecht, flowing from Germany, both enter the Zuider Zee at no great distances asunder, the former being navigable up to Drenthe, the latter to Zwolle. The Hunze, rising in the Bourgas marsh, flows through Groningen to the Lauwer Zee. The canals of the Netherlands are collectively more important than the rivers, on which indeed they depend, but they are so numerous as to defy detailed description—every little village has its canal. It will be sufficient, therefore, to mention only the chief, namely, the N Holland canal, a wonderful work, constructed between 1819 and 1823, and which allows the largest ships to pass between Amsterdam and the Helder a distance of 40 m., so as to avoid the intricate navigation of the Zuider Zee. The Winckles canal also for ships, 18 m. long connects the Dollart with Groningen the Damster-Diep, of equal magnitude, runs from Groningen to the sea at Delfzijl. Hartingen, on the Zuider Zee, is also connected with Groningen by a great canal which passes by Franeker and Leeuwarden. The Nieuwe Rijn unites Utrecht with Amsterdam, while the latter city communicates with Rotterdam by a canal which touches at Haarlem, Leyden, and Delft, passing also near the Hague. The Dutch canals are all navigable, and the slowness of the Tricolours or boats is compensated in some measure by their punctuality. In winter their frozen surfaces offers convenient roads to skaters, and are then travelled over with great speed.

Climate—The climate of the Netherlands is, from the maritime exposure and originally marshy character of the country, extremely humid, changeable, and disagreeable. The winds with varying temperature, frequently blow from S.W. or V.W. and heavy sea fogs are driven in, which injure vegetation. The mean temperature is not lower than in like latitudes in the British Islands, and the quantity of rain (28 inches) is somewhat less, but the winter is much more severe, and the sky is almost always overcast and troubled. The bright days hardly exceed 40 in the year. Low fogs visit the marshy districts in autumn but the dry cold of winter restores the peasant's health and although the climate of the Netherlands is to strangers cheerless and disagreeing, yet its noxious qualities are unable to cope with the countervailing influence of good food and clothing and habitual cleanliness, the Dutch pay particular attention to these domestic safeguards, and, notwithstanding the ungainly climate in which they live, longevity is not rarer among them than elsewhere.

Zoology—The natural kingdoms are, as might be expected very confined in a country which in its present condition may be considered as the work not of nature so much as of art. The various alluvial strata of peat and fresh water deposits offer no unusual of any value, except a little brown or brick clay, which is in great demand, and some impure potter's clay occur in the 1 and S provinces. Wild animals are few and unimportant—rabbits in the extensive sand-dunes, and hares on the wastes extending from Utrecht to the Bourgas marsh. Feathered game—partridges snipes, &c.—is not abundant. Migratory water-fowl visit the Dutch rivers and lakes, at certain seasons, in great numbers but the duck protected by the popular feeling in its favour, is the only undomesticated bird so frequent as to be a charge to the country. A swan fair is held annually at Alkmaar, and attracts buyers from all parts of Europe. Fish of various kinds is taken in the rivers, lakes, and on the coasts of the Netherlands, in sufficient but still declining quantity and the home fisheries are now of little commercial value.

Vegetation and Husbandry—The flora of the Netherlands is equally limited. Nature has given nothing in the way of woods, or rank thicket, or flowery fields. But art on the other hand has done wonders, and as if to show how care and industry triumph over natural disadvantages, this naturally sterile country exports garden seeds and choice flowers in large quantities to soils and climates more capable of producing them. Gardening and agriculture have attained in the Dutch Netherlands a high degree of perfection. Yet the latter holds a subordinate place in rural industry. Wheat of excellent quality is grown only in favoured portions of the S provinces. Rye oats, and buckwheat, with horse-beans, beet, madder and flax, are more common crops; and tobacco, as cultivated in provinces Gelderland, S Holland, and Utrecht. Cultivated vegetables are cultivated on a much larger scale, not merely for the sake of supplying the internal demand, but also for the exportation of the seeds, which form an important article of Dutch commerce. Dutch seeds, particularly flax, cauliflower, and cabbage-seeds, are everywhere preferred, their superiority being attributable probably rather to the habitual attention and neatness of the Dutch husband man, than to any advantage to be derived from the climate, the shelter, or acquired richness of the soils. The flowers, also, of Holland and adjoining provinces, enter into the foreign trade. But it is in stock and dairy produce, in particular that the rural industry of the Netherlands shows its strength. The Dutch have hitherto displayed their good sense, that in a humid climate, with only moderate summer heat, they are content to buy wheat, that they may be at liberty to employ their land in a manner adapted to its capabilities. Their horses are remarkable for size and strength, and much sought after; but in the number and excellence of their horned cattle the Dutch are quite unrivalled. The following Table exhibits the quantity of stock possessed in Holland in 1851:—

NUMBERS OF HORSES, HORNS CATTLE, SHEEP, AND PIGS IN EACH PROVINCE IN 1851

| Provinces. | Horses. | Horns Cattle. | Sheep. | Pigs. |
|------------------|----------|---------------|---------|--------|
| North Brabant .. | 27,963 | 146,080 | 15,370 | 33,291 |
| Gelderland .. | 23,408 | 123,729 | 63,888 | 30,830 |
| South Holland .. | 65,881 | 176,104 | 44,124 | 29,472 |
| North Holland .. | 7,256 | 1,280 | 140,350 | 32,585 |
| Zeeland .. | 21,283 | 45,377 | 30,813 | 15,445 |
| Utrecht .. | 10,678 | 73,151 | 39,941 | 16,578 |
| Friesland .. | 1,749 | 87,602 | 12,746 | 1,749 |
| Overijssel .. | 10,311 | 110,578 | 62,889 | 26,351 |
| Groningen .. | 14,797 | 109,689 | 66,638 | 31,140 |
| Twente .. | 14,797 | 109,689 | 66,638 | 31,140 |
| Lamburg .. | 14,797 | 109,689 | 66,638 | 31,140 |
| Total .. | 1,246,89 | 811,615 | 60,667 | |

The poultry yard and every object of husbandry which demands care is to the Dutch farmer a source of wealth. Bee-culture is likewise actively carried on the quantity of honey produced in the province of N. Brabant alone in 1851, was 476,854 lbs. The quantity of cheese and butter brought to market is amazing. The butter sold annually in the markets of Leyden and Delft which have the greatest reputation for that article, amounted in 1849 to above 19,000 cwt. The enormous quantity of cheese annually brought to market, and its increasing quantity will best be learned from the following Table

QUANTITY OF CHEESE BROUGHT TO THE SEVEN PRINCIPAL MARKETS OF HOLLAND EACH YEAR, FROM 1814 TO 1851

| Years. | Albans. | lbs. | Parma. | Edam. | Other | Markets. |
|--------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|
| 1814 | 9,211,461 | 497,353 | 2,107,164 | 1,213,057 | 891,310 | 5,920,885 |
| 1815 | 9,178,005 | 1,202,162 | 2,213,553 | 1,248,092 | 1,019,418 | 6,062,168 |
| 1816 | 9,615,092 | 1,018,494 | 2,401,099 | 1,458,481 | 1,212,218 | 6,705,390 |
| 1817 | 9,835,005 | 1,154,061 | 2,583,935 | 1,593,119 | 1,277,660 | 7,389,729 |
| 1818 | 9,971,501 | 1,236,890 | 2,715,150 | 1,650,948 | 1,311,652 | 7,962,101 |
| 1819 | 9,993,006 | 1,241,123 | 2,828,956 | 1,750,007 | 1,371,181 | 8,285,273 |
| 1820 | 9,948,393 | 1,240,711 | 2,815,309 | 1,755,190 | 1,373,818 | 8,333,611 |
| 1821 | 9,916,007 | 1,240,028 | 2,799,172 | 1,747,130 | 1,368,988 | 8,371,326 |
| 1822 | 9,980,004 | 1,237,081 | 2,791,154 | 1,735,710 | 1,353,894 | 8,358,653 |
| 1823 | 9,970,754 | 1,237,081 | 2,791,154 | 1,735,710 | 1,353,894 | 8,358,653 |

Industry Commerce, &c.—Placed round the estuaries of great rivers, and on the shores of a sea abounding in fish, the Dutch soon became a sea-faring people, and as productive industry developed in the more favourably situated Friesland province, the population of the coast gradually engaged in the occupations of commerce. This reacted as a powerful stimulus, directing the efforts, and calling forth all the energies of the people. In the extraordinary development of industry which characterizes the Netherlands, there is nothing more remarkable than the harmonious blending of the several interests. Tillage there cheerfully took the subordinate place which nature assigned it, and agriculture felt neither fear nor jealousy in the presence of trade and manufactures. Indeed, the bold outlay of capital necessary to make the land, as we may say, was clearly due to the spirit and genius of commerce for Great Britain, in the 19th century with its network of costly railroads, is not a more wonderful spectacle than were the Seven United Provinces in the 17th, with their dikes, canals, and quays well lined with shipping. In such a country, manufactures flourished of course, though they never attained to be a predominant interest. The linen and the paper of the Dutch Netherlands have long held the first rank—the principal linen-green is at Haarlem, the paper-mills at Zeeland. The manufacture of woollen cloth extends in Leyden, Gouda, and Utrecht, which last-named place is famous also for its silk valves. The distilleries of Schiedam are well known. Goods supplies tobacco-pipes, the best of their kind, and the same pipe may be bestowed on the leather, the refined sugar of the Dutch, and many other articles intended for continental use; for, in trans-mercantile commerce, the Dutch, in general, do not affect to compete with the British. Yet the commerce with the Dutch possessions in the E. Indies, particularly Java, is of great and continually increasing importance. The manufactured goods exported annually to the E. amount to the value of £16,000,000 while the imports from the same quarter are probably worth £3,000,000. The following Table exhibits the present state of the trade of the Netherlands

PRINCIPAL EXPORTS AND IMPORTS IN 1851

| | Imports. | Exports. |
|----------------------------------|-------------|--------------|
| Baltic .. | £ 274,630 | £ 162,200 |
| Drugs .. | £ 270,081 | £ 247,544 |
| Cotton Yarn and Thread .. | £ 20,111 4 | £ 19,241,450 |
| Wool .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Rye .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Barley .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Buckwheat .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Leg Iron .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Iron Manufactures .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Wool .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Cotton, unspun .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Silk Cotton, &c. Manufactures .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Wool and Cloth .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Oil (Vegetable) .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Wine .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Carle .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Sheep .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Raw Sugar .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Refined Sugar .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |
| Wine in Cask .. | £ 1,007,700 | £ 174,469 |

TOTAL EXPORTS AND IMPORTS 1850-51, with the AVERAGE of 1846-50

| | 1850-51 | 1846-50 |
|-----------------------|-------------|-------------|
| Total .. | £ 2,770,772 | £ 2,156,829 |
| Total .. | £ 2,770,772 | £ 2,156,829 |
| Average, 1846-1850 .. | £ 2,770,772 | £ 2,156,829 |

Of the imports, a fourth part are from Great Britain, about a fourth part from Germany and rather under a fourth from Africa and Asia after those localities Belgium and Russia figure for large amounts. Of the exports above a fourth part are to Great Britain, above two-fifths to Germany after which Belgium, the Medway, Russia, and Africa and Asia, are the regions to which the Netherlands send the largest quantity of goods.

The internal trade and communication give employment to 6000 telegraphists or packet boats and 1600 barges. And facilities for the transit of goods, &c., are afforded also by a railway proceeding from Rotterdam through the Hague and Haarlem to Amsterdam, and continued thence through Utrecht to Arnhem, and ultimately intended to join the Prussian line on the Rhine.

The marvellous navy of the Netherlands numbers about 2000 ships, averaging 160 tons. The movement of vessels in her ports, in the years 1842-51, is shown in the following Table:—

NUMBER OF VESSELS, and their TONNAGE, that ENTERED and CLEARED at the PORTS of the NETHERLANDS in the years 1842-51

| Years. | Netherlands. | | | | Dutch. | | | |
|--------|--------------|---------|----------|-------|----------|---------|----------|---------|
| | Laden. | | Ballast. | | Laden. | | Ballast. | |
| | Vessels. | Tonn. | Vessels. | Tonn. | Vessels. | Tonn. | Vessels. | Tonn. |
| 1842 | 1,999 | 990,024 | 999 | 5,157 | 5,157 | 450,795 | 5,157 | 461,081 |
| 1843 | 1,999 | 990,024 | 999 | 5,157 | 5,157 | 450,795 | 5,157 | 461,081 |
| 1844 | 1,999 | 990,024 | 999 | 5,157 | 5,157 | 450,795 | 5,157 | 461,081 |
| 1845 | 1,999 | 990,024 | 999 | 5,157 | 5,157 | 450,795 | 5,157 | 461,081 |
| 1846 | 1,999 | 990,024 | 999 | 5,157 | 5,157 | 450,795 | 5,157 | 461,081 |
| 1847 | 1,999 | 990,024 | 999 | 5,157 | 5,157 | 450,795 | 5,157 | 461,081 |
| 1848 | 1,999 | 990,024 | 999 | 5,157 | 5,157 | 450,795 | 5,157 | 461,081 |
| 1849 | 1,999 | 990,024 | 999 | 5,157 | 5,157 | 450,795 | 5,157 | 461,081 |
| 1850 | 1,999 | 990,024 | 999 | 5,157 | 5,157 | 450,795 | 5,157 | 461,081 |
| 1851 | 1,999 | 990,024 | 999 | 5,157 | 5,157 | 450,795 | 5,157 | 461,081 |

Government, Economy, &c.—The kingdom of the Netherlands, as now constituted, is a constitutional monarchy. The executive power lies wholly with the king who shares also the power of legislation with the States-General. These consist of two chambers—the upper with 22, and the lower with 55 members—who assemble, for deliberation and despatch of business, at the Hague (Scheveningen), the capital of the kingdom, or, more correctly, the royal residence. The members of the upper chamber are named by the king for life, the others are elected by the Provincial States whose principal functions are of a local nature. The government is strong, though its roots on a popular basis; and the administration, in every department, is simple and economical. Dutch India is ruled by a Governor-General residing at Batavia, under whom are the governors and residents at the various island settlements. The debt of the State amounts to £102,459,881. The annual expenditures are about 29,000,000 florins to meet which, the prosperous revenue of Java now contributes £1,300,000. The army maintained consists (1861) of 20,488 men with a reserve of 30,000, and 21,000 in the R., while the navy reckons 80 vessels, carrying 714 guns, besides an Indian fleet of 20 vessels, manned chiefly by natives.

Manners.—The Dutch provinces, taken collectively, form the most civilised portion of Europe, for what they want in social brilliancy and attraction, is amply made up by the general diffusion, among all classes, of good habits and sufficient instruction, and, among the wealthier classes, there is no want of solid and extensive learning. There are (1851), 32,950 schools for popular instruction attended by 881,015 pupils, being equal to above a half of the total population, between the ages of 5 and 10 years (see Table, page 437)—and three universities—at Leyden, Utrecht, and Groningen, attended by 1119 students—besides numerous academies of an intermediate character. The majority of the population are Protestants of various sects—Lutherans and Calvinists—the latter predominating, the Mennonites (Anabaptists) also form a numerous body above a third part are R. Catholics, and there are a large number of Jews. All religious sects and persuasions are, politically on a perfectly equal footing. It is worthy of remark, that the R. Catholic archbishop of Utrecht, and the bishop of Haarlem and Deventer are both Janzenists and administer their sacred offices without the sanction of the Pope. In their charitable institutions, also, the Dutch are exemplary, and in the management of their poor they have shown equal wisdom and liberality. The relative proportions of the Protestants R. Catholics, and Jews in the Netherlands exclusive of Luxembourg, are exhibited in the accompanying Table—

POPULATION OF THE NETHERLANDS according to RELIGION

| | 1860. | | Proportion to 1000. | |
|-----------------|-----------|-----------|---------------------|-------|
| | 1860. | 1850. | 1860. | 1850. |
| Protestants | 1,704,976 | 1,592,632 | 59* | 600 |
| Roman Catholics | 1,100,810 | 1,154,143 | 38* | 381 |
| Jews | 82,846 | 88,618 | 10 | 19 |
| Unsettled | 5,314 | 1,569 | | |
| Total .. | 2,990,480 | 3,066,957 | | |

Language, Literature, &c.—The language of the Netherlands or Dutch, as we call it, is derived from the Platt Deutsch of N Germany which never received any literary cultivation, for Luther and the Reformation turned the scales against it and German or Hoch Deutsch [High Dutch] gained the ascendancy in Germany just when the popular language began to be employed as the ordinary vehicle and instrument of thought and learning. Thus, the Platt Deutsch disappearing from the field of view, a very wide chasm remains between the kindred languages of Germany and Holland—the High and Low Dutch. From the latter has branched off the Flemish, differing little, yet cultivated now as if it were quite distinct from the popular tongue. The Frisian, also, here a peculiar dialect, resembling, in some respects, the Anglo-Saxon. The Dutch is softer in sound than the High German, and possesses fully the immense resources of that language, in its natural copiousness, flexibility, and the facility of forming new terms from native roots. There is no European language which borrows so little from Greek or Latin as the Dutch. The literature of the Netherlands reaches a long way back; many chronicles exist in it of the 13th and 14th centuries; and as to the value of that literature, it will be sufficiently warranted by pointing to the names of the great writers which the country has produced, as Erasmus, Grotius, Swammerdam, Boonhave, Heygen, &c. Kooft and Van den Vondel, in the 17th century, cultivated the drama with great success. Gals, an amusing and instructive poet of the greatest genius, acquired and maintained a popularity like that of La Fontaine. The last century produced many Dutch authors of great eminence—Fetich, Bidders, Breda, Spandau, Van Kampen, Van Hall, and Van Loonap; and the present age is no less prolific. Dutch literature, as it gives expression to the sentiments of an orderly, practical, and well educated people, has generally a sober and solid character, but it is not deficient in the grace, novelty and vivid colouring which render even the gravest themes attractive.

History.—The Batavi were already known to the Romans, in the time of Julius Cæsar, as a various nation their neighbours, the Belgæ, seem to have been distinguished, even in that early age, for that inclination to commerce which afterwards exerted such an influence on the history of the Netherlands. It was in the year 9 a.d., that Drusus joined the Rhine and IJssel by a canal (now called the New IJssel) and set the example of those great works which have changed the face of the whole country. Under Adrian and Septimius Severus, the Batavians shared the imperial favour, and probably advanced in civilization by contact with the Romans. About the beginning of the fourth century they united with the Frisians, a people of kindred origin. The sixth century witnessed their subjugation by the Franks, and, in the middle of the ninth, they were incorporated in the empire founded by Charlemagne. Soon after this, the whole country was parcelled out into small principalities in accordance with the feudal spirit of the age. These principalities were as follows—The dukes of Guelders, Brabant, Luxembourg, and Limburg; the marquises of Anvers (Antwerp) the counts of Holland, Zeeland, Zutphen, Flanders, Artois, Hainault, and Namur with the lordships of Utrecht, Overijssel, Groningen, Friesland, and Malines. Such was the origin of the Seven United Provinces afterwards grouped together as the Netherlands, i.e. the Seven or Low Countries. Among these petty States Flanders held the foremost rank; and when, in the 14th century the estates of the count of Flanders passed, by matrimonial alliance, to the house of Burgundy, the paramount authority in the Netherlands passed with them. In like manner, these estates passed from the house of Burgundy to that of Austria, and Charles V. inherited the sovereignty of the Seventeen Provinces. But his son and successor Philip II., having deeply offended the people by an attempt to establish the Inquisition among them and by various oppressive acts, even of the States namely, Holland, Zealand, Utrecht, Gelderland, Overijssel, Groningen, and Friesland united in defence of their liberties, and formed a federal republic at the head of which they placed with the title of Staathouder [stadtholder] William of Nassau prince of Orange. Their cause proved successful. The merchants of Antwerp at that time the greatest commercial city of Europe, fled before the hostilities of Philip, and took refuge in Amsterdam, which soon became an emporium of the first importance. In the 17th century, the Dutch were the most prosperous of European nations. Their first great reverse was the consequence of the French revolution their country was then invaded by the republican army, and was subsequently incorporated with the French empire, their commerce, in the meantime was annihilated, and their colonies seized by the British. On the downfall of Napoleon in 1814 the prince of Orange, who had fled in 1805 returned and resumed his authority and, in 1816, was, by the act of the Allied Powers, elevated to the rank of king of the Netherlands, with increased territories, extending over the present kingdom of Belgium. At the same time, restitution was made of the colonies, with exception of the Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Demanara, Resenquib, and Bourbon. In 1830, immediately after the revolution which expelled the elder branch of the Bonapartes from France, a revolt took place in Belgium, the inhabitants of which never willingly submitted to the sway of their Dutch neighbours, and, after a short struggle, the latter were compelled to evacuate the country. Belgium was then erected into a kingdom, and the present limits of the kingdom of the Netherlands were defined by treaty in 1839.—[De Graf, Hist. Stat. Beschrijving van Holland en Amst. 1849, Moniteur, Nations de la Hollande. Rot. 1809, Globe's Voyage Pittoresque dans le Pays des Pays 1827, Van der Aa, Landryland

Woonduch der Nederlanden, Reizen en de Bode Almanak, 1833, Statistiek Jaarboek voor het koninkrijk der Nederlanden, 1833. See SICR

NETOLITZ a tn Bohemia, circle Pisehitz, 70 m S. by W Prague; with a church, townhouse, school and hospital, two saw and several other mills. Pop. 3213.

NETRO a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, the Turin prov. Biella, between the Inguana and the Arza. It has two churches, manufactures of ironware, ribbons and lace; and a trade in cattle, millet, and chestnuts. Pop. 2123.

NETSCHETIN or NESHCHIN a market in Bohemia, circle and 19 m. W Pilsen with a church, chapel, townhouse, two mills, and a trade in corn. Pop. 971.

NETTEBELL, par Eng Essex 1821 ac. Pop. 866.

NETTELOW a tn Prussia, prov. Silesia, gov. Legnica, on the Oder with a Protestant church, tile-works an oil and several other mills. Pop. 1125.

NETTLERD par Eng Oxford 1164 ac. Pop. 754.

NETTELCOMBE, par Eng Somerset 2800 ac. P. 353.

NETTELEHAM, par Eng Lincoln 3270 ac. P. 944.

NETTELESTAD two pars Eng.—1 Kent 1441 ac. Pop. 461.—2 Suffolk 1028 ac. Pop. 81.

NETTLETON two pars Eng.—1 Lincoln 5570 ac. Pop. 724.—2, Wilt 1699 ac. Pop. 686.

NETTLINGEN a vil, Hanover principality and 9 m E. Hildesheim with a church and a manor-house. P. 1056.

NETTITAI, a tn and par Switzerland, can. and 1 m N Olten, 1 bank Linth. It is well built, has two churches, three paper-mills, a straw hat factory and several other industrial establishments. Pop. 2026.

NETTUNO a tn and seaport, Papal States, 31 m S.E. E. Rome, on the Tyrrhenean Sea, supposed to derive its name from a celebrated temple of Neptune, the remains of which still exist. Nettuno is the birthplace of the painter Andrea Sacchi, born 1601, and Paolo Veronesi, called the flower of Italian eloquence, born in 1624. The situation is very unhealthy and there is scarcely any trade. P. 1000.

NETZE a river Prussia which is formed by several lakes in the S. of prov. Posen, not far from Inowroclaw flows W.S.W. joins r. bank Warta 6 m E. Landsberg, total course about 140 m. By means of a canal, which leaves it at Nakel and joins the Brda at Bromberg, it gives a navigable communication between the Vistula and the Oder.

NETZSCHER a tn Saxony, circle Zwettan 9 m N.N.E. Plauen, on the Goltzsch with a castle a church, tile-works, a paper and a flour mill. Pop. 1068.

NEU BANCOW or BANCOWITZ a vil Hungary on Temesvar about 1 m. from Kis-Bencowitz with a considerable trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1998.

NEU BARRAZ, a tn Bohemia. See BARRAZ.

NEU BUCKOW a tn Mecklenburg-Schwerin, circle Mecklenburg, with a Gothic church, townhouse, manufactures of lace, and several townships. Pop. 1643.

NEU CHACHOWITZ, a market in Bohemia, circle Tabor, about 8 m. from Pilgram with a church, a school, a saw and two other mills. Pop. 1021.

NEU DOMAGNICH, a tn Bohemia, circle Kaurim with a church a school, a townhouse, and a distillery. P. 1093.

NEU HOLITZ, a tn Bohemia. See HOLITZ.

NEU KALDER, a village to Mecklenburg-Schwerin, cap. hall, on a height above Lake Camrow 55 m. E.N.E. Schwerin. It has a church, an hospital, and several mills. Pop. 1150. Hall area, 37 geo. sq. m. Pop. 3416.

NEU KOLIN a tn Bohemia. See KOLIN.

NEU KUNZ, or NEU KUNZ, a tn, Asiatic Turkey 120 m N.E. Konia, lat. 38° 37' N., lon. 34° 37' E. It stands at the height of 9940 ft above sea-level with a bold ravine in front, and a background of high cliffs of volcanic rock, and is a clean, well built town of considerable extent containing about 3000 houses, two large mosques, a Greek church, and a quadrangular castle, with round towers at the corners. Its trade is much more extensive than that of most towns in the interior of Asia Minor. Pop. about 15,000.

NEU-SCHWARTZ, the top of the grand duchy of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, between lat. 53° and 54° N., lon. 12° 30' E. It is surrounded by walls; is regularly built in the form of an octagon, with several good streets and squares; is the seat of government, contains several superior courts and offices; and has a large and handsome canal, partly in the Dutch, and partly in the Italian styles, with a library of 50,000 vols, and some good collections, another palace, belonging to Prince Ernest; two churches, a college, gymnasium, and several superior schools, two hospitals, a posthouse, a theatre, and a bathing establishment. Most of the inhabitants are connected with the court or the military service, but there are manufactures of soap and tobacco, two breweries, and three mills. Neu-Schwartz occupies the site of the ancient fort of Lunin or Lunke which was demolished in the beginning of the 16th century. Pop. 6464.

NEUBERG a vil and par Styria, circle and N.N.E. Bruck. It is the seat of a munning district and has two churches, an old Cistercian abbey an hospital, important iron-works raw and other mills. Pop. 1459.

NEUBOLZ, (Lesin, Neus Burg), a tn, France, dep. Eure, 13 m W.V. Evreux. It early acquired considerable importance and was long in the hands of the English. In its castle, the remains of which still exist, the marriage of Henry II of England with Margaret, daughter of Louis VII., was celebrated. The parish church is an interesting Gothic structure and in an extensive forest adjoining the town is a large chateau, called Champ-de-Bellain. The manufactures consist of linen cloth, malleable, fustian, &c. Pop. 1868.

NEUBUNN a vil, Bavaria, Lower Franconia, dist. Homburg with a church, a castle in ruins, and a mill. Pop. 119.

NEUBURG a tn, Bavaria, circle Swabia, cap. dist., r. bank Danube, here crossed by two bridges, one of wood, and another very handsome of stone 45 m N.W. Munich. It is a place of great antiquity, and very picturesque situated, and consists of the town proper divided into the old and new town, and partly surrounded with old walls, and of two suburbs, is the seat of several provincial courts and offices, contains an old fortified castle of the dukes of Bavaria, on a commanding height with a collection of old arms, three churches, a convent of the order of Mercy, an old Jesuit college, townhouse, gymnasium Latin school, seminary infirmary hospital barracks and arsenal and has manufactures of porcelain, cloth, and salt-petre numerous breweries and distilleries. An active salubry is carried on. On an island, formed by the river are the ruins of the castle of Altenburg. Pop. 6350. Area of dist., 96 geo. sq. m. Pop. 17,014.

NEUBURG or NEUBURG 1. OR DEN W. 2. a tn, Bavaria, Upper Palatinate, on the Schwarzach 37 m N.E. Regensburg. It has a court of justice, seven churches, two castles, a conventual institute for females manufactures of woollen and linen cloth numerous breweries, several mills, and a trade in fax. Pop. 2636.

NEUCHÂTEL. See NEUCHÂTEL.

NEUDAMM a tn, Prussia, gov. and 29 m. N. Frank fort on the Neisel. It is enclosed by walls and a fosse has a church and poorhouse manufactures of woollen and linen cloth hats and hosiery a paper and two corn mills, and a trade in wool. Pop. 3172.

NEUDEK (anc. Neudamm) a munning to Bohemia, circle and V. Elbogen with two castles, a blast-furnace, and several other iron-works manufactures of lace, ribbons, and paper and four flour-mills. Pop. 2000.

NEUDENAU a tn Baden, circle Untermain, r. bank Jaxt, here crossed by a bridge, 89 m E.S.E. Mannheim with a church and chapel, an iron-mill, linen manufactures, and several fairs. Pop. 1250.

NEUDORF, a tn Hungary See GÖRO.

NEUDORF, numerous places, Austria, particularly—1 A tn, Lower Austria, 6 m. S. Vienna, on the railway to Grätz. It contains one of the finest country churches in Austria, adorned externally with an Ionian colonnade, and within with several fine paintings a posthouse, and a castle. Pop. 2020.—2 A vil Moravia, circle Bräunlich, with a church. Pop. 1560.—3, A vil Moravia. See KÖNIGSBERG.—4, A vil Bohemia, 42 m. S. by E. Olmitz, with a church, a school, and numerous mills. Pop. 917.

NEUDORF, numerous places, Germany, particularly—1 A vil, Anhalt-Bernburg, near Harzgerode. In the vicinity are the Pfaffenberg and Waisberg, the most important silver-mines of the Lower Harz. Pop. 819.—2, A vil, Moravia, circle Brün, with a church, a castle with a park, and two mills.—3, (or Waldenau) A vil, Moravia, circle Britain; with a church. Pop. 1610.—4, (Stratford), A. vil. Prussia, prov. Silesia, gov. Breslau, circle Warthenberg, with a church, a mill, and two mills. Pop. 867.—5, A. vil. Saxony, circle Gera, ball. Weismühl. P. 1616.

NEUDORF, a vil. Bohemia, circle Hohenbo, in a valley on the Popelka, about 9 m. from Gitschlin, with a church, a school, five mills, and manufactures of linen and linen yarn. Pop. 1194

NEUDORF several places, Hungary.—1, A. vil. Hungary on Freuburg, between Bar-Bent-Gyurgy and Hunne, 6 m. from Baum-János; with a church. Pop. 1290.—2, A. vil. Banat of Temeswar, between Alibunar and Panova, at the extremity of a large sandy tract. It has three Greek non-united churches. Pop. 1200.—3, Co. Elg. See Iaso NEUBURG a. ta. Württemberg, circle Schwarzwald, on the Ezer, 37 m. W. Stuttgart. It is well built, has two castles, one in ruins, and a Latin school, manufactures of sayings, spoons and leather, and several saw-mills. Iron-mines are worked in the neighbourhood. Pop. 1554.

NEUBURG several places Germany, particularly.—1, A. ta. Prussia prov. W. Prussia, gov. and 11 m. S.W. Marienwerder on the Vistula with a castle, three churches, a Barnardian distillery, manufactures of linen a brewery and distillery, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 3.—2, A. vil. Oldenburg, with a castle. Pop. 481.—3, A. ta. Baden, circle Oberhaid, r. bank Rhine, 18 m. S.W. Freiburg. It is a very old place, surrounded by walls, and has some shipping, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1120.

NEUBURG, Switzerland. See NEUFCHÂTEL.

NEUDORF a. ta. Rheinish Prussia, gov. and 3 m. N. Coblenz on the Rhine, over which there is here a regular ferry. It has a church. Pop. 1222

NEUNZECK, a. ta. and par. Switzerland gov. and 7 m. S.W. Bern; in a valley traversed by the Glâne, and not far from the bridge which crosses it. It contains an old church, in which a league was sworn in 1271 between the cantons of Bern and Fribourg. In 1798 the Bernese here repulsed an advanced guard of French

NEUNHAUS numerous small places, Germany particularly.—1, A. ta. Hanover, gov. and 47 m. W. W. Osnabrück, on the Dinkel which is here navigable. It is an ancient place, and has a Protestant and a R. Catholic church, and a graving dock. Pop. 1462.—2, A. market in Saxony, about 1100 ft. above the sea, S.W. E. E. Burg with a church, and a manufactory of the stone-ware and tin-works, and a large establishment for the manufacture of rail way bars; coal is worked in the neighbourhood. Pop. 610

NEUNKIRCHEN, numerous places, Germany particularly.—1, A. vil. Hanover, gov. and 17 m. S.E. Osnabrück with a church. Pop. 1144.—2, A. vil. Prussia, prov. Westphalia, gov. and 18 m. S.E. Minden with a R. Catholic church, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1149

NEUNRADE, a. ta. Rheinish Prussia, gov. and 20 m. S.W. Aachenburg, with a church, manufactures of linen, a bleachfield, and iron-mills. Pop. 1130

NEUNSTADT a. ta. Koenigsberg, a. ta. Württemberg, circle Neckar at the confluence of the Froethach with the Neckar 5 m. N.E. Neckarsulm, with a desecrated church, chateau, and old ruined castle. It sometimes takes the name of Neuenstadt-an-der-Linde, from a lime-tree of extraordinary dimensions growing beside it. Pop. 1421

NEUNSTEIN, several places, Germany, particularly a. ta. Württemberg, circle Jaxt, on the Eppach, 81 m. N.W. Ellwangen with a church, an old castle, now used as an hospital and workhouse, and manufactures of linen. Pop. 1480

NEUBURG a. ta. Rheinish Prussia, gov. and 26 m. N.W. Treves, on the Moselle. It has a church and chapel, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, several tanneries, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1600

NEUBERN (Ossau and Uster) or HORNS NEUBERGO, a. ta., Bohemia, circle Klatzau, 50 m. N.W. Passau. It consists of two distinct portions and has two churches, a paper, and two other mills. Pop. 1250

NEUBERHACH or NEUBERHACH (Lat. Brinacum), a. ta. France, dep. Haut-Rhin, 10 m. S.E. Colmar, on the canal of its name, near 1 bank Rhine. It is made up of forest of the first class, being fortified by Yaden, in the form of a regular oblong. All the houses are of one height, and rather low, so that they are not visible from the outside, and are laid out with the utmost regularity. In the centre of the town is a large square, or place d'armes, surrounded with trees from which its four gates are seen, and the ramparts afford a fine prospect. The only edifices deserving of notice are the church, and extensive barracks. Pop. 1770.

NEUFCHATEAU (Lat. Novus Castellum) a. ta. France, dep. Yonne 26 m. W. W. Epinal on the Moselle, near its confluence with the Meuse. It is an ancient place, but tolerably well built has a court of first resort, a communal college, and a small public library of 8000 volumes manufactures of woollen covers, uille, Paris point and wicker-ware and some trade in linen, uille, iron &c. Pop. 2598.

NEUFCHATEAU a. vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 80 m. S.W. Liege, on the Barwille with a brewery a flour-mill and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1009

NEUFCHATEAU a. ta. Belgium, prov. Luxembourg on the Viere, 28 m. N.W. Arlon. It has a church, a communal house, a palais de justice, and barracks, slate quarries, bark oil, meal, and saw mills some manufactures of woollen stuffs and a considerable trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1643

NEUFCHÂTEL or NEUCHÂTEL (German Neuenburg), a. com. Switzerland, bounded N by com. Bern and France, W. France, S. com. Yand, E. Fribourg and Bern, length, N. E. to S.W. about 23 m. breadth, about 11 m. area, 255 sq. m. It is traversed throughout by the chain of the Jura, and partly occupied and partly bounded by the extensive lake to which it gives its name. The principal summits of the Jura, within the canton—the Chasseron, 5282 ft., Chasseron, 5283 ft. and Creux de Vent, 4980 ft. high. The intervening valleys are—the Ruz, Travers, Sagos, Bravine, Lèche, and Chaux-de-Fonds, each taking its name from the principal stream by which it is drained. These valleys are longitudinal following the direction of the principal chain of the Jura, from N. E. to S.W. In addition to the streams which give the valleys their names, the only others of any importance are the Donih, which forms the N.W. boundary of the canton, and the Thule or Zühl, which forms the communication between the Lakes of Neuchâtel and Biel. Almost all the strata belong to a calcareous formation, called Jura limestone. The only mineral of any importance contained in it is iron, often in the form of bog iron ore. In the valley of Travers, a considerable mine of asphalt occurs there is also a little coal and a little lignite. Cypripedium almost everywhere abundant. According to an estimate which has been made, the whole surface may be thus divided—arable land, not quite one-sixth forest, nearly one-fifth, natural pastures and artificial meadows, above one-half vineyards, little more than one-fiftieth waste, one-thirtieth. The corn raised is confined to the more level portions of the lake district and a few of the plains and falls far short of the consumption, for which large additional supplies are drawn from cantons Bern and Basel.

The culture of the potato is extensive, and carried far up on the mountain sides. Immense numbers of oxen and cows are fed in the higher valleys, and on the mountain pastures; and the dairy is perhaps the most important branch of rural economy. The wine made, both white and red, is extensively exported to the neighbouring cantons, orchards of apples, pears, plums, and cherries are numerous and, in a few favoured spots, the almond and fig thrive in the open air. Immediately above the vine slopes extensive plantations of all kinds of nuts are frequent. Higher up oak becomes the principal timber. Higher still at an elevation of 500 ft. to 1000 ft. fir, larch, and beech forests commence, and, continuing to ascend, crown many lofty mountain tops. In these forests, bears, wolves, wild swine, and deer have their haunts, though their numbers have diminished as the population has increased. Smaller game is still very abundant, and both lakes and rivers are well stocked with fish. The great staple manufacture of the canton is watches and clocks, and the various kinds of mechanism in which great ingenuity and manual dexterity are required, as mathematical and optical instruments, &c. All of these find markets in every part of the world, and more especially in France, which, notwithstanding of her efforts to prevent it, annually receives vast numbers of contraband. Lard and printed cottons, once most important branches of manufacture, have greatly declined, but still continue to employ numerous hands. The language of the inhabitants is French, and the prevailing religion Calvinistic.

U. Catholics forming not more than one-third of the population. Neuchâtel holds the twenty-first place in the Swiss Confederation, to which its contingent is 960 men, and an annual payment of about £1800, but belongs, in sovereignty to the king of France, who appoints to the principal offices, and receives an annual tribute of nearly £4000. His powers however are fixed by the constitution, on which no change can be made without the consent of the cantonal estates, a representative body, partly nominated by the king, but chiefly composed of members elected by a kind of universal suffrage. Pop. (1848), 20,678.

NEUCHÂTEL or NEUCHÂTELS, [German, Neuchâtel] a town Switzerland, cap. of same name, 24 m. W. Bern, on a steep slope above N.W. shore of lake Neuchâtel and traversed by the Broye, which falls into the lake immediately below. The scenery of the lake here is not much distinguished by grandeur, but the whole site is fine below, a wide expanse of water, which has sometimes been compared to the Bay of Naples, around, rich fields and vineyards, dotted over with numerous villas, glancing in the sun, and behind, piles of black forest, which climb the mountain sides, and are overtopped at last by the magnificent wall faces of the Jura. The town itself rises in the form of an amphitheatre, and is well built containing several good streets, particularly the Rue de l'Hôpital and Rue de Fanbourg. The principal buildings are the castle an ancient, open building, of considerable extent, originally the residence of the princes of Neuchâtel now partly occupied by the Prussian governor, and partly converted into government offices, the old Gothic church adjoining the castle, built in the 13th century containing several curious, ancient monuments, and surrounded by a magnificent terrace, on which William Farel Calvin's favourite colleague at Geneva, was buried, though the actual position of the grave has somehow been lost, the new church, a handsome edifice, in modern style the townhouse a large building, with a Grecian portico used original locality. The transport, nearly 60 m., is supported by Agassiz to have been by glaciers no longer existing. Pop. (1850), 7737.

NEUCHÂTEL [Latin Novesium, [German, Neuchâtel], a lake, Switzerland, surrounded by and partly bounded by, cantons Neuchâtel, Vaud, Fribourg, and Bern; greatest length, N.E. to S.W. 25 m.; average breadth, 4 m.; about 1300 ft. above the sea, and 190 ft. above the Lake of Geneva; greatest depth, 400 ft. Its W. bank is lined by the range of the Jura. In the E., the Jorat forms the water-shed between it and the Lake of Geneva. It receives the Broye, charged with the surplus waters of Lake Morat, on the E., the Orbe on the S.W., and the Reuse and Broye on the N.W., and discharges itself, by the Tuisse or Eclat, into Lake Biel. The scenery, in many places, is fine, but much less than that of most Swiss lakes. It is well stocked with fish, particularly salmon and trout, and the traffic on it is important, though the navigation is dangerous, from sudden gusts of wind. A steamer plies regularly on it, visiting the most important places on its banks.

NEUCHÂTEL EN BAAS [Latin Dreconville] a town, France, dep. Seine-Inférieure, 27 m. N.E. Rouen near bank Belouze with a court of first resort, an agricultural society manufactures of woollen and cotton stuffs, bonnets, hosiery, glass, leather and beer and a trade in flour, wine, brandy, cider, perry, butter, and particularly cheese, which is extensively made in the surrounding districts the first quality, a kind of cylindrical cream-cheese, is famous. P. 3990.

NEUFEN, a town Württemberg, circle Solzbrunn, in a beautiful valley 10 m. N.E. Reutlingen. It has a Latin school the ruins of an old castle and manufactures of stained paper. Pop. 3000.

NEUFRA a market in. Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, on the Fehle. It has a church and two mills. Pop. 1231.

NEUGEDLIN or KOTVA, a vil. Bohemia, circle Klatzka, 27 m. S.E.W. Pilsen on a church school, townhouse and one of the most important steam woollen factories in the kingdom two dye works, and several mills. Pop. 1618.

NEUGLEN or NEUGE, river La Plata. See DIAMANTE.

NEUHAUS, numerous places, Germany, particularly—
1. A town Hanover, circle Roda 24 m. N.W. Stade, on the Oese, with a small harbour, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, tan, harness, a fishery building-yard, and some shipping. Pop. 1518.
2. A town Prussia, prov. West phalia, gov. and 28 m. S.E.W. Minden, with an old castle, now used as barracks, a church and some trade in cattle. P. 1897.

NEUHAUS [Latin, Noves Domes] a town Bohemia, circle Tabor 26 m. N.E. Budweis, on the Neuzka. It has a ruinous old castle, with a large dargan NEUCHÂTEL, looking towards the lake.—After Th. de Meuse.

among other purposes, for the meetings of the Grand Council the gymnasium with an interesting museum, and a celebrity almost European in consequence of the distinguished labours of Agassiz, a native of the town, and one of its professors. Ferry's hospital, so called after its founder, David Ferry a native, who assumes a fortune of about £160,000 and let the whole to the town for its general improvement and benevolent purposes; and the Fountains hospital so called because founded by another benevolent native Neuchâtel is the entrepot for the manufactures of the canton, and carries on an extensive trade, for which both good roads and water communication afford great facilities. Steamers navigate the lake, and communicate with Morat, Yverdon, &c. On the lake, a mile above Neuchâtel, is the largest boulder stone on the Jura. It is 62 ft. long by 48 ft. broad, and is calculated to contain 14,000 cubic ft. of granite. There is no granite to be seen in the Jura, and the granite most resembling this boulder is found on Great St. Bernard. The inference seems fair, that that was its lower three churches, a townhouse, theatre, barracks, gymnasium, hospital, and manufactures of woollen stuffs. The high table land, in this neighbourhood, forms the water-shed between the basins of the Elbe and the Danube. Pop. 7604.

NEUHAUSEL, or EMMER UJVAS, a town Hungary, Kisthor Danube, co. and 22 m. S.E. Neutra, in a plain bank Neutra. It has a church, normal school, and Franciscan monastery, a townhouse, large swimming-school, and a considerable trade in corn, wine, and cattle. Pop. 6760.

NEUHAUSEN, several places, Württemberg, particularly—
1. (conf. de Fildern), a town circle Neckar, S.E.W. Reutlingen; with two churches and a castle. P. 2170—2. A vil., circle Schwarzwald, on the Enz. P. 1201—3. (cf. Eclat) A vil., circle Schwarzwald and 6 m. E. Reutlingen, with a church. Iron is worked near it. Pop. 1061.

NEUROF a vil. and par. Haute-Loire, on the Fléden, 6 m. S.E.W. Frides. It properly consists of three distinct places—Wendacé, Ellice, and Opprey—and contains a castle and a church. Pop. 1731.

NEURUPP, numerous small places, Bohemia, particularly a st. chapel and M. Engelst, with a magnificent castle, surrounded with fine gardens, and possessing a library of 25,000 volumes; a church, high school, and hospital. P 791

NEURUTTEN, a vil. Bohemia, circle Rakowitz, at the confluence of the Odra with the Misa. It has a castle, and very complete and extensive iron-works, belonging to the prince of Preussburg. P 998

NEULLY-AN-SEINE (Lahn, Neuhausen), several places, France, particularly a tn., dep. Seine, finely situated near r bank Seine, on both sides of a magnificent avenue, which crosses the high road to Paris. Its principal building is the chateau, a magnificent residence, to which Louis-Philippe was very partial. Near the Seine is crossed by a bridge of five arches, each with a span of 150 ft. The fine grounds in the vicinity are a favourite holiday resort of the Parisians. The manufacture consists of water-proof articles, fustia, and chemical products. P 9451

NEUKIRCH, four small vils and pars Switzerland, the largest in can. Luzern. P 2364

NEUKIRCH (Kirkens and Ome), a tn. Prussia, gov. and S. W. Leguities, with two churches and a castle, several mills, and hospitals. P 1118

NEUKIRCHEN, numerous places, Germany, particularly 1. a tn. Hesse-Cassel circle Oberhessen 84 m. S. W. Cassel, on the Grenf, with a chapel, hospital and manufactures of lace. P 3057.—2. (since Heiligen-Blut), a market in Lower Bavaria, N. W. Passau, with two churches, a townhouse, a monastery and several mills. P 1510.—3. A vil., Upper Austria, circle Traun with a church. P 1009.—4. A vil. Rhenish Prussia, gov. and 13 m. S. Düsseldorf with a church manufactures of woollen linen, and cotton goods, lace-works, and several distilleries. P 972

NEULAND, a vil. Prussia, prov. Sillesia, gov. Oppeln, circle Netze. It consists of three several parts, and has a R. Catholic church. P 1048

NEULEHNEFELD, a vil. Lower Austria, on near 1. auzna as to be properly only one of its suburbs. It has a house of invalids, and several manufactures. P 4700

NEULIRE, a tn. France, dep. Loire, about 7 m. S. E. Roanne. P 1033

NEUMAGEN, a tn. Rhenish Prussia, gov. and 13 m. N. E. Treves, on the Moselle, with a church, synagogue, extensive tanneries, building yards, and some shipping. P 1815

NEUMARK—1. (Polish Nowomark), a walled tn. W. Prussia, gov. and 33 m. S. E. Marienwerder 1. bank Dniester with a court of justice, two churches, and a trade in cattle. P 1255.—2. (or now-Jaw), A tn. Bohemia, circle Klattau, 31 m. S. S. W. Pilsen, with a church, townhouse, school, and synagogue manufactures of linen and earthen ware. P 1183

NEUMARKT, several places, Austria, particularly 1. (or von der Oden) A market tn. Styria, S. W. Judenburg, with an old castle and a hospital. P 1185.—2. (Italian, Enza), A market tn. Tyrol, circle and 13 m. S. by W. Bozen, on the Adige, with a church and a necessary. P 1549.—3. (or Tewep) A market tn. Illyria, Carinthia, 24 m. N. W. Laybach, with a handsome church, two chateaux, and important manufactures of ironware and cutlery, hosiery, leather and linen. P 1440

NEUMARKT—1. A walled tn. Bavaria, circle Oberpfalz, on the Rube, on the Main and Danube Canal, 30 m. S. E. Nuremberg. It has a church, castle, townhouse, institute of the Sisters of Charity, a Latin school barracks, and hospital, numerous blacksmiths, a tobacco-factory and a trade in corn, horses, and cattle, and a tanning establishment, in connection with chalybeate and sulphurous springs. It was once an important free town. Near it are many ruined castles, of which the most remarkable is Wolfstein. P 3055.—2. A walled tn. Prussia, gov. and 16 m. W. N. W. Breslau, cap. circle. It has several provincial and town courts, Protestant and R. Catholic churches, numerous tobacco-factories, a bank and several other mills, tile-works, and a corn market. The rearing of bees is an important branch of rural economy and there are several saw-milleries. P 4098

NEUMUELLER, a vil. Denmark dusky Holstein, hill and near Kiel, with a townhouse, a bank, oil and flour mill to the last, which is very extensive, the whole town of Kiel, and many of the surrounding villages, are thirled P 800

NEUMUNSTER, a vil. Denmark, dusky Holstein, 17 m. S. S. W. Kiel, on the railway to Altona. It is a large, well-built, manufacturing place, has a church, in the Italian style; and important manufactures of linen, one factory employing 900 hands. P 4700

NEUNBURG-VON-PAW-WALD, a tn. Bavaria, Oberpfalz, 27 m. N. E. Ratibon with seven churches, two castles, a townhouse, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and several mills and breweries. P 2080

NEUNDORF, several places, Germany, particularly 1. A vil. Bohemia, circle Brumau, with a church, a castle, a mill. P 1009.—2. (Grove), A vil. Prussia, prov. Sillesia, gov. Oppeln, circle Netze, consisting of several distinct portions, with a church and two tile-works. P 1024

NEUNKIRCH, a tn. and par Switzerland can. and 6 m. W. Schaffhausen. It is walled, and tolerably well built, but miserably dirty, and has two churches, one within the town, and another in a suburb, consisting of old of modern houses, and an excellent school-house. P 1400

NEUNKIRCHEN, a tn. Prussia, gov. and 37 m. S. E. Treves, on the Rhine, with a Protestant and R. Catholic church, manufactures of ironware, and a trade in cattle and iron are worked, and there are several saw-milleries, and other iron works, in the neighbourhood. P 1694

NEUNKIRCHEN AN STEINELBERG, or NEUNKIRCH, a market in Lower Austria, 33 m. S. S. W. Vienna, on the railway to Grlitz, with a large church, Minorite convent, manufactures of needles and screws, a large chums and calico printfield, and two cotton-factories. P 2102

NEUPAKA, or PAKAU, a tn. Bohemia, 67 m. N. E. Prague with two churches, a chapel townhouse, school and hospital. P 1093

NEUGL, a river LA FLA. See DIAMETTE

NEUGLICHENAU, a tn. Bohemia, circle and R. Tabor, with a church, school, cattle fax-quarries, manufactures of linen, and a saw-mill. P 1047

NEUREUSCH or NOWAKOWSKA, a market in Austria, Moravia, circle Igau 6 m. from Schellerau, with a church and a Promonastrial abbey. P 1240

NEURODE, a tn. Prussia, gov. and 44 m. S. S. W. Breslau, on the Waldite. It is well built, has four churches and a chapel, a castle, an hospital manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, a tobacco-factory, and walk mills. P 1849

NEURALA, a tn. Prussia, prov. gov. and 45 m. N. W. Leguities, 1. bank Oder. It has two churches, provincial courts and offices manufactures of articles in enamel and pasteboard, thread, leather, and snailcloth, building-yards, shipping and an extensive trade on the Oder. P 8440

NEUSATZ, a tn. Saxony, dist. and S. S. E. Bautzen, with a townhouse, manufactures of calico, and a trade in woollen and cotton yarn. P 1019

NEUBAUDECK, or NOWY BADECKI, a tn. Austrian Galicia, circle Sandomierz, bank Danube, in a marshy valley, hampered up on all sides by lofty hills, 47 m. from Cracow. It possesses a gymnasium and high school. P 4465

NEUBATZ, or UIYDEK, a tn. Hungary, Riber Danube, on Bars, on the Danube opposite to Futurarduin, with which it communicates by a bridge of boats. Till the late (1849) Hungarian war, when it was almost completely destroyed, it was a large fortified town of 17,400 inhabitants, irregularly but substantially built, with a number of handsome public edifices and occupying on an important trade, being a common entrepot for Germany, Hungary, and Turkey

NEUCHÂTEL, or NEUCHÂTEL, a tn. Russia, Finland, dist. and 80 m. N. W. on two islands in Lake Harjavesi. It communicates with the mainland by a bridge, is defended by a strong castle, and has many handsome and cheerful looking houses, separated by small gardens and painted fences a spacious church, and other public edifices.

NEUSE, a river, U. States, N. Carolina. It rises in the centre of the State, near Hillsboro lat 36° 5' N., lon. 79° W., from which it flows S. E., and falls into a branch of Pamlico Sound, at Newbern, lat. 35° 5' N. lon. 77° W. Whole course, about 180 m.

NEUSIEDL, numerous places, Hungary. The only one deserving of notice is Neusiedl-am-See, co. Wieselburg, on N. shore, lake of same name, 37 m. S. E. Vienna. It possesses a quarry of fine stone, which is sent both to Presburg and Venna; and has a weekly market, and five annual fairs, at which large quantities of corn are sold.

NEUBIEDLER SEE (see Lacus Fidei), a lake in W. Hungary, between com. Oedenburg and Wieselburg, and the Markt and the Laythe greatest length, N to S, 33 m.; average breadth, 5 m.; circuit, about 60 m. It is salt, very shallow throughout greatest depth, seldom exceeding 15 ft. on the E. it is lost in the great morass of Hansag. Large quantities of salt crystallize on its shores in summer, and consists of a mixture of common and of glauber salt. Carp and pike are caught. Its limitations, which were frequent, used to occasion great damage, till a canal was cut, in 1800, of sufficient width to carry off its superfluous waters at all times, and discharge them into the Raimuth or Little Easch. The only stream of any consequence which falls into it is the Yulka.

NEUSOHL (Latin, Neosolum) a walled in Hungary. Hilber Danube, cap. com. Solli, r. bank Gran, 79 m. N. Buda. It has a square near its centre, forming the market-place in which is a statue of St. Martin, and a handsome fountain, five R. Catholic churches, an old castle now used partly as a town-house, and partly as a gymnasium; bishop's palace, chapter house, courthouses, theatre, gymnasium, high school, school of design, and several other educational establishments; many features of woollen and linen cloth, leather hats, copper, iron, earthenware, and paper, several dye works, and extensive beet-root sugar factories. Near it, copper and iron are mined, smelted, and, to some extent, manufactured. Pop. 12,000.

NEUSS, a in Prussia, gov. Düsseldorf, cap. circle, on the left near its confluence with the Rhine. 21 m. N.W. Cologne. It is walled, flanked with towers and ditches indifferently built has a Protestant and two R. Catholic churches, a synagogue, gymnasium, carriage bank, lunatic asylum, ordinar and orphan asylum, manufactures of woollen cloth, flannel, cassimere, ribbon, cotton stuffs, calicoes, hats, starch and quills, woaded and cotton mills, oil and flour mills, tanneries, dye-works, and vinegar-works. Pop. 5567.

NEUSTADT numerous places, Bavaria particularly—1, (an der Aue) a walled in circle Middle Franconia, cap. dist., 21 m. W. N.W. Nürnberg. It has two castles, two churches, a townhouse, Latin school, hospital, and barracks, manufactures of woollen, cotton goods, nails, and hardware, several mills, and a trade in fine linen, corn and malt. Pop. 11,301—2 (an der Hardt) A. in circle Pfalz, cap. dist., on the Speyerbach, 14 m. W. Spire. It has a justice-of-peace court, four churches, three of them Protestant; a Latin school, and hospital; manufactures of cloth paper and chemical products, iron, oil bark, powder and flour mills and an important trade in wine and wood. Pop. 6068—3, (an der Aue), a walled in Lower Franconia, cap. dist. 42 m. N. by E. Würzburg with two churches, a chapel, Latin school, posthouse, hospital, old Carmelite monastery, manufactures of damask, cotton goods, red and white leather, a dye-works, and several mills. Pop. 1450—4 (an der Aue), A. in circle Oberpfalz, 14 m. S.E. Bamberg, with two churches and a ruined castle, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1000—5 A. in Lower Bavaria, r. bank Danube, here crossed by a wooden bridge, 21 m. S.W. Ratibon walled, flanked with towers, well built, with pleasant streets, lined by houses, many of which, though old, are handsome, two fine churches, an almshouse, a potash-refinery several breweries, and a trade in wood and hops. Pop. 1077—6, (an der Weidach), A. in Upper Palatinate with a court of justice, three churches, a chapel, a castle, and two mills, and near it mines of silver and quicksilver. Pop. 1580.

NEUSTADT, several places Prussia, particularly—1, (an der Weidach) A. in, gov. and 24 m. N.W. Danzig, cap. circle, on the Blau. It possesses provincial and town courts, a Protestant and R. Catholic church, a monastery, and hospital, and has bark and walk mills, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 2034—2, (an der Weidach), A. walled in, gov. and 29 m. S.W. Oppeln, cap. circle. It is tolerably well built has a Protestant and three R. Catholic churches, a synagogue, two hospitals, and a convent of the brothers of charity, provincial and city courts; manufactures of cloth, leather, tiles, and paper, and several mills. Pop. 6797—3, (an der Weidach), A. in, gov. and 29 m. S.E. Posen, l. bank Warta with five churches, a synagogue, and manufactures of cloth and leather. Pop. 3248—4, A. in, prov. and 33 m. W. N.W. Posen, on the Warta; with a church a synagogue, and extensive tanneries. Pop. 1064—5, (an der Weidach), A. in, gov. Posen, on the Flusow Canal and the Schwara, 26 m. N.E. Berlin. It is built in the form of an oval, and divided into three parts—Blumenwald an Burg, Neustadt in der Rhine, and a suburb called Ruhlar Kolonie or Krummer. It has two churches, and a bathing establishment supplied by a chalybeate spring, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, iron and steel ware, cloth and shoes, copper and iron mills, a considerable trade in the above articles, and also in wool and cattle. Pop. (1840) 5561.

NEUSTADT, numerous places, Germany—1, (an der Weidach), A. in Mecklenburg, cap. dist., 2 m. S.W. Rostock, circle and 22 m. E. Dresden, on the Polenz with several public offices, two churches, an hospital, manufactures of cutlery and woollen, cotton, and linen cloth, several dye-works, a bleachfield, a brewery granite quarries, a trade in cattle, and four annual fairs. Pop. 2132—2, A. in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, on the Elbe 18 m. S.E. Schwerin, with two castles, a church, and picture-gallery several tobacco-factories, a spinning mill, and distillery. Pop. 1771—3, A. in Baden, Lake circle, cap. dist., on the Wutach 17 m. S.E. Freiburg. It contains an industrial school and has many features of clocks, straw-plait, woollen and cloth, a silk-works, machine factory, copper saw and oil mills. Pop. 1710—4, A. in Hesse-Cassel, circle Oberhessen dist. and 9 m. E.N.E. Kircheim with two churches and a courthouse. Pop. 1787—5, A. market in Brunswick, circle Wolfenbüttel, r. bank Lahn, at the terminus of the Harzburg railway. It has a church, three mills, and salt-pile common to Brunswick and Hanover. Pop. 900—6, (an der Weidach), A. in Hanover, principality Celenberg cap. dist., on the Leine, here crossed by two bridges, 15 m. W. Hanover with a townhouse, church, bathing establishment, manufactures of linen and limestone quarries. Pop. 1451—7, (an der Weidach), A. in Hesse-Cassel, principality and 8 m. N.E. Coburg on the Rothe with a castle, two churches, a townhouse, a tobacco-factory, and an extensive trade in articles known by the name of Bonsenberg wares. Pop. 2219—8, (an der Weidach) A. in Hesse-Weimar, cap. circle, 24 m. S.E. Weimar, with a castle, two churches, a savings bank, and hospital; manufactures of woollen, linen and leather, and a trade in books. Pop. 4250—9, (an der Weidach) [Latin, Neosolum] A. in circle and 14 m. S.E. Bohemia, circle and 18 m. N.E. Kugggritz, on the Mettau on a rocky and almost isolated mountain spur. It is walled, flanked with towers, and has a castle, townhouse, and monastery and some trade in linen. Pop. 1750.

NEUSTADT, a in, and seaport, Denmark, duchy Holstein, E. bank of a little fjord of its name, 17 m. N.N.E. Lübeck, once strongly fortified. Its harbor, formed by the channel of the fjord, which here narrows, so as to assume the appearance of a stream, is a good winter haven of the third class, with 14 ft. of water. The principal export is corn, but its trade is much less than once it was. Pop. 8000.

NEUSTADT or WIENSTADT [anc. Neosolum or Neosolum Austrie] A. in Lower Austria, at the commencement of the canal of same name, and on the Vienna and Grätz railway, 26 m. S. Vienna. It is surrounded with a deep ditch, and a wall flanked with towers, is nearly in the form of a square, built with tolerable regularity; many of the streets are both spacious, well paved and well lighted. The most striking edifices are the old castle, a large quadrangular edifice, with a tower, enclosed by a fosse, containing, among other objects of interest, a beautiful Gothic chapel, of three painted windows and bay windows, and the New Kloster Kirche, with an admirably carved monument of Elizabeth of Portugal, wife of the Emperor Frederick IV. Neustadt once possessed several other buildings, interesting chiefly for their antiquity; but in 1884 a fearful conflagration laid almost the whole town in ashes. The manufactures consist chiefly of silk and velvet cloth, ribbons, paper, porcelain, and refined sugar. The trade is principally in wine, ironware, silk stuffs, leather, sugar, rum, and vinegar. Pop. (1846), 12,846.

NEUSTÄDTL A. in Prussia, gov. and 38 m. N.W. Berlin, with two churches, manufactures of linen, leather, and earthenware; a dye-works, bark and flour mills, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1285.

NEUSTÄDTL or SCHNEEBERG a in Saxony, circle and 11 m. S.E. Weitz, with a church, two schools in which the making of lace is taught; manufactures of lace and embroidery. Hair is passing, particularly that of cobalt, is extensively used on. Pop. 170.

NEUSTADT, or Neustadt, several places, Austria, particularly—1, (Neustadt or Neustadt), a town in Tyrol, district Carinthia, cap. circle, 1 bank Gurk, 48 m S E. Laybach; with a church, Franciscan cloister and gymnasium. Pop. 1761.—2, (Neustadt), a market in Bohemia, circle and 26 m W by S Pilsen, with a church, school, townhouse, and hospital, and two mills. Pop. 1827.—3, (Neustadt), a mining to. Bohemia, circle Bunzlau, 70 m N N E Prague, on the Lomnitz; with a linen bleachfield. Tin-mines are worked in the neighbourhood. Pop. 2496.—4, (Neustadt) A town in Moravia, circle Igau, with a parish church. Pop. 1940.—5, (Neustadt or Neustadt), A market in Hungary, co. Neutra, 53 m. N N E. Pressburg, cap. dist., on the Waag, with a church, and some trade in wine. P. 5500.

NEUTEICH, a to. Prussia, gov and 21 m. S E. Danzig, on the Schwenta, with two churches, two schools, and a trade in horses and cattle. Pop. 1888.

NEUTTSCHEN or Neutr Groux a to. Austria, Moravia, circle Pottau 36 m E Olmitz. It has a district criminal court, several public offices, three churches, one of them an ancient edifice in the Byzantine style; an old castle, a townhouse, a high, a female industrial, and a primary school, an infirmary, almshouse, burgher hospital, and asylum for widows, extensive manufactures of woollen stuffs, which form important articles of trade. The sulphur spring of Sommerau is in the neighbourhood. Pop. 9000.

NEUTRA, a co. Hungary bounded N by Moravia and co. Transilvania, N W Moravia, W and S W co. Pressburg S. Komorn S. Bohl, and N E. Thuroos area, 1986 geo sq m generally mountainous, being traversed in the W by the principal divide of the Carpathians and in other directions by minor ramifications, watered by the Waag, Eszék, Tura, March, Neutra, Zitra, Blava, and Dnava, all belonging to the basin of the Danube, soil, in general, of great fertility; yields large crops of grain, fruit in vast quantities, wine, and tobacco; woods extensive, principal mineral iron. Mineral springs occur in many quarters. Manufactures of woollen flims, and cotton goods, leather, lace, glass, paper and articles of wood, straw, and rush, are carried on. The county is divided into six districts—Ober-Neutra, Unter-Neutra, Vahelyi Szekes, Bujanos, and Bodok. The capital is Neutra. Pop. 685,500.

NEUTRA a to. Hungary cap above co. 70 m. N W Buda, intersected by the Neutra river. It has a castle, seated on a height, and containing, within its enclosure, the cathedral, the bishop's palace, immediately adjoining the cathedral, the county hall a handsome structure, faced with copper, post-office, Fiarist college, seminary, lyceum, and gymnasium. The chief employments are agriculture, weaving, and general trade. Pop. 4090.

NEUTRA, or Neutra, a river, Hungary, which rises in the N. E. extremity of co. Neutra, flows circuitously S W past the towns of Neutra and Ezer, and at Komorn, after a course of above 100 m. joins L. bank Waag, immediately above its confluence with the Danube.

NEUVÉ-ÉLÉZAC (Flamand, Névezehis) a vil and com. Belgium, prov W Flanders, 8 m. S. by W Ypres, r bank Douve, with several breweries, a dye-work several corn and oil mills, and manufactures of cloth and table-linen. P. 2745.

NEUVILLE, or Neuvillars, a to. and par. Switzerland, can. and 15 m. N W Bern W end Lake Biel. It has several educational establishments, which have acquired some celebrity. Many of the inhabitants are weavers. P. 1411.

NEUVILLÉ several places France, particularly—1, Dep. Vienne, 10 m N N W Poitiers. Pop. 1140.—2, (Neuvillé), A to., dep. Loiret, 15 m. N N E. Orleans with manufactures of woollen fabrics. Pop. 1338.—3, (Neuvillé), A to. and com. dep. Rhone, about 9 m. N Lyons, r bank Saône, here crossed by a handsome suspension-bridge. It has manufactures of printed calicoes, bleaching a lead-roll tag and a silk mill, and a chalybeate spring. In a plain, S E. of the town, was fought the great battle between Septimius Severus, and his competitor Albin, which left the former in undisputed possession of the Roman empire. Pop. 1788.

NEUVILLÉ, a vil and com. Belgium, prov Hainault, 10 m N Mons, with manufactures of linen and yarn, three flour-mills, and a trade in horses and cattle. Pop. 1941.

NEUVILLY, a to. France, dep. Nord, about 13 m. E. S. E. Cambrai. Pop. 2082.

NEUWALDE, a vil Prussia, prov Silesia, gov Oppeln, circle Netze, consisting of three distinct parts; with a church. Pop. 1847.

NEUWARI, a vil in Prussia, gov and 23 m. N W Stettin, on a tongue of land projecting into a lake of same name. It has a Protestant church, some shipping, and a trade in wood and cattle. Pop. 1821.

NEUWEDEI, a to. Prussia, gov and N E Frankfurt, on the Drageuse with a church, manufactures of cloth and hats, and an iron-mill. Pop. 2174.

NEUWEIER, a vil Baden, circle Middle Rhine, bail Buhl, with a church, a small castle, and a trade in excellent wine, grown in the vicinity. Pop. 1018.

NEUWIED a to. Prussia, gov and 7 m. N by W Coblenz, cap. circle r bank Rhine, here crossed by a flying bridge. It is built with great regularity, in the form of a square, the streets crossing each other at right angles; and contains a palace, surrounded with extensive gardens and possessing a collection of Roman antiquities chiefly obtained from the buried city of Victoria, 2 m N of the town; and a library of 10 000 volumes. Three Protestant churches, one of them belonging to the Moravian brethren, a E. Catholic church a synagogue, a building called Fammaro (Pensant), containing a museum of natural history, a casino, with a musical society, a progymnasium, normal, industrial, infant, ragged and numerous other schools and private educational establishments. It has manufactures of tobacco, chiberry articles of seras, furniture, soap, candles cotton goods, pipes, mineral colours, piano-fortes, bells, lacquerware, morocco leather, and clay stoves and a trade in wine, iron, ironware, potash, and pipe clay. Neuviwed was founded in 1649, by a prince of the name then independent, who invited settlers of all religious persuasions, with the assurance of perfect toleration. The state of the times made the terms valuable, and the town, accordingly soon attained considerable importance. A variety of sects now live together in harmony. The most interesting establishment of all is that of the Moravian brethren who here amount to about 400 individuals. They have excellent schools which are attended by many English children. Pop. (1846) 6885.

NEUZEP (The Hammer or Hammer), a to. in Holland, prov Zealand, 15 m. S E. Middelburg, is a strongly fortified and has a townhouse, two churches, a school, bomb-proof arsenal, barracks and magazines, an hospital, and two watch houses. Agriculture, retail trade, and shipping are the chief sources of employment. Pop. 1113.

NEUZINA, a vil Hungary Thutth Thamus, co. Torontal on the Thames, with a church. Pop. 2396.

NLYA a river Russia, which rises from the S W extremity of Lake Ladoga, at Solovetsk, flows first S W, then N W, and traversing the city of St. Petersburg, where it divides itself into several branches, and forms various islands, falls, by several mouths, into the Gulf of Finland. Its whole course is only about 40 m. but it is very wide, has a depth varying from 3 to 8 fathoms, and, as forming part of the great water thoroughfare of the empire, is of vast commercial importance. It is liable, particularly at the breaking up of the ice towards the end of April to sudden inundations, which often lay the greater part of St. Petersburg under water and have repeatedly proved most disastrous.

NLEYADA (Susut),—1, A mountain-range, Spain, extending from Pailin, 19 m. S. Granada to the frontiers of that part of Murcia now forming the province of Alcarria. Here it joins the Sierra of Baza, which afterwards under the name of Filabres, runs out into small ramifications near the Mediterranean. It receives its name from the perpetual snows which crown its summits among which the most elevated are those of Malabacra, 11,078 ft., and Yelota 11,878 ft. This sierra is composed of foliaceous gneiss, schistose gneiss, mica slate, quartz, and hornblende, and, on the N side, there is a large bed of fine porphyry. Iron, asbestos, and there are several mines in operation in the neighbourhood of Gradex, near which are also found zinc, argenteiferous lead, and antimony. Copper is also found. The principal streams which derive their origin from this chain are the Guadalquivir, Utiar, Guadil, Dier, Monadal, and Darro. From E. to W, the Sierra Myra, extends 60 to 70 m., and 55 to 40 m. N to S.—S. A mountain range, U States, America, stretching through California from S. to N. for above 600 m., between lat. 34 and 43° N and forming part of the immense chain, which, under different names, extends almost without interruption, from the peninsula of California to Russian America. Among its most remarkable features are several grand volcanic peaks, which reach high into the regions of perpetual snow, and have altitudes varying from 16,000 to 17,000 ft. above the sea. The E. side bounds the vast and inhospitable desert of Utah, while the W bounds the long and beautiful valley, which is traversed from S. to N. by the San Joaquin, and from N to S by the Sacramento, and has recently attracted universal attention by the richness of its auriferous deposits. These deposits must have had their original seat within the range, and numerous indications of them are found in the quartz veins, by which its other rocks are traversed. The only other mineral of value, yet discovered in the sierra, is quicksilver. The loftier peaks are, of course, destitute of vegetation; but both the plateaus, from which they rise, and their lower slopes, are generally covered with magnificent forests. Still lower down, towards the valleys, the surface becomes almost clear of timber, the soil is of great fertility, and all the productions of an Italian climate are obtained in abundance.—S. A branch of the Colombian Andes. New Granada, dep. Magdalena, prov. Sta. Maria, which attains a height of about 17,000 ft.

NEVEL, or NAWA, a tn. Russia, gov. and 60 m. N. Vitebsk, on a small lake of same name, as the mouth of the Esamka, with six churches and a synagogue. P. (1851) 1456.

NEVELLE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, 7 m. W Ghent with a church, chapel and two schools. Inhabitants engaged in weaving and agriculture. Pop. 3669.

NEVEDON, par Eng. Essex, 891 ac. Pop. 189.

NEVERA, a vil. and par. Wales, co. Pembroke, beautifully situated near Newport Bay, 8 m. W S W Newport. It has a very ancient Norman church with some interesting inscriptions, Baptist, Independent and Calvinistic Methodist chapels, and a day and several Sunday schools. Area 14 537 ac. Pop. 1642.

NEVÈRES (Latin Augustonemetum), a tn. France, cap. Nivern, on bank Loire, at the confluence of the Nivère 153 m. S.E.E. Paris. It is built in the form of an amphitheatre, on the slope of a hill, and has a very picturesque appearance when viewed across the river. Its interior however is by no means prepossessing, its streets being narrow and irregular, and very dirty. It is the see of a bishop, and has a cathedral, a somewhat heavy building the church of St. Etienne, in the Romanesque style an old castle, now used by the courts of justice, a Hotel de Ville, formerly the residence of the dukes of Nevers in the Flamboyant style, a college, founded in 1525 public library barracks, and prefecture, a court of first resort and commerce a corn milting chamber of manufactures, a central society of agriculture, science, and art a diocesan seminary, secondary ecclesiastical school, and communal college, manufactures of coarse woollens, metal buttons, and other articles in metal, violins strings, articles in beads, vinegar, glass, and candles, numerous potteries, producing ware which has been famed for many centuries bottle-works, breweries, ironworks, ropewalks, machine-works and an extensive shell factory, at which, in addition to other castings, about 225 pieces of ordnance are annually made. The trade includes most of the above manufactures, and also timber, wine, salt, &c. P. (1852) 14,337.

NEVIANO-MONTE-ASTORI, a vil. and com., duchy and 16 m. S. by E. Parma, on a lofty hill with a trade in chestnuts, cattle, wool, and sheep. P. 3695.

NEVIGES, a vil. Prussia, gov. and E. Düsseldorf, with three churches, and manufactures of woollen and linen stuffs, also, and fine vitreous. Pop. 1383.

NEVILLE (Pever), a small, British N. America, Gulf of Georgia, lat. 59° N. lon. 122° W. about 7 m. W of the W end of Hecate's Island. Its entrance is about 3 m. wide, and it penetrates about 8 m. into the land. In its centre, at the entrance, the water is only 4 fathoms but increases to 5, 6, and 7 fathoms, affording good anchorage, and a very commodious and well-sheltered port.

NEVIN or NVERN, a market tn. and par. Wales, co. and 20 m. S.W. Carmarvon, on Nvris Bay. It is very beautifully built; has a neat, plain, parish church, several Dissenting chapels; a national and five Sunday schools; and some trade in agricultural produce with Liverpool, with which a communication is kept up by steam-packets. Pop. 1244.

NEVIS (Italian, Lave), a tn. Austria, Tyrol, chdn. Bozen, on the Adige. The white millberry is extremely cultivated here to feed silk-worms. Pop. 1968.

NEVIS, a small tn., British W. Indies, one of the Leeward group off S.W. extremity of St. Kitts, from which it is separated by a narrow channel 3 m. broad, full of shoals, and navigable only by small boats, lat. 17° 14' N; lon. 63° 8' W. It consists almost entirely of one single conical mountain, of volcanic origin, rising with a gentle ascent from the sea to a height of 2500 ft., surrounded at the base by a level border of extremely fertile and highly cultivated land. The whole island is about 24 m. in circumference, area, 24,640 ac.; of which about 6000 ac. are capable of cultivation, the high parts being rocky and barren. The climate has the reputation of being fully as healthy as the average of the W. Indies, but instances have occurred which would render this questionable. The exports are sugar, molasses, and rum. The island is governed by a lieutenant-governor, who is assisted by an executive and legislative council and a house of assembly. Nevis is divided into five parishes and contains six Protestant churches, three Dissenting places of worship, eleven public and private church schools, and seven Wesleyan. Education is said to be advancing satisfactorily. The seat of government is at Charlestown, the principal town in the island, near its S.W. extremity. It lies along the shore of a wide, curving bay contains some good public buildings, and has a good residence. Nevis was first colonized by the English, in 1628. Columbus is said to have given the present name to this island from the mountain of Nevis in Spain. P. 10 200.

NEW ABBEY, a vil. and par. Scotland, stewartry Kirkcubright, on the Fow near its junction with the Nith, 7 m. S. S.W. Dumfries. It has a number of good houses an ancient parish church, a R. Catholic chapel, several schools, and the beautiful remains of a Cistercian abbey. On a hill near it is a granite column, 40 ft. high, intended to commemorate the victory of Waterloo. Extent of par., 8 m. by 2½ m. 1 1098.

NEW ALBANY, a city, U States, Albany, 1 bank Ohio, lat. 38° 20' N. lon. 83° 05' W. It is the largest place in the state, and is regularly laid-out, has numerous public buildings, including a courthouse, jail, and nine churches; several schools, a lyceum, a theological college, and extensive ship-building yards. Pop. (1840) 4226 (1850) 9785.

NEW BEDFORD a tn. U States, Massachusetts, on a slope, rising rapidly from a bank Acushnet, which is here crossed by a bridge and falls, about 4 m. below, into Buzzard's Bay, 53 m. S. by E. Boston. It presents a commanding and beautiful appearance, is well built, containing many elegant buildings and has a large and handsome townhall, of granite, a commodious custom-house, also of granite a courthouse, several handsome churches, a library a Friends academy, and several other schools. The manufactures consist chiefly of oil and candles, cordage, articles of cooperage, Prussian blue, &c. Ship-building is also carried on to a great extent and the trade, greatly facilitated by a spacious, safe, and deep harbour, is very important. By far the most important part of it is connected with the whale fisheries, in which New Bedford holds so prominent a place, that about one-third of the whole tonnage of the U States, engaged in these fisheries, belongs to its port. In 1850, the total tonnage of the district was 127,960 and the number of vessels which entered and cleared at the port was, respectively 118 (32,637 tons), and 124 (33,154 tons). Pop. (1850) 7592, (1856) 16,464.

NEW BRITAIN, a British colonial territory E. coast of N. America, lat. 45° E. to 49° 45' N. lon. 68° 50' to 66° W. bounded, W. by the State of Maine, N. W. by Lower Canada, from which it is separated by the river Sagadahoc; N. by Chatham Bay; E. Gulf of St. Lawrence and Northumberland Strait, the latter separating it from Prince Edward Island, and S. the Bay of Fundy, and part of Nova Scotia; length, N. to S., 215 m., breadth, 190 m.; area, 26,090 sq. m. or about the same extent as the mainland of Scotland. Its coast-line is about 600 m. in length interrupted only at the point of junction with Nova Scotia, where an isthmus of not more than 10 m. in breadth connects the two territories, and separates the waters of Northumberland Strait from those of the Bay of Fundy, and which it is proposed to unite by means of a canal. The most remarkable bays and harbours are Reiburn Bay, on the N coast Miramichi Bay on the E coast Passamaquoddy Bay, and St. John Harbour on the S coast. There are, besides these larger indentations, numerous smaller harbours, particularly on the S portion of the E coast.

The general surface of the country presents a series of bold undulations, sometimes rising into mountains or continuous ridges of high land. The latter are seldom of any considerable height but their precipitous activities, sharp outlines, and deep ravines give them an alpine and picturesque character, that fully and strikingly contrasts with the rich valleys and sheltered plains which alternate with the more rugged scenery.

The shores of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Northumberland Strait, however present different and far less pleasing features. There the land, for about 12 m. inland, is low and sandy covered with trees of a stunted growth, and skirted with extensive marshes large deep moors, and long sand beaches. New Brunswick is watered by numerous rivers, the principal of which is the St. John (which see), navigable for vessels of 40 tons to Fredericton. The next river in importance, is the Miramichi, which rises near the W limits of the territory, whence it flows N E, and falls into Miramichi Bay, on the E. coast, about lat. 47° N, lon. 64° 53' W, its whole course is upwards of 110 m. it is navigable for nearly 40 m., and admits vessels of 600 or 700 tons. The Restigouche is the next considerable river. It forms the S W limit of the province, and falls into the head of Chaleur Bay after a course of about 100 m. There are a number of small lakes in New Brunswick, particularly in the N part of the country but none of any considerable size. In the S, there are a few somewhat larger the most important of which are Grand Lake, 20 m. long by about 5 m. broad and Washademoak Lake, about 30 m. long by 2 m. broad, both lying between St. John and Fredericton. Along the shores of Chaleur Bay and the Gulf of St. Lawrence, gray sandstone and gray clay slate predominate, with detached rocks of granite, quartz, and ironstone on the S coast, limestone graywacke, clay slate, with sandstone, interrupted occasionally by gneiss, trap, and granite. Specimens of amethyst, carnelian, Jasper &c. have been picked up in various places. Coal is plentiful, and iron-ore abundant, the former is said to extend over 10,000 sq. m., or above one-third part of the whole area of the province. Copper and manganese also abound. A large deposit of the former has been discovered on the banks of the Nepisiguit river which falls into Reiburn Bay and another of plumbago, within ½ m. of St. John. The supply of the latter is said to be inexhaustible, the surface of the earth being, for 8 m. coated with it. Gypsum limestone, freestone, and granitoides abound. Salt springs, strongly saturated, are numerous and some sulphureous springs have also been discovered. The climate of New Brunswick, like other portions of the N American continent, is subject to the extremes of heat and cold, the thermometer sometimes rising to 100° Fahr. during the day and falling in the forest, during the night of the same day, to 60°. The severest cold of the winter usually continues from December 21 to March 21. The prevailing summer winds are from the W S W and S, when from the S W, dense fogs are often produced on the shores of the Bay of Fundy, and stretch 1½ m. to 20 m. inland. In the interior, the climate is said to have been greatly ameliorated, in consequence of the clearing away of the forests, by which the sun's rays are permitted to reach the surface of the earth, where the heat thus absorbed is again diffused by radiation. It is stated, as a result of this process, that the winters are reduced to nearly half their former duration. The climate is, on the whole healthy, and the autumn, as in other parts of the N American continent, is a season of exceeding beauty, the air being dry and clear, and the woods glowing with innumerable tints of the richest and most brilliant hues.

The chief vegetable product of New Brunswick is timber, of which there is the usual variety found in N American forests but the pine is the chief timber exported. Indian corn is grown in the S. parts of the province flax, wheat, and other cereals, and good potatoes are raised. The wheat of New Brunswick is of the very best quality, and is said to be much heavier than that of the U States. Turbidity cultivation has been introduced, of late years, with great success. The great extent of its coast, with its numerous deep bays, coves, and inlets, affords great scope for the pursuit of the fishing trade, which has not, however been pursued with the vigour its importance merits the colonists having, in this respect, allowed themselves to be outstripped by the fishermen of the U States, whose vessels, employed in the deep-sea fishing, greatly exceed in number those belonging to the inhabitants of New Brunswick. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent, chiefly at St. John. The principal articles of export are fish, iron, salt fish-wood, seals, hatters, planks, boards, shingles staves, timber, and other sorts of wood, amounting in 1863 to $208 440 of which $238,298 were timber. Imports beef pork, beer ale books brass and copper manufactures, bread biscuit, cider, coffee, copper, cordage corn, grain wheat-flour Indian and other meal cotton linen, silk, and other manufactures, earthenware, fishing tackle glassware gunpowder, haberdashery, hardware, hemp, hides raw leather, medicines oil, iron, muslin, paint, paper, rice soap, rum spirits, sugar tallow tea, wool to hacco wines, &c., to the amount, in 1863 of 21,291 604 of which 2260 704 were for British textile fabrics, and 287 902 for British iron.

The chief part of the inhabitants of New Brunswick are British settlers, and their descendants. There are a few inhabitants of French stock who are principally settled on the Bay of Chaleur, and there is a small number of Micmacs, Malisees, and other Indians in the N part of the province. New Brunswick is divided into 13 counties in each of which are several schools—grammar and parish. The Church of England the Established and Free churches of Scotland, Reformed Presbyterians, Wesleyan Methodist, Baptist, Congregationalist, and R. Catholic churches, are all more or less extensively represented. The affairs of the province are administered by a Lieutenant-governor aided by an executive council consisting of eight members, a legislative council, of 17 members and a house of assembly, of 80 representatives of the people. The judicial department comprises a supreme court, with a chief and three puisne judges, a court of chancery, one of marriage and divorce, and one for the trial of offences committed at sea, over these three courts the lieutenant-governor presides. New Brunswick was first settled by the French in 1639 and it continued, along with Nova Scotia, to form part of Acadia or New France, till it fell into the hands of the British, after the conquest of Quebec. The first British settlers in New Brunswick emigrated from Scotland to Miramichi, in 1764 and, in 1784, New Brunswick was separated from Nova Scotia, and formed into a distinct province. In 1836, the standing timber in the district around Miramichi Bay took fire and enveloped an area of 9000 sq. m. in flames, consuming four thriving towns, many large vessels lying in Miramichi river and destroying 500 human beings. Pop. (1861) 282 047.

NEW BRUNSWICK, a N U States, New Jersey on the Karitan which here becomes navigable, the Delaware and Karitan canal, and the New Jersey railroad 39 m. S. N. New York. It consists of an oblong portion situated on a flat along the bank of the river and composed of narrow, crooked streets, and of a more modern portion, occupying a desolity, regularly and sparsely built, and presenting a handsome appearance, many of the houses being surrounded with gardens, and commanding beautiful views. The principal buildings are Rutgers college, possessed of a library of 10,000 volumes, and attended by about 60 students the theological seminary of the Dutch Reformed Church, with a library of 7000 volumes, and 24 students; nine churches, several schools, a courthouse, and jail. The manufacturing establishments include nine saw mills, and the trade of the port, which admits vessels of 1000 tons, is considerable. Pop. (1850) 7381 (1850) 15,587.

NEW CALEDONIA, see CALEDONIA (New)

NEW ENGLAND, the name commonly given to the N E. portion of the U States, comprising the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut.

NEW GALLOWAY, Scotland. see GALLOWAY (New)

NEW GRANADA, S America. see GRANADA (New)

NEW GUINEA, in the Pacific Ocean. see PAPUA.

NEW HAMPSHIRE, U. States. See HAMPSHIRE (New).
NEW HANOVER, an isl., S Pacific Ocean, near lat. 3° 50' S., and lon 150° E.; to the N W of Fagua, and separated from New Ireland, on the E., by a narrow channel. It is still very imperfectly known but, according to Tuzman, stretches, W to E., for about 80 m. The surface is elevated, and well covered with trees.

NEW HANOVER, a tract of territory, W coast, British N America, belonging to the Hudson's Bay Company, lat. 50° 30' N. to 64° 00' N.; and bounded, N by the Russian possessions, and S. Vancouver's Island. The coast is lined by an immense collection of islands, of all shapes and dimensions, and penetrated by arms of the sea, and deep creeks, so as to form a complete chain of island navigation. The Babine, Nene, and Skikuna, are the only streams of any navigable importance, though they can only be ascended to a short distance, and not without considerable difficulty and danger. The prevalence of W winds makes the climate at once extremely moist and mild, so that, even in the coldest months, the natives use very little clothing. They subsist chiefly by fishing, but also considerable inclination for agriculture, and, being of more sedentary habits than the Indians E. of the mountains, have made more progress in some of the rudimentary arts. One remarkable feature in their social system, is the prevalence of slavery. About one-third of the whole native population are in this degraded state, being either prisoners taken in war or their descendants. They are as much their masters property as dogs, and being treated accordingly are in the most helpless and abject condition.

NEW HAVEN, a seaport tn., U. States, one of the caps. of Connecticut, on a bay of same name in Long Island Sound, 72 m. N. E. New York, on the railway to Boston lat. 41° 18' 35" N. lon. 72° 56' 45" W. It occupies a large and beautiful plain, sloping gently toward the shore, and surrounded, on three sides, by spurs of the Green Mountain range. It is very regularly built, has spacious streets, a central square, almost all lined with noble elms, and a beautiful public park, finely planted. Among its public buildings are 23 churches, many of them handsome; a Jewish synagogue, a large and imposing statehouse. Yale college, occupying a large range of buildings, with a handsome front towards the park, attended by about 428 students in theology, law, medicine, and science, and possessed of a library of 51,000 volumes, a valuable museum, picture gallery, and other collections; two lycums and various other superior seminaries of education; a state hospital and a beautiful cemetery. The manufactures consist chiefly of carriages, clocks, leather hardware, and cutlery machinery, &c. and the trade, both coasting and foreign, is very extensive. Unfortunately the harbour, though spacious, is shallow, and gradually filling up, but the evil has been so far remedied by the construction of a long wharf, which, to obtain deep water has been carried up nearly 1 m. In 1850 the total tonnage of the district was 15,781 tons. Above two-thirds of the vessels are coasters. Pop. (1850) 16,180 (1855), 22,539.

NEW HOLLAND See AUSTRALIA

NEW JERSEY, U. States See JERSEY (New).
NEW LIBBON, a vil. U. States, Ohio, N. side of the Middle Fork of the Little Beaver and on the Sandy and Beaver canal, lat. 40° 42' N. lon. 80° 40' W. It has a courthouse, a jail and six churches, and near it are various mills, and other factories. Pop. 8000.

NEW LONDON, a city, U. States, Connecticut, on the Thames, 8 m. from its entrance into Long Island Sound 42 m. N. E. New Haven, lat. 41° 23' N. lon. 73° 6' W. It is situated on a declivity; is in general, very indifferently built; but some of the recently-erected houses are sufficiently handsome. It contains the county buildings, several places of public worship, and is connected with New York by a daily line of steamers. The harbour, which is the best in the state, and one of the best in the Union, has a depth of 30 ft., and is safe and commodious, it is defended by two forts; and there is a lighthouse, on a projecting point of land, which divides the harbour from Long Island Sound, 3 m. below the city. The foreign trade of New London is chiefly with the W. Indies, and its coasting trade with the S. States. The fisheries, and especially the whale fishery employ a great number of the inhabitants. Pop. (1840) 5619; (1850) 9006.

NEW MEXICO, U. States. See MEXICO (New)

NEW MILLS, a vil. and township, England, co. Dorset, r bank Geyt, 8 m. S. E. E. B. Sealeport. It consists principally of a cluster of houses and factories, which rise, from the brink of the river, to the height of several hundred feet, and extend along the crags and the turnpike road, and has a head some district church, in the pointed style. Primitive and Wesleyan Methodist, Independent, and E. Catholic chapels, several schools; manufacturers of plain and printed cotton goods; blacking-work coal and lead mines. Pop. 4,068.

NEW MOAT par. Walsby, Fombrice 3161 m. P. 232.

NEW ORLEANS, a city and port, U. States, Louisiana, 1 bank and delta of the Mississippi, 100 m. above its mouth, in the Gulf of Mexico, 5 m. S. Lake Pontchartrain, with which it communicates both by water and railway and 980 m. S. W. Washington lat. 30° 57' 30" N.; lon 90° W. Its position giving it the command of the traffic of one of the largest and most fertile river basins in the world, naturally marks it out as a great commercial emporium, but in several other respects subjects it to serious disadvantages. The alluvial flat on which it stands is a mere swamp, so low that it is never more than 9 ft. above, and is usually several feet below the level of the river, from the inundations of which it is only saved by a strong embankment, which follows the windings of the stream for a distance of about 163 m. This embankment, known by the name of the levee, has an average width of about 100 ft. where it fronts the town, which stretches parallel to it for about 5 m., and extends from 1 m. to 2 m. behind it, chiefly in the direction of the lake. The river immediately opposite has a width of 3 m. and a depth of 100 ft. to 180 ft., and sweeping round from the W., first in a N. and then in a N. E. direction, forms a large crescent-shaped curve. The original nucleus of the town situated near the centre of the crescent, is built in the form of a parallelogram, and consists for the most part of narrow streets, lined by houses partly of wood and partly of brick, stuccoed over and ornamented with corbelled balustrades, and balconies, indicating the French and Spanish origin of the settlers who constructed them. St. Charles, in which no ruin plan appears to have been observed extend around this nucleus, but in some of the more modern quarters the better style of building has been adopted, and many of the houses are spacious, regular and handsome. The public squares six in number, constitute one of the most attractive features of the town, affording, in their well planted and tastefully laid-out interior fine shady walks. The shelter which, elsewhere a luxury is here justly considered one of the necessities of life, is not confined to the squares. Several of the streets have planted avenues, and many of the houses have courts or garden plots attached to them, tastefully adorned with trees, shrubs, and flowers.

The public buildings are neither numerous nor very remarkable, and the churches in particular are said to fall far short of the wants of the community. Those of the E. Catholics, who form the great bulk of the population, are 19 in number. The only one particularly deserving of notice, is the cathedral, a large and imposing structure, situated on one side of the Place d'Armes, near the centre of the levee. The Protestant Episcopal churches, three in number, are substantial edifices. Of the churches of other denominations, notice is due to the Methodist church on the corner of Poydras and Carondelet Streets, modelled after the temple of Theseus, at Athens, with the somewhat incongruous addition of a steeple 170 ft. high; and the Second Presbyterian church in Lafayette Square, a handsome structure, with a fine Doric portico. The educational establishments are said to be simple, but are understood to be neither so extensive nor so efficient as those of the larger towns of New England. Besides the public schools and academies, there are several collegiate institutions, and, more especially a university, which was founded in 1849, occupies an extensive central edifice, with two detached wings; and has a complete equipment of professors medical, legal and academic. Other important public buildings and establishments are a branch U. States' mint, which has extensive buildings on the esplanade, and in 1851 coined gold to the amount of $6,984,000 ($1,798,800), almost all from California; the custom-house, which is (1855) in course of erection, from Quincy granite, and promises to be, when completed, a principal ornament of the city as it will certainly be one of the most expensive buildings in the Union, being intended, in addition to the use to which it is specially appropriated, to provide apartments for the U. States courts, and other accommodations for the general government, the old Spanish government-house, in an elegant style, of which the U. States seldom afford a specimen, the object hospital, for which the rather common pre-eminence is claimed of being the greatest fever hospital in the world, the old and new arsenals, the scorehouse and jail. Other buildings, not usually classed as public, though well deserving of notice, are the banks and hotels, the latter especially which are on a scale of almost unparalleled magnificence. The St. Charles, the most splendid of these establishments, whose lofty dome formed one of the most conspicuous objects of the town, and was the station from which the best panoramic view of it could be obtained, having been burned down in 1850, is again rising in renewed splendour, at an estimated cost of $150,000. The cemeteries, too, both from their extent and peculiarity of structure must not be left unnoticed. The soil being completely saturated with moisture, burial underground is never attempted except in the Potter's Field, appropriated as the final resting place of poor and friendless strangers, whose remains, after being there deposited in a pool of water are not infrequently swollen by it, so as to be forced out of their narrow cells, and left to moulder on the surface under the open sky. To avoid similar destruction, the Protestant and St. Catharine cemeteries consist of vaults, with arched apertures, in which the bodies are arranged above each other, tier upon tier, to the height of 19 ft. like the bluffs of a hill. The ground enclosed is divided into plots, intersected by gravel walks, and densely covered with tombs. It thus forms a true city of the dead, but the lesson of mortality which it is so well fitted to impress, seems almost lost on the living masses around, and there is no city of the Union where pleasure is pursued so eagerly and in more questionable forms. Besides the amusements afforded by the theatres—the St. Charles, the Orleans or French, and the American, which furnish accommodation to 4500 persons, and are nightly filled to suffocation—wren races abound in every quarter, a gamblingable in constant request, and much of the Sunday is devoted to bear-fights and bull baiting.

The manufacturing establishments of New Orleans are of limited extent, and may be summed up under the heads of furnaces and foundries, machine-shops, distilleries, sugar-refineries, saw-mills, and tobacco-factories. The trade, though it can hardly be said to have passed its infancy is already vast and is advancing with a rapidity to which it is impossible to assign any limits, as it must evidently keep pace with the development of the resources of the Mississippi basin. The chief obstacles to its increased prosperity are the ravages of fever which recur annually during the months of July, August, and September, when all who have the means leave the city causing an almost complete interruption of business during these three months the want of an adequate system of railways, and the bar at the mouth of the river which had 25 ft. water in 1793, and has now not more than 13 ft. The first obstacle, perhaps the most formidable of all, may be, and indeed has been, considerably modified by drainage, the second has been manfully grappled with, and the railway system, carried out with the spirit with which it has been commenced, promises to bring back much of the trade which had begun to find its way, by longer but easier routes to the ports of the Atlantic, the third has only begun to attract attention, having, in fact, proved less prejudicial than might have been anticipated, in consequence of the general introduction of steam navigation. The immense extent of the trade becomes visible by a single glance at the Lever, where forests of masts, often three tiers deep are seen lining the wharf for more than 2 m., and crowds of flat bottomed boats are seen lying along the sliver banks or levees, after having served the quay, or filled the warehouses with the produce of nearly 20,000 m. of navigation. In the year ending Sept. 1852, the total value of products received from the interior was $108,651,708 (£21,510,343), against $108,524,088 (£21,384,517) of the previous year. In 1853-4 it was $79,235,585, and consisted chiefly of

| | | | | | |
|----------------------|-------|---------|-----------------|-------|---------|
| Cotton | Value | 181,644 | Onco | Value | 22,595 |
| Corn, shelled | Value | 210,138 | Beacon, in bulk | Value | 12,561 |
| Wheat | Value | 40,495 | Beacon, in bulk | Value | 14,055 |
| Wheat, in sheaf | Value | 7,495 | Beef | Value | 53,328 |
| Wool, raw, and shorn | Value | 239 | Ocal | Value | 256,289 |
| Wheat | Value | 286,597 | Slaves | Value | 22,595 |

Vol. 11.

From 2,255 448 bales in 1859-60, the receipts of cotton at New Orleans sank to 33 078 bales in 1862-3 and the price rose from 3c per lb in 1855-6 to 85c. in 1868-9.

New Orleans was founded by the French in 1717, and named after the duke, then regent of France. It was shortly after abandoned but having been again settled in 1723, began to prosper. By treaty in 1763, it was ceded to Spain, along with all Louisiana W. of the Mississippi and, notwithstanding the change, and considerable opposition to it manifested by the inhabitants, continued to make good progress. In 1801, Bonaparte, among the other concessions extracted from Spain insisted on that of Louisiana but had no sooner obtained it than he was satisfied that he could not retain the possession, and endeavoured to make the most of the acquisition by selling it to the U. States. At this time (1803) its population was 8000. In 1804, it was made a port of entry, and in 1805, was incorporated. It afterwards became the capital of Louisiana, but was deprived of this honour in 1849. The most important event in its more recent history is the attempt made upon it, in 1815, by the British, under Sir E. Pakenham, and their defeat by the American troops, under General Jackson. Pop (1850) 119 461 (1860) 168 675.

NEW PHILIPPINES. See CAROLINE ISLANDS.
NEW PLYMOUTH, a settlement, New Zealand. See PLYMOUTH (New).

NEW PROVIDENCE, the most important of the Bahamas Islands, between Eleuthera and Andros, lat. 25° 5' 30" N., lon. 77° 21' 15" W. (s). It is 17 m. long, E to W, greatest breadth which is in the middle, 7 m. It is mostly flat, and covered with brushwood and extensive lagoons. A range of hilly rocks runs along part of the island, at a very short distance from the sea, E. and W. Another ridge, called the Blue Hills, runs in a direction nearly parallel with the former, and about 2½ m. distance. On the N. side of the island is the harbour and town of Nassau, the former nearly landlocked, fit for vessels drawing 12 ft. or 15 ft. water, and sheltered on the N. by Hog Island. The town, which extends over a rather steep acclivity, is well laid out, the streets spacious and airy and the houses handsome. It is the seat of government of the Bahamas and has a considerable trade the principal exports being cotton, pimento, and salt, for which it receives lumber from New Brunswick, and British manufactures from England. The Americans bring lumber and provisions, and the Spaniards dollars. The British take off the cotton and dye-woods of the island, and the Spanish money the Americans, salt and wreck goods and the Spaniards, British manufactures. Up to, 5000 New Providence was colonized by the English in 1699, but they were expelled by the Spaniards in 1641. It subsequently fell again into the hands of the English, and was again taken by the Spaniards, but was eventually restored to the former at the peace of 1783.

NEW QUAY, a small seaport, Wales, co. and on the Bay of Cardigan 15 m. W N W Lampeter. It is inhabited chiefly by seafaring persons and has a harbour which affords good anchorage to small, and might easily be improved so as to admit large vessels, a valuable fishery, and an annual fair. About 70 vessels, of 40 to 50 tons, belong to the port.

NEW SOUTH SHETLAND. See SHETLAND (New South).

NEW SOUTH WALES, a colony of Great Britain, forming the whole of the S E part of Australia, stretching along the S. Pacific Ocean, from Hervey Bay in lat. 26°, to Cape Howe, lat. 37° 31' S. and W with varying breadth to lon. 146° E, length, N to S above 1000 m. breadth, above 500 m. area, roughly estimated, 500 000 sq m. This immense territory is at present divided into 38 counties, and sundry unquarantined districts. The latter are scarcely to be said to be all occupied, and even of the former not more than 20, extending from lat. 32° to 36° S., and lon. 146° 30' E., can be considered regularly settled. The surface is much diversified, and presents in its general features, a succession of hills and valleys, mountains and plains. A mountain range, varying in height from 3000 ft. to 6000 ft., extends from N. to S. nearly parallel to the coast, at the distance of from 80 m. to 50 m. inland and takes, in the N., the name of Liverpool Range, in the centre, that of the Blue Mountains; and in the S. that of the Australian Alps. The intervening space between the mountains and the sea is partly broken by spurs and reman-ations, but descends from the W with more or less rapidly, and has a generally undulating surface, intersected by water-courses. In some places well wooded, and in others covered with dense brushwood.

The coast-line proceeds, in general bold perpendicular cliffs of sandstone, in horizontal strata. Occasionally the cliffs are interrupted by low sandy beaches, some of which stretch to a considerable distance inland and appear to have been covered by the sea at no very remote period. The indentations of the coast are more remarkable for their number, and the excellent harbours which they form, than for the space which they occupy. Harvey Bay in the N, the far largest, is scarcely within the limits of the colony. Next to it is Morston Bay formed between the mainland and Moreton and Stradbroke, the two largest islands of the colony. Five degrees of latitude, proceeding from N to S, are now passed over without meeting with any remarkable opening; but immediately thereafter, beginning at Port Stephens, a succession of noble natural harbours occurs, some of them already forming and the greater part of them destined sooner or later to become great commercial emporiums. The most conspicuous are Port Hunter, Port Macquarie, Broken Bay, Port Jackson, Botany Bay, Jervis Bay, Bassett Haven, and Twofold Bay. The mountain ranges already described form the great water-shed of the colony, but the ground on the W., instead of descending rapidly, continues rugged and mountainous for a considerable width, and at last assumes the form of an elevated plateau, the greater part of which remains unexplored. Several considerable rivers, taking their rise in the W side of the mountains, are seen flowing westward, but having only the early part of their course in the colony of New South Wales do not properly belong to it. From S. to N. the more important are the Macintyre and its tributaries, Lachlan, which both join the Murray; the Bogan, Macquarie, and Peel, apparently affluents of the Darling and the Condamine, which, though at first seen flowing N. afterwards winds round to the W. and probably belongs also to the Darling. The comparatively narrow space intervening between the mountains and the Pacific, leaves little room for the development of large rivers. Many of them are, for the great part of the year, either altogether dry or form in fact, rather a succession of deep ponds or water-holes than continuous streams. The slowest flowing of water, for their length, or their locality are the Hunter, which falls into the sea part of that name at Newcastle, and is navigable for 50 m. above its mouth by small craft of 80 to 40 tons; the Hawkesbury, which falls into Broken Bay and is navigable by vessels of 100 tons, as far as Windsor a distance of 140 m., the Parramatta, important only as giving a navigable communication into Sydney Cove, the George, which has its mouth in Botany Bay and is navigable by small vessels to Liverpool, a distance of 24 m. the Shoalhaven navigable for 20 m. for vessels of 70 to 80 tons the Clyde, which falls into Macquarie's Bay lat. 35° 45' S. and is described as a fine, clear, open space of water with 6 ft. water on the bar, and a depth within of 7 fathoms and in the N., the Hastings, which falls into Port Macquarie after a course of about 100 m. and the Clarence, which falls into Beal Bay lat. 29° 30' S., is remarkable for its great breadth and large volume of water compared with most Australian streams, and navigable for large steamers for a considerable distance, and by small craft for nearly 80 m.

Geology and Minerals.—As a general rule, the prevailing rock on the E. side of the mountains is sandstone, and on the W. granite. Above the granite, quartz and gneiss are seen forming their way to the surface and overtopping them; greenstone and porphyry often form lofty summits. Hence on Mount Kosciuszko in the S.W. granite forms a base 3000 ft. above sea-level while gneiss and quartz attain an additional height of 4500 ft., making the whole elevation of this mount, which seems to be the culminating point of the chain, 6500 ft. On the same mount, mica schist, and chlorite and argillaceous slates are seen heaved up into a position almost vertical, while in other places the strata, though evidently upheaved, remain nearly horizontal. In the N., where the strata follow the course of the Liverpool Range, greenstone in some places itself lies here and there peaks to the height of 4500 ft. Further S., at Cullenbulla, lat. 32° 20' S., the chain becomes granite, but soon of towards the S. a very remarkable basaltic spur, which has thrown the sedimentary rocks into the wildest confusion, and produced frightful rents and gorges; through one of which, forming a perpendicular wall of sandstone nearly 1500 ft. in height, the Ganges flows its way. It is remarkable, that, notwithstanding the numerous indications of tremendous volcanic agency in almost every mountain district, no active volcano is known to exist in New South Wales, unless we are to give the name to the very extraordinary phenomena exhibited by Mount Wingan, situated near the sources of Hunter's river. It consists of a mass of sandstone, from 1400 ft. to 1500 ft. high, and since 1816, when it was first discovered, and probably from a much earlier period, has been in a state of active ignition, kept up by the spontaneous combustion of some unextinguished fragments of fuel within. In connection with the granite, limestone, both granular and foliated, occurs in abundance, and besides being often hollowed out into stalactitic caverns, sometimes passes into a beautiful close-grained marble, as white as that of Carrara. This limestone is most extensively developed on the Upper and Lower Hunter and between Wellington and Mount Connelton. In some places it becomes of a jet-black colour, traversed by white veins and at others, becomes finely variegated. Much of the sandstone belongs to the carboniferous system, and is accompanied with workable seams of excellent coal. One field, to which the name of Newcastle has been appropriately given, is said to vie in quality with that which has made the English Newcastle so famous, and contains no fewer than five seams—two of 5 ft. and three of 3 ft. in thickness. This field is actually worked to some extent by the Australian Agricultural Company. Other fields, equally valuable, are known or believed on good grounds to exist and moreover, give indications of containing abundance of iron-ore, which may yet be turned to good account. Copper-ore, of the richest quality, has been found in such abundance, that the veins are believed to extend in every direction over many miles of the Wellington districts, and one high hill presents indications of being one solid mass of metal. Numerous varieties of fine pebbles are found in many districts, and are so abundant in Hunter's river that it is said to flow for a considerable distance over rocks of jasper, beautiful agates, opal, and chalcidony. All these minerals, however, though valuable, have recently been thrown into the shade by the discovery (May, 1851) of extensive deposits, which, from the great number of cases in which, gold has already been discovered, indicate its existence, in greater or less quantities, over the whole colony—in the S. the centre, and the N. In the S. not far from the frontiers of Victoria, a cluster of localities occurs, particularly in coe Wellesley and Wallace, including among those of the latter, that of the E. base of Mount Kosciuszko. Proceeding N. we meet with it in coe. Beresford, Dampier, St. Vincent, Argyle, King, Murray and Cowley towards the centre, it occurs in coe. Georgiana and Ashburton, and more especially over a tract which appears to stretch almost continuously from the N of the latter co. across that of Wellington, where it is found chiefly along the banks of the Macquarie and its tributary, Macrae. A considerable black now occurs, owing perhaps not so much to the non-abundance of the metal as to the imperfection of the search which has been made for it, but, on reaching the sources of the Peel River, on the frontiers of Brisbane, a large surface tract occurs, chiefly along the banks of that river and its tributaries, in coe Parry and Vermont, whilst isolated spots are seen as far as the N. limits of the colony extend. The actual quantity of gold hitherto found within the proper limits of the colony cannot be accurately ascertained, but the amount of gold exported from Sydney, which is to be presumed, from New South Wales, though partly else from Victoria, was, up to Jan. 30, 1853 estimated at 25,570,106.

Climate.—The position of New South Wales makes it assume the very reverse of those of Britain, the month of January being its midsummer, and that of July its dead of winter. The average annual temperature is 64°, that of spring being 65° 8' of summer, 73° of autumn, 66°, and of winter, 56°. It thus appears that the annual average range of the thermometer does not exceed 17°. It is obvious, however, that by ascending from the coast to the higher mountain summits, almost every variety of climate may be obtained. The air in general is remarkably elastic and soft, and instances of great longevity are not uncommon

At Sydney, no fewer than 244 days are fine, and only 48 are rainy. It would seem, however, that when rain does fall it descends in almost continuous torrents, and that hence, while the annual fall is only 23.19 inches at London, it exceeds 62 inches at Port Jackson, and 63 inches at Port Macquarie. The prevailing winds at Sydney are N.E. S.W. and W. Of these, the most annoying are the siroccos or hot W. winds, which are supposed to originate in the central deserts, and raise the temperature to such an intensity that the thermometer in the shade stands at 117° or 120°. When continuing for any length of time, their scorching influence is soon made apparent. The grass leaves turn yellow, the grass becomes dry like hay, the red and blue grapes shrivel up and lose their colour, and the most promising harvest is frequently ruined. It is said, however, that these hot winds, being free from deleterious gases, have no injurious effect on human health.

Vegetation, &c.—For the peculiar productions of the vegetable and animal kingdom see AUSTRALIA. The soil, where the substratum is sandstone, has more or less of a clayish texture, where the substratum is whinstone, it is invariably a light black mould. Of the natural fertility of both varieties of soil there cannot be a doubt. Many crops have been taken in succession without manure, and without any apparent diminution of productive power, and though this must obviously be the exception rather than the rule, it is stated, on good authority, that when a proper system of husbandry is pursued, the average produce of wheat per acre, on good soils, is from 20 to 30 bushels, each weighing from 60 to 65 lb., and in some districts, 40 to 50 bushels, that of maize, from 40 to 70 bushels; and that of potatoes, not only equally abundant, but doubled, by two crops being obtained in a year. The fruits of native growth are neither numerous nor valuable, but the best of those of Europe have long been acclimated, and are everywhere seen in abundance. So well does the peach thrive, that farmers sometimes feed their pigs with the windfalls of their orchards and even the fatigue and thirst of the traveller through the forest has often been relieved by the produce of peach-trees grown from stones, probably dropped by birds. In the more southern parts of the colony; the fruits include apples, pears, peaches, apricots, nectarines, cherries, plums, oranges, figs, grapes, melons, mulberries, gooseberries, currants, &c. and in the more northern parts the banana is so commonly cultivated. Some of these fruits are evidently capable of being turned to good account, and accordingly the rearing of silk-worms on the mulberry, which might be carried to an almost indefinite extent, has attracted attention, and the vine, in 1849, was actually under culture on 887 acres, the produce from which was 97,300 gals. of wines of good quality strongly resembling Banterre, Barrea, Mock, Clare, &c., and 1163 gals. brandy. This culture, which is yet in its infancy, is rapidly extending, and promises to become one of the most important interests of the colony. But at present, the principal revenue is obtained from the pasture, chiefly in the form of wool and tallow. The almost unprecedented increase of live stock appears from the fact, that the number of horses, horned cattle, and sheep, which, in 1825, were respectively 6142, 184,519, and 337,322, had so increased, in 1848, as to be respectively 118,895, 1,759,559, and 11,660,819. In the same year, the number of swine was, 70,875. The great increase of horses is partly owing to a demand for cavalry and horse artillery in the East Indies, where the horses of the colony are found well suited for the trying climate. Horned cattle also are largely exported, and considerable attention has recently been paid to the curing of animal food. The quantity of wool exported from New South Wales, in 1828, was 534,348 lb.; and in 1848, 22,963,711 lb., valued at £1,340,144. In 1848, the tallow, obtained chiefly by what is called the boiling down system, was 5690 cwts., valued at £2689; and in 1848, 96,218 cwt., valued at £140,579. Cotton has already been grown to a limited extent, and there cannot be a doubt but that both it and tobacco might be cultivated in many districts. The only manufacture which has yet made much progress is that of leather, which, in 1848, employed 39 tanneries, and workers, of which 175,088 yards were sewn in 1847. The whale and seal fisheries, though somewhat diminished of late years, still form one of the great interests of the colony, and in 1848 amounted in value to £26,200.

Government, &c.—By the Act 13 and 14 Vict. c. 59, passed in 1850, Fort Phillip, which formerly depended on New South Wales, was created into a separate colony, under the name of Victoria and Independent Legislature established in both. This Act in regard to New South Wales provides, that the Legislative Council shall consist of such a number of members, as the governor and council shall determine, of which members, one-third shall be nominated by the Crown, and two-thirds by the male inhabitants, natural born or naturalised British subjects, 21 years of age, and qualified by residence, for at least six months within the several districts in which they vote, and either the possession of a freehold of the clear value of £100, or of a leasehold estate of which three years are unexpired worth £10, or the occupancy of a dwelling house of the same value. A House to pasture within the district also gives a vote. The governor and legislative council are empowered to make laws within the colony, not repugnant to the laws of Great Britain and to appropriate the whole of the revenues arising from taxes, duties, fees, &c., but are not to interfere with the lands belonging to the Crown, nor their revenues, nor to appropriate any sum of money to the public service, unless previously recommended by the governor. The constitution thus established may be regarded more as an experimental than as a permanent arrangement; inasmuch as a clause in the Act empowers the governor and legislative council, with the assent of the Crown, not merely to change the qualifications of members and electors, but to suppress the legislative council and transfer its powers to a council and a house of representatives or other legislative houses.

People.—Since the first establishment of the colony in 1787, the number of convicts sent into it from Great Britain up to 1840 when the importation ceased, was 64,393. This number appears to include Vanuatu as well as New South Wales. In 1848 the whole population was 165,541. Assuming that, at this period, one-half of the convicts had died, their number would be 32,190 or about one-sixth of the whole. Since 1845 it may be assumed that one-third of the convicts then existing had died and that at present the actual number does not exceed 19,000, while the estimated population of the two colonies is at least 250,000; in other words, the number of actual convicts at present is only one-fourteenth of the whole population. In this way the evil will gradually work itself out, and society become purged of a very noxious ingredient. It must still, however, be admitted, that a large proportion of the population, though not convicts, are descendants of convicts, and it is not to be presumed, that persons so unfavourably situated can have enjoyed the benefit of that moral and religious training, in the absence of which good men and subjects cannot reasonably be expected. It is pleasing, however, to see that contracting causes are visibly at work, and that with a rapidly increasing population, both the number and the atrocity of crimes are diminishing. In 1839, capital punishment was inflicted in 52, and in 1848, only in 9 instances. In 1839, the convicted felonies amounted to 768, and in 1848 to only 458. Much of the improvement is probably due to more physical causes, the abundant supply of the necessities of life extinguishing many of the strongest incentives to crime in older and more densely peopled countries; but much of it is also due to the enlightened efforts which have been made to communicate instruction, and awaken or strengthen religious impressions. The number of public or free schools, in 1848, was 161, attended by 11,968 scholars, and of private schools in the Sydney district alone 228, attended by 5718 scholars. It appears, however, that additional educational efforts are urgently demanded, as, in 1846, the number of persons between the ages of 6 and 21 who could not read, was 56,603, and above 21, 21,405, making a total of 88,008, or nearly one-fifth of the then existing population. According to the census of 1851, New South Wales contained 106,230 males, and 81,014 females making a total of 187,244, or, classified according to religious belief—

| | | | |
|--------------------|---------|-----------------------|--------|
| Church of England | 95,187 | 3 Catholics | 88,690 |
| Church of Scotland | 18,156 | 100 Unitarians | 89 |
| Western Methodists | 10,008 | Methodists and Pagans | 743 |
| Other Protestants | 6,479 | Other protestants | 740 |
| | 177,775 | | 56,670 |

History.—In 1770, Captain Cook, after sailing round the E coast of Australia, landed on a low swampy creek, to which, from the number of plants found in it, he gave the names of Botany Bay while to the whole coast along which he had sailed, he gave the name of New South Wales, from a fancied resemblance in its physical features to that part of Britain. The name thus given continued to be applied vaguely, but has now been accurately defined by recent Acts. In 1788, Capt. Arthur Phillip, the first governor, arrived and cast anchor in Botany Bay, having with him 757 convicts. The colony at first suffered much from scarcity of provisions, and afterwards, more from mismanagement, more especially from the tyrannical conduct of Governor Bligh, who proved himself still more unfit for his new office than for the command of the Bounty; and at last so exasperated the colonists, that in 1808 they rose en masse, deposed him from his office, and placed him under arrest. He was fortunately succeeded by Governor Macquarie, a man of a very different stamp, during whose active and enlightened administration of 12 years, the colony made rapid progress. The most important events in its history since, are the termination of the introduction of convicts in 1840, the establishment of representative institutions in 1843, the creation of Victoria into a separate colony, and an improved legislative act for both colonies in 1850, the important discovery in May 1851 of extensive auriferous tracts, by which a new era in the history of the colony has commenced and both its wealth and population promise to be indefinitely increased and the establishment of direct steam communication with Great Britain, in 1862.

NEW YEARS ISLAND—1 N coast, Australia lat. 10° 55' S. lon. 133° 5' E. (a) 4 m or 5 m. in circum.—2 Two small isles, E. coast Australia lat. 13° 40' S. lon. 143 48' E. (a)

N Y YORK, one of the U States of N America lat. 30° 30' to 45° N. lon. 71° 56' to 79° 56' W, bounded N by Canada the St. Lawrence, and Lake Ontario W Canada and Lake Erie S Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and the Atlantic, and E Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Vermont. Exclusive of Long Island, it is 230 m. long, by 212 m. broad and has, including it, an area of 46 085 sq m. The surface, in the N.E. is traversed by several mountain ranges from New Jersey, one of which crossing the Hudson, presents a bold and rocky front on both banks, and forms magnificent scenery. The Catskill mountains have the greatest average height, and in Round Top attain 5084 ft. but the culminating point is Mount Marcy which belongs to the Adirondack range, and has a height of 5467 ft. This range, situated in the N.E. of the state is the watershed between Lake Champlain and the St. Lawrence and Lake Ontario. In the W the large tract extending between Lake Ontario on the N, and Pennsylvania on the S, is generally level Few states can boast of being better watered. In addition to the St. Lawrence and the Niagara, which it shares with Canada and the Delaware which it shares with Pennsylvania, it has exclusive possession of the Hudson, which pursues its whole course of above 300 m within the state, and for at least half this distance is available for navigation. The lakes are developed still more magnificently than the rivers, but belong, in common, to other states and territories. Besides these, however, numerous minor lakes are diffused over the interior, and not only enhance the beauties of the scenery, but often form a kind of elastic easy connected by canals and railways so as to afford peculiar facilities for transport. Among these are Lake George, communicating with Lake Champlain, 37 m. long, from 1 to 7 m. broad, and studded with above 300 beautiful islands—Cayuga and Seneca each 40, Oneida and Crooked each 23, Chautauque 18, Skaneateles 15, and Canandaigua 14 m. in length. To these water-thoroughfares of the interior, must be added the not less important communications with the Atlantic along the coasts of Long Island, which forms a dependency of the state and the noble bay and harbour of New York. The climate, much modified by local circumstances, is somewhat variable, but, with some local exceptions, very healthy. In Albany, the annual range of the thermometer is 118° in Rochester, 98°, and in New York city, 88°. The soil is, in general, of only indifferent fertility, and notwithstanding the skill and industry with which it is cultivated, does not yield very productive returns. Deficiency of quality, however, is partially compensated by freedom of quality. The largest crops are oats, Indian corn, and wheat. Potatoes and flax are grown to some extent and much attention is paid to the rearing of stock, both for feeding and for dairy purposes. The minerals are more numerous than valuable. Iron, lead, copper, and slate, are mined to a limited extent, and quarries of marble, granite, freestone, and gypsum, have been opened in many districts. The mineral springs of Saratoga and Ballston are the most celebrated in America. Manufacturers have made great progress, and give constant employment to numerous establishments, which almost all the articles of necessity, comfort, and luxury, known to civilization, are made. Among the more important are flour, leather, spirits, agricultural implements, engines and machines, woollen, cotton, and silk goods, &c. The foreign trade is so extensive as to amount to rather more than a third of the whole carried on by the U States. The progress of the trade of the state since 1846 is shown in the following Table —

TOTAL VALUE OF THE EXPORTS AND IMPORTS OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK in each of the following Years

| Year. | Value of Exports. | Value of Imports. | Year. | Value of Exports. | Value of Imports. |
|-------|-------------------|-------------------|-------|-------------------|-------------------|
| 1846 | 7,809,577 | 15,450,013 | 1850 | 10,981,591 | 25,160,784 |
| 1847 | 10,894,342 | 17,563,980 | 1851 | 17,016,126 | 29,683,928 |
| 1848 | 11,114,826 | 18,963,787 | 1852 | 25,043,296 | 40,490,501 |
| 1849 | 9,734,645 | 19,304,508 | 1853 | 32,137,870 | 58,203,268 |

The shipping employed in this vast traffic amounted in 1861 to 5115 vessels (2,509 749 tons) entered, and 4767 vessels (2,424 534 tons) cleared the American vessels numbering 2744 (1,532 176 tons) and 2703 (1,370 415 tons) respectively. The internal trade is also of great importance though its amount cannot be ascertained with any approach to accuracy. It is carried on chiefly by canals and railroads in conjunction with the Hudson, and may be said to embrace the whole valley of the Mississippi. The great trunk canal at that of Erie, between Albany and Buffalo and connected with so many lateral branches, that the whole length cannot be estimated at less than 1000 m. The principal railroads are the Hudson River railroad, and the New York, Harlem, and Albany railroad. Both of these communicate between the Atlantic and the town of Albany, from which branch lines diverge N to E into Massachusetts and Vermont W to Buffalo, with branches to the St. Lawrence and Lake Ontario, and S. to the New York and Erie railroad. Amidst all these means of transit that of common turnpikes has not been forgotten. These are so numerous, so judiciously laid out, and so carefully kept, that no state in the Union can boast of being better supplied. Among religious denominations, the Protestant Episcopal which, previous to the revolution, was the established church, still continues to be the wealthiest and most influential, though in respect of adherents it is outnumbered by several other bodies. Of these, the largest are the E. Catholics, who claim about one-fourth of the whole population; the Episcopal Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians (O. S.), Presbyterians (N. S.) Universalists, Quakers, Unitarians, Dutch and German churches, &c. For the higher branches of education provision has been made, chiefly by Union college, Schenectady, New York university and Columbia college, New York, Madison university, Hamilton, Hamilton college, Clinton, and St. John's college, Fortson. Common education is provided by dividing the whole state into organized public school districts, which, in 1850, amounted to 11 897 and were supported at an expense of $263,538. In connection with these schools, in many of which education is free, are two normal schools and a teacher's institute for each county and in addition to them are 1697 private schools, attended by 70,808 pupils. The legislature consists of a Senate and Assembly—the former, 33 in number, elected for two years, and the latter 126 in number, elected annually. The suffrage belongs to every white male citizen of 21 years of age, and may also be exercised by coloured citizens possessing a freehold of £50 value and resident for three years. Albany is the capital, though New York is the most important city of the state, and the great entrepot for the foreign trade. New York is believed to have been first discovered by Hendrick Hudson, an English navigator in the service of the Dutch West India Company. A Dutch colony was settled at Fort Orange, now Albany, in 1614; and the following year, on the E. point of the island of Manhattan, some fortifications, the original nucleus of New York, were erected, and called New Amsterdam. The whole territory claimed by the Dutch, was of great and indefinite extent, and received the name of New Netherlands. The English disputed the claim, and finally expelled the Dutch in 1674. During the war with the French, the country was laid almost desolate by the ravages of war and the incursions of Indians; but the peace of Paris, which gave Canada to the British, enabled the inhabitants to repair their disasters. New York took a distinguished part in the revolution, and was the scene of some of its severest struggles. Pop (1850) 8,027,884 of whom 47,987 were coloured persons, (1860) 8,680,785.

NEW YORK a famous seaport, U. States, America, and, in respect both of population and commerce, the first city on the American Continent. Lat. (City Hall) 40° 43' 40" N, and lon. 74 1° 5' W 205 m. N F Washington, and which lie Ellis, Governor's, Bedloe's, and Oyster islands. This bay, forming what is called the inner harbour, has water deep enough to admit the largest vessels to the city wharves, and excellent anchorage, in which the united navies of the world might ride in safety. It is approached from the sea in two directions—the N.E., through Long Island Sound and East River, already mentioned; and the S.E., at the point called Sandy Hook. The latter, about 15 m distant from the city, is the great ocean thoroughfare. It has a bar across it on which the water is only 21 ft. at ebb, and 27 ft. at full tide, but within it attains a much greater depth and widens suddenly out into the fine expanse of Harlem Bay, which, affording both complete shelter and good anchorage, is regarded as an outer harbour. Between the two harbours lies Staten Island completely blocking up the communication, except at its W and E sides, along each of which there is a navigable channel. The former leading along the coast of New Jersey is not very much frequented, the latter, being the opening left between the extremities of Staten Island and Long Island, is the main entrance, and having a width which nowhere exceeds two-thirds of a mile it is appropriately distinguished by the name of the Narrows. The admirable facilities which it affords for defending the inner harbour and city from hostile approach by sea have not been overlooked. It is completely commanded by strong forts, two on either island, and even after it is passed, other equally formidable works have to be encountered. These have been constructed on islets of the bay, known by the names of Governor's Bedloe's and Ellis islands. On Governor's Island, in particular, situated only about 1000 yards from the city, are three powerful batteries—one called Fort Columbus, a regular fortification in the form of a star occupying the centre a second called Castle William, situated on its N.W. shore and consisting of a round tower, 800 ft. in diameter, and 50 ft. high, with three tiers of guns; and the third, on the N.E. shore, where it commands the narrow passage, called Buttermilk Channel, which separates it from Long Island.

THE ENVIRONS OF NEW YORK

English Miles
Nautical Miles

157 m. S.W. Boston. It occupies a somewhat low but most advantageous position on the S. part of Manhattan Island, which is about 14 m long by 2 m broad, narrowing to 3 m broad for about 4 m at its N end, the island is separated from the mainland by an arm of the Hudson, called Harlem River which joins the East River or Long Island Sound at Hell Gate. The strait of the Hudson separates Manhattan Island and the city of New York, on the W, from the state of New Jersey and the almost suburban Jersey city and the channel called the East River, communicating with Long Island Sound, separates them, on the E., from the important and suburban towns of Brooklyn and Williamsburg both situated on Long Island, while, on the S., there stretches out a magnificent bay, 8 m. long and 25 m in circuit, in and the sea defences are completed by Fort Schuyler on Throg's Neck, where the East River is entered from Long Island Sound.

Manhattan Island narrows towards its S. extremity, and finally terminates in a kind of parabolic curve, rounded at the Battery and thence continued N along the Hudson, and N.E. along East River. This curve encloses the original nucleus of the city and is still its densest and busiest locality. Having been allowed to grow up as necessity, convenience, or caprice might dictate, it is irregularly, and, on the whole, indifferently built, consisting, for the most part, of narrow winding streets, though by no means destitute of others, which, from their spaciousness and the magnificence of their structures, would do honour to any capital. At Houston

Street, about 12 m. N. of the Battery, the adoption of a regular plan becomes visible, but is at first confined to the E. part of the island where a number of spacious streets, called Avenues, each 100 ft. wide, proceed in parallel lines from S. to N., and are crossed at right angles by a series of smaller streets, sometimes also 100 ft. but in general only 50 ft. wide. Both the Avenues and the transverse streets are designated, not by names but by numbers, as First Avenue, Second Avenue, First Street, Second Street, &c. At 14th Street, the regularity of the plan becomes completely developed, and the whole island beyond it to its N. termination at Harlem River has been marked off in avenues, pointing out, with almost mathematical exactness, the form which the city will assume when it shall have spread over the whole length and breadth of Manhattan Island. This period, notwithstanding the large area still remaining unoccupied, is not very distant; for assuming the rate of increase during the last 30 years as a standard, it has been calculated that the whole island will be completely built over in 1880 and contain a population of 1,500,000. At present (April, 1855), the buildings extend to the 43d Street, a distance of 4 m. from the Battery and particularly in the upper part, are merely to be regarded as suburbs composed, for the most part, of the residences of those who have their places of business within the city proper but, as soon as the work of the day is finished, avail themselves of the facility afforded by railway and omnibus conveyance to escape from its bustle. The main thoroughfare and great boast of New York is its Broadway which, commencing at the Battery proceeds N N E for 2½ m. nearly in a straight line, along the centre and highest ridge of the island, to 10th Street and then, turning westerly due N, terminates at 14th Street, at the entrance to Union Place. It is 80 ft. wide, and with its public buildings, magnificent hotels, elegant mansions, and splendid shops, the carriages moving along its centre, and the gay and busy crowds thronging its side walks, presents at all times a most imposing and animated scene. The other streets particularly deserving of notice are the Bowery situated to the E. and nearly following the direction of Broadway Wall Street, opening from Jobbing and Importing business, Water and Front Streets, occupied chiefly by wholesale grocers and commission-merchants.

The squares and other open spaces available to the citizens for amusement and exercise, are perhaps less numerous and attractive than might be wished, though the general spaciousness of the streets may make them not so indispensable as in most other towns. The most deserving of notice is the Battery, consisting of 11 acres, situated on the S. extremity of Manhattan Island, planted with trees, laid out in gravelled walks, and commanding fine views of the harbour with its shipping, and the adjacent shores of New Jersey Staten Island, and Long Island. On the W. side of the Battery, and connected with it by a bridge, is Castle Garden used for public meetings and exhibitions, and capable of containing 10,000 persons, and in immediate connection with the Battery on the N., is the Bowling-Green, an oval enclosure, surrounded by an iron railing, and adorned in its centre with a fountain and several jets. The Bowling-Green forms an appropriate termination to Broadway. The Park, a triangular enclosure, situated near the centre of the city, and laid out in well planned walks, is surrounded with some of the finest public buildings, and contains a fountain, the water of which, when thrown in a single jet, ascends 70 ft. To these may be added as distinguished more or less by their buildings shady walks, or fountains, St. John's Park in Hudson Square, which, though comparatively small is not surpassed by any other in point of ornament, Washington Square or Parade ground in the N., and Tompkins in the N E Union Square near the N. termination of Broadway, and Gansevoort Park in the same locality. Other squares, as the city continues to extend, are in course of formation. Among them, those of Madison and Hamilton are pre-eminent.

Public Buildings.—The City Hall, occupying a commanding situation in the centre of the Park, presents a combination of the Ionic, Corinthian, and composite orders pilasters of each, rising in regular gradation on its front, and presenting, notwithstanding some appearance of overloading, a very imposing aspect. The rear is of freestone, but the rest of white marble. The access is by a flight of 12 marble steps, from which a double staircase leads to a circular gallery floored with marble and above the whole rises a cupola, on the top of which a colossal statue of Justice has been placed. The extent of the building, 216 ft. long by 105 ft. wide affords ample space for numerous public offices and several fine halls. The finest is the governor's room, the walls of which are hung with the portraits of distinguished patriots. The common council room, also very handsome, possesses an interesting relic in the chair in which Washington sat as president of the first American Congress. Merchants' Exchange, erected on the site of another destroyed by fire in 1835, is a large and massive fire-proof structure of Quincy granite, 300 ft. long, 111 ft. to 144 ft. wide, 77 ft. high to the top of the cornice, and 134 ft. to the top of the dome. In front is a recessed portico of 18 Ionic columns, each a single solid block, 38 ft. high, and weighing 43 tons, and among the numerous rooms is the Rotunda 80 ft. in diameter, and crowned by a dome, supported in part by 8 Corinthian columns of Italian marble. The Custom-house, built on the site of the old Federal Hall, is a splendid Doric structure of white marble, modelled on the Parthenon at Athens, 200 ft. long, 90 ft. wide, and 80 ft. high. The principal front presents a fine Doric portico, to which access is given by a flight of 18 marble steps, and the principal room forming a circle of 80 ft. diameter, is lighted by a dome resting on 16 beautiful Corinthian columns. The Post-Office is an old Dutch church occupied by the Government on lease, and only altered so far as to make it suitable for its present use. The Halls of Justice form a structure intended to be built in the Egyptian style, but which has only succeeded so far in imitating it as to merit the surname of the Egyptian tombs; it is constructed of a light-colored granite, and approached by 8 steps leading to a portico of massive columns. Within the enclosure of this edifice, is a house of detention, a prison with 146 cells for different classes of prisoners. The City Penitentiary, situated on the S. extremity of Blackwell's Island, in East River, about 5 m. N.E. of the City Hall, is a large stone building, 4 stories high, consisting of a centre surrounded by a square tower, and of two wings, and presenting a very conspicuous and imposing

WALL STREET AND TRINITY CHURCH, NEW YORK.
From Putnam's Magazine.

On E. side Broadway, containing some of the finest public offices and still better known as the centre of stock and monetary operations; South Street, along East River, occupied by the principal shipping-houses and packet-offices; West Street, along the Hudson similarly occupied; Pearl, Pine, and Cedar Streets, the principal localities for the dry goods, object, particularly to vessels passing through East River. The Lunatic Asylum, Alms-house and Work-house, all likewise situated on Blackwell's Island, are more remarkable for their magnitude than their architecture. The new State

THE CITY-HALL, NEW YORK - From Fish's Magazine

Arsenal situated on Fifth Avenue, between 82d and 84th Streets, 42 ft. N. of the City Hall is a massive Gothic structure, in the castellated style, surmounted by 8 towers, 69 ft. high, 4 in front and 1 at each angle.

Churches.—The total number of these is about 260, of which 46 are Presbyterian, 45 Episcopal, 40 Methodist, 31 Baptist, 21 R. Catholic, 20 Dutch Reformed, 10 Congregational, 5 Lutheran Universalists Friends, and Primitive Christians 4 each, Unitarian and New Jerusalem 2 each and 1 Moravian. The Jews have 12 synagogues. Many of the churches are costly and magnificent structures. Those of the Episcopians, who had the privilege of an Establishment before the revolution, and still form the wealthiest religious body in the State, are particularly distinguished. To them belong among others Trinity Church, a small but beautiful structure of pure Gothic, situated on Broadway, at the head of Water Street, built of brown sandstone, at an expense of about $200,000, though not capable of accommodating more than 900 persons, and surmounted by a noble spire, 264 ft. high. Grace Church, on the N. of Broadway corner of 10th Street, an elaborate Gothic structure, of white marble, which cost about $240,000, St. Thomas Church, with a fine front, partly occupied by an immense Gothic window, and flanked by two octagonal towers. St. John's Chapel, with a splendid Corinthian portico, and a spire 218 ft. high, and the Church of the Holy Communion, built of red granite, and much admired for the elegance and symmetry of its proportions. Of the churches belonging to other bodies, notice is due to the R. Catholic churches of St. Patrick and St. Peter—the former a huge Gothic edifice, with an imposing interior and the latter a massive granite structure, with an Ionic portico. The First Presbyterian Church, a majestic Gothic building of reddish brown stone, with large buttressed pinnacles, and a tower terminating in a spire 160 ft. high, the Congregational Church of the Farnam, splendidly built of white marble, the First Baptist Church, Bevoise Street, built in the Gothic style, of blue limestone, and adorned with octagon towers; the French Protestant Church, of white marble, with a fine Ionic portico, and the Dutch Reformed Church, Washington Square, justly admired for the elegance of its Gothic architecture.

Literary and Educational Establishments.—The oldest is Columbia College, founded by charter of George II. in 1754, under the name of King's College. It occupies a handsome building, with two projecting wings; and has 10 professors, an average attendance of 130 students, a library of 17,000 volumes, a museum and extensive philosophical and chemical apparatus. Preparatory for the college, and attached to it, is a grammar-school with from 300 to 800 scholars. The University of the city of New York occupies a fine marble structure, in the English collegiate style; and has a chapel lighted by a window of stained glass, 34 ft. wide and 50 ft. high. It was founded in 1827, and has 11 professors, a library of 4000 volumes, extensive apparatus and on an average 145 students. The medical department has 6 professors, and about 600 students. The College of Physicians and Surgeons occupies a handsome building, and has 6 professors and about 230 students. Among the numerous theological seminaries, Union Theological Seminary, in University Place, with 6 professors, 100 students, a library of more than 18,000 volumes, and that of the Protestant Episcopal church, are distinguished. The Free Academy opened in 1849, for the purpose of extending additional gratuitous education to the former pupils of the common school of the city and county, occupies a handsome Gothic structure built on the model of some of the Belgian townhalls, at an expense of about $14,000, exclusive of $2000 expended on furniture and apparatus. It owes its existence to the popular vol. of the citizens, in 1848, and is now one of the most important high schools of the city. It has 11 teachers, and its pupils, which at the opening were only 58, now amount to several hundreds. The schools for a common and more elementary education included, according to the Report of the Board of Education for 1850-51, 114 public, 73 ward and 21 corporate schools, at which 107,268 children receive instruction though the average attendance was only 40,055. The sum expended on these schools, in that year was about $25,000, and 17 of the schools were for coloured children. The more important libraries, in addition to those of the educational establishments already mentioned, are the New York Society Library of 45,000 volumes, the Miscellaneous Literary Association, 20,000 volumes and the Apprentices Library, 13,000 volumes—affording facilities for mental cultivation of which a great number of apprentices avail themselves. Societies for purposes literary scientific or economical include the American Institute, incorporated in 1829, for the encouragement of agriculture, commerce, manufactures and the arts; the Lyceum of Natural History which has extensive collections, and has published several volumes of transactions; the American Art Union the International Art Union the Ethnological Society the Historical Society with a library of 15,000 volumes, and a collection of coins and medals; and the American Geographical and Statistical Society, instituted in 1852.

Benevolent and Charitable Institutions.—These include among others the New York hospital with extensive buildings on Broadway, the Lunatic Asylum, at Honeymoon Island, on an elevated site overlooking the Hudson and surrounded by 40 acres of land, laid out in gardens and pleasure-grounds; the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, the Institution for the Blind, the Colored Home, for the aged and indigent, the Magdalen Female Benevolent Asylum, the Commencement of Emigration the duty of which is to provide for the sick and destitute immigrant, and supported by a capitation tax on the herring catches themselves the Sailors' Begg Harbor, situated on Staten Island, and well endowed for the support of aged and infirm seamen, the Seamen's Fund and Retreat, supported chiefly by a tax on the masters of vessels and seamen arriving at the port, the Prison Association for the improvement of prison discipline, &c., the Martine's Female Industrial Society, the Anti Slavery Society, the Temperance Union; the Sunday-school Union, and various Bible, missionary, and tract societies.

Amusements.—If from these we exclude the more rational recreations of public lectures on subjects literary, scientific, moral, &c., and the public meetings in which various topics, municipal and political, are discussed, the number of amusements, properly so called, forms a somewhat scanty list. The largest theatre is the Broadway which is chiefly devoted to the regular drama. To it may be added Niblo's, one of the most popular resorts, famous for the gorgeousness with which semi-domestic upland are exhibited. Barton's, the Bowery, and National Theatre, Christy's Opera, the American Museum, which, besides containing a collection of figures, caricatures, &c. furnishes dramatic and comic representations; Metropolitan Hall much used for concerts, the Amphitheatre, several panoramas, and the various exhibitions which take place in Castle Garden. Theatrical exhibitions find many enthusiastic admirers and frequently occasion bursts of extravagance which are seldom witnessed elsewhere but the great body of the citizens readily decline to seek relaxation from the cares and toils of business in places where both the physical and moral atmosphere are too often tainted, and find amusement of a better kind by withdrawing, whenever a holiday permits them, from the crowded city to breathe the bracing air which sweeps inland, or the neighbouring mainland, affords them. For this purpose, they possess unparalleled facilities. Oatlands, situated in the best style, are perpetually plying in all directions, at rates which none can find burdensome; steamers are constantly leaving the wharves either for short trips across the numerous ferries, or for longer excursions along the coast, or up the noble stream of the Hudson and railway trains, starting from the very heart of the city soon leave all its din, and dust and smoke, far behind.

Manufactures and Trade.—The manufactures of New York, though usually reckoned as only a secondary interest, are compared with its foreign and domestic trade, already about a capital of nearly 7 millions sterling produce articles of threefold value and employ nearly a sixth of the whole population. A large proportion of this manufacturing industry is doubtless devoted to the ordinary handicrafts which produce articles of daily and domestic use, to be consumed within the precincts of the city itself and other most important items, as ship-building, and the heavy machinery and machinery required by marine engines, are so intimately connected with commerce, and so obviously produced by the demand which commerce creates, that they may almost be considered as integral parts of it. Still after making due allowance for these considerations it is impossible to deny that the progress which New York has made in its manufactures is only less than that of its commerce, and that in respect even of them it outstrips every other city of the Union. As already hinted several of the leading articles produced are the necessary offsprings of commercial prosperity. In 1851 the vessels built within the district of New York were 208, carrying 71,214 tons or nearly 3 of the whole tonnage built during that year within the Union. Of these vessels 33 were ships, 1 a brig 65 schooners, 81 sloops and small boats, and 47 steamers. Of the last, 11 were great ocean steam-ships.

These naturally suggest the great manufacturing establishments which rank next in order the iron foundries and machine shops two of which, the Novelties and Morgan Works, employ each about 900 men. After these come sugar-refineries 10 in number, and all on a very extensive scale, and numerous large breweries and distilleries. Other important articles are iron shaft, brass, and tinware, plated goods, fire-arms, cottonwood and muscovado leather, gold and silver trunks, coaches and carriages, blocks and pumps, cordage, sails, rope and cordage, white lead, varnishes, gold and steel pens, musical instruments, oleum, cigars, types and books, &c.

The trade of New York, when both its extent and its rapid increase are taken into view, must be admitted to surpass that of which any maritime city ancient or modern, can boast. The admirable facilities which it enjoys have already been referred to. Rows of wharves and piers, the latter about 60 in number averaging from 300 ft. to 500 ft long and from 50 ft. to 60 ft. wide, are continued along the Hudson and East River almost without interruption for an aggregate distance of 7 m and afford at once accommodation and security to the crowds of vessels of all sizes and descriptions which are continually arriving or departing, delivering or receiving their cargoes. The wharves of East River which, owing to the strength of the current, very rarely suffer any destruction from ice, are principally resorted to by foreign shipping, to which such an obstruction might prove more detrimental, while those of the Hudson, which regularly freeze, are used chiefly by steamers. The means of internal communication are equally complete. Where the proper navigation of the Hudson ceases, the Erie Canal continues it to the large inland lakes, and, both by means of these and branch feeders, enables the products of immense tracts of land, covered with valuable timber, or graced by immense herds of cattle, or productive of luxuriant crops, or rich in minerals, to reach the harbour of New York. The serious inconveniences to which this trade was exposed by the freezing of the water, has in recent times been almost overcome by the introduction of the railway system which, not contented with remedying this temporary evil, has extended itself in all directions, and opened up most important communications which were previously impracticable. Continuous lines of railway now form a great network of several thousand miles, diverging from New York in all directions, and bring it into immediate communication with the great lakes, the Mississippi and the towns of Philadelphia, Boston, &c. In addition to the foreign and internal trade, another branch of scarcely less importance is carried on by coasters, both steam and sailing vessels, of which the average number actually in the harbour at one time is estimated at 2000. It is impossible here to give details of a trade so vast in extent, and so endlessly ramified, and therefore a few general statements must suffice. In the year ending June 30 1853 the exports were, of domestic produce $38,868,767 ($7,170,759); foreign, dutiable, $5,933,572 ($1,066,712) specie, $37,378,705 ($7,454,741) making a total of $61,461,083 ($13,939,905). The imports were, of dry goods $48,900,838 ($9,780,187), other dutiable goods, $55,444,896 ($7,086,979). One gold, $11,998,913 ($2,885,838) specie, $3,228,391 ($508,678) giving a total of $98,601,124 ($19,760,226). The duties collected at the port, during the same year, amounted to $28,678,910 ($5,735,783), being considerably more than one-half (exactly 50.6 per cent.) of all the duties levied at all the ports of the Union the aggregate amount in the same year having been only $47,320,316 ($9,484,065). In 1851 the tonnage belonging to the port was 531,159 tons, or about one-fourth of the whole tonnage of the Union. The tonnage which entered the port was 1,448,768 and cleared, 1,280,082 tons, giving a total of 2,678,850 of which 1,760,106 were American and the total number of vessels which arrived at the port was 3888, of which 2381 were American, and British 966 Bremen, the next highest in order had only 138. Since 1846 when the great ocean steam-ships were first brought into existence up to the present year, the number of steamers built and fitted-out at New York is 59. At present (1853) the total number is 76, carrying 123,010 tons. Of the immense domestic trade of New York, it is impossible to form an accurate estimate, but by the Erie canal alone the total tonnage which arrived at tide water in 1852 was 1,644,699 tons. Of these, 576,772 tons were wheat and flour valued at $32,564,256 ($4,512,831). Of the coasting trade, the leading articles which arrived in 1851 were—cotton, 456,637 bales, hemp 19,470 do wool 10,662 do hides 208,626 in number lead, 176,538 pigs coffee, 62,381 bags tobacco, 14,837 hhds, and 428 bales, &c. molasses 13,650 hhds, 1247 ctns, and 38,797 brls and sugar, 21,446 hhds, 58 tns 38,368 brls, 8559 boxes and 16,735 bags. A good idea of the wealth and resources of the city is given by the fact that in 1852 the real and personal estate assessed within the city and county, the latter being identical with Manhattan Island was valued respectively at $252,188,758 ($50,447,851) and $98,520,042 ($19,704,090) giving a total of $70,141,431. Of this total, the city proper 8 of 43d Street furnished $67,617,304.

Miscellaneous.—Under this head may be introduced some topics for which a proper place has not been found in the previous part of this article, but without reference to which the description of the city would be incomplete. One of these is the hotels. In the claim of the Old World these are for the most part frequented only by passing visitors, and of course are only provided on a scale adequate to meet such a casual demand. In New York, on the contrary, hotels are much used as domestic establishments, in which great numbers of persons, single and married, take up their permanent residence, and, paying according to fixed rates, find it easy without the trouble of housekeeping, to regulate their expenditure according to their means. It may well be doubted whether this mode of life procures any advantages which are not far more than counterbalanced, but the preference here exists that it has had the effect of raising hotels, on scales of almost unrivalled extent and magnificence, to rise up in all parts of the city, and more especially in the lines of its greatest thoroughfares. Among others, it may be sufficient here to specify the Astor House in Broadway. It forms a massive and imposing structure of Quincy granite, 6 stories high, with a front of 201 ft., and contains above 800 rooms, among which the dining-room is 108 ft. by 49 ft. In this splendid establishment, erected at an expense of more than $200,000, the price of board per day is only 2 dollars, or about 8s. 6d. sterling. The ladies' ordinary in this establishment is ornamented with one of the finest frescoes in the world. The Metropolitan, St. Nicholas, New York, Irving's, and others are on an equally magnificent scale. In regard to police and sanitary regulations—as the paving, cleaning, and lighting of the streets—New York has nothing to boast of, or rather contrasts unfavorably with most other cities; but, in regard to one, and that perhaps the most important of all, an abundant supply of excellent water, she has recently by a gigantic effort, made herself pre-eminent. The want of a proper supply of water had long been felt, and, during the destructive fires which repeatedly took place had proved peculiarly disastrous, by leaving the devouring elements to rage, almost unchecked, without the means of extinguishing it. In 1835, it was resolved to remedy the evil and the Croton Water-Works were commenced on a scale of magnificence not surpassed by the most celebrated hydraulic achievements of ancient or modern times. The aqueduct commences 8 m. from the Hudson, and about 40 m. from the City Hall. An embankment of stone and cement, 250 ft. long, and 40 ft. high forms a pond covering an area of 400 acres, and containing 500,000,000 of gallons of water. From this pond the aqueduct built of stone and brick in the form of a double arch, 8 ft. 6 inches high and at the bottom 6 ft. 3 inches wide, is carried through solid rocks, and across valleys and streams, till it reaches Haarlem River, which separates the N. part of Manhattan Island from the E. Here the aqueduct assumes a more graceful form, and a magnificent stone bridge, 1450 ft. long, and 114 ft. above the tide-way, spans the river by 14 arches. The water thus conveyed is carried forward first to the Reservoir, covering 80 ac. and containing 15,000,000 of gallons, and thence to the Distributing Reservoir about 3 m. N. of the City Hall. The supply of pure and wholesome water thus obtained is at the minimum rate of 27,000,000 of gallons in 24 hours, and would amply suffice for a population of a million and a half. The expense, originally estimated at $3,000,000 or $3,000,000 of dollars (about $1,200,000) has increased to nearly three times that amount, and is raised by a property tax of 5 per cent. But the benefits obtained are strikingly illustrated by the fact that the rates of insurance against fire which from the imperfect means of extinguishing it, were very high, have since been so much reduced, that many proprietors pay the whole amount of the water tax out of the saving on that one item. In the immediate neighbourhood of the Distributing Reservoir the Crystal Palace, recently completed, in imitation of that of London and for a similar purpose, deserves a passing notice. It is in the form of a Greek cross, with a dome rising from the intersection, and, with the exception of the floor is entirely constructed of iron and glass. It occupies the greater part of Reservoir Square having an extreme length of 455 ft., an extreme width of 445 ft. and an area of 111,000 sq. ft. Including the additional 49,000 sq. ft. furnished by the galleries, the total area available for the purpose of the Exhibition is 178,000 sq. ft.

History.—Manhattan Island, on which New York stands was first discovered in 1499, by Hudson, a celebrated English navigator, who found it inhabited by a brave Indian tribe but the first settlement was made by the Dutch in 1610. They built a fort near the S. extremity of Broadway, and, gradually forming a town around it, continued in possession till 1664, when they were driven out by the English. In 1673 the Dutch regained possession but lost it finally in the following year. Its first charter, granted by James II. in 1686, was confirmed by Queen Anne in 1708 and again confirmed with modifications by George II. in 1783. This charter still forms the basis of the municipal government, almost all the royal grants having been retained, subject to such changes as were rendered necessary by the transition from colonial subjection to national independence. The pre-

Vol. 11.

gress of New York has been rapid almost beyond example, though its prosperity has repeatedly suffered both from external and internal causes. During the revolutionary war it remained in the hands of the British, and was not finally evacuated by them till 1783, between 1812 and 1815, the war with Britain almost extinguished its foreign commerce, and on different occasions speculative mania has prevailed to such an extent as to bring on revolutions, by which thousands of individuals have been involved in ruin, and the general progress most seriously retarded. The population only 33,131 in 1790 was in 1830 123,706, in 1840 212,710, and in 1850, 515,547.

NEW ZEALAND a group of islands belonging to Great Britain, S. Pacific Ocean lat. 34° 30' to 47° 30' N. lon. 166° to 177° E. and consisting chiefly of two principal islands—the one called North Island, New Ulster or Ekeinoanui; and the other Middle Island, New Munster, or Tawa-Pounamu; and of a much smaller island called New Leinster Stewart, or South Island, length of the whole group, N. to S. measured on a line curving nearly through their centres about 1200 m. area estimated at about 97,000 sq. m.

New Ulster the most N. of the group, and separated from New Munster by Walker or Cook's Strait, which, where narrowest, is about 25 m. wide is so very irregular in shape and so much broken by deep bays and projecting headlands, that it is scarcely possible to give any distinct idea of its dimensions by tracing straight lines upon its surface. Without allowing for curvature its greatest length, N. N. W. to S. S. E., between Cape Otter or North Cape, and Cape Kawakawa or Palliser is 400 m. its greatest breadth W. S. W. to E. N. E. between Cape Egmont and Cape Wai Apou or East Cape, is 275 m. area estimated at 21,174,400 ac. or 48,710 sq. m. A tolerably accurate idea of its shape will be obtained by considering it as composed of a nucleus or main body and four great horns or peninsulas. By far the longest of these commencing between Poverty Range, in the Bay of Plenty on the E. and Port Arisa on the W. stretches N. N. E. for 280 m. in a deeply serrated projection which has a width at its base of not more than 55 m. and near its extremity of not more than 8 m. This remarkable peninsula is nearly cut through by Hauraki Gulf or the Firth of the Thames on the P., and Manukau or Symonds Harbour on the W. the only land which saves its continuity being the narrow isthmus on which, like that of ancient Corinth the town of Auckland has been built. Its W. coast, with exception of the indentations formed by the harbours of Manukau already mentioned, and of Kaipara, is almost a continuous straight line whereas the whole of the E. coast is a constant succession of bays and promontories including the Bay of Islands, Wanganui Bay, Wanganui Harbour Doubtless Bay &c. The second of the four peninsulas stretches E. N. E. between the Bay of Plenty on the N. and Hawke Bay on the E. It is much more compact than the former having both a shorter length and a greater width and beside Hawke Bay itself, has no marked indentation except that of Poverty Bay on the E. The third peninsula forms the S. extremity of the island and stretches for 130 m. between Hawke Bay and the W. part of Cook's Strait to its termination at Cape Palliser. The fourth peninsula, which projects less than any of the other three, is in some respects the most conspicuous of all, in consequence of containing the lofty volcanic mountain of Egmont or Taranaki and being partly composed of the streams of lava which at some remote period have flowed from its sides. The main body of the island, as well as its peninsulas, has, for the most part, a very rugged and mountainous surface, and besides being traversed from S. to N. by a great chain which takes successively the names of the Rangitikei, the Rauahine, and the Taranaki mountains, and throws off several transverse branches, presents a number of lofty isolated peaks, among which the most conspicuous are Mount Edgecumbe, which towers above the Bay of Plenty to the height of 10,000 ft. and Mount Egmont, which has a height of 8340 ft. Sedimentary rocks, chiefly of gray sandstone, are often seen, both among the ridges of the interior and on the coast, where they frequently form precipitous cliffs, but the far greater part of the rocks are crystalline, and so evidently volcanic, that their sides have all the appearance of continuous lava streams while the intervening valleys and plains are in many instances literally covered with the pumice stones which their craters must have ejected when in a state of activity. The streams which descend from the mountains are extremely numerous and several of them have much greater lengths than might be expected, from the extent of the island and the configuration of its surface. In general, however, they are mere mountain torrents, totally unfit for any navigable purpose, both in consequence of the rapidity of their current and the rugged nature of their channel, and still more of the immense deposits of shingle, which they have brought down in their course, and deposited at their mouths, and in which they are not unfrequently altogether lost before reaching the ocean. The largest of the rivers are the Waikato, augmented by the Waipa, and the Manawatu. The former rises in the snows and glaciers of Mount Ruapehu (3000 ft. high) one of the loftiest summits of the central chain flows easterly to N. W. and, after a course of about 250 m. discharges itself on the W. coast, into what is called Waikato harbour. Though much interrupted by falls and rapids, it is navigable from its mouth for 100 m. by vessels of 80 tons. The Manawatu, rising in the same central chain, and at no great distance from the Waikato, takes an opposite direction, and after flowing nearly due S., along the base of the Ruahine mountains, turns W. and forcing its way across a depression of the central chain, falls into Cook's Strait. At its mouth, it has a width of 300 yards at half-tide, but is encumbered by a bar which, at ebb, has not more than 7 ft. water. Within the channel deepens, and is navigable by small vessels for 50 m. The only other considerable streams are the Wanganui, which flows to the S.W. coast, the Paharatahi or Hutt, which flows S. into Port Nicholson in Cook's Strait, the Waiverua, which falls into Hawke Bay, the Rangitiki and Waikato, which fall into the Bay of Plenty and the Waikato or Thames, which flows N. W. into the Firth of Thames. Most of the streams have their sources in lakes, many of them obviously filling the craters of extinct volcanoes and though often not of great extent, so embosomed among mountains and magnificent forests as to present scenery of extraordinary grandeur and beauty. The largest of all the lakes is Taupo, situated near the centre of the main body of the island, of an irregular triangular shape, about 36 m. long by 25 m. broad. About 36 m. N.E. from it is Lake Roto-Rua, which forms nearly a perfect circle of 8 m. in diameter and is remarkable for the number of hot springs which rise close to its banks. Waikato, and several other lakes near the S. extremity of the island, cover an area of about 50,000 ac. In the same locality is one of the most extensive plains of the island, occupying an area of about 600 sq. m.

New Munster, or Middle Island, is of a much more compact and regular form, and though bulging out somewhat towards the S. may be considered as a parallelogram stretching about 500 m. from N. E. to S. W. with a medium breadth of about 180 m. area about 60,000 sq. m. In the N., where it is separated from New Ulster by Cook's Strait, it is very much rugged and broken, and so much corresponds with the opposite coast, both in its general structure and the direction of its headlands and submerged reef, as to suggest and furnish good ground for the opinion that the two islands were at one time contiguous. But with exception of the N. coast, and a remarkable spur on the E. coast, called Banks Peninsula, the coast-line is very continuous, presenting no indentations deserving of notice except Queen Charlotte's Sound, Admiralty Bay and Blind Bay with its branch Manassera Bay in the S. Milford Haven, Doubtful Sound, Broaden Sound, Usky Bay and Chalky Bay, a number of narrow sea-arms penetrating the land for several miles, in the S.W. Terywy Bay and Howell port, on Forrester Strait, in the S. and Port Oturo or Oturo Akaro harbour in Banks Peninsula and Pegasus Bay on the E. Its interior has not been much explored, but it presents physical features similar to those of New Ulster, and in particular is traversed from N. to S. by a lofty central chain, which is evidently a continuation of that which terminates on the opposite coast of the northern island. This chain has an average height of about 5000 ft., but Mount Cook, near the W. coast, is but 49° 30' N. has two peaks, the one 12,900 ft., and the other 13,300 ft. high. Both in the interior, and along the coast, several extensive plains have been found. The drainage is effected by numerous streams, which, instead of skirting the mountains by flowing N. or S., and thus acquiring length sufficient for their development into rivers, flow directly E. or W. to the sea, and seldom lose the character of impetuous mountain torrents.

New Lancelot, Banksia, or Stewart Island, the third largest island of the group but far inferior in dimensions to the other two, lies S. of New Munster, and separated from it by Forrester Strait, about 15 m. wide. It is of a triangular, or rather heart-shaped form, about 46 m. long from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of about 36 m., and an area estimated at 1400 sq. m. Its shores have a very pleasing appearance, woods extending down to the water's edge, while numerous bays, separated by rocky headlands covered with brushwood, indent the coast, which is fringed, more especially towards the S., with numerous islands. The largest of these indentations are Pegasus inlet, on the N.E. a noble harbour, and the fine harbour of Pegasus Bay in the S.E. Like the other two principal islands, the interior is mountainous, but the elevation is less none of the summits exceeding 3200 ft.

A great number of smaller islands belonging to the New Zealand group, and for the most part are situated at short distances from the shores of the North and Middle Islands, though many surround the S. Island. The largest of these are Otua or Great Barrier Island and Shoutourou, in the mouth and Waikato reef, in the interior of the Firth of Thames, Kapiti or Entry Island in Cook's Strait, D'Urville at the N.E. entrance of Blind Bay, Resolution on the S.W. coast of the Middle Island, and the Scares on the parallel of 48° S. W. of New Lancelot.

Geology.—As yet a considerable portion of the two principal islands remains unexplored and of course any attempt yet made to describe the geological structure must be very imperfect. The general prevalence of volcanic rocks has already been adverted to. Almost all the loftiest summits bear obvious indications of having been either volcanic cones or craters, and in the fringed cone of Tongareva situated in the central chain of the N. Island considerably E. of the settlement of New Plymouth, at the height of 6200 ft. the volcanic force is still active. Many other parts bear manifest signs of frequent upheavements and violent convulsions and since 1846 numerous shocks of earthquakes have been felt, particularly at Wellington where, in October 1848 the shocks were so violent as to shatter most of the houses and public buildings, and spread general terror and dismay, causing damage to an amount estimated at £15,000. The prevailing rocks of the mountain chains in which the volcanic peaks are situated are metamorphic schists, gneiss, clay slate, porphyry and basalt. Granite seems to be of rare occurrence, but isolated masses of quartz occur in various places. On the W. side of the N. peninsula of New Ulster near the mouth of the Hold-anga, transition slate is abundant in the vicinity of Auckland the strata form cliffs of a soft pepper-colored sandstone, or sandstone conglomerates, with occasional seams of lignite. On the E. coast, near the Bay of Islands, some of these strata, consisting of half-carbonated wood overlies with a thick bed of decomposed porphyry-stone, are 4 ft. thick. Still farther N. at Wanganui harbour a coarse-grained limestone, more or less crystallized with varieties of fossil shells, composes picturesque cliffs 60 ft. high. New Munster has been still less imperfectly explored than New Ulster but the geological structure appears to be almost identical. The igneous rocks composing the greater part of Banks Peninsula are seen piercing a lofty range of metamorphic rocks dipping both E. and W. at a high angle. In the low country to the S. and W. the surface, consisting of rich loam, has immediately beneath it a thick substratum of slightly coherent gravel. To the W. of Thames a mass of lignite 10 ft. thick is said to be seen cropping out on a bank. Continuing S. along the coast, strata of yellow and brown colored limestone of a friable, porous texture, and filled with caverns, occur. Many of the limestones, particularly in the vicinity of Otua, resemble the chalk of Europe in the general nature of their fossils. A tertiary bed of blue clay also occurs, containing numerous shells of species existing in the neighbouring ocean. New Zealand appears to be rich in remarkable fossils of birds. The most extraordinary of them is the Gigantic Moa (Dinornis Giganticus) whose species of which must have been from 10 to 16 ft. high. The natives affirm that it is not extinct, and that living specimens of it still exist in the almost impenetrable forests of the interior.

It is not probable, from the geological structure of New Zealand, that minerals of much value will be discovered. Numerous of rich auriferous deposits have repeatedly been found, but hitherto it has not been found in sufficient quantity to render its extraction profitable. Copper-mines have been opened in the vicinity of Auckland with satisfactory results; sulphur also is very abundant, and titaniferous iron is found in various places. There are also indications of tin, lead, silver blinnath and nickel.

Climate.—This is a country stretching through 13 of latitude, covered by mountain ranges, several of them clothed with perpetual snow, and exposed along an E coast of above 1500 m to the tempestuous winds and dense clouds which are carried from the antitropic circle to the warm regions of the N; is necessarily very much diversified. The characteristics feature in the climates of both principal islands is humidity. At Auckland the annual quantity of rain is 51.64, whereas in London it is only 20.05. Throughout the N island, the mean annual temperature calculated on observations made at the Bay of Islands, Auckland, and Wellington, is rather more than 61°, and the range of the thermometer is very limited. At the Bay of Islands it is only 30° varying from 65° in the coldest, to 75° in the warmest months and at Wellington 22°, ranging between 43 and 70°, whereas in London the range is 38° varying between 86° and 62°. The prevailing winds are from the NW and the SE and are accompanied with frequent hurricanes, particularly in Cook's Strait, which acts as an immense funnel through which the tempest rages almost without intermission, and at all seasons. From Cook's Strait southward, along the E coast of Middle Island, the climate becomes deteriorated the wind increases both in quantity and violence, and the winter cold is much aggravated by icy blasts and southern dews. The climate of New Zealand is remarkably healthy and although at Auckland the number of days in which rain falls annually is 170, yet other parts of the island enjoy a larger number of dry days, even if the total quantity of rain that falls be not any less. The summer months of December and January and the autumn months of February, March, and April are the driest.

Vegetation.—New Zealand, with the adjoining groups of Otago Auckland, Macquarie, forms a botanical centre from which a peculiar class of vegetable forms is supposed to have issued. The species at present known are 693, nearly equally divided between the monocotyledonous, the cellular, and the dicotyledonous plants. To the cellular belong numerous varieties of algæ, hæmæ, fungi, and more especially ferns, which replacing the prossessors of other countries, form almost the only vegetation over immense districts. Some of them are more than 30 ft. high, and remarkable for the elegance of their forms. One of the most common is the Floris esculenta, the root of which is used as food by the natives, and greedily devoured by pigs, which, in consequence of its abundance are now running wild in great numbers. Another remarkable plant of great economical value is the flax plant (Phormium tenax), which seems so natural to the climate that it is found in almost all situations, on the driest hills, in swamps, and on the sea-shore, within reach of the spray. One species of the Phormium has leaves 12 ft. and flower-stalks 20 ft. long. The finest flax is obtained from a cultivated variety. Among the dicotyledonous plants the most remarkable belong to the Comæfæ and Tædæ, and furnish valuable descriptions of timber. Among others is the Kauri, Kauri, or Dawsonia, with a smooth grey columnar trunk, from 30 to 40 ft. in diameter, and nearly of the same girth through its whole height of from 60 to 90 ft. One remarkable fact connected with it is, that it is confined to a comparatively small part of the North Island and to land which seems specially rugged and unfertile. The animal kingdom is extremely limited. Captain Cook found no trace of any quadrupeds except a sort of fox dog and a few rats, and no others have since been discovered. Of the animals which have been introduced, the hog thrives best and multiplies prodigiously finding abundance of food in the fern roots, and consequently varying it with the oysters and mussels cockles strewn upon the shore. All the other common European quadrupeds appear to be easily acclimated. Birds are not remarkable either for variety, song, or plumage, but exhibit in the Apitæ, so called from having no wings, one of the most curious and gigantic class of birds in existence.

Several varieties of whales and seals were as abundant on the coasts when first visited, that great hopes were entertained of establishing productive fisheries of them; but the capture of them was pursued so ruthlessly without sparing the breeding whale and her young, that a most important source of revenue has been almost destroyed. The coast still teems with whale fish among which one of the best is the Hæpæ, resembling the cod, but superior to it both in nutritive properties and flavor, and weighing from 10 to 70 lbs., and occasionally 100 lbs.

The natives of New Zealand, supposed to belong to the Malay family, furnish perhaps the finest specimens of savage man. The men are tall strong, and active the women often handsome, and both sexes almost uniformly well shaped; and dressed in mats of various kinds made of the native flax braided by the hand some of them very coarse, and worn by the women, and others finer than any European. Fluffy in their habits, they seldom bathe themselves, or wash their clothes, which are usually worn till they drop off from age. Their intellectual and moral qualities keep pace with their physical and with the exception of cannibalism and infanticide, both of which though once common have been almost exterminated they have either never been addicted to or have ceased to practise, the vices common among savage tribes.

NATIVES OF NEW ZEALAND.—From Angus' New Zealand Illustrated.

PORTRAIT OF MU TUWA-TUWA
From William C. Baines Esq. Esq. Esq. Esq.

They practise tattooing and form designs over their bodies of remarkable elegance as is evidenced by the markings on the face of the accompanying figure, being a portrait of the chief Ku tuwa tuwa. They usually live in villages, or huts situated frequently on an eminence, and generally surrounded by a palisade, sometimes strengthened so as to form a tolerably strong defence against infantry. But, though esteemed intelligent, they are, in respect of the construction of their houses much behind other islanders of the S Pacific. Their houses are small low bagged with soft, bannistered with grass, and filled with fluff. Those of the chiefs are larger than those of the people generally, and are often ornamented in front with rude and grotesque carvings; that of Pomare measures about 20 ft. long by 12 ft. broad, and from 5 ft. to 6 ft. high. Owning partly to their own excellent capacities, and the exertions of the missionaries who have long laboured among them, the natives have made great progress in civilization—have exchanged their superstitions for Christianity and, when admitted to the privilege of the constitution which the British Parliament has sanctioned, will be able to maintain their place in the legislature without suffering by comparison with their European colleagues.

PUNABE DAB, NEW SHALLOO.—From Walter C. Hulse's Exploring Expedition.

New Zealand was first discovered by Tasman in 1642 but little was known of it till the visit of Cook, in 1769 and 1774. Its coasts were afterwards repeatedly visited by whalers and others, but the first permanent settlement was made in 1815 when a missionary station was established in the Bay of Islands. It had been long recognized as a British possession but no regular authority was established by Government till 1838 when a resident was appointed, with very limited powers, and subordinate to the government of New South Wales. In 1840 it was erected into a colony and in 1841 was formally separated from New South Wales and placed under its own independent governor. The principal settlements yet made are those of Auckland (the capital), New Plymouth and Wellington in New Ulster, and of Nelson, Canterbury and Otago in New Munster. Owing partly to gross mismanagement on the part of the New Zealand Company to hostilities wantonly provoked with the natives and other difficulties more or less incident to all new colonial settlements their prosperity has not been very rapid, but now that the most serious obstacles have been either removed or greatly modified, there is little reason to doubt that New Zealand will soon become one of the most valuable, as it is already one of the most interesting of the British colonial possessions. Pop. about 140,000, of whom not more than 20,000 are white colonists, and at least 120,000 Maories or natives of whom not more than 2000 reside on the Middle Island.

NEWAHY is in Hindostan, prov. Ajunder 37 m. S. by P. Jypoor lat. 25° 35' N. lon. 75° 44' E., at the base of an abrupt rock on the verge of a plain. On the summit of the former is the stone fort of Nishapur.

NEWARDPUKE, a in Hindostan, kingdom of Oude, about 70 m. S.W. Lucknow. Pop. 8000.

NEWARK, a city, United States, New Jersey, on bank Passaic, 5 m. from the entrance into Newark Bay 12 m. W. New York, lat. 40° 45' N. lon. about 74° W. The city is regularly laid-out and has generally, broad and straight streets, many elegant houses, and two large public promenades, bordered by lofty trees, numerous churches, several of which are handsome, a commodious, an extensive library, a circulating library, a mechanics institute, for adults and literary improvement, and a young men's literary association. It has numerous printing-offices, academies, and schools, and is a place of great and increasing commerce. Pop. (1840), 28,392; (1850) 38,885.

NEWARK-upon-Trent a port and municipal bor., and market in England, co. Nottingham, on bank of an E. branch of the Trent, here crossed by a handsome bridge of seven arches, 18 m. N.E. Nottingham, at the junction of the Great Northern and Nottingham and Lincoln railways. It is pretty well built, streets paved, and lighted with gas, with a spacious market-place in the centre and has a respectable townhall, containing some public offices, and an assembly-room, a large and elegant cruciform church, with a light handsome tower, and lofty spire, places of worship for General and Particular Baptists, Independents, Calvinistic, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, and R. Catholics; a free grammar-school, several sets of almshouses, and various other charities, a considerable trade in corn, coal, cattle wool, and other commodities, but particularly in malt and flour, 50,000 quarters of the latter being annually sent to Manchester, Liverpool, and London, and a large linen manufactory. The Trent navigation has been rendered convenient, by the construction of warehouses and wharfs. On the N.W. of the town are the ruins of an ancient castle, rebuilt in the reign of Stephen, and hence called the New-work, whence the name of the town. It returns two members to Parliament. Constituency (1851) 867. Area, 1895 ac. Pop. 11,921.

NEWBALD par Eng York (E. Riding), 5450 ac. Pop. 806.

NEWBATTLE a vil and par Scotland, co. Edinburgh, in the romantic valley of the S. Esk, about 1 m. S. Dalkeith. It owed its origin to a Cistercian monastery, the site of which is now occupied by the modern mansion of the Marquis of Lothian, and has a plain parish church, a chapel of ease at Stobhill, a parochial and other schools, and extensive cultivation. Archdeacon Leighton was some time minister of this parish. Area of par., 44 m. by 5 m. Pop. 2518.

NEWBAVN par Ind Wexford 7537 ac. P. 1802.

NEWBERN a vil and port of entry U. States, Caroline co. bank Neuse, at its junction with the Trent; lat. 35° 5' N. lon. 77° W. It is pleasantly situated, well built, and more healthy than most other places in the state; has a courteous jail, theatre, Masonic hall and three churches, several academies and schools, and a considerable trade in exporting grain, pork, lumber and naval stores. P. (1850) 4782.

NEWBIGGIN par Eng Wexford 1184 ac. P. 114.

NEWBLISS, a market in Ireland, co. Monaghan, 4 m. E.S.E. Clones with a parish and a Presbyterian church, two schools, a commodious market-house, a well frequented corn-market, and monthly fairs. Near it are several ancient round towers. Pop. 481.

NEWBOLD, two pars Eng.—1 (Pacey, Warwick 1824 ac. P. 831.—2, (Vordon) Leicestershire 2400 ac. P. 712.

NEWBOLD a vil and township, England, co. Derby near Chesterfield; with a Methodist chapel in undowed school, an almshouse, manufactures of northern and stone ware, and extensive coal and iron mines. Pop. 2085.

NEWBOLD UPON AVON a hamlet and par England co. Warwick on the Oxford Canal and the London and Birmingham, and the Midland railways, 2 m. N.W. Rugby; with a handsome church, a chapel of ease, and limestone quarries. Area of par. 4020 ac. Pop. 1178.

NEWBOROUGH par England, Northampton, 4946 ac. Pop. 586.

NEWBOROUGH (St. Peter) par Wales, Anglesey 7410 ac. Pop. 1033.

NEWBOTTLE, par Eng Northampton 2990 ac. P. 488.

NEWBOURN par Eng Suffol., 897 ac. Pop. 521.

NEWBRIDGE, a vil. Wales, co. Glamorgan on both sides of the Taf, here crossed by a celebrated bridge, called Pont-y-Ffard 12 m. S.B.B. Merthyr-Tydfil. It is a large place, about 1 m. long which has recently sprung up, and attained some importance, in consequence of the mineral resources in its vicinity. It has a church, several dissenting chapels, a school, manufactures of chain cables and similar articles, and of railway plates, and tin-mills, said to be the largest in the world.

NEWBRIDGE, a market in Ireland, co. and 5 m. N.E. E. Kildare, 1 bank Liffey; with a handsome R. Catholic chapel, a national school, and large cavalry barracks. P. 484.

NEWBURG, a tn., U States, state and 64 m. N New York, on an acclivity which rises to the height of 800 ft. above r bank Hudson. It has a courthouse and jail, numerous churches and schools, the theological seminary of the Associate Reformed church; manufactures of carriages, machinery, chains, cordage, candles, &c. several foundries, breweries, tanneries, stone and lumber yards, and an extensive trade in agricultural produce in the transporting of which, from the interior, and forwarding to the New York market, many baggage, stage and steam-boats are employed. Pop. (1830) 6424. (1850) 11 415

NEWBURGH, a tn. and par Scotland, co. and 9 m E S E Fife, beautifully situated on a narrow neck of land, r bank Tay which is here divided into two channels, by the island of Mugdrum. It has a spacious and handsome parish church, two U Presbyterian churches, one of them a handsome Gothic structure places of worship for the Baptists and Independents a parish, and three other schools, a large and substantial townhall, manufactures of linen, chiefly dealing in sheeting a good harbour admitting vessels of 500 tons to its quay and a trade in coal, corn timber and the above manufactures, chiefly exported to the W Indies and S America. Near it are some interesting ruins of the celebrated Abbey of Lindores. Area of par 1145 ac. Pop 2988 of tn 2688

NEWBLDEN, a vil and par England, co. Northumberland on the Tyne, 6 m. W N W Newcastle. It has a neat, erectiform parish church with some ancient monuments a national school, manufactures of crown-glass and chemical products, iron foundries, bluish and tile works, a paper-mill and extensive collieries. Area of par, 11,566 ac. P 4816

NEWBURN, par Scot. Fife, 8½ m by 2 m. Pop 870
NEWBURN, a municipal cor. and market tn. England co. Berks, 1 bank Kennet, crossed here by a stone bridge, 18 m. W by S Reading, and on a branch of the Great Western railway. It has wide and well paved streets, lighted with gas a spacious market-place substantial townhall or mansion-house a church erected in the time of Henry VII., places of worship for Unitarians, Independents, Wesleyans, Society of Friends, and Catholics; a blue-coat, doocan and several Sunday schools some almshouses and numerous charities, and a literary institution with a library attached. The principal trade of the town is in malt and flour for the latter of which there are many large mills on the river. Near it, also, are a small paper-mill and a mill for throwing silk. This town was formerly noted for its woollen manufactures but little cloth excepting serges and shalloons, is now made here. Newbury is a very ancient town, and is celebrated for two severe actions which took place in its neighbourhood, in 1643 and 1644, between King Charles I and his parliament. Area, 1792 ac. P cor 6610

NEWBURYPORT, a tn U States, Massachusetts, on a slope above r bank Merrimack which is here crossed by a suspension-bridge, and about 8 m below falls into a bay of the Atlantic, and on the Eastern railway 30 m. N by E Boston. It occupies an area of about 1 sq m is regularly built in spacious streets, several of which rise in terraces, parallel to the river, and has a custom-house of rough granite, with a Doric portico. A brick courthouse, ten churches one of which contains the remains of the celebrated preacher, Whitfield who died here, September 30, 1770 a fine academy a lyceum, a high school and several other superior scholastic establishments, a jail, &c. paper filling flour, and saw mills and a considerable coasting and foreign trade, for which a spacious and safe harbour though somewhat obstructed at its entrance by a sandbank, affords great facilities. In 1850, the total tonnage of the district was 23 262 tons, of which a considerable proportion was employed in the coal and mackerel fisheries. P (1830) 6275 (1850) 9573

NEWBYTH, a vil Scotland, co. and 81 m. N N W Aberdeen. It is well built has a chapel of ease, a school, manufactures of dowels, a distillery, and an annual cattle fair Pop. 1898

NEWCASTLE, five pars. Ire. — 1 Dublin, 4398 ac. Pop 963 — 2 Tipperary 10 855 ac. Pop 3429 — 3, Waterford; 1863 ac. Pop 846. — 4 (Lower), Wicklow 4780 ac. Pop. 384 — 5 (Upper), Wicklow, 7056 ac. Pop. 3214.

NEWCASTLE, two pars. Wales — 1 Glamorgan, 2670 ac. Pop. 1536. — 2, (Llanelli), Pembroke 2713 ac. Pop. 439

NEWCASTLE. — 1, A small seaport, Ireland co. Down, at the S. extremity of the Mourne mountains, and the W point of Dunderm Bay 17 m. S S W Downpatrick, with a parish Presbyterian, and Wesleyan churches an infant and two other schools, and a good pier at which some trade is carried on. Newcastle is much frequented for sea-bathing. P 879.

— 2, A tn and par Ireland on and 24 m. S W Limerick; with a neat parish church, a large R. Catholic chapel, a free school a spacious market-house, infantry barracks, a union workhouse an hospital, and the remains of an old castle, which belonged to the Templars, manufactures of coarse woollen, dye-works, and a bleachfield. Pop. 5608. — 3 Formerly Kingston, a seaport tn. New S. Wales, at the mouth of the Hunter lat. 33 56 S., lon 151 44 15° E. 70 m. N E Sydney. It is a free port, and is fast rising into eminence, in consequence of its position, and the coal-mines near it, which are actively worked. The harbour is difficult of access but will admit vessels of any size; which, when once in, are quite safe — good anchorage in sand or mud. Pop 1471. — 4, A tn U States, Delaware, 1 bank Delaware 5 m. S S W Wilmington, with a Presbyterian, Episcopal R. Catholic, and two Methodist churches an academy a townhouse court-house jail and arsenal, and an extensive establishment belonging to the Newcastle and Frenchtown railroad company for the manufacture of steam-engines, castings, &c. P 3737

NEWCASTLE BAY Australia, N E. coast, N end of Cape York Peninsula, 13 m. in width, and about 8 m. in depth inland, lat. 10° 50' S., lon 143 35° E. The shores are low and sandy.

NEWCASTLE-EMERY, a market tn. Wales co. and 14 m. N N W Carmarthen r bank Towy, here crossed by a handsome bridge, with a spacious church Independent, Baptist, Calvinistic, and Wesleyan Methodist chapels, and the remains of an ancient castle. Area, 6429 ac. Pop 1080.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE or TYNEN-TYNE, a par. and municipal cor. England, co. and 14 m. N Stafford on the slopes of two hills on the Staffordshire railway. The houses are mostly of brick, and these along the principal thoroughfares generally well built, many of them large and handsome and the streets are lighted with gas. It has a handsome townhall savings bank, public baths a theatre; two Established churches one of which has an ancient tower of red sandstone chapels for Wesleyan New Connexion, Primitive, and Calvinistic Methodists, Independents, Baptists, and R. Catholics a free grammar and several other schools, almshouses and a literary and scientific institution with a good library attached two extensive silk mills, and one large cotton manufactory clock and paper making are also carried on to some extent, and some hats are made. Near it are several considerable collieries, and iron-works. It sends two members to Parliament. Constituency (1861) 1090 Pop. cor (1861) 10,569

NEWCASTLE UPON TYNE anc. Pons Ælæi A tn. and river port, England, co. Northumberland 1 bank Tyne, about 8 m. above its mouth in the German Ocean, and on the Newcastle and Carlisle the Newcastle and North Shields the York Newcastle, and Berwick sections of the North Eastern railway (added to which is the Blyth and Tyne railway, lat (Bridge N end) 56° 58' 42" N, lon 1° 36' 30" W (a) It occupies the sides and summit of three acclivities which rise steeply from the river and extends about two miles along its bank. It was once surrounded by a wall and a deep fosse — the former 8 ft. thick and 12 ft. high and flanked by numerous towers. The fosse has been completely filled but fragments of the walls and towers are still to be seen. In the older portions of the town the streets are narrow and winding and the houses of an irregular and often very antique appearance, but owing to the very extensive improvements which have been effected in recent years, many streets in the same locality have been completely modernised, and rendered both spacious and handsome. In the newer parts of the town many streets and squares, lined with elegant mansions not often equalled out of the metropolis, have risen up, while whole suburbs of villas have spread in all directions, and more especially in the W. A powerful stimulus to efforts in this direction was imparted by the late Mr. R. Grainger, and so extensive and rapidly executed were the works undertaken by that gentleman that he is said to have planned and constructed in the space of five years, streets and buildings at a cost of nearly a million sterling. One of these streets, called Grey Street, both from its width and the style of its architecture, is very imposing, and would do honour to any capital. The whole town is well paved and lighted, but the sewerage continues somewhat imperfect. The water-supply both as to quality and quantity, has also from time to time been a subject of complaint; but active measures are (1867) being taken to remedy these defects, and thus to improve the sanitary condition of the town.

The most important public buildings are the church of St. Nicholas, an ancient, spacious, and handsome structure, chiefly in the decorated English style, with a tower, crowned by octagonal turrets from which four buttresses rise, and terminate in a small crocheted spire, the whole 198 ft. high, and almost unequalled for its light and beautiful proportions, the church of All-Saints, a handsome Grecian structure with a Doric portico, a circular interior and a tower terminating in an elegant spire 202 ft. high the church of St. Andrew a very ancient structure, partly Norman, with a large but low embattled tower the church of St. John of ancient date and large dimensions, with some interesting monuments; the church of St. Peter, an elegant modern building, with two fine windows of stained glass the church of St. Thomas, built in the early English style, with a lofty embattled tower and graceful minaret, the R. Catholic church and cathedral of St. Mary, a magnificent modern building in the early English style; numerous other Dissenting chapels, several of them handsome, the Town hall a handsome and substantial modern edifice, the Central Exchange and News-room, forming a spacious semicircular Ionic building the Guildhall or original Exchange, the Merchants Court, the Corn Exchange, the Assembly-rooms, the Moot Hall in which the assizes for the county of Northumberland are held, a handsome range of buildings situated within the precincts of the ancient castle, and erected at an expense of £22,000 the Castle itself, one of the finest specimens of castellated Norman in England, and recently restored in many parts to its original style and character the Jail and House of Correction completed on the most improved principles and enclosed with an area of 3 ac. by a stone wall 25 ft. high a large savings bank an elegant theatre &c. public baths, and particularly handsome and commodious butcher green fish and cattle markets. Another structure, for which Newcastle has recently become celebrated is the High Level Bridge one of the grandest engineering achievements of the late Mr. R. Stephenson. It consists of six arches, each having a span of 125 ft., with two curved approaches, 66 ft. in length, the whole being formed of cast-iron pillars and arches. Above is a viaduct for the railway while underneath is a passage for foot passengers and goods traffic, the total cost of the great work including land and compensation, having been £491,183. By this means ready access is obtained to the sister borough of Gateshead. On the low level, communication between the two towns as at present (1867) conducted by a temporary wooden bridge the old stone section being in course of removal to give place to a more modern structure, in which provision will be made for the inlet and outlet of vessels. Another imposing public building is the Central Railway station, one of the most magnificent structures of the kind in the kingdom, its proportions having been recently greatly enlarged by the addition of a handsome portico. The more important libraries and other institutions are the Free Grammar-school the Royal Jubilee, national, infant, and many other schools the Northern Counties Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, the College of Medicine and Surgery, the Institute of which qualify for the diploma of the London College of Surgeons, and the House of the Apothecaries Company the Literary and Philosophical Society occupying a handsome Doric building, in which a museum and library are included, the Natural History and Antiquarian Societies, both with valuable collections, the Botanical and Horticultural Society the Institution for the promotion of the Fine Arts; the Mechanics Institution, the Infirmary occupying a large and handsome building; the Victoria Blind Asylum the Hospital of St. Mary Magdalene, the Workman, Jesus and several other hospitals and charitable endowments.

NEWCASTLE, FROM GATEHEAD, WITH THE HIGH LEVEL BRIDGE.—Drawn and Engraved by J. L. Williams.

The manufactures are very extensive, and possess an wonted facilities both from the means of transport by the improvements lately effected in the navigation of the river under the direction of the Tyne commissioners, and from the unlimited supplies of excellent and cheap coal obtained from the neighbouring collieries. Within the town or in its immediate vicinity, are numerous blast-furnaces, and important malldale and other ironworks. Iron goods, also, including hardware and large castings, are made at numerous extensive establishments. The other most important staples are locomotive and other machinery earthenware, glass, chemical products, sheet and pipe lead, cordage and cables, painters colours soap, railway and other carriages, brassware, patent shot, brinks and tiles, paper millcloth, &c., while the extensive works of Sir W. G. Armstrong and Co. at Elswick, for the manufacture of ordnance, afford employment to a large number of men. There are, also large flax and spinning mills; flour bone, oil and saw mills and extensive building-yards, at which great numbers of sailing vessels and steamers, both in wood and iron, are constructed. The coasting and export trade, including both the above articles of manufacture, and grindstones (for which Newcastle has long been celebrated) salt, and more especially coal and coke, is most important. The following, according to Brown's Export List, edited by Mr. J. B. Bates, are the quantities shipped coastwise and over sea for the last three years ending 31st December 1886, independent of an immense quantity sent by railway:—

| COAL | | | COKE | | |
|----------------|----------------|----------|-------------|--------------|----------|
| Counties. | | Oversea. | Counties. | | Oversea. |
| Tons. | Tons. | | Tons. | Tons. | |
| 1884 2,283,642 | 1884 1,016,890 | | 1884 16,705 | 1884 123,004 | |
| 1885 2,613,654 | 1885 2,277,523 | | 1885 12,481 | 1885 155,489 | |
| 1886 2,620,445 | 1886 2,308,510 | | 1886 9,454 | 1886 178,551 | |

The total value of goods, exclusive of coal and coke, exported from Newcastle to foreign parts was in 1884, £776,472 in 1885 £1,147,301 and in 1886, £1,844,946. The total number of ships which entered harbour from foreign and colonial ports during 1886, was 2358. Of these the Channel Islands contributed 31; France, 100, Holland, 344, Belgium, 110 Norway 887 Sweden, 247 Denmark 176, Germany 133, Prussia, 500, Russia 123, Portugal, 130; Spain 283 Italy 14 British America, 33 South America, 11. The number of vessels shows an increase of 887 over those of the previous year. The more important imports are corn, sugar, grain, clover and other seeds, flax, hemp oak-bark, fruit wine spirits, colonial produce tallow hides tar and pitch oil brimstone, bones, bristles, rags, timber and cabinet-wood, pyrazon &c. The inland trade is also very important, and has in recent times been greatly augmented by the different railways. Steamers ply regularly to St. John's, Leith, and other places N and S. of Tyne-mouth. Besides the regular weekly markets for provisions, there are large corn and cattle markets and among the general horse and cattle fairs, one held in October lasts for eight days.

Newcastle appears to have been a Roman station and to have derived its name of Pons Ælii from a bridge erected over the Tyne by the emperor Hadrian. The Roman wall, also (according to its historian Dr. Bruce) built by Hadrian passed through it and terminated at Wallsend about 8 m. N. In after times it became so famous for its monastic establishments that it took the name of Monkchester and was the resort of numerous pilgrims, who came to visit the holy well of Jesus Mount, near Jesmond, about 1 m. N. E. It owes its name of Newcastle to a fortress built by Robert eldest son of William the Conqueror. It was first surrounded by walls in the reign of Edward I. During the reign of Charles I. it was surprised and taken by the Scottish army under Leslie. Among its eminent natives are Duns Scotus Alexander the poet, Hutton the mathematician, the Earl of Eldon, the celebrated English chancellor and his scarcely less celebrated brother Baron Stowell judge of the admiralty court. Admiral Collingwood George and Robert Stephenson father and son the eminent engineers, and the celebrated wood-engraver Bewick, were also born in the immediate vicinity. Newcastle returns two members to the House of Commons. The borough is divided into nine wards, and the municipal government is vested in a mayor 14 aldermen, and 40 councillors. Three daily and three weekly newspapers are published in the town. Pop. of borough in 1861, 109,291.

NEWCHAPEL par. Irish. Tupperary 4873 an. P 1065. NEWENT a market town and par. England co. and 8 m. N. W. Gloucester. THE TOWN once more important than at present, on the Hereford and Gloucester Canal consists of three irregular streets and has a spacious and handsome parish church, with a tower terminating in a lofty spire two dissenting chapels, and a good national school. Area of par. 7308 ac. Pop. 2301.

NEWFOUNDLAND (Latin Terra Nova, French, Terre Neuve, German, Neu-Fundland) a large Isl. British A. America, Atlantic Ocean, at the mouth of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and nearer to Britain than any other part of America—the distance from the port of St. John to the harbour of Valdesia, in Ireland, being only about 1918 m. Its N. part is separated from the coast of Labrador by the Strait of Belle Isle, and its S. W. extremity from Cape Breton and Nova Scotia by the great entrance into the Gulf lat. 48° 37' to 51° 40' N. lon. 52° 40' to 59° 31' W.; greatest length, N. to S., 850 m., average breadth, 180 m., area, 57,000 sq. m. It is of extremely irregular form, with a coast-line, particularly on the S.E. and S., broken up in a remarkable manner by broad and deep bays, harbours, coves, inlets, and lagoons. The most remarkable of these indentations are Hare, White, and Notre Dame Bays, Bay of Exploits, Bonaville, Trinity, and Conception Bays, on the E. coast, St. Mary's Bay Fortune and Placentia Bay, on the S. coast, and St. George's Bay, and Bay of Islands, on the W. There are, besides these, many smaller bays and harbours. Many of these are extensive, commodious and well sheltered with numerous rivulets running into them while most of the harbours have complete anchorage, with clear and good channels. The interior of the island, of which little was known previous to 1822 appears to be rocky with numerous tracts of moss, much intersected by rivers and lakes, and but thinly wooded except on the banks of the rivers. Great boulders, or loose rocks scattered over the country increase the general roughness of its appearance and character. Hills and valleys continually succeed each other the former never rising into mountains (the highest not exceeding 1500 ft.) and the latter rarely expanding into plains. The sea-cliffs are, for the most part, bold and lofty with deep water close to. Bays and lakes are numerous, and some of them of considerable size. The largest of the former are Humber river and the river Exploits, both issuing, like all the other streams in the island, from lakes or ponds in the interior some of which are of great extent the largest called Grand Pond being from 50 to 60 m. long, and 5 m. broad while the next in dimensions, Indian Lake, is 30 m. long and from 5 to 6 m. broad. The prevalent formation of the island is granite and in some parts porphyry quartz gneiss, mica and clay slate, with secondary formations. The minerals of the island comprise coal pyrites copper lead, and it is said, iron. Salt springs are reported near the W. coast. The whole of the land in and about the neighbourhood of Conception Bay—very probably the whole island—is rising out of the ocean at a rate which threatens at no very distant day, materially to affect many of the best harbours on the coast. At Pointe-de-Grave, in Conception Bay several large flat rocks, over which schoolboys might pass some 30 or 40 years ago with the greatest facility are now approaching the surface, the water being severely navigable for a skiff. The climate, though severe is healthful, the mortality among the inhabitants being on a lower scale than in any portion of the American continent—the deaths, according to the population returns, being only 1 in 78—while in no other country is old age attended with greater bodily vigour and mental animation. Winter which consists of a series of storms of wind, rain, and snow lasts from the beginning of December until the middle of April. January and February are the coldest months. Snow does not lie long on the ground, and the frost is less intense than in W. Canada, though the thermometer frequently falls 30 below the freezing point. The summer is short and warm. In May and the beginning of June, dense fogs prevail on the banks and neighbouring shores, but they do not appear to be in the least prejudicial to health. The principal trees are spruce larch, willow, and mountain ash. Rubus and trailing evergreens are met with in great variety, and the berry-bearing shrubs clothe every swamp and open tract. European and American grasses of various kinds, as well as also natural red and white clover and vetches. Agriculture employs a large portion of the inhabitants. The crops generally are abundant, particularly potatoes. Grain crops also thrive well, wheat having been known to yield 50 bushels per acre, but both climate and soil are perhaps fully more favourable to pasturage and green crops than to grain. The wild animals are the deer bear wolf, hare, beaver marten, dog wild cat, rat, and mink. The pure blood of Newfoundland dogs, so much celebrated for their sagacity and fidelity, is rarely to be met with, these generally seen in the island being crosses of every conceivable variety. Birds are numerous, both land and aquatic. On the coasts, the mores or sea-horses formerly abundant, but has been nearly annihilated. Seals are numerous on the coasts as are also whales, grampuses, and porpoises and the famous banks of Newfoundland swarm with almost every variety of fish, particularly cod. These banks form the most extensive submarine elevation on the globe, in their full extent, they occupy 16° of lon. and nearly 10° of lat. and are between 500 and 700 m. in length, with a depth of water varying from 4 to 160 fathoms, 40 being supposed the mean depth. The shores of Newfoundland, however, equally abound with cod as the banks, and are prefished by the English as fishing ground, being more convenient for curing and drying their fish, and less exposed to the fog, rain, and sleet so frequent on the banks. The cod fishery opens at the beginning of June, and lasts till about the middle of October and may be said to form the staple occupation of the inhabitants of this colony. In 1845, the number of persons engaged in that fishery was 33,599, and the number of their boats 10,089. The value of the dried cod fish exported, in 1849, was £265,482 and of cod oil 287,623. The herring fishery has been almost wholly neglected, though the shores of Newfoundland swarm with that valuable fish, and the salmon fishery is not more energetically prosecuted. The seal fishery is next in importance to the cod fishery; the number of vessels engaged in it, in 1847, was 340—tonnage, 59,984—men employed, 11,000—number of seals caught, 455,139—estimated value, £214,175. The total exports of Newfoundland amounted, in 1849 to £276,567, and the imports to £770,190; of the former sum, the fishery exports alone amounted to £253,004. Shipping—towards 125,166 tons outwards, 127,365 tons.

The aboriginal inhabitants of Newfoundland, supposed not to be numerous, are remarkably shy of intercourse with Europeans, confining themselves wholly to the interior of the island with which settlers have little or no communication. A large proportion of the settlers are natives of Ireland, and of the islands of Guernsey and Jersey and their descendants, but many of the inhabitants are also from other parts of the United Kingdom. The population has retained the habits of their old country to a greater degree than in other N. American settlements.

The government of Newfoundland is administered under a constitution granted in 1832 by a governor, an executive council consisting of 9 members, who also compose the legislative council, and a house of assembly consisting of 15 representatives. Justice is dispensed by a chief justice and an assistant-judge, and the police is under the management of one chief and two junior magistrates. The most perfect toleration is here extended towards all religious sects. The R. Catholics are the most numerous, amounting to 40,725 persons; the Church of England next, 34,381, and the Wesleyans third 14,289. The educational institutions consist of a male orphan asylum with 470 children, 8 grammar-schools and academies, under the control of the local government, 40 schools established by the Newfoundland and British North American School Society on the Madras system with about 2764 male and female pupils in 1848. 8 schools under the Wesleyan Methodists, and a convent school, with 400 female children. Elementary schools have, besides, been established in every district in the island by the local legislature.

Newfoundland is supposed to have been discovered by the Norwegians, or Northmen, about the year 1000. But, if so, it was re-discovered by John Cabot on the 24th June, 1497, when he took formal possession of the island in which a settlement was subsequently formed by some Portuguese adventurers, who were in turn expelled by Sir Francis Drake in the reign of Elizabeth. After this period numerous English colonies were established from time to time along the E. coast, and several French along the S., in the Bay of Placentia. But, in 1713, Newfoundland and its dependencies were ceded, by the treaty of Utrecht, to belong wholly to Great Britain the French reserving a right to fish and cure on certain parts of the coast. The only noteworthy town on the island is St. John's (which see) Pop. (1850) estimated at upwards of 100,000.

NEWHAVEN, a tn. and par England, co. Sussex, near the mouth of the Ouse, here crossed by a draw bridge, 8 m. E.S.E. Brighton and on a branch of the Brighton and South Coast railway. It has a parish church, a Dissenting chapel, a national school, and a harbour which, from the important improvements recently made upon it, is considered the best tidal harbour between the Downs and the Isle of Wight, and from which steam-packets sail to France. Ship-building is carried on to some extent. Area, 1217 ac. Pop. 1358.

NEWHAVEN a vil. Scotland, co. and 2 m. N. Edinburgh on the S. shore of the Forth of Forth. It consists of an original village, composed, for the most part, of mean huts, occupied by fishermen, and a more modern portion, containing a great number of good houses and villas, occupied chiefly as lodging-houses and sea-bathing quarters; and has an Extension and a Free church and valuable oyster and other fisheries. A little W from the village are the excellent harbour of Granton, and a terminus of the Edinburgh, Leith, and Granton railway. Pop. 2108.

NEWHILL, a vil. and par Scotland co. and 6 m. W N W Aberdeen near the Don with a handsome parish church, a parochial school, a walled town and numerous flour-mills, a brewery, extensive manufactures of paper and valuable granite quarries. Area of par 6 m by 5 m Pop. 3335.

NEWICK par Eng Sussex 1866 ac. Pop. 986. KEWINGTON several pars. Eng.—1 Kent 2108 ac. Pop. 781.—2 Oxford 871 ac. Pop. 408.—3, (Lagash) Gloucester; 2181 ac. Pop. 289.—4, (near 274th) Kent 8194 ac. Pop. 499.—5, (St. Mary, Surrey; 624 ac. Pop. 64,816.—6, (South) Oxford; 1460 ac. Pop. 419.

NEWLAND par Eng. Gloucester 8797 ac. P. 4574. NEWLANDS par Scot. Peebles 13,000 ac. Pop. 950. NEWLYN par Eng. Cornwall, 8010 ac. Pop. 2123. KEWMARKET a market in Ireland co. and about 27 m N W Cork, on the Duffina with a handsome Protestant and a R. Catholic church, national and several other schools, a good market house, and a corn mill. J. Philpot Curran was born here. Pop. 1265.

KEWMARKET, par Wales, Flint 1031 ac. P. 642. KEWMARKET, a market in England, partly in co. Cambridge and partly in co. Suffolk 56 m. N.E. London, on a gentle declivity on the Eastern Counties railway. It has a handsome church, an Independent chapel, a literary institution, public assembly-rooms, several schools, a cockney club, and corn market and malt making and brewing are carried on. But Kewmarket derives nearly its whole importance from its celebrated race-course, and horse-training establishments. The former which is about 3 m. W from the town, is between 4 m and 5 m long, and is considered the finest in the kingdom. The races are held seven times in the year. The training of horses, for which there are no fewer than 15 establishments, is the chief business of the place, and is a source of large emolument. The training ground admirably adapted to its purpose is 1½ m. long. Area, 320 ac. P. 3856.

KEWMAHKEET-ox FRANKS, a tn. in Ireland co. Clare near the N.E. shore of Lough Fergus, 6 m S S.E. Kinnis. It has an Established church, a R. Catholic chapel, two schools and a dispensary. Inhabitants chiefly agricultural, but many young women sew muslin. Pop. 1111.

KEWMILLS, a vil. Scotland Ayrshire, r. bank Irvine Water, and on a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 7 m E. Kilmarnock. It is tolerably well built, has an Established, a Free and a U. Presbyterian church—all handsome modern buildings several schools, a charitable endowment, manufactures of fine cotton fabrics and Jacquard machines and a worsted-mill. Pop. 2211.

KEWTHAM, several pars. Eng.—1 Hants 1008 ac. Pop. 560.—2 Herts 951 ac. Pop. 150.—3, Kent 1299 ac. Pop. 451.—4, Northampton 1940 ac. Pop. 679.—5, (Hertford) Oxford 1890 ac. Pop. 327.—6, (Bucks) Warwick 1418 ac. Pop. 119.

KEWTHAM, a market in par. and par. England co. and 10 m. W S.W. Gloucester, r. bank Severn, with a church, Independent and Wesleyan chapels, a good school, and a harbour admitting vessels of 150 tons; some trade and ship-building. Coal and iron are extensively worked in the vicinity. Area of par 2105 ac. Pop. 1286.

KEWNTON two pars. Eng. Wilt.—1, (Long), 2289 ac. Pop. 994.—2, (North), 1831 ac. Pop. 964.

NEWPORT several places, England—1, A municipal and par bur. and market in par. and par. Isle of Wight, 15 m. S.S.E. Southampton, on a gentle ascent, 1 bank Medina, which is navigable to the town for small craft. It consists of five principal parishes, 2 in W. streets, and three or four others intersecting them at right angles, all kept in excellent order well paved and lighted with gas houses of brick, mostly well built. It has a handsome cornmill, comprising public offices, and an excellent market-place beneath; a small theatre, jail, and house of correction, two churches, one a spacious, modern structure, with an embattled tower the other a ruinous old edifice, built in 1173, place of worship for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, Unitarians, R. Catholics, and others, a royal national a royal British, a blue-coat, and several Sunday-schools, a set of almshouses, a mechanics institute, a library and philosophical institution a literary and scientific institute, and four friendly societies. Lanes are made here, employing about 800 hands, also agricultural implements, for which Newport has a wide reputation. There is likewise, a considerable trade in coals, wheat, and flour. But the principal business of the place arises from its being the market town of the agricultural and grazing district around. About 1 m. S.W. from the town are the ruins of Canabrook castle. The borough sends two members to Parliament, constituency (1851), 707. Area of par., 60 sq. Pop. 5094. Pop. bor., 5047.—(Local Correspondent).—A seaport and market tn. and par. bor., on and 30 m. S.W. Monmouth. A bank, Uk, here crossed by an elegant stone bridge about 5 m. from its mouth, in the estuary of the Severn, and on the Monmouth and Cardiff railway. It is very irregularly built except in the more modern parts which are elegant and has a parochial and a handsome district church, a maritime church, and places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans Society of Friends, and Catholics, a good haven and a considerable trade. Chief exports iron, coal, and tin-plate, imports, provisions, timber from America, and general goods. The dock is spacious, and capable of all masting vessels of any dimensions and burden, at all states of the tides. Ship-building is carried on to a great extent. There are also here several iron foundries an extensive nail factory, several saw mills, and large anchor and chain-cable manufactories, &c. It unites with Monmouth dist., in sending a member to Parliament. Pop. 18328—3. A market tn. and par. Shropshire 16 m. N.E. Shrewsbury, with a church, an Independent chapel, two free schools and two acts of almshouses. Area of par. 567 ac. Pop. 2908—4. A vil. Corn wall separated by a rivulet from Launceston, of which it may now be considered a suburb, having been incorporated with it by the Reform Act. It was previously an independent borough, and had returned two members to Parliament from the time of Edward I. Pop. 1088—5. A seaport and par. Wales, on Pembroke, on an acclivity, at the mouth of the Nevaen, in St. George's Channel. It has small, irregular streets neither lighted nor paved an ancient church, Baptist, Independent, and Calvinistic Methodist chapels several schools, the remains of an old castle, extensive slate quarries a small harbour which affords good shelter for coasting vessels, and at which a considerable trade is carried on in export ing corn, butter, and slate, and importing coal, oil, and limestone. Area, 4711 ac. Pop. 1716—6 (Payson). A market tn. and par. on Buckingham on the Ouse 48 m. N.W. London. It has a noble-looking church places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyans several schools, a few almshouses, a circulating library, savings-bank, and a society for promoting Christian knowledge. Area of par., 5230 ac. Pop. 8651—7. A par. Essex 1714 ac. Pop. 996.

NEWPORT two places, Ireland.—1 (or Newport-Pratt) A market tn. and seaport co. Mayo at the head of Clew Bay at the mouth of a river of same name, here crossed by a good stone bridge. It has a most modern church, a spacious R. Catholic and a Methodist chapel, a national school, a court-house, a custom-house a spacious harbour, admitting vessels of 400 tons, and a considerable trade in grain. The old castle of Carrickmaddy is in the vicinity. Pop. 964—2 (or Newport-Ty) A market tn. co. Tipperary 11 m. N.N.E. Limerick, with a neat parish church, a R. Catholic chapel, a national school, and small industry here. Pop. 1112.

NEWPORT, a seaport tn. U. States, once cap. of Rhode Island, finely situated on its S.W. shore, at the main entrance of Narragansett Bay, 84 m. S. by R. Providence. It is defended by two forts and has 12 churches, a Jews synagogue, a statehouse, custom-house, market-house, armory, and library, and a curious old tower, which has called forth much learned but fruitless disquisition. The manufacturing establishments include some large cotton and woollen factories, and the trade is extensive, having the benefit of one of the largest, safest, and most accessible harbours in the Union. In 1850 the tonnage of the district, chiefly consisting, and partly employed in the whale, cod, and mackerel fisheries, was 10,578 tons. Newport is one of the few places which have not increased since the revolution. It was then about 10,000, and, in 1830 only 9568.

Vol. II.

NEWRY, a tn. river-port, par. bor., and par. Ireland, partly co. Down, and partly co. Armagh, finely situated in a valley, on the Dublin and Belfast Junction Railway, and on the Newry canal and Newry river, which a little below forms the estuary of Carrlingford Bay and is crossed by several bridges 53 m. S.E. W. Belfast. It consists of a handsome square, and a number of generally straight and well-kept streets, lined with substantial brick houses, and has two Episcopal churches, one of them with a spire 100 ft. high, three Presbyterian, two Methodist, and two R. Catholic chapels, a handsome court-house, several superior schools a university savings bank, assembly and reading rooms, a mechanics institute, several religious societies, manufactures of them, an extensive iron and brass foundry, and several corn-mills. By means of the river and canal it is accessible by vessels of 600 tons and carries on a considerable trade, exporting grain, cattle, and butter and importing coals iron, hardware &c. It returns a member to Parliament, constituency (1851) 517. Area of par. 5470 ac. Pop. 24,509. Pop. tn., 18,475. Pop. bor. 13,227.

NEWRY, par. Irel. Armagh 565 ac. Pop. 804. NEWTIMBLE par. Eng. Sussex, 1293 ac. Pop. 161. NEWTON par. Scot. Edinburgh 3 sq. m. Pop. 1780. NEWTON several places, England.—1 A vil. Longendale Cheshire, on a declivity 8 m. E. by S. Manchester and a station on the Manchester and Sheffield railway, with a parish church, in the Norman style, two Methodist chapels, a national and other schools, and several cotton mills, in which the inhabitants are chiefly employed. Pop. 1504—2. (Added) A market in Devon, 14 m. S.W. Exeter, with an Established church, places of worship for Baptists and Independents. Tanning and shoemaking are carried on and large quantities of shoes are exported to Newfoundland. Pop. 2147—3. (or Newton-Heath) A chapelry Lancashire about 8 m. N.E., and in the bor. of Manchester with an Episcopal and a Wesleyan chapel and two schools inhabitants chiefly engaged in the extensive cotton manufactures of the district. There are also here steel-works, fly-works and a very large manufactory of India rubber. Area, 1280 ac. Pop. 10,801.—4. (or Newton-Heath) A market in Lancashire, 15 m. E. by N. Liverpool on the railway to Manchester, consisting chiefly of one broad street, with some good houses in the vicinity are several extensive works, including iron fires, alkali works, and crown-glass making. It has a neat stone church with a conspicuous spire an Independent chapel and several schools. Races take place annually in July on a large common within a short distance of the town. Pop. 8719.—5. (Putter) A vil. See Forrester-Newton.—6. (or Newton) A vil. and par. co. and 8 m. N.W. York 1 bank Ouse, on the York and Newcastle railway built with a church a Wesleyan chapel and a charitable endowment. Area of par. 4590 ac. Pop. 947.

NEWTON numerous pars. Eng.—1 Lincoln 1290 ac. P. 230—2 Northampton 1050 ac. P. 65—3 (Massonville) Bucks 1050 ac. P. 392—4. (or Newton) Northampton 1740 ac. P. 118—5. (or Newton) Norfolk, 1056 ac. P. 171—6. (or Newton) York 1814 ac. P. 127—7. (St. Cyres) Devon 4205 ac. P. 1144—8. (St. Faith) Norfolk 640 ac. P. 238—9. (or Newton) Devon 8191 ac. P. 749—10. (or Newton) Norfolk 1173 ac. P. 559—11. (Kyme-Newton-Trevelton) York (W. Riding) 1050 ac. P. 228—12. (St. Lo) Somerset, 1378 ac. P. 440—13. (Long) Durham 4544 ac. P. 325—14. (Longville) Bucks, 1718 ac. P. 595—15. (North) Wales, Pembroke, 721 ac. P. 50—16. (or Newton) Wales, Glamorgan, 3877 ac. P. 869—17. (Old) Suffolk 3848 ac. P. 139—18. (St. Patrick) Devon, 1554 ac. P. 272—19. (or Newton) Oxford 593 ac. P. 117—20. (Rags or Newton-in-the-Thicket) Warwick, 1510 ac. P. 487—21. (or Newton) Cumberland, 9414 ac. P. 304—22. (or Newton) Derby 1280 ac. P. 366—23. (or Newton) Wills, 3370 ac. P. 708—24. (near Dunbury) Suffolk, 3197 ac. P. 499—25. (or Newton) Lincoln, 1004 ac. P. 71—26. (or Newton) Wills 2355 ac. P. 216—27. (or Newton) Devon 558 ac. P. 148—28. (or Newton-Trevelton) Lincoln 1590 ac. P. 866—29. (or Newton) Hants, 2268 ac. P. 455—30. (or Newton) Norfolk, 1290 ac. P. 227—31. (or Newton), Lincoln, 8080 ac. P. 173. NEWTONARDS, a tn. and par. Ireland, co. Down, at the N. extremity of Lough Strangford, and on the Belfast and County Down railway 9 m. E. Belfast. It consists chiefly of a handsome square, and several straight and spacious streets leading into it, is well built, and has an elegant parish church, three Presbyterian chapels, two Methodist, one Congregational, one B. Catholic, and one Unitarian, an elegant town-hall, with assembly-rooms adapted the ruins of an ancient church, converted into a court-house, and of a richly sculptured cross several superior schools, a fever hospital and dispensary, house of industry, iron workhouse, manufactures and embroidery of muslin for Glasgow houses and fine stone quarries. About 1 m. from the town, two lead-mines are worked. Area, 14,808 ac. Pop. to 10,076 per, 15,482.

61

NEWTON-SKIRWAT, a tn. Scotland co. and 2 m N by W Wigton, 7 bank Cree. It has a large and handsome Gothic parish church, considered one of the finest in Gallo way Free. U Presbyterians, Cameronians, and B. Catholic churches, an endowed academy and several other schools and manufactures of woollen and cotton goods. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the lead-mines, which are worked to a considerable extent in the vicinity, in Kirkcudbrightshire Pop. 2593.

NEWTON-UROK-ATA. See ATA.

NEWTOWN a beautiful vil New S Wales, co. Cum berland 5 m from Sydney Pop. 1511.]

NEWTOWN a place in England.—1 A pari bar market tn. and par N Wales, co Montgomery The town is situated in a beautiful valley r bank Severn crossed here by a handsome stone bridge, 8 m S W Montgomery and on the Montgomery canal. It has an ancient church in the early English style, places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyans Independents, and Welsh Calvinistic Methodists, an academy for the preparation of young men for the ministry, belonging to the Independents 11 day-schools, and a dispensary extensive manufactures of shawls, numerous fulling-mills and several bleacheries, a large foundry, potteries, tanneries, and a considerable trade in malt. Newtown-unites with Montgomery, &c., in sending a member to Parliament Area, 2785 ac. Pop. bor 6571 Pop. par 2784.—2, (Lynford) A par Leicester 2890 ac. Pop. 468.—3, (near-Edwinstrey) A par Hants 475 ac. Pop. 262

NEWTOWN numerous places Ireland.—1 A par Meath 1108 ac. P 137.—2 A par Westmeath, 10,249 ac. P 2489.—3, (Derry) A vil and par co and 23 m N N W Wexford, at the junction of the Clody with the Blinney which is here crossed by a handsome bridge. It has a neat church, several schools, an hospital barracks, manufactures of linen and flax, and a slate quarry Area of par, 6284 ac. Pop. par 3123, vil. 1307.—4, (Stewart) A market tn co Ty rone 9 m N by W Omagh. It has a parish church a B. Catholic, two Presbyterian, and two Wesleyan Methodist chapels a national school and a dispensary. The ruins of an old castle occupy the summit of a hill, and there are several interesting antiquities and fine seats in the vicinity P 1403

—5, (Mount-Kennedy) A vil co. and 8 m N by W Wicklow with a handsome chapel, surrounded by a pinnacled tower a parochial school, hospital and dispensary P 717

—6, (Buckley) A tn., co. Fermanagh 164 m S S E Ennis-killen with a neat parish church B. Catholic, Methodist and Wesleyan chapels, a school, and court-house, and manufactures of tobacco and snuff. Pop. 477.—7 (Forkes) A vil. co. and nearly 3 m N W Longford with a Protestant Episcopal church, and a B. Catholic chapel. Pop 821.—8, (Howison) A tn and par, co and 11 m S.S.E. Armagh, in a valley, enclosed by steep hills. It consists of four streets, badly built, and worse kept, and has a parish church, about 1 m distant from the town Presbyterian and B. Catholic chapels a national and two other schools, and some trade in flax. A considerable number of the young women are employed in sewing muslin. Area of par, 12,406 ac. Pop. 6285

—9 (Clonban) A par Meath 566 ac. Pop. 277.—10, (Crommelin) A par and tn. Antrim, 3446 ac. Pop. 878.—11 (Glenn) A tn. See CUMBERLAND.—12, (Lennan) A par Tipperary 5774 ac. Pop. 1428.

NEWTOWNMILMADYD, a market tn. Ireland, co. and 16 m E N E Londonderry 7 bank Roe, here crossed by a stone bridge. It has a large parish church, three Presbyterian a B. Catholic, Unitarian, Independent, and two Wesleyan Methodist chapels, three national, and several other schools a savings bank, dispensary, women workhouse, and broadsword manufactures of linen and a considerable trade in flax and grain. Along the banks of the Roe, which, being preemptions and well wooded, are very picturesque, is the Lemanah or Dog's Leap, the ancient castle of the O'Callans. From which the town takes its name. Pop. 3206.

NEWTTULLA, a vil, and par Scotland co. Forfar on a branch of the Scottish Midland Junction railway. It has a plain parish and a U Presbyterian church, a school, manufactures of stocking, shoeting, Osnaburghs, &c. two saw and two flour mills Area of par, 2 m. by 2 m. Pop. 1141

NEXOL, a seaport tn. Denmark, isl. Bornholm. Besides tolerably secure roads, it has a harbour admitting vessels drawing 54 ft.; manufactures of woollens, several distilleries and breweries, and some slugging and general trade. Near it are sandstone and millstone quarries. Pop. 1400.

NEYBER, or Nayva, a river Isl Hayu which descends from the mountains of Chaco, near the N W side of the peak of Lanki, flows S.W. through a valley of same name passing the town of St John and falls into the Bay of Naybe, after a course of about 80 m. Its navigation is encumbered by a bar across its mouth

NEYKAWAH a tn Hindoostan, prov Ajmer, a large and strong place, enclosed by an irregular stone wall and nearly inaccessible from the extensive nurseries by which it is surrounded Numerous temples, images, and sculptured monuments, are dispersed about the neighbourhood

NEYVA, or Nayva, a tn. New Granada, on dist. on the Magdalena, at the confluence of the Nerya, 180 m S W Bogota. It suffered severely from an earthquake in 1827, but is still a place of some importance, and carries on a considerable trade in cacao of excellent quality

NGAMI, a lake in the interior of S. Africa, about lat. 20° 30' E. lon 23° E. It has been known vaguely from report ever since the establishment of intercourse between the Cape Colony and the Bechuanaland tribes, N of the river Orange. In 1816, it was described in the missionary Campbell under the name of Mumpura, that is, the country of lions, and the fact, that it is navigated, was not omitted. It is also well known to the Zulus, N of Natal, who name it Uliadi and consider it as three months distant. The Bechuanas generally call it, from its name, Malindra. A navigable lake so clearly indicated in the heart of the continent, was an attractive object for travellers but the difficulties awaiting the attempt to reach Lake Ngami, seemed at first insurmountable. The coast of these countries in the desert of soft sand extending from W to E, with a width of 100 m., N of the country of the Bamangwato in lat 23 S. The depth of the sand and the scarcity of water, render the attempt to cross this desert extremely hazardous. At length in June 1849, this dangerous tract was crossed by Mr Cotton Orwell and the Rev David Livingstone, and they came upon the Zonga, a river which flows from the lake about 250 m., irregularly E and S E, until it spreads out into a lagoon, and is wasted in the sands. Following this river upwards, they arrived at the village of the Bahoban a branch of the Bamangwato tribe, who are settled on the lake in lat 20° 25' S. lon. 23° 30' E. From the shore of the lake, S.W. of the village no land could be described even it is in the W and N W. Towards the south it seemed to be 16 m. The natives stated that it was a three days' journey quick travelling, 75 m., along the S. and W shores, to the point where a river enters it from the N W. This river (the Tsoi) flows so rapidly, that once cannot ascend it by paddling. The Zonga, issuing from the lake, is at first a fine river from 300 to 500 yards wide, lower down, it becomes narrower with high banks, there it spreads out again, divides into rivulets, and disappears in the plain

The banks of the Zonga are generally of a calcareous soil, and are lined with traces of stately growth; some of these appear to be vestiges of the Baccharis Adansoni, with which are also banyans, like those of India, and Palmyra palms. Some of the native tribes make cloth of two kinds of cotton, the produce of a tree and bush, and dye it with the indigo which grows wild everywhere.

The Bahoban, a branch of the Bamangwato, a tribe of Bechuanas, are settled, as already stated, on the S. shore of the lake, where the Zonga issues from it. The lower part of this river is inhabited by the remnants of the Bechuanaland nation. But the bottom of the lake, who chiefly inhabit its banks and islands, are of Hottentot race, apparently from the W coast, and are called Bahoban (settles), and also Bahoban or Bechold, evidently a Bechuanaland attempt to enter the Hotentot stock, sound, age [man]. These Becholdes are described as supple to the Bechuanaland in vigor and intelligence. They are not confined to the lake, but navigate and fish in the numerous and great rivers further N. Their canoes are rudely hollowed out of a single tree and are often quite crooked. The people about the lake and further N live, to a great extent, on fish, which are brought down in abundance by the floods. The Becholdes possess well made mats, their fine cordage being spun of wild flax. The root of a kind of flag pounded, yields a farinaceous substance, not much inferior to wheaten flour. The tuberculous root of a water-lily is among the articles of food. Besides garden produce, wild fruits, and fish, the natives have also game in plenty (chiefly antelope, hippopotamus, and elephants) taken in pits along the river.

The sight of this African lake was interesting, but still more so was the information afforded by the natives, for they stated that Ngami is merely a reservoir for the surplus waters of a periodically inundated country about 300 m. further on, which country they designate by the name of Linoakaka or river on rivers. In consequence of this intelligence, the same enterprising travellers, starting from Klobong, a missionary station on one of the sources of the Limpopo, directed their course N. in 1861 and, crossing extensive salt-pans, in which the Zonga seems to terminate, arrived, after great labours, at the banks of the Chobe, in lat. 18° 20' S., lon. 26° E. This river, about 13 or 15 ft. deep is connected with Lake Ngami by a canal or transverse dike, named Tamushika. The spot thus reached by the waggon on the banks of the Chobe, is above 8000 m. from Cape Town. The travellers went down the river about 80 m. in a canoe to visit Shikana, the paramount chief of the country. They afterwards proceeded on horseback N.E. from the Chobe about 100 m., to Sebekke, which is situated in lat. 17° 28' S., on a large river, from 300 to 500 yards wide, and with a great volume of water. Fifty miles higher up this river stands Barotsa, Bechuanaland capital. Below Sebekke (that is, Sandshenke) the river is joined by the Chobe and at the distance of 80 m. forcing its way through hills, it is precipitated over rocks the falls being named Moet wa thunya (or Roaring Vapours). It afterwards receives another river, the Manushu, from the N., and then takes the name of Zambesi or Zambezi. All these rivers, namely the Manushu, Sebekke, and the Toge and the Zonga, flowing into Lake Ngami are represented as being connected together by transverse canals, which form of them one system of waters of immense extent, the breadth of the region intersected by them being at least 400 m. This region may in fact, be described as an immense marsh, embracing some tracts of elevated land, like islands, extremely fertile, and clothed with large timber. It can hardly be doubted that these waters all sink in the sands, and are distributed on the surface of the underlying limestone rock, throughout the riverbeds, but by no means unproductive desert, which extends from the N. bank of the Limpopo W. over some thousand square miles. The banks of the river, wherever there are reeds and trees, are infested by the Tsetse, a fly, the bite of which is fatal to cattle. Malaria fever also, is prevalent at the first rise, and at the fall of the waters. Very little rain falls in the country near Lake Ngami, and the rivers are never affected by it. Here as in Egypt, the floods descend in the dry season. The waters begin to rise in June, and reach their greatest height in the beginning of August. The source of the Becholdes, according to the natives, is in Lolala, the same country from which the Letaba, the main branch of the Zanga, descends in the opposite direction. The country beyond Linoakaka, is reported to be well peopled by industrious tribes, who make good pottery, and work in iron.

In 1852, Lake Ngami was again visited by a trading party. The oxen, 87 in number, and waggon of Mr Campbell one of the party, were conveyed in canoes, along the river Zonga, 300 m., to the lake. The party walked round the lake, and found it to be 60 m. in length, and 14 m. broad. The river Toge, one of its affluents, was also ascended for about 150 m., when the ravages of the Tsetse fly among the cattle compelled a return. Everywhere traces of Portuguese traders were found, but none farther from the W. coast, who had promised these regions a visit, were deterred from coming by the report of English traders being on the lake. Mr

Campbell says, 'A lucrative trade has been opened up, and this may be indefinitely extended though not without risk, and the endurance of great privation.'

NGAMATI, or BIAN MARU, a coral lagoon, uninhabited, lat. 8° 40' N., lon. 154° 50' E.; lon. 188° 28' W. 82 m. in diameter. Discovered, in 1826, by Captain Beechey.

NGANHOEI, an island prov. China, enclosed by provs. Chekiang, Kiangsoo, Hoonan, Houpe, and Kiangse, lat. 29° 5' to 34° 18' N., lon. 114° 50' to 119° 17' E.; area, 48,461 sq. m. In the S. and W. sections, it is agreeably diversified with ranges of low hills, but the surface is, for the most part, level and traversed by the Yang-tse-kiang and the Hooi ho, with their numerous tributaries. Near the Yang-tse-kiang are several small lakes, and the Chai ho or host Lake, between the two main rivers, is the largest sheet of water in the province. The vegetable productions comprise fruit, vegetables, and every kind of grain and green tea is extensively cultivated, particularly in the N.E. portion, which is the chief green tea district in China. Silk, cotton, and hemp are also raised; and gold, silver, copper and other metals are obtained from the mines. Ink and blue-lacquers are extensively manufactured. Provincial cap., Ngon kang-foo. Pop. 841,168,059.

NGOUÇA, a small tn. Algarve, Sahara, ocean and 19 m. N.E. Ouarzila. lat. 32° 32' N., lon. 4° 26' E., defended by a wall, crowned by 25 or 30 small square forts, and entered by five gates. It has a well fortified dike and two mosques, with schools attached. It carries on a considerable commerce with Tougourt. Pop. about 1000.

NGUNDAYAM, a tn. on Viti Levu, one of the Feejee Is., near lat. 18° S., lon. 175° W. The scene to it is most picturesque, being studded with reefs and shoals, and the inhabitants have had their full share in the atrocities which have been committed on trading vessels in that locality. In 1649 it was visited by Captain Worth, of H.M.S. Coligois, to demand the delivery of the murderers of two Europeans, which being refused, the town was bombarded and burned down.

NILIA TRAKO or NILIATRAK, a tn. Annam, cap. prov. and 5 m. above the mouth of a river of same name. lat. 12° 20' N., lon. 108° 10' E. It is a place of considerable importance, defended by a fort, built in the European manner and has manufactures of silk and other goods. A harbour, which admits vessels drawing 7 or 8 ft. water, and at which a trade with different parts of the coast is carried on.

NHO or NOU, a tn. Hindustan, prov. and N.W. Agri. lat. 27° 51' N., lon. 77° 81' E., long celebrated for the manufacture of a culinary salt, distinguished by the name of salubra, and procured, by crystallization, from the water of saline springs in the neighbourhood.

NIAGARA, a river N. America, separating Upper Canada from the State of New York, and conveying the waters of Lake Erie into Lake Ontario. It is 33½ m. long and varies in breadth from 1 to 4 m., being about the former where it issues from Lake Erie. Total descent, 431 ft. It is occasionally interrupted with low wooded islands—the largest of which, Grand Island has an area of 17,000 ac. About 15 m. from Lake Erie, it is precipitated over a ledge of aluminous and limestone, and forms the celebrated falls of Niagara, having been previously divided into two cataracts by a central island, called Goat Island, about 500 ft. in width and discharges it is computed, a hundred millions of tons of water each hour. The cataract on the S. side of the island, called the American Fall, is 103 ft. high, while 119½ ft. that on the Canadian side, called the Great or Horseshoe Fall, is 149 ft. high, with 5100 ft. Below the falls, the river rushes with great velocity down the sloping bottom of a narrow channel, for a distance of 7 m. This ravine varies from 200 to 400 yards in width from cliff to cliff, and its walls rise almost perpendicularly to a height of from 250 to 800 ft. About ½ m. below the Horseshoe Fall, the river, there about 1200 ft. wide, has so far resumed its tranquillity as to admit of the establishment of a regular ferry across. A short distance below the falls, a wire suspension-bridge has been erected across the river. It is 600 ft. in span and 230 ft. high.

NIAGARA, formerly KAWAKE, a tn. Upper Canada, at the mouth of the Niagara, in the S.W. extremity of Lake Ontario, a little below the Niagara Falls. It is one of the oldest towns in Canada; was once the capital of the country, and, from its airy and healthy situation, is much frequented as a summer residence. It is well built, has five churches, a substantial townhouse and co-orchestra and formerly carried on a very considerable trade, which, however, since the opening of the Welland Canal, has been almost entirely transferred to St. Catharines. Pop. (1858), 3340.

NIAGARA FALLS, a vill. U. States, New York, on the bank Niagara river, at the Falls, with two churches, two schools, great saw and paper mills, a woolen-factory, and several hotels. Pop. 760.

NIAMI, a large vill. W. Africa, 26 m. E. by S. the mouth of the Senegal. It is a place of considerable bustle and activity and has wells about 30 fathoms deep, and 20 ft. in circumference. Pop. about 3500.

NIAS, a large island off S.W. coast Sumatra, from which it is separated by a strait, 60 m. wide lat. (N. point) 1° 30' N. lon. 97° 15' E. (s.) It is about 50 m. in length, and 20 m. average breadth. The inhabitants are numerous, industrious, and frugal export handkerchiefs, temperate and regular in their habits, but, at the same time, avaricious, sullen, obstinate, vindictive, and sanguinary. Numbers of hogs are reared on the island, and some parts of Sumatra are supplied from hedges with yams, beans and poultry. Rice also is grown extensively, but chiefly for exportation.

NIJUMBLAND, a remarkable island, Sweden on the island, 18 m. N. Bohus. The river, where about 400 yards broad precipitates itself over a height of above 100 yards. During winter an immense arch of ice is formed over the fall and adds to its magnificence.

NIJUR, or AMOUR, the most W. of the Yellow sea, N. Pacific lat. 6° 55' 55" N. lon. 134° 5' 24" E. length, N.E. to S.W., about 4 m. It is low, and the water becomes so shallow on its S. side, that boats cannot approach within two miles length.

NIEBHAM, a vill. and com. Parma, Dutch and 80 m. S.W. Flushing, I. bank Tidore with a custom-house, a public school an old castle, and a trade in wine and cattle. P. 9307

NIBE, a seaport in Denmark, Jutland, bail. and 12 m. W.S.W. Aalborg, on the Nibe Bredning, B. shore of the Limfjord. When the herrings used to frequent the fiord an important fishery was carried on, and the town was very flourishing, but since the fishery ceased to be productive, it has fallen into a declining state. The cod fishery is still of some importance. The harbour is only a summer haven of the fifth class admitting vessels drawing 7 ft. Pop. 1800

NIBLEY (Nort), an Eng. Gloucester 3345ac. P. 1133.

NICANDRO two is. Naples—1, Prov. Capriata 27 sq. N. Foggia. 1 top 7000—2, Prov. and 11 m. S. Bari Pop. 3000

NICARAGUA, a state, formerly in the Central American Confederation, from which, however it withdrew in 1852 extends from the Bay of Conchagua, on the Pacific Ocean, to the Mosquito territory nearly from lat. 11° to 13° 45' N., lon. 85° 40' to 87° 35' W. having W. the N. Pacific Ocean, E. the Caribbean Sea and part of the Mosquito territory N. the state of Honduras and San Salvador, and E. Costa Rica, area, about 39 000 sq. m. A range of hills runs along its W. coast, at the distance of a few miles from the sea, ascending no great height until they approach the confines of Costa Rica, where they rise to an elevation of from 5000 to 11 000 ft. Between this ridge and the lakes of Nicaragua and Leon, the land is moderately level, but along the borders of Honduras and San Salvador, lofty ridges again occur, running in various directions. The central part of the state is occupied by a vast plain, known as the Plan de Nicaragua, comprising the lake of the same name. There are several volcanoes in the state, all towards the sea, ascending alone, or but slightly connected with the main ridge, but none of them are of any great elevation, the highest probably not much exceeding 6000 ft. Nicaragua has a considerable number of rivers, but none, except the San Juan (which see) are navigable to commercial uses, nor otherwise much known the principal are the Sagovia or Escondido, the Loma or Sigüa, all flowing E. The lakes are Nicaragua and Leon or Managua (which see). Veins of silver and copper, however, exist in many parts, but they remain almost all of them either unexplored, or only superficially worked. Gold, also, is said to occur. The climate is, on the whole, healthy, though various. In the interior and mountainous parts, the temperature is more dry and cool than on the coasts, where it is hot, and rather approaching to humid. By far the greater portion of Nicaragua consists of plains and gentle slopes, formed of a rich black loam. Unfortunately, however, the culture is at a very low ebb, and but a small portion of this valuable land is made available. The productions are indigo, of which from 600 to 1000 acres are manufactured yearly; sugar, coffee, cacao, and cotton, the last of superior quality, and formerly raised in large quantities, but now almost wholly neglected. Maize, rice, beans and plantains, the staple food of the people, are raised in abundance, and sold very cheap. Some wheat, also, is grown in the mountainous and cooler parts of the country. Fruits, of various kinds, are plentiful, including excellent oranges and lemons. One of the principal sources of wealth consists in cattle, of which there are great numbers in all parts particularly in the districts on the E. side of the lake, where extensive and excellent pasturage is met with. The chief exports of the state are indigo, Brazil wood, and hides. Nicaragua is said to be the most wretchedly governed of all the states. Leon is the capital. Other towns are Managua, Granada, Chinamega, and Nicaragua. Pop. [1858] estimated at 235,000

NICARAGUA, a tn. Central America, state and near W. bank of Lake Nicaragua, in a fertile district.

NICARAGUA (Lake), a tn. Central America, state and near W. bank of Lake Nicaragua, in a fertile district. Central America, state of same name, 90 m. long N. W. to S. E. greatest breadth, 40 m. mean, 80 m. 125 ft. above the Pacific, from which it is separated by a line of active volcanoes. The river San Juan de Nicaragua flows from its S. E. extremity into the Caribbean Sea and, at its N. W. extremity it is connected with the smaller lake of Managua or Leon by the river Pelayos. About 100 yards from the beach, there is generally a depth of about 2 fathoms, in other parts, all the intermediate soundings, between 6 and 15 fathoms are found. Water-fowl and other salt are abundant alligators, also, of great size, are numerous. It contains some islands and several groups of islets, all of volcanic origin. Of the former Zapatera, Ometepe, and Madera, are the largest, being several miles in circuit. Zapatera is mountainous, rising nearly to 2000 ft. in height, and is uninhabited, but Ometepe is occupied by an industrious race of Indians, who raise maize, &c. and possess some cattle. Madera is joined to Ometepe by a low neck of land, which is frequently overflowed in form, it is a huge mound of more than 4000 ft. high, covered with cedar-wood. The islets are generally coral in shape and seldom exceed 3 or 4 m. in area - they are covered with verdure, and on many of them are cultivated patches of ground and on such generally crowning their summits, relieved by a dense green background of plantations and surrounded by palms and the papaya with its great golden fruit, are the picturesque cane huts of the inhabitants. On one of the smaller islands, Pensacola, numerous relics of antiquity have been recently found consisting of huge, elaborately-sculptured stones, massive idols, and figures of monstrous animals. The material is, in every case, black basalt, and the existing exhibits being great in number, the ship and style differing materially from those of Yucatan. Steamers now ply on the lake, which forms a link in one of the routes across the great isthmus of Central America.

NICARIA, or NIKARIA an Isl. Grecian Archipelago, one of the Sporades lat. 37° 51' 9" N., lon. 26° 3' 8" E. about 21 m. long and 5 m. broad, and separated from Samos on the E., by the Great Bogas, or channel, which is 10 m. broad. It is crowned by a range of hills, covered with oak and pine trees, but is otherwise barren, though well watered, and has no port or harbour. A few sheep are reared, a little fruit is cultivated, and some charcoal prepared, and disposed of amongst the adjacent islands. On the S. side of the island are the villages of St. George and St. Nicolas and on the N. shore is the village of Yanigazos Pop. 1500.

NICASTRO, a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Ultra II., 19 m. S.S.E. Cosentino, on a height. It is walled and defended by a castle, mainly built, but contains several churches and convents; in the see of a bishop, and has some trade in oil. Near it are well-frequented thermal baths. Pop. 6000.

NICAVARI, one of the Nicobar is. See GANESHA.

NICE (Ital. Nizza, anc. Nicomedia and Nicaea) a city and port France, dep. Alpes Maritimes lat. 43° 48' N.; lon. 7° 17' E. (e.), beautifully situated in a plain of small extent, which it NICOLAS-D'ALIERMONT, a tn. and com. France, dep. Seine-Inférieure, 8 m. S.E. Dieppe. It has long been celebrated for a manufactory of cloths, in which 800 hands are employed. Pop. 1954.

NICOLAS (St.), several tn. France, particularly—1, (de-Ford) a tn. dep. Manche 6 m. S.E. Namy, on the Manche, with a large and magnificent Gothic church, manufactory of laces and embroidery worked and cotton-mills, tanneries, distilleries, breweries, and plaster-kilns Pop. 3182—2, (de-Grenville), a tn. dep. Manche, 16 m. N.W. Avranches Pop. 1028—3, (de-la-Grève), dep. Tarn-et-Garonne, 8 m. N.W. Castel-Sarrasin, in a fertile district. Pop. 1807

NICOLAS (St.), a tn. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, on the railway to Antwerp, 19 m. E.N.E. Ghent. It is situated in the Pays de Waes, one of the most populous and best-cultivated districts in Europe and is well built. The streets are generally spacious and straight, and the market-place is one of the largest in the kingdom. It has three churches, that of St. Nicholas has a handsome edifice two chapels, a townhouse, episcopal summary court and chamber of commerce, a conseil de prud'hommes, an agricultural and a musical society, an academy of design a prison an hospital, two orphan asylums, and several primary schools flourishing manufactory of cotton, woolen and silk stuffs ribbons, thread, pins, carpets hats lace, soap, oil glass, papers, tobacco, chocolate, carmen and copper ware, tobacco-pipes, playing-cards, &c. breweries vinegar works, distilleries, salt-refineries, tanneries, dye-works, printfields, and a train in corn flax lamp, hose, linen, &c. Pop. 18,942

NICOLAS (St.), a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 3 m. W. Laige near the railway from Lodge to Tournai. It has a distillery brick and tile works, and a trade in agricultural produce. Coal is worked in the vicinity P. 1548

NICOLA (St.)—1. A small seaport, E. coast, Grecian ad. of Cergea—2. A small tn. France ad. of Paso, opposite which there is a large and to 14 fathoms or further in, and near the shore is 20 or 8 fathoms—3. A cape, W. coast, Sardinia lat 39° 30' N lon 8° 28' E—4. A port, Grecian ad. Sardinia, below the town of Epimeneia. It is a fine harbour, of the shape of a half-moon, but too deep for anchoring in

NICOLONI, a tn. Sicily prov. and 7 m. N.W. Catania, on the S. slope of Etna. It is the highest town on the mountain, and suffered much from a torrent of it in 1533 Pop. 3539

NICOMÉDIE, a tn. Asiatic Turkey See IZMID

NICOPOLIS, a tn. European Turkey See NIKOPOL

NICOSIA (anc. Nicosia), a tn. Sicily prov. and 39 m. W. N.W. Catania, on a hill, washed by the Salto and Capaci. It has several churches and convents scarcely any manufactory, but carries on some trade in corn, wine oil, and cattle. Year it is beds of alum-salt, a rich mine of rock-salt, and springs of petroleum and sulphur P. 12 064

NICOSIA, or LAFROSIA, the cap. of Isl. Cyprus on a fine plain, 7 bank Leila, nearly in the centre of the island it was formerly a beautiful town and although now much decayed, has still a handsome appearance externally the walls and bastions giving it an air of grandeur It is about 9 m. in circumference, but was at one time of much greater extent. Its ancient church of St. Sophia, a fine Gothic building has been converted into a mosque. There is a spacious bazaar, a khan or enclosed court surrounded by apartments for travellers, the ancient palace of the governor, and several churches and mosques. Pop. 12,000.

NICOTERA, a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Ultra II., 16 m. S.W. Monteleone, a little E. of the Gulf of Gioja with an episcopal palace and college. Pop. 3900.

NICOYA—1. A gulf, Central America, state Costa Rica, W. coast, having at its entrance N.W. Cape Blanco, lat. 10° 54' N lon. 82° 7' W (n.) and S.E. Herradura Point, lat. 8° 30' N lon. 84° 40' W It is about 55 m. wide at the mouth, and 50 m. in length, S.E. to N.W., enclosed on the N.E. by an offset of the table-land of Costa Rica, and contains a good harbour (Punta Arenas), and several islands, none which pearls are fished, and a shell-fish is found which yields a bright red dye—2. A tn. on the peninsula by which the gulf is formed, where weaving, ship-building, &c., are carried on, besides a considerable trade in sugar Pop. 3000.

NICUMAN, or NIMAN, a river, China, prov. Manchouria, which rises in a branch of the Stanovoi mountains, near lat. 53° N, flows S.S.W. and joins L. bank Amoor, after a course of about 220 m. Its chief affluent is the Tolouanki, which joins it on the right.

NICKYDORE, or NIKSTALVA, a vil Hungary, Thutser Thales co. Temesvar, about 12 m. from Zeebely, with a R. Catholic church. Pop. 1218

NID-EAV, a river Norway which rises in prov. Christianland, hall, Brandsberg, flows S.W., and after a course of about 70 m., falls into the Skagerak opposite to Isl. Tromsø, where the Zulu issues from it. It is well built, and has a parish church, and the ancient castle of the counts of Rydals, built on an island. Pop. 1238

NIDAU, or NYDAU, a vil and par. Switzerland, on and 15 m. N.W. Bern, at the N. extremity of Lake Biemne, where the Zulu issues from it. It is well built, and has a parish church, and the ancient castle of the counts of Rydals, built on an island. Pop. 1238

NIDDI par. Eng. York (W. Riding), 1016 ac. Pop. 114
NIDDA, a walled tn. Hesse-Darmstadt, prov. Oberhessen, on river of its name, 26 m. N.E. Frankfurt. It has a castle, tower church chapel and hospital, manufactory of linen hosiery and leather, and a trade in corn and wood. P. 1871

—The river rises in the Vogelsberg, in Oberhessen, flows S.W., and joins r. bank Main 6 m. W. S.W. Frankfurt, total course 50 m. Principal affluents, on the right, the Wetter, on the left, the Hader NIDDER, a river Germany which rises in the Vogelsberg, Hesse-Darmstadt, flows S.W., enters Hesse-Cassel and joins L. bank Nidda, 7 m. N.E. Frankfurt; total course, 45 m.

NIDDRY, a vil Scotland, co. Linlithgow, 2 m. W. Kirkliston on the Union canal and the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway with the ruins of an old castle.

NIDREBT an agricultural vil. Holland, prov. and 10 m. S.W. S.W. Gouding, with a church. Pop. 174.

NIED, a river, France formed by the junction of the Nord Franconie and the Nied Alsatien, which unite in dep. Moselle, 11 m. N.E. Metz. The united stream flows N.N.E. enters Rheinland Prussia, and joins L. bank Sarre, about 7 m. below Sarrelouis, total course, 45 m.

NIEDER-THIERSTEIN, a market tn. Hesse-Darmstadt, Rheinland-Hesse circle Bingen, 7 m. W. S.W. Mainz, with two churches Pop. 2008.

NIEDER-LAUBMANN, a vil Germany See LAUBMANN
NIEDER-BAU, a market tn. Hesse-Cassel, prov. Fulda, circle Hanfeld, with a church and three mills. Pop. 1811

NIEDERBRUCKEN, a vil Nassau hall. Lomberg with a church and a mill. Pop. 1044

NIEDERBRONN, a tn. France, dep. Bas-Rhin, 9 m. S. Wissembourg, with two mineral springs, which have been known from a very early period, and are still pretty much frequented. Year it is blast-furnaces, and other iron-works. Pop. 2707

NIEDERGRAND, a vil Bohemia, circle Leitmeritz, about 61 m. N. Prague with a church and a school, three saw and four other mills. Pop. 1818

NIEDERHALL, a tn. Württemberg, circle Jaxt, hall Künzelsau, on the Kocher, with a church, a paper mill, and a tolerably productive saline spring. Pop. 1663

NIEDERHOF, a vil. Bohemia, circle Hildesheim, with a church school blackfield, and two flour-mills. Pop. 1177

NIEDERFINKBACH AM HOCHWALDE, a vil. Saxony, circle Bautzen, dist. Oberlautitz. Pop. 1909

NIEDERBOLM, a vil Hesse-Darmstadt, circle Rheingau, circle Mainz with a justice-of-peace court, a castle, a church, and four mills. Pop. 1280

NIEDERBÄL, a vil. belonging to the free town of Frankfurt-on-the-Main, with a church. Pop. 1604

NIEDERSTETTEN, a tn. Württemberg, circle Jaxt, on the Vorbach, 8 m. S.E. Mergentheim, with a court of justice, a church, two castles, and a trade in corn and wine. P. 1609

NIEDERSTÖTZINGEN, a vil Württemberg, circle Danneb, between the Danneb and Brau, on the road to Launigen with a church and a castle. Pop. 1370.

NIEDERZWEHREN, a vil Hesse-Cassel, Niederhessen, circle Cassel, with a church and a mill. Pop. 1872.

NIEDERZWONITZ, a vil Saxony, circle Zwickau, so near the town of Zwickau as to be almost its suburb. It has two churches, and manufactures of cotton goods, pipes, articles in horn, and paper saw, and oil mills. Pop. 3045

NIEVERN a vil. Baden, arr. Middle Rhine, bail. Forsthaus, 1 bank Rhe, 21 m. E S E Carlsruhe with a church, manufactures of excellent paper and a flour-mill. Pop. 1579

NIEHEIM a to Prussia, prov Westphalia, gov and 26 m. S S E. Minden It has a church, a synagogue and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1473

NIEHL, a vil. Rhénish Prussia, gov and not far from Cologne on the Rhine. It has a church, a mill, and several hat and shoe markets. Pop. 933

NIEL, a vil and com. Belgium prov and 10 m. S by W Antwerp, 1 bank Rhine It has a great number of brick-works, several breweries a ship-building yard, a corn and two oil mills, inhabitants chiefly employed in weaving; and a considerable trade in raw linen and linen thread. P 2667

NIELI A two places, Italy, Piedmont.—1 (Tanaro) A vil and com. div. Coal prov and 16 m. N E Mondovì, 1 bank Tanaro with a church an old castle in ruins, a charitable endowment and a trade in corn, maize, wine, and chestnuts. Pop. 2010.—2 (Zele) A vil and com. div. Coal, prov Alba on the Delio, here crossed by a wooden bridge, with a church, and a trade in vegetables. Pop. 77

NIEMEGE, a to Prussia, gov and 25 m. S S W Potsdam, on the Adelsbach with a church, manufactures of linen, breweries and distilleries, and some trade in flax wool, and cattle. Pop. 1929

NIESEN, or NIENZI, a river Europe It rises in Russia, gov Minsk, and is formed by the union of several small streams First proceeding N, and then W through gov Minsk, it enters the gov, and reaches the town of Wilna, when it bends round and follows a N W direction to Skorodil Its course now becomes somewhat devious, but in the whole, due W After entering Prussia Poland, and passing Elals it turns N W and falls into the Curische-Haff Its whole course is about 450 m. and, for a considerable portion of it it is a broad and deep river, navigable at all seasons, and of vast commercial importance to the districts through which it flows Almost all the trade of Volhynia and Lithuania is conveyed by it. Its principal affluents are, on the r bank, the Burensa, Maroszlanka, Vilia, Pajeleja, Dorabitz, and Jours, and on the l, the Uchtanka Zelva, and Hesechuppe

NIEMLIN, a to Prussia, arr. Danzig, 45 m. N N E Pragna with a church, school, five churches, a townhouse manufactures of ordinary woollens and woollen hosiery, and two mills. Pop. 8336

NIENTSCHITZ, two places, Austria, Moravia.—1 A market to chieve Prazna and S S E Olmitz, with a church 1 op. 1400.—2, (Gross) A market to cereals and 16 m. S S L Brlna with a church castle, and mill Pop. 1364

NIENBORG, a to Rhénish Prussia, gov and 27 m. N W Münster, on the Dinkel with an old castle, once a place of great strength a church and a trade in cattle. P 634

NIEBELING, a to Hanover, arr. Lüneburg, 1 bank Weser, 29 m. N W Hanover, with two churches, a hospital, manufactures of linen, cloth, and vinegar, some ship-building and a trade in wood and chertory. Pop. 4100

NIEBURG (Münster or Klostern), a vil. to Anhalt Ktzen at the confluence of the Bode with the Saale, 18 m. S. by E Magdeburg; with two churches, a castle, hospital, synagogue, a brewery, distillery, tile-works, and some ship-building. Pop. 1900

NIEBS, or NIEBSA, a river which rises in Rhénish Prussia, 6 m. E. Eckstein, gov. Aix-la-Chapelle, flows N N W into Limburg, and, about 1 m. below Gempe, joins r bank Meuse, after a winding course of about 70 m., of which nearly 35 m. are navigable. It abounds with eels and perch

NIEBSTEIN, a vil. Hesse-Darmstadt, 1 bank Rhine, 9 m. Mainz. It has two churches, numerous mills, and a trade in excellent wine grown in the vicinity. Pop. 2201

NIESKY, a colony of the Moravian Brethren, Prussia prov Silesia, gov and 69 m. E. Liegnitz, close on the great Olschitz Forest. It is built in the form of a square surrounded by four planted alleys, and has a church, a brother, a school, and a well-furnished hospital; a gymnasium, with several interesting collections; chiefly by the foreign missionaries; several elementary schools, manufactures of bed and table linen, embroidery, lace, &c., and two mills. P 640

NIEUKIRK, or NEUMUNSTER a vil. Rhénish Prussia, gov Düsseldorf cereals and 4 m. S E Geldern, with a church, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, hats, and other articles. Pop. 1090

NIEUPORT (Flemish, Nieuwpoort Latin, Nova portus), a to and port Belgium, prov W Flanders 21 m. W by S. Bruges, on the Yser near its mouth in the N Sea. It is well fortified, surrounded by walls and defended seaward by several batteries, has regular streets, and lined with substantially-built houses a townhall a handsome church chapel civil and military hospitals, a prison, orphan asylum, several schools, and an arsenal Brewing, distilling grinding corn, the manufacture of gunpowder, tobacco, ropes, and sails, ship-building, and fishing are carried on. Pop. 2980

NIEUW BOMME, or NIEUWOMME, a vil and com. Belgium, prov Brabant, on the Malenbach 22 m. N E Brussels with a flour-mill and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1055

NIEUW E-DRE (Hert), a vil. Holland, prov N Holland about 1 m. E Helder with which it is connected by a row of houses. It lies at the entrance to the great Amsterdam ship canal and possesses a safe harbor. Pop. 8186

NIEUWENHUIZEN, a vil. Holland prov N Holland, 8 S W Texorn with three churches, a school, an extensive ship-building yard a tannery and several mills. Pop. 829

NIEUWENHOORN a vil. Holland, prov S Holland, 3 m. S. Brielle with a church, school, and townhouse. Pop. 1019

NIEUWERKERK, two vils. Holland.—1 (op-den-Jaer), Prov S. Holland, 6 m. N E Rotterdam with a church, district house, and school some boat-building brick-making, and rope-spinning. Pop. 1170.—2, (in Dordrecht), Prov Zealand, 3 m. E Mieriksee, with a church and townhouse. Pop. agricultural 983

NIEUW HIKRIK, a vil and com. Belgium, prov E. Flanders, 45 m. S E Ghent with a distillery, flour and oil mills and some linen weaving. Pop. 3464

NIEUWKOOP, a vil. Holland prov S. Holland, 123 m. E Leyden with four churches. Pop. agricultural 1463

NIEUWKULIK, a vil. Holland, prov N Brabant, 6 m. W Hertogenbosch with a church. Pop. agricultural 978

NIEUWOLDE, a vil. Holland, prov and 17 m. E Groningen a scattered place, with a church and school. Pop. agricultural 1515

NIEUWPOORT, a fortified to Holland, prov S. Holland, 1 bank Lek, 17 m. N E Rotterdam with a townhouse, prison, church, and school, some fishing and hoop-making. Pop. 610

NIEUWSTAD, a vil. Holland, prov Lamburg 11 m. N E Maasticht, with a church and school. Pop. agricultural 799

NIEVRE, a central dep. France, bounded, N by Yonne, W Cher, S. Allier S E. and E Saône-et-Loire, and N Côte-d'Or greatest length N W to S E, 76 m., breadth 60 m., area, 2695 sq. m. It is intersected, S. E. to N W by a mountain chain (highest, Mount L'evay 2912 ft.), forming the water-shed of the dep., dividing its drainage between the basin of the Seine, which receives the waters of the N slope chiefly by its affluent the Yonne, and the basin of the Loire, which forms the S.W. boundary and drains the far larger portion of the surface in part directly, and in part by its affluent the Allier and Nivère the latter a stream with a S.W. course of 80 m., which joins the Loire at Nevers The soil is generally of indifferent fertility, nearly one-half of the whole surface is arable, and considerably more than one-third is in wood only one-fourth is absolutely waste. In addition to the ordinary cereals, a good deal of hemp and flax is grown. The vine also is successfully cultivated some of the white wines ranking high, though, on the whole, the quality is indifferent. The pastures are extensive and great numbers, both of cattle and horses are reared but the chief sources of revenue in the department is timber derived from its extensive forests, consisting chiefly of oak, elm, and beech Game is very abundant. Iron and coal, of excellent quality, are worked extensively and furnish the principal sources of industrial employment, both of yellow ochre, and quarries of granite, marble and grinding-stones are also worked in several districts. The only other manufactures deserving of notice are some coarse woollen cloths, and other woollen stuffs, linen, cutlery, works in enamel, common pottery, and porcelain. The trade in the different products already mentioned is in portant. For administrative purposes, Kibira is divided into four arrondissements—Meyera, the capital Chateau-Chabon Chamozy and Combe subdivided into 25 cantons, and 316 communes. Pop. (1903), 237,161.

NIEZKYDORF or NITKEVALVA, a vil Hungary, Thurber Thesen, co. Temesvar, 12 m. from Zeeboly; with a church. Pop. 1310.

NIEZWTZEL, or NERTZ, a tn. Russia, gov. and 60 m. S.S.W. Minsk, cap. of a principality, on the Lipa. It has a college, and a Benedictine monastery. The principality belongs to Prince Nalzevill. Pop. 1600.

NIGDEH, or NIDEN (anc. Gedysa) a tn. Asiatic Turkey, Karamanli, cap. sanjak, on a coastal height, 70 m. S.S.W. Karamanli, partly surrounded by ascent walls, and defended by three castles; has several mosques, a celebrated Mahometan college, and some interesting antiquities. Pop. about 5000.

NIGER, the name now commonly given to the great river of Western Africa, or Guinea, which rises in the country of the Mandingoes, and flowing N and N.E. towards the desert, afterwards turns S.E. and S. and enters the sea through many mouths in the right of Benue. The source of this great river is, according to Major Tait, at Mount Lome in about lon 9° 45' W lat. 9° 25' N; and 1600 feet above sea-level, but there is good reason for believing that it may be sought much further to the S and E. in the Kong, or mountains, for long is a general term, and not a proper name. At its source it is called Tonina, that is, water in the Kusa language, but lower down in Bambarra, it is entitled Baka great river or Joliba that is, the river of the Joli or Red Men who are the inhabitants of Joli-nikou (Red Man's Land) the Joloukondoo of Park. These Red Men are Sura, or Mandinga. It becomes navigable at Bambaroo, 100 m. above Segou in Bambarra and at the latter place it is as wide as the Thames at Westminster. Lower down it enters a level country and divides into several arms, enclosing extensive islands, one of which stands Jeneu, or Gine (properly Gineva) the great emporium of Negroland and from which the whole country has derived its commercial name (Jeneu). The river then enters on a territory in which the Fula, Follas or Fellatah are the rulers, while the indigenous population are called Songay and speak the Songay or Kassou language, within the domain of which the river is called Issa. In its course down to Gine, the Joliba receives several accessions from the S. Further on, it turns northwards, in a very winding course between low banks, crossing Debu or Blackwater Lake, and receiving on the right numerous streams from the mountainous country of the Songay. At Kobra, the port of Timbuktu it probably reaches its highest latitude (about 17° N); it then runs E. along the desert for 6 days, and S.E. for about 15 days to the frontiers of Houssa. From Gine to Sai, opposite to Houssa, a distance of 600 or 1000 miles, the Songay language is spoken on the r. bank of the river, and from Sai also it extends on the l. bank eastwards to Asben, or Agades, on the borders of the desert.

In the Houssa country the great river is known as the Galla kwadra, that is, the river Kwara, or Kwara (Quorra) and further E. in Nyfa, where it is often a league wide or more, it is called the sea or lake of Kyfe, or kwafe. This name, all written in the first instance, and subsequently misread, explains the Lake Kura of Arab geographers. The very active commerce which here abounds in the heart of Africa the broad waters of the Kwara or Quorra, fully justifies the celebrity of its name. Through Houssa and Kyfe flow several streams from the heights which divide those countries from Bornou, while on the western side, through Gounes and Bargo, the Kwara receives the small rivers which descend from the mountains of the Songay, which will probably be found to strike from S.W. to N.E. but it is at the southern extremity of Nyfe (lat. 7° N), that it unites with its chief tributary, the Telade, descending with a navigable stream from Adamawa, where it is called the Buro. The united stream then flows S. by W. between Yoruba on its r. bank, and Iddah on the l. and here with a changed language, it is called Uffimbi Fata, or White Water the Telade being styled Uffimbi Dula, or Black Water. The Dula commences near Abok, about 90 m. above the sea. It is little known, the only channel through it hitherto explored by Europeans, being that of the Nun, which, with an ordinary 1½ m. wide, narrows a little way up to 130 yards. The bar, on which there is a violent surf, presents a great difficulty to sailing vessels. It is supposed that the Kwara (Quorra) or Niger is connected with the Calabar by Cross River and it is certain that on the W there are navigable channels from it to Warra and Benin. The whole course of the great river from Mount Lome to the mouth of the Nun, without regard to sinuities, is about 2000 m., if traced from the mountains further S.E. and through all the details of its windings, it would fill little short of 3000 m. It was descended by Mungo Park from Segou to Bouma, a distance, on the river probably of from 1500 m. to 1800 m. But the notes of that remarkable voyage were unfortunately lost to science. On the other hand, it has been ascended from the sea by Mr. Beccoff, in a steamer as far as Lever, about 40 m. or 50 m. from Bouma, the intervening distance is said to be difficult at all seasons, owing to rocks and rapids.—(Park's Travels, Callis's Journey, Lander's Narratives, Lard and Oldfield, Allen and Thompson.)

NIGGE, two pars. Sect. 1.—Kincardine; 3537 sq. A. P. 1841.—2. Ross 5000 ac. P. 1457.

NIGHT ISLAND Australia, N.E. coast, Cape York, B. Cape Durston, lat 13° 10' S. lon 145° 23' E. 2 m. long by ½ m. broad, surrounded by a narrow reef of dead coral and mud, and nearly covered with mangroves. Some banyan or cotton trees also occur, from 20 to 30 ft. in height. (Voyage of the Endeavour.)

NIQUADA, a vil and com. Italy Lombardy, prov. and 8 m. N Milan: with a church three altars, and a church table endowment. P. 1701.

NIGUELAS, a hamlet, Spain, Andalus, prov. and 16 m. from Granada; with narrow, irregular streets, several oil and flour mills, and a trade in corn, wine, and fruit. P. 1572.

NIHAU, or Omoo one of the Sandwich Islands; lat. 22° 0' N lon 160° 35' W (n.), about 16 m. long, and 8 m. broad. The E. side is rocky and unfit for cultivation, on the W. shore there is an anchorage, but no harbour. It is celebrated for its yams, which, though here excellent, attain an enormous size. The soil is too dry to produce trees. The women make beautiful mats, and some sort is also manufactured but the people generally are very poor. Pop. 1000.

NIJAR, a tn. Spain, Andalus, prov. and 14 m. E.N.E. Almeria, with mean houses, a church two primary schools manufactures of woollens, and earthenware several dye-works, and a trade in woollens, corn, barley, and taffie. Pop. 5090.

NIJHASEE, a vil Holland, prov. Friesland, 4 m. W Heerwege, with a church and school. Turf-cutting boat building, linen weaving, and boat-trade, are the chief occupations. Pop. 1105.

NIJKEK, a tn. Holland, prov. Gelderland 24 m. N.W. Arnhem with a townhouse, two churches, two synagogues, several schools, an orphan hospital, a convenient harbour, connected with the Zuider Zee a trade in grazing, exporting grain, tobacco, &c. Pop. 4077.

NIJMEGEN, or Nymegen [anc. Noctemagus, German, Nijmegen, French, Nimègue] a fortified in Holland, prov. Gelderland, 10 m. S.W. Arnhem, a bank Waal, and under 4 m. from the Prussian frontier. It lies along the river in the form of a crescent, the lower part much exposed to inundation, and is entered by 10 gates, and surrounded with numerous towers. It has a townhouse, decorated in the Renaissance style, the remains of an old castle, called Valkhof, a prison, watch-house, barracks, arsenal, magazine, military watch-house, hospital, theatre, and the Grootemarkt—a spacious market-place, surrounded with fine houses, six churches, an hospital for old men and old women, infirmary, orphan hospital, Bible and tract societies, and Latin and numerous other schools. It has a harbour, protected by a wall from the river floods and flooding sea; numerous breweries and flour-mills; manufactures of hardware, stoves, fire-engines, cabinet-work, excellent plated glass, bell, gold and silver work, some soap and salt boiling and book-binding. Pop. (1850), 31,372.

NIJNEI LOMOV, a tn. Russia, gov. and 64 m. N.W. Fiuma, on the Lomova. It has four churches a monastery, a general trade, and an annual fair which lasts about six weeks, at which leather, furs, wax, and colonial produce are sold. P. 8750.

NIKINEI NOVGOROD, or LOWRA NOVGOROD, an E. gov. Russia; lat. 54° 30' to 55° 5' N; lon 41° 50' to 48° 20' E., bounded N by govrs. Kozlovsk and Viatka, E. Kasan and Simbirsk, S. Penza and Tambov, and W. Vladimir; length, N to S. 185 m., greatest breadth, 188 m., area, 15,368 sq. m.

The surface forms an extensive plain occasionally broken and diversified by low, undulating hills, which nowhere attain a height exceeding 500 ft., and chiefly occur along the banks of the larger streams. These hills are almost invariably composed of limestone, which is largely developed over the whole government. The only metal found is iron—pyrites prevails in every quarter. The entire government belongs to the basin of the Volga, which, entering it on the N.W., and traversing it in one vast curve to the E. drains a considerable portion of it directly, all the other drainage being brought to it by the Oka and its tributaries on the W., the Sura and its tributaries on the E., and the Sena and Veluga on the N. The porous nature of the subsoil, consisting generally of deep beds of sand, which easily absorb all superfluous moisture, accounts for the general mildness of the temperature and salubrity of the climate, while the sandy subsoil having generally a deep covering of alluvial earth or vegetable mold renders this government the granary of Russia. Immense crops of corn are raised at comparatively little expense, and after satisfying the home consumption, leave a large surplus for export. The cultivators are alike distinguished by skill and industry and much of the land is farmed in a style of which Russia is not able to furnish many other examples. The principal crops, in addition to corn, are hemp and flax. Much attention also is paid to the raising of fruit—pears and plums, apples and cherries, particularly the last two, are everywhere abundant and of excellent quality. The extent of forest is at least equal to that of arable land and few governments can boast of larger tracts of excellent timber. The trees are of all the ordinary varieties, but the best that prevail appear to be oak and lime. Both manufactures and trade have made great progress. Several governments possess much larger establishments, but in none is the spirit of activity and enterprise more universal. The principal manufactures are coarse cloth, canvas, cord age, glass, soap, and leather. The same articles form important branches of trade, which includes, besides corn flour, hemp and flax, iron and ironmongery, &c. In carrying on this trade, vast advantages are given, both by the central position of the government, and its large navigable streams.

Pop. (1850) 1,203,000.

NIKINEI NOVGOROD is a Russian, cap above gov. bank Volga, where it is joined by the Oka, 205 m. E. Moscow. It is divided into two parts—the high town occupying a steep triangular promontory about 400 ft. high, the apex of which is formed by the confluence, and the adjoining silt by the channels of the rivers, and the low town, probably a suburb, consisting of a long street on the bank of the Volga. The high town, forming the far larger portion of the whole, is chiefly composed of three handsome streets, which converge towards an irregular, open space. Beyond this space runs the Kremlin or citadel, finely situated on the highest point of the triangle, and immediately overlooking the bed of the Volga. It is surrounded by a wall of 80 ft. in height, flanked with thirteen towers, partly round, partly square, and contains the principal edifices of the town, particularly two cathedrals, those of Archangel and Ouspenski, built in imitation of those of Moscow—a handsome Protestant church, a seminary, and the governor's palace. With exception of these, and a few other public edifices, including the elegant Church of the Holy Women, the whole town is built of wood, and contains little to attract attention or gratify curiosity. Nikinei Novgorod, however, is chiefly noted for the great annual fairs held in July and August and which collect dealers and buyers from the most distant quarters to the number of about 800,000. It is held on a triangular space, formed by the junction of 1 bank Oka with r bank Volga, viz. fl.

and as low as to be often completely inundated. This danger is avoided by holding the fair between July and August, the driest season of the year. At all other times the space remains unoccupied, and is as silent and lifeless as if it were in the heart of a steppe but, as the period for the fair

NIKINEI-NOVGOROD CHURCH OF THE HOLY WOMEN

From Daniloff's Voyage Pittoresque du Donetz.

approaches, an immense town suddenly starts up as if by magic—no mere booths, where merchandise may be advantageously displayed, but a regular town, with churches, hospitals, barracks, and theatres, built of course of wood, but in a substantial manner. So important is the business of the fair held to be that a handsome building is erected in the centre, in which during its continuance, the governor of the town with a numerous train of officials, resides. The only access from the town is by a long and wide bridge of boats across the Oka, and the scene on the river, as seen from this bridge, is of the most curious and amusing description. So numerous are the vessels of every description, engaged in delivering or securing cargoes, that scarcely any part of the water can be seen, while in other parts regular towns of boats are formed, and occupied by a most heterogeneous aquatic community to the number of about 40,000 souls. The fair is laid-out in regular quarters, each allotted to a particular species of goods. In one quarter, tea, in another, costly shawls, carpets and silk goods and in others skins and furs, from almost every animal that lives within the arctic circle, are sold. A large quarter is set apart for the sale of Siberian iron, and contains long streets lined on either side with that metal in every variety of form, raw and manufactured. In 1839 the business done is stated to have amounted to nearly six and a half millions of pounds sterling, of which above four millions were Russian products, and nearly one million Asiatic. This sum, immense as it is, only includes the trade of the town during its two busiest months. At all seasons, an internal commerce of almost unparalleled extent is in active operation, including every article which the different quarters of the world interchange with each other. Pop. (1846), 80,710.

NIKARIA, an Isl. Grecian Archipelago. See NIGARIA.

NIKESDORF, a vil. Hungary, Thier. Danube, co. Wieselburg 15 m. S. Frusburg, with a porcelain. P. 1930.

NIKOBAR ISLANDS. See NIKOBAR.

NIKOLAI or NIKOLAI a tn. Prussia, gov. and 51 m. S. P. Oppeln, with two churches, an hospital, manufactures of spoons, a brewery, several mills, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 6794.

NIKOLAIEV, a tn. Russia. See NIKOLAIIV.

NIKOLAIEV, a tn. Prussia, prov. E. Prussia, gov. and 59 m. S. S. W. Gumbinnen, with a trade in linen, horses, and cattle. Pop. 1941.

NIKOLINCA, a vil. Hungary Thier. Thales, co. Krasova, 43 m. S. S. E. Temevar, with a church. Pop. 1540.

NIKOLSBURG, or NIKOLSBURG (Moravia, Wienow), a tn. Austria, Moravia, circle and 27 m. S. Betta. It is a very disagreeable place, with narrow, uneven, ill-paved, and dirty streets. It has a castle, finely situated on a rock near the centre of the town and flanked with lofty towers a handsome church, a philosophical establishment for the education of Flarines, with a good library and physical cabinet, a Flarist college, and two synagogues, and manufactures of woolen and linen cloth. Pop. 8000.

NIKOLSKAYA STANITZA, or NOVAJA KAMATA, a town, Russian gov. and K.A.E. Orenburg, on the Ural; well-situated for trade, which it carries on to a considerable extent with Persia and Bokhara. Pop. (1849), 2367.

NIKOPOI [anc. Nicopolis ad Istrum] an ill-built European Turkish, Bulgarian, esp. many, 55 m. W by S Iustoznak, lat. 43° 45' N, lon. 24° 8' E, r. bank Danube. It is surrounded by ramparts, on which are large cannon. has an ancient castle, several handsome mosques, baths and some trade. It was the scene of a battle gained by the Turks over the Christians, in 1396.

NIKSHAR, a town, Asiatic Turkey path. Sivas, 25 m. N E Tokat. It is surrounded by a forest of fruit-trees climate warm. There are here the remains of an old Roman town wall, and of a castle of the same period. Pop. about 5000.

NIL-DE VINCENT-DE-MARTIN a vil and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, on the Nil 21 m. S.E. Brussels. It has a brewery and two mills, but almost all the inhabitants are employed in agriculture. Pop. 1348.

NILAB, a small town, Punjab, 1 bank Indus, a short distance below Attock, and close to the confluence of the Harroo river. lat. 33° 45' N, lon. 72° 17' E.

NILAB, the river of Egypt, and the most celebrated river of the ancient world. It owed its fame not more to its magnitude than to its fertilizing agency the productiveness of Egypt, the seat of early industry, art and civilization depending entirely upon it. The name, Nile, seems to be of Ægyptic origin, and was probably learned by the Greeks from the Phœnicians. It is found in use at the present day wherever the Arabs have penetrated—in its application being confined to rivers that periodically overflow and irrigate their banks, or even to the inundation itself. The Nile is formed by two head-streams—the Bah-el-Arak (or Blue River) and the Bah-el-Abiad (or White River)—which unite at Khartoum, lat. 16° 37' N. For each of these streams has been claimed the honor of being the main source of the river, and the True Nile, or the upper course of the Nile, according to the ancient controversy into the discussion of which our space forbids us to enter. The Nile, however, resolves its last tributary—the Atbara, in lat. 17° 42' N, at the N. extremity of the peninsular tract, anciently called the island of Maroe, and thence flows N. in a single stream, without the least accession through 12° of latitude, or following its winding course at least 1200 m. to the sea. This portion of the river's course, from Maroe downwards, has never been subject to doubt or controversy and may therefore, with advantage, be considered separately. From its junction with the Atbara, the Nile flows N., having on the W or l. bank, the desert of Bahigda on the E. Makheyri, which is commonly called Berber. Lower down, it forms several islands one of which bears the name of Kandake (Candace), and also one or more catenets; it then bends W by S, and passes by Jebel Barkal where stand the remains of a temple, repaired by Trajan (700 A.D.), but probably 1000 years older. Resuming its N. course, it enters the plains of Dongola, and forms several islands of great extent. Quitting these places by a catenet, the river flows through the districts of Mahas, Bahket, Wadi Kenia, and Bahr-el-Hayr (or the Glen of Rocks) at the head of which is the second or great catenet, and, entering Egypt at Philoe—the P-tak or lunk of the Egyptians, it descends the lowest (as ascending, the first catenet to Byene or Aswan, which is in lat. 24° 8' N.

From Philoe, lat. 24° 8' N, the Nile flows through Egypt in a single stream, but as Bah-el-Bakran, the second great catenet, at the head of the Delta, in lat. 30° 15' N, where it divides into two branches, leading down respectively to Kandak (Rosetta), and Irmyni (Damietta), and entering the sea in about lat. 31° 30' N. Thus the Nile has a course through Egypt of about 7° 30' or, following the sinuities of the stream, of about 700 m. The two arms of the Nile, which remain still navigable to the sea, are supposed to coincide with the two artificial branches of the ancients, namely, the Bahigda and Phœnicia. The other ancient arms, where not wholly effaced by time, are but partially traceable in the various canals of irrigation which intersect the Delta. The ordinary width of the Nile in Egypt, above the Delta, is about 700 yards. The branches through the Delta are much narrower and so shallow in the dry season that vessels exceed in 40 tons burden, cannot pass through them. During the flood, armed brigades can ascend to Philoe.

As rain scarcely ever falls in the Valley of the Nile from the 18th nearly to the 50th parallel, and very scantily even lower down the river owes its supply wholly to the copious rains of the countries wherein it rises. It begins to increase in June, attains its greatest height about the vernal equinox, and then subsides as gradually as it rose. The ordinary rise, at Cairo, is about 40 ft. During the flood, a great portion of the Delta and of the Valley of Egypt, higher up is inundated. In Sennar, also, and Dongola extensive tracts are watered immediately by the river, but in general, the banks of the Nile above Egypt, are irrigated by means of the water-wheel.

The Bah-el-Arak or Blue River, unites with the Bah-el-Abiad or White River in lat. 16° 37' N. Its source is in lat. 10° 58' N, lon. 36° 50' E.; but its spiral course, traced downwards through all its windings, will probably exceed 800 m. In this distance, it descends with immense rapidity from an elevation of 9000 ft., to one of 1500 ft. that is, it has a fall of 7500 ft. and collects the waters of a basin, the elevated margin of which has an extent of at least 1000 m. The Blue River is navigable up to Fagoge, within the 12th parallel 1500 m. at least from Khartoum.

The sources of the Bah-el-Arak or White River are not yet ascertained. Report places them in the mountains of Gombert, under the equator about 250 or 300 m. S E. of Chamer, a point on the river in the country of Berry situate, according to Arnaud's observations, in lat. 4° 42' N, lon. 31° 40' E. From Berry, the river flows through the countries of the Kyhs Nougars, and some other pastoral tribes, in a very winding and divided channel, inclining N W by N and gradually becomes more slow and tortuous, till, in the 9th parallel, it suddenly bends to the E. At this turn, it expands to a width of 5 or 6 m, forming an open basin, which has been called Lake Nu. A river or drain, entering this lake from the N W, has been raised into importance by speculative geographers, and named the Kaskak. Further E., and just as the river resumes its N. course, between the Dinka on the E., and the Shilluks on the W, it is joined by the Sobak, a considerable river, which is said to have its sources at no great distance from those of the White River itself. On the W, also, a stream not navigable, named by different tribes the Loori or the Maj, is reported to rise in the Gombert mountains, and to join the main stream in lat. 7° Lower down, about the 18th parallel it increases much in width often resembling a great lake and here as well as between the 6th and 8th parallels, it has no perceptible current except during the floods.

The White River has been navigated to some distance above Chamer, 1000 m. at least above its confluence with the Blue River, and its whole course, from Gombert to the sea, probably does not fall short of 8000 m. For some hundreds of miles of its upper course, it seems to be only the chief drain of insubstantial marshes, overgrown with tall reeds. The tributaries, already mentioned, the Sobak and the Loori, flowing nearly parallel to the main stream, cut it off from some-ones on both sides. As to the river (the Kaskak) supposed to enter it in lat. 9° there is, in reality, no evidence of its existence. In this part, as well as lower down towards its junction with the Blue River, it stagnates in the dry season, and becomes offensively fetid. The great magnitude of this river therefore, is but apparent, for velocity of current, which, in rivers, is equivalent to health and depth, is here wanting; and in comparison with the Blue River, which is an immense torrent, the White River resembles a great standing water. Its speed, which is about 10 m. an hour, at the junction of the river, usually a month or three weeks later than those of the Blue River; yet it sometimes happens that they precede the latter, and the narratives of Cailland and Mr. Engelsh relate to one of those exceptional years.

It seems quite manifest that the Nile of the ancients, above Maroe, the banks of which were covered with towns, was the Blue River, which has therefore, a prerogative right to be entitled the True Nile. But in tracing rivers, the appropriation of names is wholly matter of usage; magnitude avails nothing; for rivers are named before they are measured and now, as heretofore, the Blue River is the Nile of the natives. But let it be observed, that, at the actual junction of the two rivers, the mouth of the White River is narrower than the Blue and here two competent observers (M. Linant, and Capt. Feil, R. V.), measuring breadth, depth, and current, at different seasons of the year, have both assigned the superiority to the Blue River, which is a copious stream at all times.

The sources of the Nile (Blue River) in the country of the Agows, were heard of by Comas Indocoptotes early in the 6th century and they were represented, with many correct particulars, by Ptolemy, in the middle of the 15th. The companions of Alvarus visited them early in the 16th century, and about a century later, they were visited by Pedro Texe, whose account of them is copied by Teiler with little change. Then came Bruce, who tracing in the steps of the Jesuit father boasted of having discovered the fountains of the Nile. The White River explored in 1837 by M. Linant, as far as El Ais, was ascended in 1889 by a Turco-Egyptian expedition up to lat. 6° 30' N, and in the following year to Chinkar in the country of the Berry, whither trading expeditions are now despatched annually. A fort or factory has been there erected by European traders and its Catholic missionaries are located in the neighbourhood.

NILEKANTHA, a town of Nepal, lat. 28° 22' N lon. 85° 4' E. It is visited by pilgrims about the end of July and beginning of August, although even then the road is scarcely passable with snow. During this short season a fair is held, and many temporary shops opened.

NILTEEN GRABER, par. Irel. Astrim 2758 as P 1009. NIMAR, or NIMAR, an ancient Hindoo temple forming part of prov Candahar, and bounded N by the Vindhya chain, W. Chitradah, S. the Satpura hills and E. Hindia length, 180 m., mean breadth, about 40 m. It is situated in the valley of the Narmada, and consists of an intricate, irregularly, naturally fortified, and once highly cultivated, though now a wilderness of brushwood and jungle, owing partly to the ravages of the Pindaris.

NIMBURG or Lanxow, a town in Bohemia, 28 m E by N. Prague, on the Elbe. It has a public square, adorned with a pyramid in honour of Maria Theresa, a handsome church, and an ancient townhouse and hospital. Pop. 2700.

NIMBOUEN a town in Holland. See NIMBOUEN.

NIMES a town in France. See NIMES.

NIMFI, a town in Asiatic Turkey, prov. Anadolu, 98 m. E. by N. Smyrna, near which the very remarkable monument of Sesostris was discovered. This monument consists of a gigantic human figure, sculptured in relief, and sunk in a panel out into the flat surface of the rock.

NIMPTSCH a walled town in Prussia, gov. and 27 m S by W. Breslau, cap. circle, 1 bank. Lake. It has two churches, a castle, townhouse, and hospital, provincial and town courts and offices, manufactures of linen, leather and glass and several other mills, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1970.

NIMROUD an ancient Assyrian city. See NIMROUD.

NIMWEGEN, a town in Holland. See NIMWEGEN.

NIMY a town in Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 2 m. N. Mons, 1 bank. Haine with manufactures of earthenware, best-root sugar pipes, and glass. A salt refinery, two breweries, three tanneries, two quarries of paving-stone, and a limekiln. Pop. 2205.

NINKEH a celebrated ancient and ruined city, capital of the Assyrian empire, in Asiatic Turkey, prov. Mosul, 1 bank. Tigris, along which, and opposite to the town of Mosul, it appears to have stretched for a distance of about 18 m., with an average breadth of 12 m. in the form of a parallelogram, occupying an area of not less than 216 sq. m. The first recorded notice of Nineveh is in Gen. x. where, after an enumeration of the descendants of Ham, including Nimrod, 'who began to be a mighty one in the earth,' and had the beginning of his kingdom at Babel, 'in the land of Shinar,' it is added, v. 11. 'Out of that land went forth Asshur and builded Nineveh.' The date of its foundation, as that fixed, is, according to the usual chronology, 2547 a.c. From that date there is a perfect blank in its history for nearly 1500 years. But it is obvious that it must have continued to flourish, and make vast progress, for about 685 a.c., when it is brought prominently forward in the book of Jonah, it is described as a 'great city,' 'an exceeding great city, of three days' journey; a 'great city, wherein are more than sixscore thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand.' At this time it had provoked the wrath of Heaven and its doom, which Jonah had been commissioned to preach, was within three days of its accomplishment, when it was saved by a temporary repentance. The repentance, however, proved only temporary, and the kings and princes who occupied its palace have resumed their evil course, made themselves the terror of surrounding nations by a series of unprovoked and exterminating wars. About 740 a.c. Tiglath-pileser is seen carrying off the inhabitants of Galilee and Naphtali into captivity. Fifteen years later his successor Shalmaneser after making Hoshan, king of Israel first his tributary and then his prisoner subjected the inhabitants of Samaria to the same cruel treatment; and about 718 Sennacherib, invading Judah, made himself master of Lachish and its then forced citadel, and obliged king Hezekiah to gratify his rapacity by pillaging the temple of its treasures. These aggressions, and more especially the last, which was probably witnessed by Nahum, appear to have been in the prophet's view when referring to 'Ninveh, he exclaims, 'Woe to the bloody city, and at the same time gives a high idea of its extent, commerce, and magnificence, saying that its inhabitants were 'many as the locusts and its merchants multiplied above the stars of Heaven, and that there was 'none end of the store and glory out of all the pleasant furniture.' The woe denounced was ere long executed personally on Sennacherib when he fell in the house of Nisroch his god by the hands of two of his own sons but a respite was given to the city for nearly another 100 years. At length 620 a.c. the vengeance which, provoked by its iniquities and cruelties, had long been impending was accomplished by the instrumentality of the Babylonian Nabopolassar and the Median Cyaxares. About 80 years after, the Assyrian empire, as it is in a passage remarkable for the richness of its Eastern imagery portrayed its desolation and brings it out in bold relief, by contrasting it with its former splendour. 'The Assyrian was a cedar in Lebanon, with fair branches 'all the trees of Eden that were in the garden of God, envied him but strangers, the terrible of the nations, have cut him off.' 'Upon the mountains and in all the valleys his branches are fallen and his boughs are broken by all the rivers of the land and all the people of the earth are gone down from his shadow and have left him. The destruction indeed was so complete, and the information furnished by profane historians so scanty and defective, that several writers, without venturing directly to impugn the testimony of the sacred volume on the subject, were disposed to consider it highly overcharged. It was known that, opposite to Mosul and both along the left bank of the Tigris and to a considerable distance inland on what was usually supposed to be the site of Nineveh, a series of vast mounds existed and probably occupied the site, if they did not actually contain the remains of its ancient structures but no serious attempt was made to ascertain the fact till 1841 when M. Botta, shortly after his appointment as French consul at Mosul, commenced operations on Konyunlik, immediately opposite to that town. He had only obtained a few fragments of brick and alabaster when, on information, which promised a richer harvest he removed to Khorsabad about 12 m. to the N.E. and was soon rewarded by the discovery of the first Assyrian edifice which had been exposed to the view of man since the fall of the Assyrian empire. The attention of Mr. Layard, who had travelled much in the East and was ardently devoted to the study of its antiquities, had previously been attracted by the mounds, and he had resolved to take the first opportunity of exploring them thoroughly, but his resolution was still slumbering when the discoveries of M. Botta aroused him. After surmounting many obstacles, and obtaining the necessary requisites he resolved to make the lofty mounds of Nimrod situated about 18 m. S.E. Mosul, in the angle formed by the Tigris and the confluence of the Greater Zab, the scene of his first operations. His success was immediate and complete. The excavations of the very first day brought him to the possession of a chamber lined with slabs, in good preservation, and covered with cuneiform or arrow-headed inscriptions, and his treasures continued ever to multiply upon him.

Amongst others, he has discovered gigantic emblematic figures—winged bulls and lions, with human heads, and winged sphinxes, placed as guardians over the entrances of magnificent palaces. The first by which the palaces had been destroyed has been calculated the stone and other materials of which they are composed, that in many cases, on the latest exposure to the air they have crumbled to pieces, sometimes before even an accurate sketch of them could be obtained, and hence many objects interesting as works of art, and containing inscriptions in all probability still more interesting, have been lost only to be lost for ever. In other parts, and more especially in the N.W. palace, where the fire has not so much affected the buildings, 98 rooms, in excellent preservation, have been opened, and numerous bas-reliefs, figures, and ornaments, rich in information as to the state of art and progress of civilization at the period when they were made, have been sketched. From Nimrod Mr. Layard proceeded to Konyuk, where he has, it is possible, been still more successful. In the course of a month, many chambers were explored one of them 130 ft. long by 50 ft. wide, and equally rich with those of Nimrod in bas-reliefs and inscriptions. In 1841 Mr. Layard, owing partly to the exhaustion of his funds for excavation, and partly to the state of his health which had suffered much from his incessant exertions, returned to England. In 1845, having been furnished with new funds, though with a far too slenderly hand, he resumed his labours, both at Konyuk and Nimrod, which have continued to yield up their treasures as if they were never to be exhausted. Previous to Mr. Layard's labours, the Assyrian antiquities of the British Museum were contained in a case about three feet square. They may be said to be the largest, and, in some respects one of its most valuable collections. Independent of their intrinsic value as mere antiquities, it is impossible to overlook the higher value which they possess as illustrations and confirmations of the sacred volume Jonah's city of three days' journey, and 120,000 children, indicative of a population of about half-a-million, can no longer be looked upon as problematical because it is evident that the series of mounds of Konyuk, Akhahab, and Nimrod, though individually large enough to form single cities, are only the different palaces occupied by the sovereigns of successive periods, within the last central Achaean measurement of the space which is occupied by the ruins and which, though never completely built over but partly formed into parks and gardens was all included within one continuous enclosure, gives an area almost identical with that assigned by Jonah in proportion, too, as the cuneiform characters and the language embodied as it, in becoming understood the most striking coincidences between their details and the brief statements of Scripture are discovered. Not only are the names of individuals the same but the thirty talents of gold which Scripture mentions as that Hamek was forced to pay as now proved to have been paid by an inscription which is to all intents a voucher or receipt of Darnabehn himself. This, however, is only a specimen of the discoveries which may be anticipated as soon as these records, which have so marvellously been brought to light, after a lapse of nearly 3000 years, shall be all unfolded.

NINFIELD, prov. Eng. Summer 2554 ac. Pop. 570
NING HIA, a city of great extent, China, prov. Kansao, 210 m. N.N.E. Lanchow. It is surrounded with old brick walls in a good state of preservation, and has narrow, crooked and dirty streets, lined with dilapidated houses and numerous josses. It was formerly a royal city, and continued to be rich and flourishing for more than two centuries, but in 1227, it shared the common ruin occasioned by the victories of Genghis Khan. Though one of the towns of the first order in the prov. of Kansao, it has no commerce of any consequence, and the inhabitants generally appear to be destitute of the common necessities of life.—(Hue, Revue des Voyages, &c.)
NING KONG, a tn. China, prov. Huguohol, on an affluent of the Yang-tse-kiang lat. 31 N., lon. 116° 38' E., with extensive paper manufactures.

NINGOKYA, a tn. Chinese empire, Manchourie, on an affluent of the Amour. 140 m. N.E. by E. Kien-Chai. It is a place of considerable trade, and is said to be the original seat of the Tartar dynasty of China.

NINGPO, an important city and seaport, China (one of the five ports opened to foreign trade in 1843), prov. Chekung, 1. bank Taki; lat. 30° 51' N. lon. 121° 38' E. (p.); in a magnificent plain. It is surrounded by walls 5 m. in circumference, 35 ft. high, 15 ft. wide at top, and 23 ft. at the base, built solidly, but somewhat dilapidated and overgrown with grass, outside the walls are extensive suburbs. Among the Chinese, Ningpo is esteemed one of the most beautiful cities in the Celestial Empire, although greatly inferior in all respects to a European city of even the second rank. The streets are more airy, narrow and slippy and the buildings consist, as usual in Chinese cities, of one story society of houses, but sometimes of stone. The most remarkable edifice in the city is the brick tower of Ningpo now a mere ruin, a hexagonal, seven-storied building, upwards of 180 ft. high, erected, according to tradition, 1100 years since. Another structure of some note is the temple of Ma Tsupu. Near the river, the streets are lined with shops and immense storehouses. Kailings-houses and tea-shops abound, chiefly in the vicinity of the gates and suburbs. A missionary hospital, opened in 1843, has been very beneficial; having in the first six months of its existence alone treated 650 surgical cases. Though intended originally for the poor, it is visited by all classes of patients. Ningpo has manufactures of silk, similar to those of Canton; of cottons, carpets, furniture &c. and a good deal of junk building. It carries on an extensive native trade, but the imports from Great Britain have been very limited. About 670 junks come annually from Shanghai and Lanchow with oil, brandy, chestnuts, cloth, cordage, provisions of various kinds, and fruit, and about 560 junks arrive from Fokien and Hainan, with sugar, salt, pepper, tea, iron, wood, indigo, rice &c. 20 from Canton, with sugar, cotton, and sundries, several ships from the Strait of Malacca, the Philippines, and nearly 4000 by rivers and canals from the interior, bearing imports estimated to amount to £1,731,350, and the exports may amount to a like sum. Ningpo was taken by the English without resistance in 1841. Pop. between 200,000 and 300,000.—(Nautical Magazine, 1948 Middle Kingdom, Martin's China, Parliamentary Returns.)

NINIAND, (Str.) a vil. and port Scotland, co. Strirling. The village 1 m. S. Strirling consists principally of a narrow, irregular street of antiquated houses, somewhat improved by being white-washed and has a large essential parish church, a Free and a U. Presbyterian church, a parochial and several other schools, manufactures of nails, tartans, carpets, and plaidings, two large tanneries, a distillery and a mending establishment. Extent of par. 16 m. by 6 m. Pop. (1851), 9551.

NIYOR, a vil. Japan. N. Kinsai, near which is a camphor-tree mentioned by Komper, in 1691, as celebrated for its use, hollow from age, and supposed to measure 8 fathoms in circumference. It was visited by Stebel in 1826, and found it to be still healthy and rich in foliage, he gives 16,564 metres (about 50 ft.) as its circumference.

NIYOZE, or Ninoyze, a tn. in com. Belgium prov. E. Flanders, 30 m. S.E. Ghent, 1 bank Dender. It has two churches, a townhall, chapel, several schools and an hospital, manufactures of linen and woolsen stuffs, leather, earthenware, soap, tobacco, vinegar refined salt, mustard, oil, &c., breweries, dyeries, bleacheries, and brick-kilns, &c.; trade in wool grain, cattle and manufactured goods. Pop. 4534.

NIO [see Joe] an Isl. Groeland Archipelago 18 m. N. Sanborra, lat. 36° 48' N. lon. 26° 24' E., about 40 m. in circumference. It is rocky and mountainous, having a granitic base, with extensive mountains; it is in some parts tolerably fertile, producing corn, cotton, wheat, oil, wax, honey, and fruit, and affording pasturage for some goats, sheep, and horned cattle. Stockings and caps are manufactured from the cotton grown on the island and sent to Italy. The port is on the W. side, and is a tolerably safe harbour, with the town at its extremity. At the S.E. end of the island is another harbour called Port Mangarot, where vessels may lie in from 10 to 25 fathoms water, sheltered from the N.E. and N.W. winds. Homer is said to have held here. Pop. about 4000.

NIORT [Lat. Niortus] a handsomely built tn. France, on the Deux-Sevres, on the sides of two hills washed by the Sevre-Niortaise, 70 m. S.E. Nantes. It has two collegiate churches; two parish churches, Hotel de Ville, formerly the palace of Eleanor of Aquitaine, guest of Henry II. of England; the old castle or prison, in one of the apartments of which Madame

As Maintenon was born, public baths, barracks, theatre, prefecture, civil and military hospitals, courthouses, courts of first resort and commerce, a consulting chamber of arts and manufactures, conseil de perfectionnement, agricultural society, attachment of sciences and art, philanthropic society, and communal college. The great staple manufactures are leather and gloves, the latter particularly of doekskin, which are made annually to the number of 80,000 dozen, nearly two-thirds of which are exported to the U States; the other manufactures consist of woollen stuffs, straps, middle-bows, hats and other things, &c., and it has important paper, cotton, and worsted mills, oil and vinegar works, and distilleries and a trade in the above articles, and horses, mules, and cattle, flour, timber, both for coopers and carpentry and particularly the claret of the surrounding country, for which this town is the entrepot. It was 14 times besieged. Pop. (1862), 17 177.

NIPS (Nax or), Cuba, N. E. coast, S. E. Naranjo; lat. 20° 45' N. lon. 75° 30' W., easy of entrance, and capable of holding all the fleets of Europe.

NIPHON, the largest and most important of the Japanese isles, lat. 32° 45' to 41° 30' N., lon. 130° 45' to 142° 30' E. It is of a long, narrow, and curved form, lying N. W. and S. E., and converges as being towards the S. E. about 800 m. to 3 or 300 m. in breadth at the broadest part. The coasts, indented with a great number of bays, especially on the S. side, are very difficult of access, not only on account of the numerous rocks and islands by which they are fringed, but from the extreme shallowness of the sea. A ridge of mountains, many of them active volcanoes, passes through its entire length, generally of moderate elevation but First the principal peak, is 13,000 ft. high. The island is superabundantly supplied with hot, sulphurous springs and there are some remarkable lakes, the principal of which are that of Misao (Ishikawa), and Tokouti, near the city of Yeddo. Earthquakes are of frequent occurrence. The rivers are numerous, but necessarily of very limited extent. The difference of temperature in the extreme of summer and winter, is excessive and storms of rain and thunder are both frequent and terrible, still the island is generally healthy. The soil has been rendered very productive by the untiring industry of the inhabitants. The palm, the banana, the myrtle, &c. are found in Niphon. In some parts the sugar cane is brought to considerable perfection and two crops of rice are gathered annually. Near Simada, a town lying in lat. 35° 16' N.; lon. 140° 50' E. rice is produced in such abundance that the locality is termed the granary of Yeddo. Wheat and barley also are grown, the latter mainly for feeding the cattle, the wheat is chiefly used for cakes and soy beans are cultivated with great care, as also the mulberry, for feeding the silk-worm. The principal object of cultivation, however, is the tea-plant, which was introduced from China in the beginning of the 9th century. Misao and Yeddo are the capitals of the island and the empire, besides which Oosaka, Simonsaki, and Mera are important places.

NIPISING, a lake, Upper Canada, about midway between Georgian Bay, N. E. part of Lake Huron, and the Ottawa or Grand River. It is 750 ft. above the sea, and its waters flow into the N. part of Georgian Bay by French River, in which several rapids occur. It is of very irregular form, greatest length, about 46 m., greatest breadth, 25 m. It contains several islands inhabited by Indians (about 200), and is noted for its immense stocks of wild geese.

NISAO, a river, Isl. Hayti, which issues from a lake, 2000 S. E., and falls into the sea near a headland of same name, after a course of about 55 m.

NISAKI, or Niseno an Isl. Grecian Archipelago, lat. 36° 35' S. lon. 27° 11' E. of a square form, and about 4 m. each way, mountains, rocky, and generally barren. The chief occupation of the inhabitants is diving for sponges at which they are very expert.

NISBAFOOR, an anc. city, Persia, prov. Khoresan, 50 m. W. by R. Merv. In the middle of the 13th century it was destroyed by the Tartars, and has never recovered since. Its ruins are said to cover a circuit of 25 m. Mines producing the finest turquoises in the world, have long been worked in the vicinity. Pop. about 15,000.

NISBETH Novoson. See Nisne-Novoson.

NISHOWRA, a large vil. Punjab, 40 m. N. W. Lahore. NISHIN (anc. Nisibe) a tr. Asiatic Turkey, on a tributary of the Euphrates, 200 m. S. W. Baghdad, containing a city of 100 well-built houses, a strong castle or citadel, which is a large structure, and still in sufficient repair to be garrisoned an ancient church, and several interesting ruins. It has manufactures of coarse cotton and woollen goods, which, as well as wheat, pulse, and tobacco, extensively grown in the vicinity, are bartered for dried figs and raisins.

NISITIA (anc. Neos), a small Isl. Gulf of Naples, 5 m. S. E. Fusunoli and not 1 m. from the coast. It is about 1 m. in circuit, high, and surrounded with trees, and on its loftiest summit is a large fortification. In port, Favos, is a quarantine station for vessels bound to Naples.

NISMES, or Nimes (Latin, Nemausus) a tr. Franco, cap. dep. Gard, in a rich and fertile plain, 62 m. N. W. Marseilles, the older part poorly built and irregular the modern well laid-out in straight and spacious streets. Almost the only modern building worthy of notice is the cathedral founded at a very early period but which suffered so much during the religious wars, and has, in consequence, undergone so many repairs, often in bad taste, that its original form is almost lost. No town in France can compare with Nimes for its ancient Roman edifices. The line of Roman walls can easily be traced and many parts of them still exist in good preservation, but the most remarkable structures is the amphitheatre, which is almost entire and with the exception of that of Verona, is the most perfect specimen in existence. Another edifice from its position and altitude the most conspicuous in the town, is the Tour Magne, it crowns a hill planted with trees, and is of an octagonal shape externally, but conical within, consisting of several stories, the diameter of which gradually diminishes in the ascent. The circumference of the base being about 260 ft., and at the top only 105 ft. The Romans had included it as part of their fortifications, but it is supposed to have existed before them, and to have been a mausoleum of the Gauls. Another edifice of remarkable elegance, is what is vulgarly called, from its shape, the Maison Carrée, but is in fact, a beautiful Corinthian temple, once granted, according to some, in the reign of Augustus, and according to others in that of Antoninus Pius; afterwards used as a Christian church, then as the Hotel de Ville, subsequently degraded into a stable, and now used as a museum, in which many interesting remains of ancient art have been collected. It is surrounded by 80 Corinthian fluted columns, but recent excavations have proved that it was only the centre of an extensive edifice or series of edifices, supposed to have been connected with the forum. The only other objects particularly deserving of notice, are an ancient fountain, called the Fountain of the Nymphs, situated in fine public gardens, where it bursts forth with great copiousness at the foot of a hill and is received into a large reservoir which was originally a Roman tank; and two ancient gates, the one called Porte d'Auguste, founded in the reign of that emperor, and consisting of four porticoes, forming a double arch and two side passages and the other, called Porte de France, consisting of a single arch flanked by two circular towers. Nismes is the seat of a bishop, and possesses an appeal court for depa, Gard, Lozère, and Vaucluse; courts of first resort and commerce, chamber of commerce and exchange, conservatoire de produits, athénéeum, university, academy, college, diocesan seminary and secondary ecclesiastical school; schools of design and medicine, medical society, agricultural society, &c.

LA MAISON CARRÉE, NISMES.—From France. Manufacture of P. de la Roche.

The manufactures consist principally of silk and cotton goods, finer and mixed such as satinet, shawls, cravats, scarfs, hosiery, &c. Cotton handkerchiefs, also, are made to such an extent as almost enable them to be regarded as the staple. There are likewise numerous tanneries, dye-works, silk, lace-thread, and other spinning mills, and a trade in raw silk, for which this town is the great entrepot of the fr. of France; wine, vinegar, olaginous seeds, medicinal and dye plants, &c. The foundation of the town is attributed to the Phœnicians, or colony of Phœnicians from Marseilles; but, notwithstanding the importance and number of the ancient buildings which it is now almost everywhere by classical writers, and its early history is very imperfectly known. In more modern times, it became distinguished by the zeal with which its inhabitants embraced the doctrines of the Reformation. They were in consequence, subjected to much persecution—a persecution which, on the return of the Bourbons in 1815, was savagely renewed, and only terminated by the threatened descent of 30,000 Protestant mountaineers from the Cevennes. Grant the historian, is a native of Nismes. Pop. (1852) 47,395.

NISMES, a vil and com. Belgium, prov and 36 m. S.E. W. Namur on the Kan Rôyer with a blast-furnace, two breweries two mills, and quarries of building stone. Pop. 1028.

NISBA [anc. Nisus], a fortified city European Turkey prov Serris, and once its cap 120 m. S. E. Belgrade, on a plain, 1 bank Nisava. Pop. 4000.

NISBAVA, a river Turkey in Europe, which rises on the W side of Mount Jacobus, near the W frontiers of Bulgaria flows W N W into Servia, passes Nissa, and about 12 m. below joins the Kan Morava, after a course of 85 m. NISSEL M. Fenne, a town, Denmark, W coast of Jutland. It communicates with the sea by a narrow opening and is separated from it by a narrow bay of land, over or through which the waves often force their way. Its length is about 9 m. area, 22 sq. m. depth in general, not more than 4 ft. to 6 ft. and both it and the Strømme, which falls into it, are navigable only by boats.

NISTELLÖDK, a scattered vil. Holland, prov N Brabant, 12 m. E. Hertogenbosch, in an extensive barren heath, with a church and chapel, a brewery and tannery. Pop. (agricultural), 1890.

NITH, a river, Scotland, which rises on the confines of cos Kirkcaldy and Ayr, to the E. of Dalmellington, flows S. E. past New Cumnock, across cos. Dumfries, and, about 8 m. below the town of Dumfries, falls into the Solway, total course about 46 m. Like most streams of the Solway it has a bore. Its salmon fisheries are valuable.

NITEROBHI, or PRAGA GRANDE a tn. Brazil, cap. prov and 8 m. E. Rio de Janeiro, E. side of the bay to which the names of Niterobhi and Rio de Janeiro are indiscriminately given. It has spacious streets, and generally well built houses, many of them provided with gardens and orchards. Along the shore are well-constructed wharfs, lined with houses of an imposing appearance, and within are numerous elegant edifices, usually occupying well-chosen sites, so that few places present a more attractive appearance, particularly when approached from the sea. The principal buildings are two churches; a theatre, a townhouse, with prison attached, a palace, where the emperor occasionally resides, and another palace, occupied by the provincial governor. It is the seat of the provincial assembly, and of several important courts and offices, and the head-quarters of a legion of the national guard, and possesses a school of architecture and agriculture, a school of arts, &c. Near it are numerous sugar-plantations and distilleries, lunatic, and brick and tile works. The principal objects of culture are coffee and fruit. Pop. dist., 7600 free persons, and 23 000 slaves.

NITI, or MARSA GUAR Pass, a lofty pass in the Mimale, lat. 30° 55' N., lon. 79° 13' E. height, 16,814 ft. above the sea. The mountains on either side are generally composed of rocks steeped perpendicularly, the sides of the chasms in some parts, approaching so close as to admit of their being crossed on wooden scaffolding, supported from crag to crag. There is a village of Niti a few miles from the pass, on the Hindoo side. In the beginning of June the thermometer ranges from 49° to 50° in the morning and from 70° to 80° in the middle of the day with rain and slight snow at night.

NITINAT or RENETZKY Sound an extensive inlet filled with islands, N. America, W. coast Vancouver's island, lat. 48° 50' N. lon. 125° 24' W. It is about 12 m. wide at its entrance, between Terron Point on the N. and Cutthroat Point on the S.E. and has nearly the same distance inland.

NITON par Eng. Hanis 1897 as. Pop. 684.

NITSHILL, a vil Scotland, co. and 4 m. S.E. Newfrew, near the Levern with bleach and print fields, and extensive mineral and other works. Pop. 623.

NITENAU, a market tn. Bavaria, Upper Palatinate, on the Regen, here crossed by a bridge, 18 m. N. E. Reichon with a court of justice, a church, and a pearl factory. Pop. 1100.

NITTRITZ a vil Prussia, prov Silesia gov. Legnica, circle Grünberg with a church, an oil, and several other mills. Pop. 1008.

NIVL (La) a river France, which rises in dep. Basen-Pyrénées, near the Spanish frontiers flows N N W, and joins 1 bank Adour a little below Bayonne, total course, about 80 m. of which 16 m. are tidal and navigable.

NIVELLE, or NIYONNE, a river, which rises in Spain, in the Pyrénées enters the French dep. Haute-Pyrénées, flows easterly N W, and after a course of about 24 m. falls into the Bay of Biscay at St. Jean-de-Luz.

NIVELLE, a tn. Belgium, prov Brabant, 17 m. S. Brussels. It is not well built, but contains two large squares and a fine promenade three churches, one of which, St. Gertrude, is large and handsome, and is said to possess the finest crypt in Belgium. a court of first resort, a college, an academy of design and architecture, one of the two state normal schools, a convent, an hospital, a mont-de-piété, and several other benevolent institutions. It has manufactures of woollen and cotton stuffs, hats, common lace, oil, and tobacco. brew crabs, distilleries, and tanneries, and an important trade in corn, horned cattle, and swine. Pop. 7644.

NIVERNAIS (Latin, Nidus Nervensis) an arr. prov France, now forming the far greater part of dep. Nivernais. NIWNITZ, or Niwnitz, a market in Austria, Moravia, circle and 16 m. from Hradisch, with a church, and a mill. Pop. 1800.

NIXDORF (Gnos) a tn. Bohemia circle and 84 m. N. E. Leitmeritz, close on the frontiers of Saxony. It has important manufactures of cotton and various articles of hardware, which are sent into all the different parts of Germany and also manufactures of linen and hosiery, and numerous mills. Near it is a chalybeate spring, over which a bathing establishment has been erected. Pop. 5698.

NIZA a tn. Portugal, prov Beira-Alta, 21 m. S. Castello-Branco. It sends a deputy to the Cortes, and has an annual fair. Pop. 2160.

NIZAM'S DOMINIONS, or HYDERABAD, the largest native state in Hindoostan subsidiary to the British, and occupying the centre of the Deccan. lat. 18° to 31° 30' N., lon. 75° to 81° 30' E. including the old provs. of Hydrabad and Kandahar, with part of Aurangabad, Candahar, and Bombay bounded on the N. by portions of the territories on the Deccan, belonging to the British and to Satishda, together with the British dist. of Candahar, W by the presidency of Bombay, S. and S.E. by that of Madras. On the E. and N.E. it is partly separated from Barr or Nagpur by the rivers Wardah and Godavary. Length, N to S, about 380 m., greatest breadth, E. to W 320 m.; area, 96,337 sq. m. It is chiefly a table-land 1800 ft. to 2000 ft. above the sea, with a surface hilly and undulating, rather than mountainous. Some granite ranges, rising occasionally to 2500 ft., rise N W to S.E.; and abrupt rocky heights, also dikes and ravines of greenstone, are interspersed throughout this region. Horablende, felspar, limestone, sandstone, and, in some places, columnar basalt, are conspicuous geological formations. The Godavery river flows tortuously through the centre of the country, and the Krishna similarly winds through its E. part; other principal streams are the Payanganga, Manjira, Bemah, and the Tumbudda, forming a part of the S boundary. All the rivers hold an E direction. The climate is, on the whole, temperate, and in some parts even cool near Hyderabad, in the S, the thermometer often descends as low as 40° or 85° Fah at Secunderabad, the annual mean is 81° at Janmah, in the hot season, from March to June, the heat ascends to 90° or 100° Fah, though that district is admirably adapted for the culture of most European fruits and vegetables. The soil is in most parts, very rich and fertile, and, except where the tanks have been allowed to decay the country is very well watered; much of it, however, is waste. Tanks are formed in the granite and sandstone tracts by uniting with causeways or mounds, two projecting points of low hills, by which means sheets of water from three to ten miles in circumference, are produced for irrigation of the rice grounds. At least eight varieties of rice are grown, and two crops are often raised on the same field in a favorable year, but this grain is cultivated only in limited tracts, and is chiefly sent to the capital for consumption, or elsewhere for exportation. Rice and wheat are consumed only by the upper classes, and the surplus of the wheat produced is mostly sent to the E coast of India, to be exchanged for salt. Bazley clover, oil plants cucumbers, gourds, lamp, cotton, sugar-cane, some beet tobacco, sweet potatoes, and other culinary vegetables, fruits, and aromatic woods, are the principal articles of culture together with jewelry (Indian miller) and hays or barley (Holcus spicatus) which grows from the chief source of the labouring classes. Much of the surplus is well adapted to the culture of cotton, and this would probably become the main cotton growing country in India, if good roads or railways existed to facilitate the transport of cotton to the ports of the W coast. The territory is not abundantly wooded except along some of the hill ranges, there are no extensive jungles and large forest-trees scarcely exist, except in the N though date and palmyra groves are common. The export of opium, formerly extensive, has ceased since the British have possessed the coast district in the Deccan. The lands are mostly held in jaghirs, or by military tenure, and the great loss has been the oppression of the jaghirdars, or holders of the fief, as it is favoured by the weakness of the sovereign power that in no part of the peninsula are the peasantry so impoverished. The best horses in the Deccan were formerly reared in this territory the numbers have now greatly decreased, but some are bred in the districts on the Bemah and an annual fair for their sale is held at Mallgong in the Nandur district. Sheep are pretty numerous. The cattle are generally small the export of their hides has lately ceased, a circumstance held to be a favorable index of the spread of agriculture as leather is used in the construction of nearly every farm implement. The tiger, leopard, panther, bear, antelope, and wild boar are numerous, wild buffaloes are met with in the N Deer and buffalo horns, and the myristicifera colona, an insect with bluish toring qualities reported to be superior to those of cantuaries, are animal products of some mercantile importance. Iron-ore is plentiful, and in the Nirmal hills it is magnetite. Coal is found near the junction of the rivers Godavery and Wurdah. Near the Godavery also, are some mines of garnet, at Pursool near Comdiply, are diamond-mines from which the treasury of Golconda was formerly supplied they are mere pits, from 10 to 12 feet deep, and their working is now discontinued. The Nizam possesses a celebrated diamond weighing 1108 grains. At Aurangabad, nearly 1000 looms are employed in the manufacture of silks and brocades at Warangal about 200 looms are engaged in carpet-weaving at Kluzumun, in the S.E., calico-printing is carried on by means of wooden blocks, as at Masulipatam, &c., in the Madras presidency. Hand looms and toys are amongst the manufactures not of prime necessity. Imports from the E. I. Company's territories are copper broad cloth, velvets, silks, muslins, chintz, calicoes, cramoisined fabrics, sugar, pepper, sandal-wood, and salt; from Oushmere, shawls, from Malwa, opium, from Marwar, camels and blankets. Chief exports are steel, iron, excellent tank timber, which grows near the stedavery, and is conveyed down that river to Coringa, and agricultural produce. Although the reigning dynasty is Mahomedan, not more than one-tenth of the people are Mahomedan, except in the capital, where they predominate, the majority of the population are Mahomedans and Telugus, with Bheels in the W, Gonds in the E, and some other wild races. Justice is very often contravened by force or favour, and the territory generally is in a deplorable state of anarchy. After the capital (Hyderabad) the chief towns are Filloppoor, Aurangabad, Beeder, Warangal Janmah, Nandur Kur-nool Golconda, and Secunderabad, the place of a British subsidiary force. The famous sculptured caves of Elora are in the N.W. part of the Nizam's Dominions.

This region formed one of the great soubas or viceroys under the Mogul empire. During the decline of that power, after the eruption of Nadir Shah, the soubahdar Nizam-ul Mulk erected it into an independent sovereignty, which at his death in 1748, extended from the Nerbudda to Trichinopoly and from Masulipatam to Bayapor. In 1768, after a hostile invasion of the Carnatic by the Nizam the British obtained from him the cession of the Northern Circars and about 1800 the first subsidiary alliance between the E. I. Company and any Indian state was concluded with the Nizam. In 1808, it was stipulated by treaty that, while the Nizam nominated his own vizier or premier the British resident at Hyderabad should appoint the effective minister, a divided responsibility which has never worked well. The perpetual opposition of the Nizam to the measures suggested by the British resident, has perpetually neutralized the efforts of the latter to promote the well being of the country and the embarrassment and disorganization of the state are such that its ultimate annexation to the Anglo-Indian territories seems inevitable. In addition to a British force, the Nizam is bound to support a subsidiary army of 8750 cavalry 3700 infantry and other troops, in all amounting to 9400 men offered from the several British presidencies and costing annually 80 lacs of rupees (£300,000). In further addition, he maintains an irregular army of Rohillas, Arabs, Patans, &c. comprising from 30,000 to 35,000 men, at a cost of about 64 lacs, or £240,000 annually and who are frequently turbulent and clamorous for arrears of pay. The expense of the soldiery is supposed to absorb nearly two-thirds of the whole revenue, which has been estimated at £1,500,000 annually. The population has been variously estimated, the For on the River of India, it is given at 10,668,000 (Asiatic Jour of Bengal, Jour of the 1st of Geo. Soc. xv Jour of the Bombay Geo. Soc. xli. Rep. on the Misk. and Statist. Topog of the Madras Presid. 1844).

NIZNIOW a vil Austrian Galicia, 77 m S.E. Lemberg r bank Dniester with two churches, several mills, a manufacture of gun flints, and an active river trade.

NIZZA a city and seaport, Italy. See Nizza.

NIZZA MONTEBELLATO or Nizza DELLA PAGLIA, a town in kingdom of Italy. Eodemot dir and 10 m S.W. Also another on the Delta, at the junction of the Nizza with a silk mill and a trade in good wine. Pop 4378.

NOALJJO a town in Arabia. See Ouk.

NOJURUNDA the name given to the lower part of the Ljungana, a river, Sweden which issues from a small lake L. side the Kielen mountains, in Osterund in Bergedalen, flows E.S.E. expanding into lake Stor-heden, and, after a course of about 180 m, falls into the Gulf of Bothnia, 9 m. S.E. Sundvall.

NOALLIES, a tn and com. France, dep Oise, 9 m. S.E. Beauvais with manufactures of ribbons and linen and cotton goods, brick and tile works limekiln and a trade in hemp, horses, and cattle. Pop 1022.

NOAKOTI or NOACOTI a tn Nepal, 17 m N by W Khatmandoo lat 27° 58' N lon 85° 56' E, in the valley of its name, 1 bank Trisoo-ganga. It has some of the largest and best-looking houses in Nepal and a celebrated Hindu temple and it commands the only entrance into this quarter from Upper and Lower Tibet.

NOALIK, a tn Italy, Venezia, gov and 18 m. N.W. Venice with a church, silk manufactures, two carriage factories, and two mills. Pop 2500.

NOALJJO, a tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov and 23 m. from Jaen, with narrow, but mostly paved streets, a townhouse, two schools, and a church. Pop. (agricultural), 2865.

NOANAGUR, a walled tn., W Hindooon prov Gujarat, about 7 m. S. Gulf of Cutch; lat. 23° 55' N; lon. 70° 14'
 E.; inhabited chiefly by weavers, who make a considerable quantity of curries and fine cloth.

NOBBE, a vil. and par. Ireland, co. Meath, about 12 m. from Navan, with a neat parish church, a R. Catholic chapel and the remains of a priory. Curran, the celebrated Irish harper, was born here. Area of par. 10,468 ac. Pop. 2385.

NOBLEJAS, a tn. in Spain, New Castile, prov. and E.N.E.
 Toledo with a church, townhouse, prison, and primary school manufacture of articles in copper, a flour and several oil mills, and a transit trade in wine and brandy. Pop. 1608.

NOBRA or NUNABA, a wild and elevated tract of Ladak or Middle Tibet, in the E. part of the Hiedoo Koonsh and on the S. side of the Karakorum mountains, enclosed on the N. E., and S. sides by the river Sky-Yak. The lowest part of the tract has an elevation of not less than 11,000 ft. above sea-level, but, notwithstanding its height, is under tolerable culture, and well peopled. The only place of any consequence is the fort and village of Nobra on the Sky Yak.

NOBRESEBARI a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Luxemburg, 6 m. NW Arlon. P. (agricultural), 1339.

NOCEDA San-Vincent, a vil. Spain, prov. and 50 m.
 from Leon with a church, conchous primary school, and a trade in lin. cattle, corn, and fruit. Pop. 1204.

NOCIARA, several tns. Italy—1 (des Paveses), [San-Nicolo di Alghero] A tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Citra, 21 m. E.S.E. Naples, consisting of detached groups of houses, interspersed with trees and gardens. It has a church, built in the style of the Pantheon at Rome, good cavalry barracks, several schools and some manufactures of linen and other tissues. Pop. 6800.—2 A tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Ultra-li, dist. and 13 m. N.W. Nicastro. Pop. 2398.—3, San-Nicolo di Castellaro, A tn. Papal States, dist. and 22 m.
 E. Perugia, in a plain at the foot of the Apennines. It is celebrated by Strabo for its manufacture of wooden bowls, but has declined down almost to a village. It has some mineral springs, which enjoy great local repute. Pop. 1114.

NOCIETO, a tn. and com. Italy, dist. and 6 m. W.
 Parma, on bank Ronchio, with a large church, a dilapidated castle, a primary school, and a trade in corn, wine, dairy produce, and cattle. Pop. 5758.

NOCI a tn. Naples, prov. and 28 m. S.E. Bari. P. 8000.

NOCTON par. Eng. Lincoln 5340 ac. 1 op. 510.

NOUDWEG-LANDEB a vil. and com. Belgium, prov.
 S. Brabant 80 m. E.S.E. Brussels with a brewery a flour-mill and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1451.

NOLLINGEN a tn. N. Hindooon, prov. Oude, 15 m.
 W. S.W. Lucknow, lat. 26° 47' N, lon. 80° 38' E. with an extensive manufacture of the different kinds of brass, domestic and culinary vessels.

NOESSA LAUT, a small isl. Indian Archipelago, one of the Moluccas, S. from Ceram lat. 8° 40' S, lon. 128° 50' E.
 The clove culture is actively carried on and the inhabitants all profess Christianity.

NOFEL a vil. Austria, Tyrol Vorarlberg, on the frontiers of the principality of Liechtenstein, about 2 m. from Feldkirch. It has a church and mineral springs with a large and handsome bathing establishment, which is much frequented.

NOGAISE, or Ononostrova, a tn. Russia, gov. Taurida, circle and 70 m. S.E. Orlikov, on the Obukhinskiy, 5 m.
 above its mouth in the Sea of Azov, in the midst of a steppe, and the residence of a Russian commandant. P. (1849) 1152.

NOGABE, a tn. France, dep. Gers, near the MIDON 23 m. W. W. Auch, founded in the 11th century, and for some time the residence of the counts of Armagnac. P. 1309.

NOGAT an arm of the Vistula, which quits the main stream in prov. W. Prussia, 12 m. N.W. Marienwerder, and, proceeding N.W. to near Marienburg, falls into the Frische-Haff by several mouths, 4 m. N.W. Elbing; total course, about 80 m.

NOGENT, several places, France, particularly—1 (le-Noe) [Latin, Novogentum], A tn. and com. dep. Eure-et-Loir, 1 bank Eure, about 11 m. S.E. Evreux; with a considerable trade in corn and flour. Pop. 1286.—2, (le-Noe), A tn., dep.
 Haute-Marne, on bank Treuse, about 12 m. E.S.E. Chateau-de-Neauphy. It is the central locality for the manufacture of Langres cutlery, in which also it carries on a considerable trade. Pop. 2354.—3, (le-Noe), A tn., dep. Eure-et-Loir, 23 m. W. S.W. Chartres; at the foot of a steep hill, on the slope of which is an old Gothic castle, formerly the residence of Henri IV's celebrated minister Bailly. It has three churches and an hospital, near which is the tomb of Bailly manufacturers of serge, druggist, and bombazine; cotton and silk mills, numerous hammeries and dye-works, and a trade in linen, hemp, hay, silver-ware, cutlery, &c. Pop. 5620.—

 4, (sur-Seine) [Latin, Novogentum de Segensium], A tn., dep.
 Aube, on l. bank Seine, where it becomes navigable, 81 m.
 N.W. Troyes, a clean, thriving place, well, and in general regularly built. It has a handsome Gothic church of the 15th century, manufactures of hosiery and cordage, and a considerable trade in corn and flour, charcoal, slates, salt, hemp, turnery and timber. Nogent suffered much in 1814, when after a valiant defence, it was stormed by the Allies. Pop. 5467.

NOGRAD co. Hungary. See NOVOPAL.

NOGUEIRA, several small places, Portugal. The largest is Nogueira do Ovar, a tn. and par. Beira-Baixa, about 40 m. from Coimbra. Pop. 630.

NOGUEIRA two rivers, Spain both rising in the Pyrenees near the Val d'Aran sources about 25 m. apart—1, (rruogues) flows S., forms for a considerable part of its course the boundary between Aragon and Catalonia and falls into the Segre, 16 m. S. Lerida; total course, 80 m.—2, (galleres), in Catalonia, flows S. S.W. and joins the Segre,
 30 m. N.E. Lerida; total course, about 80 m.

NOGAYAT par. Ind. 1. Lat. 25.00 N, Pop. 709.
 2, Kerry 8204 ac. Pop. 623—(Fokomaldy) Cark and Kerry 17 873 ac. Pop. 3086.

NOGACAB a vil. Mexico, Yucatan lat. 20° 50' N
 lon. 86° 25' W in an extensive plain, with a large church, a townhouse, and a large schoolhouse. Near it are remains of an ancient city of same name. Pop. about 6000.

NOIA, two tns. Naples. See NOJA.

NOIR, an isl. S. America, off S.W. coast, Terra del Fuogo
 lat. 54° 30' S, lon. 78° 54' W, about 600 ft. in height.
 In the S.W. it terminates in a lofty rock, like a tower or steeples, which bears the name of Cape Noir. On the E. is an excellent roadstead, with a clean sandy bottom and safe from all winds between N and S by W, but the channel between the island and the mainland is obstructed by numerous rocks, and very dangerous.

NOIRE-FONTAINE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Luxemburg, on the Moselle, 33 m. W. W. Arlon. It has platinumworks, a brewery, a tanning in oil, and flour mill. P. 1150.

NOIRMONT or Benwassekhan, a vil. and par. Switzerland, cant. and 10 m. S.S.W. Bern; with a handsome church, and consisting chiefly of a well built castle, lining the public road. Pop. 1121.

NOIRMOUTIERS [Latin Horus Juvenis], an isl. France,
 N.W. of dep. Vendée, from which it is separated by a narrow channel almost dry at low water, lat. 47° 5' N, lon.
 2° 24' W. It is of a very irregular shape, greatest length,
 N.W. to S.E., about 10 m., breadth, varying from 1 to 8 m.
 Only about one-fifth of the surface is under the plough, but this portion is of great fertility. The rest of the island is occupied partly by meadows and pastures, on which numbers of cattle are reared, and partly by salt meadows, and partly by mere waste. Noirmoutiers became a station of considerable importance during the war of La Vendée. Pop. 7011.

NOIRMOUTIERS [Latin Novus Montemur], a tn.
 France, dep. Vendée, cap. above sl., remarkably clean, and built with considerable regularity. It has a harbour, in which the water rises about 15 ft., admitting vessels of 50 to 60 tons, the roads outside have good anchorages for large ships trade chiefly in corn, beans, salt, and soda. Oyster-fishing is extensively carried on. Pop. 2339.

NOISY several places France, particularly—1, (le-Noisy) A tn., dep. Seine, 8 m. S.E. St. Denis surrounded by kitchen gardens. Pop. 1644.—2, (le-Grand) [Latin, Noisium], on bank Marne, about 9 m. from Paris. Pop. 1078.

NOJA or NOJA, two tns. Naples—1, Prov. and 10 m.
 S.S.E. Bari, was a place of some importance till 1814, when it lost nearly a fifth of its inhabitants by the plague.—2, Prov.
 Basilicata, dist. and 33 m. E. Lagugliara. Pop. 1444.

NOKE, par. Eng. Oxford, 794 ac. Pop. 140.

NOKERE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. N. Flanders, on the Zandbeek, 15 m. S.W. Ghent. It has manufactures of linen and yarn, and a flour mill. Pop. 1723.

NOKUNDA, or NOKUNDA, a tn. Persia, prov. and about 90 m. W. Astrakhan, in the bay of that name, on the S.E. shore of the Caspian. It is a struggling place, consisting chiefly of wooden cottages covered with thatch and embowered among magnificent trees.

NOLA, a tn. Naples, prov. Lavore 14 m. E.N. S. Naples. It is ill built and ill cleaned, the see of a bishop, and has 16 churches, a college, a seminary hospital and barracks. Gerardo Bruno, who, on a charge of heresy and atheism, was burned alive in 1600, was born here. Pop. 8860.

NOLAY [Latin, Nollans], a tn. France, dep. Côte-d'Or, in a fertile district, celebrated for its white wines, 38 m. S.S.W. Dijon. It has a large and handsome church, fine fountains, and ancient towers; manufactures of hats and leather, and a trade in wool, wine, corn and leather, oaks, timber &c. Carnot was born here. Pop. 3048.

NOLI [anc. Nollans], a tn. Italy, Piedmont, div. and 80 m. S.W. Genoa, in a small bay on the Gulf of Genoa with a court of justice, a large Gothic church, once a cathedral, an Episcopal seminary, and a hospital; inhabitants chiefly employed in fishing and the coasting trade. P. 645.

NOLINSK, a tn. Russia, gov. and 65 m. S. Viatka, dep. circle, on the Nolutka and Dubrovka. It has some general trade, but is mostly agricultural. Pop. (1860) 1961. The climate has a flat surface, a soil mostly of strong clay not very fertile, but well cultivated. Pop. 150,000.

NOLTON, par. W. Wales, Pembrokeshire 1564 ac. Pop. 245.

NOLYE, a tn. Hindostan, prov. Malwa lat. 23° 5' N lon. 75° 37' E. 29 m. W.S.W. Ougan.

NOMBELA, a tn. Spain, New Castile, prov. Toledo, near the Alberca, S.E. Madrid with clean streets, a parish church, townhouse, prison, and primary school, an oil and several flour mills, and a trade in cattle, wine, and silk. Pop. 1233.

NOMBEE [anc. Nomb], a tn. Mexico. Near it are several silver mines. Pop. 7000—3 A. port, New Granada, dep. Isthmus, on the Caribbean Sea, 6 m. from Panama.

NOMO, or NOMOS, a considerable headland, Japan, on W. of Isl. Kjusiu, and of great importance in making the Bay of Nangasaki, of which it forms the S. side, lat. 32° 55' N lon. 129° 43' E. It is the termination of a rocky peninsula, which stretches S.S.W. for about 90 m., between the bays of Tsushima and Kjusiu, and has a height of 1800 ft. above the sea. Near this cape are the small island of Kawasima, and to the N.W. the rocks called by the Japanese Mitau-se, and by the Dutch, De Ezel met de Kruiken [The Hen and Cuckoo].

NOMA [anc. Noma], a tn. Austria, Dalmatia, circle and 8 m. N.W. Zara, on the S.E. side of a peninsula of same name, at the mouth of the Rindna, in the middle of an unhealthy swamp. It was once a place of importance, and the see of a bishop, and has a church, which formerly ranked as a cathedral; and a haven, which is nearly filled up. P. 500.

NONGOWRY, one of the Nicobar Is. See NANOWRY.

NONE, a tn. Italy, Piedmont, div. and 12 m. S.S.W. Turin, in a fertile plain between the Cebiola and the Lessa. It has two churches, a charitable dispensary, several public schools, and a trade in corn, wood, and silk. Pop. 8000.

NONINGTON, par. Eng. Kent, 4081 ac. Pop. 876.

NONNENWEIER, a vil. Baden, circle Middle Rhine, on the Rhine, with a church and a mill. P. 1060.

NOTRON, a tn. France, dep. Dordogne, on the Dordogne, 26 m. N.W. Périgueux. It is irregularly built, consisting of mean houses and ill-laid-out streets; has a well managed hospital, manufactures of cutlery, extensive tanneries, and a trade in iron and cattle. Manganese and iron are extensively mined; and there are blast-furnaces and other iron-works in the neighborhood. Pop. 5651.

NOOAREVA, one of the Marquesas. See NOKA RIVA.

NOODONDY, a tn. Hindostan, prov. and S.S.W. Bengal, overlooking by an elevated rock, crowned by a rude stone fort, with lofty, circular bastions.

NOORDBOEK, a vil. Holland, prov. and 13 m. E. by S. Groningen, with two churches, two schools, a brewery, rope-works, some weaving, hat-making, several clock-making, and corn, wool, and black-wheat mills. Pop. 1551.

NOORDHORN, a vil. Holland, prov. and 8 m. W. N.W. Groningen, with a church and school; inhabitants engaged in agriculture and cattle-rearing. Pop. 888.

Vol. II.

NOORDWIJK, two contiguous vils. Holland, prov. S. Holland, about 1 m. apart—1. (see sup.) 2 m. S.W. Leyden on the North Sea, with a church, school, and hospital for 12 poor people. Inhabitants, engaged in the coast and herring fishing, generally poor. Pop. 700—2. (see sup.) 6 m. N.W. Leyden, with two churches, several schools, a townhouse, and a curious old edifice, called St. Jorisdouwe, where archery games are held annually. Inhabitants engaged in agriculture, horticulture, raising large quantities of beautiful flowers and excellent vegetables. Pop. 1964.

NOORDWIJKERHOUT, a vil. Holland, prov. S. Holland 8 m. N.W. Leyden, on the sand downs with two churches and a school. Pop. (agricultural), 832.

NOORDWOLDE, a vil. Holland, prov. Friesland, 12 m. S.E. Heerenveen, with a dye-works and corn-mill, but inhabitants chiefly engaged in turf-cutting. Pop. 1782.

NOORDZEE (Dra.) See NORIN Sea.

NORJA, a considerable vil. Selma, 14 m. N. Selman, and 3 m. W. from the Indus, lat. 36° 23' N; lon. 67° 53' E.

NOOTKA-SOUND, a bay or inlet, British America, V. coast, Vancouver Island, lat. 49° 35' N lon. 128° 55' 30' W. (s.) It extends N.W. about 10 m. inland, and has a wooded island in the middle. It branches off into several smaller bays and coves one of which—where Captain Cook remained some time on his last voyage, and which was called Friendly Cove—has a narrow entrance, but makes a safe harbor, and is bounded on all sides by high and wooded land. Nootka-Sound would seem, however, to have been raised into undue importance. Captain Sir E. Belcher says that, on first entering it, he doubted his senses, that so small a space could have occupied so much time, and that, until he had examined it himself in his boat, he did not think it could afford shelter to two vessels. The greatest distance, he adds, between any two points does not exceed a quarter of a mile, and mostly rocky.

NORA, a mining tn. Sweden, lkn and 17 m. N.W. Örebro, on a lake. It is surrounded on W. and S. sides by the river Hagby, and is regularly built. There is a mineral spring and it carries on a trade in iron. Pop. 730.

NORBERG, a vil. Sweden, lkn and 33 m. N.W. Westera, cap. dist. It is well built, has a church, and valuable iron mines, which are extensively worked. Near it is the large smelting-furnace of Nordanå.

NORBURT, a vil. Denmark on N. side all Alst, on a small lake, 37 m. N.E. Schleswig, with a church. P. 1900.

NORBURT three pars Eng.—1. (and Eastern) Derby 2248 ac. Pop. 470—2. Salop, 4034 ac. Pop. 878—3. Stafford 3318 ac. 1 pop. 869.

NORCIA [anc. Norcia], a tn. Italy, Umbria, deleg. and 17 m. E.N.E. Spoleto, with a trade in wine, oil and swine. St. Benedict was born here. Pop. 4000.

NORD, a dep. France, bounded, N.W. by the North Sea, N.N.E. and E. by Belgium, S. dep. Aisne, S.W. and W. Pas-de-Calais, greatest length, N.W. to S.E. 117 m; breadth, varying from 4 m. to 89 m. area, 8170 sq. m. The coast, which furnishes the two harbours of Dunkirk and Gravelines, is also marked by a long chain of sandy hills. With this exception the whole department may be regarded as one vast, monotonous flat, intersected by sluggish streams, flowing generally N.E. to the N. Sea, and numerous canals. These rivers are the Sambre, the Scheldt, which here receives the Scarpe, the Lys, another affluent of the Scheldt, and the Yser. All these rivers are navigable. The Aa, forming part of the boundary between this department and that of Pas-de-Calais, takes a N.W. direction. The low position of the surface, and the large extent of it occupied by still water are unfavourable to health, and the climate must be regarded as on the whole not salubrious. The greater part of the soil is a rich alluvial, which, under proper drainage, never fails to yield the richest crops, and the culture partakes a good deal of the nature of that for which Flanders has so long been celebrated. The principal crops are the ordinary cereals and legumes, flax, hemp, tobacco, oilseeds, seeds, dyes plants and roots, hops, chert, &c. The meadows are remarkably luxuriant, and rear large numbers of horses, oxen, and cows, almost all of the Flemish breeds. Coal extends over a considerable portion of the surface, and is wrought at Aves, Balaire, Fresnes, Vieux Condé, and St. Saut, supplying a great variety of manufacturing establishments. The manufactures include all the ordinary classes, particularly ordinary linen, raw and bleached, table-linen, molasses, canvas, lace broad cloth, and woollen stuffs, sailcloths, cottons, &c. Other articles are soap, woads, blackened, tannery and to these may be added distilleries, breweries, blacksmiths, dyer-vats, machine-work, oil, tannery, cotton, hemp, and flax mills, black-smiths, iron-works, and all kinds of ironware, cast and malleable, marble saw-works, glass-works, tanneries, potteries, brick and tile works, &c. For administration, it is divided into 7 arrondissements—Lille, the capital, Arras, Cambrai, Douai, Dunkirk, Hainaut, and Valenciennes subdivided into 69 cantons and 699 communes. Pop (1857), 1,158,365.

63

NORDEN a town in Hanover gov. Aurich, 16 m N Emden, on a canal which, at a short distance, communicates with the sea. It is an old place, but tolerably well built, has an ancient church, R. Catholic chapel, synagogue, Latin school, and hospital manufactures of soap, cheese, and tobacco and a considerable shipping trade. Pop 5651.

NORDENBURG a town in Prussia, gov and 49 m S E Königsberg on a small stream, where it falls into Lake Aschewitz with a church and some trade in linen, horses, and cattle. Pop. 2299.

NORDERNY, an isl. in Hanover, in the N Sea, 25 m N Emden about 4 m long, by nearly 2 m broad, low, and so sandy as to be in a great measure barren. The principal village, which bears the same name, is a neat and remarkably clean place, with a church, and is much frequented for sea-bathing. Pop. 700.

NORDHOOG an isl. Denmark, in the N Sea, off the coast of Schleswig, and a little W of isl. Falworm. It is little more than 1 m. in length and is frequented by immense numbers of sea-fowls for whose eggs it is often visited by the inhabitants of the adjacent islands.

NORDHOVEN a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 20 m. E. B. Antwerp, on a small stream, with a brewery two brick works, and a trade in agricultural produce. P. 1186.

NORDHALBEN, a market in Bavaria, Upper Franconia, 80 m N Bamberg with a chapel several flax and cotton mills, and a trade in dried fruit, millet, and woollen articles. Pop. 1864.

NORDHOLM a town in Prussia Saxony gov and 86 m N W Erfurt, on the Sorge and the Golden Aue, at the foot of the Sauerberg, belonging to the Harz. It is surrounded by walls flanked with towers, and entered by seven gates contains seven churches, one of them with two fine paintings by Lucas Cranach, a townhouse, gymnasium and orphan hospital; and has manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, lacquerware, and chemical products extensive breweries and distilleries, and a considerable trade in corn and cattle. Pop (1846) 15,881.

NORDHIM several places, Germany, particularly—1 A vil. Bavaria, Lower Franconia, dist. Volkach, on the Main, with a church. P. 1028.—2, A vil. Hesse-Darmstadt, prov. Starkenburg, near Heppenheim with a church. P. 1050.—3 A vil. Württemberg, circle Neckar hall Brackenheim, with a church, and a saw and a flour mill. P. 1243.

NORDHORN, a town in Hanover gov and 42 m W N W Osnabrück, on the Vechte with two churches, some shipping, and a considerable trade in wood and stone. P. 1411.

NORDKÖPING, a town in Sweden. See NORDKÖPING.

NORDKYN, a cape, Norway forming the most northerly point of the coast of Norway, the Nordkyn Cape, about 8° W., being situated on an island, lat. 71 10' N., lon. 27 50' E.

NORDLAND, a land, Norway, prov. Tromsø, bounded, N by Finnmark, E. Sweden, S. Trondhjem and W the Atlantic and Arctic oceans, greatest length, N to S., nearly 300 m. mean breadth, not more than 60 m., area, 1108 geo. sq. m. The coast is much indented by deep bays and fjords, and lined by numerous islands, of which the Lofoden group in the N. W., is the most important. The surface is very mountainous, being covered almost throughout by the Koster Mountains, which stretch through out its whole length, S. E. W. to N. E. W., and end out lower benches, which are continued into the Isles of Lofoden. The easternmost point, Slettholmen, has a height of 6842 ft. Both the climate and soil combine agriculture within very narrow limits; but some butter and cheese are exported, and the fisheries are very productive. Pop. (1855), 77,855.

NÖRDLINGEN, a town in Bavaria, Swabia, on the Goldbach and Eger, 26 m N W Augsburg. It is surrounded by walls, flanked with towers, and is entered by five gates; has several courts and offices; four churches, one of them a handsome Gothic cathedral, surmounted by a remarkable tower, 245 ft. high; a townhouse, an hospital, Latin school, agricultural and industrial school, manufactures of carpets, woollen and linen goods, Coriarian leather, and glass, and a considerable trade in corn, grain, and feathers. P. 6464.

NORDSTRAND an isl. Denmark, separated from the S. W. coast of duely Schleswig, by a narrow channel, as one part not more than a mile across. Its present area does not exceed 12 geo. sq. m. but, previously to the 11th October, 1864, its area was ten times greater. On that day a tremendous flood from the N Sea swept across it, carrying destruction to the W coast of Schleswig and drowning 15,000 persons. Of these, 6400 belonged to Nordstrand alone. It besides lost 80,000 head of cattle, more than 1800 horses, and almost all its churches. The far larger part of its surface was buried for ever under the waters. Less than a half of the remainder now belongs to itself the rest forms the separate islands of Falworm and Halligen. Its situation is extremely low but it has a good deal of rich marsh land, held by such precarious tenure as dikes can give against the encroachments of a raging sea. Pop. 2000.

NORSE—1 A part of the estuary of the Thames, England, about 60 m below London, and E of Sheerness. It is surrounded with sandbanks, on one of which there is a floating light.—2, A river Ireland which rises in the Blinnishloinn mountains, on the borders of Tipperary and Queen's co. flows S. E. through Kilkenny Thomastown, and Inistioge, and joins the Barrow about 2 m. above New Ross. Its rapid current makes navigation difficult, but it admits vessels of considerable size as far as Inistioge, and thence to Thomastown.

NORONA (SANTA MARIA) a town in Spain, Asturias prov. and about 7 m. from Oviedo, near the Noreña, an affluent of the Nora. It has a church, townhouse, primary school, and hospital, manufactures of leather and shoes, and a trade in them, and in cattle and fruit. Pop. 1905.

NORFOLK a town in Prussia, gov and 40 m E. Stettin, on Lake Erug, and surrounded by four other lakes. It has a church, an hospital and a trade in cattle and horses. P. 5441.

NORFOLK, a maritime co. England, bounded N. and N. E. by the N Sea, S. and S. E. by Suffolk, W and W Cambridge and Lincoln, and the Wash Area, 1,538 890 sq., of which about 1,500,000 ac. are supposed to be arable, meadow, and pasture. The surface is generally flat, with some slight swells and depressions in the N. part. The coast consists principally of cliffs, partly chalk, and partly alternate strata of clay, gravel, loam, and sand. These are gradually undermined by the sea, which is everywhere making inroads on the land. Several villages have been at various periods swept away the sites they occupied now forming part of the bed of the German Ocean. These encroachments of the sea are still in progress. The general appearance of the country in Norfolk is extremely uninteresting; the undulations of the surface not being sufficient to relieve the eye, while the insistent effect of rich woodland is not always to be met with. But these deficiencies are compensated by the evidences of careful cultivation, and the pleasing tokens of human industry so frequently and prominently brought before the eye of the traveller. The climate on the E. coast is dry throughout the year, and cold, bitter winds prevail during the winter and early in spring. This county has perhaps a higher reputation than any other district in England for its progress in agriculture (although numerous instances of very indifferent husbandry present themselves), yet it has nothing indigenous which commands a first-rate price in the market. The Norfolk sheep are almost unproved in their own district by the Southdown, and the fine cattle which are sent to Southfield from this county are merely fattened here—the native breed, the Norfolk or 'Hamshire', being held in little estimation. In the E. and W. districts the soil is light and sandy, in the central and E. parts generally heavy, varying in quality, being here and there stiff and difficult to manage, but mostly light, and abundant on a sandy soil. Here also extensive marshes occur, some of which are peculiarly favourable for the growth of corn; but their liability to legislation has induced the inhabitants to prefer the dairy system, and in some parts large quantities of butter are made and exported under the name of "Cambridge." The quantity of upland meadow and pastures has been estimated at nearly 197,000 ac., and that of marsh land at upwards of 65,000 ac. The crop raised in greatest perfection in Norfolk is barley, which, indeed, may be considered as the most important portion of its agricultural produce. Most of it is made into malt, and then shipped. Vast numbers of turkeys are reared pheasants, partridges, and rabbits abound. The manufactory, except for home consumption consist chiefly of woven goods, which, in a variety of branches, still constitute the staple trade. Norfolk has extensive fisheries of both herrings and mackerel; the former, however being by far the most important. It returns 12 members to Parliament, namely four for the county, two for the city of Norwich, and two each for the boroughs of King's Lynn, Thetford, and Yarmouth. Pop. (1851), 442,714.

NORFOLK, a tn. and port, U States, Virginia, on bank Elizabeth, just below the confluence of its two branches 8 m below its entrance into Hampton roads, and 82 m from the ocean lat. 36° 55' N. lon. 76° 8' W. It lies low, has irregular and crooked streets, a courthouse, jail, market-house, theatre, academy asylum, atheneum, with a respectable library, and, in the vicinity a marine hospital and a navy-yard, with a dry dock, constructed of hewn granite, and eight churches. The harbour is safe and commodious, having 18 ft water and its entrance which is fully 1 m wide, is defended by forts Monroe and Callison. It has a greater foreign commerce than any other place in the state. The Dismal Swamp canal, which connects Chesapeake Bay with Albemarle's Sound opens an extensive water communication between Norfolk and the S. P. (1850) 14,390.

NORFOLK BAY a spacious bay Van Diemen's Land, Tasmann's Peninsula, off Storm Bay, about 8 m long, N. to S., and 8 m to 5 m broad E. to W. It was first entered by the French navigator D'Entrecasteaux.

NORFOLK ISLAND, S. Pacific lat. 28° 58' S. lon. 167° 48' E. (a.) about 400 m N.W. New Zealand about 6 m long W. to E., and nearly 1 m in breadth circumference, 15 m. It is a beautiful and valuable island but is difficult of approach, on account of the heavy sea which constantly beats on its rocky shores, it is also without a harbour or roadstead. The climate is generally delightful and salubrious, being of a medium temperature but brightening S.E. winds sometimes prevail which are injurious to vegetation. The soil is extremely fertile, and the whole surface of the island covered with a luxuriant verdure. Trees and plants abound, but the pine is the most numerous. Some of the species (Arctostaphylos) attain a height of 225 ft. and are 18 ft to 20 ft in circumference. Wheat and maize are produced in great abundance. The also grows in great quantity spontaneously in many parts of the island. Birds of various kinds are numerous, including pigeons, parrots, rails, and a variety of small birds. Norfolk Island was discovered by Captain Cook in 1774, when it was uninhabited. In 1789 a British settlement was formed here from Sydney, but was subsequently abandoned. It has since been made a penal settlement for the worst description of convicts.

NORRE, a Norwegian name of Norway (which see); NORRUM or NORRUMSKA par Eng Northumberland, 10,848 ac Pop. 4289.

NORIC ALPS See ALPS vol L, p. 102. NORMAN, or NORMANBY ISLAND one of the Virgin Isle, W. Indies, N.E. St. John, 2 m. long and under 1 m broad lat. 18° 19' N. lon. 64° 39' W. (a.) Its shores are irregular and much indented with coves on its W side its Man-of-War Bay where vessels may ride in 18 to 8 fathoms.

NORMAN ISLES, a name given to the Channel Islands (which see).

NORMANBY three para. Eng.—1, Lincoln, 1420 ac. Pop. 514.—2, York (N Riding) 2568 ac. Pop. 108—3 (On-the-Wolds) Lincoln 1966 ac. Pop. 149.

NORMANDY [Latin Neustria or Normannia] an ancient prov France, which was divided into Upper and Lower Normandy, and was bounded, N and W by the English Channel, E. by Maube and Brittany and E. by Flanders and the Isle of France; greatest length, about 150 m; breadth, 75 m.; area, 10,684 sq m. On the decline of the Roman empire, it was seized by the Franks and afterwards, in the 9th century wrested from them by the Normans, from whom it has derived its name. When William the Conqueror mounted the English throne, it was incorporated with, and long continued to form an important part of the English monarchy. It became finally united to France under Charles VII in 1435; and now forms dep. Seine Inférieure, Eure, Calvados, Manche, and also dep. Orne, with the exception of around Mortagne.

NORMANTON five para. Eng.—1, Derby 1862 ac. Pop. 585.—2, Lincoln, 1640 ac. Pop. 179.—3, Rutland 2440 ac. Pop. 65.—4, (Upper-Swale) Notts 1500 ac. Pop. 868.—5, (Upper-Trent) Notts; 1110 ac. Pop. 565.

NORMANTON a vil and par England, co York, at the junction of the Manchester and Leeds with the Midland railway 5 m. E.N.E. Wakefield. It has a neat church with a tower and since the opening of the railways has acquired much additional importance more especially by the erection of a magnificent hotel, to accommodate the numerous passengers by the York, Sheffield Manchester and Leeds trains. Area of par. 2974 ac. Pop. 1288.

NORMANTON (Socotr) a vil and par England co Derby 2 m. E.N.E. Alfreton with an ancient church, Priory and Wesleyan Methodist chapel, two schools, col. Herles, and manufactures of hosiery Jedediah Strutt, who invented the machine for making ribbed stockings, was born here. Area of par, 1780 ac. Pop. 1340.

ROHN a market tn. Russia, gov. and circle Jaroslavl on the Volga with numerous forges, and manufactures of nails, and other articles in iron, which are sent to Moscow and St. Petersburg. Pop. 1500.

NORRIDGEWOLK a tn. U States, Maine, on both sides of the Kennebec, here crossed by a handsome bridge 32 m. N. Augusta with a church, courthouse, jail, academy, two taverns and a considerable trade. P. 1855.

NORRIS TOWN, a tn. U States, Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill here crossed by a bridge, 800 ft. long 38 m. E.S.E. Harrisburg. It has spacious well-formed streets, a Gothic Episcopal, and a Presbyterian church, an assembly literary society, with a cabinet of natural history, three cottons, and a tannery, two mills, and a trade in lumber. P. 2987.

NORRÖPPING, a tn. Sweden, Jan. and 24 m. N. Linköping, at the mouth of the Motala Elf in the Bravik, a gulf of the Baltic. The environs are beautiful and the site of the town is one of the finest in the kingdom. The Motala Elf flows through the town, making several falls within it, and forming two islands and is crossed by a foot and three other bridges, two of which are handsome, more especially one constructed of iron. It is well and regularly built, has spacious and well paved streets, and presents a cheerful and substantial appearance. It contains three churches, a synagogue, townhouse, and hospital, and has important manufactures of linen, hosiery starch, lacquerware, soap, and tobacco oil paper and other mills sugar-refineries, and building-wards, at which a number of handsome steamers have been fitted out, a considerable trade in the above articles of manufacture, and a valuable salmon fishery in the river. Pop. 10,145.

NORRLAND a bell Norway See NORLAND. NORRKA FIKLEV, or NORRBYLLE RAGST, a name sometimes employed by geographers to the mountain mass which commencing near the Dovre Field mountains, occupies more than three-fourths of the S. part of Norway. It thus includes the ranges known by the names of Langfjell, Bogensfield, Fillefeld, Bygdafjell, and Yoksfield. Its loftiest summits are in the N. where Røss-Breen is 7000 ft. The average height does not exceed 4500 ft. or perhaps 5500 ft.

NORRTHOLM, a seaport tn. Sweden, lat. and 37 m. E. Stockholm, on the Tollef Sound, and having on its W side the Lake of Lommar. It has manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and greases, a fishery and some land traffic. P. 1000.

NORT, a tn. France, dep. Loire Inférieure, r. bank Erice, 16 m. N.N.E. Nantes; with manufactures of leather, and a small harbour, which is the great entrepot for the wood and charcoal used at Nantes, the iron of Moidon and Bléville, and coal from the mines of Langun. Pop. 1665.

NORTE (PARO DNE) a tn. U States, New Mexico, r. bank Rio-Grande-del-Norte, 3800 ft. above sea-level, 275 m. S. by E. Santa Fe. It stands at the head of a valley, and can sides of a long line of white houses, with plots of garden and vineyard. The soil is the richest in New Mexico, and is fertile, producing abundance of wheat, maize, and other grain, and is particularly adapted for the vine, which is extensively cultivated, and yields a wine of excellent flavor. Wool also forms an important article of trade. Population about 5000, chiefly Indians.

NORTH four parts Eng. —1 (Chapel) Sussex 8864 ac. Pop. 864. —2, (Belvoir or Cuckfield) Suffolk; 1553 ac. Pop. 156 —3, (Wendel-Sussex) Essex; 8577 ac. Pop. 842 —4, (Wootton) Dorset. 415 ac. Pop. 76.

NORTH BERWICK, a burgh, seaport, and par., Scot. See BERWICK (North).

NORTH CAPE, a celebrated promontory, forming the most N. point of Europe, and situated on the N. of the island of Magdalen, which is separated from the mainland by a narrow channel lat. 71° 10' 15" N lon 35° 48' E. It consists of a long row of grassy rocks jutting out into the sea, and terminating above partly in pyramidal peaks and partly in a kind of table-land, at the height of about 1500 ft. It is about three-fourths of a mile across and consists of green quartz, and other primary rocks. The quartz, in particular, lies scattered about in all directions, and wherever there is a flat spot, reflects its dazzling whiteness but the face of the precipitous exposed to the dashing of the storm are of a dark colour according better with the general whiteness of the scene. On the W and N side, the rocks of the cape are so precipitous that no boat can land but on the E. side, a small bay hollowed out of the bosom of the rock, gives easy access to the shore. Here, amid the surrounding sterility, marks of vegetation suddenly appear, and the forget-me-not, wild pansy, nasturtium, angelica, and several other plants, are seen blooming.

THE NORTH CAPE.—From Vapour de Condensation Internationale de Nord.

NORTH FOLDEH, a fard, Norway of N.W. coast Nordland, opening from the West Fjord. Its mouth is about 13 m. wide, and a little beyond it divides into two large branches, called respectively the N and the S. Folden. The former, communicating by some small passages with the Holmøek Fjord, includes a large tract of Nordland.

NORTH SEA or GERMAN OCEAN [anc. Mare Germanicum]. German, Nord See or Deutsches Meer; Dutch, Nord Zee; a large branch of the Atlantic Ocean, lying between Great Britain and the continent of Europe, having the former, and Orkney and Shetland Islands, W. Denmark, and part of Norway E. Skagerrak of Dover, part of France, Belgium, Holland, and Hanover S.; and Northern Ocean, N. lat. 51° to 61° N lon. 2° 30' W to 7° 30' E. Extreme length, from the Strait of Dover to Ume, the most N. of the Shetland Isles, about 700 m., greatest breadth, between the coast of Haddingtonshire, Scotland, and the W. coast of Denmark about 420 m. The shores of all the countries that surround the North Sea are deeply indented with bays, firths, inlets, and large estuaries, but its most remarkable arm is the Gt. Belt, between Denmark and Norway, which communicates, through the Kattegat, with the Baltic Sea. The North Sea is deepest on the Norwegian side, where the soundings give 180 fathoms; but the mean depth of the whole basin may be stated at no more than 81 fathoms. The bed of this sea is traversed by several enormous banks one of which, occupying a central position, trends from the Firth of Forth, Scotland, in a N.E. direction, to a distance of 110 m., others run from Denmark and inland upwards of 100 m. to the N.W.; while the greatest of all, the Dogger Bank, occupies the centre of the sea, from lat. 54° 10' to 57° 34' N, and lon 1° to 6° E. The great oceanic tidal wave, which originates in the Atlantic, after having swept the W. coasts of Great Britain and Ireland, enters the N. extremity of the North Sea, giving high water nearly simultaneously to the opposite shores of Scotland and Norway. Pursuing its course along the coasts of the former and of England, on which it strikes very directly and with great force, it rules the tides as far S. as the Thames, making the low of Great Britain in 18 hours. It determines also the tides of Belgium, from Ostend to Dunkirk, and does not cease to affect, though it does not rule, the tides of the Continent through the Channel. On entering the North Sea, on the N. of Scotland, the tidal wave does not exceed 12 ft., but gradually increases to 14, 16, 18, and on the Humber to 20 ft. a difference of height depending on the figure of the shore, the form of the bottom, and the direction of incidence of the wave.

The fisheries in this sea are extensive, as well on the Dogger Bank celebrated for its cod fishery as on all the shores that bound it; they are still greater at its N. extremity, in the direction of the Orkney and Shetland Isles.—(Johnston's Physical Atlas Lyell's Geology, Mr. Somerville's Physical Geography, &c.)

NORTHALLERTON a bor., market town, and par., England co. York, exp. N. Riding 83 m. N.N.E. York, on the railway to Newcastle. It consists of one long and spacious street, with a few smaller back ones, kept in pretty good order, and has a workhouse, consumption prison, constructed on the plan of Howard registrar's office, a plain cruciform church, places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Society of Friends two schools several charities, including an hospital called the Mason's Dispensary, founded in 1476. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and some tanning and tanning are carried on though to a less extent than formerly. The borough sends a member to Parliament constituency (1851) 281 Area of par., 18 650 ac. Pop. 5335 Pop. bor. 4995

NORTHAM par. Eng. Devon 4190 ac. Pop. 5680 NORTHAMPTON or NORTHAMPTONSHIRE, an island co. England, bounded, N and A.W. by the Lincoln, Rutland, and Leicesters, W. Warwick, and Oxford, and S. E.E., and E. Oxford, Bucks, Bedford, Huntingdon, and Cambridgeshire. Area, 450 880 ac., of which about 136,000 are under crop, 20,000 fallow and 415,000 grass land and meadow. The general aspect of the county is pleasing, being finely diversified by waving hills, gentle slopes, and beautiful vales, copiously watered by numerous streams and rivulets. The highest eminences are in the S.W. part of the county, on the borders of Warwick, but here the most elevated summit is only about 860 ft. The E. border is occupied by the Oxford clay the rest of the county chiefly by the uppermost formations of the lowest division of coal. Silky beds of the finest marble lime, and breck clay come in various places. The soil is various, but mostly rich and fertile, consisting principally of various descriptions of loam. The pastures are excellent, and the cattle grazed on them in summer yield a profitable return. The principal crop is wheat, barley, and oats, the first in largest proportion. Beans and turnips are also extensively cultivated, and hemp is grown to some extent in the E. district, on the borders of Leicestershire and Cambridgeshire. The raising of sheep is a principal object with the Northamptonshire farmers, 100,000 sheep and lambs being usually sent to London, and 15,000 head of the cattle. Woodlands, principally the remains of ancient forests, are very extensive in this county. The chief articles of manufacture are shoes, hose lace, and woollen stuffs. Of shoes, about 7000 or 8000 pairs are made weekly, mostly for the army and navy. Northamptonshire returns eight members to Parliament—four for the county, two for the city of Peterborough, and two for Northampton. P (1851) 218,860.

NORTHAMPTON a pari municipal bor and in England, cap. above co., 60 m. N.W. London, on a slope, rising from a bank near, here crossed by two stone bridges, on a branch canal, connecting the River with the Grand Junction and on the Peterborough branch of the London and North-Western railway. It is built of a reddish stone, obtained in the vicinity; and consists of four principal streets, meeting in a large open market-place, one of the finest in England and of a number of minor streets, of very irregular formation. In the immediate vicinity is the Victoria promenade, about 1 m. long, with an avenue of lime-trees. The environs, covered with woods and meadows, and studded with villages, present a very cheerful and attractive appearance. The town is of very ancient date; and immediately after the Norman conquest was surrounded by massive walls, with four gates, and defended by a castle. The walls and gates have altogether disappeared, and of the castle, which possessed considerable historical interest, only a few vestiges remain.

The ecclesiastical edifices include eight churches, and numerous Dissenting chapels, of which the Baptists have five, the Independents three, the Wesleyan Methodists three, and the Friends Primitive Methodists, R. Catholics, and Unitarians, one each. The churches are All Saints, rebuilt in 1880 after the designs of Sir Christopher Wren, forming a large and handsome, though somewhat incongruous structure, with a porch of 12 lofty Ionic pillars, supporting a cornice and entablature in the centre of which a statue of Charles II. has been placed a central spire, and an ancient embattled tower which escaped when the original building was burned down. St. Katharine's, a new edifice, in the Gothic style, St. Peter's, built about the same time as the castle, recently restored, and admired as one of the purest and most beautiful specimens of decorated Norman; St. Giles, with a fine Norman porch. St. Sepulchre's, supposed to have been built by the Templars, on the site of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem, and consisting of a cruciform body with a central apse resting on eight round Norman columns, St. Andrew's, St. Edmund's, and the South Quarter or Ragged School church. Among the Dissenting chapels, that of the Independents on Castle Hill deserves notice, as having been, for 20 years, the scene of the labours of the celebrated Dr. Doddridge, who also presided over a theological academy in the town, and that of the R. Catholics, though small, is remarkable for the chasteness and purity of its early English style, and the beauty of its stained glass. The other more important buildings are the town-hall, the alms or county hall, the county and borough jail, corn exchange, barracks, infirmary, theatre, &c. The principal literary and educational institutions are the free grammar, blue-coat, green, national, British, infant, and other schools; the mechanics institute, which possesses a library of 10,000 vols., the religious and useful knowledge society with a library of 4000 vols. an Athenaeum, an archaeological and an architectural society. The benevolent institutions include, in addition to the infirmary a general and lunatic asylum, the Royal Victoria dispensary, St. John's, and Thomas-Besant hospitals, &c.

The staple manufacture is boots and shoes, which are made very extensively for the supply of the army, and of the London and other markets, and also for export. The number of hands employed is about 9000 nearly one-third of the whole inhabitants. The tanning of leather is also carried on on a large scale. Hosiery and lace, once important branches of industry, have greatly declined—the lace especially, since machinery was introduced. The only other important industrial establishments are iron and brass foundries, breweries, and paper and corn mills. The races held on a race-course N. of the town, attract great numbers of visitors. Besides two weekly markets, there are eleven annual fairs.

Northampton existed from a very early period, and in the time of Edward the Elder was in possession of the Danes, who made it their headquarters in 921, and, after being captured, returned, and burned it down in 1010. It had been rebuilt, and was becoming prosperous, when it was again nearly destroyed by the Northumbrian insurgents in 1066. Immediately after the Norman conquest it was destroyed, as part of the earthen of Northampton, on Simon de St. Liz, who built his castle and its walls, and, by other improvements, contributed greatly to its progress. In 1285, owing to quarrels between the professors of Oxford and their students, an attempt to make Northampton the seat of a rival university obtained the sanction of the king, but was ultimately abandoned. Several synods and parliaments were afterwards held in it. In one of the latter a treaty was made, by which Edward II. formally renounced his pretensions to the sovereignty of Scotland. The other most remarkable events in its history are the battle between the Roses in 1460 in which Henry VI. was taken prisoner, a destructive flood in 1665, and a still more destructive fire in 1676, causing a damage estimated at $150,000. The borough, originally constituted by prescription, is governed by a mayor, five aldermen, and sixteen councillors, and sends two members to Parliament. Constituency (1852) 1850 Pop. bor. 26,657.

NORTHAMPTON a U. S. State, Massachusetts, a bank Commission, 98 m. W. Boston, handsomely built with a courthouse, jail, and five churches. Pop. 2750.

NORTHAW, or NORTHAL, par Eng Herts, 3180 ac Pop. 546.

NORTHBOROUGH par Eng Northam 110 ar P 260

NORTHBOROUGH par Eng Kent 5483 ac P 885

NORTHEIM or NORDHEIM, a in Hanover, cap dist. near the Rhine here crossed by a bridge 14 m. N. of Göttingen. It is walled, and has the remains of an old fortress, a hand some church, town-houses, and market-hall, manufactures of linen and furniture, tobacco-factories and breweries, several saw mills, and a trade in wood. Pop. 4088.

NORTHERN, or NORTHERN par Eng Chester; 8716 ac Pop. 1859.

NORTHERN and PATRICK-STREET a vil Hanover prince paltry and 7 m. N. of Göttingen, near bank Leine with a church and an hospital, manufactures of linen, and a trade in tobacco, largely grown in the vicinity. Pop. 1009.

NORTHERN CIRCARS, See CIRCARS (NORTHERN).

NORTHFIELD par Eng Wilt 2601 ac P 4460

NORTHFLEET, a vil and par Eng Kent near the Thames, 30 m. E. London. It has a large and ancient parish church a Wesleyan chapel, manufactures of Roman cement, extensive limekilns and a large building-yard. Area of par 4818 ac Pop. 5088.

NORTHFIELD, par Eng Cornwall 6783 ac P 1198

NORTHFIELD par Eng Sussex 5486 ac P 1806

NORTHFIELD par Eng Bedford 4210 ac P. 1884

NORTHINGTON par Eng Hants, 1850 ac P. 809

NORTHLACH a market in and par England co and 18 m. E. by 8 Gloucester, in a valley of the Cotswold hills. It has a large and handsome parish church. Independent and Wesleyan chapels, free grammar-school, small hospital and some woollen manufactures. Area of par 8460 ac P 1852.

NORTLEW, par Eng Devon 7247 ac P 1047

NORTHMAVIN, par Scot Herts, 80 000 ac P 2694

NORTHMOOR, par Eng Oxford 2087 ac P. 875.

NORTHOLME par Eng Lincoln, 80 ac P. 173

NORTHOLT par Eng Middlesex 2108 ac P. 614

NORTHOP, a vil and par Wales co. and N. 8.8 E Flint with a spacious and elegant church a Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodist chapel, a free grammar, a national, and several other schools a brewery extensive lead-mines, and a quay at which a considerable trade is carried on with Liverpool London, and Dublin. Area, 12,366 ac. P 8667.

NORTHORPE, par Eng Lincoln 5070 ac P. 798

NORTHOVER, par Eng Somerset 465 ac P. 88

NORTHUMBERLAND a N. maritime co England, bounded S. and E.W. by co. Durham and Cumberland, E. by the North Sea, and N. and N.W. by Scotland, and a detached portion of Durham. Area, 1,251,980 ac. of which about 800,000 ac. are arable meadow and pasture. In some places it is rugged and mountainous, and in others, particularly along the coast, it is level. The highest hills are on the W. border towards Scotland commonly called the Cheviot hills; clothed in a beautiful green verdure, admirably suited for pasture lands, as which they are extensively used for feeding the well-known excellent breed of sheep to which they give their name. The other hills are mostly covered with peat-earth, and produce little except heath, which is the case also with some extensive and dreary moors and fens. It is watered by the Tyne, Wear, Blyth, Coquet, Aln, and Till. Coal-measures occupy an area of 180 sq. m. and lead, iron, limestone, and freestone are wrought; and heath is met with in various localities. The soil in the S. part of the county, or between Newcastle and Morpeth, is generally a strong clay N and W it is a poor infertile clay, along the coast it consists of strong white loam, more or less fertile, but generally of superior quality. Arable and stock husbandry are both prosecuted with great spirit and success, and the short-haired cattle, mostly roan, are much prized. The principal corn crops are wheat and oats, the latter of excellent quality a good deal of barley also is grown. The staple manufactures are principally derived from, or connected with the coal trade and mines; they include ship-building and reaping, forges, foundries, copper-works, soda or glass-works, alkali manufactures, white-lead works, pottery, and marine works. The manufacture of straw plait is also carried on to a considerable extent. The trade is greatly facilitated by the numerous harbours on the coast, and by the railways, which connect Newcastle with Carlisle, Barwick, Shields, and the coast of Durham, York, &c. The coast abounds in fish cod, haddock, sole, turbot, herrings, and a variety of others cockles and oysters, the last of excellent quality are also plentiful. Northumberland (exclusive of Berwick) returns eight members to Parliament four for the county, two for the borough of Newcastle, and one each for Morpeth and Tynesmouth. Principal towns—Newcastle, Tynesmouth, North Shields, Morpeth, and Alnwick. Pop. 308,568.

NORTHUMBERLAND CAPE, Australia, S. coast lat. 38° 5' S. lon. 140° 37' E

NORTHUMBERLAND INLET British N. America, E. coast, between Davis Strait and Frobisher Strait. Its N. point or entrance Cape Albert, lat. 65° 5' N. lon. 94° 45' W. (N. E. entrance) Frobisher Inlet lat. 64° 30' N. lon. 65° 10' W. (N. E. It is about 180 m. long S. E. to N. W. and about 50 m. wide at the broadest part.

NORTHUMBERLAND ISLES, Australia, N. E. coast, between lat. 20° 45' and lat. 21° 50' S.

NORTHWICH, an ancient market in England co. and 15 m. N. E. Chester 1 bank Weaver near the confluence of the Deane. It has a handsome and spacious church, Weaver Navigation, free-school, and chapels for Independents and Methodists, a well-endowed grammar-school, a national, Wesleyan, and Weaver Navigation schools. Near it are numerous brine springs, and extensive mines of rock-salt, which give employment to a great number of hands their produce forming the commercial staple of the place. Upwards of 400,000 tons of salt from the springs alone are said to be exported annually and the number of vessels employed in conveying it to Liverpool is estimated at about 300 of from 90 to 100 tons burthen each many of which are likewise built here. Pop. 1877.

NORTHWOLD par. Eng. Norfolk 5933 ac. P. 1897

NORTHWOOD par. Eng. Hants 6122 ac. P. 6049

NORTON numerous par. Eng.—1 Gloucestershire; 1670 ac. P. 467—2, Herts 1780 ac. P. 599—3 Kent, 903 ac. P. 99—4 Northampton 3260 ac. P. 379—5, Wales Radnor 3144 ac. P. 594—6, Bedford 2440 ac. P. 927—7 Worcester 2514 ac. P. 407—8, (2) Bedford Wilts 2165 ac. P. 374—9, (2) Shropshire Lincoln, 4540 ac. P. 454—10 (2) Oxford 3140 ac. P. 720—11, (under-Camack) Bedford, 4677 ac. P. 968—12 (2) Cambridgeshire 3111 ac. P. 298—13, (2) Cheshire 2000 ac. P. 224—14, (2) Cheshire 2000 ac. P. 224—15, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—16, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—17, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—18, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—19, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—20, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—21, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—22, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—23, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—24, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—25, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—26, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—27, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—28, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—29, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—30, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—31, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—32, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—33, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—34, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—35, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—36, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—37, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—38, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—39, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—40, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—41, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—42, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—43, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—44, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—45, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—46, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—47, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—48, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—49, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—50, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—51, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—52, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—53, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—54, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—55, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—56, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—57, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—58, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—59, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—60, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—61, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—62, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—63, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—64, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—65, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—66, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—67, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—68, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—69, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—70, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—71, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—72, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—73, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—74, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—75, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—76, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—77, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—78, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—79, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—80, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—81, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—82, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—83, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—84, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—85, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—86, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—87, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—88, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—89, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—90, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—91, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—92, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—93, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—94, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—95, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—96, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—97, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—98, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—99, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—100, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—101, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—102, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—103, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—104, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—105, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—106, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—107, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—108, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—109, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—110, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—111, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—112, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—113, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—114, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—115, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—116, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—117, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—118, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—119, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—120, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—121, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—122, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—123, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—124, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—125, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—126, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—127, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—128, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—129, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—130, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—131, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—132, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—133, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—134, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—135, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—136, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—137, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—138, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—139, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—140, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—141, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—142, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—143, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—144, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—145, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—146, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—147, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—148, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—149, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—150, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—151, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—152, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—153, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—154, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—155, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—156, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—157, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—158, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—159, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—160, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—161, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—162, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—163, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—164, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—165, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—166, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—167, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—168, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—169, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—170, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—171, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—172, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—173, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—174, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—175, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—176, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—177, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—178, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—179, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—180, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—181, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—182, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—183, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—184, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—185, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—186, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—187, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—188, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—189, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—190, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—191, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—192, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—193, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—194, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—195, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—196, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—197, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—198, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—199, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—200, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—201, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—202, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—203, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—204, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—205, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—206, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—207, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—208, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—209, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—210, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—211, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—212, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—213, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—214, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—215, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—216, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—217, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—218, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—219, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—220, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—221, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—222, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—223, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—224, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—225, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—226, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—227, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—228, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—229, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—230, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—231, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—232, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—233, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—234, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—235, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—236, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—237, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—238, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—239, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—240, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—241, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—242, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—243, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—244, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—245, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—246, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—247, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—248, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—249, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—250, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—251, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—252, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—253, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—254, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—255, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—256, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—257, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—258, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—259, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—260, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—261, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—262, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—263, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—264, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—265, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—266, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—267, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—268, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—269, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—270, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—271, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—272, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—273, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—274, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—275, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—276, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—277, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—278, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—279, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—280, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—281, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—282, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—283, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—284, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—285, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—286, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—287, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—288, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—289, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—290, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—291, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—292, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—293, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—294, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—295, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—296, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—297, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—298, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—299, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—300, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—301, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—302, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—303, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—304, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—305, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—306, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—307, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—308, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—309, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—310, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—311, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—312, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—313, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—314, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—315, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—316, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—317, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—318, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—319, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—320, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—321, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—322, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—323, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—324, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—325, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—326, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—327, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—328, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—329, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—330, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—331, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—332, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—333, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—334, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—335, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—336, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—337, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—338, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—339, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—340, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—341, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—342, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—343, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—344, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—345, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—346, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—347, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—348, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—349, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—350, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—351, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—352, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—353, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—354, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—355, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—356, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—357, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—358, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—359, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—360, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—361, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—362, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—363, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—364, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—365, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—366, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—367, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—368, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—369, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—370, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—371, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—372, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—373, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—374, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—375, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—376, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—377, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—378, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—379, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—380, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—381, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—382, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—383, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—384, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—385, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—386, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—387, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—388, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—389, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—390, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—391, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—392, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—393, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—394, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—395, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—396, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—397, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—398, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—399, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—400, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—401, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—402, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—403, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—404, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—405, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—406, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—407, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—408, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—409, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—410, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—411, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—412, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—413, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—414, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—415, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—416, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—417, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—418, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—419, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—420, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—421, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—422, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—423, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—424, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—425, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—426, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—427, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—428, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—429, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—430, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—431, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—432, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—433, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—434, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—435, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—436, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—437, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—438, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—439, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—440, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—441, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—442, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—443, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—444, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—445, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—446, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—447, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—448, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—449, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—450, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—451, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—452, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—453, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—454, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—455, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—456, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—457, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—458, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—459, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—460, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—461, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—462, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—463, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—464, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—465, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—466, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—467, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—468, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—469, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—470, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—471, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—472, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—473, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—474, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—475, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—476, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—477, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—478, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—479, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—480, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—481, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—482, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—483, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—484, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—485, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—486, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—487, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—488, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—489, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—490, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—491, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—492, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—493, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—494, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—495, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—496, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—497, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—498, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—499, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—500, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—501, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—502, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—503, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—504, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—505, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—506, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—507, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—508, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—509, (2) Devon 2000 ac. P. 224—510 part, of bold precipitous cliffs; and is remarkable, both for the innumerable islands by which it is lined, and the bays or fjords, which cut deeply into it in all directions, but far most frequently from W to E., in the direction in which the great ocean-wave is dashed upon it. The number of islands makes the navigation dangerous; but that of the fjords gives it unusual facilities—not only making it easy to penetrate into the interior, but also furnishing an almost unintercepted series of excellent natural harbors of refuge.

The surface is very mountainous, particularly in the W and N where the summits are often lofty and rise very abruptly from the surrounding levels but even there mountain chains, properly so called have no existence, and the true character of the surface is that of a series of elevated plateaux, from which mountain masses rise with the greatest irregularity and so isolated from each other, that it is impossible to point out any central axis of which the other mountains in their vicinity can be considered as ramifications. The plateaux referred to seem to admit of being reduced to six.—1. The plateau of Finnmark. Its most elevated summits are situated in the vicinity of the lake of Tornet-Troest, near the gulf of Lyngen and Quavenangen.

2. The plateau of Nordland and Trondhjem, extending to the Gulf of Trondhjem and Lake Storöjle. Its loftiest summits are in the vicinity of the very mountain of Sulistina, the top of which is 6349 ft. Though not one of the loftiest, yet one of the most remarkable-looking mountains in this plateau is that of Kilhorn, shooting up in a pyramidal form, with a bare, jagged, and sharp peak at about three-fourths of its height occurs a large entrance of the island of Brønnøysund which lies at the entrance to Vaage Fjord, in lat. $61^{\circ} 45' N$ 5 . The plateau of

MOUNTAIN OF THE HORNS IN NORWAY

From an Original Sketch by G. H. Hall.

Fillefeld, situated between the Borge Fjord the valley of Valdres, the fjords of Rand Tyri and Chrænsaile, the Skager Bank, and the German Ocean. This plateau is much less elevated than the others already mentioned the whole country gradually sloping from the N where it is highest, towards the S and E, and ultimately shelving so much as often to assume the appearance of moderately-elevated plains. Its loftiest summits—the Skogshorn, Hugelofning and Goussa—are all about 6000 ft. and several others exceed 5000 ft. but the average height is very much lower. 6. This which may be called the E plateau, lying still more in the direction of the general slope, is the lowest of all, and is continued into Sweden, where its direction may be traced by the chain of lakes which stretch across that country, and by several wide valleys with so little declivity as to make the streams which water them comparatively sluggish. In general however the face of the country is rugged, the valleys are short and abrupt, and the streams, dashing down impetuously through rocky gorges, form numerous cascades while the fjords, overhung by lofty precipices or towering forests, and the deep and extensive lakes, embosomed among the mountains furnish alpine scenes of the wildest magnificence.

The short distance at which the W slope of the above plateau lies from the W coast, leaves little room for the development of large rivers, but gives rise to an immense number of minor streams, which proceed directly to the shore, or the numerous fiords which penetrate it. On the E slope, again, the way and do not properly assume the character of rivers till they have run a considerable part of their course in Sweden. To this it is owing that Norway cannot claim any large river as exclusively her own, and that the few of them which are of importance have a S. direction, in accordance with the general slope already referred to, and discharge themselves into the Skager-Bank; of these, the most deserving of notice are the Glommen, and its affluent the Lugaen; the Rhod, Leaven, Skinn-Ida, and Torroelid. The most unexpected rivers in the N are the Tanen, which forms part of the boundary between Russia and Norway and falls into the Arctic Ocean; and the Kamsen, which falls into the Atlantic. The same causes which prevent Norway from having large rivers perforation, producing a very extraordinary effect when the sea is seen streaming through it. 8. The Dovre Field plateau, with its lofty peaks of Snehesten (8115 ft.), Skramkollu, Skunkollu, and Nussfeld, the lowest of which is nearly 7000 ft. 4. The plateau of Langfeld, from which the loftiest summits of Norway rise, and truncated the limits of perpetual snow. Among these summits are the Skagastillind (8890 ft.), generally considered the loftiest in the country but, according to De La Roquette, considerably exceeded by the Galdhøpiggen, in the parish of Lom, Galdhøpiggen, to which he assigns the height of 9685 metres (about 3186 ft.). The mountain of Horns, 7306 ft. high, in N Bergenhus, in this plateau, a curious isolated mass, is quite characteristic of many of the peaks to be seen in Norway; it forms the E.

MOUNTAIN OF THE HORNS IN NORWAY

From an Original Sketch by G. H. Hall.

are favourable to the formation of lakes the isolated bases of the mountains forming numerous and extensive reservoirs, in which the waters are, in the first instance accumulated; accordingly they are scattered over every part of the country. A complete enumeration, even of those whose magnitude might entitle them to notice, is impossible, and it is very therefore, suffice to mention the Rye Fjord, Sinesness Vann, and Miesness Vann.

The prevailing rocks of Norway are gneiss and mica-slate, of which all the higher mountains are composed. Granite is of comparatively rare occurrence. On some of the plateaux, blocks of conglomerate occupy a large part of the surface. Porphyry, argillaceous schist, and limestone occur but in very limited quantities, and rocks of volcanic formation are so rare that their existence was at one time altogether denied. It would seem, however, that trap, apparently formed out of ancient lava, does occur, and some geologists have even thought that they have discovered visible traces of volcanoes.

That the climate of Norway must, on the whole, be severe, seems necessarily to follow both from its high latitude and the elevation of its surface. Nearly one-third of the whole country is situated within the frozen zone, and one-thirtieth within the region of perpetual snow. Various causes, however, contribute to modify the temperature, and make it milder than might have been anticipated in the circumstances. One of these is the great extent of sea-coast, and the large extent of surface occupied by water, and more especially by the fjords which are in immediate communication with the ocean; the temperature of which is naturally higher than that of the land during the season of winter is further increased by the gulf stream, the influence of which is sensibly felt on the W coast. Then, in consequence, the harbours are never blocked up with ice while in places more inland, though much farther S, as at Christiania, this regularly happens. The following Table gives the mean temperature at several places in Norway, in different latitudes, for the year, for the winter and for the summer—

| | North Lat. | Year | Winter. | Summer. |
|-------------|------------|------|---------|---------|
| København | 59° | 50° | 32° | 61° |
| Stockholm | 59° 30' | 49° | 31° | 60° |
| Oslo | 59° 45' | 48° | 30° | 59° |
| Christiania | 59° 55' | 47° | 29° | 58° |

The large portion of the country situated within the limits of perpetual snow, and the sterile and rugged nature of a still larger portion, greatly limit the range of vegetation and of regular culture. In general, however, the mountain slopes up to a certain height, are clothed with magnificent pine forests and at lower elevations, the oak and the birch are by no means uncommon. Where, from the combined causes of a high latitude and great elevation the ordinary pasture grasses become scanty mosses supply their place, and furnish a valuable source of subsistence, and even of wealth, in the numerous herds of reindeer which they maintain. Among the crops cultivated for food, the first place is due to barley which ripens at 70° of latitude, rye is successfully cultivated up to 60°, oats to 68°, but wheat not beyond 64°, and that only in the most favourable seasons. Another most valuable crop is potatoes, grown with success even in Finnmark. Flax and fax, particularly the latter are generally cultivated, and in the S. part of the country, some tobacco is grown. Fruit, too—particularly the apple, pear, and cherry—is raised generally in all the lower localities of the S. and the centre. The quantity of land capable of being brought under culture has been roughly estimated at one-sixth of the whole, yet, in 1845 according to the evidence of official documents, the actual cultivation did not exceed 1/10th of the whole. Most of the land thus cultivated is of a light, sandy texture, which even under good management, could not yield heavy crops, and under the cultivated routine which the Norwegians generally pursue, often fails to return much more than the seed. The grain raised accordingly, falls very far short of the consumption; and the quantity which requires to be regularly imported has nearly doubled since 1799. One of the most extensive and profitable branches of rural economy is the rearing of cattle, for which many parts of the country are well adapted. The breeds, however, have not undergone much improvement, and are, consequently very inferior. The milk of the cows is said to be very rich, and enters largely into the food of the inhabitants, but the produce must be deficient, as both butter and cheese, as well as beef, form large and increasing articles of import. Sheep are less numerous than goats, and yield a coarse, though abundant and warm wool which appears not to be valued with much favour. The horses are vigorous and sure-footed, but of a diminutive size, the ponies, in which large size is of less consequence, or is rather considered a drawback, are among the best of their kind, and are often exported to other countries. Another domestic animal of great value is the reindeer, which forms the principal stock of the N. provinces. The whole number in the country, in 1845 was 90,278; of which Finnmark possessed 74,450. This, however, must necessarily be understood only of those domesticated, many still exist in a wild state, whose numbers, of course, cannot be known. Among other wild animals are the wolf and bear which exist in such numbers as often to cause great destruction among the flocks, deer ones abundant, have become comparatively rare game of the smaller kinds, exist in great variety, and include vast numbers of water-fowl among birds of prey, the eagle occupies the first place.

The fisheries of Norway are of very great value. Whales still occasionally appear, but are too few to be of much commercial importance. A far more valuable source of revenue is furnished by the cod and herring, which frequent the coast in vast numbers, and have been estimated to yield a gross amount of nearly £1,000,000 sterling. The cod fishery is carried on chiefly in the N. the herring fishery from the point of Sævi, lat. 58° 10' N, and all along the coast to the S. The rivers and lakes abound with salmon and salmon trout, and make Norway one of the best angling countries in the world.

The minerals are both numerous and abundant, and where the means of transport exist can generally be worked to great advantage, both from the facilities which the nature of the ground affords for draining mines, without expensive engines, and the inexhaustible supplies of fuel furnished by the forests, the very refuse of which, after the skins similar has been carried away thus forms an item of no small value. The most important metals are iron, copper, silver, and cobalt; all of which are worked to some extent. The only other minerals worthy of notice are chrome, alum, and marble.

Manufactures have made very little progress. Cotton, woollen, flax, and silk tissues, are made to some extent, but only for home use and without any idea of competing with the cheaper and better products of manufacturing nations. Distilleries, brick works, saw and flour mills, are numerous, and there are several large tobacco factories and sugar-refineries. The export trade is necessarily confined to raw produce, either in its original state, or with such slight preparation as may be necessary to fit it for the market. The principal items are fish, smoked and dry, timber, whale and seal oil, metals, skins of wild animals, furs, &c. The chief imports are grain butter, beef, various textures of wool, cotton, flax, and silk; raw wool, hemp and flax, salt, sugar, tobacco, wine, brandy, and vinegar. This trade is chiefly concentrated in the towns of Bergen, Christiania, and Trondheim, though Drammen, Christiania, and Arendal, likewise have a considerable share, and employed in 1845, in addition to foreign shipping, about 3700 Norwegian vessels, of all sizes, carrying about 100,000 tons. The number of vessels in 1816 was only 1640 and the increase has ever since continued without interruption, until in 1864 the number of Norwegian merchant vessels had risen to 5878 of 684,910 tons. Besides the shipping trade, an internal trade of great importance is carried on with Sweden. The following Table gives the number and tonnage of vessels which entered and cleared at ports in Norway in each of the following years

| Years. | NORWAY. | | SWEDEN. | |
|--------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|
| | Vessels. | Tons. | Vessels. | Tons. |
| 1847 | 6,090 | 594,982 | 6,009 | 595,099 |
| 1848 | 7,764 | 745,495 | 7,737 | 742,957 |
| 1849 | 7,980 | 775,505 | 8,009 | 806,708 |
| 1850 | 12,093 | 1,152,378 | 11,009 | 1,137,205 |
| 1851 | 17,868 | 1,925,990 | 17,195 | 1,746,698 |

Norway being only a portion of the Swedish monarchy, the fisheries, army, and navy, do not require to be separately con-altered; but as it still retains the name, and many of the qualities of an independent kingdom, just as Scotland does in the British Empire, it will be necessary to attend to its peculiar form of constitution. This, in all its leading features, was fixed at Eidsvold, May 17, 1814, and subsequently, on the union of the two crowns, was adopted, with some necessary modifications, in an extraordinary diet or storting, held on the evening 7th November at Christiania. By this constitution, Norway is a limited hereditary monarchy united with Sweden as a free, independent, indivisible kingdom under one common male sovereign of the Lutheran, or as it called, Evangelical Lutheran religion, declared to be the religion of the state. The king possesses the usual executive powers. His person is sacred and he is responsible only through his ministry; but as he resides in Sweden during the greater part of the year, though bound to a periodical residence in Norway, he can place at the head of the government a viceroi and stateholder, one or both subject to the somewhat unusual regulation, that they must be foreigners. The ministry is composed of seven councillors, each at the head of a separate department; and of a president or minister of state. The latter, together with two councillors who are annually changed reside with the king in Sweden the remaining five, with the viceroi or stateholder, reside in Norway.

On a new session the sovereign must be crowned king of Norway at Trondhjem. The legislative assembly, or, as it is called, Storting (from stor [great], and ting [court]), is elected by the citizens possessing a certain qualification, and exists for three years, when a new election must take place. It subdivides itself into two chambers—one, consisting of one-fourth of the members, and called the Lagthing, and the other, of the remaining three-fourths and called the Odelsting. These chambers meet separately, and each nominates its own president and secretary. Every bill must originate in the lagthing, but may be proposed either by the members or by the government. When carried in that court, it is sent to the lagthing, and thence to the king, whose assent makes it a law. If the lagthing disapproves of the bill, they must return it, with their reasons of disapproval, to the odelsting. If carried there again with or without modification, it comes as before, to the lagthing. If the lagthing reject the measure a second time, the whole storting meet in one chamber, and the final adoption or rejection is determined by a majority of two-thirds. The veto of the king is subject to a very important limitation for it becomes ineffectual against any measure which has been adopted without modification by three successive stortings or parliaments.

The Lutheran is as already observed, the religion of the state, and is professed by the great body of the people. Unhappily the principles of religious toleration are not well understood, and though no express law prohibited other religious bodies from meeting for public worship, the popular feeling was so decidedly opposed to it, that a law permitting them so to meet, and form regular congregations under their own pastors, was passed for the first time in 1845. Even yet government offices are open only to members of the Established church. The country is divided into five bishoprics (dioceses), corresponding, in name and extent, with the administrative provinces, and into 518 parishes. With exception of the cathedral of Trondhjem, founded A. D. 1180 or 1183, and a few other churches which are stone edifices, the churches in Norway are generally built of wood. Many of them are very ancient structures, dating as far back as the 11th and 12th centuries, evidencing a wonderful degree of durability in the Norwegian pine, of which they are constructed. Generally built in the form of a cross, with a tower in the centre terminating in a cupola or spire, with high-pitched roofs, often covered with scale-shaped shingles, and of large proportions, the general effect is massive in a degree which one should not expect from the material employed. (—Forester.) That of Eidsvold in Telemarken is one of the finest specimens of timber-building in the country. Education is very generally diffused, and is conducted on a national system, according to which gratuitous instruction, of an elementary kind, is placed within the reach of all capable of receiving it; and all children, of seven years complete, in towns, and eight years in the country, are required to be at school, and attend till graduation, which usually takes place between the ages of 14 and 17. The schools, designated by the name of common school, or people's schools, are stationed in all towns and parishes. In towns, the instruction is not only elementary, but, in certain degree, varying

Vol. II.

METHODS IN NORWAY
FROM A SWEDISH CHURCH IN NORWAY AND SWEDEN

according to circumstances superior also. In the country, the instruction is only elementary but in the schools there selves, an important distinction is made, some being what is called fast skoler, or stationary schools, and others omgangs skoler or ambulatory schools. The latter, as their name implies, shift about at certain periods of the year from place to place, in the more thinly peopled and isolated districts and thus have the effect of bringing education to those who but for this wise and benevolent arrangement, would be doomed to live without it. Towns possess, in addition to these people's schools, what are called middle schools, middle and royal schools, bürger schools, Latin or learned schools, in all of which superior instruction is given. There are also four cathedral schools one each in the towns of Christiania, Bergen, Trondhjem, and Christiansand. At the head of all the educational establishments is the university of Christiania, at which complete courses of lectures are delivered, to qualify for the different learned professions and the higher grades of official employment. The complete machinery thus established has produced the happiest results and Norway ranks high among educated nations.

The population of Norway amounting to 1,539,271 is divided as follows — Norwegians Proper or Normans, 1,309,563; Finns or Lapons, 14,404 and Quæns, 4425. The Norwegians Proper are generally tall and vigorous, and distinguished by the lightness of their hair particularly in childhood. They show a strong passion for a sea-life, and make excellent sailors; in this respect proving themselves the descendants of those who, under their sea-kings, equipped powerful fleets, and spread the terror of their name over all the shores of N. Europe. Their most marked national virtues are, respect for the laws, love of liberty and respect for religion, unalloyed by degrading superstition. The Finns or Lapons dwell in Nordland, and more especially in Finmark, and bear little resemblance to the Norwegians Proper (see LARSEN). Quæns, though dwelling in the same localities with the Finns, are very easily distinguished from them both by physical features and habits being generally tall and well-proportioned, and remarkable for their cleanliness. A vice, common to all these classes, is an excessive fondness for ardent spirits. The Norwegian language, which has sometimes been represented as nearly a Danish dialect, justly chosen for itself a more reasonable origin and is radically identical with the Icelandic, which still bears so much affinity with it, that, in some districts of Norway the inhabitants have no difficulty in reading and understanding Icelandic books. In other districts, where Danish or Swedish influence has prevailed, the language has become so deteriorated as almost to lose its original character. No works of very high reputation have appeared in it, unless it be allowed to claim the writers of Iceland, which having been originally settled from Norway, must also have derived its language from it.

66

The early history of the Norwegians is enveloped in fable; but many circumstances, strengthened by tradition of language, concur in proving that they came from Asia. The historic period commences with the reign of Harald, Harterger, or Hargrager, who died in 933, and was succeeded by his son, Eirik, surnamed Blodden (Bloody Axe) because of his cruelties to his own brothers, and his liege lords. He was ultimately driven from the throne; and, having found an asylum with Athelstan of England, died in possession of the seat of Northumbria. His throne was seized by his brother, Hako I., who was brought up in England with Athelstan, and had embraced Christianity. He governed wisely, and, for the most part, successfully, amassing many valuable laws, and, though he failed in a direct attempt to make his subjects renounce paganism, successfully paved the way for his final overthrow. The first distinguished name which occurs among his successors, is that of Magnus I., surnamed Den Gode (the Good), the son of St. Olaf and Alfhild an English lady of distinguished birth. He was called to the throne, by election, in 1086 and having, in 1042, succeeded also to the throne of Denmark, united both under one monarchy. He possessed great talents, military and civil; studied the interests of his subjects, and died, universally regretted, of a wound which he had received in hunting. The crowns of Norway and Denmark now passed to different individuals but so close a connection subsisted between them that their history often becomes blended. Harald III., the successor of Magnus, is known, in English history, as the leader of the expedition which landed on the coast, and, after pillaging the town of York, was defeated by Harold, son of Godwin, shortly before his own more signal defeat at Hastings. Norway had now embraced Christianity and with it many of the customs which the Paganry had introduced, and, accordingly in several of the subsequent reigns, we find the clergy playing a conspicuous part, and not unimportant taking the lead in intestine dissensions. In the 13th century, the Norwegians had earned the terror of their arms to distant lands and islands and swayed the sceptre not over Norway merely but over many parts of the coasts of Britain and the adjacent islands, more especially the Orkneys, on the N., and the Hebrides, on the N.W. of Scotland. They not only paid frequent visits to its E. shores, but sailed round its W. coast, and up the Clyde as far as Largs, where, in 1203, an invasion, headed by Hako IV. one of their most celebrated kings, was valiantly repulsed. Hako IV. died shortly after in the Bay of Kirkcubright after a storming action of 46 years; and was succeeded by his son Magnus IV., surnamed Lagabæter (the Lawgiver), in consequence of the many beneficial laws which he introduced, though, during his reign, the foreign dominions of the Norwegians were considerably abridged by the sale of the Hebrides and the Isle of Man to the Scottish king Alexander and their commerce crippled by an injudicious treaty with the Hanse towns. During the reign of Magnus IV. the clergy had been permitted to make numerous encroachments, but his successor, Eirik II., who came to the throne in 1299, was a man of a different stamp, and, from the determination with which he opposed their encroachments, bears the surname of Priest-killer or Priest-biter. He married first a daughter of Alexander III. of Scotland, in whose right he afterwards laid claim to the Scottish crown and secondly Isabella, sister of King Robert the Bruce. In 1319, the crowns of Norway and Sweden became, for a short time, united in the person of Magnus V.—a feeble prince, who had favorable opportunities of establishing a powerful dynasty, but failed to improve them, and the crown of the country was divided into three parts, almost entirely at the sovereignty of Norway in that of Siles, of Pomerania, and Mecklenburg, by agreement, in 1340, to Norway, Sweden, and

Denmark, and, in 1357, was formally crowned king of the three kingdoms of the North. The union was never very complete; each State retaining the right to act independently, and accept or refuse the sovereign who might have been elected by the others. Sweden again became a separate kingdom; but the union between Denmark and Norway was drawn closer and closer, very much to the disadvantage of the latter, which was robbed of its rights, and ultimately degraded into a mere dependency of the former. In a diet held at Copenhagen, in 1557, during the reign of Christian III., a formal Act was passed, declaring that Norway had forfeited its independence. This act was not permitted to remain a dead letter; and the subsequent history of Norway becomes merely a part of that of Denmark. During the wars consequent on the French revolution, the Danes, having leagued themselves with the oppressor, the Norwegians were obliged to follow in their train. They were thus brought into collision with Great Britain, which blockaded their ports, and almost annihilated their trade. When the great coalition to free Europe from French domination was formed, Denmark kept aloof, and refused to join it. Sweden pursued a wiser policy, and stipulated that, in the event of success attending the arms of the Allies, Norway should be united with her under one monarchy. After the battle of Leipzig when the success of the Allies was no longer doubtful effect was given to the stipulation, in 1814 by the treaty of Kiel. The summary manner in which Norway was thus severed away, could not but be extremely galling to its inhabitants, who, under the most untoward circumstances, had never ceased to cherish a love of freedom, and a determination to resist was soon manifested. At a diet held at Eidsvold, and attended by deputies from all the districts, a limited monarchy, with a strong infusion of the democratic principle, was almost unanimously adopted as the form of government and Christian Frederick, who had previously been the regent, and was presumptive heir to the throne of Denmark, accepted the crown. His reign was marked by a want of ability soon after he had to contend with the Swedish king who had made his military success with great moderation, having offered to accept the possession of Eidsvold, with such slight modifications as the change of dynasty rendered necessary all resistance to him ceased. His foreign origin, and inability to speak the language of Norway, notwithstanding the general ability, justice, and success of his measures, were serious obstacles to his popularity, but these have disappeared in the person of his son, Oscar I., who succeeded in 1844, and, having acted as viceroy since 1854, had proved himself not unworthy to govern. (De la Roque, in Key Modern Europe, Norway, in 1840-49. Fusch, Statistik von Schweden, Skandinavien, Beschrybung über Skandinavien Hef. No.)

NORWELL, par Eug. Kottin; 3736 sq. Pop. 957

NORWICH (anc. Venta Norwicensis) a city, metropolis and port. bor. and Mahop's seat, England, cap. co. Norfolk, agreeably situated on the sloping banks of the Wensum, which is here crossed by nine bridges, and immediately below joins the Yare, and on the Eastern Counties and the Eastern Union railways, 30 m. N. W. of London. It was formerly surrounded by walls, fragments of which still exist, flanked with numerous towers, and entered by 13 gates. Owing to the quantity of ground occupied by gardens and orchards, the town has much more of a rural appearance than would be in place of the same magnitude, and covers a much larger area than might suffice if it were closely built upon to accommodate its population. Advantage has been taken of this in the numerous improvements which have been effected recently, and many new streets and handsome rows of houses have thus arisen, especially in the suburbs beyond the precincts of the ancient walls; but much remains to be effected, and Norwich, taken as a whole, is still very half-forgotten built. Not a few of its streets are narrow, winding, and either unpaved or paved badly; and the houses, generally of brick, which line them, or rather overhang them, with their rude pointed gables, are the more remarkable for their antiquity than for the merits of their architecture. An exception, however, should be made in favour of the mansion which is the residence of the duke, which is one of the finest in the kingdom; also, the new theatre, particularly on week-days, a picturesque and ancient appearance. Many of the public buildings are well deserving of notice.

on account both of their intrinsic merits, and of the interesting associations connected with them. The cathedral, founded in 1094, and originally Norman, though now exhibiting a somewhat incongruous mixture of styles, is a cruciform structure, with a lofty tower and spire, rising from the intersection of the nave and transepts to the height of 315 ft. Few authorities suggest it in the imposing effect produced by its interior in the grandeur of its roof, divided by 14 semicircular arches, and rendered almost unique by the 228 figures of sculptural subjects, elaborately sculptured upon it, and in the embellishments and dimensions of its cloisters. Besides the cathedral, Norwich possesses 40 churches, and about 22 Dissenting chapels. Of the churches, the most remarkable are St. Peter's, Mancroft, a large and handsome cruciform structure of the 15th century, with a noble tower, 95 ft. high, containing a peal of 12 bells, considered one of the finest in the kingdom; St. Andrew's, a large edifice in the later pointed style, completed in 1506; St. Clement's, remarkable chiefly for its antiquity; St. George's, Colgate, with a lofty tower, built about 1450; St. Giles' one of the finest churches of the town, wholly rebuilt in the reign of Edward VI., in the later pointed style, with a tower surmounted by a battlement and cupola 118 ft. high; St. Michael's Costery, a large and handsome building, with a lofty tower and a chapel; St. Gregory's, St. John's, Madderozen, St. Lawrence's, an ancient, large, and handsome structure, in the pointed style; and St. Stephen's, the only city church completed after the Reformation. Among the Dissenting chapels, the most deserving of notice are those of the Independent Friends Street, a handsome edifice with a well-proportioned Doric portico; Parliament Baptist, Bottergate and Colgate the Swedenborgian, formerly the French Church, having been used by the French Protestants, called the Walloon company a small edifice, with a square tower the Friends, in Goat Lane, a handsome structure of white ink, with a Doric portico; the R. Catholics, in Willow Lane, a handsome edifice, built in the Corinthian classical style, with an elegantly fitted up interior, and the Unitarians, a spacious and elegant octagonal edifice, crowned with a dome resting on eight Corinthian columns. Among the other public buildings and establishments are the castle, a noble feudal relic, apparently of Norman origin finely situated near the centre of the city on a lofty eminence with precipitous sides, and still surrounded by its massive donjon tower but otherwise so altered, to adapt it to its present use as a jail that little idea can be formed of its original appearance; the Sheriff's hall, on the lower vallum of the castle; the bishop's palace, and the doctory, large irregular pile adjoining the cathedral, and like it, approached through what is called the Eplingham Gate, a remarkable structure, consisting of a lofty pointed arch, flanked with semi-octagonal buttresses, and enriched with columns, mouldings, and 88 male and female statues in sculptured niches, the Guildhall a large building at the N W corner of the market, partly fitted up as a courthouse, where the assizes and quarter sessions are held; St. Andrew's Hall a noble fabric, originally the nave of the church of the Black Friars' Convent, but now fitted up so as to form one of the largest and most splendid halls for municipal purposes in this country, and adorned with a large and interesting collection of olive portraits, the training college of schoolmasters, and the diocesan training institution; the grammar-school, situated within the precincts of the cathedral, and occupying what was formerly the church house, the Government school for modelling and design the children's hospital, Norman's charity, city charity, British and Swedish, national, infant, and various other schools, St. Giles', Dorothy's, Cooke's, and the Norfolk and Norwich hospitals, the last occupying a spacious structure of red brick, well fitted up for the convenience and comfort of patients; the lunatic and blind asylums, the infirmary; the new jail and house of correction, presenting a massive front, supported by rusticated Tuscan columns; the workhouse, originally the choir of the Black Friars church the corn exchange, a large building in the Grecian style, the cavalry barracks, the theatre, assembly-rooms, several public gardens and bowling-grounds, &c. In addition to the benevolent endowments already mentioned, are numerous parishes, voluntary, and other charities; the library and scientific institutions include a public library of about 18,000 vols., a library institution, with a well-stocked library of about 11,000 vols.; a mechanic institute, a young men's institute, a people's college, and a museum, occupying a handsome modern building, and possessed of several valuable collections.

Manufactures are very extensive, and employ the six larger part of the population. Worsted goods, of which a coarse description appears to have been made even before the Norman conquest, were greatly improved by the arrival of Dutch and Flemish settlers at different times and have ever since continued to form the most important staple of the town, though they have assumed a vast variety of forms, and become greatly intermixed with other materials, as cotton and silk. The leading articles at present are shawls, crapes and bombazines and to these may be added muslins, de laine and other imitations of French fabrics, light cotton goods, damasks, comets, Goss de Naples, and Bandana handkerchiefs, and Parasol cloth, by which bombazines has been greatly superseded. The looms employed in the town and neighbourhood are estimated at upwards of 14,000. The other industrial establishments include extensive worsted factories, silk mills, dye-works, corn-mills, vinegar-works, breweries, iron-foundries, &c. The trade, in addition to the large export furnished by the above manufactures, and by agricultural produce, consists of considerable imports, chiefly of wine and oil from the Continent, and of yarn from Ireland. In carrying on this trade, facilities are afforded both by the railways already mentioned, by the river, navigated chiefly by wherries of from 15 to 40 tons, and by regular steamers to Yarmouth, and by the Norwich and Lowestoft navigation, by means of which vessels of small tonnage have direct access to the town from the sea. Besides two weekly markets—of which that held on Saturday for corn and cattle is very important, being for cattle the largest in the kingdom, with the single exception of that of London—there are two annual fairs.

The site of Norwich has undergone a remarkable change since the 6th century, but gradually been settled by a large arm of the sea, the bed of which was still to be distinctly traced, but at that period the waters began to recede, and by the middle of the 11th century left only the channel of the river in the form which it now presents. The foundation of the modern town cannot be fixed earlier than 446. On the departure of the Romans it was seized by the Saxons, and by 575, had risen to be the capital of the kingdom of East Angles. Its castle, originally founded by Uta, at the date last mentioned, was greatly improved, first in 642, by Anna, and afterwards in 875, by Alfred the Great. By the middle of the 10th century it had become a large and wealthy town and been divided into several distinct parishes, but in 1002 it was attacked by the Danish fleet, commanded by Sweyn their king, captured, and laid in ashes. It was shortly after rebuilt by the Danes themselves, who having conquered the country, made it one of their settlements. It increased rapidly, but was chiefly distinguished as a great fishing town. In the 11th century, in the reign of Edward the Confessor, it had become a large and affluent borough and contained 25 parished churches. It had hitherto owed its chief importance to its castle, which was then deemed impregnable, but in 1294, it acquired new importance by the building of its walls, and in 1296 it began to send representatives to Parliament. In 1296, the foundation of its prosperity was laid by Edward III., who made it a staple town for the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, conferred upon it other important privileges, and induced great numbers of Flemings to settle in it. A still greater number arrived at a later period during the reign of Elizabeth and the inhabitants, not only profiting by the lessons thus taught them, but improving upon them, ultimately surpassed their masters, and made their manufactures famous throughout the world. In the more modern history of Norwich, there is no event of much interest, but it has given birth to several distinguished individuals—among others, Dr. Matthew Parker, Archbishop of Canterbury; and Dr. Samuel Clarke the celebrated divine. It sends two members to Parliament, consequently (1661), 5890. Pop 68,198.

NORWICH is a city, U States, Connecticut, at the head of navigation on the Thames, 40 m. E.S.E. Hartford lat. 41° 28' N.; lon 72° 5' W. Norwich city or Chelsea Landing as it is sometimes called, is built on a steep-shelving of a high hill, between the Abnetuck and the Kettle, where these rivers unite to form the Thames. It contains a court-house, jail, a townhall, a high school, a female academy, and seven churches. Steam-boats ply between New York and Norwich and it is connected with Worcester and Boston in Massachusetts by railway. Pop. 4300.

NORWOOD, a vil. and dist. England, co. Surrey, beautifully situated in an elevated and salubrious district, studded with elegant villas, 6 m. S. London. It has two district churches, two chapels of ease, an Independent chapel, several industrial and other schools; manufactures of earthenware, and a mineral spring, a fine cemetery and pleasure grounds, elegantly laid-out, which attract numerous visitors. Pop. 6044.

NOR-BAU, NOR-BAU, or VARCOE BA, an isl. N.W. coast Madagascar, belonging to France, forming the N. entrance of the Bay of Passandava, lat. 15° 20' S. lon. 48° 30' E. It is the largest island on this part of the coast; has a finely diversified surface, and is evidently of volcanic formation. The culminating point, situated near the S., about 1700 ft. high, is clothed to the summit with magnificent timber. Its coast-line is much indented, and at several points affords good anchorages. The best cultivated spots are along the shore, and produce rice, maize, potatoes, bananas, and manioc far beyond the wants of the inhabitants. Pop. (1849), 15 178.

NORCHESTER, a vil. Prussia, Saxony gov. Magdeburg circle, and so near Wernigrode as to be properly its suburbs. It has a church. Pop. 1069.

NORSEHEAD, a lofty promontory Scotland, E. coast Caithness, forming the S. entrance of Sinclair Bay, lat. 56° 28' N. lon. 3° 4' W. It rises 377 ft. above the sea, and has a revolving light.

NORSEHEAD a small isl. Scotland, Shetland group, E. of Isl. Bressay from which it is separated by a narrow and dangerous sound, greatest length, N. to S. about 2 m. breadth rather more than 1 m. It slopes gradually W. to E. where it terminates in a remarkable headland called Ness Nook, or Hung Clif, which has a height of 577 ft., and is in lat. 60° 8' 16" N. lon. 1° 0' 35" W. The greater part of the surface is fit only for pasture.

NORSEIN, a n. Saxony circle and 45 m. S.E. Leipzig 1 bank Rhine, here crossed by two bridges. It has a castle, an hospital, manufactures of ribbons, leather and shoes; a trade in these articles, and in wool, and cattle. Pop. 2141.

NORSEIN, a vil. Hungary, Thaur District, co. Vorp. with two churches, and some trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1298.

NORSEIN, a vil. Hungary co. Borsod, with a church, a castle, and a trade in corn, wool and timber. Pop. 1928.

NOTARESCO a vil. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Ulter. I. 10 m. S.E.E. Taranto. Pop. 1680.

NOTGROVE, par. Eng. Gloucester, 1580 ac. P. 195.

NOTLEY, two pars. Eng. Essex — 1 (Black) 1836 ac. Pop. 567 — 2 (White) 2228 ac. Pop. 515.

NOTO [anc. Notion] a n. Sicily prov. and 14 m. S.W. Syracuse, on a height about 1 bank Noto, near its mouth in the Ionian Sea. It is one of the most agreeably situated and best built towns in the island, and contains several churches and convents, an hospital, college, and museum, rich in rare Greek, Roman, and Moorish coins; and some trade in corn, wine, and oil. Its site is said to be unhealthy. Pop. 11,065.

NOTO (VAL DE), an ancient division, Sicily, now forming the whole of prov. Syracuse, and parts of those of Catanzaro and Messina.

NOTER-DAM, a bay N.E. coast Newfoundland, formed by Cape St. John on the N.W., and the N. Headland on the S.E. a width at entrance nearly 80 m., it penetrates deeply into the land by numerous coves and indentations, and is studded with islands.

NOTER-DAM numerous places, France, particularly — 1 (de Bondelle) a n. dep. Saône-et-Loire, about 3 m. N. Moux with manufactures of calico, machine-works, dye-works, and cotton-mills. P. 1918 — 2, (de Camille), a n. and com. dep. Manche 9 m. S.E.E. Coutances. P. 1937 — 3, (de Mont) a n. and com. dep. Vendée, 43 m. N.W. Les Sables. P. 2768 — 4, (de Lamoignon) a n. and com. dep. Aisne 3 m. E.N.E. Laon, 1 bank Oise with a church of the 13th century and manufactures of numerous articles of jewellery as crucifixes, beads, rings, &c., for pilgrims, attracted here by an image of the Virgin. P. 1854 — 5, (de Vaux), a vil. See ARMENTIERES.

NOTER-DAM com. MILLERIE, a vil. and com. France, dep. Savoie, 1 bank Isère, 5 m. E. Evian with a church, a trade in corn, hemp, and cheese. A considerable number of the inhabitants are idlers. Pop. 1890.

NOTTEBOE, an isl. S.E. coast, Norway, on W. side entrance of the Bay of Christiania, opposite the town of Tonsberg, from which it is separated by a very narrow channel, greatest length, N. to S., 7 m., breadth, about 8 ft. It forms a single parish. Pop. 3245.

NOTTING-HILL, a suburb to the W. of London, par. Kensington, about 4 m. from St. Paul's. It consists of a number of handsome terraces and detached villas.

NOTTINGHAM, or NOTTINGHAMSHIRE an inland co. England, bounded N. by York and Lincoln, E. Lincoln, S. Leicester and W. Derby and York. Area, 535,680 ac., of which about 500,000 are arable, meadow and pasture. The general surface, with exception of the Vale of Trent, is, for the most part, hilly and uneven, but some of the eminences reach any great elevation. The highest grounds are Beacon Hill, the Wolds, and Sherwood Forest. The E. and S.W. border is chiefly occupied by the line rocks, the Vale of Trent and the Uplands to the W. of it are, for the most part, composed of rocks of the red soil or new and middle groups. The chief minerals are coal, gypsum, and stone of various kinds. The soil consists of three different kinds — sand and gravel, sandy loam, and clayey loam. The last, which forms the soil of the Vale of Belvoir is extremely fertile. The ancient forest of Sherwood, which extended about 25 m. with a breadth varying from 6 to 9 m., the principal scene of the adventures of Robin Hood and his companions, covered the greater part of the sandy and gravelly soil on the W. side of the county, which is still called the forest district. The crops usually cultivated are wheat, rye, barley, oats, beans and peas, and an inferior species of cattle called sheeps, almost peculiar to the county. Hops also form a considerable article of produce in the clay districts. There is a considerable breadth of excellent grass land and meadows on the banks of the Trent and the Soar, employed partly for feeding and partly for the dairy. The cattle are now mostly short horns, and the sheep, Leicester and other improved varieties. Cotton and silk stockings are manufactured in this county to a very large amount, particularly in the town of Nottingham and neighbourhood. Nottingham is famous also for hobbins — The bleaching trade and mauling business are likewise carried on to a great extent. The county returns four members to Parliament, and two each for the boroughs — Nottingham, Newark and E. Retford. Pop. 270,437.

NOTTINGHAM, a n. Eng. esp. above on, on the Leen, near its junction with the Trent, which is crossed by an ancient bridge of 17 arches, and also on the Nottingham canal and the Midland railway 108 m. N.W. London. It occupies a picturesque site on the broken declivities and considerably abrupt precipices of a sandstone rock overlooking the green meadows and vale of Trent, and from whatever quarter it is approached, but more especially on descending Riddington hill from the London side, presents a striking and attractive appearance, its castle, which is rich in historical associations, always forming a prominent object to the view. The town, however, is on the whole very indifferently built, consisting of houses almost all of brick, huddled together more especially in the central and more ancient quarters, without any order in narrow streets, and often placed back to back, without any interval between them, as if the greatest want felt in their construction had been a want of space. New streets and handsome villas have, however, recently risen up in all quarters, and are still continuing to spread with wonderful rapidity. It is worthy of notice that the burgess-land, which formed a belt round the town of about 1000 ac., has been recently inclosed, under the General Inclosure Act, and part of it sold for building-grounds; a large portion has, however, been reserved for pleasure-grounds, promenades, &c., and carefully planted; and, in addition, 16 ac. have been thrust into the enclosure for the use of a public pleasure, to whom it is open three days each week free of charge. Considerable progress has already (1856) been made in supplying the Arboretum with plants, which are arranged alphabetically. The inhabitants have also the free use of a park of 180 acres, belonging to the Duke of Newcastle, which is much resorted to as a promenade by all classes of the community. Another open space much frequented as a public resort, is the market-place, which, covering a triangular area of nearly six acres, surrounded by lofty houses and arched shops, strikingly contrasts with the confined streets in its vicinity, and almost deserves the description given of it by Leland in the reign of Henry VIII., that 'it is the fairest without exception in all England.

Among the remarkable buildings the castle is conspicuous. It crowns the summit of a precipitous rock rising 135 ft. above the level of the meadows, which stretch from its base to the banks of the Trent, and perforated by numerous holes and vaults supposed to have been made by the Druids. Its naturally strong position appears to have marked it out for a first in the time of the Danes, but it first assumed its form of a castle in the time of William the Conqueror, who erected it as a means of overruling and repressing the bold outlaws frequenting the recesses of the old forest. In the great civil war it was selected by Charles I to erect his standard, after he had decided on an open contest with the Parliamentary forces, and not long after when he had evacuated it it stood a memorable siege, and effectually resisted all the attempts of the Royalists to regain possession. It was dismantled during the Protectorate, and subsequently became the property of the Duke of Newcastle, who covered its site with a large mansion, erected in 1674, having nothing of a castle but the name. Even this is now a ruin, having been destroyed by a body of rioters during the excitement connected with the Reform Bill, and nothing remains of the ancient castle but a few vestiges which it requires the skill of an antiquary to trace. The places of worship include 8 churches, and about 23 Dissenting chapels; of which 7 are Baptist, 6 Methodist, 4 Independent, and Friends, Unitarians, 2 Catholic, Irvingite, and Swedenborgian, 1 each. The Jews also have a synagogue, and the Lesser Day Believers or Moravians, hold meetings in an old Methodist chapel. Among the churches are St. Mary's, an ancient and venerable structure, supposed to have been erected in the 7th century, originally pure Gothic though now defaced by a modern alteration, in which the Doric has been incongruously introduced, so large as to be capable of accommodating 3000 persons, and rendered conspicuous above all the other buildings of the town, both by the eminence on which it stands, and a lofty, massive, and majestic square tower; St. Nicholas, a plain brick building; St. Peter's, an ancient Gothic edifice, surmounted by a chimney tower, terminating in a plain spire; St. James's, with a square pinnacled tower; St. Paul's, in the Doric style, with a handsome portico, Trinity, and St. John's, both handsome modern structures, in the early English style. Among Dissenting chapels, the most conspicuous is that of the 2nd Catholics, a spacious, cruciform, and highly decorated structure, with numerous windows of richly-stained glass, and a central tower terminating in a spire 150 ft. high. Immediately adjoining the chapel is a large convent, built in 1844. Other buildings deserving notice are the Exchange, a large building fronting the market-place, and consisting partly of a large and elegant hall, much used for public meetings and exhibitions; the County Hall, with county jail attached; the Guildhall, built of brick faced with stone; the House of Correction, a large edifice built on the site of a convent of the Knights of St. John, and though well suited for its purpose devoid of outward decoration; the Union workhouse; Corn Exchange; the Barracks; Assembly-rooms, forming a large and commodious structure of the Corinthian order, partly occupied as a hotel; Mechanics' Hall, a handsome stone-wooded building and a very pretty theatre. In the vicinity of the town, on Lion Hill, a general cemetery, containing 19 ac., was formed in 1836.

NOTTINGHAM.—From the Illustrated News.

The principal educational and literary institutions are the free grammar-school well endowed, and occupying a large and handsome building, with a Gothic front the Blue-coat School, which clothes and educates 80 boys and 50 girls; the people's college, founded by subscription in 1846, to afford superior instruction to the working-classes and occupying a large brick building of Gothic architecture the Unitarian free school the British, national infant and ragged schools the Government school of design, the mechanics institute, the Bromley House subscription, law academy and other libraries. Among charitable institutions, are the general hospital, the dispensary the general lunatic asylum with accommodation for 160 patients the Midland institute for the blind, Thompson's Cottages, and Lambey's hospitals, and Wolloughby's, Handley's, and various other almshouses and benevolent foundations.

The staple manufactures to which the town owes its prosperity and rapid increase are hosiery and lace. The former first began to assume importance about the middle of the 18th century, and the latter about 80 years after in 1778, when the point-net machine was invented. The bobbin-net machine was invented about 1799 but having been patented in consequence of subsequent improvements, did not come into general use till 1833. These manufactures were long carried on exclusively in the homes of the workmen, but large factories, employing steam-power, have recently been erected, and will soon apparently almost entirely supersede domestic labour. In addition to the staple manufactures, including the machine shops, and other industrial establishments more immediately dependent on them, a considerable number of hands is employed in the cotton and woollen manufactures in silk, worsted, and cotton spinning mills, and in making articles of millable and cast iron from wire, brass fenders, &c. The trade in corn and cattle is very important, the maling business is extensively prosecuted and the breweries have long been famous for their ale. The two weekly markets are abundantly supplied with all kinds of provisions; and of four annual fairs—chiefly for horses, cattle, cheese, and other agricultural produce—two last each three days. One of them held on the 24, 25, and 26th October and called the Goose Fair is celebrated, and forms such an era, that a large portion of the inhabitants date all the events of the year from it.

Nottingham was in early times a great resort of the Druids, and is thought to have afterwards become a Roman station. Under the Saxon Heptarchy it belonged to the kingdom of Mercia, and after its dissolution ranked as a Danish borough. It was valued by Edward the elder, and secured a great addition to its importance on the erection of its castle by William the Conqueror. Its part in the civil war has already been referred to in the history of its castle. In more modern times, it has acquired a rather unenviable notoriety by the frequency and violence of its riots. The most memorable of these were the so-called Luddite riots, which were so skillfully organized, so successful in sweeping the vigilance of the law, and so religiously and passionately persisted in for a period of years, that Parliament was obliged to pass an act, making it death to break a stocking or lace fringe. The riots of 1681, for which the rejection of the Hessian Bill by the House of Lords, was made the pretext, destroyed property above the value of £50,000. Colonel Hutchinson, the patient defender of the cause in the civil war and Henry Kirby White, were natives of Nottingham. The borough is governed by a mayor, 14 aldermen, and 43 councillors, and sends 2 members to Parliament. Pop. of par. loc. (1851) 57,407, pop., including suburbs of Radford, Evington, Hyson Green, &c., upwards of 100,000.

NOTTOWAY, a river U. States, which rises in the S. of Virginia, near the village of Nottoway, flows S.E., enters R. Charles, and after a course of about 110 m., unites at Winton with the Chowan in forming the Meherrin.

NOTTULN, a vil. Rhineish Prussia, gov. and circle Münster, with a church, a post-office, an iron-mill, stone quarries, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1140.

NOTTWEIL, a vil. and par. Switzerland. can. and 10 m. N.W. Lucerne, with a church. Pop. 1123.

NOUCELLA, a river, Italy Venetia, which rises in prov. Friuli, about 3 m. N.E. Fontanafredda, passes that town, where it becomes navigable, receives the Madon and several small streams, and joins 1 bank Lucerna at Treviso.

NOUGHAVAL, two pars. Ind.—1, Longford and Westmeath; 12 723 ac. P. 2778.—2, Clare, 4661 ac. P. 248.

NOUKO, or NUKO an isl. Russia, S.W. entrance Gulf of Finland between the mainland of gov. Esthonia and isl. Wonna; about 9 m. long, by 3 m. wide. Pop. 460.

NOURIAGMO, a cape, forming the N.E. extremity of Lawrence Bay N.E. coast of Asia, near the point where it approaches nearest to the coast of America, about lat. 65° 30' N., lon. 171° W. At the mouth of a river about 2 m. from the cape is the village of Nouragmo, occupied by stationery Tchukchis.

NOURA, or NURA, a river, Siberia, which rises among the mountains near the R.W. frontier of gov. Omsk, flows N.W., and unites with the Little Noura from Lake Kurgaldjin, and with the Kunkatch in forming the Irtys, after a course of about 220 m.

NOURHELA—1 A vil. and fort, Punjab, 30 m. S.E. Multan, lat. 34° 7' N., lon. 75° 7' E.—2, A vil. Afghanistan, Punjab territory, on the Cabool, 18 m. N.W. Attock, lat. 34° 5' N., lon. 72° 2' E.—3 A vil. Scania, diocese. Kjöpingen, lat. 57° 45' N., lon. 68° 30' E.

NOUVIONS (L.), a tn. France, dep. Aisne, 15 m. N.W. Vermin, on the Marais with manufactures of twine used in the making of lace, a glass-work, and cotton mills. Pop. 2071.

NOUZON, a tn. France, dep. Ardennes, on the Meuse, here crossed by a suspension-bridge, 30 m. E.S.E. Mézières. It has manufactures of iron-works in the neighbourhood. P. 2515.

NOVA FANRUCA, a tn. Brazil, prov. and 120 m. N.E. Rio-de-Janeiro with a townhouse, a superior English academy, a primary school, and a temple in butter and cheese. The S. part of the district being mountainous, persons suffering from ague, in other parts of the country, often resort to it with good effect.

NOVA SCOTIA [French, Acadie], a colonial prov. British N. America, forming a peninsula connected with the mainland by an isthmus only 8 m. broad, having the Bay of Fundy on the east side, and Northumberland Strait on the other. It lies between lat. 43° and 49° N.; and lon. 61° and 67° W.; and is bounded N. by Northumberland Strait, which separates it from Prince Edward's Isle; N.E. by the Gut of Cansum, flowing between it and the island of Cape Breton (now a county of Nova Scotia), S. and S.E. by the Atlantic Ocean, W. by the Bay of Fundy, and N.W. by New Brunswick. Greatest length, S.W. to N.E., 280 m.; greatest breadth, about 120 m.; area, 15,617 sq. m., or 9,994,890 ac.; chief town, Halifax. Its S.E. coast is remarkable for the number and capacity of its harbours, there being no fewer than 11 ports capable of receiving ships of the line, and 14 of sufficient depth for merchantmen, between Halifax and Cape Cansum, a distance of not more than 116 m. There are no mountains of great magnitude or remarkable elevation in this province; ranges of high lands, seldom exceeding 500 ft.

above sea-level, run through the country, generally N. & W., and, with less prominent hills and undulations, give a pleasing variety to the scenery. There are few large lakes or rivers; the largest of the former is Lake Restigouche, about 30 m. in length, and of the latter the Miramichi, about 3 m. wide at its mouth, draining into Minas Bay, off the head of the Bay of Fundy, an extensive chain of small lakes, of which nearly 100 occur within a space of 20 miles square.

The mines and minerals of Nova Scotia, though but slightly explored, are known to be valuable. Granite, trap, and clay-shale rocks predominate, the most abundant variety is the gray granite, which prevails along the shore, and is well adapted for mill-stones. Clay-slate, of fine quality, is of extensive formation in the E. section of the colony, and gray-slate along both shores of Chedoke Bay several extensive and beautiful pebbles are to be found on different parts of the coast and gneissous much extended in the U. States are obtained from a stratum of sandstone, found between the coal and limestone. Coal, and iron in combination with it, abounds in many places. Copper-ore is abundant, but the attempts to work it have been hitherto unsuccessful; gypsum is plentiful and furnishes an active and profitable trade. The soils of Nova Scotia are various along the S. shore the granite forms the basis, extending, in many places, 20 m. into the interior. This region is fertile and rich, being that which strangers first see, is apt to create an unfavourable impression; but there are elsewhere extensive alluvial tracts, producing the most abundant crops. Many fine fertile districts also are met with on the N. coast, along the banks of rivers and the heads of bays. The climate of Nova Scotia is affected by its almost insular position, and is characterized by a remarkable humidity. The springs are tedious, but the summer heats being for a brief season excessive, vegetation is singularly rapid, and the autumn is delightful. In winter there is sometimes a violent and hard frost for weeks before Christmas; and perhaps in the following year the plough may be seen in the fields as late as the 10th of January. The thermometer ranges from 18° to 70° It is estimated that about 9,000,000 ac. are still covered with primeval forests, and that the land under cultivation does not much exceed 400,000 ac. Wheat, potatoes, and oats, are the most important crops but buckwheat, rye, barley, Indian corn, and field peas, are extensively cultivated, and in seasons when the wheat and potatoes fail, are of great value. Nova Scotia, however, does not yet supply her population with bread even in good seasons; large importations of fine flour being yearly made from the U. States. The apple orchards of the W. counties are very productive, and extend along the roadsides in an unbroken line for 80 m. Apples and other are usually exported and the domestic supply is cheap and abundant. Cattle and sheep are raised in considerable numbers and are exported both to New Brunswick and Newfoundland, but the breeds are inferior, and little attention is paid to their improvement. The cod and haddock fisheries are actively prosecuted all along the S. coast. Mackerel and herrings are also taken in great quantities but the salmon fishing has greatly fallen off, from the erection of grist and saw mills on the streams. The total value of fish exported, in 1848, was $244,056, above a half of which was cod. Several attempts have been made to prosecute the whale and seal fisheries, but hitherto with no great success. The manufactures of Nova Scotia are yet but very limited. Coarse cloths, called 'homespun,' are made by the peasantry, and are generally worn by that class. Coarse flannels, bed-linen, blankets, and carpets, are also manufactured. Tanning is carried on to some extent, and in the towns and villages, boots, shoes, saddlery, harness, household furniture, and agricultural implements, are made to large quantities. Stocks of bleached grass, and hats of straw are made in many of the rural districts; and in the neighbourhood of Halifax, tobacco, confectionary, printing and wrapping paper hats, and some other articles, are manufactured. There are several distilleries there also. The houses of Nova Scotia are mostly constructed of timber, excepting in Halifax and the larger towns, where some good stone and brick houses are to be seen. Yet even for building materials the province is deficient in the finest quality on the S. coast the mountains all along the N. shore, and excellent stone in the central region.

The foreign trade of Nova Scotia was very limited previous to 1894; since that period it has extended to the Baltic, Mediterranean, China, Mauritius, East India, the Straits, and the Havana. The imports consist principally of British manufactures; and spirits, sugar, wine, coffee, &c., from our colonies. The principal articles of export are fish, timber, beef, pork, sugar, gunstones, and gypsum. The whole imports for 1846, amounted to £746,748 the exports to £481,546, of which above a half were fish; of the former, the largest proportion was from Great Britain, of the latter, the greater went to U. S. States.

The population of Nova Scotia is now chiefly composed of a native race sprung directly or indirectly from the three great families of the United Kingdom—English, Irish, and Scotch. The Irish are found in large numbers only in the capital the Scotch chiefly in the eastern counties. The western and middle counties are principally occupied by the descendants of the loyalists, whose blood is English. The county of Lunenburg is inhabited by a race sprung from a body of German and Swiss Protestants, who emigrated from Rotterdam in 1758. There are also several settlements of French Acadians. But the descendants of all form but one race, and are known by but one name, the whole living in perfect harmony. The Indians are still a distinct people but there are only a few hundreds of them left in the province. The religious divisions here are those of the United Kingdom, and of N. America generally. The five largest religious bodies are—Episcopalians, Presbyterians, R. Catholics, Methodists, and Baptists. Of these the most numerous are the Presbyterians, next the Episcopalians, then the R. Catholics, and Baptists. Education has been pretty widely and equally diffused over the colony. The public affairs of the colony are administered by a Governor (styled Lieutenant-Governor), Council, and House of Assembly, the last, consisting of 40 members, has entire control over the provincial revenue. The laws are dispensed by a Court of King's Bench and district courts as in Canada. The laws in force are the common and the statute law of England and the statute law of Nova Scotia.

Nova Scotia was first visited by the Cabots in 1497, but was not colonized by Europeans till 1604, when De Monte a Frenchman, and his followers, and some Acadians, attempted for eight years to form settlements in Port Royal, St. Croix, &c., but were finally expelled from the country by the English governor and colonists of Virginia, who claimed the country by right of the discovery of Sebastian Cabot. In 1631, Sir William Alexander applied for, and obtained from James I., a grant of the whole country, which he proposed to colonize on an extensive scale, and in 1625 the attempt was made, but the proposed colonists finding the various points where they wished to establish themselves thronged by foreign adventurers did not think it prudent to attempt a settlement and therefore returned to England. During the reign of Charles I the Nova Scotia baronets were created, and their patents ratified in parliament, they were to contribute their aid to the settlement, and to have portions of land allotted to them their number was not to exceed 150. In 1654, Cromwell sent out an armed force, and took possession of the country, which remained with the English till 1687 when it was ceded to France by the treaty of Breda. But the English from time to time attacked the French colonies at various points, and ravaged their settlements, continuing to harass and annoy them till 1713, when the country was finally ceded to England. Pop. (1846), estimated at 500,000.

NOVA ZEMBLA [Rumenka, Novaya Zembla], two large islands. Arctic Ocean belonging to Russia, and forming a dependency of Gov. Archangel, lat. 71° to 77° N., lon. 53° to 77° E. They are separated from each other by the narrow strait, Matichkin Bay, and from the sea of Vologda on the S. by the Strait, and from the sea on the E. by the Sea of Kara, greatest length, N.E. to S.W. 825 m., breadth, 170 m. The far greater part of the interior is unexplored, and even the N. and E. coasts, where few makes recent almost impossible, are very imperfectly known. The S.W. and W. coasts which have been examined are in the former direction generally low and flat and in the latter bordered by mountains, which, though not elevated, are very steep. The general slope of both islands appears to be towards Matichkin Strait, on which the mouths of at least 16 small rivers have been noticed. There are also mountains. The whole territory is wild and desolate in the extreme. The coasts swarm with seals, various kinds of fish, and vast flocks of water-fowl. The interior, which is partly covered with stunted shrubs, short grass, and moss, is frequented by reindeer, white bears, ermine, and Arctic foxes. Nova Zembla has no permanent inhabitants, but is visited by Russian hunters and fishers.

NOVALAISE, a vil and com. France, dep. Savoie, 8 m. W. Chambéry; with a very handsome church, a primary school, manufactures of silk stuffs and a trade in corn, wood and chestnuts. Pop. 1860.

NOVALESA, a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, dep. Turin, 3 m. N. Susa, with a church a celebrated monastery, and a trade in wood. Pop. 965.

NOVARA [Latin Novaria] a walled in Italy Piedmont, dep. div. and prov. of same name, between the Agogna and the Terdoppio, 63 m. E.N.E. Turin. It is beautifully situated, well built, and, though several of the streets are narrow, they are kept remarkably clean. It has three large squares, a cathedral, an ancient and magnificent structure surrounded by a lofty square tower, which terminates in a cupola, and richly decorated with sculptures and paintings by some of the first artists of Italy, an episcopal palace, and diocesan seminary, with a library of 12,000 volumes, several churches a townhouse, courthouses, and public offices an old castle in a ruinous condition, a register-office, in a suppressed monastery two colleges, and several other superior schools, the general hospital, most de padre, theatre, barracks and market, the last one of the largest and most costly edifices of the town, commenced in 1817, and not finished till 1842. The manufactures, not of very much importance, consist chiefly of cotton goods, plain and printed leather wax cloth starch, earthenware, majolica, candles, and a kind of sweet biscuits called biscottini which have a large sale in many parts of Italy. The staple article of trade is grain and rice, for both of which Novara has the most important markets in Piedmont. Pop. 10,000.—The division is bordered by lofty mountains, and in the N.W. is partly covered by rail heathens of the Lepontine Alps but consists generally of a large and fertile plain, watered by the Po and its tributaries the Sesia, Terdoppio, Agogna, Litta, and numerous minor streams. Lake Maggiore is partly within its territory. The soil is very productive and in the lower ground, where irrigation is available, large quantities of rice are grown. On the hills and slopes the vine is extensively cultivated, and wine forms a considerable article of export. Pop. 186,159.

NOVAPE, a vil and com. Italy Lombardy prov. and 6 m. N.W. Milan with a church, two osterias, and a salt petre-factory. Pop. 1843.

NOVAWETZ, or NAWRODOW, a tn. Prussia, gov. Posen, on the Warth with two churches, manufactures of cotton and needles and spinning-mills. Pop. 1712.

NOVEGRAD, or NOVIGRAD, a vil Austria, Dalmatia, circle and 80 m. N.E. Zara, on a large bay with a church, courthouses, and valuable fishery, particularly of oysters, and on a hill the ruins of an ancient fortress. Pop. 660.

NOVELDA a tn. Spain, Valencia, prov. and 16 m. W. Alicante; having streets generally well formed, and houses mostly of stone. In a square of considerable size are the town-houses and the prison and several other buildings of respectable appearance. Novelda likewise possesses two endowed schools, a hospital, a parish church, with chapels of some brandy distilleries, corn and oil mills and some trade in fruits and other produce. P. (agricultural) 8000.

NOVELLARA, a tn. Italy and 16 m. N.W. Modena, with six mills and ironworks. Pop. 4070.

NOVELLO, a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, dep. Cuni, prov. Alba, with two handsome churches, an old castle, a charitable endowment, and a trade in wine. Pop. 1800.

—1, A vil. and par. prov. Padua, 18 m. S.W. Vicenza, with a church, seven osterias, tile-works, and distilleries. —2, A vil. and par. dist. and 4 m. N.W. St. Don. in the Pave, with a church and a chapel.—3, A vil. and par. prov. and 16 m. S.W. Vicenza, in an extensive plain on the Fiorago; with a church, and several endowments. Pop. 1600.

NOVES, a tn. Spain, New Castile, prov. and W. Toledo; houses, generally of earth, small and ill built, with a town-house, prison, hospital, two endowed schools, and a church; manufactures of hats and serge, and six oil-mills. P. 3294.

NOVES [Latin, Centum de Novis], a tn. France, dep. Nord-de-Deux, 12 m. N. E. Arras; with a manufactory of beet-root sugar. Pop. 1037.

NOVGOROD, a gov. Russia, bounded N by gov. Obo-lensk, N. W. and W. St. Petersburg, S. W. Pskov, S. E. Ples, S. E. Jaroslavl, and E. Volynsk. lat. 57° 10' to 61° N. lon.
36° 20' to 40° E.; greatest length, N. E. to S. W., 590 m., greatest breadth, 180 m. area, 41,254 sq. m. It is generally flat, a considerable portion of it, particularly in the W. and N. E. being covered with lakes and marshes. In the
S. W., the Valdai hills enter from gov. Pskov and stretch
N. E. They are generally composed of limestone of a comparatively recent formation, and though they nowhere attain a height exceeding 1800 ft. have a much greater apparent elevation from the general flatness of the surrounding country.
The surface of the government is covered with an immense number of granite boulders, though there is no granite deposits within the government, and none in those immediately adjoining. The Valdai hills form the principal water-shed, separating the basin of the Baltic from that of the Volga.
To their basins the whole of the government belongs, with exception of a small portion of the N. E. which is drained by a tributary of the Onega, and belongs, through it, to the basin of the Arctic Ocean. The chief rivers are the Lovat, Volkhov, Msta, Mologa, and Cherekhov, with its tributaries Koly and Buda. The lakes are numerous, and three of them of great extent—Vogla, Rych-Dzono, and Ilmen. The climate is cold, and somewhat more severe than that of St. Petersburg. A great part of the surface is covered by forests, chiefly of pine, birch, and larch. Oak is seldom seen. Fruit-trees do not generally thrive but apples and cherries are not uncommon even in more favored spots. The soil is generally of very indifferent quality, and not well adapted for wheat. The principal crops are rye, barley and oats. Flax and hemp are raised in sufficient quantities to satisfy the home-consumption and leave a surplus for export. The lakes and rivers are well supplied with fish, which are taken in great quantities and form a considerable article of export, particularly to St.
Petersburg and Moscow. The minerals include a little iron and coal and are tolerably abundant. Limestone, sandstone, and gypsum, to an unlimited extent. Both manufactures and trade are unimportant. Novgorod is divided into 10 districts.
Pop. (1859), 226,000.

NOVGOROD, or VELIKO-NOVGOROD [Great Novgorod], a tn. Russia, cap. above gov., on the Volkhov, near the point where it issues from Lake Ilmen, 103 m. S. E. of St. Petersburg.
It stands in a plain, and is divided by the river into two parts, which communicate by a handsome wooden bridge, supported by pillars of granite. The portion on the r. bank occupies a which in many places are grown over with grass, and almost without exception unimproved. The only buildings here which attract notice are a kind of palace, forming the governor's residence; a millstone and a tallow factory. The portion of the town on the l. bank is surrounded by a wooden rampart, and contains in its center the Kremlin or citadel. Within it is the cathedral of St. Sophia, built after the model of St.

Sophia at Constantinople, besides which there are other sixty-one churches, and several monasteries, one of which the monastery of the Assumption, is a remarkably elegant structure. The manufactures are of little importance, and consist of millstone, leather tobacco, candles, and vinegar. The trade is in corn, flax, and hemp, carried on chiefly with the capital, is considerable; and there are two large annual fairs. Novgorod was in early times the capital of an independent state, and had a magnitude which justified its name of Veliki. Its population is said to have once amounted to 400,000 and it carried on an extensive trade.
So great was its riches, that in 1480, John III., after he had conquered the republic of Novgorod, despatched from the city to Moscow three hundred chariots laden with articles of silver and gold. Pop. about 18,000.

NOVGOROD-SITVENSKOI, a tn. Russia, gov. and 108 m.
E. N. P. Chernigov cap. dist. r. bank Dnepr. It is surrounded by a rampart, and was defended by a fortress, still existing,
